Chargois recalled Belfi asking him in 2007 to introduce him and his partner Chris Keller to institutional investors in Arkansas, as Labaton was interested in creating client relationships with institutional investors in that region. Id., p. 20:4-17. Chargois readily admitted that at the time he had no knowledge of any "institutional investors." Id. at p. 20:20. Chargois' then partner, Tim Herron, did not have any relationships with institutional investors, either. Id., p. 27:16-19. However, Herron was friends with an Arkansas state senator, Steve Farris, who at the time, served on the Arkansas legislature's Joint Committee on Public Retirement and Social Security which had an oversight role with respect to ATRS. Farris suggested to Herron that they might want to try to contact Paul Doane who had then just recently taken over as Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 33:16-21. Herron told Chargois, and Chargois called Doane. Id., p. 33:24-34:1.

Chargois explained to Doane that he was working with a New York law firm that specialized in institutional investors and asked if Doane would meet with him, Belfi and Keller, and Doane agreed. Id., p. 34:1-35:3. Within a week or so, a meeting took place in Little Rock. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 35:8-16. At that initial meeting, "Eric Belfi presented all the services that Labaton has available and what their -- what they could do and presented as a courtesy that they could do this monitoring of the portfolio." Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 36:13-16. Doane later came to New York for another meeting with Belfi and Keller at Labaton's offices; Chargois was not present. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 38:2-6. At this meeting, Labaton did a presentation for Doane as to what services the firm could provide. According to Belfi, "[O]nce we did the presentation, we were kind of put on their radar. So, at some point later when they did the RFQ [of prospective monitoring counsel], they sent an RFQ for us to respond to." Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 37:17-22.

ii. THE CHARGOIS "ARRANGEMENT"

As consideration for Chargois' efforts, Belfi and Keller agreed to pay Chargois' firm, Chargois & Herron, a maximum 20% of any attorney's fees received by Labaton in any litigation involving an institutional investor for whom Chargois had facilitated the introduction, including ATRS (hereinafter "the Chargois Arrangement"). Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 50:18-25; 53:10-17; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., pp. 315:21-24, 316:11-14.[46] Both Chargois and Belfi understood that it was the mere introduction by Chargois to potential institutional investors or potential antitrust clients that was the basis of the agreement to pay Chargois 20% of any legal fee Labaton earned on any cases in which Labaton was lead counsel or co-lead counsel and the client was lead or co-lead plaintiff.[47] Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 50:18-24; Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 19:6-21:21. Under this arrangement, Chargois was not expected to file an appearance or assume a substantive role in any of the resulting litigation, or even interface with the client. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 56:19-24; 57:1-6; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 323:2-4.

While Chargois and Keller attempted on numerous occasions over the years to reduce this agreement to writing, and exchanged several drafts to which they both agreed in large measure, no formal agreement was ever put together; it was wholly "an email relationship." Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 59:8-10 ("Only e-mails. There's no four-corner document that -- in

[46] Labaton had previously entered into an agreement to pay TLF approximately 20% of its total fee to in cases where TLF (and in particular, TLF partner, Garrett Bradley) interacted with local, pension fund clients. As Christopher Keller of Labaton explained:

> [W]e had a very, sort of, good, productive relationship with the Thornton Law Firm and -- where, you know, we would -- we would jointly get retained by, you know, funds in the Northeast area, which was their sort of area of -- they had lots of relationships within the area. And we, you know, had an understanding they would get, sort of, let's say, up to 20 percent. And the understanding was that, it was going to be somewhat of a, I call it, a turnkey, but I'm using a -- what I mean is we didn't have to do any heavy lifting up in the -- up in the area, because there's a lot -- I mean, we're a national firm. Think about this, so we have over 200 pension fund clients, we may have one within driving distance of our office okay. So we maintain a national practice and -- but without offices all over the nation. So it's very important, any time that we can leverage others who -- who are ready and willing and able to do the heavy lifting locally, we're happy to sort of let that happen, and, of course, pension funds feel much more comfortable with people they know or people who are close by or were introduced through someone they know, so we made that a -- a -- this is how Labaton was going to build more business.

Keller 10/13/17 Dep., pp. 43:3-44:19

[47] While Chargois understood that he would receive 20%, as Keller testified, Labaton believed that it was only obligated to pay Chargois a percentage of fees proportional to ATRS's share of the contributory losses incurred by all lead plaintiffs. By way of example, if ATRS was named co-lead counsel with another plaintiff in a successful litigation, Chargois' payment would not be 20% of Labaton's fee, but would reflect ATRS's pro rata portion of the total loss amount, offsetting the full 20% figure Chargois 10/2/17 Dep. pp. 62:10-64:5.

While Labaton's relationship with Chargois began with Chargois & Herron serving as "local counsel" in the HCC Holdings Texas class action, it is clear that the relationship evolved over time. See Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 17:19-21; 38:23-24, 39:1; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 81:16-20. As a result, the terminology used to describe the Chargois Arrangement varies greatly between individuals. Counsel has labeled Chargois as "local counsel," or "the local," while on other occasions describing the Chargois Arrangement as based in "referral" or a "referral obligation." See, e.g., LBS027776 (4/24/13 Bradley email to others) [EX. 23]; M. Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., p. 38:13-15; Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 68:4-7, 102:3-8; Keller 10/13/17 Dep., pp. 45:11-16; 71:24-72: 4; 96:16-18; 212:5-12. In yet other instances, the Chargois Arrangement is characterized as a "forwarding obligation." Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 59:13-19; 86:8-12. Finally, Sucharow testified that he considered Chargois a "joint venturer" working with Labaton to find pension clients. Sucharow. 9/1/17 Dep., p. 16:1-3. Regardless of the title used, it is undisputed that Chargois' sole contribution to -- and only role in -- the State Street case was facilitating an introduction between Labaton and ATRS -- years before the State Street case was even contemplated. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 82:7-10.

a. Labaton's Compartmentalization of Knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement

While the initial discussions to partner with Chargois included only Keller and Belfi of the Labaton firm, Larry Sucharow -- Co-Chairman and, in effect, managing partner of Labaton[48] -- learned of the firm's obligation to pay Chargois (a "referring attorney") a portion of the total [48] In 1982, Sucharow was named partner of the firm. Sometime thereafter, he became managing partner. He served in that role for "many years" until his appointment as Chairman of the firm. As Chairman, Sucharow assumed duties of both the Chairman and managing partner. Sucharow 6/14/17 Dep., p. 10:18-11:4. Sucharow currently is Co-Chairman of the firm. See http://www.labaton.com/en/ourpeople/Lawrence-Sucharow.cfm (Last visited April 16, 2018).

attorney's fees by 2015.[49] Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p.18:2-11; 20-13. Sucharow, who acted as the "lead negotiator and lead strategist" in the State Street case, knew of Chargois' entitlement for which he did not perform any substantive work or bill any time on the case. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 86:18- 87:1. At least as of 2015, Sucharow knew that Chargois had no role in the State Street case beyond the initial introduction to ATRS. See id.

Much of Sucharow's lack of knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement can be attributed to Labaton's compartmentalization of its practice. Christopher Keller, who is Co-Chairman of the firm and a member of the firm's Executive Committee,[50] testified the decision to compartmentalize the practice was done in an effort to modernize and improve efficiency. See Keller 10/13/17 Dep., p. 79:18-20. The end result of compartmentalization, however, was that often attorneys in one department were generally unaware of decisions made or work done by attorneys in another department, even where the same client or lawsuit is involved. See notes 24, supra & 62, 68 infra. For example, Nicole Zeiss, who worked exclusively in Settlements, was not privy to decisions made by attorneys in the Litigation department or by the Relationship attorneys. Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., p. 79:5 - 80: 24. Her involvement in the State Street case was "strictly as settlement counsel." Id., at p. 79:5-9. Similarly, litigators, such as David Goldsmith, was not privy to client agreements entered into by the firms Relationship attorneys. See Goldsmith 9/29/17 Dep., pp. 112:10 – 113:9; see also Keller 10/13/17 Dep., p. 77:13-17

[49] Sucharow testifies that "[it] may be that I should have known [prior to 2015] because I know we had some ongoing relationship with him, but it was nothing that was in the forefront of my mind." Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p.18:3-6. While the full nature of the Chargois Arrangement -- payment for performing no work on the case -- was not initially disclosed to Sucharow, he learned first-hand that Chargois did not work on the case after becoming involved in the settlement process. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., 18:24-19:1.

[50] See http://www.labaton.com/en/ourpeople/Christopher-Keller.cfm (last visited on 4/18/17). In addition to his management duties as Labaton's Co-Chairman and as a member of the firm's Executive Committee, Keller currently leads, the Case Development Group, which is composed of attorneys, in-house investigators, financial analysts, and forensic accountants. The group is responsible for evaluating clients' financial losses and analyzing their potential legal claims both in and outside of the U.S. and tracking trends that are of potential concern to investors. See id.

(Labaton's Relationship attorneys perform client development duties and "[t]he client -- the client, you know, development, is a very kind of a siloed thing within the firm. They -- they -they operate, you know, a lot on the road, amongst themselves.")

As a consequence, the fee arrangement Eric Belfi, Labaton's "Relationship" partner, and Christopher Keller agreed to with Damon Chargois was not shared with the Labaton attorneys who were involved with the litigation and settlement of the State Street case.

David Goldsmith, who was Labaton's principal litigator in State Street, never knew about Damon Chargois or his fee arrangement until November 21, 2016 -- several weeks after the State Street settlement had been approved by the Court. 111:13 – 113:9. Nicole Zeiss, Labaton's "Settlement Counsel," who appeared with Goldsmith at the Final Approval Hearing before Judge Wolf, testified that in her role as settlement counsel, she had a "general understanding" that Chargois and his firm had worked with Labaton "to develop relationships with clients in different cases," but she did not have any knowledge of the details of the firm's relationship with him. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 19:17-21.

iii. THE ATRS REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATIONS (RFQ)

Chargois' efforts got Labaton the "foot in the door" it wanted and needed with ATRS. In mid-2008, ATRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") to Labaton, among other firms. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 37:19-22. On July 30, 2008, Labaton responded by submitting a "joint proposal" on behalf of Labaton and Chargois & Herron. LBS017738 – 17755 (7/30/08 Joint Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP & Chargois & Herron, LLP) [EX. 24]; see also Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 37:20-23. Labaton, through Belfi, received ATRS's response to the RFQ on October 13, 2008 by email from ATRS Chief Counsel, Christa Clark. See LBS 017455 - 17456 (10/13/08 email from C. Clark) [EX. 25]. Clark advised Belfi that Labaton had been selected as an additional monitoring counsel for ATRS, but that Chargois & Herron was not approved as part of the proposal. Id. Clark indicated that while there was no requirement to use Chargois & Herron, Labaton could use Chargois & Herron on a "case by case basis," if they were "a necessary and appropriate expense." Id. Specifically, Clark's email to Belfi stated in relevant part:

> I am pleased to inform you that subject to final approval of the Attorney General's ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system.
> I would like to speak to you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
>
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or use them as independent contractors, if you deem is [sic] appropriate on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conducive to a joint proposal.

See LBS 017456 (10/13/08 email from C. Clark) (emphasis added) [EX. 25].

Chargois understood that his firm was not accepted as part of the RFQ process. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 48:15-49:1.

At no point after receiving Clark's email did Labaton inform Ms. Clark, Mr. Doane (or his successor, George Hopkins) of the pre-existing Chargois Arrangement generally, or that it was obligated to pay Chargois a portion of any fees that might be awarded in its representation of ATRS in the State Street matter. Belfi, 9/5/17 Dep. pp., 23:5-16; 115:17-21; 118:16-19; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 297:14-16.

iv. ATRS' LACK OF KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Beginning in 2008, Labaton went on to serve as monitoring counsel for ATRS.[51] Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 18:6-7. Shortly thereafter, George Hopkins replaced Paul Doane as Executive Director of ATRS. Id., at 27:16-18. Belfi explained that Hopkins was a much more direct person, who only wanted to deal with Belfi. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 27:18-28:7, 56:22-57:10. Hence, the relationship between Chargois and ATRS shifted with Hopkins' appointment. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 57:11-24. Labaton no longer needed Chargois to facilitate communications with ATRS. Nevertheless, Labaton continued to remit payments to Chargois under their previous arrangement to avoid litigation by Chargois that would likely be filed in Chargois' home state, Texas. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., 58:1-7, 10-15.

George Hopkins worked closely with Labaton in deciding to file the State Street lawsuit, and he remained very involved in the case, including in the mediation process, spending "hundreds of hours" working on the case during its five-year history. Hopkins 6/14/17, p. 102:35.

Labaton sought Hopkins' approval before partnering with Lieff and TLF in the class action litigation. However, Labaton did not seek Hopkins' approval to share information with or remit payment to Chargois. Hopkins, in fact, was never informed of the existence of Damon Chargois nor of any agreement between Labaton and Chargois, much less one that entitled Chargois to 20 % of any attorney fee recovered by Labaton on behalf of ATRS. See Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 21:5-10, 64:4-67:11; Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 18:9-20:17; 24:6-20. [52]

[51] Labaton continues to serve as one of five firms "on retainer" to ATRS, responsible for monitoring ATRS' investment portfolio and alerting ATRS to potential misappropriation or unexpected monetary loss. Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 29:9-22; 30:3-5.

[52] Hopkins testified that he "had no idea" that Chargois had introduced Belfi and Keller to ATRS before his tenure. In fact, Hopkins had never even heard of Damon Chargois or Chargois & Herron prior to their disclosure during the Special Master's investigation in August 2017. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep, pp. 20:22-21:10; 64:4-65:24.

Hopkins testified regarding his knowledge of Chargois:

It is apparent from Labaton's email correspondence with George Hopkins that Labaton took pains at every turn not to reveal Damon Chargois, Chargois & Herron, or their 20% interest in ATRS cases to Hopkins. Rather than include Chargois as a co-addressee or cc him on email correspondence concerning ATRS cases in which Chargois & Herron had an interest, Eric Belfi of Labaton either blind-copied Chargois or Herron, or separately forwarded the emails to them, the effect of both being the same -- to not reveal Chargois & Herron to Hopkins See, e.g.,

Q. Were you aware that members of a law firm with a Little Rock office had introduced individuals that you would later come to know as Eric Belfi and Chris Keller to influential Arkansas officials in an effort to secure legal work with the state?
A. I had no idea.
Q. Are you familiar with the firm name Chargois & Herron?
A. As of about two weeks, ten days ago.
Q. But you never encountered them to the best of your recollection years ago?
A. I had never heard of that firm before.

Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep, pp. 20:22-21:10.

In a Declaration sent to the Special Master on March 17, 2018 -- five weeks before the filing of this R&R -- George Hopkins confirms that he had no knowledge of the Chargois agreement, but states that he "did not want to know the specifics of fee allocations between Labaton and other attorneys," and purports to "ratify that [the Chargois] agreement." Hopkins 3/15/18 Declaration, ¶¶ 7, 10, 16. [EX. 53].

Nor did the Retainer Agreement in State Street signed by Hopkins disclose the Chargois Arrangement. The Retainer Agreement provided, in relevant part, that ATRS agrees that Labaton "may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS019948 – 19950 (9/24/10 Retainer Agreement, p. 2) [EX. 33]; see also LBS005362 – 5364 (2/8/11 Engagement Letter from Eric Belfi to George Hopkins).[53] [EX. 34]. It further provided that "[t]he division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation." Id. The Retainer Agreement did not name any individual attorney nor specify which, if any, of these "services" it would seek as part of the litigation. See id. It contains only a vague reference to "referral fees," but it does not name Chargois, or Chargois & Herron, and makes no reference to the obligation to Chargois the ATRS lawsuit would trigger or how the payment would be made. Chargois acknowledged he played no role whatsoever in ATRS's State Street lawsuit, and only met George Hopkins once, when he happened to be in San Francisco visiting his sister and attended an unrelated court hearing. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 54:18-23, 74:21-75:3.

[53] Specifically, the Retainer Agreement provides:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

LBS 011060 – 11062 (9/24/10 Retainer Agreement) (emphasis added). [EX. 35].

Labaton's purported reason for not informing Hopkins of the Chargois Arrangement is because Hopkins "did not want to know." See Hopkins 3/15/18 Declaration [EXH 53]; Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 23:17 – 24:5. This was a unilateral decision by Belfi, however, who concluded after meeting Hopkins that Hopkins would appreciate a more direct relationship. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 27-28; 56-57. According to Belfi, the subject of Chargois "did not come up," and admittedly, Belfi did not want to bring another attorney not from Labaton into the case, Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 110, 122.

a. Agreement Among Labaton, Lieff and Thornton to Share in the Payment of Labaton's Obligation to Chargois

Labaton's obligation to pay Chargois 20% of any fee it might be awarded in State Street was disclosed to Lieff and TLF in or about April 2013. The subject was first raised at a meeting during a Global Justice Network conference, an event organized by Bob Lieff and attended by Michael Thornton, Garrett Bradley, and Lynn Sarko.[54] Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 63:10-22. In an April 26, 2013 email from Garrett Bradley to Robert Lieff, Michael Thornton, Eric Belfi, Christopher Keller and Dan Chiplock, and copied to Chargois (referred to by the parties as the "Dublin email"), Chargois was referred to as "the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving Arkansas Teachers Retirement System." LBS 025771. In that email, Garrett Bradley memorialized an agreement reached earlier among the three Customer Class law firms to share in the payment of Labaton's 20% obligation to Chargois.[55] In relevant part, Bradley's email stated as follows:

[54] Bob Lieff testified that he does not have a specific recollection of a conversation with Bradley and Michael Thornton regarding Chargois. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 66:2-5. Although Lynn Sarko attended the Global Justice Network meeting, there is no evidence that he was party to any discussion with Bob Lieff, Michael Thornton or Garrett Bradley concerning Chargois and Sarko testified that he did not learn about the Chargois arrangement until it was disclosed in the Special Master's investigation in August 2017.

[55] During the State Street litigation, Garrett Bradley had substantial contact with Belfi and Keller of Labaton, and Chargois. Bradley attended annual marketing conferences hosted by Labaton and attended by Keller, Belfi, and > Bob, as you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this e-mail regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois, copied on this e-mail, of 20 percent of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX cases before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount will be 4 percent because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20 percent guaranteed, each with the balance to be decided on at a later date. Obviously, this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20 percent. We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be, 4 or 5, will be paid off the top with the balance fee split between Lieff, Labaton, Thornton pursuant to our agreement. The local asks that I copy him on this e-mail so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him, he was agreeable to this as well. Garrett.

LBS 025771 (4/25/13 G.Bradley email to R. Lieff, M. Thornton, E. Belfi, C.Keller and D. Chiplock, copied to Chargois)). [EX. 37].

Discussions concerning the specific percentage to be paid Chargois were ongoing while the parties continued with their hybrid mediation in 2013 and 2014. Later, in late 2015, after the settlement had initially been agreed to by the parties, Customer Class Counsel all agreed to allocate 5.5% of their collective fee award to Chargois. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 106:18-107:1. Labaton, Lieff, and TLF contributed equally to satisfy this obligation. Labaton Sucharow's 8/11/16 Responses to Special Master's Supplemental Interrogatories, Response No. 1(b).

v. LIEFF'S AND THORNTON'S[56] LIMITED KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Lieff and TLF were not privy to the origins of the Chargois Arrangement or the details of Labaton's obligation to pay Chargois in all cases in which ATRS is a co-lead counsel. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 92:2-12; Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 19-21, 35:12-24. The original cost-sharing agreement circulated -- but never executed -- among Customer Class Counsel in 2011 shortly Chargois. Then, effective January 1, 2015, through late 2016, Garrett Bradley held a dual role as partner at TLF and "of counsel" to Labaton. See LBS007086 – 7090 (Bradley's Of Counsel Agreement). [EX. 36]. In this role, Bradley agreed to "assist Labaton partners in identifying and seeking retention by clients for securities." Id.

[56] As discussed infra, Garrett Bradley stood in a unique position vis-à-vis Labaton (see note 55, supra), and specifically, the Chargois Arrangement. Thus, Bradley's knowledge must be considered separately from that of the other Thornton attorneys.

after the ATRS complaint was filed, referenced only that the firms acknowledged that "[t]here is an 'off the top' obligation to referring counsel of 6% of the fees awarded," without any specifics. See TLF-SST-033911 – 33913 (5/4/11 letter agreement).[57]

The arrangement was next addressed amongst the three Customer Class firms in the April 24, 2013, "Dublin" email in which Garrett Bradley described a financial obligation owed to Chargois. Bradley characterized Chargois as "local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System." LBS 025771 [EX. 37]. The Labaton attorneys addressed on the email, Chris Keller and Eric Belfi, did not offer any additional explanation. Nor did either attorney inform their co-counsel that Chargois was not performing any work in the matter. Bob Lieff responded to the email on April 23, 2013, stating "I am in full agreement." LBS030997 – 30998, (4/24/13 Lieff Email to G. Bradley, et al.). [EX. 38]. Eric Belfi responded to the email on May 6, 2013, stating "[w]e are in full agreement." Id.

While members of the Lieff and TLF firms were generally aware of Labaton's obligation -- to be shared by Customer Class Counsel -- to pay Chargois a percentage of Labaton's total fee in the State Street case, the exact percentage or details of that arrangement were not discussed until settlement discussions were well underway years into the litigation. Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 36:16-17, 22-24; 37:1-7.

a. Thornton's Knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement

Garrett Bradley of TLF received an initial draft of the proposed cost-sharing agreement on May 23, 2011. TLF-SST-033910 (5/23/11 Keller to Bradley). [EX. 54]. Although the "referring counsel" was not identified in the proposed cost-sharing agreement, Bradley testified [57] Christopher Keller, who drafted the letter agreement, testified that the "off the top" percentage to referring counsel -- 6% -- reflected 20% of Labaton's 1/3 share of the fees: "20 percent of a third is 6 point something so we probably just went with 6 percent." Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 419:8-9.

that he had never heard anyone other than Damon Chargois referred to as "referring counsel" by Labaton in connection with the State Street litigation, G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., p. 43:1-20, and his deposition testimony indicates that he was aware that Labaton had an obligation to pay Chargois a percentage of the fees at least as early as "around the time the complaint was filed or shortly." Id., p. 44:7-12.[58] Bradley testified, however, that he did not know that Chargois would not have to do any work for a share of the fees, nor did he know the details of the arrangement. ("I thought his role was similar to ours; that he did substantive work, corresponded with the client, dealt with the client, got authority. That's what I thought his role was." Id., at p. 45:10-13; see also p. 47:7-8).[59]

Michael Thornton was included as an addressee of the May 4, 2011 draft letter, but testified that he never received or reviewed that letter at the time. Thornton 9/1/18 Dep., p. 148:6. Mr. Thornton testified that he was unaware of Chargois until Garrett Bradley told him of an obligation to pay "local/referring counsel" in or about 2013, and even then, did not know Chargois by name. Id., p. 148:7-13; p. 20: 14-17; p. 35: 14-24. While it is clear that Mr. Thornton understood that Chargois was entitled to receive a portion of the fees awarded in the [58] Bradley testified:

> I believe as early as -- just prior to or right around the time of filing in 2011, I raised with Chris [Keller] how are we going to deal with your obligation to Damon 'cause I was very concerned that he would try to apply for 20 percent of this entire case.
> And I asked them to deal with it.

G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep. p. 44:7-13.

[59] Other evidence in the record suggests that Bradley likely knew more about Chargois than this testimony might indicate. Record evidence shows that Bradley, Chargois, Belfi and Keller spent a considerable amount of time together during Labaton's "marketing" conferences during this period. In addition, Bradley held a dual role from January 1, 2015 through late 2016 as TLF's Managing Partner and as "Of Counsel" to Labaton with the sole responsibility of client development. Further, Labaton's General Counsel, Mike Stocker, asked Bradley -- and not Labaton's own lawyers, Eric Belfi or Chris Keller -- to intervene with Chargois in handling negotiations with Chargois when negotiations over Chargois' fee in the case became more pointed. See 6/21/16 email, TLF-SST-012527 – 012528. [EX. 55]. Beyond this, TLF, through Bradley, had arrangements with Labaton similar to its arrangement with Chargois.

State Street case due to his role in securing Labaton a position on the monitoring panel, id. at pp. 44: 8-22; 36: 16-19, Mr. Thornton did not know that Chargois was entitled to receive 20% payment in every case in which ATRS served as a lead or co-lead counsel. Id., at p. 44: 16-24. And while Chargois did not serve as forum local counsel in the case, Mr. Thornton understood that Chargois was a referring attorney, i.e. an attorney who referred the matter to ATRS because he was either not competent or it was not his role to bring action on behalf of ATRS against State Street. Id. at p. 38: 4-11; p. 42:2-16.

b. Lieff's Knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement

Bob Lieff and Dan Chiplock, both recipients of the "Dublin" email, testified that they understood Damon Chargois to be performing some substantive role as local counsel for Labaton in the State Street litigation, serving the class by assisting the ATRS client locally in Arkansas. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., pp. 58-80; Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 101-116. In arriving at that understanding of the Chargois role, each relied both upon their understanding of Labaton's role as lead counsel and the representations made by Garrett Bradley in relation to Chargois. See 4/5/18 Declaration of Daniel Chiplock, ¶¶5-6; LBS 025771 [EX. 56], LCHB-0053483 (4/24/13 "Dublin email," in which Garrett Bradley referred to Chargois as "the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving Arkansas Teachers Retirement System" and to which Bob Lieff replied that he was in full agreement as to the proposed allocation) [EX. 57].

Bob Lieff testified that he thought Chargois was local counsel for Labaton dealing with the client in Arkansas. See Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 67:9-13 ("I thought he was local counsel for Labaton in this particular case I assumed dealing with the Arkansas fund because that's what local counsel will do. That was my understanding.") He further testified that had he known that Chargois had done no work on the case, he would not have agreed to the allocation of part of his firm's fee award to Chargois. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 97:13-16.

Informing both Lieff and Chiplock's belief that Chargois played a local role was their recent experience in BONY Mellon, in which LCHB's local counsel interfaced with their Ohio pension fund client but otherwise had little contact with co-lead counsel and non-lead counsel participating in the New York litigation. See Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., pp. 58-80; Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 101-116; 4/5/18 Declaration of Daniel Chiplock, ¶6. Subsequent email communications between Labaton, TLF and LCHB in 2015 describing a financial obligation to a local Arkansas attorney reinforced LCHB's belief that Chargois fulfilled some local role in the case. See, e.g., TLF-SST-040617-40618 [EX. 58], LCHB-0053491-53492 (8/6/2015 Bradley email to Lieff and Thornton regarding "Fee discussions" related to BONY Mellon and State Street, with reference to "arkansas local") [EX. 59]; LCHB-0053493 [EX. 60], TLF-SST-038574-38579 (8/28/15 Lieff email to Bradley and Thornton regarding State Street and referring to Arkansas local counsel; Bradley response to same) [EX. 61]; TLF-SST-053117-53126 (8/28/15 Chiplock email to Sucharow, Bradley and Thornton regarding memorialization of the fee allocation agreement amongst the firms, and referencing payments to ERISA counsel and "local Arkansas counsel" in relation to the distribution of Customer Class Counsel fees;) [EX. 62]; LCHB0053513-53521 (continuation of correspondence amongst counsel regarding same) [EX. 63]; LCHB-0053507-53512 (8/28/15 separate correspondence between Chiplock and Lieff regarding same) [EX. 64]; LCHB-0053531-53532 (8/30/15 further response from Bradley to Chiplock, Lieff, and Sucharow referring to the "Arkansas firm" and the prior April 2013 correspondence, noting that there was already a "written agreement between all the parties that the Arkansas component would come off the top") [EX. 65]. Neither Labaton or Bradley corrected these characterizations of the Chargois role as local counsel. Related communications from Chiplock to Lieff in mid-2016 demonstrate that Chiplock still believed that Chargois occupied this role during the finalization of the Fee Petition. LCHB-0053538-53540 (forwarding 2013 and 2015 email correspondence) [EX. 66]; LCHB-0053541 (forwarding 2013 correspondence and referencing calculation of "local counsel's" fee) [EX. 67].

Attorneys from the firms exchanged emails related to the Arrangement again in 2015. On August 28, 2015, Dan Chiplock corresponded with Larry Sucharow, Garrett Bradley and Michael Thornton regarding memorialization of the fee allocation agreement amongst the firms; Chiplock referred to payments to ERISA counsel and "local Arkansas counsel" in relation to the distribution of Customer Class Counsel fees. TLF-SST-053117-53126 (8/28/15 Chiplock Email to Sucharow, G. Bradley, Thornton, and Lieff) [EX. 39]. Garrett Bradley, referencing the prior emails in 2013, replied that there was already "a written agreement between all the parties that the Arkansas component would come off the top" and stated that the "ERISA piece" should be handled the same way. Id. As Chris Keller and Eric Belfi were not included on this email exchange, and Larry Sucharow was at that point unaware that Chargois was not performing any work as the local Arkansas counsel, the 2013 characterization of the Chargois role remained uncorrected.

The Chargois Arrangement was the subject of another email correspondence between the three firms on July 8, 2016, this time referencing Chargois as a "local attorney in this matter who has played an important role:

> Gentlemen,
> As we discuss how to distribute the fee between ourselves and, of course the ERISA attorneys, I have had discussion with Damon Chargois, the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role. Damon and his firm are willing to accept 5.5% of the total fee awarded by the Court in the State Street class case now pending before Judge

> Wolf. As you know, we had a prior deal with him that his fee would be "off the top". He understands that ERISA counsel is now in the same pool of money. He has agreed to come down to this number with a guarantee that it will be off the court awarded fee number. Please reply all if you agree. Given that it is off the total number their [sic] is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.

LBS039936 – 39937 (7/8/16 G. Bradley Email to Lieff, Thornton, Sucharow, Chiplock, Keller, Belfi, and Chargois). [EX. 40].

At no time in this multi-year correspondence was the nature of Chargois' role -- i.e., as a referring attorney -- made clear. None of the Labaton attorneys followed up on the July 2016 correspondence in writing. Nor does the record contain any evidence that any of the Labaton attorneys informed their co-counsel, either before or after this email, that Chargois had played no role at all in the State Street case, nor did the Labaton attorneys attempt to explain what "important role" Chargois played. Bob Lieff and Mike Thornton replied to Bradley's July 8 email expressing their firms' respective agreement to these terms. Id.; LBS031152 – 31153 (7/8/16 Thornton Email to G. Bradley & 7/8/16 Lieff Email to G. Bradley, et al.) [EX. 41]. Separately, Chris Keller wrote to Garrett Bradley, "great work getting this done." LBS039936 [EX. 40].

c. Inconsistency of Information Regarding the Chargois Arrangement

Even among Labaton attorneys, full knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement was limited to Belfi and Keller. See Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 17:10-13 ("I'm not sure I ever knew in the sense that I didn't hear 'til later on that there was an obligation to [Chargois].") For example, Larry Sucharow, who described himself as the "lead negotiator and lead strategist" for plaintiffs in the State Street case, only learned of Labaton's financial obligation to Chargois in 2015. Id., pp. 18:20-23; 87:1.[60] Similarly, David Goldsmith, the lead Labaton litigator who appeared on behalf of the purported Settlement Class in the Preliminary and Final Settlement approval hearings before Judge Wolf, did not learn of the Chargois Arrangement until November 21, 2016, several weeks after the Final Approval Hearing. Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., pp. 108:20-109:2.[61]Even those who were aware of the Arrangement, were unfamiliar with Chargois' full name. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 7-9; 35:17-24.[62]

Outside of Labaton attorneys, the terms "forwarding fee" and "referral fee" have no significance in a class action context. 9/11/17 Lieff Dep., p. 79:20-22. Robert Lieff testified that the term local counsel is also not descriptive of Chargois' role, as it is a term of art used to describe an attorney who works for a client on a case-by-case basis and submits a fee petition for services performed in a particular case, an understanding shared by Chargois himself. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 80:9-17. Although they now seek to cast Chargois in the role of "referring" counsel, Labaton attorneys never used the phrase "referring counsel" in discussions with Chargois. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 64:15-19. And when asked, Chargois did not view his role as either a "referring counsel," "liaison counsel" or "local counsel" in the State Street case or any [60] Though he testified that he learned of his firm's obligation to Chargois in 2015, Sucharow signed the Omnibus Declaration, which was filed with the Court in September 2016; the Declaration did not disclose the Chargois Arrangement or reference the intended payment to Chargois. See Dkt # 104-1, 104-15.

[61] David Goldsmith testified that he first learned of Chargois and his fee arrangement with Labaton on November 21, 2016. Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., pp.111:13 -112:9. He further testified that he had no idea that a payment was going to be made to Chargois out of the class funds or that Chargois payment was going to be 5.5 % of the total $75 million fee award. Id., pp. 112:10 – 113:9. Goldsmith admitted that this was important information and that he would have liked to have known about it before he went before Judge Wolf at the Fairness Hearing. Id. Goldsmith further admitted he knew of no work done by Chargois on the State Street case, nor had any other Labaton lawyer told him that Chargois did any work on the matter. Id. at pp. 114:11 – 115:13.

case involving ATRS. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 55: 8-13, 20-24; 63:11 – 64:6; this was just "an agreement." Id., p. 63:5-21.

vi. ERISA COUNSEL'S LACK KNOWLEDGE OF CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Neither Labaton nor any other Customer Class Counsel ever informed ERISA Counsel of Labaton's obligation to Chargois, or Chargois' role in connection with this case. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 56:18 – 57:9, 71:14-23; Kravtiz 9/11/17 Dep. p. 70:8-10; McTigue, 9/8/17 Dep., p. 17:14-21. Like Hopkins, ERISA Counsel only learned of the Chargois Arrangement as a result of the Special Master's investigation in or about August 2017. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., 71:14-23; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep. 70:8-10; McTigue 9/8/17 Dep., p. 17:14-21. One effect of the Customer Class Counsel's failure to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to ERISA Counsel was the nondisclosure to the ERISA class representatives and members themselves.

As with Hopkins, Labaton was at pains to keep ERISA Counsel from learning about Chargois or the Chargois Arrangement. See e.g., Sucharow response to G. Bradley email regarding proposed Claw Back letter addressed only to Customer Class Counsel advising "no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split." TLF-SST-012272 – 12274 (11/22/16 Sucharow Email to Goldsmith, G. Bradley, Keller, Belfi) [EX. 42]; LBS039936 – 39937 ("Given that it is off the total number their [sic] is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.") [EX. 40]; TLF-SST-053117-53126 [EX. 39].

ERISA Counsel testified that had they known of the Chargois Arrangement during the State Street case, they would have proceeded differently in several material respects. Lynn Sarko testified that had he known of the Chargois Arrangement, he "absolutely" would have felt an obligation to disclose [the Arrangement] to the ERISA class representatives and get their informed consent. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 91:4-15. Moreover, had he become aware that an attorney who did no work on the case would receive in excess of $4 million prior to signing the ERISA Fee Allocation in 2013, Sarko would not have agreed to the award of only 9% (which became 10%) of the total fee award to ERISA Counsel. Id. pp.75:2-22, 78:19-79:4. The other ERISA counsel, Brian McTigue and Carl Kravitz of Zuckerman Spaeder, testified that they would not have agreed to it, either. See McTigue 9/8/17 Dep. p. 21:15-24; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., pp. 83:3-84:22. In fact, the purported purpose of the Fee Allocation was to align interest "on the same team" and develop a level of trust between the ERISA lawyers and Customer Class lawyers. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 82:8-15.

Sarko testified further that he would not have agreed to file a joint fee petition with the Court had he known of the intended payment to Chargois, which, in his opinion, should have disclosed. Sarko 9 /8/17 Dep., pp. 75:2-7, 78:24-79:3. Nor would he have signed the Claw Back Agreement (see Section C (iii), infra) agreeing to reimburse Labaton for any reduction in the fee award imposed by the Court as a result of the November 10, 2016 letter to the Court admitting the overstatement of the State Street lodestar (discussed infra). Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 75:2-22, 78:19 – 79:4.

Sarko also was the chief liaison with the DOL during the mediation, and he testified he would have been obligated to tell the DOL about Chargois and his arrangement with Labaton for a cut of the fees. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep. p. 76:14-22. In Sarko's opinion, if the DOL had the information about Chargois, the Department would have had questions, and the settlement would have "blown up" because State Street was insisting on a global settlement which could not be achieved without the DOL's approval. Id., p. 84:3-5.

vii. PAYMENTS TO CHARGOIS PURSUANT TO THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Since the Chargois Arrangement began in 2008, Labaton has represented ATRS in at least nine cases for which it has paid Chargois a percentage of the Labaton's total fee award:

- In re A10 Networks, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, No. 2015-1-CV-276207 (Cal. Super. Ct. Jan 29, 2015)
- Brado v. Vocera Communications, Inc. No. 13-CV-3567 (N.D. Cal. Aug.1, 2013)
- Perry v. Spectrum Pharmaceuticals, Inc., No. 13-CV- 0433 (D. Nev. Mar.14, 2013)
- Hoppaugh v. K12 Inc., No. 12-CV-0103 (E.D. Va. Jan. 30, 2012)
- In re Hewlett –Packard Company Securities Litigation, No. 11-CV-1404 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2011)
- Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corporation, No. 11-CV-10230 (D. Mass. Feb 10, 2011)
- In re Beckman Coulter, Inc. Securities Litigation, No. 10-CV-1327 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2010)
- In re Colonial BancGroup, Inc. Securities Litigation, No. 09-CV-0104 (M.D. Ala. Feb. 9, 2009)
- In re Capacitors Antitrust Litigation, No. 14-CV-3264-JD (N.D. Cal.) [63]

Labaton Response to Special Master's Supplemental Interrogatory, 1(a); Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 54:2-3; 65:1-71:13.[64] In each of these cases, Labaton paid Chargois a percentage -- more often amounting to 10 - 15% than the originally agreed-upon 20% -- of Labaton's total fee

[63] Chargois testified that In re Capacitors was not an ATRS case, and, hence, not covered by the agreement. See Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p.65:4-7.

[64] While not identified in response to discovery, media reports also identify Labaton filing on behalf of ATRS, and being named co-lead counsel in a multi-trillion-dollar action alleging that many of the country's leading banks harmed both the United States government and private investors by rigging the management of 13 trillion dollars in securities sold by the U.S. Department of Treasury in In Re: Treasury Securities Auction Antitrust Litigation, (S.D.N.Y. 2017). Potentially, the Chargois Arrangement would cover this case, as well award. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 60:17-20.[65] Neither Chargois nor any Chargois & Herron attorneys entered an appearance or did any work in any of these actions.

C. SCRUTINY OF THE STATE STREET SETTLEMENT AND SPECIAL MASTER'S APPOINTMENT

i. THE BOSTON GLOBE INQUIRY

By all accounts, the $300 million settlement reflected an excellent result for the class members and was the product of the highly professional and skilled work of the class's law firms. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 109:22-23; Kravtiz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 105:23-106:7; Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., p. 100:1-10. However, on November 8, 2016 -- less than a week after the Court had approved the Settlement and entered Judgment -- the Boston Globe contacted counsel for TLF to inquire about the apparent duplication of certain SA names listed on the individual firm lodestar reports of Customer Class Counsel submitted as part of the Joint Fee Petition. Garrett Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 85:23-86:11; David Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 132:16-24. Following this inquiry, attorneys from Labaton, Lieff, and TLF immediately conducted internal reviews to determine what, if any, information in their fee petitions may have been incorrect. See Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 137:11-19; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 86:15 – 87:12.

[65] Chargois was not happy with the frequent reductions in the amounts Labaton paid his firm. He expressed his frustration in an October 18, 2014 email to Labaton:

> "…I am very concerned that you guys are attempting to significantly, substantially and materially alter our agreement. Our deal with Labaton is straightforward. We got you ATRS as a client after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas, and Labaton would use ATRS to seek lead counsel appointments in institutional investor fraud and misrepresentation cases. Where Labaton is successful in getting appointed lead counsel and obtains a settlement or judgment award, we split Labaton's attorney fee award 80/20 period. As I said in my text to you regarding HP and your allocation, I understand the circumstances in this case and am okay with the fee split in this instance. We are not changing our fee split agreement for all the other pension fund cases. You promised me that you would give me advanced notice of when you guys would seek a modification or accommodation on a given settlement, and I want you to keep that going forward."

LBS017593 - 17594 (10/18/14 Chargois email to Belfi) [EX. 43]; see also Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 253:2-255:4.

After conducting their internal reviews, Labaton, Lieff and TLF unanimously conceded that the State Street Fee Petition overstated hours worked by Customer Class Counsel by 9,322.9 hours due to the double-counting of certain lawyers' hours, resulting in a lodestar overstatement of $4,058,654.50.[66] Specifically, the Fee Petition attributed hours of staff (and contract) attorneys allocated by Lieff and Labaton to TLF for purposes of cost-sharing not only to the lodestar petitions of Lieff and Labaton -- the SA host firms -- but also to TLF's lodestar. This dramatically inflated the lodestar of TLF. See 11/10/16 Letter from David J. Goldsmith to Hon. Mark L. Wolf, Dkt. No. 116. [EX. 44].

ii. NOVEMBER 10, 2016 LETTER TO THE COURT

After Labaton, TLF, and Lieff confirmed that the double-counting alleged by the Globe had, in fact, occurred, David Goldsmith of Labaton took the lead in writing a letter to the Court to explain what had happened. See 11/10/16 Letter from David J. Goldsmith ("Goldsmith Letter"), Dkt. No.116 [EX. 44]; G. Bradley 6/1917 Dep., p. 87:15-17; Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 143:25-144:5. Various iterations of the letter were circulated among Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel, and ultimately approved by all, before the letter was filed with the Court. Id., p. 144:5-9. The Goldsmith Letter explained that due to "inadvertent errors," Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined time and lodestar were incorrect. Of the reported 86,113.7 hours, 9,322.9 hours were overstated. Of the reported lodestar of $ 41,323,895.75, $ 4,058,654.5 was overstated. 11/10/16 Goldsmith Letter, p. 2. [EX. 44]. The internal review revealed that 17 SAs had been listed on both the TLF and Labaton lodestar reports, and for these SAs, the billing rates on the TLF report were in most instances higher. Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 142:12-19. Lieff also confirmed that six SAs on TLF's lodestar report also appeared on Lieff's report. Chiplock [66] The ERISA Counsel's lodestar reports were unaffected by the double-counting.

6/16/17 Dep., p. 164:9-17; see also Goldsmith 11/10/16 Letter to the Court, Dkt. No. 116. [EX. 44].

Shortly thereafter, the Boston Globe published a report detailing the "double-counting" issue addressed by the Goldsmith Letter and raising additional questions about the accuracy and reliability of the attorneys' fees, including questions concerning the billing rates charged for the SAs and contract attorneys, and for the work in the case done by the Garrett Bradley's brother, Michael Bradley -- who was not employed by TLF -- including the $500 per hour rate at which Michael Bradley's work was included in Thornton's lodestar.[67]

The Goldsmith Letter did not attempt to explain how or why the double-counting occurred. Nor did Labaton take this opportunity to disclose the Chargois Arrangement. (Of course, Goldsmith, himself, did not know about Chargois at the time he wrote the letter to the Court.)[68]

iii. THE "CLAW BACK" LETTER

After the November 10, 2016 letter was delivered, Plaintiffs' Counsel awaited a response from the Court. Recognizing that the Court might respond adversely and ultimately decide to reduce the fee award, on November 21, 2016, at the direction of Labaton's Chairman, Lawrence Sucharow, David Goldsmith drafted a letter which Sucharow then sent to all counsel -- including ERISA Counsel -- for their signature, asking all counsel to agree to refund to Labaton, for re-deposit into the State Street escrow account, their respective pro-rata share of any court-ordered reduction of fees, expenses and/or service awards ("Claw Back Letter"). See Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 152:17-155:13; see also TLF-SST-012264 – 12266 (11/21/16 Sucharow Draft Letter to Counsel) [EX. 46].

Bob Lieff and Sarko agreed, pending a breakdown of the fees to be paid out on December 8. The issue of whether to send a similar letter to Chargois was raised in an email addressed only to Customer Class Counsel by Garrett Bradley, to which Sucharow responded:

> Need two letters with breakdown, ERISA just gets sent to ERISA counsel with 10 percent off the top and then a third each. Class co-counsel get one with ERISA 10 percent off the top, Damon's percentage also off the top, and each of class co-counsel split with the percentages agreed to. In short, no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split. They only need to see their 10 percent and then split three ways. By the way, I want to asterisk the 10 percent to ERISA with a footnote saying although our fee agreement with ERISA counsel only provides for a 9 percent allocation, co-class counsel have determined to increase that to 10 percent in light of the excellent work and contribution of ERISA counsel.

TLF-SST-012272 – 12274 (11/22/16 Sucharow Email to Goldsmith, G. Bradley, Keller, Belfi) (emphasis added). [EX. 42].

Larry Sucharow then also directed Goldsmith to send a separate claw-back letter to Damon Chargois for his signature, as well. Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., p. 171:14-23. Accordingly, Goldsmith drafted a letter for Eric Belfi, the "ATRS relationship partner" with Labaton to send to Chargois. Id, p. 172:10-15. See also Belfi 9/5/17 Dep. p. 93:13-16.

iv. APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL MASTER

With questions having been raised as to the accuracy and reliability of the lodestar reports which had been submitted by Plaintiffs' counsel and relied upon by the Court in awarding fees, the Court proposed the appointment of a Special Master to investigate these issues and prepare a Report and Recommendation concerning them. See 2/6/17 Memorandum and Order, Dkt. No. 117. [EX. 47]. The Court thereafter held a hearing on March 7, 2017 to discuss, among other issues, the appointment of Hon. Gerald E. Rosen (Ret.) as the Special Master.[69] The following day, on March 8, 2017, the Court appointed Hon. Gerald E. Rosen, ret., as Special Master to investigate and prepare a Report and Recommendation as to:

> (1) the accuracy and reliability of counsels' fee petitions; (2) the accuracy and reliability of representations made in David Goldsmith November 10, 2016 letter to the Court; (3) the accuracy and reliability of representations made by parties requesting service awards; (4) the reasonableness of attorneys' fees, expenses, service awards previously ordered and whether any of them should be reduced; and (5) whether any misconduct occurred in connection with the award of attorneys' fees, and if so, whether such misconduct should be sanctioned.

3/8/17 Memorandum and Order, Dkt. No. 173 (footnotes omitted). [EX. 48].

The Special Master retained William F. Sinnott, Esq. of the law firm Donoghue, Barrett & Singal, P.C. (now "Barrett & Singal, P.C.") to assist in the investigation. The Special Master also retained John Toothman as a technical adviser, and later, Professor Stephen Gillers as an expert on the ethical and professional conduct issues raised in this case.

[69] Prior to the hearing, all of the law firms agreed to the appointment of Judge Rosen, except McTigue Law. McTigue initially filed a written objection to the appointment of Judge Rosen, see McTigue Law's Response to 2/6/17 Order, Dkt. No. 138, but on the record at the hearing, withdrew that objection. See 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., Dkt. No. 176, p. 55:3-4.

III. QUESTIONS PRESENTED

I have been asked to address the following questions:

I. Whose professional conduct rules and what law governed the obligations of class counsel in this matter?

Answer: The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. Federal law also governs issues raised here.

II. Was the arrangement with Chargois ("the Chargois Arrangement"[70]) a valid division of fee agreement under Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e)?

Answer: No. The Chargois Arrangement does not comply with Rule 1.5(e) of the Massachusetts Rules of Profession Conduct. It is, therefore, within the prohibition in Rule 7.2(b) against paying a "person" to recommend a lawyer.

III. Should the Chargois Arrangement have been disclosed to the Court before the Court awarded fees in this matter?

Answer: Yes. Federal law and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct required that counsel who knew the terms of the Chargois Arrangement inform the Court before it awarded fees in this matter.

IV. Should the Chargois Arrangement have been disclosed to the members of the certified settlement class?

Answer: Yes. Fiduciary duty and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct required that counsel who knew the terms of the Chargois Arrangement inform the certified settlement class.

V. Did Garrett Bradley's lodestar declaration comply with the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct and Rule 11, Fed. R. Civ. P.?

Answer: No. The Declaration violated Rule 3.3(a) because, as I have been asked to assume, Bradley knew that it contained false statements when he filed it. Separately, the Declaration violated Rule 11 because Bradley filed it without conducting "an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances" to establish that there was "evidentiary support" for the facts in it.

[70] I will use the term "Chargois Arrangement" to refer to the puported agreement by Labaton Sucharow to pay Chargois or Chargois & Herron twenty percent of the fees Labaton earned from its work for ATRS. The payment, as I am asked to assume, was meant to compensate Chargois for recommending Labaton to ATRS in 2008. The Arrangement did not require Chargois to do any work on ATRS matters or to accept responsibility for any work Labaton did for ATRS. See pp. 35-38.

IV. OPINION

A. WHERE THE COURT IS CALLED ON TO APPLY A RULE OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, IT SHOULD APPLY THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT RATHER THAN THE RULES OF ANOTHER JURISDICTION. FEDERAL COMMON LAW ALSO GOVERNS ISSUES BEFORE THE COURT

Weber and Fishman (supra pages 2-3) were not disciplinary cases. They recognized, however, that the violation of professional conduct rules may be relevant in deciding whether a law firm or lawyer has violated a duty to a client. Similarly, I cite these rules because they are relevant to the law firms' duties to ATRS, the class, and the Court. I offer no opinion on what, if any, remedy or sanction is appropriate.

i. APPLICATION OF MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Counsel's duties in this case are governed by two bodies of authority: the rules of professional conduct and federal law.[71] The determination of whose professional conduct rules govern counsel's conduct is straightforward. The United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, the jurisdiction in which the State Street case was pending, expressly adopts the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. See L.R., D. Mass. 83.6.1 (incorporating rules promulgated by the Supreme Judicial Court). The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct themselves -- in particular Rule 8.5(b)(1) -- reaffirm that Massachusetts ethical rules govern all conduct in matters pending before a "governmental tribunal [i.e. a court] …unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise." See Rule 8.5(b)(1); see also Rule 1.0(p).

Admissions for pro hac vice status in the District Court in Massachusetts, such as those obtained by out-of-state counsel in the State Street case, requires an express acknowledgement that the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct govern the applicant's behavior. To gain admission pro hac vice in this Court, each attorney was required to certify, under oath, that he or she "has read and agrees to comply with the Local Rules of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts." Local Rule 83.5.1(b)(1)(C).[72] The Local Rules, in turn, incorporate the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct.

Massachusetts Rule 8.5 cmt. [4] provides that a Court's "choice of law rule" might lead to application of another jurisdiction's rule. But that would not be so on the facts before the Special Master. The District Court addressed the choice of law issue in Daynard v. Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, P.A., 188 F.Supp.2d 115 (D. Mass. 2002), where "a law professor" who was "putatively an expert on tobacco litigation," sought to enforce an oral fee-splitting arrangement with the law firm for whom he consulted. In weighing several different factors, the Court relied heavily on the place of performance, deeming bar admissions not dispositive of the inquiry. See id. at 119, 121, 122-123. Thus, the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct governed the dispute between the expert -- admitted to practice only in New York -- and the defendant, a South Carolina law firm -- where the expert had performed the bulk of his legal work in Massachusetts. Id. at 123. Application of Massachusetts law would not, however, prevent other states with an interest in the litigation from disciplining attorneys over whom it had authority. Id.

Applying the Daynard Court's analysis to the conduct of counsel in the State Street case, Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct should, again, apply. The ethical issues here predominantly arise out of counsel's conduct before the Court as well as written submissions to the Court and duties to disclose information to the class representatives and class members, whom the Court had an obligation to protect. Unlike Attorney Daynard, counsel here actually appeared before the Court on more than one occasion.

[72] The previous version of this rule in effect in 2011, L.R., D. Mass 83.5.1(a)(1) (amended Jan. 1, 2015), required that attorneys seeking admission to the District Court "(ii) ha[ve] satisfied the examination requirements as defined by the District Committee on Admissions relating to familiarity with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Federal Rules of Evidence, principles of federal jurisdiction and venue, and rules relating to professional responsibility; and (iii) ha[ve] filed a certificate …. attesting to familiarity with the local rules of this district."

ii. ADDITIONAL REASONS TO APPLY THE MASSACHUSETTS PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT RULES IN THIS CASE

For three other reasons, the Court should apply the Massachusetts professional conduct rules. First, applying to each lawyer the rules of the particular jurisdiction in which that lawyer is admitted could subject different lawyers to different rules and possibly different outcomes for their work in the same litigation. Second, among the rules relevant here are rules that describe duties to the Court itself. The Court has a strong interest in assuring that the behavior of lawyers practicing before it is governed by its own rules, not the rules elsewhere. Third, the relevant rules also describe duties to members of the certified class who reside in many jurisdictions, whose rules may vary. As in Daynard, other jurisdictions in which these questions may arise can apply their own rules.[73] See id. at 123.

iii. FEDERAL LAW ALSO GOVERNS ISSUES BEFORE THE COURT

As stated, federal law also governs issues discussed here and, in particular, the obligation of class counsel to disclose the Chargois Arrangement. See Section C (ii), infra.

[73] Application of Massachusetts law will not prevent courts elsewhere from enforcing their own rules of professional responsibility. Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 123. Similarly, application of Massachusetts law will not prevent courts in other jurisdictions from analyzing and applying the relevant principles of contract enforcement or public policy considerations recognized in other states, if called upon to do so.

B. THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT IS AN UNETHICAL PAYMENT FOR THE RECOMMENDATION OF A CLIENT UNDER RULE 7.2(b) UNLESS IT SATISFIES THE REQUIREMENTS OF RULE 1.5(e) AS A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT.

i. RULE 7.2(b)

Rule 7.2(b) forbids a lawyer to "give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services."[74] Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b). This was the language of Rule 7.2(b) in February 2011, when ATRS retained Labaton in this case, and it still is.[75] See Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b) (last amended March 26, 2015). As explained below, "person" includes Chargois, who was paid for recommending Labaton to ATRS. In 2011 and today, an exception in Rule 7.2(b)(5), or its predecessor, Rule 7.2(c)(4), provides that a lawyer "may pay fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e)." If a payment is within the exception, it is removed from the prohibition in Rule 7.2(b). Until March 2011, Rule 1.5(e) provided:

> A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable.
> Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) (amended Dec. 22, 2010, eff. March 15, 2011).

In 2005, the Supreme Judicial Court remedied three defects that it identified in Rule 1.5(e). Saggese v. Kelley, 445 Mass. 434, 442-443 (2005). First: The rule did not have a writing requirement. Second: It did not say who should obtain client consent. Third: It did not say when the client must be notified of the fee division. Id. The Court's opinion corrected these omissions by declaring how the rule "will be construed" thereafter. Id. at 443.

[74] Labaton and Chargois exchanged emails and two drafts but never finalized an agreement. See p. 36, supra.

[75] The version of Rule 7.2 in effect in 2011 differed slightly from current wording of the Rule. Rule 7.2(c), as it then appeared, contained substantially similar language to the current Rule 7.2(b), though the format of the rule changed. It read: "A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that a lawyer may … (4) pay referral fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e)." See 7.2(c)(eff. 2011). Rule 7.2 was later amended to its current form on March 26, 2015, effective July 1, 2015.

> These problems are avoidable in fee-sharing situations if the referring lawyer, who usually is in the best position to secure compliance with rule 1.5(e), is required to disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secures the client's consent in writing. The rule will be construed to require this in fee-sharing agreements that are formed after the issuance of the rescript in this decision. Although the primary responsibility for compliance will fall on referring lawyers, lawyers to whom referrals are made are not absolved of all responsibility, and should confirm, before undertaking such representations, that there has been compliance with Rule 1.5(e).

Id. at 443 (emphasis in original).[76] A Westlaw search for in the database for the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court quickly brings up only Saggese and one other case.

One or more Labaton experts opined that Rule 7.2(b) does not apply when the "person" who is paid for recommending a client to a lawyer is a lawyer. Chargois is a lawyer. For two reasons, this construction of the rule is wrong. Currently, Rule 7.2 or its comment uses the word "nonlawyer" five times. If the drafters wished to limit the category of "person" to non-lawyers, they would have used the word "nonlawyer," not "person." (The Rules also use the terms "nonlawyer" elsewhere. See, e.g., Rule 5.4 and its comment, which use the term "nonlawyer" seven times.) Second, if the word "person" was intended to exclude lawyers, there would be no need for the exception in Rule 7.2(b)(5) for fee agreements that divide fees between lawyers. That exception makes sense only if "person" includes lawyers. Apart from this, if "person" did not include lawyers, a lawyer could make the following offer to another lawyer: "I will pay you [76] Effective March 15, 2011, the Saggese Court's writing requirement was added to Rule 1.5(e). Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) (current through Feb. 1, 2018). Rule 1.5(e) currently reads:

> A division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if the client is notified before or at the time the client enters into a fee agreement for the matter that a division of fees will be made and consents to the joint participation in writing and the total fee is reasonable. This limitation does not prohibit payment to a former partner or associate pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement. Id.

$5000 for every client who retains me on your recommendation whether or not I eventually earn a fee in the referred matter." Because that arrangement would not be a division of fees because compensation would not depend on earning fees, it would not satisfy Rule 1.5(e) and violate Rule 7.2(b).[77]

The Daynard Court, in distinguishing Daynard's fee, recognized that non-compliance with the division of fee rule can mean that payment to a lawyer for a recommendation can violate Rule 7.2(b): "[Attorney] Daynard is nothing like the plaintiffs in many cases who are denied enforcement of their 'fee-splitting' contracts, which are in reality fee-referral contracts." Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 131, citing Holstein v. Grossman, 616 N.E.2d 1224, 1229 (1993) (holding that a "fee-sharing agreement which is primarily based on a client referral is unenforceable as a matter of public policy where the undisputed facts show that the referred client never consented in writing to the attorneys' arrangement"). This observation would have been unnecessary if lawyers could receive fees for recommendations alone.

ii. BECAUSE LABATON DID NOT COMPLY WITH RULE 1.5(e), IT PAID CHARGOIS FOR RECOMMENDING A CLIENT IN VIOLATION OF RULE 7.2(b)(2)

Bringing the Chargois Arrangement within Rule 1.5(e), as it was written both at the time and now, removes that Arrangement from the prohibition in Rule 7.2(b) against paying Chargois for a recommendation. Labaton, however, did not tell ATRS (or George Hopkins) about Chargois or get written (or any) consent. According to the statement of facts (p.43):

> Labaton's purported reason for not informing Hopkins of the Chargois Arrangement is because Hopkins "did not want to know." was a unilateral decision by Belfi, however, who concluded after meeting Hopkins that he would appreciate a more direct relationship. According to Belfi, the subject of Chargois "did not come up," and [77] The Labaton experts who said that "person" does not include lawyers explained that Rule 7.2(b)(5) was "surplusage" or "redundant." This is wrong. If "person" does not include lawyers, then Rule 7.2(b)(5) contradicts Rule 7.2(b).

> admittedly, Belfi did not want to bring another attorney not from Labaton into the case. (internal citations omitted).

In mitigation, Labaton cites a 2008 email from Christa Clark, ATRS's then-chief counsel, and language in the firm's February 2011 Retainer Agreement with ATRS. Labaton and some of its experts argue that these provisions mean either that Labaton fully complied with Rule 1.5(e) or that compliance was at worst "imperfect."

But neither the 2008 Clark email, nor the language in the Retainer Agreement, satisfies the requirements of Rule 1.5(e) as construed in Saggese.

The Clark email, informing Labaton that the Chargois' firm would not be "additional monitoring counsel," added this paragraph:

> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or use them as independent contractors, if you deem is [sic] appropriate on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conducive to a joint proposal. See p. 41, supra.

Labaton's retainer agreement with ATRS in this case provides:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation. See pp. 44, supra.

For the following reasons, these provisions are inadequate to comply with the requirements of Rule 1.5 as revised by the Supreme Judicial Court in Saggese: (a) ATRS was not notified "before the referral is made" that Labaton's fee would be divided with Chargois; and (b) ATRS never consented to the fee division "in writing." See Saggese, 445 Mass. at 442-443. With regard to (a), the sensible way to read "before the referral is made" is "before the client retains the referred lawyer." When the Supreme Judicial Court amended the rule in December 2010, effective March 15, 2011, it used the phrase "before or at the time the client enters into a fee agreement." The amended rule was available at the time of the ATRS retainer agreement in February 2011.

Rule 1.5(e), then and now, has as its object protection of the client. If Hopkins had been told about Chargois, he could have rejected the Chargois Arrangement, just as ATRS had earlier refused to list Chargois as "monitoring counsel." He could have asked for details of the financial arrangement. Labaton would have been required to tell him.[78] Hopkins could have asked what Chargois' contributions to the case were expected to be. He could have asked to know more about Chargois' qualifications and to meet him. He could have negotiated to have money slated for Chargois to go instead to the class. He could have asked for advice or consulted other counsel on the obligations of ATRS as the representative of a putative class. But Hopkins did not know about Chargois because Belfi decided that this information was not relevant to Hopkins' representation of the class.

iii. LABATON'S OWN CONDUCT, OBJECTIVELY VIEWED, IS INCONSISTENT WITH THE CLAIM THAT THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT WAS A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT

[78] The Comment to Rule 1.5(e), effective in February 2011, at the time expanded the disclosure obligation in the text of the rule itself. Whereas the plain language of 1.5(e) required notice to the client that "a division of fees will be made," the Comment required that, if the client asks, lawyers go further and disclose "the share of each lawyer." (Emphasis added.) The difference is between saying "we are dividing the fee," which the black letter rule required, and saying if asked, "I am going to get 70 percent and he is going to get 30 percent." More specifically, the Comment in February 2011 provided: "The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) cmt. [4A] (amended Dec. 22, 2010, eff. March 15, 2011.) Today, the same obligation to provide the greater detail on request appears in cmt. [7A] of Massachusetts Rule 1.5, which states: "Unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), Paragraph (e) does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or require the lawyer to assume joint responsibility for the representation in order to be entitled to a share of the fee. The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. Cond. 1.5, cmt. [7A].

Whether a division of fee agreement complies with a jurisdiction's rule is an objective inquiry. It asks: Did counsel's conduct satisfy the rule's requirements?[79] Objectively viewed, Labaton's own conduct is, in the following ways, inconsistent with its current claim that it had a valid division of fee agreement with Chargois.

Although Labaton asked ATRS's permission to add Lieff and Thornton as counsel for ATRS, it did not inform Hopkins about Chargois. Instead, it blind copied Chargois on emails that included George Hopkins and forwarded to Chargois alone email exchanges with Hopkins.

Labaton did not disclose to the Thornton and Leiff Cabraser law firms, which were contributing to the payments to Chargois, the true nature of those payments when it appeared that those firms may have misunderstood Chargois' role. In an April 26, 2013, email on which Keller and Belfi of Labaton were copied, Garrett Bradley referred to Chargois as "the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving" ATRS. In a July 8, 2016, email from Garrett Bradley, on which Keller, Belfi, and Sucharow were copied, Chargois is referred to as "the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role." Each characterization of Chargois is false or misleading. Chargois was getting paid for a client recommendation only.[80] The Labaton lawyers who were recipients of the emails had knowledge of the terms of the Chargois Arrangement but [79] Both Saggese and Daynard determined whether the purported agreement satisfied the conditions in Rule 1.5(e), the fee division rule in Massachusetts. See Saggese, 445 Mass. at 441; Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 123.

[80] Labaton and some of its experts say that Rule 7.2(b) is in any event inapplicable because Chargois only made an introduction, not a recommendation. That view would eviscerate the rule and allow lawyers and nonlawyers alike to get paid for "introductions" so long as they were careful not to use the word "recommend" or variants. It would allow the proverbial ambulance driver to get a reward every time he "introduced" an accident victim to a lawyer by handing out the lawyer's cards while avoiding the word "recommend." The facts I've been asked to assume say that "Chargois explained to Doane that he was working with a New York law firm that specialized in institutional investors and asked if Doane would meet with him, Belfi and Keller, and Doane agreed." See p. 35, supra. (Emphasis added.) That is a recommendation and would be understood as such.

did not correct Bradley's characterizations, as would have been expected if they believed that the Chargois Arrangement was a valid division of fee agreement.

If Labaton considered the Chargois Arrangement a true division of fee agreement, one would have expected it to finalize the agreement and adjust it to comply with the division of fee rules in each jurisdiction in which Labaton then or later represented ATRS. For example, both before and after it filed this action, Labaton represented ATRS in a total of four matters in courts in California, whose rule is set out below.[81] Labaton did not comply with that rule's provisions, which, among other things, require the client's written consent after "a full disclosure has been made in writing that a division of fees will be made and the terms of such division." Cal. R. Prof. C. 2-200(A)(1) (adopted Nov. 28 ,1988; eff. May 27, 1989).

By early 2009, after George Hopkins replaced Paul Doane as ATRS Executive Director, Labaton knew that it would not get the substantial, legal help from Chargois that it had apparently anticipated. Chargois had no relationship with Hopkins. As a result of this "unexpected turn of events," Labaton "believed that the fee sharing agreement had been based upon a condition that was not being satisfied." (Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP to Special [81] California Rule of Professional Conduct 2-200 provides:

> (A) A member shall not divide a fee for legal services with a lawyer who is not a partner of, associate of, or shareholder with the member unless:
> > (1) The client has consented in writing thereto after a full disclosure has been made in writing that a division of fees will be made and the terms of such division; and
> > (2) The total fee charged by all lawyers is not increased solely by reason of the provision for division of fees and is not unconscionable as that term is defined in rule 4-200.
> (B) Except as permitted in paragraph (A) of this rule or rule 2-300, a member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any lawyer for the purpose of recommending or securing employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client….

> This rule was adopted November 28, 1988, and became effective May 27, 1989.

Master's September 7, 2017 Request for Supplemental Submission, pg. 2.) But Labaton continued to pay Chargois anyway, "fearing that [Chargois] would otherwise sue the Firm in state court in Texas, an event that could have an extremely adverse impact on a firm that works extensively with public pension and retirement plans." Id.[82] That motive may have served the firm's own interests at the time, as it appears to have viewed them, but it is inconsistent with a claim that the Chargois Arrangement was a valid division of fee agreement in the various states in which the firm represented ATRS. Labaton's interests, furthermore, would be contrary to the interests of its clients because Chargois would get paid out of settlement funds the Court might award even though Labaton believed "a condition" of the agreement "was not being satisfied."

iv. COURT OPINIONS IN DISPUTES BETWEEN LAWYERS DO NOT RENDER THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT

On occasion, a lawyer will seek to deny another lawyer his or her promised fee, citing a failure to tell the client about the agreement or to put it in writing (or both), as a jurisdiction's rule required. On one hand, the agreement does not comply with the rule. On the other hand, refusing to enforce a purported fee-sharing agreement would let one lawyer keep the entire fee even where he or she was equally culpable of the violation.

Saggese v. Kelley, supra, enforced an oral agreement between a referring and referred lawyers where the client, who was not a fiduciary, later ratified the agreement. 434 Mass at 442. The Court wrote that the referred lawyers could not rely on the failure to comply with the rule "to absolve them of their contractual obligation." Id. at 441. But the Court "emphasize[d] that although failure to comply with the rule may not necessarily render a contract unenforceable between lawyers, it may subject both lawyers to disciplinary action upon division of a fee." Id. at 443 (emphasis added).

In a division of fee case in federal court in Massachusetts, a law firm of record refused to pay a lawyer for work it had allegedly retained him to do in exchange for an oral promise of five percent of any recovery. Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 117. The firm in that case argued noncompliance with the Rule 1.5(e), governing division of fees, excused it from performing under the contract. Id. at 118. The court held that the oral promise was enforceable, citing the lawyer's "valuable" work across more than a decade, the fact that his work appeared "proportional to the alleged contract amount," and the fact that the lawyer's work on the matter was not concealed. Id. at 131.

These two cases respond to the equities between lawyers when a division of fee rule is violated and one of the lawyers wants to keep the entire fee. In Saggese, an individual client (not a class representative) ratified the agreement and was not harmed. See 434 Mass. at 444. In Daynard, the clients were states acting through their attorneys general, some of whom did know of Daynard's work and did not object. 188 F. Supp. 2d at 129. Furthermore, Daynard worked on the matters over the course of a decade. Id. at 131. There was no "taking advantage of uninformed clients." Id. at 131. The Court said that refusal to enforce the agreement would "smack of injustice." Id. at 132.

The validity of the $4.1 million payment to Chargois does not arise in a fee dispute between Chargois and Labaton. This is not a case where a referred lawyer, equally to blame, cites the rule in order to keep the entire fee for himself. This is not a case where a law firm, which (and whose clients) benefitted for a decade from the work of an unaffiliated lawyer, now seeks to renege on its promise. Labaton's duties were owed to ATRS, to the class ATRS purported to represent -- and after certification did represent -- as a fiduciary, and to the Court.

v. LABATON'S POSITION

In argument and expert testimony, Labaton has advanced the position that an "imperfect" effort to comply with Rule 1.5(e) should not default to the prohibition against paying for recommendations under Rule 7.2(b), and that its compliance with the rule was either perfect or at worst imperfect. In support of the position that it fully or imperfectly complied with Rule 1.5(e), Labaton or its experts cite (i) the Christa Clark 2008 email appointing Labaton as "additional monitoring counsel" and adding that it "may affiliate [Chargois & Herron] or use them as independent contractors, if you deem [it] appropriate on a case by case basis;" (ii) the language in the 2011 Retainer Agreement with ATRS giving Labaton permission to "allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation;" and (iii) Belfi's perception at the time ATRS retained Labaton in this case that George Hopkins had no interest in knowing how fees would be divided among counsel. Years later, Hopkins confirmed the accuracy of Belfi's perception when, in the course of the Special Master's investigation, he learned of the Chargois Arrangement for the first time. See pp. 41-44, supra.

vi. FURTHER ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Labaton failed to comply with Rule 1.5(e). The fact that the Supreme Judicial Court has enforced a non-compliant division of fee agreement in a contest between referring and referred lawyers, each of whom was responsible for the violation, did not, as the Court wrote, make the agreement immune to discipline. "We emphasize that although failure to comply with the rule may not necessarily render a contract unenforceable between lawyers, it may subject both lawyers to disciplinary action upon division of a fee." Saggese, 445 Mass. at 706.

Labaton did not forget to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to George Hopkins. It chose not to do so because Belfi testified that he chose not to share the information with Hopkins, and he inferred that Hopkins did not want to know how the class lawyers were dividing fees. In a March 2018 Declaration, Hopkins wrote that he had told Belfi "I do not want to know the specifics of fee allocations between Labaton and other attorneys." Hopkins 3/15/18 Declaration, ¶¶ 10, 14.[83]

This explanation is inadequate. There is a difference between not wishing to know "the specifics of fee allocations," as Hopkins says he said, and not wishing to know who was sharing in the fee. Labaton asked Hopkins for permission to add Lieff and Thornton to the representation of ATRS. It could have done the same for Chargois & Herron without violating Hopkins' desire to remain uninformed of the "specifics" of any fee division. Indeed, Rule 1.5(e) at the time (and still) did not require Labaton to tell Hopkins "the specifics" unless he asked. The rule required only that Labaton "disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secur[e] the client's consent in writing." Saggese at 443. Labaton could have complied with the rule and have honored Hopkins' "express" and "clear instructions." Id. at ¶¶14, 16.[84]

C. THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT SHOULD HAVE BEEN DISCLOSED TO THE COURT.

[83] In his Declaration, Hopkins wrote that he was "ratifying Labaton's fee-sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron." Id. at ¶17. Hopkins does not say if he was ratifying it only on behalf of ATRS or whether he was purporting to do so for the entire class.

[84] It bears mention that Hopkins was not Labaton's client. ATRS was the client. "A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents." Rule 1.13(a). Nor was ATRS an individual client. It purported to be, and then became, a class representative, taking on fiduciary duties (and therefore potential liability) to the certified class. The Chargois fee would be paid not by Hopkins or even ATRS, but from the class's recovery. See C(v), infra.

i. DISCLOSURE TO THE COURT WAS REQUIRED UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT AND FEDERAL LAW

The obligation of Customer Class Counsel to have informed the Court of the Chargois Arrangement arises under federal case law as well as the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Disner, 688 F.3d 645, 654 (9th Cir. 2012) ("Although the application of the common fund doctrine is a matter of federal courts' equitable powers, we have frequently looked to state law for guidance in determining when an ethical violation affects an attorney's entitlement to fees.") (citation omitted). Here, both federal and state sources apply. Labaton and several experts rely on Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1) and 54(d)(2) to support their contention that, unless the Court asked, there was no duty to inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement. (Labaton Response, pp 19-23; Rubenstein 4/9/18 Dep., p. 74: 9-12; Sarrouf 3/24/18 Dep., 270: 22- 271: 2. Labaton attorney Chris Keller stated during the negotiations that, whatever the fee allocation amongst Customer Class Counsel might be, the court need not be informed. TLF-SST-052209 (8/28/15 email correspondence between Bradley and Keller, 'cc Sucharow) ("We should talk this through. The court absolutely need not understand what the allocation of fees is amongst counsel so that should not be included in any document to be filed with the court…") [EX. 51].

While there may not have been a duty under Rules 23 and 54 to disclose the division of fees among those lawyers whom the Court knew about, and so could inquire, the Court could not be expected to ask counsel about a division of fees with Chargois, a lawyer who had not appeared in the case and whom it did not know about. Labaton's construction of its obligation under Rule 54(d)(2) would impose on the Court the affirmative responsibility to ask: "Is anyone else getting any portion of the attorney's fees you are asking me to award whose existence you have not revealed?" As discussed below, the Court had no such responsibility. I do not rely on Rules 23 and 54 for my opinion.

The Court itself dispelled any uncertainty about what it expected. Just before approving Lead Counsel's fee request in full, the Court said: "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today." 11/2/16 Hearing. Tr., p. 35:4-5. Chargois was not mentioned. But Mr. Goldsmith did not know about the Chargois Arrangement and the lawyers who did know about it were not in Court.[85]

Earlier in the proceeding, the Court said: "Is there anything you feel I didn't say that I should have?" and asked to be reminded "of the terms of allocation." Mr. Goldsmith replied, "I didn't want there to be something that was left that Your Honor wanted to hear." He then described the allocation among the members of the class. Id. at 21 et seq. In my deposition, it was pointed out that this particular colloquy related only to the allocation among class members, not to the fee request, which the Court turned to next. ("So now with regard to requests for attorneys' fees." Id. at 22.) The implication seems to be that there was, therefore, no failure to inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement after the Court spoke. This reading would have merit if there were then no discussion of fees. But the Court's statement does express the Court's reliance on information from counsel. That reliance was underscored when shortly thereafter the colloquy did turn to fees. "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today," the Court said directly before finding that the "requests for attorneys' fees of $74, 541, 250 is reasonable." Id. at 35.

[85] The Rules partly mitigate the risks associated with compartmentalization of functions within a firm by imposing certain managerial responsibilities on partners and others. Rule 5.1(a) provides: "A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct." Further reducing the risk attendant on compartmentalization, Rule 8.4 provides: "It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to… (a) violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another."

ii. FEDERAL CASE LAW CONTRADICTS LABATON'S NARROW VIEW OF ITS DISCLOSURE OBLIGATIONS TO THE COURT

Case law, including cases from the District of Massachusetts, amply supports recognition of the Court's fiduciary responsibility to protect the class and the Court's reliance on counsel to be forthcoming with the information the Court needs in order to do so. Private agreements among counsel do not bind the Court, which can ignore them if they reward those who did little or nothing to serve the class. Nor is the Court bound to honor the retainer agreement between counsel and the named class members. The cases that follow reflect the expansive language that District and Circuit Courts use to describe class counsel's duties to the Court and the Court's duties to the class.

In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation, 89 F.Supp.3d 155, 183 (D. Mass. 2015):

> While fee sharing agreements among counsel may be respected or treated as presumptively reasonable in a district court's allocation of attorneys' fees, persuasive authority convinces this Court that it is not bound blindly to follow such private arrangements. See, e.g., In re FPI/Agretech Sec. Litig., 105 F.3d 469, 473 (9th Cir.1997) ("[A] court may reject a fee allocation agreement where it finds that the agreement rewards an attorney in disproportion to the benefits that attorney conferred upon the class—even if the allocation in fact has no impact on the class."); In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 216, 223 (2d Cir.1987) (rejecting authority that "allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement"). Cf. In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 282–83 (3rd Cir.2001) (holding that although retainer agreements in class actions enjoy a presumption of reasonableness at the fee award stage, the presumption may "be abrogated entirely were the court to find that the assumptions underlying the original retainer agreement had been materially altered by" unforeseeable developments). More important than the terms of a private agreement are the actual contributions each firm made to the prosecution of this case and the interests of the plaintiff class.

In re Relafen Antitrust Litigation, 231 F.R.D. 52, 71 (D. Mass. 2005):

As this Court recently noted, "[b]oth the United States Supreme Court and the Courts of Appeals have repeatedly emphasized the important duties and responsibilities that devolve upon a district court pursuant to Rule 23(e) prior to final adjudication and settlement of a class action suit." In re Relafen Antitrust Litig., 360 F.Supp.2d 166, 192 (D.Mass.2005) (citations omitted). Although settlement is often a more favorable result than litigation, "the court has a fiduciary duty to absent members of the class in light of the potential for conflicts of interest among class representatives and class counsel and the absent members." In re Lupron, 228 F.R.D. at 94 (citing *In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Prods.,*55 F.3d 768, 805 (3d Cir.1995) ("Rule 23(e) imposes on the trial judge the duty of protecting absentees, which is executed by the court's assuring the settlement represents adequate compensation for the release of the class claims.")).… Reynolds v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank, 288 F.3d 277, 279–80 (7th Cir.2002) (Posner, J.) (noting the concern that a lawyer's self interest may trump the interests of the class members "requires district judges to exercise the highest degree of vigilance in scrutinizing proposed settlements of class actions. We and other courts have gone so far as to term the district judge in the settlement phase of a class action suit a fiduciary of the class, who is subject therefore to the high duty of care that the law requires of fiduciaries.")

In re "Agent Orange" Product Liability Litigation, 818 F.2d 216, 223 (2nd Cir. 1987):

There is authority for a court, under certain circumstances, to award a lump sum fee to class counsel in an equitable fund action under the lodestar approach and then to permit counsel to divide this lodestar-based fee among themselves under the terms of a private fee sharing agreement. … We reject this authority, however, to the extent it allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement. Such a division overlooks the district court's role as protector of class interests under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e) and its role of assuring reasonableness in the awarding of fees in equitable fund cases. … cf. Jones v. Amalgamated Warbasse Houses, Inc., 721 F.2d 881, 884 (2d Cir.1983) ("if the court finds good reason to do so, it may reject an agreement as to attorneys' fees just as it may reject an agreement as to the substantive claims"), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 944, 104 S. Ct. 1929, 80 L.Ed.2d 474 (1984). In addition, this approach overlooks the class attorneys' "duty ... to be sure that the court, in passing on [the] fee application, has all the facts" as well as their "fiduciary duty to the ... class not to overreach." Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp., 88 F.R.D. 11, 18 (S.D.N.Y.1980). [Emphasis added.]

The Agent Orange Court then added (818 F.2d at 226):

We do agree with the district court's ruling that in all future class actions counsel must inform the court of the existence of a fee sharing agreement at the > time it is formulated. This holding may well diminish many of the dangers posed to the rights of the class. Only by reviewing the agreement prospectively will the district courts be able to prevent potential conflicts from arising, either by disapproving improper agreements or by reshaping them with the assistance of counsel to conform more closely with the principles of Grinnell I and Grinnell II. In the present case, however, where the district court was not made aware of the agreement, and the potential for a conflict of interest arising was substantial, the adoption of a rule for future cases in no way alleviates the fatal flaws of this agreement and does not offset the need for its invalidation. [Emphasis added].

In re FPI Agretech Securities Litigation, 105 F.3d 469, 474 (9th Cir. 1997):[86]

> We reject Chuck's [counsel's] proposed rule that a district court may decline to approve a fee allocation only if it is contrary to the interests of the class or in violation of rules of professional conduct. Instead, we hold that the relative efforts of, and benefits conferred upon the class by, co-counsel are proper bases for refusing to approve a fee allocation proposal….
> Chuck next argues that the district court should have treated the fee allocation proposal as an enforceable contract. However, the cases on which Chuck relies are inapposite. Neither case involved attorneys' fees in a class action, and such fees derive from principles of equity, not contract. More importantly, both cases involved formal fee agreements, whereas here the parties merely submitted orally a fee allocation proposal, arrived at, figuratively speaking, "on the courthouse steps," for the court's approval. We decline to curb the district courts' broad discretion in exercising their equitable power to award attorneys' fees in common fund class actions by requiring that fee allocation proposal be treated as enforceable contracts. [Internal citations omitted.]

Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp., 88 F.R.D. 11, 18 (S.D.N.Y. 1980), which Agent Orange cited:

> Wolf Popper has argued that it should be a matter of indifference to the court how the pie is sliced, if the fee requested is on its face a reasonable one, and if the results accomplished warrant its award. It suggests that it is routine for the court simply to fix the amount of the fee, and then to leave it to the various plaintiffs' attorneys involved to decide for themselves how the fee is to be allocated that, in fact, it is a service to the court not to burden it with the nuts and bolts of determining distribution. While I appreciate Wolf Popper's solicitude, I reject its argument. Wolf Popper has overlooked two important obligations which are part and parcel of its role as plaintiffs' counsel: the duty of its members and associates as officers of the court to be sure that the court, in passing on its fee application, has all the facts; and its fiduciary duty to the shareholder class not to overreach.

Federal case law also recognizes the special danger of conflicts between a lawyer and her client at the fee-determination stage in common fund cases. The economic interests of the two are then directly adverse because the greater the fee to the lawyer, the less will be the recovery to the class. See, e.g., In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation, 396 F.3d 294, 307 (3rd Cir. 2005):

> The determination of attorneys' fees in class action settlements is fraught with the potential for a conflict of interest between the class and class counsel. See [In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 254-255 (3rd Cir. 2001] (explaining that because clients seek to maximize recovery and lawyers seek to maximize fees, "there is often a conflict between the economic interests of clients and their lawyers, and this fact creates reason to fear that class counsel will be highly imperfect agents for the class"); [In re Cendant PRIDE, 243 F.3d 722, 730 (3d Cir. 2001) (discussing "the danger inherent in the relationship among the class, class counsel, and defendants" and recognizing "an especially acute need for close judicial scrutiny of fee arrangements in class action settlements") (internal quotations omitted); Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h), 2003 Advisory Committee Notes ("Active judicial involvement in measuring fee awards is singularly important to the proper operation of the class-action process.").

In argument and testimony, Labaton has questioned the applicability of the disclosure directive in Agent Orange and Lewis v. Teleprompter. These are cases from the Second Circuit, not the First Circuit. I agree that they do not obligate lawyers appearing in a Court in the First Circuit.[87] They are, however, instructive on counsel's duties, especially when coupled with the requirements of Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 3.3 and its comment, next discussed. The Volkswagen case, supra, from the District of Massachusetts, cites to one of the pages of Agent Orange in which the Second Circuit emphasized counsel's disclosure duties. A lawyer conscientiously researching those duties in this District would find Volkswagen and its citation to Agent Orange. The question for any lawyer in light of these authorities would then be [87] I also agree that the particular fee agreement in Agent Orange created potential conflicts that the Chargois Arrangement did not. "Because we find that the agreement before us violates established principles governing awards of attorneys' fees in equitable fund class actions and creates a strong possibility of a conflict of interest between class counsel and those they were charged to represent, we reverse the district court's approval of the agreement. Accordingly, the fees originally allocated by the district court, based on the reasonable value of services actually rendered, will be distributed to the members of the PMC." Agent Orange, 818 F.2d at 218.

"how do I understand my duty of candor to the Court with regard to the disclosure of the Chargois Arrangement?"

Labaton, at my deposition and in its advocacy, seems to challenge the continued vitality of the holding in Agent Orange in light of subsequent events within the Second Circuit. I disagree with any such challenge. First, it should be clear that the Second Circuit's requirement of disclosure did not depend on whether a local rule then required disclosure of the terms of the particular side agreement in Agent Orange. The Second Circuit held more broadly that an approach that allows counsel to decide how to divide fees "overlooks the class attorneys' 'duty ... to be sure that the court, in passing on [the] fee application, has all the facts' as well as their 'fiduciary duty to the ... class not to overreach.' Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp., 88 F.R.D. 11, 18 (S.D.N.Y.1980)."

Second, nothing in the subsequent history Labaton cites disturbed the holding in Agent Orange. That history is explained in the notes of the Second Circuit's Rules Committee:

> The Committee in 2011 recommended that prior Local Rule 23.1 regarding class actions be deleted as unnecessary. The Second Circuit's recent decision in Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 137 n.2 (2d Cir. 2016), stated that the prior Local Rule is not redundant with Fed R. Civ. P. 23(h) regarding fee sharing arrangements. The Committee therefore recommends reinstating Local Rule 23.1 and combining it with Local Rule 23.1.1 to cover both class actions and derivative actions. Local Rules for Eastern & Southern Districts of New York., Local Civ. R. 23.1 [2016 Cmt.].

The Bernstein footnote cited by the Committee, and spurring it to reinstate a rule, said:

> Formerly, the local civil rules of the Southern District of New York required that all fee applicants in derivative and class actions disclose to the court "any fee sharing agreements with anyone." By a rule amendment effective July 11, 2011—three weeks before BLB & G submitted its fee petition—the automatic-disclosure provision was repealed as to class actions. See S.D.N.Y. Local Civil Rule 23.1 (repealed effective July 11, 2011); S.D.N.Y. Local Civil Rule 23.1.1. According to the Joint Committee on Local Rules note, the committee recommended that the automatic-disclosure rule as applied to class > actions be deleted "because it is redundant [with] ... Fed.R.Civ.P. 23(h)." Federal Rule 23(h), in turn, does not mandate automatic disclosure of all fee-sharing arrangements in class actions. Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 137 n.2 (2d Cir. 2016).

In other words, in 2016, after Bernstein, the Committee undid its 2011 deletion of a local rule for disclosure of fee recipients in class actions. It did this because, contrary to what the Committee had initially articulated, the rule was not redundant of Rule 23(h). None of this back-and-forth affects the holdings cited in Agent Orange and Lewis. The new local rule may now obviate the need for the Agent Orange disclosure instruction, but it does not, and of course could not, "overrule" it.

iii. THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT REQUIRED DISCLOSURE OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE COURT BY THOSE WHO KNEW ITS TERMS

On September 15, 2016, Lawrence Sucharow submitted a Declaration to the Court "in support of," among other things, "an award of attorneys' fees." Dkt. # 104-1. The Sucharow Declaration appended nine individual fee declarations from nine law firms. At the same time, the Sucharow Declaration was also posted on the website for the class, where it would be available to class members. See p. 24, supra. The Notice of Pendency, sent to them in August, directed class members to this site, and in particular, this document. The filing also identified $1.257 million in expenses and $85,000 in service awards. The payment to Chargois is not included in this filing.

Rule 3.3(a)(1) provides: "A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a)(1) (amended March 26, 2015, eff. July 1, 2015). Rule 3.3(a)(3) provides in part that a lawyer "shall not knowingly offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false except as provided in Rule 3.3(e)," whose subject is criminal cases. Rule 8.4(c) provides: "It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c) (amended March 26, 2015, eff. July 1, 2015).

A true statement can violate these rules through omission. Rule 3.3, cmt. [3] ("There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation."); In re O'Toole, 2015 WL 9309021, at *5 (Mass. St. Bar. Disp. Bd. 2015) ("'[H]alf-truths may be as actionable as whole lies.'… Statements that are 'technically accurate' or 'literally true,' but that nevertheless are 'clearly intended to mislead' or 'beg[ ] [a] false inference' amount, in appropriate cases, to false statements within the meaning of" Rules 3.3(a)(1) and 4.1(a)). In In the Matter of An Attorney, 2007 WL 4284758, at *4 (Mass. St. Bar Disp. Bd. 2007), the Board wrote:

> It is not a defense to these charges that the individual statements made in the letter could be read as literally true. Literal truth may be a defense to a criminal charge of perjury. Compare Bronston v. United States, 409 U.S. 353 (1973) with United States v. DeZarn, 157 F.3d 1042 (6th Cir. 1998). But Rule 8.4(c) "prohibits more than outright perjury. Attorneys may not engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation ...." Matter of Dittami, 12 Mass. Att'y Disc. R. 98, 112 (1996) (applying predecessor to Rule 8.4(c)). See also Matter of Moore, 442 Mass. 285, 292 n. 10, 20 Mass. Att'y Disc. R. 400, 408 n.10 (2004); Matter of Harlow, 20 Mass. Att'y Disc. R. 212, 216-218 (2004) (misleading partial disclosure violated 8.4(c)).

The same principles abide in the commercial world.[88]

[88] Section 551 of the Restatement of Torts (Second) provides:

> (1) One who fails to disclose to another a fact that he knows may justifiably induce the other to act or refrain from acting in a business transaction is subject to the same liability to the other as though he had represented the nonexistence of the matter that he has failed to disclose, if, but only if, he is under a duty to the other to exercise reasonable care to disclose the matter in question.
> (2) One party to a business transaction is under a duty to exercise reasonable care to disclose to the other before the transaction is consummated…
> (b) matters known to him that he knows to be necessary to prevent his partial or ambiguous statement of the facts from being misleading…

The Chargois Arrangement should have been identified in the fee petition in order to comply with Rule 3.3(a). That information was highly relevant to the Court's exercise of its fiduciary duty to protect the class because (i) the Court could otherwise reasonably have assumed that the lawyers who would participate in the fee were solely the lawyers whose lodestars were included in the petition; (ii) the request for expenses and incentive payments, which are not part of the lodestar, would support the inference that all beneficiaries were included; (iii) the size of the Chargois fee could reasonably have influenced the Court to direct that his fee go instead to the class recovery; (iv) especially is this so because the payment was solely in exchange for a recommendation some nine years earlier; (v) the Court could find that the class had no interest in paying Chargois for his service to Labaton; and (vi) the Court could reasonably, though incorrectly, have assumed that if there were a problem with the fee request, the class representative would have raised it, unaware that ATRS also did not know about Chargois.

Supporting this view of the relevance of the Chargois Arrangement is the fact that an experienced class action lawyer, Bob Lieff, testified that had he known that Chargois had done no work on the case, he would not have agreed to the allocation of part of his firm's fee award to Chargois.[89]

My opinion rests on the extraordinary nature of Chargois' compensation, both in amount and the basis for it – a recommendation made years earlier. Nondisclosure meant that no one who might have questioned the propriety of the Chargois Arrangement – not the class representative, not the class members, not the Court – knew about it and so were unable to do so. It is not necessary to conclude that class counsel must inform the Court, or the class, of every lawyer who seeks a fee in a matter for the work he or she performed. Those are not the facts before the Court.

Section 551(2) has been followed in Massachusetts. See, e.g., Nota Constr. Corp. v. Keyes Assoc., 45 Mass. App. Ct. 15, 18 (1998).

[89] Bob Lieff testified that he thought Chargois was local counsel for Labaton dealing with the client in Arkansas. See Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 67:9-13 ("I thought he was local counsel for Labaton in this particular case I assumed dealing with the Arkansas fund because that's what local counsel will do. That was my understanding.") He further testified that had he known that Chargois had done no work on the case, he would not have agreed to the allocation of part of his firm's fee award to Chargois. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 97:13-16.

Comment 14A and Rule 3.3(d)

My opinion is further supported by Comment 14A to Rule 3.3, which provides:

> When adversaries present a joint petition to a tribunal, such as a joint petition to approve the settlement of a class action suit or the settlement of a suit involving a minor, the proceeding loses its adversarial character and in some respects takes on the form of an ex parte proceeding. The lawyers presenting such a joint petition thus have the same duties of candor to the tribunal as lawyers in ex parte proceedings and should be guided by Rule 3.3(d).

Rule 3.3(d) is discussed below.

So far as I can tell, Massachusetts is the only American jurisdiction with the text of Comment 14A. The comment recognizes that when there is no adverse party, the Court is denied the benefit of an adversary proceeding. There is, then, no opponent who can bring to the Court's attention facts or legal authorities that challenge the contentions or citations of the lawyer appearing before the court. In argument and through its experts, Labaton contends that Comment 14A does not literally apply here because the fee petition was not presented by "adversaries." It was presented by a single former adversary. The other former adversary, State Street, did not jointly present the fee petition because it had no interest in the fees the Court might award. Although it remained no less true that the "proceeding" on the fee petition lost "its adversarial character in some respects," it is argued that Comment 14A is inapplicable by its terms. This way of reading a rule might be defensible, if rather precise, in a commercial negotiation, but it is a crabbed view if looked at from the perspective of a lawyer's duty of candor to the Court, and to my mind wrong given the obvious policy that informs the Comment. The traditional precepts of the adversary system do not apply in the same way when lawyers talk to a judge as when they talk to each other.

Moreover, this is not a situation where disclosure to the Court would have harmed a client or waived a privilege. If it were, a lawyer might sometimes be able credibly to resolve real doubts in favor of the client. But here disclosure could only benefit the client, the class, by giving the Court, which is charged to protect class members, the opportunity to consider the effect of the Chargois Arrangement. Indeed, it is hard to understand what countervailing interests could have justified nondisclosure. To whom did Labaton owe a competing duty not to disclose?

Candor to the Court

In arguing that Rules 23 and 54 were the sole sources of its duty to the Court, that the Second Circuit precedent is not binding in the First Circuit, and that Comment 14A does not literally apply, Labaton subordinates any duty its lawyers may have had as officers of the Court.

I appreciate, as Labaton has argued, that the phrase "candor to the Court" is not an unbounded source of duty, entirely untethered to rules, custom, or case law. But the word "candor" should at least guide a lawyer's understanding of his or her duties as an officer of the court. One question presented in Pearson v. First NH Mortgage Corp., 200 F.3d 30, 38 (1st Cir. 1999), was whether a law firm had concealed its conflict of interest from the Bankruptcy Court. Citing case law and Bankruptcy Rules, the Court found that it had. But the Court also identified a broader duty of candor to the Court:

> Here, Attorney Gannon made an affirmative misrepresentation to the court, which did not comport with his duty of candor. See, e.g.,NHRPC 3.3(a)(1), comment ("There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation."); In re Tri–Cran, 98 B.R. at 616 (" 'Since attorneys are officers of the court, their conduct, if dishonest, would constitute fraud on the court.' ") (citation omitted); cf. Burns v. Windsor Ins. Co., 31 F.3d 1092, 1095 (11th Cir.1994) ("Every lawyer is an officer of the > court ... [and] he always has a duty of candor to the tribunal;" United States v. Shaffer Equip. Co., 11 F.3d 450, 457 (4th Cir.1993) ("[A] general duty of candor to the court exists in connection with an attorney's role as an officer of the court."); cf. also Erickson v. Newmar Corp., 87 F.3d 298, 303 (9th Cir.1996) ("[I]t is th[e] court which is authorized to supervise the conduct of the members of its bar ... [and has] a responsibility to maintain public confidence in the legal profession.").

Pearson cites the Fourth Circuit's influential decision in Shaffer Equipment to recognize a "general duty of candor to the court." Schaffer Equipment was an environmental civil case, in which the government failed to disclose false testimony at the deposition of its expert witness and then moved for summary judgment without relying on his opinion. The government claimed that it had not violated the terms of West Virginia's then-counterpart to Rule 3.3, which governed. The District Court dismissed the government's case because of its nondisclosure, citing both West Virginia Rule 3.3 and the duty of candor to the Court. The government appealed. On the page of its opinion cited by Pearson, the Fourth Circuit wrote that the professional conduct rules are not the sole source of a lawyer's duty of candor.

> It appears that the district court, in finding that the government's attorneys violated a duty of candor to the court, applied the general duty of candor imposed on all attorneys as officers of the court, as well as the duty of candor defined by Rule 3.3. Although the court referred to Rule 3.3, it also described the duty of candor more broadly as that duty attendant to the attorney's role as an officer of the court with a "continuing duty to inform the Court of any development which may conceivably affect the outcome of litigation." It concluded, "Thus, attorneys are expected to bring directly before the Court all those conditions and circumstances which are relevant in a given case." In its brief, the government did not address the existence, nature, and scope of any general duty of candor and whether its attorneys violated that duty. Nevertheless, we are confident that a general duty of candor to the court exists in connection with an attorney's role as an officer of the court.
> Our adversary system for the resolution of disputes rests on the unshakable foundation that truth is the object of the system's process which is designed for the purpose of dispensing justice. However, because no one has an exclusive insight into truth, the process depends on the adversarial presentation of evidence, precedent and custom, and argument to reasoned conclusions—all directed with unwavering effort to what, in good faith, is believed to be true on > matters material to the disposition. Even the slightest accommodation of deceit or a lack of candor in any material respect quickly erodes the validity of the process. As soon as the process falters in that respect, the people are then justified in abandoning support for the system in favor of one where honesty is preeminent. (Internal citations omitted.)[90]

These cases establish that lawyers have a duty of candor to the court that goes beyond the text of Rule 3.3. So does Rodriguez v. West Publishing Corp., 563 F.3d 948, 959 (9th Cir. 2009), where an incentive "arrangement was not disclosed when it should have been and where it was plainly relevant, at the class certification stage." The "arrangement" there was between class counsel and class representatives and created a conflict between their interests and the interest of the class. The trial Court had "observed that the parties' failure to disclose their agreement to the court, and to the class, violated the contracting representatives' fiduciary duties to the class and duty of candor to the court." (Emphasis added.) The Ninth Circuit wrote: "We agree." True, the Chargois Arrangement did not create a client-client conflict, as did the arrangement in Rodriquez. But Rodriguez is relevant here because it holds that withholding "plainly relevant" information from the class and the Court can violate the fiduciary duty to the former and the requirement of candor to the latter.

Apart from Comment 14A and a lawyer's duty of candor as an officer of the court, Rule 3.3(d) explicitly required disclosure of the Chargois Arrangement to the Court. Rule 3.3(d) provides:

> In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse. Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(d).

[90] Further distinguishing duties under [West Virginia's] Rule 3.3 from the duty of candor, the Shaffer Equipment Court wrote: "While Rule 3.3 articulates the duty of candor to the tribunal as a necessary protection of the decision-making process, and Rule 3.4 articulates an analogous duty to opposing lawyers, neither of these rules nor the entire Code of Professional Responsibility displaces the broader general duty of candor and good faith required to protect the integrity of the entire judicial process (internal citation omitted)." Shaffer Equipment, 11 F.3d at 458.

Labaton relies on Comment 14 as an aide to interpreting Rule 3.3(d). I rely on it, too, but I think it cuts the other way. That Comment provides:

> Ordinarily, an advocate has the limited responsibility of presenting one side of the matters that a tribunal should consider in reaching a decision; the conflicting position is expected to be presented by the opposing party. However, in any ex parte proceeding, such as an application for a temporary restraining order, there is no balance of presentation by opposing advocates. The object of an ex parte proceeding is nevertheless to yield a substantially just result. The judge has an affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration. The lawyer for the represented party has the correlative duty to make disclosures of material facts known to the lawyer and that the lawyer reasonably believes are necessary to an informed decision. Rule 3.3(d) does not change the rules applicable in situations covered by specific substantive law, such as presentation of evidence to grand juries, applications for search or other investigative warrants and the like. Id. at [cmt. 14].

In my opinion, Rule 3.3(d) encompasses the present situation. We must begin with the universal recognition that at the fee determination stage, the interests of class counsel and the class are adverse. *In re Rite Aid Corp.,*396 F. 3d at 307. The fee will be paid from the class recovery. Consequently, although class counsel remains counsel for the certified class, with the fiduciary duties that lawyers owe clients, at the fee stage, class counsel are understood to be advocating their own interests, not the class's interests. This presents a rare instance in which lawyers are permitted, in fact expected, to prefer their own interests above those of their current clients. We accept it. It is written into class action law and procedure. But it is then also true that that the class interests are not represented when lawyers petition for a fee, which is why the proceeding is properly understood to be ex parte. Only one of two interests is present before the Court. Only by denying that the class has any interest at all in the size of the fee is it possible to interpret proceeding as not being ex parte. Or to put it affirmatively, because the class does have an interest, but lacks an advocate (unless there is an objector), the proceeding is within Rule 3.3(d). And because Rule 3.3(d) applies, the Court should be given the information that will enable it to protect the unrepresented class.

It seems to me that Labaton wants it both ways. It argues that Comment 14A does not apply because the fee petition was not a "joint petition" of "adversaries," but rather a petition by a single former adversary. But at the same time, it denies that there was an unrepresented party (its own clients) before the Court, whose interests were adverse to the firm's interests when the firm petitioned for fees.

Professor Rubenstein and Labaton say that the solution was for the judge to ask the right question. But Professor Rubenstein testified that his opinion was limited to duties under Rules 23 and 54. Rubenstein 4/9/18 Dep., p. 198: 21-24. He offered no opinion on duties that have their source elsewhere. I accept Professor Rubenstein's interpretation of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 3.3(d) – and in my view, Comment 14A – are two sources of other duties.

It may be that if the Chargois Arrangement had been disclosed, the Court would award the same fee. Or not. The Court was not obligated to do so. I did not (and could not) testify to what the Court would or would not have done, or what it should or should not have done. My testimony is that the Court should have been informed.

Labaton's Rebuttal Memorandum (p. 28) quotes the final sentence of Comment 14 to argue that Rule 3.3(d) is subordinate to Rules 23 and 54. That sentence reads: "Rule 3.3(d) does not change the rules applicable in situations covered by specific substantive law, such as presentation of evidence to grand juries, applications for search or other investigative warrants and the like." (emphasis added.) The argument seems to be that Rules 23 and 54 displace Rule 3.3(d) (and maybe all of Rule 3.3). But the final sentence of Rule 3.3(d) permits no such claim. The rules for grand jury presentations and search warrant applications exclude third persons and are meant to be ex parte. If the Comment were applied to them, it would "change" them. Applying Rule 3.3(d) to a class action fee application does not "change" Rules 23 and 54, which easily coexists with Rule 3.3(d). Neither contradicts the other. Indeed, Comment 14A recognizes that coexistence because it cites class actions specifically.

Rule 1.5(a)

At my deposition, Judge Rosen asked whether in my opinion Rule 1.5(a) applied to a lawyer who was part of a division of fee agreement under Rule 1.5(e). That is, even if the total fee for all lawyers in a division of fee agreement is "reasonable," as Rule 1.5(e) requires, can the fee for any individual lawyer who is a party to the agreement violate Rule 1.5(a)? Rule 1.5(a) forbids "clearly excessive" fees and identifies a non-exclusive list of eight factors that can be weighed to determine whether or not a fee is clearly excessive. No factor is dispositive and some will be inapplicable in a particular situation. For example, the "results obtained" factor is retrospective and cannot be evaluated when the lawyer first "enter[ed] into an agreement."

A straight analysis of the text of the two rules tells us that Rule 1.5(a) is applicable to the fee of any individual lawyer in a division of fee agreement under Rule 1.5(e). The subject of Rule 1.5(e) is a division of fees. The subject of Rule 1.5(a) is fees. "Fee" is the same word both places. Neither rule exempts a lawyer from the requirements of the other rule.

Apart from statutory construction, as a matter of policy, applying Rule 1.5(a) to a division of fees is the right result. Otherwise, a lawyer whose fee would be clearly excessive under Rule 1.5(a) if she were to send a separate invoice would be able to avoid Rule 1.5(a)'s requirements by teaming up with other lawyers, who collectively send a single invoice, so long as their total fee was reasonable. The view that Rule 1.5(a) doesn't apply to an individual lawyer's fee under Rule 1.5(e) would, therefore, allow a lawyer to "launder" a clearly excessive fee.

In answering Judge Rosen's questions at my deposition, I did not say, nor do I now say, whether the Chargois fee is clearly excessive. In fact, for a very good reason, I did not address Rule 1.5(a) in my Report. The Court has the power to abrogate the Chargois fee if it chooses to do so without having to find that the fee is clearly excessive under Rule 1.5(a). The Court is not bound by counsel's fee agreement. Given that inherent authority, whether or not Rule 1.5(a) could apply is of marginal relevance.

iv. OMISSION OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT FROM THE SEPTEMBER 15, 2016 FEE PETITION VIOLATED RULE 11 FED. R. CIV. P.

I have been asked to address whether the omission of the Chargois Arrangement from the September 15, 2016 fee petition also violated Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 ("Rule 11"). Rule 3.3(a) and Rule 11 overlap. The same facts that establish a violation of the Rule 3.3(a) can also reveal a violation of Rule 11. Here they do.

Rule 11 is in one way even broader than Rule 3.3(a). Its test is objective reasonableness, rather than subjective knowledge. Rule 11(b)(3) provides:

> By presenting to the court a pleading, written motion, or other paper -- whether by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating it -- an attorney or unrepresented party certifies that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances…
> (3) the factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically so identified, will likely have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery.

Rule 11 "requires that an attorney make reasonable inquiry to assure that all pleadings, motions and papers filed with the court are factually well-grounded, legally tenable and not interposed for any improper purpose." Cooter & Gell v. Hartmax Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 393 (1990). Thus, counsel is held to standards of due diligence and objective reasonableness." Mariani v. Doctors Assoc. Inc., 983 F.2d 5, 7 (1st Cir. 1993).

A finding of bad faith is not required. E.E.O.C. v. Tandem Computers, Inc. 158 F.R.D. 224 (D. Mass. 1994)("Imposition of Rule 11 sanctions does not require a finding of bad faith. The test as to whether an attorney made a reasonable inquiry prior to signing a pleading is an objective standard of reasonableness under the circumstances at the time the attorney acted. Of course, in determining whether sanctions are appropriate, courts must avoid chilling an attorney's enthusiasm or creativity")(internal citations omitted).

The Seventh Circuit has held that omission of facts can violate Rule 11, just as it can under Rule 3.3(a). In that case, L&M, a law firm for a Creditors' Committee requested a continuance before a bankruptcy judge. It gave as its reason the fact that the firm had been retained as counsel on the day of the hearing so "it had not had adequate time to prepare for it." The request was denied. In imposing Rule 11 sanctions on appeal from the Bankruptcy Court, the District Court called the request "disingenuous because Committee makes no mention of [L&M's] significant involvement in the case before the hearing." In re Ronco, Inc. 838 F.2d 212, 214-215 (7th Cir. 1988) (emphasis in original). On further appeal, the Seventh Circuit wrote:

> We believe that the district court was correct in determining that two aspects of the appellant's argument with respect to the need for a continuance were sanctionable. The appellant did not disclose in its initial brief to the district court that it had previously represented a single unsecured creditor in the bankruptcy action prior to its representation of the Creditors' Committee beginning on February 24, 1984. This information was highly relevant to the question of whether the bankruptcy judge should have granted a continuance. As the representative of a single creditor, L&M had been required to face the issue of whether the Banks' liens were valid and, indeed, had filed a discovery request. While the appellant did not misstate an empirical fact, it did omit facts that were highly relevant to an accurate characterization of the facts that were stated. Such an obvious omission placed a heavy burden on a court. The presentation > amounts, in its totality, to a half-truth that can be just as misleading, sometimes more misleading, than an absolutely false representation. For purposes of determining whether sanctions are appropriate, it is not relevant that a later submission by the appellees brought the truth to light. The impact on the court and on the opposing party occurs when the initial omission is made. Later correction does not permit a recoupment of the time, energy or, in some cases, money that has already been expended.

Id. at 218 (emphasis added).

The fee petition was a "written motion" or "other paper" within the meaning of Rule 11. Omission of the Chargois Arrangement from the September 15, 2016 fee petition was, moreover, "highly relevant to an accurate characterization of the facts stated." My reasons for concluding the nondisclosure of the Chargois Arrangement violates Rule 11 are the same as my reasons for concluding that the fee petition did not comply with Rule 3.3(a), supra pages 84-88.

v. ANY CLAIM THAT THERE WAS NO DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE COURT OR TO CLASS MEMBERS BECAUSE IT WOULD BE PAID FROM COUNSEL'S FEE AWARD IS INCORRECT AS A MATTER OF FACT AND LAW

It is not true that the Court, the named plaintiffs, and the members of the certified settlement class had no interest in the Chargois payment on the theory that Customer Class Counsel would pay it out of their own fee award. Counsel's fee did not, and would not, exist unless and until the Court awarded it. Labaton itself recognized as much in the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions among other places. The Notice states: "Lead Counsel…will apply to the Court for an order awarding attorneys' fees…." (Page 4.) See also page 9, stating the question in the conditional tense ("If the Court awards fees" at a particular rate…) (emphasis added).

In deciding the amount of fee to award to class counsel, and to whom to award it, the Court, as a fiduciary for the class including class members named and unnamed, needed first to know who would be participating in any fee the Court in its discretion might award from the class recovery and the basis for the claim. A contrary argument would deny the Court the very information it needed in order to decide how much of the undifferentiated settlement funds should go to counsel, and which counsel, and how much should go to the class. Quite simply, until the Court made that decision, there was no fee to divide. The Court was empowered, for example, as an exercise of its equitable power and fiduciary duty to the class, to deny any part of the recovery to Chargois and instead to direct that money to the class.

vi. A LAWYER'S MISCONDUCT MAY AFFECT A COURT'S DETERMINATION OF THE AMOUNT OF FEES TO AWARD

In the First Circuit and elsewhere, lawyer misconduct may influence fee decisions. Travers v. Flight Services & Systems, Inc., 808 F.3d 525, 542 (1st Cir. 2015):

> "[I]t is well settled in this circuit that the district court has the duty and responsibility to supervise the conduct of attorneys who appear before it, and that ... [d]enial of attorneys' fees may be a proper sanction" for attorney misconduct. Culebras Enters. Corp. v. Rivera–Rios, 846 F.2d 94, 97 (1st Cir. 1988); see also Wong v. Luu, 472 Mass. 208, 218 (2015) (holding that "[t]he inherent powers necessary to preserve the court's authority to accomplish justice include the power to sanction an attorney' for misconduct" by assessing fees).

Indeed, Rodriguez v. Disner, supra, applied this doctrine in a class action.

vi. CONCLUSION

Counsel's duty to the Court required that those who knew the terms of the Chargois Arrangement disclose the arrangement to the Court before it awarded fees from which Chargois would be (and was) paid.

D. THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT SHOULD HAVE BEEN DISCLOSED TO MEMBERS OF THE CLASS.

The unnamed members of the certified class were entitled to know about the Chargois Arrangement before they were called upon to decide, with legal advice if desired, whether to opt out or object to the settlement, or to the fee request made by Customer Class Counsel. Both decisions naturally precede the Court's decision on any fee award.

On August 8, 2016, David Goldsmith of Labaton appeared before Judge Wolf for the "plaintiffs and the settlement class." Michael Thornton of Thornton and Daniel Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser appeared for the same clients. "We are here," the Court said, "with regard to the motion for preliminary certification of class action and preliminary approval of the proposed class settlement." 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., p. 4. The Court concluded that it was "appropriate to certify a class for settlement purposes." It then certified "the proposed class for settlement purposes only." Id. at 4, 11. Previously, in January 2012, the Court had appointed Labaton as "interim lead counsel to act on behalf of all plaintiffs and the proposed class." It had appointed Thornton as "liaison counsel for plaintiff and the proposed class" and Lieff Cabraser to "serve as additional attorney for the plaintiff and the proposed class." See 1/12/12 Memorandum and Order, p. 5, Dkt. No. 28. When the Court certified the settlement class in August 2016, the firms continued to hold these positions.

i. CLASS COUNSEL WHO KNEW THE TERMS OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT HAD A FIDUCIARY AND ETHICAL DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO CLASS MEMBERS

At least as of August 8, 2016, Labaton, Lieff Cabraser, and Thornton maintained attorney-client relationships with the certified settlement class and its members. In that role, they had responsibility for the "Notice of Pendency of Class Actions," dated August 22, 2016, which Labaton prepared, which Nicole Zeiss circulated to Lieff and Thornton, and which was then sent to the Customer and ERISA class members. See pp. 19-21, supra. The Notice of Pendency's caption identifies ATRS, Henriquez, and the Andover Companies as named plaintiffs. It refers to the "class action lawsuits (collectively, the 'Class Actions')." It defines the "Settlement Class" as follows:

> All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT's records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive.
> Notice, p. 3.

Labaton Sucharow and Lawrence Sucharow are identified as "Lead Counsel." Id. at 2, 14. No other law firm or lawyer is identified. Class members receiving the Notice are told only that:

- "Lead Counsel, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, will apply to the Court for an order awarding attorneys' fees in an amount not to exceed $74,541,250.00." (Id. at 4, 13);
- Attorneys' fees for ERISA counsel will not exceed $10.9 million, and about how fees for the other counsel will be computed "if the Court awards the total amount of fees that Lead Counsel intend to request." (Id. at 9);
- They can obtain "[a]dditional information" by calling Labaton's phone number, website, and email address, as provided." (Id. at 2); and
- They have a right to opt out and to object and provided information on how to do so. (Id. at 2).

Recipients of the Notice were not told about the Chargois Arrangement although this information -- that a lawyer who did no work to produce the class recovery and who accepted no legal responsibility for the work of others stood to receive more than $4 million from the class recovery – was relevant to "The Allocation of Settlement Proceeds," including the completeness of the attorneys' fees" disclosures in the Notice. That information could reasonably have influenced members of the class in deciding whether to exercise the right to object to the disclosure regarding attorneys' fees. As important, it may have affected the advice ERISA

Counsel[91] would have given their clients. At the August 8, 2016 hearing, the Court specifically recognized that class members could object to the requested fee. It said: "As I understand it, counsel will seek up to 25 percent, roughly $76 million, of the common fund. The class members will have an opportunity to be heard on the propriety of that." 8/8/16 Hearing. Tr., pp. 22:23 – 23:1.

In this District, Fulco v. Continental Cable Vision, Inc., 789 F.Supp.2d 45, 47 (D. Mass. 1992), recognized the formation of an attorney-client relationship between class counsel and the class after the class is certified. "While this is apparently a case of first impression in the First Circuit, I agree with courts which have held that 'once the court enters an order certifying a class, an attorney-client relationship arises between all members of the class and class counsel.'" (Citations omitted.) Newberg on Class Actions §19.2 (5th ed.) similarly states:

> [O]nce a class has been certified, the default presumption is that there is an attorney-client relationship between class counsel and the absent class members. This is certainly true in some contexts. Thus, for example, courts and commentators have held that absent class members are class counsel's clients for communications purposes. This means that opposing counsel must treat absent class members in a certified class as "represented parties" for communications purposes and can only communicate with them through counsel. [Emphasis in original.]

And at least as of August 8, Labaton, Thornton, and Lieff also had fiduciary duties to the unnamed members of the certified settlement class. Piambino v. Bailey, 757 F.2d 1112, 1139 (11th Cir. 1985)("The lawyers who bring these [Rule 23] cases have a heavy fiduciary

Beyond this, the fact that the ERISA lawyers received only approximately $7.5 million of the $10.9 million allocated for fee awards out of the ERISA class's share of the funds, with the $3.4 million balance going back to the Customer Class Counsel, would (they testified) have informed the ERISA lawyers' conduct of the case and agreement to accept only a $7.5 million share of the fees; several of the ERISA lawyers testified to this. See, e.g., Sarko 9/8/2017 Dep., pp. 28:10-49:18; 74:23-82:24; 90:13-92:18; McTigue 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 21:15-30:9; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., 68:20-71:22; 82:6-85:17; 101:16-102:23; 113:22-115:3 responsibility to their clients -- especially those who are absent and those in the minority whose interests are at odds with the named plaintiffs and their group -- to the trial judge and to the people, who provide the forums and governmental resources for these suits."); Singer v. AT&T Corp, 185 F.R.D. 681, 690 (S.D. Fla. 1998)("The class attorney has a fiduciary duty to the court as well as to each member of the class.").[92]

Because representing an entire class presents special considerations not present when the client is an individual or an entity, certain professional conduct rules have been held to apply in a different way or not at all, and Labaton has identified narrow exceptions to argue that a lawyer's duty inform a client also does not apply here. That argument is wrong.

The most noteworthy exception concerns former client conflicts. If the class divides, the question arises whether counsel who had represented the unified class can now represent a segment of it against another segment whose members were, until then, counsel's clients. Rule 1.9(a) forbids adverse representation on the same or substantially related matter when a former client is an individual client. But to disqualify class counsel in these circumstances would be highly inefficient and courts will not routinely do so. See In re Agent Orange Product Liab. Lit., 800 F.2d 14, 19 (2nd Cir. 1986)("[W]e conclude that the traditional rules that have been developed in the course of attorneys' representation of the interests of clients outside of the class action context should not be mechanically applied to the problems that arise in the settlement of class action litigation.")

Another area in which a court might choose not to apply a professional conduct rule to class actions concerned the former rule (now superseded) that said that a lawyer could not advance litigation costs unless the client was responsible to repay them even if it lost. For obvious reasons, Rand v. Monsanto, 926 F.2d 596, 600 (7th Cir 1991), rejected that rule in a class action. Application of the rule would spell the end of class actions as we know them because few, if any, persons would be willing to serve as class representative given the expense of mounting a class action. Labaton cites Rand at page 33 of its Rebuttal Memorandum for the overinclusive suggestion that "courts have recognized [that] class actions are legally unique situations that do not always neatly fit within the standard framework of ethical rules." Yes, courts have recognized that class actions do not "always fit within the framework of ethical rules," but the situations in which courts do not apply traditional rules are few and tailored. They also tend to be situations in which doing so will favor the class, a segment of it, or the feasibility of class litigation. These situations are not a reason to relieve class action lawyers from ethical obligations that benefit the class and supplement, not contradict, duties to clients under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

As fiduciaries and lawyers for the unnamed certified class members -- and lawyers are fiduciaries for their clients as a matter of law[93] -- customer class counsel had a duty to give their clients information relevant to decisions that belonged to the client. That is also a duty imposed by Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct 1.2(a) and1.4(a)(last amended March 26, 2015, eff. July 1, 2015);[94] One decision that belongs to a client is whether or not to settle. Moores v.

[93] Washington Legal Foundation v. Massachusetts Bar Foundation, 993 F.2d 962, 974 (1st Cir. 1993)("The relationship between lawyer and client in Massachusetts is fiduciary as a matter of law.").

[94] Rule 1.2(a) provides in part: "A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to accept an offer of settlement of a matter." Rule 1.4(a)(1) provides: "A lawyer shall promptly inform the client of any decision or circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(f) is required by these Rules." Rule 1.4(b) provides: "A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation." Rule 1.0(f), in turn, provides: "'Informed consent' denotes the agreement by a person to a proposed course of conduct after the lawyer has communicated adequate information and explanation about the material risks of and reasonably available alternatives to the proposed course of conduct." See also Restatement (Third) of Law Governing Lawyers (2000), §§ 20(3) and 22(1).

Greenberg, 834 F.2d 1105 (1st Cir. 1987)("As part and parcel of [the duty to a client], a lawyer must keep his client seasonably apprised of relevant developments, including opportunities for settlement.").[95] This is the very decision the Notice of Pendency presented to the recipients -- i.e., whether to settle on the terms in the Notice or to object.

As with my discussion of duties to the Court above, my opinion here addresses the extraordinary situation presented by the Chargois Arrangement. Class members were told their "legal rights," which included their right to object to the anticipated fee application, but they were not given information that could reasonably have prompted an objection. They could assume that ATRS was fulfilling its fiduciary duties to the class but ATRS did not know about the Chargois Arrangement. The Notice of Pendency told them that the Court had appointed Labaton Sucharow for the Settlement Class, of which they were told they were members. They could assume that Labaton Sucharow was protecting their interests as its clients.

ii. CONCLUSION

As fiduciaries, counsel who knew the nature of the Chargois Arrangement had a duty to provide the unnamed customer and ERISA members of the class, whom they represented after the Court certified the class for settlement purposes on August 8, 2016, of the existence of the Chargois Arrangement and its terms. Rule 1.2(a) and Rule 1.4(b) imposed the same duty.

CONDUCT "AN INQUIRY REASONABLE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES" TO ESTABLISH THAT HIS FACTUAL CONTENTIONS HAVE "EVIDENTIARY SUPPORT"

i. FILING OF THE FEE PETITION

The Court's task when class counsel requests attorneys' fees is to identify what the market would have recognized as a reasonable rate for counsel's service to the class. To aid the court in fulfilling its fiduciary duty to the class, counsel will provide information to persuade the Court that the requested fee is reasonable. When lawyers seek attorneys' fees, their interests and the interests of the client they represent are economically adverse, which heightens the need for the Court to be especially vigilant. See In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation, 396 F. 3d at 307. As discussed, supra, in Section C(iii), the Court is not bound by a fee agreement between counsel and class representatives or among themselves.

Naturally, a court may first look to the evidence counsel submits in support of a fee request, which was the purpose of the Bradley Declaration. But courts must also independently evaluate the requested fee against reasonable market rates for the particular lawyer. "While fee sharing agreements among counsel may be respected or treated as presumptively reasonable in a district court's allocation of attorneys' fees, persuasive authority convinces this Court that it is not bound blindly to follow such private arrangements." In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation, 89 F. Supp. at 183. In In re Citigroup Inc. Securities Litigation, 965 F.Supp.2d 369, 393-394 (S.D.N.Y. 2013), the Court awarded $200 hourly for contract lawyers, writing that:

> The lodestar figure should be based on market rates in line with those [rates] prevailing in the community for similar services by lawyers of reasonably comparable skill, experience, and reputation. The Court must determine the rate a paying client would be willing to pay.… In other words, if the class were a reasonable, paying client free to choose its counsel and negotiate rates, what hourly rate would it accept for the attorneys and other professional staff employed here? (internal quotations and citations omitted)

Labaton submitted the Bradley Declaration dated September 14, 2016, as part of the materials in support of the fee applications of the several law firms. It is evidence upon which the Court was invited to base its fee award.[96]

The Bradley Declaration states under oath in paragraphs 3 and 4:

> 3. The schedule attached hereto as Exhibit A is a summary indicating the amount of time spent by each attorney and professional support staff-member of my firm who was involved in the prosecution of the Class Actions, and the lodestar calculation is based on my firm's current billing rates. For personnel who are no longer employed by my firm, the lodestar calculation is based upon the billing rates for such personnel in his or her final year of employment by my firm. The schedule was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm, which are available at the request of the Court. Time expended in preparing this application for fees and payment of expenses has not been included in this request.
> 4. The hourly rate for attorneys and professional support staff in my firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions.

Paragraphs 5 and 6 implicitly incorporate some of these statements.[97]

These paragraphs were taken verbatim from a template prepared by Labaton and shared with Thornton and Lieff.

ii. GARRETT BRADLEY VIOLATED RULE 3.3(a) BECAUSE HE KNEW THAT HIS DECLARATION CONTAINED FALSE STATEMENTS

[96] I understand that a separate issue addressed by the Special Master is that certain staff attorneys listed on Exhibit A of the Bradley Declaration were also identified by Labaton or Lieff in their request for fees -- i.e. some were double-counted.

[97] These paragraphs state:

> 5. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm during the Time Period is 15,302.5 hours. The total lodestar for my firm for those hours is $7,460,139.
> 6. My firm's lodestar figures are based upon the firm's billing rates, which rates do not include charges for expenses items. Expense items are bill separately and such charges are not duplicated in my firm's billing rates.

Exhibit A to the Garrett Bradley Declaration uses the designation "SA" to identify 24 "staff attorneys." Total compensation requested for the SAs is $4,508,837 at an hourly rate of $425 for each, except that one "SA," Michael Bradley, is billed at $500. Additional compensation requested for four Thornton partners and one associate totals $2,831,287. The Declaration contains numerous false statements. I am asked to assume that Garrett Bradley knew these statements were false when he submitted his Declaration. See, e.g., pp. 23-24.

- The Declaration states: Exhibit A contains professional support staff members "of my firm." None of the SAs are support staff members of the Thornton law firm.

- The Declaration states: The billing rates for the SAs are "based on my firm's current billing rates." The firm did not have "current billing rates" for these lawyers.

- The Declaration states: For personnel "who are no longer employed," the lodestar is based on their rates for the "final year of employment." None of the SAs were ever "employed" at Thornton.

- The Declaration states: The schedule was prepared from "contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm." The SAs worked at Labaton or Lieff, which prepared their time records and is where those records were maintained. Or they were prepared and maintained by an agency. Other TLF attorneys may have kept contemporaneous time records.

- The Declaration states: The hourly rates "are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services." Thornton had no "regular rates" for the SAs.

- The Declaration states: These rates "have been accepted in other complex class actions." This is true for four of the SAs but it is not true for the other 20, including Michael Bradley.

Although Goldsmith of Labaton informed the Court in the November 10, 2016 letter that SA time was double-counted in the lodestars of Customer Class Counsel, and although attorneys listed in the Thornton lodestar were among those who were double- counted (except Michael Bradley), Thornton did not inform the Court of false statements in its lodestar.

The characterization of Michael Bradley, Garrett Bradley's brother, is especially serious. Contrary to the Garrett Bradley Declaration, Michael Bradley's $500 hourly rate had never been accepted by a Court in a complex class action. Michael Bradley had not been a staff member of the Thornton law firm. The Thornton law firm did not have a current billing rate for him or prepare and maintain his time records. It did not supervise him. There appears to be no physical evidence of the work for which he was paid $203,200. I am asked to assume that "[u]nlike the Labaton and Lieff SAs, Michael Bradley did not prepare any memoranda or deposition notebooks. And, the record reveals no written work product created by Michael Bradley."

iii. APPLICATION OF RULE 3.3 AND FEDERAL JURISPRUDENCE TO THE BRADLEY DECLARATION

To exercise its fiduciary duty to protect the class when responding to a law firm's fee request, the Court required accurate and complete information about the contributions of the firm seeking counsel fees. That information would inform the hourly rate the Court would approve for SAs and contract (or agency) attorneys. For example, the Court could consider not merely the fact that a law firm assumed financial responsibility for the expense of a staff lawyer, but also whether it assigned legal work to those lawyers, supervised their work, and provided them with a place to work and research support. The Court might also consider as relevant to its decision the fact that the rate requested for these lawyers was nearly nine times their cost to the law firm. The question is not what the Court would or would not do based on such information but the relevance of the information to the Court's exercise of its judgment as a fiduciary for the class. While the Court was informed of the hourly rate claimed for the SAs, other statements in the Bradley Declaration, which could reasonably affect the Court's decision whether to approve that rate, are false.

Analysis of the Bradley Declaration is rooted in the rule governing a lawyer's duty of candor to the Court and federal case law. As noted in Section C (iii), supra, Rule 3.3(a)(1) provides: "(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." A lawyer who unknowingly offers false "evidence" to a tribunal and comes to know of its falsity must take reasonable remedial measures if the evidence is material. Rule 3.3(a)(3). Here, that would have required correction of the falsity. Rule 1.0(g) defines "knowingly." "'Knowingly,' 'known,' or 'knows' denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances." Rule 8.4(c) forbids "conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation."

The Court was not bound by how the several law firms chose to allocate fees or SA time among themselves. "More important than the terms of a private agreement are the actual contributions each firm made to the prosecution of this case and the interests of the plaintiff class." In re Volkswagen, 89 F. Supp. 3d at 183; In re FPI/Agretech Sec. Litig., 105 F.3d 469, 473 (9th Cir.1997) ("[A] court may reject a fee allocation agreement where it finds that the agreement rewards an attorney in disproportion to the benefits that attorney conferred upon the class—even if the allocation in fact has no impact on the class"); In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d at 223 (rejecting authority that "allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement"). In making a fee award, the Court would of course be cognizant of the fact that the money paid to the law firms would necessarily come from the class recovery.

iv. APPLICATION OF FED. R. CIV. P. 11 TO THE BRADLEY DECLARATION

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11(b)(3) required Bradley to conduct "an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances" to ascertain that the facts he was asserting in his Declaration had "evidentiary support," which Bradley did not do because, as I am asked to assume, he knew that statements in the Declaration were false.[98]

v. CONCLUSION

Garrett Bradley prepared the "evidence" -- in his sworn Declaration -- from a template Labaton circulated. This is "evidence" in the sense that it is information declared to be true and upon which the Court was invited to issue a ruling. He is governed by Rules 3.3 and 8.4. Rule 3.3 prohibits knowing false statements to a tribunal. Rule 8.4(c) forbids "conduct involving dishonesty [and] deceit." Bradley knew the statements in his Declaration were false. Federal law separately required reasonable care to ensure that the information provided to the Court for the exercise of its discretion be true. The reasonable inquiry required by Rule 11 would quickly have identified these statements as false if Bradley did not already know it.

20. This Court is vested with subject matter jurisdiction of this civil action arising under the patent laws of the United States, 35 U.S.C. § 1 et seq., including 35 U.S.C. § 271, and 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1338(a). Upon information and belief, Defendant Watson Laboratories, Inc. is subject to this Court's specific and general personal jurisdiction pursuant to due process and/or the Massachusetts Long Arm Statute, due at least to its substantial business in this forum, including: (a) at least part of its infringing acts alleged herein; and (b) regularly doing or soliciting business, engaging in other persistent courses of conduct, and/or deriving substantial revenue from goods and services provided to individuals in Massachusetts. Upon information and belief, Defendant Watson Laboratories, Inc. has also purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the State of Massachusetts, has established minimum contacts with this forum such that the exercise of jurisdiction over Defendant Watson Laboratories, Inc. would not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice, and has committed acts of infringement and has placed or contributed to placing infringing products into the stream of commerce, directly or through intermediaries, with the knowledge or understanding that such products are sold in the State of Massachusetts, including by Internet sales or sales via retail or wholesale stores. It is beyond dispute that personal jurisdiction is proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)-(c) and 1400(b).

21. Defendant Watson Laboratories, Inc. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Nevada, with its principal place of business at 360 Mt. Kemble Avenue, Morristown, New Jersey 07960. Watson Laboratories, Inc. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Actavis, Inc., which is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Nevada, with its principal place of business at Morris Corporate Center III, 400 Interpace Parkway, Parsippany, New Jersey 07054.

22. The exact nature of the relationship among the Defendants named herein is currently unknown to Plaintiffs, and is peculiarly within the knowledge of Defendants. Plaintiffs will amend this Complaint to allege the true relationship among Defendants when it is ascertained.

23. The Defendants named herein have acted and continue to act in concert to:

(a) Make, use, offer to sell, sell, and/or distribute in the United States, including in this District, and/or import into the United States, including into this District, generic versions of Actiq® with the FDA-approved prescribing information for Actiq®;

(b) Make, use, offer to sell, sell, and/or distribute in the United States, including in this District, and/or import into the United States, including into this District, generic versions of Actiq® that are not bioequivalent to Actiq®, and/or that have different labeling than Actiq®; and

(c) Make, use, offer to sell, sell, and/or distribute in the United States, including in this District, and/or import into the United States, including into this District, generic versions of Actiq® that have labeling that is not the same as the labeling approved for Actiq®.

(d) Said Defendants failed to timely report to the Commission as required by the Massachusetts Uniform Securities Act, Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 110A, § 93(c), and Massachusetts Uniform Securities Act Rule 410(c)(2).

(e) Said Defendants failed to maintain and preserve books, records and documents as required by the Massachusetts Uniform Securities Act and Rule 410(c)(2).

(f) In the alternative to (a) through (e) above, Defendants violated Section 204A of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, which requires investment advisers to establish, maintain and enforce written policies and procedures reasonably designed to prevent the misuse of material, nonpublic information by such investment adviser or any person associated with such investment adviser.

24. Defendants' violations of Section 204A of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 and the rules promulgated thereunder and Defendants' violations of Section 204A of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 and the rules promulgated thereunder described herein.

25. The rules promulgated by the Commission pursuant to Section 204A of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 require investment advisers to establish, maintain and enforce written policies and procedures reasonably designed, taking into consideration the nature of the investment adviser's business, to prevent the misuse in violation of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 or the rules promulgated thereunder by the investment adviser or any person associated with the investment adviser of material, nonpublic information by such investment adviser or any person associated with the investment adviser.

26. The investment advisers to the Defendants' Funds, Defendants' Investment Advisers, and Defendants' Investment Advisers' employees, and agents, including, but not limited to, the Defendants, are persons associated with the Defendants' Investment Advisers.

27. The Defendants' Investment Advisers had a duty to establish, maintain and enforce written policies and procedures. The Defendants' Investment Advisers' failure to establish, maintain and enforce written policies and procedures reasonably designed to prevent the misuse of material, nonpublic information, in violation of the Investment Advisers Act and rules promulgated thereunder, and their failure to prevent such misuse of material, nonpublic information.

28. The Defendants' violations of Section 204A of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, and rules promulgated thereunder, as described in paragraphs 23(a) through 23(e), above, proximately caused and/or will proximately cause losses to investors in the Defendants' Funds, within the meaning of Section 21B(a)(1) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78u-2(a)(1), and Section 209(f) of the Investment Advisers Act, 15 U.S.C. § 80b-9(f).

37. Neither Tether nor the Individual Defendants disclosed to Plaintiffs or the investing public that Tether's reserves were not fully backed by cash and cash equivalents, and that Tether had misled the public about the true composition of its reserves. Tether's failure to disclose the true composition of its reserves was material to Plaintiffs' decision to purchase Tether tokens, and to the investing public's decision to purchase Tether tokens, because Tether's reserves were intended to support the value of Tether tokens. Plaintiffs would not have purchased Tether tokens if they had known that Tether's reserves were not fully backed by cash and cash equivalents, and that Tether had misled the public about the true composition of its reserves. Plaintiffs had a right to rely on Tether's representations that its tokens were fully backed by cash and cash equivalents.

38. Although Tether was required to disclose, and Tether had a duty to disclose, the true composition of its reserves, Tether failed to do so.

39. Plaintiffs' reliance was justified because, at the time Plaintiffs purchased their Tether tokens, Tether was the only source of information about the composition of its reserves. Plaintiffs reasonably expected that Tether would disclose any material information relevant to the value of Tether tokens. Plaintiffs had no reason to believe that Tether was misrepresenting the composition of its reserves.

40. Plaintiffs' damages were caused by Tether's misrepresentations and omissions. Plaintiffs purchased Tether tokens, relying on Tether's misrepresentations and omissions, and suffered damages when the value of Tether tokens declined, as the truth about Tether's reserves emerged and the value of Tether tokens fell.

41. Plaintiffs' damages were the foreseeable result of Tether's misrepresentations and omissions. Tether's misrepresentations and omissions artificially inflated the price of Tether tokens, and Plaintiffs purchased Tether tokens at artificially inflated prices, i.e. prices that were higher than the value of Tether tokens.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

[illegible] STATE OF THE MOVEMENT TRUST, [illegible] behalf of itself and all others similarly situated, Plaintiff, v. THE STATE STREET CORPORATION, THE STATE STREET BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, and THE STATE STREET GLOBAL MARKETS, LLC, Defendants.	C.A. No. 11-10230 MLW AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT Jury Trial Demanded

Plaintiff Fire and Police Pension Association of Colorado, individually and on behalf of itself and all others similarly situated, by its attorneys, for its complaint against The State Street Corporation, The State Street Bank and Trust Company, and The State Street Global Markets, LLC, alleges, upon information and belief, except as to the allegations specifically pertaining to plaintiff and its counsel, which are based on personal knowledge, as follows:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. This case arises from defendants' deliberate and systematic breaches of their fiduciary duties to their custody clients, including plaintiff and the other members of the Class. As a result of defendants' breaches of fiduciary duties, plaintiff and the Class have suffered substantial losses. Defendants' breaches of fiduciary duties include, among other things, their failure to properly supervise their employees and agents, their failure to comply with applicable laws and regulations, and their failure to adequately disclose the fees they charged for foreign exchange transactions, all in violation of their fiduciary duties and duties of loyalty, honesty and good faith. Defendants' breaches of fiduciary duties were motivated by their desire to increase their profits at the expense of their custody clients.

and other banks and dealers that participated in the FX spot market, but that did not report their FX trades to Thomson Reuters with their trade data submissions.

6. The Thomson Reuters Methodology expressly provided that Thomson Reuters FX rates would not include any additional charges by the banks that submitted data to Thomson Reuters for the Thomson Reuters benchmarks. Indeed, while Thomson Reuters represented to its clients that Thomson Reuters FX rates were based on actual trades, Thomson Reuters told the banks that Thomson Reuters FX rates would not include any additional charges or commissions, and that Thomson Reuters FX rates would be the "mid-market" price, without additional charges or commissions.

7. In connection with the Interest Rate Swaps Class Action, Thomson Reuters produced documents and data that banks submitted to Thomson Reuters, which explained that the principles of Thomson Reuters FX rates were "based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." That is, Thomson Reuters represented that its benchmarks would be based on actual trades, and Thomson Reuters FX rates would be the "mid-market" price, without additional charges or commissions.

8. Despite the express promises in the Interest Rate Swaps Class Action, Thomson Reuters failed to base its benchmarks on actual trades, in addition to the fact that it charged its subscribers for its benchmarks, Thomson Reuters failed to disclose material information to its subscribers that Thomson Reuters FX rates were not based on actual trades, and Thomson Reuters failed to disclose that Thomson Reuters FX rates were not the "mid-market" price, and did not disclose that the banks submitting data to Thomson Reuters were manipulating Thomson Reuters FX rates. In this regard, Thomson Reuters failed to disclose its material misrepresentations and initiation of X ray treatments to the correct body part that the treatment was prescribed for and explaining the X treatments.

9. The defendants submitted claims for payment to Medicare that falsely represented that the X ray treatments were performed as reported and documented and that the X ray treatments were medically necessary and reasonable and were performed as claimed.

10. The X ray treatments were performed and billed pursuant to a Medicare provider agreement, which required the defendants to abide by all provisions of the Medicare statute, regulations and instructions. The defendants knowingly and willfully violated many of these provisions, including the requirement that X ray treatments be performed only when medically necessary and reasonable. This action seeks treble damages and civil penalties for the defendants' violations of the False Claims Act, as described in this Complaint, in order to recover all monies fraudulently obtained by the defendants from the Medicare program.

11. The United States brings this action to recover damages and civil penalties arising from false claims submitted by the defendants in violation of the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. §§ 3729 et seq. as amended. This action is brought by the United States pursuant to the qui tam provisions of the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b), for violations committed against the Medicare program administered by the United States Department of Health and Human Services ("HHS"), acting through its agency, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services ("CMS"). This Court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a), because the action is between citizens of different states and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs. This Court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, because the action arises under the laws of the United States, specifically the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

12. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this civil action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a), because the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and because the action is between citizens of different states. This Court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, because the action arises under the laws of the United States, specifically the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this civil action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a), because the action is between citizens of different states and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

13. This is a civil action of which this district court has original jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(1) and (2). A substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims occurred within this district. Defendant transacts business throughout the United States, including within this district.

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiff ARTRS

14. ARTRS, based in Reykjavik, Iceland, is one of the largest pension funds in Iceland by assets under management. ARTRS was established in 1943 to provide retirement benefits to employees of the Icelandic government and its agencies. As of December 31, 2009, ARTRS included 343 participating employers and more than 115,000 members, and had total assets under management of approximately $8.8 billion.

15. In connection with its investments, ARTRS entered into written agreements with its investment managers, referred to as "Investment Guidelines." The Investment Guidelines set forth the investment objectives and strategies for ARTRS's investments. As of September 30, 2009, ARTRS had invested approximately 33% of its assets, or about $3.2 billion. The investments were made through the end of 2010.

16. ARTRS's transactions in Toyota securities are listed on Exhibit 1 to this Complaint. ARTRS purchased ARTRS's Toyota securities for $51,412.83 after discovering the fraud and purchased the securities during the period January 1, 2008 through June 30, 2009. ARTRS did not sell any of its Toyota securities during the class period.

execution price, to execute the trade at the best price available. Consistent with State Street's Master Agreement, ARTRS directed State Street to execute FX transactions for ARTRS's benefit between 2000 and May 2008, and ARTRS's instructions to State Street for FX Trading between May 2008 and November 2009. During November 2009, ARTRS has required State Street to execute FX.

43. ARTRS's trust in State Street's integrity, in addition to State Street's representations, led ARTRS to expect that State Street executed FX trades at the best price available. This expectation, and ARTRS's reliance thereon, was the result of State Street's repeated assurances that it provided ARTRS the most favorable prices for FX trades executed by State Street on behalf of ARTRS. State Street's Investment Manager Guide stated that State Street's FX trades would be executed "based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed."

44. Institutional investors rely upon sophisticated custodian banks, such as State Street, to execute FX trades, as the custodian bank possesses the infrastructure and technology to execute FX transactions, through its own trading desk or by outsourcing the execution to a third party.

B. ARTRS Placed its Trust in State Street as its Custodian Bank, Relying on State Street's Expertise and Loyalty

45. Since at least September 15, 1998, ARTRS, through State Street, executed FX trades, instructed State Street to execute FX transactions on its behalf, including purchases and sales of foreign currency. ARTRS's investment managers relied on State Street to execute FX transactions in accordance with ARTRS's instructions.

60. During the Class Period, State Street issued no fewer than 15 distinct Investment Manager Guides, including those dated June 9, 2003; August 9, 2005; September 26, 2006; October 17, 2006; November 20, 2006; December 15, 2006; January 25, 2007; October 30, 2007; November 21, 2007; December 19, 2007; January 28, 2008; May 1, 2008; October 31, 2008; December 30, 2008; and January 23, 2009, to its custodial clients and outside investment managers.

61. State Street represented in each of these Investment Manager Guides that "State Street Foreign Exchange Transactions . . . are priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added.)

D. State Street's Deceptive Scheme Overcharged ARTRS and the Class for Standing-Instruction FX Trades

62. State Street's FX practices differed from what the custodial contracts authorized and what the Investment Manager Guides represented. Despite representations that FX transactions would be based on market rates, State Street reported and charged ARTRS and the Class FX rates on standing-instruction trades far above what State Street actually paid for foreign currency or far below what State Street actually received for sales of foreign currency [illegible], at rates that often fell outside of the range of the day.

63. As such, [illegible] sent to ARTRS and the Class, State Street reported FX rates on standing-instruction trades to its clients that did not reflect the actual cost or proceeds of the FX transaction to State Street, and instead included a hidden and unauthorized markup. Put simply, State Street inflated the FX rates it reported and charged (or credited) to ARTRS and the Class. State Street paid or received one rate for FX, reported to ARTRS and Class Members another rate that was either higher (in the case of purchases) or lower (in the case of sales), and pocketed the difference.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Negligent Misrepresentation
(Asserted Against All Defendants on Behalf of Plaintiff ARTRS and the Class)

114. [illegible] repeated and realleged, as if fully set forth herein, each and every allegation contained in the above paragraphs, as if fully set forth herein and further alleged

115. [illegible] had [illegible] provided the Class with [illegible] trades executed by the [illegible] Defendants.

116. In addition, [illegible] provided [illegible] with [illegible] reports [illegible], including the reports [illegible], [illegible] Defendants' misrepresentations and omissions. The reports [illegible] were provided by [illegible] for the [illegible] in their business [illegible].

117. The report and trust and trustee provided to certain qualified settlement funds, and similar reports provided to beneficiaries of trusts, failed to disclose the existence of the Put Option and the Trust's purchase of Call Options, and failed to disclose the true nature of the Trust's investments. The trustee and trust advisor knew or should have known that the Trust's investments were not disclosed in the reports, and failed to correct the misrepresentations and omissions in the reports.

118. Because the trustee and trust advisor were responsible for investing with reasonable care, and because they failed to disclose the Put Option, and because the Put Option was a prudent investment, the trustee and trust advisor breached their duties to the beneficiaries of the Trust.

119. The beneficiaries were injured by the breaches described above and are entitled to damages in an amount to be proven at trial.

120. The trustee and trust advisor failed to disclose the existence of the Put Option and the Trust's purchase of Call Options, and failed to disclose the true nature of the Trust's investments.

121. The trustee and trust advisor failed to investigate the prudence of the Put Option, and failed to disclose the Put Option.

122. Therefore, the beneficiaries are entitled to recover damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

Boston, Massachusetts. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company provides directly, or indirectly through one or more subsidiaries, participant recordkeeping services for EBI's employer sponsored benefit plans and maintains custody of the collective investment trust funds. SSBT is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, a publicly traded company headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts.

11. Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM"). Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC, is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, is incorporated in Delaware and has its principal place of business in Boston, Massachusetts. SSGM describes itself on its website as a leading research and trading firm for State Street Corporation's institutional investor clients. It provides participants in employer sponsored benefit plans, including EBI's employer sponsored benefit plans.

12. Defendants Does 1-20. Defendants 1-20 are individuals or other entities that may be responsible for the misconduct complained of herein but whose identities cannot be ascertained through diligent inquiry.

IV. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Plans.

13. Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan. The Plan is an employee pension benefit plan within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2). Participants in ERISA, the principal investment decisions for the benefit of the Plan.

14. Other Similarly Situated Plans. Defendants provide services to other employee benefit plans, either directly or indirectly, which have suffered losses as a result of the misconduct described herein.

B. Defendants' Fiduciary Status

15. Each participant directed by ERISA to discharge duties with respect to the Plan. A fiduciary is anyone who exercises discretionary authority or control over the management of a plan or the management or disposition of its assets, or who renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or who has any discretionary authority or responsibility in the administration of such plan.

16. EBIT treats dividends received from publicly traded EBIT stock, but other purchases of publicly traded EBIT stock. EBIT § 3121(v)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A) (investment advice . . . with respect to assets of . . . plan" includes advice regarding purchase or sale of EBIT stock by plan).

17. Dividends paid to EBIT stock held by the Plan are exempt from tax.

18. EBIT pays dividends on the outstanding stock, in the form of cash distributions. Dividends, EBIT issues additional EBIT stock. EBIT issues the dividend to the Plan as a participant.

19. Mr. Mayfield and the trustee of the Plan entered into a transaction with EBIT to initiate a program for the exchange of EBIT stock for Exchange Notes and the subsequent transaction. As discussed above, the Exchange Notes were sold by EBIT to the Plan as a dividend to the Plan and then exchanged for Exchange Notes to the Plan.

C. Retirement Plan Investment Strategy

20. The Plan is a type of retirement plan, defined benefit plan and defined contribution plan. Both types of retirement plans, participants, have the right to direct, how to invest their accounts to be invested in EBIT stock. Additionally, defined benefit plans have exposed their investments to EBIT stock, and defined contribution plans are required to offer EBIT stock as an investment option.

21. Retirement plans are governed by ERISA, which requires that plans be invested in accordance with the terms of the plan, and participants in the plan must act in the best interest of the beneficiaries of the plan.

exchange transaction that occurred during that day. Applying that rate to the dollar amount of the net dollar-denominated exchange transaction it had conducted that day.

42. Plaintiffs and the Class, at all relevant times, had the option to hedge their FX transactions by entering into offsetting FX transactions with BTMU or other counterparties.

43. Although the FX trading principal in this manner, Defendants did not impose the same restrictions on the trading that BTMU imposed on Plaintiffs and the Class. Instead, Defendants routinely traded in the same currencies at the same time as Plaintiffs and the Class were trading their FX transactions with BTMU.

44. Because Defendants routinely traded at the same time as Plaintiffs and the Class, Defendants were able to profit from their knowledge of Plaintiffs' and the Class's pending FX transactions with BTMU.

45. Plaintiffs and the Class, by principal traded in this manner for their own proprietary trading, Defendants routinely traded ahead of Plaintiffs' and the Class's pending FX transactions. That is, Defendants routinely placed orders to buy or sell currencies for their own proprietary trading accounts while in possession of material, non-public information concerning Plaintiffs' and the Class's pending FX transactions with BTMU.

46. Plaintiffs and the Class, Defendants routinely profited from principal traded in this manner to the detriment of Plaintiffs and the Class's pending FX transactions with BTMU, at the expense of Plaintiffs and the Class, and at the same time as Plaintiffs' and the Class's FX transactions with BTMU.

47. Plaintiffs and the Class, Defendants routinely executed trades in this manner, including, but not limited to, spot, forward, swap, participation, and option, either directly or indirectly, and executed trades that were detrimental to Plaintiffs and the Class in the FX market.

48. Plaintiffs and the Class, Defendants routinely executed trades in which they bought and sold currencies in the FX market, including, but not limited to, spot, forward, swap, participation, and option, either directly or indirectly, and executed trades that were detrimental to the Class in the FX market.

V. CLASS ALLEGATIONS

54. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves and pursuant to Rule 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) on behalf of a class consisting of all persons who beneficially owned shares of Eaton Vance stock and who were damaged thereby. Excluded from the Class are Defendants and their immediate families, the officers, directors and affiliates of Defendants, at all relevant times, members of their immediate families and their legal representatives, heirs, successors or assigns and any entity in which Defendants have or had a controlling interest. Also excluded from the Class are any persons who were participants in the Eaton Vance Management Tax-Managed Buy-Write Strategy Portfolio, Eaton Vance Tax-Managed Buy-Write Opportunities Portfolio, or Eaton Vance Tax-Managed Buy-Write Income Portfolio, each of which was liquidated on or about November 1, 2001 and October 19, 2009 (the "Liquidated Funds").

Plaintiffs do not at this time propose any subclasses but reserve the right to propose subclasses as discovery progresses.

55. Numerosity. The members of the Class are so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. While the exact number of Class members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, and can only be ascertained through appropriate discovery, Plaintiffs believe that the proposed Class includes thousands of Eaton Vance shareholders who are dispersed throughout the United States. As of December 31, 2008, Eaton Vance had approximately 5.2 trillion shares of common stock outstanding. The number of shares owned by Class members is believed to be extremely large. Class members may be expected to reside in various jurisdictions. Class members who purchased Eaton Vance common stock may be identified from records maintained by Eaton Vance or its transfer agent and may be notified of the pendency of this action by mail, using a form of notice similar to that customarily used in securities class actions. For example, the Form 5500 filed by the Eaton Vance Corporation Retirement Plan for the plan year 2009 lists 389 participants. The Eaton Vance Management Tax-Managed Buy-Write Strategy Portfolio, Eaton Vance Tax-Managed Buy-Write Opportunities Portfolio, Eaton Vance Tax-Managed Buy-Write Income Portfolio, each of which was liquidated on or about November 1, 2001 and October 19, 2009, filed Form N-8F, Application for Deregistration of Certain Registered Investment Companies, for the year 2009.

56. Commonality. The questions of law and fact common to the members of the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, including, without limitation, whether Defendants engaged in the conduct alleged herein; whether Defendants' practices and representations related to the marketing, sale, and advertising of the Products misrepresented and omitted material facts; whether Defendants' practices and representations related to the marketing, sale, and advertising of the Products were likely to deceive reasonable consumers; whether Defendants' practices and representations related to the marketing, sale, and advertising of the Products violated applicable law; whether Defendants' practices and representations related to the marketing, sale, and advertising of the Products were unfair; and whether Defendants were unjustly enriched.

57. Typicality. Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the claims of the Class because Plaintiffs, like all other members of the Class, purchased Defendants' Products. Plaintiffs and all members of the Class sustained monetary and economic injuries including, but not limited to, ascertainable loss arising out of Defendants' wrongful conduct as described herein. Plaintiffs are advancing the same claims and legal theories on behalf of themselves and all members of the Class.

58. Adequacy. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the members of the Class. Plaintiffs have retained counsel experienced in complex consumer class action litigation, and Plaintiffs intend to prosecute this action vigorously. Plaintiffs have no interests antagonistic to those of the Class. Plaintiffs are members of the Class and do not have any conflicts of interest with other members of the Class. Accordingly, Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Class.

59. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Certification is also appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A), because the prosecution of separate actions by the individual members of the Class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class that would establish incompatible standards of conduct for Defendants. Certification is also appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B), because the prosecution of separate actions by the individual members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual

ARNOLD HENRIQUEZ, MICHAEL T. COHN, WILLIAM R. TAYLOR, RICHARD A. SUTHERLAND, AND THOSE SIMILARLY SITUATED, Plaintiffs, v. STATE STREET BANK AND TRUST COMPANY and STATE STREET GLOBAL MARKETS LLC AND DOES 1-20, Defendants.	CIVIL ACTION No. 11-cv-12049-MLW

AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

1. Plaintiffs Arnold Henriquez (bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan ("WM Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries), Michael Cohn (bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Citigroup 401(k) Plan ("Citi Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries), and William Taylor and Richard Sutherland (both bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson ("J&J Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries) (collectively, "Plaintiffs") bring this action as a class action on behalf of a class of similarly-situated ERISA retirement plans (collectively, the "Plans") and their participants and beneficiaries against State Street Bank and Trust Company ("SSBT") and State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM") (collectively, "Defendants"). The allegations below are based on the investigative efforts of private whistleblower firms, the State of California, the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), and an investigation by counsel, which included reviewing: Internal Revenue Service Forms 5500 ("Forms 5500") filed with the United States Department of Labor ("DOL"); filings with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, including Annual Reports on Forms 10-K; documents filed in other litigation; and other publicly available documents related to this action.

I. NATURE OF THE ACTION

2. This is a civil enforcement action brought pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001, et seq., and in particular under ERISA §§ 502(a)(2) and (a)(3), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1132(a)(2) and (a)(3), to recover losses and obtain equitable relief on behalf of the WM Plan, the Citi Plan, and the J&J Plan (the "Named Plaintiffs' Plans"), and pursuant to applicable law as a class action to obtain relief for all other similarly situated ERISA plans.

3. SSBT and SSGM were required to act prudently and solely in the interest of the Plans' participants and beneficiaries in their capacity as ERISA fiduciaries. On information and belief, rather than fulfilling their fiduciary duties under ERISA (the "highest known to the law"),[1] the Defendants charged, or allowed to be charged, improper, undisclosed markups on transactions in foreign currency ("FX transactions" or "FX trading") and engaged in prohibited transactions in connection with such FX transactions.

4. The Named Plaintiffs' Plans and the similarly situated Plans are established and sponsored by private entities in accordance with ERISA.

[1] Donovan v.Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 272 n.8 (2d Cir. 1982).

5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants violated ERISA by causing the Plans, or collective funds (the "Collective Investment Funds") operated by SSBT in which the Plans were invested, to purchase foreign securities through the use of FX transactions at rates favorable to Defendants. These transactions were prohibited transactions under ERISA § 406, 29 U.S.C. § 1106.

6. Plaintiffs also allege that Defendants failed to act solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries of the Plans and breached their fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty with respect to the Plans. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants, as fiduciaries of the Plans, violated their fiduciary duties under ERISA § 404, 29 U.S.C. § 1104, by causing the Plans or the Collective Investment Funds operated by Defendants in which the Plans were invested to engage in transactions that were not to the exclusive benefit of the Plans or their participants and beneficiaries.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

7. ERISA provides for exclusive federal jurisdiction over these claims. The Plans are "employee benefit plans" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(3), and Plaintiffs are participants in the Named Plaintiffs' Plans within the meaning of ERISA § 3(7), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(7), who are authorized pursuant to ERISA § 502(a)(2) and (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) and (3), to bring the present action on behalf of those plans and their participants and beneficiaries to obtain appropriate relief.

8. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal question) and ERISA § 502(e)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(1).

9. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) and ERISA § 502(e)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(2), because some or all of the fiduciary breaches for which relief is sought occurred in this district and the Defendants reside and may be found in this district.

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiffs

10. Plaintiff Arnold Henriquez is a participant in the WM Plan, an ERISA-covered plan. At all material times from the second quarter of 2005 through the second quarter of 2009, Mr. Henriquez invested in the "International Equity Fund" [2] sponsored by SSBT and offered by the Plan. Mr. Henriquez also invested in other funds sponsored by SSBT and offered by the WM Plan during the Class Period, including the Large Cap Equity Fund, the Small Cap Equity Fund, the Conservative Asset Allocation Fund, the Moderate Asset Allocation Fund, the Aggressive Allocation Fund, the Bond Market, and the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund. Mr. Henriquez resides in Frederick, Maryland.

11. Plaintiff Michael T. Cohn is a participant in the Citi Plan, an ERISA-covered plan. At all material times from his initial enrollment in the Citi Plan in January 2005 through

[2] The "International Equity Fund" is the fund name used by SSBT on disclosures to participants in the WM Plan. The International Equity Fund's name, according to the International Equity Fund's Forms 5500 for 2009 and 2010, filed by SSBT with DOL, is the "Active Intl Stock Selection SL SF CL I (CM8J [sic]." From 2006 through 2008, the International Equity Fund's name, according to the International Equity Fund's Forms 5500 filed by SSBT with DOL was the "International Alpha Select SL Series Fund – [sic]." From 1999 to 2005, the WM Plan offered the SSgA International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A Non-Lending as the "International Equity Fund." The foregoing fund names may refer to the International Equity Fund at a particular point in time, as well as to one or more of several classes of interests offered in the International Equity Fund.

August 2007 Mr. Cohn was invested in the "Aggressive Focus Fund" offered by the Citigroup 401(k) Plan. According to the Citigroup 401(k) Plan Aggressive Focus Fund Fact Sheet for the second quarter of 2004, this fund had the objective of "seek[ing] as high a total return over time as is consistent with a primary emphasis on equity securities and a secondary emphasis on fixed-income and money market securities." The Aggressive Focus Fund was a "fund of funds" managed by SSBT that included two funds focused on international equities: (a) the Daily EAFE Index Securities Lending Series – Class T; and (b) the Daily Emerging Markets Index Non Lending Series Fund. These two funds accounted for 24% of the Aggressive Focus Fund's total holdings in 2004. In September 2007, the Citigroup 401(k) Plan changed its investment options, and Mr. Cohn invested in the newly offered "Emerging Market Equity" collective investment fund. He is still invested in that fund as of the date of this complaint. This Emerging Market Equity fund has used SSBT as an investment manager since it was first offered to the Citigroup 401(k) Plan in 2007. Mr. Cohn resides in Highland Park, Illinois.

12. Plaintiff William R. Taylor is a participant in the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson, an ERISA-covered plan. Mr. Taylor began working at Johnson and Johnson and accruing service towards his pension benefit on September 21, 1998. At all relevant times to this complaint, SSBT served as the trustee and custodian of both the J&J Plan and the Johnson and Johnson Pension and Savings Plan Master Trust in which the J&J Plan was wholly invested. Mr. Taylor resides in Aston, Pennsylvania. The J&J plan holds foreign investments in both international securities that cannot be purchased on a domestic exchange and foreign currency. Each of these types of holdings requires FX transactions.

13. Plaintiff Richard A. Sutherland is a participant in the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson, an ERISA-covered plan. Mr. Taylor began working at Johnson and

Johnson and accruing service towards his pension benefit on January 1, 1999. At all relevant times to this complaint, SSBT served as the trustee and custodian of both the J&J Plan and Johnson and Johnson Pension and Savings Plan Master Trust in which the defined benefit plan was wholly invested. Mr. Sutherland resides in Albuquerque, New Mexico. The J&J plan holds foreign investments in both international securities that cannot be purchased on a domestic exchange and foreign currency. Each of these types of holdings requires FX transactions.

B. Defendants

14. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company ("SSBT") is incorporated in Massachusetts and is headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company directly, or indirectly through one or more subsidiaries, operates as a custodial bank for ERISA-covered benefit plans and for the Collective Investment Funds offered by ERISA-covered plans. SSBT is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, a financial holding company headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. SSBT describes itself as a leading specialist in meeting the needs of institutional investors. In its Class Period filings with the SEC, State Street Corporation repeatedly stated that its customer relationships were predicated upon our reputation as a fiduciary and a service provider that adheres to the highest standards of ethics, service quality and regulatory compliance. One of the services provided by SSBT to its custodial clients was the execution of FX transactions, which allowed clients to purchase and sell foreign securities or to engage in foreign currency trades for other purposes. Another of the services provided by SSBT to its custodial clients is investment management of custodial client assets through the use of "collective investment funds," which are described more fully below.

15. Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM"), a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, is incorporated in Delaware and is headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. SSGM is a broker/dealer registered with the SEC, the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, ten self-regulatory authorities, and fifty-three U. S. states and territories. SSGM is the only State Street Corporation subsidiary registered as a brokerage firm. SSGM is the corporate successor of State Street Brokerage Services, Inc. and State Street Capital Markets, LLC. On or about June 1, 1999, State Street Capital Markets, LLC assumed all of the assets and liabilities of State Street Brokerage Services. Inc. State Street Brokerage Services, Inc. was dissolved, but "State Street Brokerage Services," not followed by "Inc.," continued to exist as a division of State Street Capital Markets, LLC. On or about March 1, 2002, SSGM assumed all of the assets and liabilities of State Street Capital Markets, LLC. SSGM describes itself as "the investment research and trading arm of State Street Corporation." SSGM provides specialized investment research and trading in foreign exchange, equities, fixed income, and derivatives to ERISA covered benefit plans. Confusingly, in their answer to the complaint-in-intervention of the California Attorney General described below,[3] SSBT and SSGM assert that SSBT executed FX transactions for its clients through a division of SSBT called "State Street Global Markets," which was a separate entity from Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC. In marketing documents for its "Foreign Exchange Global Strategy,"[4] State Street Corporation has described

[4] State Street Corporation added further confusion through its marketing materials, which state that "[p]roducts and services outlined in this document are offered to professional investors through State Street Global Markets LLC, which is a member of FINRA and SIPC, and State Street Bank and Trust Company, State Street Global Markets International Limited and State Street Bank Europe Limited, all of which are authorized and regulated by the Financial Services Authority in the United Kingdom, and their affiliates." State Street Global Markets, Foreign Exchange Global Strategy, www.statestreetglobalmarkets.com, 09-SGM08041209 (2010).

"State Street Global Markets" as "the marketing name and a registered trademark of State Street Corporation, used for its financial markets business and that of its affiliates."[5] Any action taken by the "State Street Global Markets" division of SSBT was an action of SSBT.

16. State Street Corporation, SSBT, and SSGM are under common control within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-21(e)(1)(i). Further, State Street Corporation, SSBT, and SSGM are "affiliates" within the meaning of (a) Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, § IV.(d), (e), 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02, 8026 (Feb. 17, 1994) and (b) Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54 §IV. (e), (l), 63 Fed. Reg. 63503, 63510, because they directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, control, are controlled by, or are under common control with each other.

17. Defendants Does 1-20 are fiduciaries of the Plans relevant to this lawsuit whose exact identities will be ascertained through discovery.

IV. THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE SCHEME

A. SSBT's General FX Trading Practices for Non-ERISA Clients

18. According to its September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide, SSBT purported to offer two generic types of foreign exchange transactions to third party investment managers for SSBT's custody clients. It offered "direct deals" whereby investment managers "deal[t] foreign exchange directly with [SSBT] Treasury trading desks." SSBT also offered "indirect deals" whereby "requests to execute a foreign exchange transaction [could be] sent to the processing site with the related securities instruction or as a separate instruction." As set forth below, indirect deals were also sometimes described as "standing instruction" trades.

19. According to a class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court on July 29, 2010 (Hill v. State Street Corp., Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG), for more than 75% of SSBT's large custodial clients, Defendants would conduct "indirect" or "standing instruction" foreign exchange trades, as described in SSBT's September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide. Under the terms of SSBT's custodial arrangements, SSBT was obligated to provide its clients the same exchange rate that Defendants actually used to make the trade. This arrangement was supposed to be beneficial to Defendants' clients because, among other things, they would not have to incur the expense and time of identifying and choosing the most competitive exchange rate.

20. On October 20, 2009, based upon an investigation undertaken after the sealed filing of a qui tam complaint by "Associates Against FX Insider Trading" on the personal knowledge of Associates' partners, the California Attorney General ("California AG") filed a complaint alleging that SSBT, SSGM, and a third entity, State Street California Inc., had systematically overcharged two of California's largest public pension funds by tens of millions of dollars for foreign exchange trades conducted over a period of at least eight years. People of the State of Calif. v. State Street Corp., Case No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS. (Cal. Super. Ct., Sacramento County Oct. 20, 2009.).

21. The California AG's action was based on an extensive eighteen-month investigation, which included interviewing witnesses and reviewing hundreds of thousands of internal State Street documents.

22. On information and belief, and according to the qui tam relators and the California AG, Defendants herein, starting in 2001, added an undisclosed and substantial "mark-up" to the exchange rate they used when making foreign exchange trades for its clients.

23. The California AG's allegations of undisclosed "mark-ups" were based in part on the sworn testimony of a former SSBT employee who worked on the same trading floor as the SSBT or SSGM foreign exchange traders and who overheard how SSBT or SSGM foreign exchange traders were marking up FX trade prices. This trader, in sworn testimony, described the practices of SSBT's FX traders as a "totally unethical thing to do" and said that the FX Traders practices were not within the "industry standard." People of the State of Calif. v. State Street, Declaration of Kenny V. Nguyen, Case No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS (January 31, 2012).

24. The California AG went on to explain that Defendants had agreements with their large custodial clients that obligated Defendants to charge their clients the same exchange rate as the one that Defendants actually used to execute FX trades requested by the client. Rather than doing so, however, SSBT or SSGM would execute the trade at one exchange rate, and then monitor fluctuations in the rate throughout the day. Then, before the end of the day, SSBT or SSGM would pick a rate that was more beneficial to Defendants, and tell its clients that the trade had occurred at this other, false rate.

25. The California qui tam relators explained that, for instance, if the transaction was a purchase of a foreign security, SSGM or SSBT would execute the transaction, but would charge the client a higher foreign exchange rate that occurred later in the day, thus causing the client to pay more for the security in U.S. Dollars than the U.S. Dollar value at the time SSBT or SSGM executed the transaction. If the transaction was a sale of a foreign security, SSBT or SSGM would execute the transaction, but would credit the client at a lower foreign exchange rate, thus paying the client less in U.S. Dollars than the U.S. Dollar value of what SSBT or SSGM actually received at the time SSBT or SSGM executed the transaction. In either event, Defendants would take for themselves the difference between the amount for which the trade was actually executed by SSBT or SSGM and the amount that SSBT or SSGM charged its custody clients for the transaction.

26. According to the California AG complaint-in-intervention and a subsequent amended class action complaint filed in the District of Massachusetts,[6] Defendants' clients did not discover the truth because the records, including statements of account and transaction records provided by SSBT in the ordinary course to their clients, showed only that the trade had been executed within the range of rates occurring during that day, notwithstanding that the rate reported was not the actual rate for the transaction. Defendants' clients were not informed of the actual rates at which FX transactions were made. Defendants' providing such incomplete statements and transaction records to their clients was a course of conduct designed to conceal evidence of their breaches of fiduciary duty and prohibited transactions set forth herein.

B. How SSBT's Foreign Exchange Trading Scheme Worked

27. As detailed by the California relators, clients or their investment managers would initiate a foreign exchange transaction by sending a request, often electronically, to the Securities Processing Unit of SSBT, which was located on the "custody side" of the Company. This request was then sent electronically to the State Street foreign exchange trading desk in SSGM, where it would appear on the Market Order Management System ("MOMS") software used by Defendants' traders.

28. According to the Arkansas State Teacher Retirement System amended class action complaint, SSBT or SSGM's FX traders were informed of SSBT's aggregated standing instruction trade requirements during the course of the day. The FX traders would, that day, trade on the interbank FX market in order to satisfy SSBT's standing instruction positions.

29. According to a class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court ("Hill"),[7] upon receipt of the request, SSBT or SSGM's foreign exchange traders checked the exchange rate, set a price, and executed the transaction, which typically occurred early in the day because SSBT or SSGM traders were at their desks by 7 a.m. Eastern Standard Time. All of those transactions were then entered by the trader into a separate software system called Wall Street Systems ("WSS"), which memorialized the transaction and charged the cost (for purchases) or remitted the payment (for sales) directly to Defendants. The WSS recorded time stamps for the actual, real time transaction.

30. According to the Hill class action securities fraud complaint, although the transaction was now completed and the price locked in, Defendants did not inform the client. Instead, on information and belief, SSBT or SSGM observed market fluctuations until sometime around 3 p.m. and then assigned either a higher exchange rate (for purchases) or a lower exchange rate (for sales) to the foreign exchange transactions that occurred during that day. SSGM then applied that rate to all of the "standing instruction" foreign exchange transactions it had conducted that day.

31. On information and belief, at all relevant times to this Complaint, this pricing scheme was used for FX transactions for both custodial clients, including custodial ERISA plan clients, and for transactions involving the Collective Investment Funds.

[7] Hill v. State Street Corporation, Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG. (July 29, 2010).

32. On information and belief, with each FX trade priced in this manner, Defendants did not simply profit; they made excessive profits on each trade, based upon the range-of-the-day's FX rates at the point the trade was priced for the Plan.

33. On information and belief, because Defendants' scheme always priced the trades at or near the very lowest or very highest rates of the day, Defendants were able to make a profit with minimal risk to SSBT.

34. According to the California AG complaint-in-intervention, Defendants' practice of pricing trades in this manner and taking the largest possible mark-up or mark-down was not disclosed to custodial clients over the period of time relevant to that Complaint.

35. On information and belief, Defendants' practice of pricing trades in this manner and taking an excessive mark-up or excessive mark-down was not disclosed to investors in the Collective Investment Funds over the period of time relevant to this Complaint.

C. SSBT Made Exceptions for Certain Clients, Offering Them Special Pricing

36. According to the class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court on July 29, 2010 (Hill v. State Street Corporation, Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG), over time, SSBT developed a special class of custodial clients that did not receive the excessively high or excessively low range-of-the-day pricing suffered by other custodial clients, including ERISA plans. Those clients who conducted "direct trades" would be quoted an exchange rate by SSBT or SSGM before executing the transaction. These clients – often large hedge funds – typically had easy access to an alternate price source, such as Bloomberg or Reuters, to double-check the truthfulness of SSBT or SSGM's rate quotes. Accordingly, Defendants could not overcharge these clients, and thus referred to them internally as "smart" clients or "smart money."

37. According to the class action securities fraud complaint, instead of including FX trades for these custodial clients with other clients' trades, and subject to the excessive range-of-the-day mark-ups and mark-downs, these clients were allowed to deal directly with Defendants and were given the chance to directly negotiate prices for their FX requirements for that day, despite their trades coming to SSBT as standing instruction trades.

38. As a result, according to the class action securities fraud complaint, the "smart money" custodial clients received better pricing than their fellow custodial clients who are still subject to SSBT's excessive pricing schemes.

V. FACTUAL BACKGROUND OF ERISA PLAN CLAIMS

A. The Plans.

39. Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan. The WM Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

40. Citigroup 401(k) Plan. The Citi Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

41. Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson. The J&J Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

42. Other Similarly Situated ERISA Plans. Defendants provide services similar to those provided to the Waste, Citi, and J&J Plans to other, similarly situated Plans, either directly as plan custodian or indirectly as custodian of funds in which the Plans invest.

B. Retirement Plan Investments in Foreign Securities

43. There are two types of ERISA-covered pension plans — defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans. Both types of retirement plans have, especially over the last decade, found it necessary and prudent to expand their investments to include exposure to foreign markets. Accordingly, defined benefit plans have expanded international holdings, and defined contribution plans frequently include at least one, if not several, international investment options.

44. ERISA-covered plans regularly purchase and sell foreign securities in order to increase diversification and take advantage of opportunities for higher returns. Retirement plans that invest in foreign securities receive principal, dividends, and interest that are paid in foreign currencies, or participate in other investments that require the exchange of foreign currency into and from US Dollars ("USD"), either directly or through participation in collective investment funds. As a result, the purchase and sale of currencies incidental to a foreign securities transaction is vital to a plan's participation in the international securities markets and to the acquisition, holding, and disposition of foreign securities.

45. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the WM Plan. Beginning in 1999, the WM Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain Collective Investment Funds, the SSgA International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A Non-Lending. For purposes of communications with the WM Plan and its participants, this fund was named the "International Equity Fund." The International Equity Fund is described more fully below. Another example is the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund offered to WM Plan participants. In 2008, the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund invested in another SSBT Collective Investment Fund, the SSgA MSCI ACWI EX-US Index Fund, a collective investment fund that held foreign securities and would have been, directly or indirectly, party to FX transactions executed by SSBT or its affiliate SSGM. Neither of these Collective Investment Funds could have been operated without FX transactions, whether or not those transactions were executed at the fund level or at the brokerage level. SSBT, as the operator and manager of these funds, was ultimately responsible for the funds' FX transactions.

46. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the Citi Plan. Similarly, the Citi Plan in 2008 offered four international Collective Investment Funds (either directly or as part of an underlying investment of the fund) operated and managed by SSBT: the SSgA EAFE Fund; the SSgA International Small Cap Fund; the SSgA MSCI EAFE Fund; and the SSgA MSCI Emerging Markets Free [sic]. None of these funds could have been operated without FX transactions, whether those transactions were executed at the Collective Investment Fund level or brokerage level. SSBT, as the operator and manager of these funds, was ultimately responsible for those FX transactions.

47. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the J&J Plan. The J&J Plan did not invest in the Collective Investment Funds. Rather, the J&J Plan directly held foreign assets, including currency, such as Euros, and foreign securities that could not have been purchased on a domestic exchange. An example of one such security is Elpida Memory Inc, a Japanese stock available only on a Japanese exchange. The J&J Plan could not have made use of foreign currencies or purchased foreign securities which are not traded on U.S. securities exchanges without FX transactions. On information and belief, SSBT, as trustee and custodian of the J&J Plan, executed some or all of the J&J Plan's foreign currency transactions in the relevant period.

C. Defendants' Fiduciary Status

48. Every plan governed by ERISA must have fiduciaries to administer and manage the plan. ERISA treats as fiduciaries not only persons explicitly named as fiduciaries under ERISA §402(a)(1), but also any other person who in fact performs fiduciary functions. ERISA §3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. §1002(21)(A)(i) (a person is a fiduciary "to the extent … he exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets…") (emphasis added).

49. An ERISA fiduciary is required to "discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and … for the exclusive purpose of … providing benefits to participants and beneficiaries and … defraying the reasonable expenses of administering the plan …." ERISA § 404(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii).

50. Moreover, ERISA prohibits certain transactions. Specifically, unless exempted pursuant to ERISA § 408, 29 U.S.C. 1108:

> A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not--
> (1) deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,
>
> (2) in his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, or
> (3) receive any consideration for his own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan.

ERISA §406(b), 29 U.S.C. 1106(b). As described below, Defendants functioned as fiduciaries to the Named Plans both by acting as trustee and custodian for the Plans and by exercising authority and control over Plan assets.

1. SSBT as Custodian

51. An ERISA-covered Plan's custodial bank is an ERISA fiduciary. A "custodian" is an institution that holds securities on behalf of investors. The responsibilities entrusted to a custodian include the guarding and safekeeping of securities, delivering or accepting traded securities, and collecting principal, interest, and dividend payments on held securities. Custodians may also perform ancillary services for their clients. Custodians are typically used by institutional investors who do not wish to leave securities on deposit with their broker-dealers or investment managers. The use of a custodial bank is intended to reduce the risk of misconduct by separating the custodial and asset management duties. An independent custodian ensures that the investor has unencumbered ownership of the securities other agents represent to have purchased on its behalf.

52. SSBT served as the custodian for many ERISA-covered pension plans. Specifically, SSBT served as custodian for the Named Plans' assets. As custodian, SSBT was a fiduciary under ERISA and owed fiduciary duties to the Named Plans. SSGM also exercised authority and control over the Plans' assets in its role as SSBT's affiliate responsible for setting the exchange rates on FX transactions and executing those transactions. As discussed above, this process created the excessive spread between the marked-up FX exchange rates charged to custodial ERISA plan clients and the marked-down FX exchange rates used to process repatriation of principal, dividends, and interest paid in foreign currencies, and other FX transactions.

2. SSBT as Investment Manager of Collective Investment Funds for ERISA Plans

53. SSBT sponsored and operated the Collective Investment Funds and offered them to the ERISA plans, including the Plans and the Similarly Situated ERISA Plans. SSBT served as custodian and trustee for the Collective Investment Funds. The Collective Investment Funds were under the exclusive management and control of SSBT.

54. On information and belief, all of the Collective Investment Funds which invested in foreign securities suffered from the same inaccurate FX pricing described in the California qui tam complaint, the California AG complaint-in-intervention, and the Hill securities fraud class action complaint. See ¶¶ 18-38, supra.

55. Investments in collective investment funds are equity interests in a separate legal entity, but are not publicly-offered securities or securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, i.e., mutual funds. Under ERISA, unlike mutual funds and other publicly-offered securities, investments in collective investment funds are subject to a unique "look-through" rule, pursuant to which, the "plan assets" of an ERISA-covered plan include both its undivided "equity interest [in the entity] and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity …". 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a)(2); see also ERISA § 3(42), 29 C.F.R. § 1002(42) (authority of Secretary of Labor to define term "plan assets" by regulation) (emphasis added). Specifically, when a Plan acquires or holds an interest in a common or collective trust fund, that is, a Collective Investment Fund, "its assets include its investment and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity." Id. § 2510.3-101(h)(1) (emphasis added).

56. "[A]ny person who exercises authority or control respecting the management or disposition of such underlying assets, and any person who provides investment advice with respect to such assets for a fee (direct or indirect) is a fiduciary of the investing plan." Id. § 2510.3-101(a).

57. As the sponsor and operator of the Collective Investment Funds, SSBT exercised authority or control with respect to the management or disposition of plan assets. Accordingly, SSBT was a fiduciary of each and every ERISA Plan which invested in the Collective Investment Funds, including the Named Plaintiffs' Plans and the Plans, with respect to the underlying assets of each and every SSBT Collective Investment Fund.

58. In addition, according to SSBT documents provided by the WM Plan in April 2002 to a participant in the WM Plan in response to the participant's request for plan documents pursuant to ERISA § 104(b)(4), 29 U.S.C. § 1024(b)(4), on or about January 1, 1999, the Investment Committee of the WM Plan appointed SSBT to act as Investment Manager of the WM Plan "as such term is defined in Section 3(38) of [ERISA]" with respect to designated assets of the WM Plan. The designated assets included five of the Collective Investment Funds, one of which was the "International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A," that is, the International Equity Fund. Accordingly, SSBT also had authority and control over plan assets in its capacity as Investment Manager, including assets invested in the Collective Investment Funds, and specifically including assets invested in the International Equity Fund. This arrangement continued throughout the WM Plan's association with SSBT, regardless of the specific international equity fund being offered to participants at any given time.

3. Foreign Exchange Transactions Under ERISA

59. Certain of the Collective Investment Funds SSBT operated and offered to ERISA-covered plans during the Class Period invested in foreign securities. SSBT served as custodian and trustee for these Collective Investment Funds. Collective investment funds that invest in foreign securities, or a person acting on their behalf, must engage in FX transactions in order to buy and sell securities, to repatriate dividends or interest payments, and to engage in other transactions. As the trustee of the Collective Investment Funds, SSBT was authorized to convert any monies into any currency through foreign exchange transactions and responsible for ensuring that these transactions were within the bounds of SSBT's fiduciary responsibilities and the limitations of ERISA.

60. For example, according to SSBT documents provided by the WM Plan in April 2002 to a participant in the WM Plan in response to the participant's request for plan documents pursuant to ERISA § 104(b)(4), 29 U.S.C. § 1024(b)(4), the stated investment objective of the International Equity Fund in the Waste Management Plan was "to provide long-term capital appreciation through equity investments in markets outside the United States." (Emphasis added).

61. The WM Plan's Investment Policy Statement noted that "[t]he goal of the International Equity Fund is to invest in a portfolio of common stocks that will provide a vehicle for investing in a broad cross section of non-U.S. equities." The International Equity Fund was also permitted to invest in equity-based derivatives of foreign securities and fixed income securities issued by governments and corporations located in those countries. The "investable universe" of the International Equity Fund was "the equities of all developed market countries, excluding the U.S., including American Depositary Receipts." The International Equity Fund's benchmark was the "MSCI-EAFE Index, an index of more than 1,100 stocks in 21 countries outside of North and South America …."

4. SSGM as a Functional Fiduciary of ERISA Plan Assets

62. As noted above, many of the securities purchased, held, or sold in the Collective Investment Funds were foreign securities that could not be purchased or sold except on foreign securities exchanges in transactions denominated in foreign currencies.

63. As described more fully below, as a practical matter, unless a Collective Investment Fund invested solely in American Depositary Receipts or derivatives issued in the jurisdiction of the United States, the Investment Manager of the Collective Investment Fund, i.e., SSBT, or some person acting on its behalf, such as a broker, was required to engage in foreign currency transactions in order to acquire equity securities "in markets outside the United States." Any funds used to acquire such securities at any level within SSBT, or through any affiliate thereof, would constitute "plan assets" under 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101.

64. On information and belief, SSGM provided brokerage services, that is, the purchase and sale of foreign securities, to the Collective Investment Funds. To the extent that the Collective Investment Funds settled such purchases and sales in U.S. Dollars, the Collective Investment Funds did not engage directly in FX trading in connection with the purchase or sale of foreign securities. Rather, they engaged in FX trading indirectly through SSGM, in that SSGM would have executed a purchase or sale of a foreign security in foreign currency and then converted the transaction to a U.S. Dollar-denominated transaction for purposes of settlement with the Collective Investment Funds.

65. On information and belief, SSGM also served as the conduit for the repatriation of dividend, principal, and interest payments by issuers of foreign securities and for receipt of proceeds of sales of foreign securities, and engaged in FX transactions in order to remit such payments to the Collective Investment Funds in U.S. Dollars.

66. SSGM's conversion of foreign currency to U.S. dollars constituted the exercise of authority or control respecting the management or disposition of the underlying assets of the Collective Investment Funds and, therefore, of assets of the ERISA Plans, within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(1), and 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a). Accordingly, SSGM was a fiduciary of the ERISA Plans.

5. Defendants' Prohibited Transactions

67. According to its September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide, SSBT purported to comply with a special procedure when effecting foreign exchange transactions for ERISA trust and custody clients. Until at least September 26, 2006, the so-called "FX Procedure" purported to be "designed to satisfy the conditions of Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20 ("PTE 94-20"). A prohibited transaction exemption permit[ted] certain 'directed' FX transactions between [SSBT] and its ERISA clients." Under the ERISA "FX Procedure," SSBT "agree[d] to post to its website on a daily basis, a specific buy rate and sell rate for each currency. Each ERISA plan manager [could] direct [SSBT] to effect the plan's FX transactions, including income repatriation and buy/sell related transactions at the posted rates or at rates more favorable if market conditions warrant."

68. The September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide did not, however, address foreign exchange transactions conducted in connection with assets managed directly by SSBT, as in the Collective Investment Funds. Under the terms of PTE 94-20, FX transactions generated by SSBT as investment manager of the Collective Investment Funds and executed by SSBT or SSGM could not be conducted under this so-called "FX Procedure," because, among other things, SSBT as investment manager would be dealing with itself, regardless of whether the FX transactions were conducted internally at SSBT or through its affiliate, SSGM, without the benefit of an independent fiduciary.

69. Nor was there any other applicable prohibited transaction exemption. As set forth above, the terms of FX transactions conducted on behalf of the Collective Investment Funds were conducted on terms less favorable than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length FX transactions between unrelated parties and on terms less favorable than the terms generally afforded by the bank in comparable arm's length FX transactions between unrelated parties. Accordingly, the Defendants could not engage in FX transactions in connection with plan assets in the Collective Investment Funds without engaging in a prohibited transaction.

VI. CLASS ALLEGATIONS

70. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action as a class action pursuant to Rules 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of the Plan and its participants and beneficiaries and the following class of similarly-situated persons (the "Class"):

> All qualified ERISA Plans (including the participants and beneficiaries thereof) for which State Street Bank and Trust Company or State Street Global Markets, LLC served as investment manager (including serving as the manager of a collective trust in which such a Plan invested) or trustee or custodian of assets and for which State Street Bank and Trust Company or State Street Global Markets, LLC provided foreign currency exchange transactional services (including foreign currency transactional services provided to entities such as collective trusts that held such ERISA Plans' assets), at any time between January 1, 2001 and the present (the "Class Period").

Class treatment is appropriate in this case because it would promote judicial economy by adjudicating the Plaintiffs' ERISA fiduciary breach and prohibited transaction claims with respect to all of the Plans and participants and beneficiaries in the class.

71. Numerosity. The members of the Class are so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. While the exact number of Class members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, and can only be ascertained through appropriate discovery, Plaintiffs believe that hundreds of ERISA Plans throughout the country invested in the Collective Investment Funds during the Class Period, and sustained losses as a result of the Defendants' imprudent FX trading activities. Defendants have more than $5.2 trillion of pension assets under custody. These assets could all be exposed to Defendants' improper pricing scheme. Plaintiffs believe that hundreds of ERISA plans are also exposed to the Collective Investment Funds with investments in foreign securities.

72. Commonality. The claims of Plaintiffs and all Class members originate from the same misconduct, breaches of duties and violations of ERISA perpetrated by Defendants with regard to management of its FX trading program. The questions of law and fact common to the Class include, but are not limited to:

a. Whether Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Plans by using an FX trading scheme to overcharge the Plans, or the Collective Investment Funds in which the Plans invested, for FX trading;

b. Whether Defendants' self-interested FX transactions constituted transactions prohibited under ERISA's statutory restrictions;

c. Whether Defendants' fiduciary breaches caused losses to the Plans; and

d. Whether Defendants' prohibited transactions caused losses to the Plans.

73. Typicality. Plaintiffs' claims on behalf of their Plans are not only typical of, but the same as, claims that would be brought with respect to other Plans. If cases were brought and prosecuted individually, each of the members of the Class would be required to prove the same claims based upon the same conduct of the Defendants, using the same legal arguments to prove Defendants' liability, and would be seeking the same relief.

74. Adequacy. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the members of the Class and have retained counsel that are competent and experienced in class action and ERISA litigation. Plaintiffs have no interests antagonistic to, or in conflict with those of the Class. Plaintiffs have undertaken to protect vigorously the interests of the absent members of the Class.

75. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Class action status is warranted under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A), because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of establishing incompatible standards of conduct for Defendants. Class action status is also warranted under Rule 23(b)(1)(B), because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class that, as a practical matter, would be dispositive of the interests of other members not parties to this action, or that would substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

76. Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements. Certification under Rule 23(b)(2) is warranted because Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive, declaratory, or other equitable relief with respect to the Class as a whole. No plan-by-plan inquiry would be required to determine whether Defendants' breached their fiduciary duties.

77. Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements. In the alternative, certification under Rule 23(b)(3) is appropriate because questions of law or fact common to Class members predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and class action treatment is superior to the other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy.

VII. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

COUNT I

Engaging in Self-Interested Prohibited Transactions
(Violation of § 406 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106 by Defendants)

78. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

79. At all relevant times, the Defendants acted as fiduciaries within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A), by exercising authority and control over ERISA plan assets.

80. The Defendants, by their actions throughout the Class Period, caused the Plans to engage in unfairly and unreasonably priced FX transactions.

81. During the Class Period, Defendants engaged in FX transactions using plan assets that were not for the exclusive benefit of the Plans' or their participants.

82. Through their FX transactions and pricing scheme, Defendants dealt with assets of the Plans for their own financial benefit and for their own account. This is a violation of ERISA § 406(b)(1) & (3), 29 U.S.C. 1106(b)(1) & (3).

83. As a direct and proximate result of these prohibited transaction violations, the Plans, directly or indirectly, paid millions of dollars in transaction fees that were prohibited by ERISA and suffered millions of dollars in losses.

84. Pursuant to ERISA, Defendants are liable to disgorge all fees paid them for the Plans' FX transactions, to restore all losses suffered by the Plans as a result of the prohibited transactions, and to disgorge all profits earned on the fees paid by the Plans to Defendants.

COUNT II

Breach of Duties of Prudence and Loyalty
(Violation of § 404 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104 by Defendants)

85. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

86. Defendants breached their ERISA fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty by, inter alia:

a. Using plan assets for the own benefit, causing losses to the Plans and the participants;

b. Charging the Plans (or the Collective Investment Funds in which the Plans invested) fees for FX trading that were unreasonable and in excess of what Defendants had agreed to charge;

c. Failing to disclose to the Plans, their fiduciaries, or participants the amount of fees being charged for FX trading, that those fees were in excess of what Defendants had agreed to charge, and that other clients were charged less for the same services;

87. These actions during the Class Period were breaches of Defendants' fiduciary duties of loyalty and prudence to the Plans under ERISA, and Defendants did not execute their fiduciary responsibilities for the exclusive benefit of the Plans. § 404(a)(1)(A), (B), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1104(a)(1)(A), (B).

88. Defendants committed these breaches during each FX transaction involving assets of the Plans.

89. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of duty, the Plans, and indirectly Plaintiffs and the Plans' other participants and beneficiaries, realized losses.

90. Pursuant to ERISA, the Defendants are liable to restore all losses suffered by the Plans caused by the Defendants' breaches of fiduciary duty.

COUNT III

Liability for Breach of Co-fiduciary (Violation of § 405 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1105)

91. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

92. SSGM violated ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §1105(a)(1), by knowingly undertaking to conceal SSBT's fiduciary breaches. It did so through the actions and omissions of its employees and agents by concealing and failing to provide complete and accurate information to the Plans regarding the cost of FX transactions.

93. SSGM violated ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §1105(a)(3), because it knew that SSBT had breached its fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty, but failed to take reasonable steps under the circumstances to remedy the breach.

94. On account of SSGM's violations of these provisions, SSGM is liable for the breach of its co-fiduciary, SSBT.

95. As a result of SSGM's actions, the Plans suffered losses.

VIII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for relief as follows:

a. Declare that the Defendants have violated ERISA's prohibited transactions provisions;

b. Declare that the Defendants breached their fiduciary duties under ERISA;

c. Issue an order compelling a proper accounting of the foreign exchange transactions in which the Plans have engaged;

d. Issue an order compelling Defendants to restore all losses caused to the Plans (or that will be caused to the Plans after the filing of this Complaint);

e. Issue an order compelling the Defendants to disgorge all fees paid and incurred to Defendants (or that will be paid or incurred by the Plans after the filing of this Complaint), including any profits thereon;

f. Order equitable restitution and other appropriate equitable monetary relief against the Defendants;

g. Award such other equitable or remedial relief as may be appropriate, including the permanent removal of the Defendants from any positions of trust with respect to the Plans and the appointment of independent fiduciaries to serve as custodian to the Plans;

h. That this action be certified as a class action and that each Class be designated to receive the amounts restored to the Plans by Defendants and a constructive trust be established for distribution to the extent required by law;

i. Enjoin Defendants collectively, and each of them individually, from any further violations of their ERISA fiduciary responsibilities, obligations, and duties;

j. Award Plaintiffs their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to ERISA § 502(g), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g) and/or the Common Fund doctrine; and

k. Award such other and further relief as the Court deems equitable and just.

7. In 2011, the trust had approximately 22.8 million in assets under the control of the Trustee, which it received from the Protector of the Trust in the form of a distribution in kind.[1] The trust was the beneficiary of a life insurance policy on the life of the grantor, in which it had a substantial cash surrender value.

8. As part of its investment strategy, the Trustee invested in the Exchange Traded Options ("ETO") market, which is a highly regulated market in which investors purchase and sell standardized options contracts. Options contracts are derivative securities that give the purchaser the right, but not the obligation, to buy or sell the underlying asset at a specified price during a specified period of time. The seller of the option contract is obligated to buy or sell the underlying asset if the purchaser exercises the option.

9. Mr. Gruber and Mr. Shah had developed and implemented a trading strategy that they believed would be profitable in the ETO market. The strategy, which they referred to as the "Strategy," involved buying and selling ETOs, and was designed to exploit pricing inefficiencies in the ETO market. The Strategy required the purchase and sale of ETOs in large volumes, and was designed to generate profits from small movements in the prices of ETOs.

10. Despite the complexity of the Strategy, the Trustee delegated all investment decisions to Gruber and Shah. Since at least 1998, Gruber and Shah had traded ETOs for their own accounts and for the accounts of family members and friends. Gruber and Shah had a history of successfully executing the Strategy for their own accounts and for the accounts of family members and friends. Gruber and Shah represented to the Trustee that they had successfully executed the Strategy for their own accounts and for the accounts of family members and friends.

their behalf, and did not disclose to Xerox or to the investing public, or in the Company's periodic reports filed with the SEC, that the Company's publicly reported financial results were materially misstated as a result of the fraudulent transactions described herein.

11. The Individual Defendants caused or participated in the fraudulent transactions described herein because they directly benefited from the fraud. For the Individual Defendants, their fraudulent participation in the transactions described herein resulted in the receipt of millions of dollars in bonuses and other compensation that they would not have received but for the fraud. Mr. Huber, for example, received bonuses totaling approximately $3 million, and Mr. Shah received bonuses totaling approximately $1.5 million. Moreover, as described herein, the Individual Defendants misrepresented the Company's financial performance, which artificially inflated the price of Xerox common stock. The Individual Defendants also caused the Company to purchase millions of shares of its own stock at artificially inflated prices, which benefited the Individual Defendants by increasing the value of their Xerox stock options.

12. The Individual Defendants' fraudulent conduct, as described herein, violated the Exchange Act, particularly Sections 10(b) and 20(a) thereof, and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder. This action seeks to recover damages caused by the Individual Defendants' violations of the federal securities laws.

13. Mr. Huber and Mr. Shah have both been criminally charged in connection with their participation in the fraudulent transactions described herein. Mr. Huber pled guilty to violating the Exchange Act and was sentenced to 42 months in prison. Mr. Shah was convicted at trial of violating the Exchange Act and was sentenced to 60 months in prison.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

14. This Court has jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1331 and Section 27 of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. §78aa(1), 28 U.S.C. §1132(1). The claims asserted herein arise under Sections 10(b) and 20(a) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. §78j(b) and 78t(a), and Rule 10b-5 promulgated thereunder by the SEC, 17 C.F.R. §240.10b-5.

15. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to Section 27 of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. §78aa(2), 28 U.S.C. §1132(2).

79. The Plaintiffs' trades in the FX Options traded at prices that were not reported by the Exchange. These trades are known as "Off-Exchange" trades. Of the 4,216 Off-Exchange trades, 2,217, or 53%, fell entirely outside the forward-adjusted range of the day. The 2,217 FX trades, with Notional Amounts of $200 million, added transaction costs of 64.4 basis points over the Bloomberg mid-rate. For example, the purchase of $10 million, at a difference of 64.4 basis points, added $64,400 profit to the bank's bottom line.

80. Not only did the banks benefit from the difference between the Bloomberg mid-rate and the prices at which they executed Off-Exchange trades, but the banks also profited from their position in the Interbank Market. But when the banks executed Off-Exchange trades outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, it became apparent that the reported FX rates were not accurate, but rather included additional costs that were charged to the Plaintiffs and Class Members.

81. These practices, however, became apparent to FX participants, including Plaintiffs and Class Members, only after the Exchange published its findings. Before then, the banks' practices of executing Off-Exchange trades at prices outside the forward-adjusted range of the day were hidden from Plaintiffs and Class Members. The Defendants' misconduct was particularly egregious because the banks knew that Plaintiffs and Class Members relied on the banks' honesty and integrity in executing Off-Exchange trades.

90. In its initial Complaint, the Trustee alleged that "[s]ince December 2009, the Trustee has provided to Citibank the Trustee's historical trading data, including the principal and exact time of each trade, so that Citibank could determine whether its FX trades were executed at the best prices available on the dates and times requested by the Trustee." Emphasis added. The Trustee added that "the Trustee has provided Citibank with the relevant historical data so that Citibank could determine whether its FX trades were executed at the best prices available on the dates and times requested by the Trustee."

91. The Trustee then alleged that "Citibank's FX trades executed on behalf of the Trustee's accounts were not executed at the best prices available on the dates and times requested by the Trustee." The Trustee alleged that Citibank's FX trades "were executed at prices that were unfavorable to the Trustee's accounts."

92. Contrary to the Trustee's allegations in his initial Complaint in this action, his qui tam complaint alleged that "the Trustee has provided Citibank, the Trustee's FX trading data showing that Citibank's FX trades executed on behalf of the Trustee's accounts were unfavorable 63%. The Trustee's data included 498,940 FX spot and forward trades, 196,280 of the Trustee's trades, and 302,660 estimated trades for the years 2000–2010, and alleged that Citibank's FX trades on behalf of the Trustee's accounts, except for FX trades executed in 2010 and for 63 days in 2009.

(Section 3(38), 29 U.S.C. 1002(38)).

101. Here, Plaintiffs contend that Defendants Investment Manager and Investment Committee Defendants, operating as fiduciaries, breached their duties to the Plan by, among other things, failing to monitor the investment in the Investment Manager Defendants' Proprietary Funds and allowing the Plan to pay unreasonable fees and expenses to the Investment Manager Defendants and their affiliates for investment management services to the Plan, which were borne by the Plan and Plan participants.

102. Plaintiffs contend Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Plan by failing to adequately monitor the Investment Manager Defendants' decision to offer the Proprietary Funds as investment options in the Plan during the Class Period, including but not limited to the period from January 31, 2006 through June 30, 2007 (the "Class Period").

103. Upon information and belief, Plaintiffs hereby demand that Defendants make good to the Plan all losses resulting from each breach of fiduciary duty for which Defendants are liable under ERISA, and restore to the Plan any profits Defendants have made through use of Plan assets, and pay such other equitable or remedial relief as the Court may deem appropriate.

104. Upon information and belief, during the Class Period, Defendants caused the Plan to invest in certain proprietary mutual funds managed by Defendant FMTC (the "Proprietary Funds"), including the 110. Upon information and belief, Mr. Madrid breached his duties to the Trust, that is, the purchased securities were not suitable for the Trust. To the extent that the Trust's investment objectives permitted Mr. Madrid to purchase securities, he did not have discretion to engage in transactions with the purchased securities, but he did have discretion to engage in transactions with Mr. Madrid's securities, and he did not do so in the Trust's best interests.

111. Mr. Madrid breached his duties as the Trust's principal, principal, and investment manager by failing to disclose to the Trust's beneficiaries the existence of the securities and the fact that the Trust was purchasing the securities. To the extent Mr. Madrid disclosed transactions with the Trust, he failed to disclose the true nature of the transactions.

112. Mr. Madrid, in his role as the Trust's broker, breached his duties to the Trust by failing to act in the Trust's best interests when he executed transactions on behalf of the Trust, and thereby, he caused the Trust to engage in transactions that were not suitable for the Trust's investment objectives, and in which the Trust did not have sufficient liquidity to engage, but did have sufficient liquidity to engage in transactions with Mr. Madrid's securities. Upon information and belief, Mr. Madrid breached his duties as the Trust's broker by executing transactions with Mr. Madrid's securities.

113. Mr. Madrid's breaches of his duties to the Trust damaged the Trust in an amount to be determined at trial, and the Trust is entitled to recover its damages from Mr. Madrid, therefore, pursuant to the ERISA, within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(i), and 29 U.S.C. § 2510.3-101(c). Accordingly, the Trust brings this claim against Mr. Madrid for ERISA

E. State Street's FX trades were prohibited transactions under ERISA and corresponding federal regulations.

114. ERISA § 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), prohibits transactions between a plan and a party in interest unless the transaction is specifically exempted by statute or regulation. Fiduciaries are responsible for ensuring that plan assets are not used for the benefit of parties in interest, and must refrain from causing the plan to engage in transactions that they know or should know constitute direct or indirect sales, exchanges, or leases of property between the plan and a party in interest. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02 (effective February 17, 1994). Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54 (PTE 98-54) required that each transaction be directed by an independent fiduciary, and PTE 98-54 directed that all foreign exchange transactions conducted pursuant to the exemption be executed in accordance with a bank's or broker-dealer's written policies and procedures. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54, 63 Fed. Reg. 63503-63510 (November 13, 1998). The regulations required that the bank, broker, or dealer fiduciary negotiate the terms of each foreign exchange transaction with the plan fiduciary. 29 C.F.R. § 2550.408b-19 (effective August 17, 2006).

115. State Street Bank and Trust Company ("State Street") is a party in interest with respect to the Prohibited Transaction Exemptions and the directed trustee or directed custodian, through its various divisions, subsidiaries, or affiliates, engaged in foreign exchange transactions with the Plaintiffs.

116. State Street did not direct the foreign exchange transactions executed by the Plaintiffs, but State Street did execute foreign exchange transactions, both directly and indirectly, with the Plaintiffs' assets in its capacity as directed trustee or directed custodian, and State Street executed foreign exchange transactions with Plaintiffs' assets in its capacity as directed trustee or directed custodian to

Counsel for Plaintiffs

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

The Andover Companies Employee Savings and Profit Sharing Plan on behalf of itself, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, and all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs,	)	No. 1: 12-cv-11698 MLW )	DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL
vs.	)
State Street Bank and Trust Company, Defendant.	)

PLAINTIFFS' AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

Table of Contents

This is a classic case of self-dealing. The ERISA-qualified retirement plans of Plaintiffs suffered losses because Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company did not prudently safeguard their assets, instead permitting its currency traders to pilfer plan assets by improperly marking up and marking down foreign currency trades. This self-dealing occurred whenever State Street needed to exchange currency on behalf of the plans. Rather than seek the best price for the plans' foreign currency exchange transactions—or even the actual market rate—State Street used one of its divisions, State Street Global Markets, to execute the foreign currency exchange trades to benefit its own accounts. In executing these trades, Global Markets did not charge the plans what the transaction cost. Nor did Global Markets charge a rate based on the cost of the transaction. Instead, Global Markets systematically priced the trades based on the worst price of the trading day, and pocketed profits at the plans' expense. State Street manipulated the currency transactions to the plans' detriment despite its duty as a fiduciary under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 1001, et seq. ("ERISA") to protect the plans' assets. Because this practice was widespread and uniform, it forms the basis for claims on behalf of a class of ERISA Plans ("the Plans"). This lawsuit seeks to recover the losses the Plans suffered as a result of State Street's self-dealing.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Plaintiffs' allegations are based on personal knowledge as to themselves and their own acts, and on information and belief and the investigation of counsel as to all other matters.[1]

2. Plaintiffs are Alan Kober, a trustee and fiduciary for The Andover Companies Employees' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan. Plaintiffs trusted State Street Bank with their retirement savings and suffered losses as a result of State Street's self-dealing FX trading scheme.

3. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company's ("State Street Bank" or "State Street") undertook self-dealing and imprudent management of Plaintiffs' ERISA-covered funds in two ways. Some of the Plans offered their participants investment options that included State Street Bank-sponsored commingled funds—that is, pools of assets created and aggregated by State Street Bank for a number of different investors and plans—that required foreign currency ("FX") trades, while other defined benefit Plans hired State Street to serve as custodian to undertake FX trades of plan assets. In either circumstance, the self-dealing and imprudent management by State Street violates ERISA.

4. For both defined contribution and defined benefit Plans, State Street was an ERISA fiduciary. State Street was an ERISA fiduciary because it served as the trustee and investment manager to the Plans and commingled funds through its State Street Global Advisors ("SSgA") division, and as the investment manager it exercised discretionary control over Plan assets. One example of State Street's discretionary control is that as investment manager for the commingled funds SSgA negotiated or contracted with State Street Global Markets ("Global Markets") to execute FX transactions to facilitate purchases or sales of foreign securities for the funds, or to repatriate profits made abroad.

5. State Street was also an ERISA fiduciary in its provision of trustee and custodian services. In serving as trustee and custodian to the defined benefit and defined contribution Plans, State Street acted as more than a "plain vanilla" custodian of assets—that is, it did more than perform administrative and ministerial duties. Instead, Global Markets took control of Plan assets and exercised discretion when it entered into FX transactions on behalf of the Plans. Rather than simply executing FX transactions according to market rates at the time requests were received, Global Markets utilized its control over Plan assets and the FX process to impose unauthorized, undisclosed mark-ups or mark-downs on the rates for the FX transactions and pocketed the difference. In so doing, it was a functional ERISA fiduciary.

6. As a custodial bank, State Street Bank holds securities on behalf of investors. Clients hire custodians to do several things, including: safeguard and record movement of assets; arrange settlement of all purchases and sales; and maintain and manage all cash transactions, including FX transactions. Custodians are typically used by investors who do not wish to leave securities on deposit with their broker-dealers or investment managers. By separating the duties of investment manager and custodian, an investor—at least in theory—reduces the risk of fraud or other misconduct.

7. As of September 2012, State Street held approximately $23.44 trillion in assets under custody and administration, making it one of the largest providers of custodial services in the world. In fact, as of December 31, 2011, State Street's SSgA division was the largest manager of institutional assets worldwide, the largest manager of assets for tax-exempt organizations (primarily pension and retirement plans) in the U.S., and the third largest investment manager in the world. State Street charged Plaintiffs and the Plans in the putative class hundreds of millions of dollars a year in fees for custodial and investment management services. A significant amount of State Street's revenue, however, was comprised of ill-gotten gains from self-dealing FX transactions.

8. Under ERISA, Plaintiffs may recover losses and obtain equitable relief on behalf of the Plans and all others similarly situated. ERISA demands that State Street act prudently and solely in the interest of those who, like Plaintiffs, have invested money in accounts covered by ERISA. This duty to act prudently and solely in the interest of Plaintiffs and others is a fiduciary duty, and fiduciary duties are among the strongest in the law.

9. ERISA also creates strict liability for certain types of prohibited transactions, such as State Street's self-dealing in charging unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs to the Plans on the FX trades through its Global Market division, and then pocketing the difference. The undisclosed mark-ups and mark-downs were not for the exclusive benefit of the Plans or their participants and beneficiaries, but rather benefitted State Street Bank.

10. Despite its legal obligations to Plaintiffs, State Street has undertaken an unfair and deceptive practice from at least 1998-2009 (hereinafter, "Class Period"). Namely, State Street Bank has overseen and been responsible for the FX transaction practices described herein. These transactions were undertaken behind a veil of secrecy that allowed State Street to make exorbitant and undisclosed profits at the direct expense of the Plans. State Street charged the Plans marked-up FX rates when buying foreign currency on their behalf, and marked-down FX rates when selling foreign currency for the Plans, and in both cases pocketed the difference. State Street charged the Plans and the Proposed Class fictitious FX rates unrelated to the market-based rates State Street was actually paying.

11. The Plaintiffs, the Plans, and other Class members could not have detected State Street's deception. For the commingled funds, the transaction was conducted between two internal State Street divisions (SSgA and Global Markets) and was not reported on the fund fact sheets or otherwise reported to Plan sponsors. While State Street's custodial clients may have received a report of the rates that they were charged, without receiving a corollary report showing the range of actual trades for the currency pairs at issue, they could not detect that they were being charged hidden and unauthorized mark-ups (or mark-downs) on their FX trades.

12. State Street's unfair and deceptive FX trading practices generated hundreds of millions of dollars in profits annually for State Street—money that should have gone to Plaintiffs and the Proposed Class.

13. Plaintiffs bring this class action on behalf of all similarly affected ERISA clients of State Street during the Class Period, to recover the proceeds State Street reaped from Class members through its unfair and deceptive FX trading practices.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

14. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. section 1331 and 29 U.S.C. section 1132(e)(1). Plaintiffs' claims are brought as a class action under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

15. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 29 U.S.C. section 1132(e)(2).

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiff Alan Kober

16. Plaintiff Alan Kober is an Individual Trustee of The Andover Companies Employees' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan (the "Andover Plan"). In this capacity, Mr. Kober is a Plan fiduciary with standing to bring claims for breach of fiduciary duty on behalf of the Plan pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2).

17. Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance Company ("Merrimack Mutual") is the designated Plan Administrator for the Andover Plan. The Andover Plan is an ERISA-qualified defined contribution plan established for the benefit of the employees of Merrimack Mutual and its sister companies, Cambridge Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and Bay State Insurance Company, which, together with Merrimack Mutual, comprise the Andover Companies ("Andover Companies").

18. During the Class Period, the Andover Plan offered participants investments in several SSgA-sponsored commingled funds, including international equity funds such as State Street's International Growth Opportunities Securities Lending Class A Fund, and the SSgA Daily International Alpha Select fund.

19. By contract, State Street Bank served as both the Trustee for the Andover Plan and as an ERISA fiduciary and Investment Manager for the Andover Companies Plan investments from 2001 through approximately 2009.

20. As trustee for the Andover Plan, State Street Bank was required to exercise power and authority over the investment accounts for which it had express investment management discretion, or upon the direction of the Investment Manager. Pursuant to section 4.1(o) of the Master Trust Agreement, the investment power of the trustee included the power to "purchase and sell foreign exchange and contracts for foreign exchange, including transactions entered into with State Street Bank and Trust Company, its agents or its subcustodians."

21. By separate contract, State Street Bank served as investment manager for the Andover Plan's assets invested in State Street's proprietary commingled funds. Pursuant to section 1 of the Investment Manager Agreement, State Street was both a discretionary investment manager and a designated ERISA fiduciary pursuant to section 3(38) of ERISA with respect to all cash, securities, or other property designated by the Andover Plan.

B. Plaintiff James Pehoushek-Stangeland

22. Plaintiff James Pehoushek-Stangeland is a resident of Seattle, Washington. He is an employee of the Boeing Company and is a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan ("the Boeing Plan"). Accordingly, Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland has standing to bring suit on behalf of the Boeing Plan for losses to the Plan due to breaches of fiduciary duty pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2).

23. The Boeing Plan is an ERISA-qualified defined contribution plan established for the benefit of the employees of the Boeing Company, a multinational aerospace and defense corporation headquartered in Chicago, Illinois.

24. By contract, State Street Bank served as Trustee for The Boeing Company Employee Savings Plans Master Trust ("Boeing Master Trust").

25. During the Class Period, the Boeing Plan offered its participants investment options in several SSgA-sponsored commingled funds. Among the international equity funds offered were the SSgA Global All Cap Equity ex-US Index Non-Lending Series Fund Class A ("SSgA Global Non-Lending Fund"), which Boeing designated as the "International Index Fund."

26. As of December 31, 2010, the Boeing Plan held approximately $1.98 billion in Plan assets in the International Index Fund. As of December 31, 2011, the Boeing Plan held approximately $1.863 billion in the fund. These investments constituted approximately 6% of the Boeing Plan investments.

27. The International Index Fund invests in an index comprised of global developed and emerging country stocks from outside the U.S. Its international investments require exchange of participants' U.S. dollars into various foreign currencies, and SSgA utilizes Global Markets for the FX transactions.

28. Due to the "fund of funds" structure of many offerings in the Boeing Plan, the International Index Fund appears in multiple placed in the Boeing Plan portfolio: not only as a stand-alone investment option, but also as part of the Balanced Index Fund and each of the nine Lifecycle Funds, which are the target retirement options for Boeing Plan participants.

29. During the class period, Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland invested in SSgA's International Index Fund, directly as well as indirectly through the Lifecycle 2040 Fund and the Balanced Index Fund.

30. Plaintiffs use the term "International Equity Funds" to collectively denote the SSgA-sponsored commingled international equity funds that required purchases and repatriation of foreign currency by Global Markets, and that were investment offerings in the Boeing and Andover Plans, as well as for other members of the Proposed Class.

C. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company

31. Defendant State Street Bank is a registered financial holding company with its principal place of business in Boston, Massachusetts.

32. State Street Bank's business activities are organized into three segments or divisions: investment management provided by SSgA, custodial services provided by Global Markets, and institutional services provided by State Street Investor Services.

33. SSgA is a division of Defendant State Street Bank responsible for investment management. The SSgA division of State Street Bank provides asset management, and is billed as the "Fiduciary Heritage of State Street Corporation."

34. Global Markets is also a division of Defendant State Street Bank. Global Markets provides custodial services to clients, including processing the FX transactions at issue herein. Global Markets processes these FX transactions at the direction of SSgA on behalf of the International Equity Funds and the Plans.

35. State Street Bank is also the Trustee for the State Street Bank and Trust Company Investment Funds for Tax Exempt Retirement Plans (also referred to as the "commingled funds"). This was the trust pursuant to which State Street created, offered, and maintained the various commingled funds—the funds that were offered to the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan for their retirement plans.

36. The terms of the relevant Amended and Restated Declaration of Trust establish that State Street Bank and Trust Company was the trustee for the commingled funds, and that the funds were under the exclusive management and control of State Street Bank. Pursuant to the Declaration of Trust, State Street Bank had the power to hold, manage, and control all property held in the trust, or power to delegate responsibility for management of the assets to ERISA-qualified investment managers. State Street Bank also had the power to convert any monies into any currency through foreign exchange transactions to the extent permitted under ERISA. Accordingly, investment management for the commingled ERISA funds was conducted through State Street Bank's SSgA division, and FX trading through the Global Markets division.

IV. SUBSTANTIVE ALLEGATIONS

A. Foreign Exchange Trading is Essential to Plaintiffs' Ability to Meet Their Retirement Plan Investment Needs

1. The Necessity of FX Trading in a Global Investment Portfolio

37. Investors such as the Plans have found it increasingly necessary to enter the overseas securities markets and expand the global scope of their investment portfolios. These investments may offer increased diversification and greater returns than domestic investments alone.

38. Institutional investors that buy and sell foreign securities, such as Global Markets on behalf of the Plans, must trade currency because purchases, sales, dividends, and interest payments are all transacted in the currency of the nation in which the relevant securities exchange sits. Just as you need euros, yuan, or yen to buy coffee in Berlin, Beijing, or Tokyo, you need those same currencies to buy securities in Germany, China or Japan.

39. A U.S. investor must use euros to buy shares that trade on a German securities exchange. To get those euros, you must sell U.S. dollars and purchase euros. Similarly, dividends or interest earned in Germany will be paid in euros, and turning those gains into dollars requires exchanging euros for dollars.

40. For a U.S. investor to receive proceeds from the sale of foreign securities, the foreign currency received from the sale must be converted into the currency of one's own country. This process is called repatriation. The rate of exchange matters because it impacts the proceeds of any investment made in foreign currency.

2. How FX Trading Works

41. The values of different currencies "float" against each other. That is, they vary based on factors ranging from supply and demand to political and economic trends. While the price of coffee at a Berlin café might be € 2 all week long, it might cost $ 2.50 on Monday morning and $2.72 by Friday.

42. FX trading occurs on a nearly 24-hour cycle, five-and-a half days a week. The official FX trading day begins at 7:00 a.m. New Zealand time and ends at 5:00 p.m. New York City time.

43. For each currency bought and sold during the course of the FX trading day, there will necessarily be a high trade and a low trade. This information is tracked by proprietary services such as Electronic Brokerage System ("EBS") and Reuters.

44. The difference between the low trade and the high trade is called the "range of the day." The "spot range of the day" refers to FX rates as of a specific and prompt settlement date, usually two business days after the trade date. To more accurately measure the trade cost for FX transactions that settle prior to or later than the date for spot trades, traders in the FX market also look to the "forward-adjusted range of the day." Because FX trades do not always settle two days after the trade, the forward-adjusted range of the day is a more conservative and accurate measurement because it takes into account the interest rate differential between the trade date and settlement date for the underlying currencies.

45. If, during one trading day, the lowest trade was $1.25 to buy €1.00, and the highest rate trade was $1.35 to buy €1.00, the range of the day would be $1.25-$1.35.

46. Another useful measure for analyzing FX trades is the daily "mid-rate," which is simply the sum of the forward-adjusted daily high and forward-adjusted daily low, divided by two. This rate reflects the "average" FX rate in a given currency pair on a given day.

47. The daily mid-rate is significant to this case because Plaintiffs cannot discover the precise time of day when FX trades occurred (in contrast to stock trading, for example). By looking at the daily mid-rate over a significant period of time, one can reasonably estimate the average FX trade cost on any given day. Over time, FX trades will regress to the mid-rate.

3. Negotiated vs. Non-Negotiated FX Trades

48. In a "negotiated," or "active," FX trade, an investor communicates directly with a FX trader. The FX trader quotes a rate for a proposed transaction, which is accepted, rejected or countered—in other words, actively negotiated. If a deal is reached, the trader executes the FX trade at the agreed-upon price. Negotiated trades can potentially achieve better rates for an investor, but the process requires greater resources.

49. In a "non-negotiated," "standing-instruction," or "indirect" trade there is no arm's-length negotiation of the price between the investor and the trader. Instead, clients simply report the desired currency transaction to the bank, trusting and relying on the bank to execute the trade on the client's behalf using "best execution" practices. Plaintiffs' allegations herein complain solely of State Street Bank's practices with regard to non-negotiated trades.

B. State Street's Provision of FX Trades to its Custodial Clients

50. Institutional investors, such as pension plans like the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teachers"), typically requested that State Street handle the smaller FX transactions, mostly the repatriation of dividend and interest payments, through non-negotiated trades because the amount of each trade rarely justified the time and effort required for a negotiated trade.

51. State Street's clients reasonably expected that non-negotiated FX trades would have no mark-ups or mark-downs, for at least three reasons: (1) custodial clients already paid State Street hefty annual fees to serve as custodian over their assets; (2) the Custodian Contracts and associated fee schedules indicated no extra fees or mark ups, and did not authorize any such fees or mark-ups; and (c) State Street's Investment Manager Guides assured custodial clients and investment managers that the price of FX trades was "based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added).

1. State Street's Clients Relied Upon State Street's Expertise and Loyalty

52. Custodial clients placed a high degree of trust in State Street to execute non-negotiated FX transactions. In conducting these transactions, State Street occupied a superior position to its custodial clients due to its control over all aspects of the FX trade, including the information that its traders had about the FX market, the timing of the trades, and most importantly, the prices at which the trades were executed.

53. Custodial clients depended on Global Markets not only to execute the FX trades, but also to accurately and honestly report the FX rate to them, and to carry out the trades in accordance with their custodial contracts, associated fee schedules, and guidelines as set forth in the Investment Manager Guides.

54. Consistent with the custodial contracts and Investment Manager Guides, State Street's clients also had a reasonable expectation that the FX rates that State Street charged (or credited) on non-negotiated FX trades would accurately reflect the true market-rates of those FX trades. And there is no reason a custodial client would expect its custodian bank—to which it was paying substantial annual fees for custodial services—to charge non-negotiated FX trades at something other than the actual rate for the FX trade.

2. State Street's Custodial Contracts and Investment Manager Guidelines Were Predicated on No-Cost FX Trading

55. For State Street's custodial clients, such as the Arkansas Teachers, the contracts provided that State Street "shall be entitled to compensation for its services and expenses as Custodian" pursuant to "a written Fee Schedule between the parties." Custodial clients and State Street agreed to and executed a series of fee schedules covering the class period.

56. The fee schedules either provided estimated annual fees or annual flat fees for State Street's services as a custodian.

57. State Street's custodial contracts (a) expressly provided that non-negotiated FX trades would be executed free of charge; or (b) did not list FX transactions among the services for which it was permitted to charge an additional fee or any other cost above the annual flat fee.

58. The fee schedules did set forth certain categories of ancillary services for which State Street was permitted to charge additional fees, including Wire Fees, Reporting Fees, Delivery Fees and Subcustody Fees. None of these ancillary service categories relate to FX trading for non-negotiated trades.

59. The Custodian Contracts did not state that State Street would impose any fees in connection with FX trading.

60. State Street consistently stated that "Foreign Exchange Transactions . . . are priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added). This promise was made in Investment Manager Guides for custodial clients and investment managers. These Guides contained comprehensive information about State Street's custody practices and services, including procedural requirements, costs, and information on "State Street Foreign Exchange Transactions."

61. During the Class Period, State Street issued at least 15 Investment Manager Guides, including those dated July 9, 2003; August 9, 2005; September 26, 2006; October 17, 2006; November 20, 2006; December 15, 2006; January 25, 2007; October 30, 2007; November 21, 2007; December 19, 2007; January 28, 2008; May 1, 2008; October 31, 2008; December 30, 2008; January 23, 2009, November 20, 2009 and December 1, 2009.

62. State Street represented in each of these Investment Manager Guides that "State Street Foreign Exchange Transactions . . . are priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added.)

3. State Street's Deceptive Scheme Overcharged Clients for Non-Negotiated FX Trades

63. Despite State Street's representations that FX transactions were priced based on market rates at the time the trades were executed, State Street's FX practices diverged from what the Custodial Contracts authorized and what the Investment Manager Guides represented. Instead, State Street reported and charged its custodial clients FX rates on non-negotiated trades far above what State Street actually paid for foreign currency (or far below what State Street actually received for sales of foreign currency)—oftentimes, at rates that actually fell outside of the range of the day.

64. However, unbeknownst to its custodial clients, when State Street reported FX rates on non-negotiated trades to its clients, those statements did not reflect the actual cost or proceeds of the FX transactions, and instead reflected rates that Global Markets selected at its discretion. Put simply, State Street invented the FX rates it reported and charged (or credited) to its custodial clients. State Street paid or received one rate for FX during the trading day, yet reported to its custodial clients another rate that was either higher (in the case of a purchase) or a lower (in the case of a sale), and pocketed the difference.

65. For example, when custodial clients or their agents requested that State Street execute an FX transaction, the request was routed electronically via State Street's Market Order Management System (MOMS) to a group of "risk traders" working at Global Market's FX trading desk. A Global Markets FX trader would execute the transaction at whatever the current exchange rate was (the "actual rate") using the Wall Street System ("WSS"). The rate reported by Global Markets for the transaction, however, was not the rate State Street charged clients. The trader would instead charge the client a rate selected at his discretion at the end of the day, after seeing the day's range of FX transaction rates for the relevant currencies. This manipulation allowed Global Markets to mark up or mark down rates, charge rates that were most favorable to itself rather than in the best interest of the Plans, and pocket the difference between the actual rate and the rate entered by its traders—which could amount to tens of thousands of dollars from a single FX transaction.[2]

66. To illustrate the breach of fiduciary duty and failure to disclose, assume again the example set forth above—trades on a given day that ranged from $1.25 to $1.35 (the "range of the day") to purchase €1.00, with a day's mid-rate of $1.30. On any, and all, non-negotiated euro-for-dollar trades on behalf of its custodian clients, State Street would have paid a rate between $1.25 and $1.35, but reported to its clients that it paid at least $1.35, and sometimes more than that. State Street also kept the difference.

67. This conclusion is supported by the analysis from non-ERISA custodial client Arkansas Teachers of ten years of FX transactions executed by State Street on behalf of and reported to Arkansas Teachers. The Teachers reviewed almost 11,000 foreign currency trades between 2000 and 2010. About 4,216, or 39%, were non-negotiated trades.

68. The Arkansas Teachers compared its FX trades to other FX trades for the same currency pairs in a comprehensive database of more than 2 million trades, which allowed it to estimate the trading cost of the Teachers' non-negotiated FX trades. The trading cost is the difference between the day's mid-rate and the rate that State Street charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers for non-negotiated FX trades.

69. State Street did not report the actual time of execution of any FX trade, so using the day's mid-rate was the best method to see whether State Street charged (or credited) the actual market rate at the time of execution, as State Street had promised to do.

70. The Arkansas Teachers determined that State Street overcharged for FX trading. State Street charged fictitious FX rates by adding (on purchases) or subtracting (on sales) "basis points" or "pips" from the actual FX rate. (A basis point is 1/100th of a percentage point. For example, the smallest move the euro/dollar currency pair generally makes is 1/100th of a penny, or one basis point.) State Street would add or subtract as much as it could get away with, by selecting a rate close to either the high or low extreme of the range of the day. During periods of increased market volatility, when currency prices fluctuated more and the currency trading ranges of the day were wider, allowed State Street to skim more off the top of each non-negotiated FX trade.

[2] For example, the Wall Street Journal examined one trade of 8.1 million euros for dollars made by Bank of New York Mellon on behalf of a large pension fund. There the trader reported to the pension fund that the trade was $1.3610. On that day, however, euro/dollar trades occurred between $1.3704 and $1.3604. Had the trade settled at the higher end of the range of the day, which was $1.3704, the pension fund would have gotten an extra $76,012. The Wall Street Journal analyzed over 9,400 trades processed over a decade and found that 58% of the currency trades were within the 10% of the day's range least favorable to the client. Carrick Mollenkamp & Tom McGinty, Inside a Battle Over Forex, Wall St. J., May 23, 2011.

71. From January 3, 2000, through December 31, 2010, the FX rates that State Street reported and charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers on non-negotiated FX trades were, on average, 17.8 basis points above or below the day's mid-rate. In other words, every foreign exchange transaction cost the Arkansas Teachers 17.8 basis points higher than the average FX rate (or the day's mid-rate).

72. If State Street actually paid $1.31551 to purchase €1.00, it charged the Teachers $1.31729, or 17.8 basis points extra. For a purchase of €10 million, the undisclosed profit to State Street on that single trade—and the concomitant unknown loss to the Teachers—was $17,800. During the years the Arkansas Teachers examined, State Street executed over $1.2 billion in standing order FX trades, meaning that State Street kept about $2 million dollars of the Arkansas Teachers' money.

73. State Street routinely reported and charged (or credited) fictitious prices for its FX trades. For instance, 53% of the standing-order (non-negotiated) trades analyzed by the Arkansas Teachers actually fell entirely outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, see supra at ¶44. These trades alone, over $200 million worth, actually added trading costs of 64.4 basis points over the day's mid-rate—an enormous hidden and unauthorized mark-up. For example, on a purchase of €10 million, an undisclosed fee of 64.4 basis points means a $64,400 profit to State Street.

74. Rates consistently above (or below) the daily mid-rate alone demonstrate that Global Markets was charging a hidden mark-up that diverted assets of its clients and the Plans to State Street, thereby breaching its fiduciary duties.. These actions also violated the terms of the custodial contracts and the representations in the Investment Manager Guides. When more than half of non-negotiated trades fall outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, it is plausible that those reported FX rates were not actual, market-based FX rates, but were instead fictitious and designed solely to gouge State Street's clients and, in turn, their beneficiaries.

75. There is no rational, honest basis for a professional FX market participant like Global Markets to charge a rate outside the forward-adjusted range of the day without disclosing it. The basis for this practice was rather, self-interested profit for State Street, to the significant detriment of its clients. State Street Corporation's revenue from FX trading services grew dramatically during the Class Period, due in significant part to its manipulation of the FX rates charged to clients for non-negotiated FX trades.

State Street Corporation's FX Trading Revenue 2004-2008

Year-End	FX Revenue	% increase from prior year
2004	$420 million	N/A
2005	$468 million	11%
2006	$661 million	41%
2007	$802 million	21%
2008	$1.08 billion	34%

76. State Street Corporation publicly acknowledged how market conditions provided profit-making opportunities for its FX business when it stated the following during an earnings call[3] held on October 16, 2007:

> [W]hile market conditions in the third quarter presented challenges ... it also created more opportunities in foreign exchange and in securities finance than we usually expect in the third quarter.... Revenue from foreign exchange increased 98% from the year ago quarter, and 29% from the second quarter.

77. Tellingly, from 2000 to 2010, the FX rates that State Street reported and charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers on more than 6,500 negotiated FX trades added, on average, only 3.6 basis points to the day's mid-rate. In other words, State Street padded its profits, at Plaintiffs' expense, by about 14 basis points per trade for non-negotiated trades.

4. State Street's Deceptive Acts and Practices Could Not Reasonably Be Detected

78. Sophisticated custodial clients such as the Arkansas Teachers were not able to discover the manner in which State Street deceptively marked-up and marked-down FX transactions during the Class Period. The periodic reports State Street sent to clients showed only the rate that State Street charged for its FX trades. The reports did not include the range of the day, the daily mid-rate, or any indication of the time of the day that the trade was executed (known as "timestamps"). Accordingly, clients could not reasonably determine, or even suspect, that State Street was secretly charging more than it actually paid for FX or was paying clients less than it actually received for FX.

79. Custodial clients also reasonably presumed that State Street's reports accurately represented the true cost of the FX trades. Pursuant to the custodial contracts, State Street made monthly reports of monies received or paid on behalf of the client. Accordingly, State Street had an affirmative obligation to report accurately the amount it was paying or receiving for FX trades.

80. Furthermore, based on the Investment Manager Guides' assurance that FX rates would be "priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed," no custodial client had any reason to suspect that they were being charged (or credited) anything other the rate that State Street itself had paid or received on those standing-instruction FX transactions.

81. Because sophisticated custodial clients such as Arkansas Teachers could not uncover State Street's deceptive FX trading practices—even when they had directly negotiated FX trades as a reference—less sophisticated clients had no chance at all.

C. Events After October 2009 Begin to Shed Light on State Street's Deceptive FX Trading Practices

82. On October 20, 2009, the Attorney General of California intervened in a whistleblower lawsuit that was filed in California state court. The suit alleged State Street misappropriated more than $56 million from California's two largest pension plans using the same unfair and deceptive FX practices alleged here. People of the State of Cal. ex rel. Brown v. State St. Corp., No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS (Cal. Super. Ct. Sacramento Cnty. Oct. 20, 2009).

83. The California Attorney General alleged that State Street reported inflated FX rates when buying foreign securities, reported deflated FX rates when selling foreign securities, and pocketed the difference. The Attorney General further alleged that State Street hid its wrongful conduct by entering incorrect FX rates into State Street's electronic FX trading systems and providing false records to clients.

84. The California Attorney General has represented that its allegations of undisclosed "mark-ups" are supported in part by the sworn testimony of a former State Street Bank employee, William Strazzullo, who worked on the same trading floor as the State Street Bank and Global Markets FX traders. He overheard how State Street Bank or Global Markets FX traders were marking up FX trade prices. This trader described the practices of State Street Bank's FX traders as a "totally unethical thing to do" and said that the FX traders' practices were not within the "industry standard." Declaration of Kenny V. Nguyen in Support of Plaintiff's Memorandum and Points and Authorities in Response to Defendants' Motion for Protective Order, Exhibit U at 4 (Plaintiffs' Oct. 6, 2011 letter to Defendants), People of Cal., v. State St. Corp., No. 08-8457 (Cal. Super. Ct. Sacramento Cnty. Jan. 24, 2012).

85. After the California Attorney General filed suit, State Street dramatically changed its FX trading policies and disclosures and so informed its clients. Under these new policies, State Street admitted for the first time that it had systematically imposed additional charges for FX trading. These policy differences are made clear by comparing State Street's Investment Manager Guides published in 2006 and 2009.

86. The 2006 Investment Manager Guide said little about FX transactions. What it did say would have misled clients into thinking that State Street was protecting, rather than pocketing, clients' assets. The 2006 Guide assures clients that State Street has taken steps "to ensure compliance with certain ERISA requirements" by "effect[ing] foreign exchange transactions for its ERISA trust and custody clients under a special 'FX procedure.'" September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37.

87. In contrast, in the 2009 Investment Manager Guide, State Street dramatically increased its disclosures, and admitted that it was adding undisclosed charges to every foreign exchange transaction. In contrast to earlier disclosures, the 2009 Investment Manager Guide clearly states that foreign exchange transactions are not included in custodial services: "all foreign exchange services . . . are separate and independent of any services provided to custody clients." November 20, 2009, Investment Manager Guide at 36. In divulging this practice for the first time, State Street told customers that the FX charges would be "adjusted from time to time" but posted each business day on a website. Id. 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 37.

88. These new revelations stood in sharp contrast to State Street's previous communications. The 2006 Investment Manager Guide stated that standing-order (non-negotiated) foreign exchange transactions were "provided as part of each account opening" for ERISA clients. September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37. Rather than explaining the charges it was imposing, in 2006 State Street hid that information and posted only the "buy rate and sell rate for each currency." September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37. Indeed, the 2006 Guide assured clients that foreign exchange transactions would be done at these posted rates "or rates more favorable if market conditions warrant." Id.

89. Contrary to its 2006 promise to improve on posted rates, State Street's 2009 Investment Manager Guide stated that the "pricing of any transaction . . . is not determined by reference to any actual cost." November 20, 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 35. That is, in 2009 State Street admitted that the prices it had disclosed to custodial clients and others were not market prices, or prices State Street paid, but "prices" that increased its profits by padding fees on FX transactions.

90. Also in 2009, State Street Bank disclosed that a non-negotiated FX request "is unlikely, in most circumstances, to be completed at the same or as favorable an execution rate as it would be" if the trade were negotiated directly. 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 38. This simple disclosure, not made in previous Investment Manager Guides, finally discloses what State Street Bank had been hiding for years: FX trades contained hidden fees that disadvantaged Plaintiffs and the Proposed Class at State Street's benefit.

91. In a similar message sent to custodial clients such as the Arkansas Teachers, State Street admitted that "[s]ince December 2009, State Street has provided to all of its custody clients and their investment managers via our dedicated client portal, my.statestreet.com, comprehensive disclosure of the pricing and execution methodology (including the maximum mark-up or mark-down that may be applied) for each of its Indirect [non-negotiated] FX Services." (Emphasis added.) State Street added that "on the day after a trade is executed, State Street provides for each currency pair the reference interbank rates and the times at which they are obtained, the actual rates, the daily high/low range at the time of pricing (where applicable) and the actual mark-up or markdown that was applied."

92. State Street thus altered its practices only after its deceptive acts and practices were publicly revealed. State Street's late disclosure that it charged mark-ups and mark-downs on non-negotiated FX trades contradicts its previous repeated assurances in contracts and the Investment Manager Guides that FX rates would be based on market rates at the time the trade is executed.

93. According to a study conducted by an independent FX analyst, after State Street altered its FX policies, the cost of non-negotiated FX trades dropped by a remarkable 63%. The study analyzed 498,940 FX spot and forward trades (196,280 non-negotiated trades and 302,660 negotiated trades) executed during 2000-2010, and found that investors who had their custodial banks, including State Street, execute FX trades on a standing-instruction or non-negotiated basis during 2010 saw an overall 63% drop in trading costs from their average trading costs for the years 2000-2009.

94. Correspondingly, State Street's FX trading revenue decreased 56% from the fourth quarter of 2008 ($330 million) to the fourth quarter of 2009 ($144 million).

95. While State Street attributed this revenue decrease to lower "customer volumes" and a decrease in "currency volatility," State Street Corporation's 2009 Form 10-K filing stated that customer volumes declined by only 16% from 2008 to 2009, and currency volatility decreased by only 4%. State Street Corp. Annual Report (Form 10-K) (Feb. 22, 2012) ("2009 Form 10-K") at 41. A substantial portion of the 56% decline was the direct result of the California Attorney General's intervention, which forced State Street to stop its profitable self-dealing.

96. In fact, State Street Corporation conceded in its 2009 Form 10-K filing that disclosing its FX transaction profits on non-negotiated trades for its custodial clients would likely continue to affect its revenues and profits from these transactions:

> In light of the action commenced by the California Attorney General, we are providing customers with greater transparency into the pricing of this product and other alternatives offered by us for addressing their foreign exchange requirements. Although we believe such disclosures will address customer interests for increased transparency, over time such action may result in pressure on our pricing of this product or result in clients electing other foreign exchange execution options, which would have an adverse impact on the revenue from, and profitability of, this product for us.

2009 Form 10-K at 12-13.

97. The State Street whistleblower—whose allegations formed the basis of the California Attorney General lawsuit—alleged that State Street had generated $400 million in improperly obtained FX trading revenue annually, constituting one-third of Defendant's trading revenue.

98. Without discovery of State Street's internal documents it is impossible to determine how much State Street overcharged the Plans and other members of the Proposed Class. However, in Hill v. State Street Corp., No. 09-12146, 2011 WL 3420439 at *32 n.25 (D. Mass. Aug. 3, 2011), Judge Gertner found that participants in State Street's own ERISA defined contribution plan offered a "logical rationale for calculating that about 30% of State Street's reported FX revenue in the years before October 2009" was attributable to the improper self-dealing on non-negotiated trades, based on the 56% FX revenue decline in the quarter immediately following the Attorney General's suit. Assuming that 30% of State Street's revenue for FX trading during the relevant period was attributable to self-dealing, State Street's clients, including Plaintiffs' Plans, and the Plans of the Proposed Class, have overpaid State Street for its services by hundreds of millions of dollars.

D. Facts Bearing on Fiduciary Breach for State Street's ERISA Clients

99. ERISA-covered defined contribution plans like the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan invested in foreign securities (and hence foreign currency) through their State Street Bank-sponsored commingled funds. The commingled funds received principal, dividends, and interest that were paid in foreign currencies, or participated in other investments that required the exchange of foreign currency into and from US Dollars. The Andover Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain State Street-sponsored commingled International Equity Funds, including the International Growth Opportunities Securities Lending Class A Fund, and the SSgA Daily International Alpha Select Fund. Likewise, the Boeing Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain State Street-sponsored commingled International Equity Funds, including the International Index Fund held by Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland.

100. These International Equity Funds invest in a wide variety of international equity securities issued throughout the world. To purchase or sell the foreign securities in these funds, and then repatriate the funds to clients, FX transactions were required. As investment manager for the commingled funds, SSgA negotiated or contracted with its affiliate, Global Markets, for the FX transactions. State Street Bank, in its various roles as the trustee, investment manager, and custodian for the commingled funds, was a fiduciary with discretion and control over the funds' FX transactions ordered by SSgA and undertaken by Global Markets.

101. As investment manager for the commingled funds, SSgA had discretion as to the type and nature of instructions it gave Global Markets when undertaking FX trades. Upon information and belief, rather than negotiating each FX trade for the funds, SSgA placed non-negotiated trade orders with Global Markets. Provision of standing instructions by SSgA was insufficient from a fiduciary duty standpoint because in so doing, State Street failed to appropriately limit the designated price range and time period for the requested FX transactions. This fiduciary breach was compounded by SSgA's apparent failure to monitor, detect, and rectify Global Markets' mark-ups and mark-downs of the trades for its ERISA clients. As a result, State Street Bank engaged in a multi-year, self-dealing FX trade scheme—that is, it allowed SSgA and Global Markets to breach their fiduciary duties and act against Plaintiffs' interests in FX transactions year after year, and knew that SSgA and Global Markets would in fact act against Plaintiffs' interests.

102. SSgA, as the internal investment manager, would initiate FX transactions required for the investment management of the commingled funds through the MOMS system. See supra at ¶65. To do so, SSgA would submit a request to the Securities Processing Unit of State Street through MOMS, which would then pass the order on to the Global Markets FX trading desk. Placing non-negotiated trades allowed Global Markets to mark-up or mark-down rates and charge rates that were most favorable to itself, rather than in the best interest of the Plans. SSgA and Global Markets thereby both exercised discretion over Plan assets.

103. Because Plan fiduciaries whose Plans invested in the commingled funds entrusted all aspects of the investment management to State Street, including the FX transactions required for international purchases and sales, State Street had control over all aspects of the FX transactions. Neither the time stamp nor the rate of the actual FX transaction was disclosed to the Plans, their fiduciaries, or participants, by SSgA.

104. Over time, and with SSgA requesting and Global Markets executing thousands of FX transactions annually as part of the management of the Funds, Global Market's discretionary pilfering of Plan assets added up to large losses to participants and beneficiaries. State Street thus took advantage of its already-profitable relationship as trustee, investment manager, and custodian for the funds (and Plans) to rake in additional unauthorized profits.

105. Defendant State Street Bank, through its investment management division, SSgA, and its trading arm, Global Markets, provided FX trading services similar to those provided to the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan to other Plans in the class, in its roles as trustee, custodian, and investment manager. With no direction from the Plans, State Street commingled assets of the Plans, controlled where the Plans' assets were deposited and how and when they were invested and disbursed, and controlled all aspects of the FX transactions for the Plans, including Global Market's unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for non-negotiated trades on behalf of the funds, which amounted to State Street's self-dealing and taking of Plan assets for its own use and benefit.

106. State Street Bank also served as an ERISA fiduciary to defined benefit plans in the putative class. On information and belief, State Street provided custodial services and commingled fund investment options to the defined benefit plans and utilized non-negotiated FX transactions in a like manner to the transactions executed on behalf of its public fund clients and the defined contribution commingled fund clients. See supra at ¶¶50-81.

E. Defendant's Fiduciary Status under ERISA

1. The Nature of Fiduciary Status

107. There are two types of fiduciaries under ERISA: "named fiduciaries" and "de facto fiduciaries."

108. Named Fiduciaries. Every ERISA plan must have one or more "named fiduciaries." ERISA § 402(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(1). The "administrator" in the plan instrument is automatically a named fiduciary, and in the absence of such a designation, the sponsor is the administrator. ERISA § 3(16)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16)(A).

109. Investment managers are also ERISA fiduciaries. Under ERISA:

> (38) The term "investment manager" means any fiduciary (other than a trustee or named fiduciary, as defined in section 1102 (a)(2) of this title)—
>
> (A) who has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of any asset of a plan;
>
> (B) who
> (i) is registered as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80b–1 et seq.];
> (ii) is not registered as an investment adviser under such Act by reason of paragraph (1) of section 203A(a) of such Act [15 U.S.C. 80b–3a (a)], is > registered as an investment adviser under the laws of the State (referred to in such paragraph (1)) in which it maintains its principal office and place of business, and, at the time the fiduciary last filed the registration form most recently filed by the fiduciary with such State in order to maintain the fiduciary's registration under the laws of such State, also filed a copy of such form with the Secretary;

>
> (iii) is a bank, as defined in that Act; or
>
> (iv) is an insurance company qualified to perform services described in subparagraph (A) under the laws of more than one State; and
> (C) has acknowledged in writing that he is a fiduciary with respect to the plan.

ERISA § 3(38), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(38).

110. De Facto* Fiduciaries. ERISA treats as fiduciaries not only persons explicitly named as fiduciaries under section 402(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. section 1102(a)(1), but also any other persons who in fact perform fiduciary functions. Thus a person is a fiduciary to the extent

> (i) he exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets,
>
> (ii) he renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or
> (iii) he has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan.

ERISA § 3(21)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A).

2. Defendant State Street's Fiduciary Status

111. In the relevant Amended and Restated Declaration of Trust, State Street acknowledged its fiduciary status as Trustee with exclusive management and control of the commingled funds for all the ERISA-covered plans that offered the International Equity Funds as an investment option for participants' retirement savings.

112. As a trustee for the commingled funds with exclusive management and control State Street Bank authorized its investment management division to manage the commingled funds, and authorized Global Markets to convert any monies needed for the funds' operation into the required currency through FX transactions of Plan assets. State Street Bank also served as a trustee and investment manager to the Plans pursuant to separate contracts. At all times, State Street Bank had the duty to prudently and loyally manage Plan assets, discretion to select appropriate service providers and custodians, and the duty to monitor its various divisions to ensure that these transactions were within the bounds of its fiduciary responsibilities and the limitations of ERISA.

113. State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, served as the Investment Manager for the International Equity Funds in Plaintiffs' Plans and, upon information and belief, numerous other plans. In this capacity, SSgA was responsible for prudently and loyally managing Plan assets, and authorizing, reviewing and controlling the conduct of any other State Street division or representative engaged in activities affecting the value or performance of the Funds for which State Street served as Investment Manager.

114. Under ERISA, investments in commingled Funds are subject to a "look-through" rule, pursuant to which, the "plan assets" of an ERISA-covered plan include both its undivided "equity interest [in the entity] and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity …". 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a)(2); see also ERISA § 3(42), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(42) (authority of Secretary of Labor to define term "plan assets" by regulation). Specifically, when a Plan acquires or holds an interest in a commingled Fund, "its assets include its investment and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity." 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(h)(1).

115. "[A]ny person who exercises authority or control respecting the management or disposition of such underlying assets, and any person who provides investment advice with respect to such assets for a fee (direct or indirect) is a fiduciary of the investing plan." Id. § 2510.3-101(a).

116. As investment manager for the commingled funds, State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, exercised authority and control with respect to the management or disposition of the Plans' assets. Accordingly, State Street Bank was a fiduciary of each and every ERISA Plan which invested in the International Equity Funds, including the Plaintiffs' Plans and the Plans of the Proposed Class members with respect to the underlying assets of each and every State Street Bank-sponsored commingled fund.

117. State Street Bank, through its Global Markets division, also functioned as a fiduciary to the Plans and the Class by acting as trustee and custodian for the commingled funds, and by exercising authority and control over the Plans' assets when undertaking FX transactions for the International Equity Funds as to the price and timing for these transactions involving Plan assets.

118. Global Market's conversion of U.S. dollars to foreign currency, and foreign currency to U.S. dollars constituted the exercise of authority or control respecting the management or disposition of the underlying assets of the commingled investment funds and, therefore, of assets of the ERISA Plans, within the meaning of ERISA section 3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(1), and 29 C.F.R. section 2510.3-101(a). This is particularly so because Global Markets exercised discretion in choosing when and how to execute the trades, and whether to mark up or mark down the FX transactions over the market rates that Global Markets had received for the transactions, and then profited and engaged in self-dealing by pocketing the difference for itself. Accordingly, Global Markets was also a functional fiduciary of the ERISA Plans.

F. The Relevant Law

1. Fiduciary Duties under ERISA

119. ERISA sections 404(a)(1)(A) and (B), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1104(a)(1)(A) & (B), provide, in pertinent part, that a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries, for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries, and with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims.

120. These fiduciary duties under ERISA sections 404(a)(1)(A) and (B) are referred to as the duties of loyalty, exclusive purpose and prudence and are the "highest known to the law." Donovan v. Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 272 n.8 (2d Cir. 1982). They entail, among other things:

> (a) The duty to conduct an independent and thorough investigation into, and to continually monitor, the merits of all the investment alternatives for a plan;
>
> (b) The duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to resolve them promptly when they occur. A fiduciary must always administer a plan with an "eye single" to the interests of the participants and beneficiaries, regardless of the interests of the fiduciaries themselves or the plan sponsor; and
> (c) The duty to disclose and inform, which encompasses: (1) a negative duty not to misinform; (2) an affirmative duty to inform when the fiduciary knows or should know that silence might be harmful; and (3) a duty to convey complete and accurate information material to the circumstances of participants and beneficiaries.

2. Prohibited Transactions under ERISA

121. In addition to ERISA's extensive fiduciary duty provisions, the statute categorically bars certain transactions deemed likely to injure a plan. See Harris Trust & Sav. Bank v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 530 U.S. 238, 241 (2000).

a. ERISA § 406(b) is an absolute bar against self-dealing 122. ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b), prohibits certain transactions between fiduciaries and a plan. The statute sets forth an "absolute bar against self dealing" by a fiduciary. See Brock v. Hendershott, 840 F.2d 339, 341 (6th Cir. 1988). ERISA section 406(b) provides the following:

> A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not—
> (1) deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,
> (2) in his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, or

b. ERISA § 406(a) prohibits party-in-interest transactions

123. ERISA section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. §1106(a), prohibits transactions between a plan and a party in interest. A "party in interest" is defined broadly with respect to an ERISA-qualified plan and includes, among others, any fiduciary, counsel, or employee of such employee benefit plan, as well as any person providing services to such plan. ERISA § 3(14), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14). Section 406(a)(1) provides the following:

> (1) A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction, if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect—
> (A) sale or exchange, or leasing, of any property between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (B) lending of money or other extension of credit between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (C) furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (D) transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of a party in interest, of any assets of the plan; or
> (E) acquisition, on behalf of the plan, of any employer security or employer real property in violation of section 1107 (a) of this title.

c. Foreign currency exchange exemptions

124. Section 406(a)'s prohibitions against transactions with a party in interest are subject to numerous exemptions to allow the normal course of business with regard to investment management. See ERISA § 408, 29 U.S.C. § 1108. Foreign currency exchanges between an employee benefit plan and a bank or a broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is a party in interest with respect to such plans are exempted from the prohibition provided they meet certain conditions.

> (18) Foreign exchange transactions.— Any foreign exchange transactions, between a bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either), and a plan (as > defined in section 1002(3) of this title) with respect to which such bank or broker-dealer (or affiliate) is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary, or other party in interest, if—

> (A) the transaction is in connection with the purchase, holding, or sale of securities or other investment assets (other than a foreign exchange transaction unrelated to any other investment in securities or other investment assets),
>
> (B) at the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions between unrelated parties, or the terms afforded by the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions involving unrelated parties,
>
> (C) the exchange rate used by such bank or broker-dealer (or affiliate) for a particular foreign exchange transaction does not deviate by more than 3 percent from the interbank bid and asked rates for transactions of comparable size and maturity at the time of the transaction as displayed on an independent service that reports rates of exchange in the foreign currency market for such currency, and
> (D) the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) does not have investment discretion, or provide investment advice, with respect to the transaction.

ERISA § 408(b)(18), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18) (emphasis added).

125. This section existed first as a Department of Labor ("DOL") regulation, Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02 (Feb. 17, 1994), and was later codified as 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18) (effective Aug.17, 2006). Prohibited Transaction Exemption (PTE) 94-20 required that foreign exchange transactions be "directed" by a plan fiduciary independent of the bank, broker dealer, or affiliate. Four years later the DOL promulgated another regulation, to allow non-negotiated trades within carefully circumscribed conditions. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54, 63 Fed. Reg. 63503-63510 (Nov. 13, 1998). PTE 98-54 exempts FX transactions "performed under a written authorization [i.e., standing instructions]…by a fiduciary of the plan…independent of the bank or broker-dealer engaging in the covered transaction." Section III(e), 63 Fed. Reg. at 63508.

126. Although PTE 94-20 and PTE 98-54 carve out a limited space for execution of FX transactions within the ERISA regulatory scheme, these exemptions do not relieve State Street of fiduciary responsibility. As the DOL explained,

The Department wishes to point out that ERISA's general standards of fiduciary conduct would apply to the standing instruction arrangements permitted by this class exemption. Section 404 of ERISA requires, among other things, that a fiduciary discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the plan's participants and beneficiaries and in a prudent fashion.63 Fed. Reg. at 63505.

3. Civil Remedies under ERISA

127. ERISA section 502(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2), provides, in pertinent part, that a civil action may be brought by a participant or a fiduciary for relief under ERISA section 409, 29 U.S.C. § 1109.

128. ERISA section 409(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), "Liability for Breach of Fiduciary Duty," provides, in pertinent part:

> any person who is a fiduciary with respect to a plan who breaches any of the responsibilities, obligations, or duties imposed upon fiduciaries by this subchapter shall be personally liable to make good to such plan any losses to the plan resulting from each such breach, and to restore to such plan any profits of such fiduciary which have been made through use of assets of the plan by the fiduciary, and shall be subject to such other equitable or remedial relief as the court may deem appropriate, including removal of such fiduciary.

129. ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3), authorizes individual participants and fiduciaries to seek equitable relief from Defendant, including, without limitation, injunctive relief and, as available under applicable law, constructive trust, restitution, and other monetary relief.

130. Plaintiffs therefore bring this action under the authority of ERISA section 502(a)(2) for relief under ERISA section 409(a) to recover losses sustained by the Plans arising out of the breaches of fiduciary duties by the Defendant for violations under ERISA sections 404(a)(1) and 406, as well as pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3) for equitable relief from Defendant as fiduciary , including, without limitation, injunctive relief and, as available under applicable law, constructive trust, restitution, and other monetary relief.

V. CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

131. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action as a class action pursuant to Rules 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan, and the following class of persons similarly situated (the "Class"):

> All qualified ERISA plans, and the participants, beneficiaries, and named fiduciaries of those plans, that invested directly or indirectly in the State Street Bank commingled Funds, which includes the "International Equity Funds" identified in this complaint; or for which State Street Bank provided investment management or custodial services, that utilized State Street Global Market's indirect FX trading services, and suffered damages as a result of the deceptive acts and practices and other misconduct alleged herein, at any time between January 2, 1998 and December 31, 2009. Excluded from the Class are Defendant, any entity in which Defendant has a controlling interest, and the officer, directors, affiliates, legal representatives, heirs, successors, subsidiaries, and/or assigns of any such entity.

132. Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify the class definition before moving for class certification, including a reservation of right to seek to certify subclasses of State Street's clients, or extension of the class period, if information gained during this litigation, through discovery or otherwise, reveals that modifying the class definition or seeking subclasses would be appropriate.

133. Numerosity. The members of the Class are so numerous that joinder of all members individually, in one action or otherwise, is impracticable. While the exact number of Class members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, and can only be ascertained through appropriate discovery, Plaintiffs believe that numerous ERISA-covered benefit plans throughout the country offered the commingled International Equity Funds and that these plans collectively have tens of thousands of participants and beneficiaries.

134. Commonality. The claims of Plaintiffs and the members of the Class have a common origin and share a common basis. The claims of all Class members originate from the same misconduct, breaches of duties, and violations of ERISA, perpetrated by Defendant.

Proceeding as a class is particularly appropriate here the claim goes to the same type of currency trade instruction, indirect trades, conducted by Global Markets on behalf of the funds, and also on behalf of custodial clients, and therefore, State Street's deceptive acts and practices and misconduct regarding its FX trading practices affected all Plans were uniform and widespread.

135. There are questions of law and fact common to the Class, including:

(a) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by selecting its internal division to conduct the FX transactions for the Funds;

(b) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by failing to prudently and loyally manage Plan assets when it permitted its affiliate to conduct FX transactions;

(c) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by marking-up or marking-down the FX transactions for the Funds at issue and passing a lower NAV to the Plaintiffs' Plans or the funds;;

(d) Whether Defendant pocketed the difference between the actual, market-based FX rates it received when entering into the FX transactions, and the FX rates that were reported and charged to the commingled funds, and the Plans;

(e) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by pocketing the difference between the actual, market-based FX rates and the mark-ups and mark-downs, and maximized profit to State Street at the expense of Plan assets;

(f) Whether Defendant's self-interested FX transactions constituted prohibited transactions under ERISA; and,

(g) Whether Defendant's acts proximately caused losses to the Plans, and if so, the appropriate relief to which Plaintiffs, on behalf of the Plans and the Class are entitled.

136. Typicality. Plaintiffs are willing and prepared to serve the Court and the proposed Class in a representative capacity with all of the obligations and duties material thereto. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Class and have no interests adverse to or which directly and irrevocably conflict with the interests of other members of the class.

137. Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the claims of the members of the Class. Plaintiffs are members of the Class described herein.

138. The questions of law and fact common to the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members of the Class.

139. A class action is superior to other available methods for the adjudication of this controversy. Individual litigation by all Class members would increase the delay and expense to the parties and the Court given the complex legal and factual issues of the case, and judicial determination of the common legal and factual issues essential to this case would be more fair, efficient and economical as a class action maintained in this forum than in piecemeal individual determinations.

140. Adequacy. The interests of the Plaintiffs are co-extensive with, and not antagonistic to, those of the absent Class members. Plaintiffs will undertake to represent and protect the interests of absent Class members. The undersigned counsel for Plaintiffs and the Class are experienced in class action, complex, and ERISA litigation, will adequately prosecute this action, and will assert and protect the rights of and otherwise represent Plaintiffs and absent Class members.

141. Plaintiffs know of no difficulty that will be encountered in the management of this litigation that would preclude its maintenance as a class action. Compared to individual actions by each Class member, the class action device presents far fewer management difficulties, and provides the benefits of single adjudication, economy of scale, and comprehensive supervision by a single court.

142. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Class action status in this ERISA action is warranted under Federal Rule 23(b)(1)(A) because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of establishing incompatible standards of conduct for Defendant. Class action status also is warranted under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class which would, as a practical matter, be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the actions, or substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

143. Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements. Certification under 23(b)(2) is warranted because Defendant have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive, declaratory, or other appropriate equitable relief with respect to the Class as a whole.

144. Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements. In the alternative, certification under Rule 23(b)(3) is appropriate because questions of law or fact common to members of the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members and a class action is superior to the other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy.

VI. CAUSES OF ACTION

COUNT I

ERISA Prohibited Transactions

(Violations of § 406(b)(1) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b)(1))

145. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

146. Defendant State Street Bank is a fiduciary based on its discretionary control over Plan assets for the purposes of FX transactions.

147. ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b), prohibits transactions between a plan and a fiduciary that amount to self-dealing. Plaintiffs allege that State Street's FX trading practices amounted to self-dealing because State Street Bank, through its Global Markets division, consistently used its discretionary control over Plan assets to select for itself the most favorable FX rate based on the range of the day, regardless of the actual rate at the time the transaction occurred, and pocketed the difference between the two rates, causing its fiduciary clients, the Plaintiffs' Plans, and other members of the Proposed Class to suffer losses.

148. State Street's practice of FX transaction rate manipulation was nothing less than a fiduciary dealing with the assets of a plan for its own account. Fiduciary self-dealing is categorically prohibited by ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b).

149. Pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(2) and (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) & (3), State Street Bank is liable to restore the losses to the Plans and provide other appropriate equitable relief.

COUNT II

Breach of Duties of Prudence and Loyalty

(Violation of § 404 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104)

150. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

151. Defendant State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, is an "investment manager" within the meaning of ERISA section 3(38), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(38), because it (i) has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of plan assets placed in its custody; (ii) is a bank within the meaning of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940; and (iii) has acknowledged in writing that it is a fiduciary with respect to the Plans.

152. As a fiduciary under ERISA, State Street Bank is bound by the duties of prudence and loyalty laid out in ERISA section 404(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1). These duties mean that as an investment manager for the Plaintiffs' Plans, State Street Bank is bound to act in the customer's interest when transacting business for the account, and thus bound, for example, to disclose fully to the Plans all the details of the relevant FX trading transactions it was undertaking, or negotiating on behalf of the funds, including the mark-ups or mark-downs that the funds were receiving for the FX trades.

153. As a fiduciary, State Street also had a duty to monitor its internal Global Markets division. Through its Global Markets division, State Street Bank knew that it was charging unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for the non-negotiated trades rather than the actual transaction rates and pocketing the difference.

154. State Street Bank has breached its ERISA fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty because it knew that its Global Markets division was charging the Plans (or the commingled funds in which the Plans invested) unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for FX trading that were unfavorable or unreasonable, above the transactional rates, and/or in excess of what Global Markets had agreed to charge, but did not ensure, by negotiation or otherwise, that Global Market's rates were in the best interest of the Plans.

155. State Street, through its Global Markets division, has breached the duties of prudence and loyalty by charging the Plans (or the commingled Funds in which the Plans invested) unauthorized mark-ups or mark-downs over the actual FX trade rates that were unfavorable or unreasonable, above the market rates, and/or in excess of what it had agreed to charge.

156. These breaches of fiduciary duty involved assets of the Plans on which fees were levied by State Street Bank. .

157. Section 409(a) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), imposes liability on State Street Bank for these breaches and requires State Street Bank to make good to the Plans the losses resulting from its breaches.

158. To enforce the relief available under ERISA section 409(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), Plaintiffs assert this claim against State Street Bank under ERISA section 502(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2).

159. Further, pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3), State Street Bank must provide other appropriate equitable relief to redress its breaches of duty and enforce its fiduciary duties.

COUNT III

ERISA Prohibited Transactions

(Violations of § 406(a)(1)(C) & (D) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C) & (D))

160. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

161. ERISA section 406(a)(1)(C), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C), provides that a fiduciary shall not cause a plan to engage in a transaction if the fiduciary knows or should know that the transaction constitutes a direct or indirect furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between the plan and a party in interest.

162. ERISA section 406(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D), provides that a fiduciary shall not cause a plan to engage in a transaction if the fiduciary knows or should know that the transaction constitutes a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of a party in interest, of any assets of the plan.

163. As noted above, State Street Bank is a fiduciary with respect to the Plans.

164. State Street Bank, State Street Global Advisors, and State Street Global Markets are "affiliates" within the meaning of the Prohibited Transaction Exemption and they directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, control, are controlled by, or are under common control with each other.

165. Global Markets, as an affiliate of State Street Bank, is a "party in interest" within the meaning of ERISA section 3(14), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14), for at least two independently sufficient reasons: it is a functional fiduciary with respect to the Plans, and it is a person providing services to the Plans.

166. By allowing Global Markets to manipulate FX transaction prices to the detriment of the plan and pocket the difference between the actual transaction rate and the rate selected by Global Markets, State Street Bank violated ERISA section 406(a)(1)(C) & (D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C) & (D). State Street Bank caused the Plans to engage in transactions while knowing that such transactions constituted a direct or indirect transfer of assets of the Plans to a party in interest, Global Markets.

167. While ERISA section 408(b)(18), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18), provides an exemption from the prohibitions of ERISA section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), for foreign currency exchanges between an employee benefit plan and a bank or a broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is a party in interest with respect to a plan, the exemption only applies if, at the time the FX transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions, and if the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) does not have investment discretion, or provide investment advice, with respect to the transaction. The exemption does not apply here for two independently sufficient reasons: (1) the terms of the FX transactions, by which Global Markets essentially ensured that its clients would always get the worst exchange rate of the day, were indeed less favorable to the Plans than comparable arm's-length transactions, and (2) State Street, SSgA, and Global Markets had investment discretion (and SSgA provided investment advice) with respect to the investment of plan assets when it entered into the transactions. Thus, State Street's FX trades do not fall under the narrow exemption of section 408(b)(18).

168. Pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(2) & (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) & (3), State Street Bank is liable to restore the losses to the Plans and provide other appropriate equitable relief.

VII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for relief as follows:

1. Declare that the Defendant has violated ERISA's prohibited transactions provisions;

2. Declare that the Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA;

3. Issue an order compelling a proper accounting of the FX transactions in which the Plans and other members of the Proposed Class have engaged;

4. Issue an order compelling Defendant to restore all losses caused to the Plans (or that will be caused to the Plans after the filing of this Complaint);

5. Issue an order compelling the Defendant to disgorge all fees paid and incurred to Defendant or its affiliates (or that will be paid or incurred by the Plans after the filing of this Complaint), including any profits thereon;

6. Order equitable restitution and other appropriate equitable monetary relief against the Defendant;

7. Award such other equitable, injunctive, or remedial relief as may be appropriate, including the permanent removal of the Defendant from any positions of trust with respect to the Plans and the appointment of independent fiduciaries to serve as FX custodian to the Plans;

8. That this action be certified as a class action and that the Class be designated to receive the amounts restored to the Plans by Defendant and a constructive trust be established for distribution to the extent required by law;

9. Enjoin Defendant collectively, and each affiliate individually, from any further violations of their ERISA fiduciary responsibilities, obligations, and duties;

10. Award Plaintiffs their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to ERISA section 502(g), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g) and/or the Common Fund doctrine; and

11. Award such other and further relief as the Court deems equitable and just.

JURY DEMAND

Plaintiffs hereby demand a jury on all issues so triable.

I didn't get the email from Brian. So I don't intend to respond.
Others who receive the email Caroline should respond. I am only seeking the same powers but all of the lead counsel in all other cases I've been in received.

Of course I intend to honor all commitments, contracts, obligations, agreements, understandings buy what ever name or title. But especially those that are in writing like Brian's.

> 8(n). Plan of Allocation. . . . The amount allocated to the ERISA Plans and Investment Companies and other Settlement Class Members shall be increased or decreased by their proportional share (with respect to the Class Settlement Amount) of any interest, costs (including costs of notice and administration), expenses (including taxes), and fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' Counsel obtained or paid pursuant to permission of the Court. However, notice and administration expenses attributable solely to the claims of Class Members categorized as Group Trusts shall be paid solely out of the ERISA allocation, and the cost of any ERISA Independent Fiduciary shall be borne solely by SSBT and shall not be paid out of the Class Settlement Amount.

> 12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

My gut tells me they will press for a fee agreement deal or withhold signature at some point in the process. They may threaten their own fee app. State street may want us all on the dotted line but I wanted to raise it and have you think about it. It may be too late.

Robert

I have signoff from the ERISA counsel on the fee division between the ERISA and Consumer counsel that we discussed this morning. Attached is a draft agreement that reflects the 91%/9% split.

I have received approval from the other ERISA counsel.

Regards,

Lynn

AGREEMENT BETWEEN COUNSEL FOR CONSUMER AND ERISA PLAINTIFFS
REGARDING DIVISION OF ATTORNEYS' FEES

This Agreement Between Counsel For Consumer And ERISA Plaintiffs Regarding Division Of Attorneys' Fees (the "Agreement") is made and entered into by and between: Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton & Naumes, LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP (collectively, "Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs"), on the one hand, and McTigue Law LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, Beins, Axelrod, P.C., Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, and Keller Rohrback L.L.P. (collectively, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs), on the other hand (the "Parties"). This Agreement shall be effective as of _____, 2013.

RECITALS

WHEREAS, Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs have filed the lawsuit captioned Arkansas Teacher Retirement System vs. State Street Corporation, et. al., No. 11-cv-10230 MLW ("ARTRS"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), and a putative class of all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis alleging state law claims against State Street Corporation, State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but no claims under ERISA.

1. WHEREAS, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs have filed two lawsuits captioned Arnold Henriquez, et. al., vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company,, et. al., No. 11-cv-12049 MLW ("Henriquez"), and Andover Companies, et. al., vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company, No. 12-cv-11698 MLW ("Andover"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their clients, Arnold Henriquez (as a participant and beneficiary of the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan), Michael T. Cohn (as a participant and beneficiary of the Citigroup 401(k) Plan), William R. Taylor and Richard A. Sutherland (each as participants and beneficiaries of the Retirement Plan of Johnson & Johnson), Alan Kober as a Trustee of The Andover Companies' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, as a participant and beneficiary of The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan), and putative classes of private (ERISA) pension plans for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis, alleging breaches of federal ERISA law against State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but none of the other state law claims alleged by ARTRS.

WHEREAS, the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases are all pending before the same judge and are being mediated and litigated together and the Parties believe that it is in the best interests of their respective clients and the putative classes that they are seeking to represent that, where appropriate and consistent with their obligations to advocate for their respective clients, they work cooperatively in the litigation against State Street Corporation and the other defendants, and further, that agreeing to a division of attorneys' fees, as set forth below, is in the best interests of their respective clients.

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises contained herein, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parties agree that any attorneys' fee agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court in connection with the ARTRS, Andover or Henriquez cases, whether the product of settlement or litigated resolution of the cases, shall be divided 91 % to Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs and 9 % to Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs (the "Division of Fees").

2. The Parties agree that the Division of Fees shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise.
3. The Parties agree that they will each remain responsible for representing the interests of their respective clients and that nothing herein limits in any way their obligations to represent and exercise independent judgment on behalf of their respective clients.
4. The Parties agree that the terms of this Agreement may be disclosed to the Court, if any of them believes it appropriate to do so.
5. The Parties represent that they have disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein.
6. This Agreement does not impact or change the Parties' rights and ability to seek the reimbursement of litigation expenses; nor does it contain any agreement on the sharing of expenses.
7. This Agreement is governed by the substantive law of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

This Agreement Between Counsel For Consumer And ERISA Plaintiffs Regarding Division Of Attorneys' Fees (the "Agreement") is made and entered into by and between: Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton & Naumes, LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP (collectively, "Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs"), on the one hand, and McTigue Law LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, Beins, Axelrod, P.C., Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, and Keller Rohrback L.L.P. (collectively, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs), on the other hand (the "Parties"). This Agreement shall be effective as of _____, 2013.

RECITALS

WHEREAS, Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs have filed the lawsuit captioned Arkansas Teacher Retirement System vs. State Street Corporation, et. al., No. 11-cv-10230 MLW ("ARTRS"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), and a putative class of all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis alleging state law claims against State Street Corporation, State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but no claims under ERISA.

1. WHEREAS, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs have filed two lawsuits captioned Arnold Henriquez, et. al. vs. State Street Bank and Trust, et. al., No. 11-cv-12049 MLW ("Henriquez"), and Andover Companies, et. al., vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company, No. 12-cv-11698 MLW ("Andover"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their clients, Arnold Henriquez (as a participant and beneficiary of the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan), Michael T. Cohn (as a participant and beneficiary of the Citigroup 401(k) Plan), William R. Taylor and Richard A. Sutherland (each as participants and beneficiaries of the Retirement Plan of Johnson & Johnson), Alan Kober as a Trustee of The Andover Companies' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, as a participant and beneficiary of The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan), and putative classes of private (ERISA) pension plans for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis, alleging breaches of federal ERISA law against State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but none of the other state law claims alleged by ARTRS.

WHEREAS, the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases are all pending before the same judge and are being mediated and litigated together and the Parties believe that it is in the best interests of their respective clients and the putative classes that they are seeking to represent that, where appropriate and consistent with their obligations to advocate for their respective clients, they work cooperatively in the litigation against State Street Corporation and the other defendants, and further, that agreeing to a division of attorneys' fees, as set forth below, is in the best interests of their respective clients.

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises contained herein, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parties agree that any attorneys' fee agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court in connection with the ARTRS, Andover ~~and~~ or Henriquez cases, whether the product of settlement or litigated resolution of the cases, shall be divided __ % to Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs and __ % to Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs (the "Division of Fees").

2. The Parties agree that the Division of Fees shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise.
3. The Parties agree that they will each remain responsible for representing the interests of their respective clients and that nothing herein limits in any way their obligations to represent and exercise independent judgment on behalf of their respective clients.
4. The Parties agree that the terms of this Agreement may be disclosed to the Court, if any of them believes it appropriate to do so.
5. The Parties represent that they have disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein.
6. This Agreement does not impact or change the Parties' rights and ability to seek the reimbursement of litigation expenses; nor does it contain any agreement on the sharing of expenses.
7. This Agreement is governed by the substantive law of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

First month bill. I have not heard a thing from Chiplock on how he is doing....He has not been playing nice in the sand box lately. I emailed him yesterday asking for a call with Belfi to discuss this. No response.

This is the best way to jack up the loadstar though.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corporation
Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230-MLW (D. Mass.)

Dear Counsel:

I am pleased we were able to come to terms and will be working together in this matter. I have outlined below the terms of the agreement we have reached.

Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher") will be represented in the action by Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow") as Lead Counsel, and Thornton & Naumes LLP ("Thornton & Naumes") and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") will serve as additional counsel for Arkansas Teacher in this action.

Arkansas Teacher has made an application to the Court for appointment of its selection of Labaton Sucharow as Interim Lead Counsel. In the event that the Court appoints Labaton Sucharow as interim Lead Counsel and subsequently as Lead Counsel, we agree as follows:

We agree that our firms will act in good faith to divide the work so that each of the firms performs at least 20% of the work and each will receive at least 20% of the fees awarded in this matter. The remaining 40% of the fees awarded shall be allocated in good faith at the conclusion of the case based on each firms' actual time spent on this matter..

There is an "off the top" obligation to referring counsel of 6% of the fees awarded. In addition, we agree to exchange on a quarterly basis our then current lodestar reports showing quarterly and aggregate billings in this matter.

We also agree that any dispute arising under this agreement or in this case may not be litigated in court and that all such disputes or claims shall be resolved, upon election of any party, through binding arbitration conducted pursuant to the applicable rules of the American Arbitration Association in any jurisdiction in which any of the firms reside.

Please sign below indicating your agreement to these terms.

Very truly yours,

Christopher Keller, Esq.

Accepted and agreed by:

Thornton & Naumes LLP

_____ Date: _____

Michael P. Thornton, Esq.

Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP

_____ Date: _____

Not to be difficult, but I don't see how that matters. It would seem that the respective lodestars, contributions, etc. are not terribly divergent. And not a skeptical judge, as far as we can tell. A very different situation, in other words, from BNYM (which I know doesn't involve you, Larry, but seems to be coloring this discussion).

Dan, agreement among our three firms it's that after payment of all of the council I was three firms show each receive 20% with the 40% balance to be determined at a later date. If this is the understanding you are referring to but I can't confirm it. Please advise.

If you more willing to resend your email and include them,we can see if there is any disagreement as to what our understanding is/was.

Dear all,

We've had some additional exchanges about the term sheet and, specifically, para 8(n). I believe the attached draft resolves those issues and that there is consensus that the attached accurately reflects the basic DOL fee deal. If you disagree, please let us know asap.

When someone wants to send this to Paine, or the DOL, I will need a run a different redline for them.

Thanks

David
Thanks for sending this. Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.

Two things:

1. I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down. So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?

What do you think??

Lynn

Subject: SST--Proposed Revision to Term Sheet for DOL Deal

All: The below reflects our proposed revisions to the Term Sheet (in red boldface) to reflect the imminent deal with the DOL on fees and expenses as certain of us discussed this morning (DOL has advised that they want the deal memorialized in the Term Sheet). Please comment. Thanks.

8(n). Plan of Allocation. . . . The amount allocated to the ERISA Plans and Investment Companies and other Settlement Class Members shall be increased or decreased by their proportional share (with respect to the Class Settlement Amount) of any interest, costs (including costs of notice and administration), expenses (including taxes), and fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' Counsel obtained or paid pursuant to permission of the Court. However, notice and administration expenses attributable solely to the claims of Class Members categorized as Group Trusts shall be paid solely out of the ERISA allocation, and the cost of any ERISA Independent Fiduciary shall be borne solely by SSBT and shall not be paid out of the Class Settlement Amount.

12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

Also, I believe that there are other cases and other agreements which are influencing people's desire to either reach agreement now or later.

I don't have a dog in the hunt and don't want to be drawn into it.

I apologize for any mistakes but I am not in a place where I can edit my emails so I'm just dictating them I'm hoping that spell correct doesn't fuck me up too much.&

I am speaking to Paine today at around 10 AM to both report to him and get his update.
I'll report back and advise whether we should send the revised term sheet. I expect we should but let's hold off for another hour.

Thanks for sending this.& Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.
&
Two things:
1.& I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word “fees”—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won’t be going up or down.& & So—question—can we get rid of the word “fees” in this paragraph—does it still work?
&
What do you think??

Thank you for the tip Dan. I did say something like that on the call, but preceded it by saying it was a guess and that I would have to ask Mike Lesser for the actual figure at that point which of course is not complete as with the other firms. I appreciate your concern and I guess I can only assure you that it generally our policy to truthful and accurate hour claims.

No problem. It may be tomorrow since I have to go back to archives.

In the meantime, while we're on the subject of credibility, I want to point out that we need to be consistent and credible with our lodestar reporting in State Street. We are gathering final lodestar reports now, but I heard third-hand that Mike recently said on a call (that I wasn't on) that Thornton Law Firm was showing $14 million. That number does not comport with the hours Mike Lesser told me for Thornton as of June 29 (around 12,750), which make more sense given what we know about the work that was done. I am hopeful Mike T. simply misspoke or was guessing when he said $14 million and that we are not going to suddenly see an additional 12,000 hours mysteriously appear on Thornton Law Firm's behalf. I would expect that you would object if LCHB or Labaton tried something like that, and ERISA counsel certainly will (and tie up this process as long as possible) if they suspect anything remotely amiss on that front. Let's not make problems for ourselves that we don't need. Also recognize that your reviewers were all housed outside of your firm and their respective overhead and facilities expenses were paid for by others, which we were happy to do as a courtesy. Thanks.

Garrett,

Thanks for your email and I actually think it's useful so that Mike and Bob can participate in this.

This idea of "protection" in BNYM is where I think we keep talking past each other. The bottom line is that LCHB is the least protected of all in that case. This is the fact that has kept me up at night for 2.5 years while we've continued pouring lodestar into that case (because we had to). We invested the most in order to try to get a class certified there and to sufficiently man 110 depositions, defend counterclaims, etc., but if Judge Kaplan takes a negative view of the value of document review/analysis (our arguments to the contrary notwithstanding), then LCHB will get hit the hardest. You are totally shielded from this because you didn't invest in document review. In other words, LCHB has a real risk of actually losing money in BNYM. You have virtually no risk of that. If Thornton is not treated "fairly" in BNYM by the Court it will be because nobody (least of all LCHB) was treated "fairly." It's not clear to me what it is you expect in that circumstance.

The $10 million in State Street that you mention below also does not make up for LCHB's investment in that case. And we've certainly contributed our share to the result in State Street, having litigated BNYM (thus substantially increasing the value of State Street) and developed the ch. 93A theory (the most readily certifiable claim in State Street, and by far the most valuable).

Dan,

I tried to call you but you are out. I think these things are best discussed rather than emailed so please call my cell when you can 6174134892 as I do not have yours.

However a few points. I do not dismiss your efforts in Mellon but your guaranteed percentage was established years prior to a Mellon result. What I am pointing out is the inequities of our different positions. In Mellon, when we had created that case by developing the fx case all that we got was some work that resulted in $1.5 million in time. Also please elaborate on your statement that "the work was not getting done".

Now contrast that to state street where you had no client and no concept (and Mellon was years from setting) and Mike Thornton demands that you get a floor of 20% which is probably worth about $10 million.

You must agree you are in a much better position in state street than we are in Mellon. As I have said to Bob, we are only looking for a fair outcome in these matters. I think you would agree we have protected you better in state street than we are protected in Mellon. Once we have an idea of what our Mellon number looks like then we can discuss how to approach the balance of the 40% with Labaton .

Garrett,

I know you didn't really mean to diminish LCHB's role in creating the result in BNY Mellon, at extraordinary risk to itself, which in turn doubled the value of State Street. You need to know that we advocated for you guys too, getting you a role in the BNYM class case (and pushing back against several co-counsel in the process) when you weren't actually owed one. I also gave your firm more assignments than others at the outset in BNYM, until it became clear that the work simply wasn't getting done. In other words, we've each tried to look out for the other in the past. This has been far from a one-way street.

As you know, Judge Kaplan controls everyone's fate in BNYM and LCHB has the most risk before him, having invested the most. We asked for a multiplier for your firm that is much larger than anyone else's, and I really, truly hope that he grants that request.

Thanks,

Dan

Bob,

I am driving but took a quick look at your email and pulled over to type this. I think you are misunderstood. I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter. As I have said before, because of Mike Thornton's advocacy, you are guaranteed at least 20% of the State Street case in which you have no client and did not develop the concept. Yet, we have no corresponding protection in the Mellon matter. Happy to discuss further at any time.

Garrett,

I called and suggested that we have a meeting together with the Labaton people to talk about putting in writing an understanding of the fee division in this case.

You, Mike and I have discussed the State Street fee division and have focused on the existing verbal understanding that was reached on November 9, 2010, with Chris Keller. We agreed that among the three firms we will each have a 20% interest in the fee with the balance to be divided later. Of course, we also have to factor in the 9% that ERISA counsel get pursuant to written agreement and a provision for Arkansas local counsel.

You and I have agreed that it would be equitable to divide the balance of the fee with Labaton getting 50% and each of our firms 25%. This would result in a fee division as follows:

Labaton 33.0 (20 + 13)

Thornton 26.5 (20 + 6.5)

Lieff Cabraser 26.5 (20 + 6.5)

ERISA 9.0

Arkansas Local 5.0

100.0%

If we put the above into an agreement among the three firms, that would certainly provide protection for everyone.

Bob

Subject: Hours for STT AR

Here is what you need to know about the chart:

- All of the hours are taken from LCHB's chart where there were mentions of discussions with either "co-counsel" "team" or, of course, Mike Lesser and/orMPT, GJB. . .EXCEPT those hours that have annotations next to them (mediation; memo etc...).
- Those hours are not from the LCHB chart and are based on the information I could gather from my own emails and/or files. They include historical records I took during the preparation of the complaint and the opp to MTD, as well as recent hours relating to the ppt presentations. I am sure these are not complete. I will continue to dig through my files and emails for more.

- I have added hours for MPT and/or GBJ where it was either indicated on the LCHB chart, or I have other documentary evidence of them being included. Obviously, there is going to be more hours for them; we need to determine how to estimate these.

- What YOU need to do:
  - Go back through all of your emails and/or word documents, excel sheets, presentations (look for the 'date created' meta data), doc review, etc. . . and add your time on the appropriate date.
  - If you see a date where I have already included hours for you, it is from the LCHB information. I would check your email or document against that date—and the LCHB chart and description—and make sure it is not duplicative.
  - If it is not, add the date into the excel chart; your hours; mine (if you think applicable); and a note of what you did (like I already have for mine) so we can have a basis to construct a larger and more complete timesheet later.

- Then, we can simply combine the total hours from this new chart with the doc review hours and give a total figure.

I am uncertain as to whether we advised all of you of the results of our telephone call to Suzanne Riley. The call lasted one hour and Lynn and I did our best to convince a mid level government lawyer that compromise is the essence of negotiation without success. The problem is that she has no power to negotiate. We pushed for 290/10 split and she was at 280/20 with a willingness to agree to 282/18 , which was where we were when we began. She is going to speak to her superiors on Monday and we will talk to her one last time. Bob

I have no problem with you guys trying one additional time to secure a "better deal". I agree that consistency in the percentages is the best way forward and the only way of doing that is to give the DOL credit for a certain amount out of the 300 million and applying for an across the board percentage of 25% on the balance. This is what I thought we agreed to two conversations ago but I was taken aback in the recent conversation by the vehemence against the $18 million reduction which has been negotiated to to achieve the $10.5 million fee demand by DOL.
Obviously any number lower than 18 million is a benefit to us. In any event now that you set the call up you might as well take a crack at it (without fracturing the relationship).

In order to accomplish this we need to reduce our settlement to $282 M and to let the DOL take credit for 18M. If we are to make one more stab at it then it would be to try to make our settlement $290M and the DOL 10M. This would give us a fee request of 72.5 rather that 70.5. Is this worth the effort of one more call? I gather that you and Carl are saying "no" and Mike is saying "yes". The structure of the settlement would be the same as BNYM where we have 14M that the DOL got not being included for purposes of our fee request. Lynn and I have a call scheduled with the DOL at 11 PDT We can make a soft pitch for an extra 8M (from 282 to 290) This has been turned down by the DOL before. As lead counsel do you want us to proceed or not? The important thing to me is consistency of the fee request at 25% and not the extra 8M.

&
I am happy to report that we have a deal with the DOL on the amount of atty fees we can charge in the Class cases.
&
They have agreed that they are agreeable for us to charge the ERISA plans-& $10.9 million atty fees.& & To put it another way- that the settlement amount going to ERISA plans "net of fees" will be $49.1 million
&
They understand that we have not yet decided how we want to present the settlement—and they are agnostic on the structure.& & They would like to see how we are going to phrase it—to make sure that we are living up to this agreement---&
But they are fine with:
1.& We can ask the Court for whatever percentage fee we want- as long as the ERISA plans are only charged $10.9 million.
2.& We can phrase the settlement amount as whatever we want—although they are expecting us to say that the class settlement amount was $300 million.& However- if we want to say it is some lesser amount—or say that we are not seeking fees on the whole portion of the $60 million gross recovery- that is our business.
In other words—they & have given us a green light on how we describe it.& & & Based on this understanding they will not object to our fee application.
&
They also understand that "Litigation costs" will be charged pro rata on the whole $300 million.
&
Next step--- they would like to see how we are going to phrase this----- ie: by putting something in our term sheet- or them putting something in their term sheet- or some other writing, etc.
&
Now that we know the numbers—let's go back to a discussion of how we are going to present this in the papers.
&
One last thing—please caution everyone in your firms—that we should not start having separate discussion with the DOL on how to phrase the ERISA fee issue.& Once we come up with the language, I will volunteer to deal with the DOL.
&

But the bottom line—we have a deal for $10.9 million ERISA fees.& & & & Let's not discuss this on today's "plan of allocation call" at 2 pm Eastern.& & The DOL will be circulating a new dial in number for that call = as the current number doesn't work.

5. Requested Information

5.2 If with a firm, provide a description of your law firm, including historical background, number and location of firm offices, number of attorneys, and major areas of practice.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow LLP was established in 1963 in New York City. At the firm's inception, the majority of the practice was commercial work and less than half the work was contingent litigation. Labaton Sucharow began providing securities litigation consulting services to public pension plans in 1995, the year of the passage of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA).

Currently, two-thirds of the firm's approximately 55 lawyers are dedicated to the prosecution of securities class actions, institutional investor "opt out" cases, and other shareholder actions. Labaton Sucharow has one office location where the services discussed herein would be performed. The firm is located at 140 Broadway, New York, NY 10005; Tel: (212) 907-0700. Labaton Sucharow currently has approximately 55 attorneys, 17 paralegals and 69 additional support staff. Class action securities litigation and related portfolio monitoring services represent Labaton Sucharow's principal practice area and source of revenue. The firm also maintains an active antitrust class action practice.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron, LLP was established in 2005 by Timothy P. Herron and Damon J. Chargois after working together and separately in commercial, class action, mass tort and insurance defense litigation for fourteen (14) plus years. Both attorneys, along with partner, Che Williamson are licensed in all federal and state courts in Arkansas and Texas. Chargois & Herron began providing securities litigation services in 2006 and have been pleased to achieve significant monetary results for public pension plans since that time.

Currently, we have offices in Little Rock, Arkansas and The Woodlands, Texas with six full-time practicing attorneys who have held law licenses as follows: (Timothy Herron – 28 years), (Che Williamson – 18 years), (Kamran Masheyekh – 18 years), (Damon Chargois – 14 years), (Carlos Fernandez – 5 years) and (Kirk Chargois – 2 years). Our primary address is 2201 Timberloch Place, Suite 110, The Woodlands, Texas 77380; (281) 444-0604.

5.3 State whether your response excludes any services contemplated by the RFQ set forth in the scope of services in section 3.2.

Labaton Sucharow's and Chargois & Herron's responses do not exclude any services contemplated by the RFQ set forth in the scope of services in section 3.2.

5.4 State whether your firm is able to conduct ongoing client portfolio monitoring (tracking portfolio trading and cross-referencing the trading against potential securities claims) by reviewing the System's portfolio losses on a regular basis, investigating potential claims, preparing detailed reports of findings; and presenting the findings to ATRS.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow is committed to high-level client service. A major component of the litigation and client services that we propose to the ATRS is our portfolio monitoring program, that utilizes a full compliment of professional analyses as well as out proprietary software system called LPAS©.

We believe that a strong analysis and quick determination of possible financial exposure can be the first line of defense when corporate misconduct and fraud result in investment losses.

Identification In its Case Evaluation Group, Labaton Sucharow has assembled several attorneys and other professionals with decades of combined experience distilling information in the marketplace in an effort to uncover and investigate instances of potential securities fraud on behalf of our clients. Labaton Sucharow subscribes to and monitors sophisticated financial research services, including Bloomberg and Thomson Reuters, the same tools used by analysts at major financial services firms. We use these information services to monitor news coverage and market activity throughout the day to identify potential securities law violations and analyze the impact of the claims on our clients' portfolios. Among the other sources we monitor are: (i) the Federal Securities Law Reports published by CCH; (ii) the Securities Class Action Services database maintained by the Riskmetrics Group; (iii) Stanford Law School's Securities Class Action Clearinghouse; and (iv) other legal journals and newspapers.

The Group includes five attorneys, led by Christopher Keller, who have many years of experience performing this specialized function. The Group also includes two Wall Street analysts, several damages analysts, and private investigators formerly with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This group has been pivotal to enhancing Labaton's institutional shareholder services by being able to marshall the critical facts necessary to prevail in complex securities class action litigation.

Analysis When a security suffers a significant decline in value or when litigation has been commenced against a company, we commence a multi-tiered analysis of the situation. The analysis includes early identification and assembly of facts, legal and factual analysis and ranking (using a proprietary grading system that allows us to objectively rate the facts), determination of the magnitude of the alleged fraud (in terms of class-wide damages), and investigation of non-public information and sources. This in-depth review yields a "grade" for the case that reflects our analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the claim. This grade is based upon a number of factors, including the size of the company, evidence of intentional or reckless wrongdoing, the types of issues involved (including any earnings restatements or other accounting issues), whether there is an ongoing governmental investigation, the potential liability of third-party defendants such as auditors or underwriters, the solvency of the defendant, and whether there was a significant stock price decline in reaction to the alleged wrongdoing. The findings are captured in a summary report. An example of such a review is attached as Exhibit A.

Review of losses If we discover that the ATRS invested in a company that has engaged in allegedly fraudulent behavior, we quickly can assess the losses incurred. This loss amount is an estimated loss as limited by the PSLRA, which is not the same as your legally compensable damages. To that end, LPAS (further discussed in Section 5.5, below), allows us to quickly quantify our clients' financial exposure to the security at issue so that we may advise our clients on the strength of their position to pursue litigation, either individually or as a lead plaintiff on behalf of a class of investors. This assessment can be made as soon as a situation has been identified, depending on the data that is available to us, and is an essential component of the advice we could provide to the ATRS on the likelihood of its success were the ATRS to move to be appointed Lead Plaintiffs. Whether our advice is to pursue litigation or not, it is based on our client's true financial interest in the litigation and the merits of the case.

Reporting Included in our analysis of the case, is an analysis of the options available to our clients. If a case meets certain criteria, we will inform the ATRS about the issues involved in the case, and we may request that the ATRS research their holdings so that we can provide an analysis of the ATRS's financial exposure. On a case-by-case basis, we will provide a comprehensive legal analysis for the client's review. An example of such a review is attached as Exhibit B. Additionally we provide reports each quarter that recite our findings for the cases we have reviewed in prior periods and the results of our research. Please refer to Exhibit C for an example of a Quarterly Report.

Many institutional clients expect and receive regular oral or written updates concerning matters of potential interest. Typically, we would first discuss the issues of a specific case that we are analyzing with the ATRS before a report is submitted. However, other reports – primarily our quarterly reports and any urgent/time-sensitive matter that we are bringing to the ATRS's attention – might be transmitted via e-mail to our contact at the ATRS without a formal discussion beforehand. The decision to commence an action and overall litigation strategy are always made after close consultation between Labaton Sucharow and our client, and at a client's request, Labaton Sucharow will circulate drafts of court filings well in advance of filing dates for review and comment. Monitoring services will be handled by partner, Christopher Keller, and the overall relationship would be managed by partner, Eric Belfi. Matters connected to litigation would be managed by Mr. Belfi and chairman, Mr. Lawrence Sucharow. Please see Exhibit D, to view the full resume of each attorney.

Recommendation We are protective of our institutional clients and therefore proceed carefully before recommending legal action. Quite often, the results of our analysis indicate that it is not advisable for the client to participate as a lead plaintiff, because the amount of the loss is not significant or participating as a lead plaintiff may not be in the client's best interests for other reasons. If we determine that claims lack merit or are weak, we will so advise. A law firm cannot guarantee success in securities litigation, but according to the annual securities class actions study published by Cornerstone Research, for the past three years Labaton Sucharow, on a percentage basis, recovers more than any other plaintiffs' class action firm.

In any case, our recommendation will be an informed one, suited to the needs of the client. Labaton Sucharow recognizes that clients desire varying levels of involvement with these processes, and the firm certainly can provide training to effectively supervise and assist in these activities.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has six attorneys and three paralegals with decades of combined experience in monitoring and researching corporations and the market in analyzing conduct with an eye toward discovering possible impropriety. Additionally, we work closely with counsel in New York, including Labaton Sucharow, and California in order to stay abreast of trends and activities in the market. We are free to utilize their resources and they ours – at any time in an effort to provide the best service to our institutional investor clients.

Chargois & Herron owns an Alabama company called 270 Discovery Solutions which provides document research, indexing and computer inputting of the millions of items of information contained in the documents that are routinely produced – usually under court order – in securities class action litigation. Uniquely, our company is staffed almost entirely by licensed attorneys, numbering in excess of 25 attorneys. This puts Chargois & Herron in a unique and special position to handle any securities litigation matter, regardless of size.

5.5 State whether your firm has the ability to monitor the ATRS portfolio in this regard through access to the ATRS custodial account, rather than requesting ATRS staff for information regarding securities holdings.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Yes, Labaton Sucharow has the ability to monitor the ATRS portfolio through access to the ATRS custodial account. We have relationships with all of the major custodial banks in the U.S. and have handled multiple systems when retrieving our clients' data. Therefore, the necessary information is gathered without intrusion into our clients' day-to-day business. At the outset, a minimal effort is required to set up the authorization and permissions for our access to the ATRS portfolio. Beyond that, our team handles the rest of the communications with the custodian and the retrieval of the ATRS portfolio records.

Labaton Sucharow has invested significant resources to develop and maintain an infrastructure and software program to accomplish this for our clients. Labaton Portfolio Analysis System (LPAS) is a unique and proprietary database management and software application that allows us to capture our clients' trading information and over time build a historical record of the transactions, housed in our internal, secure database. In particular, with access to our clients' historic trading records, LPAS allows us to monitor the data and identify eligible losses. When a new situation is identified, LPAS identifies matches between the securities owned by ATRS and will perform an analysis of their financial exposure, using court-approved evaluation models. Please see Exhibit E for a description of LPAS.

Additionally, Labaton Sucharow has access to comprehensive information with respect to securities class action settlements. The firm can provide this information to the ATRS's custodian bank at no charge and make all necessary forms available to the custodian.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has the ability to monitor the ATRS through access to the ATRS custodial account, rather than requesting ATRS staff for information regarding securities holdings.

5.6 Subject to the consent of clients as required by applicable ethics rules, provide a listing of representative clients. Responses may, with the consent of the clients, include names and phone numbers of specific references. Subject to the clients' consent, identify specifically any pension plans or other major institutional investors, either private or public, to which you render or have rendered significant legal services concerning the relevant subject area(s) during the past year. If no clients consent, or if you elect not to request such consent, please so state and describe the representative clients in general terms to support your firm's qualification and experience to represent ATRS.

5.7 Provide a very brief summary resume describing the education, legal or investment experience, recent speaking engagements, and a list of significant, relevant publications of the attorney or attorneys proposed to work as lead attorney(s).

Response of Labaton Sucharow

The number and identity of the Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron attorneys and other legal professionals who would be assigned to a securities litigation matter on behalf of the ATRS would vary depending on the size, complexity and issues in any given case. Assuming that a particular case involved complex accounting issues, large numbers of documents, and dozens of fact and expert witnesses, the team likely would be comprised of the following attorneys from Labaton Sucharow: Eric J. Belfi, Lawrence A. Sucharow, Thomas A. Dubbs, Christopher J. Keller, Zachary M. Ratzman, Ann E. Gittleman, and Krista T. Rosen; and Damon J. Chargois, Timothy P. Herron, Kamran Mashayekh, and Che D. Williamson from Chargois & Herron. To view the full resume of each attorney, please see Exhibit D.

Eric J. Belfi, a partner with the firm, is an accomplished litigator in a broad range of commercial matters. He concentrates his practice in the investigation and initiation of securities and shareholder class actions, with an emphasis on the representation of major international and domestic pension funds and other institutional investors. Prior to entering private practice, Mr. Belfi served as an Assistant Attorney General for the State of New York and an Assistant District Attorney for the County of Westchester, New York. As a prosecutor, Mr. Belfi investigated and prosecuted numerous white-collar criminal cases, including securities law violations. In this capacity, he presented hundreds of cases to the grand jury and obtained numerous felony convictions after jury trials.

Mr. Belfi is a regular speaker and author on issues surrounding securities litigation, with a focus on international institutional investors. He was invited to speak at the prestigious Eurosharehoders Annual Conference, in Brussels, in February 2008. Most recently, he spoke regarding securities class actions at the William H. Bowen School of Law at the University of Arkansas in June of 2008. Mr. Belfi is the co-author of The Proportionate Trading Model: Real Science or Junk Science? 52 Cleveland St. L.

Rev. 391 (2004-05) and "International Strategic Partnerships to Prosecute Securities Class Actions, Investment & Pensions Europe," Investments & Pensions Europe, 2005.

He received a B.A. from Georgetown University in 1992 and a J.D. from St. John's University School of Law in 1995.

Lawrence A. Sucharow, a nationally and peer recognized leader of the class action bar, is the chairman of Labaton Sucharow. In his capacity as chairman, he participates in developing the litigation and settlement strategies for virtually all of the class action cases Labaton Sucharow prosecutes. For more than three decades, Mr. Sucharow has devoted his practice to counseling clients and prosecuting cases on complex issues involving securities, antitrust, business transaction, product liability, and other class actions.

Mr. Sucharow is the co-author of "Executive Compensation -- Despite Reforms, Pay Is Less Transparent and Shareholder-Friendly Than in the Past," New York Law Journal, March 20, 2008, and "FIFO vs LIFO, Different ways to calculate shareholder losses for purposes of appointing lead plaintiff lead to different results," Investment & Pensions Europe, May 2006.

Mr. Sucharow earned a B.B.A., cum laude, from the Baruch School of the City College of the City University of New York in 1971 and a J.D., cum laude, from Brooklyn Law School in 1975.

Thomas A. Dubbs, a senior partner with the firm, specializes in the representation of institutional investors including pension funds in securities fraud and other types of litigation. A recognized leader in the field, Mr. Dubbs represented the first major private institutional investor to become a lead plaintiff in a class action under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act. He was formerly Senior Vice President and Senior Litigation Counsel for Kidder, Peabody & Co. Incorporated ("Kidder") for seven years, where he represented Kidder in a variety of matters, including in many class actions. He is the only member of the plaintiffs' bar who has held a senior position at a major investment bank, and is, thus, uniquely able to advise on issues involving the underwriting process and due diligence requirements. Also, he is able to understand and anticipate the perspective and strategy of defense counsel in securities cases, a substantial tactical advantage in determining the proper approach to take in litigating, settling or trying a particular action.

Mr. Dubbs is the co-author of "US Focus: Time for Action," Legal Week, April 17, 2008. Mr. Dubbs frequently lectures to institutional investors and other groups such as the Government Finance Officers Association, the National Conference of Public Employee Retirement Systems and the Council of Institutional Investors. In March 2008, Mr. Dubbs participated in a roundtable discussion hosted by The Law Society in London regarding class actions lawsuits.

Mr. Dubbs received a B.A. and a J.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1969 and 1974, respectively. In 1971, he earned an M.A. from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy of Tufts University.

Christopher J. Keller, a partner with the firm, leads the firm's Case Evaluation Group and has been involved in investigating and initiating numerous securities class actions. He was a member of the trial team that successfully litigated the In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnership Litigation in the United States District Court for the Central District of California. The six-week jury trial resulted in a landmark $184 million plaintiffs' verdict, which is one of the largest jury verdicts since the passage of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Most recently, he was instrumental in securing a $117.5 million settlement in In re Mercury Interactive Securities Litigation, which is one of the largest settlements to date in a securities options backdating class action.

Mr. Keller is the co-author of "Tellabs': PSLRA Pleading Test Comparative, Not Absolute," New York Law Journal, October 3, 2007, and "FIFO vs LIFO, Different ways to calculate shareholder losses for purposes of appointing lead plaintiff lead to different results," Investment & Pensions Europe, May 2006. Mr. Keller is a regular speaker at institutional investor gatherings. In June 2008, he spoke at a Continuing Legal Education course on subprime and mortgage related claims.

Mr. Keller received a B.S. from Adelphi University in 1993 and a J.D. from St. John's University School of Law in 1997.

Zachary M. Ratzman, Of Counsel to the firm, has been practicing in the area of securities fraud litigation for five years. Since early 2005, he has litigated the case In re American International Group, Inc. Securities Litigation, on behalf of three Ohio pension funds and a class of defrauded investors, and has played key roles in other noteworthy actions, including In re Bristol-Myers Squibb Securities Litigation. Prior to joining Labaton Sucharow, Mr. Ratzman practiced white-collar criminal defense and complex commercial litigation as an associate in the New York offices of Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP and Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP.

Mr. Ratzman received a B.A. from Ohio University, where he graduated summa cum laude and with Phi Beta Kappa honors. He earned a J.D. from the University of Michigan Law School, where he graduated, magna cum laude, and as a member of the Order of the Coif.

Ann E. Gittleman, an associate with the firm, is a Certified Public Accountant. Before becoming an attorney, she worked for PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP for more than two years, where she performed audits and interacted with governmental organizations, such as the SEC, IRS and Attorney General Office, in coordinating and facilitating investigations. As such, she is uniquely qualified to analyze complex fact patterns and utilize various principles of the accounting and auditing profession in actions involving accounting fraud.

Ms. Gittleman earned a B.S. and a B.A., both magna cum laude, from Bryant University in 1999, and received her J.D. from Brooklyn Law School in 2004, where she was a member of both the Moot Court Honor Society and the Securities Law Association.

Krista T. Rosen, an associate with the firm, focuses her practice in the area of securities class action litigation. She is a member of the team litigating the federal securities fraud class action against AIG, representing as Lead Plaintiff several Ohio pension funds.

Ms. Rosen earned a J.D. from the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law in 2006. During law school, she was selected to participate in the Securities Arbitration Clinic, where she represented investors in arbitration actions against securities brokers. Additionally, she served as the Articles Editor of the Cardozo Law Review. In March 2006, she was awarded third place in the 2005-2006 national writing competition sponsored by the Association of Securities and Exchange Commission Alumni (ASECA) for her Note entitled, Staying in Court While Staying Discovery: Finding Exceptions for Government-Produced Documents Under the PSLRA.

Damon J. Chargois was born on December 26, 1966. He was admitted to the Texas Bar on November 4, 1994, and the Arkansas Bar in 2006. Mr. Chargois received his undergraduate degree in English Literature in 1991 and received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from the University of Houston Law Center in May 1994. Mr. Chargois is licensed to practice in all Texas and Arkansas Courts, as well as Federal District Courts and the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. Additionally, he has successfully tried a federal case to unanimous positive verdict that was subsequently affirmed by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals and, then, had writ of certiorari denied by the U.S. Supreme Court, resulting in a final ruling affirming Mr. Chargois' verdict.

Mr. Chargois has handled a variety of class action and mass tort litigation cases, including a commercial, occupational, mass torts, including business transactions, products liability, pharmaceutical, class action, asbestos and benzene chemical exposures.

Upon graduating as class captain from his law school, Mr. Chargois worked as a corporate and insurance defense attorney in Dallas, Texas, with the law firm Cowles & Thompson, P.C., while also serving as criminal prosecutor for the townships of Rockwall, Rowlette, and Heath, Texas. In 1996, he became a mass tort plaintiff's trial lawyer, ultimately rising to Head of Litigation for national law firm Foster & Sear, L.L.P.

In 2004, the law firm Chargois & Herron was founded with Damon Chargois and Timothy P. Herron. In 2006, Chargois, Mashayekh & Herron was formed to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits, and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interests. Mr. Chargois' practice is multi jurisdictional and he oversees litigation in several states on the federal and state level. He is a member of the State Bar of Texas Litigation Section, the American Association for Justice, and Texas Trial Lawyers Association. Chargois, Mashayekh & Herron has offices in the Woodlands, Texas; Little Rock, Arkansas; and New York, New York.

Mr. Chargois is a member of the Board of Directors for the University of Houston Law Alumni Foundation. Additionally, he is a member of the Advisory Board of Directors for Houston Achievement Place, a charity specializing in caring for the needs of at risk foster children. He has also served as a guest lecturer on a number of legal topics, including mass tort litigation and bankruptcy to the University of Arkansas—Little Rock Law School.

Timothy P. Herron was born in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on October 18, 1952. He was admitted to the Texas Bar in 1980. Mr. Herron did his undergraduate and graduate education at Texas Christian University receiving a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Speech and Communication in 1974 and a Master of Science in Speech and Communication in 1975. He taught as a professor at Samford University before being awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to attend Baylor Law School in Waco, Texas where he obtained his Juris Doctor Degree in 1980 (cum laude).

In law school, he was voted the most outstanding trial advocate in the nation and was on Baylor's national winning mock trial team. Mr. Herron began as an attorney with Baker & Botts in Houston in the employment litigation section. He left Baker Botts, to become a partner in the firm of Hope & Mays and later Crews & Herron in Conroe, Texas. In 1990, along with Don Wetzel, he formed the law firm of Wetzel & Herron which specialized in insurance defense and commercial litigation.

After representing mainly defense and commercial clients for eighteen years, Mr. Herron changed his practice to handle only plaintiffs' mass torts. In 1998, he started the law firm of Hissey Kientz &

Herron with Rob Kientz, and Mike Hissey, which since that time continues to handle mass tort litigation. Their cases include a wide range of occupational and mass torts, including asbestos and pharmaceutical litigation.

In 2004, the law firm Chargois & Herron was founded with Damon Chargois and Timothy P. Herron. In 2006, the firm expanded to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits, and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interests. Mr. Herron's practice is multi jurisdictional and he oversees litigation in several states on the federal and state level. He is licensed in Texas and Arkansas. He is board certified in Civil Trial Litigation since 1989, is licensed to practice in the Federal Courts of Texas, and is a member of the State Bar of Texas in the Litigation Section and the AAJ and TTLA. In addition, he is chairman of the Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee of the State Bar of Texas, Region 5A. Chargois & Herron has offices in the Woodlands, Texas; Little Rock, Arkansas; and New York, New York.

Mr. Herron has expanded his business interests to include commercial banking and real estate. He was also involved in the founding of Post Oak Bank in Houston in 2003. He has been involved in the development and funding of commercial property development for the past four years in Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama.

Tim Herron has resided in Montgomery County, Texas for the past 26 years and has six children and one grandchild.

Kamran Mashayekh was admitted to the Texas State Bar on November 11, 1990. Mr. Mashayekh received his undergraduate degree in Political Science from Rice University in 1987 and received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from South Texas College of Law in August 1989.

In 2006, Kamran Mashayekh joined the law firm of Chargois & Herron to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interest. Mr. Mashayekh is fluent in English, Arabic, French and Spanish.

Che D. Williamson was born on November 25, 1964. She is married to Tim Herron and has 2 children and one grandchild. Ms. Williamson earned her Juris Doctor degree from South Texas College of Law in 1989. She has practiced law with her husband, Tim Herron since 1989. Ms. Williamson teaches mass torts at the William H. Bowen Law School at the University of Arkansas. She is also board certified in Civil Trial Litigation and holds a Ph.D. degree in criminal justice from Sam Houston State University and an L.L.M. in environmental law and policy from the University Houston Law School.

5.8 Provide a very brief summary general description of your firm's practice in the subject matter areas covered by this RFQ, including the size and scope of the practice and any other resources of your firm which are relevant to your practice in those areas.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow has developed its expertise in prosecuting securities class actions over decades, and litigation on behalf of injured institutional and individual investors represents the firm's principal practice area. Since passage of the PSLRA, the firm has been appointed lead counsel on numerous occasions, including cases involving the largest investor losses and most egregious frauds, such as the current Countrywide, American International Group and HealthSouth litigations.

As noted above in response to question 5.4, Labaton Sucharow has a dedicated Case Evaluation Group comprised of attorneys and non-attorney professionals, who identify and evaluate cases of possible fraud, and who have developed proprietary criteria to rate such cases.

Labaton Sucharow has cultivated a specific expertise in enforcing accountability on the part of underwriters and accounting firms – entities that play an important role in the financial markets and, we believe, have special responsibility to ensure its proper functioning. One partner of the firm, who practiced for many years in the financial services sector, has made litigation against underwriters a principal focus of his practice with the firm. Two attorneys at Labaton Sucharow are certified public accountants, both with significant auditing experience. Their expertise in both law and accounting provides the firm a special capacity to identify and analyze accounting-related fraud, coordinate expert testimony, and effectively depose financial personnel.

The firm also highly values its non-attorney professionals, and believes that the close integration of their financial and investigative expertise with the firm's legal work provides Labaton Sucharow an unusual ability to build well-developed, thoroughly researched, and analytically rigorous cases and present them effectively to judges and juries.

Distinctively, the firm has a demonstrated willingness to go to trial when necessary. Since 2000, partners of the firm have served as lead or co-lead counsel in several major securities trials including, In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnerships Litigation, No. 98-7035 (C.D. Cal.) and Koppel v. 4987 Corp., 167 F.3d 125 (2d Cir. 1999). In the Real Estate Associates litigation, Lawrence Sucharow co-led a month-long jury trial that resulted in a $92 million compensatory award and a $92 million punitive damages award (later reduced to the maximum allowed under California law). In Koppel, the firm established a significant corporate governance precedent. We see our record of taking cases to trial as critical to our ability to negotiate credibly and forcefully on behalf of the institutions and classes we represent.

Finally, Labaton Sucharow strongly believes that shareholder litigation provides important public benefits by insuring fair and efficient public markets, regulating corporate governance, and controlling other deceptive conduct by public companies. The firm's senior partner, Edward Labaton, is a recognized authority on corporate governance issues, and is a member of the Advisory Committee of the University of Delaware's Weinberg Center for Corporate Governance and the New York City Bar Association's Task Force on the Role of Lawyers in Corporate Governance. He has also been President of the Institute for Law and Economic Policy since its founding.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has offices in Little Rock, Arkansas and The Woodlands, Texas, in addition to counsel affiliations with Labaton Sucharow in New York, Friedman Law Group in New York and Markun, Zussman & Compton in Los Angeles, California for the primary purpose of investigating and pursuing class action securities, commercial and consumer litigation which includes cases involving large investor losses and egregious fraud. Chargois & Herron has an attorney who dedicates a major portion of his work week watching the market, scouring financials and personally speaking with clients, financial experts and business leaders in our continuing effort to discover and root out fraud and misrepresentations by corporate wrongdoers.

5.9 Provide a very brief summary description of not more than ten (10) significant transactions or cases in which your firm has provided extensive legal services involving pension funds or other institutional clients relating to the subject matter areas covered by this RFQ.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

With respect to securities litigation, Labaton Sucharow has obtained substantial recoveries for institutional clients and associated classes in dozens of cases, and is recognized today as one of a small number of firms with the expertise and resources to prosecute the largest and most complex cases.

In one of the largest cases involving the recent subprime mortgage crisis, Labaton Sucharow serves as lead counsel representing Lead Plaintiffs the State of New York and the New York City Pension Funds (collectively, "the New York Funds") in In re Countrywide Securities Litigation, No. CV-07-5295 MRP (MANx) (C.D. Cal.), pending before U.S. District Judge Mariana R. Pfaelzer in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California. This case is a consolidated class action asserting claims under the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 against Countrywide Financial Corporation, certain of its current and former directors and officers, outside accountants, and underwriters of public offerings of Countrywide securities.

In In re American International Group Inc. Securities Litigation, Civ. No. 04-8141 (LTS) (S.D.N.Y.), Labaton Sucharow is lead counsel on behalf of Lead Plaintiffs the Ohio Public Employees Retirement System, and certain other Ohio state pension funds. Defendants include AIG, and its present and former senior executives, underwriters, auditor, and parties to various fraudulent transactions. In 2006, the court denied defendants' numerous motions to dismiss in substantially all respects. The document review will likely be one of the largest in the history of securities litigation; to date, we have reviewed more than 37 million pages of 40 million that defendants produced. Both fact depositions and class certification depositions have begun.

In In re Mercury Interactive Corp. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 05-3395, pending in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Labaton Sucharow is acting as co-lead counsel representing Lead Plaintiffs the Steamship Trade Association/International Longshoremen's Association Pension Fund, the City of Sterling Heights General Employees Retirement System, the City of Dearborn Heights Police and Fire Retirement System, and the Charter Township of Clinton Police & Fire Pension System. The allegations in Mercury concern backdated option grants used as unreported compensation to employees and officers of the Company. Mercury's former CEO, CFO, and General Counsel actively participated in and benefited from the options backdating scheme, which came at the expense of Mercury shareholders and the investing public. Labaton Sucharow and Hewlett-Packard's counsel reached an agreement in principle that will compensate injured plaintiffs in the total sum of $117.5 million, a figure representing the second largest known settlement or judgment in an options backdating suit to date. Labaton Sucharow and Hewlett-Packard's counsel executed a Stipulation of Settlement and the court granted preliminary approval of the settlement on June 2, 2008.

In In re Bristol-Myers Squibb Securities Litigation, Civ. No. 00-1990 (GEB) (D.N.J.), Labaton Sucharow, as sole lead counsel, prosecuted class claims on behalf of Lead Plaintiff, Longview Collective Fund of the Amalgamated Bank. The firm reviewed more than 5 million pages of documents, took 44 factual depositions and 18 expert depositions and defended 8 experts. The case settled in January 2006 for $185 million. The settlement also included the important public benefit of an agreement by Bristol-Myers Squibb to post results of its clinical trials, including all adverse events, for a period of ten years.

In In re HealthSouth Corp. Stockholder Litigation, No. CV-03-BE-1501-S (N.D. Ala.), Labaton Sucharow represents Lead Plaintiffs the New Mexico State Investment Council and the New Mexico Educational Retirement Board and serves as co-lead counsel. The litigation alleges a broad scheme by the company's former senior managers in the largest securities fraud in the healthcare industry. In January 2007, the court approved a settlement valued at $445 million with HealthSouth Corporation and several of the Company's former officers and directors. The partial settlement, comprised of cash and HealthSouth securities, is one of the largest in history. Lead Plaintiffs continue their prosecution of the litigation against HealthSouth's former CEO, Ernst & Young, and UBS.

In In re Waste Management, Inc. Securities Litigation, Civ. No. H-99-2183 (S.D. Tex.), Labaton Sucharow was retained by the Connecticut Retirement Plans and Trust Funds. The litigation resulted in a $457 million settlement, one of the largest securities class action recoveries ever obtained. On behalf of its client and the Class, Labaton Sucharow secured substantial corporate governance enhancements, including measures designed to strengthen the role and independence of the defendant's audit committee, declassify its board of directors, and encourage and safeguard whistleblowers among the company's employees.

In In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnerships Litigation, No. 98-7035 (C.D. Cal.), Labaton Sucharow litigated and tried this case to a jury verdict in federal court in California in late 2002. The firm obtained a precedent setting award of $92 million in compensatory damages under various legal theories, including violations of Section 14(a) of the Exchange Act. The jury also awarded an additional $92 million for punitive damages on a breach of fiduciary duty claim (which was later reduced by the court on a motion for remittitur). The case was eventually settled for more than 100% of claimed damages.

Labaton Sucharow also represents institutional investors in a number of individual securities actions. For example, in In re Adelphia Communications Corp. Securities & Derivative Litigation, Civ. No. 03 MD 1529 (LMM) (S.D.N.Y.), the firm represents the New York City Employees' Retirement System (and certain other New York City pension funds) and the Division of Investment of the New Jersey Department of the Treasury in separate individual actions against Adelphia's officers, auditors, underwriters, and lawyers. To date, Labaton Sucharow has fully resolved certain of the claims brought by New Jersey and New York City for amounts that significantly exceed the percentage of damages recovered by the Class. New Jersey and New York City continue to prosecute their claims against the remaining defendants. In In re WorldCom Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 02 Civ. 3288 (DLC) (S.D.N.Y.), Labaton Sucharow secured a substantial settlement in an individual action brought by our clients SunTrust Bank and Trusco Capital Management, Inc. against the former underwriters, auditors, and directors of WorldCom, Inc. In In re Qwest Communications International Securities Litigation, 01-cv-01451 (D. Col.), after a class action settlement was announced in September 2006, Labaton Sucharow was engaged by CalPERS to pursue all appropriate opt-out securities claims in connection with CalPERS' securities holdings in Qwest Communications Int'l Inc. We drafted complaints for use in both federal and state courts, obtained and extension of pre-existing polling agreement (which made it unnecessary for us to file complaints), represented CalPERS at two mediation sessions with Qwest and related defendants, and negotiated the final settlement which was far greater than what CalPERS would have obtained in the class action and was proportional to the largest other opt-out settlement obtained against Qwest that we know of.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has represented a number of plaintiffs against corporations who have been proven to have acted fraudulently with respect to their shareholders or consumers.

In Bristol County Retirement System vs. HCC Insurance Holdings, Inc., we served as liaison counsel representing the Massachusetts Public Pension Funds against HCC Holdings, Inc. arising out of its fraudulent options backdating practices we alleged. After almost two years of litigation, we are finalizing a significant settlement for our clients.

In Holloway v. Countrywide, we have co-counseled with Markun, Zussman & Compton against Countrywide arising out of its fraudulent subprime mortgage practices. Recently, our case received class certification status for the State of California.

Chargois & Herron owns an Alabama company called 270 Discovery Solutions which provides document research, indexing and computer inputting of the millions of items of information contained in the documents that are routinely produced – usually under court order – in securities class action litigation. Uniquely, our company is staffed almost entirely by licensed attorneys, numbering in excess of 25 attorneys. This puts Chargois & Herron in a unique and special position to handle any securities litigation matter, regardless of size.

5.10 Please describe proposed billing arrangements, including contingency fees, for securities litigation. If other than contingency fees are contemplated, please state the range of hourly billing rates, by timekeeper status (paralegal, 1st to 3rd year associate, etc., staff attorney, shareholder or partner, of counsel, etc.), of all attorneys and paralegals proposed for assignment to ATRS matters. State what discount, if any, to these rates the firm proposes to provide to ATRS. While this RFQ primarily seeks the services of one lead attorney, the involvement of other firm attorneys may be required from time to time, depending on the matter.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow confirms that monitoring and evaluating services provided under this Proposal would be carried out at no cost to the ATRS.

The range of contingency fees that Labaton Sucharow proposes with respect to securities class actions (and individual actions) that we successfully resolve as litigation counsel for the ATRS is dependent on several factors anticipated at the beginning of the case, including the likelihood of success, the likely size of any settlement or judgment from any or all defendants. For example, in a case involving a solvent company, hundreds of millions of dollars in damages, and a defendant company that has admitted wrongdoing and/or filed a restatement, the proposed contingency fee would be at the low end of the proposed range. In a case involving smaller damages, no admission, no restatement, and potential difficulties in funding a settlement or a judgment, the risks of litigation would be greater and therefore the proposed attorneys' fees would be at the higher end of the range.

On the basis described above, Labaton Sucharow proposes a range of fees generally conforming to the following:

AMOUNT OF RECOVERY	STAGE OF LITIGATION: Initiation of action to completed briefing of motion to dismiss (or, if no such motion, initiation of discovery)	Thereafter, to completed briefing of motion for summary judgment (or, if no such motion, to completion of discovery)	Thereafter, to trial and entry of judgment	Thereafter (including appellate proceedings), to ultimate resolution
Up to $150 million	5-7%	12-17%	18-22%	21-24%
Greater than $150 million, up to $250 million	4-6%	7-10%	10-12%	12-14%
Greater than $250 million	4-6%	6-8%	8-9%	10%

Labaton Sucharow would offer legal services to the ATRS outside the scope of the "evaluation counsel" and "litigation counsel" functions discussed in the RFQ at the discounted hourly rates set forth below. These rates represent a discount of 40%-60% of the Firms' standard billing rates for their attorneys.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron, LLP confirms that monitoring and evaluating services provided under this Proposal would be carried out at no cost to the ATRS.

The range of contingency fees that Chargois & Herron proposes with respect to securities class actions (and individual actions) that we successfully resolve as litigation counsel for the ATRS is dependent on several factors anticipated at the beginning of the case, including the likelihood of success, the likely size of any settlement or judgment from any or all defendants. For example, in a case involving a solvent company, hundreds of millions of dollars in damages, and a defendant company that has admitted wrongdoing and/or filed a restatement, the proposed contingency fee would be at the low end of the proposed range. In a case involving smaller damages, no admission, no restatement, and potential difficulties in funding a settlement or a judgment, the risks of litigation would be greater and therefore the proposed attorneys' fees would be at the higher end of the range.

On the basis described above, Chargois & Herron proposes a range of fees generally conforming to the following:

AMOUNT OF RECOVERY	STAGE OF LITIGATION: Initiation of action to completed briefing of motion to dismiss (or, if no such motion, initiation of discovery)	Thereafter, to completed briefing of motion for summary judgment (or, if no such motion, to completion of discovery)	Thereafter, to trial and entry of judgment	Thereafter (including appellate proceedings), to ultimate resolution
Up to $150 million	5-7%	12-17%	18-22%	21-24%
Greater than $150 million, up to $250 million	4-6%	6-10%	10-12%	12-14%
Greater than $250 million	4-6%	4-6%	7-8½%	8-9½%

Chargois & Herron would offer legal services to the ATRS outside the scope of the "evaluation counsel" and "litigation counsel" functions discussed in the RFQ at the discounted hourly rates set forth below. These rates represent a discount of 40%-60% of the Firms' standard billing rates for their attorneys.

5.11 State any inability to comply with terms of the engagement described in Section 3.3 of this RFQ. If any inability exists, be specific.

For both Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron, there are no inabilities to comply with the terms of the engagement described in Section 3.3 of this RFQ.

5.12 Identify any known relationship, either business or personal, which you or a member of your firm has with any ATRS Board member, investment consultant, investment manager, or key employee. If aware of none, state "None." (A list of ATRS Board members, investment consultants, investment managers, and key employees can be provided upon request. A formal conflicts check will be required prior to contracting.)

Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron are not aware of any known relationships.

5.13 Identify any relationship, either business or personal, which you or a member of your firm has with a person known to you to have substantial business dealings with ATRS or its real estate title-holding corporation.

To the best of our knowledge, Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron do not have any relationships, either business or personal, with a person who has substantial dealings with the ATRS or its real estate title-holding corporation.

5.14 State whether you or any firm attorney proposed to provide services for this engagement has ever had a formal grievance or complaint lodged against him or her pursuant to the applicable disciplinary rules or has ever been sued for malpractice or any civil or criminal regulatory enforcement action in connection with any type of legal representation, and whether any such attorneys have been sued individually with respect to any type of personal investment or other personal or business involvement concerning an underwriter or issuer of securities, investment adviser, investment company, securities broker-dealer, insurer, real estate transaction, or a lending institution.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow (and its predecessor firms) have been in business for more than 45 years. For much of that time, the firm had a substantial general billable corporate practice as well as its contingent class action litigation practice. Labaton Sucharow currently has a very small general billable corporate practice. Throughout its existence, from time to time, issues have arisen which required notification of our malpractice insurance carrier. At the present time, the firm has provided notice of the following matters to its malpractice insurance carrier. (None of the matters of which our carrier has been notified involves class action litigation).

Labaton Sucharow is a defendant in a legal malpractice case brought by a former client who asserts the firm and others committed malpractice in representing him in civil and criminal matters, and that the firm inappropriately failed to compensate him in connection with a qui tam proceeding. The claim is for an unspecified amount of damages.

In a separate action, on March 19, 2008, the preliminary executors of the estate of Jack Maurer commenced an action in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against Labaton Sucharow, charging that the firm had committed malpractice in connection with estate planning services rendered in 2001. The firm has moved to dismiss and the motion is currently pending before the court.

Labaton Sucharow's attorneys have never been sued individually with respect to any type of personal investment or other personal or business involvement concerning an underwriter or issuer of securities, investment adviser, investment company, securities broker-dealer, insurer, real estate transaction, or a lending institution.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has never been sued for malpractice, nor had a formal grievance or complaint lodged against it nor had any civil or criminal regulatory enforcement action brought against it; however, Damon J. Chargois, individually has had a grievance in the Dillard's discrimination litigation and a grievance in asbestos litigation brought against him, but both have been and were dismissed

5.15 For your response to this RFQ, please indicate the firm's or attorney's professional liability insurance limits within the following ranges, and the name of the carrier or carriers.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

$5 million to $ 10 million

Labaton Sucharow's malpractice insurer is Lloyd's of London. Labaton Sucharow maintains professional malpractice insurance coverage in the amount of $10 million, representing both the aggregate and per-claim annual policy limits and it is applied to the firm as a whole. Labaton Sucharow also maintains a fiduciary policy with a $2 million limit.

Response of Chargois & Herron
Under $5 million

Chargois & Herron's malpractice insurer is Texas Lawyers Insurance Exchange (TLIE). Chargois & Herron maintains professional malpractice insurance coverage in the amount of $1 million.

Indicate below the range or the deductible or any self-insured retention with respect to the foregoing insurance.

Response of Labaton Sucharow
Between $500,001 and $1 million

Labaton Sucharow's deductible is $1 million.

Response of Chargois & Herron
Between 0 and $100,000

Chargois & Herron's deductible is $25,000.

I am pleased to inform you that subject to final approval of the Attorney General's office, ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system.

I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.

If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate, on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conducive to a joint proposal.

Upon approval of the Attorney General, ATRS will send you a request for a form W-9, Arkansas Professional Services contract form, and State grant/contract disclosure form for your completion.

Please call me if you have a minute to discuss.

Regards,

Law360, New York (July 23, 2013, 7:25 PM ET) -- A key government witness in the fraud trial against former Goldman Sachs Group Inc <http://www.law360.com/companies/goldman-sachs-group-inc> . trader Fabrice Tourre said Tuesday that she was misled about the allegedly built-to-fail Abacus transaction, though stopped short of saying that Tourre himself lied.

Laura Schwartz, a former senior managing director at ACA Management LLC, said she was not told that a hedge fund that helped structure the Abacus transaction, Paulson & Co., had actually bet against it. ACA was formally in charge of picking a bundle of residential mortgage-backed securities that formed Abacus 2007-AC1, a collateralized debt obligation.

Paulson, which allegedly had significant influence on what RMBS were put into Abacus, made about $1 billion when the CDO collapsed along with the housing market, according to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission <http://www.law360.com/agencies/securities-and-exchange-commission> . The commission claims Tourre, the alleged "deal captain" for the Abacus deal, defrauded investors by failing to disclose Paulson's intention to go short and also tricked ACA.

Schwartz, though, said she was not directly lied to and did not explicitly blame Tourre for her misperception.

"I believed Paulson would be the equity investor in that transaction," Schwartz said.

But when asked where she got that belief, Schwartz responded that her early knowledge of the structure of the deal came from a meeting with Gail Kreitman, a Goldman salesperson when the Abacus deal was being worked out.

Kreitman, another SEC witness, has already testified that she believed Paulson was long on Abacus. She said she did not know who in particular at Goldman gave her that impression.

Schwartz stressed under SEC questioning that, whatever the source of her belief about Paulson's role in the transaction, ACA was allowed to maintain its misperception. No one at Goldman corrected Schwartz after, in an email to Krietman, she referred to Paulson's "equity perspective" on Abacus, Schwartz testified.

She added that Paulson was referred to as "transaction sponsor" in an email from Tourre, though later conceded that term has no specific definition in the financial world.

Schwartz told jurors that Paulson was given the opportunity to put forward RMBS for inclusion in Abacus. ACA would not have gone forward with the deal had it known the fund was an intended short investor, Schwartz said.

"If somebody only wanted to go short that means it was designed to fail and that was not something we would have done," Schwartz said.

Schwartz's testimony on that point echoed <http://www.law360.com/articles/459149/short-on-goldman-deal-kept-quiet-tourre-jury-told> that of her former boss, ex-ACA CEO Alan Roseman, who said knowledge of Paulson's intention to short would have stopped the transaction in its place.

On cross-examination, Schwartz conceded that ACA had detailed standards for deciding what RMBS were worthy of inclusion in a portfolio and would not have changed those standards based on input from a prospective investor.

"What if Joe had recommended it," Tourre's lawyer John P. Coffey asked, referring to the courtroom deputy. "Would that have affected whether it met the standards of being on the approved list?"

"No," Schwartz said.

"What if it's a long investor," Coffey said.

"No," she said.

Schwartz testimony is scheduled to resume Wednesday morning. Tourre is slated to testify Wednesday afternoon, according to U.S. District Judge Katherine B. Forrest, who is presiding over the case.

Goldman in 2010 agreed to pay $550 million to settle an SEC suit related to Abacus.

Tourre's lawyers have argued that he was one of many Goldman employees who had a hand in Abacus and that disclosures to clients were looked over by Goldman professionals.

Tourre is represented by Pamela R. Chepiga and Andrew Rhys Davies of Allen <http://www.law360.com/firms/allen-overy> & Overy LLP and the Law Office of John P. Coffey.

The case is SEC v. Goldman Sachs & Co. et al., case number 1:10-cv-03229 <http://www.law360.com/cases/4d43f5345002d10782000062> , in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. George Hopkins
Arkansas Teacher Retirement System

Re: State Street Corp.

Dear Mr. Hopkins:

We are pleased that Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher") has asked Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton") to represent it and pursue claims against its custodian, State Street Corporation ("State Street" or the "Company") in connection with State Street's foreign currency ("FX") pricing misconduct. This representation includes the commencement of litigation against the Company's board of directors for breach of fiduciary duties. We would like to confirm our arrangements with respect to this matter.

Labaton will be paid a fee of between 22.5% and 30% of any recovery or benefit conferred on the shareholder class, subject to court approval, plus expenses which will be advanced by Labaton. Expenses subject to reimbursement may include, among other things, expert witness fees, photocopying, computer research, long distance telephone charges, fax charges, court fees, travel expenses and delivery charges. Labaton will also advance costs of Arkansas Teacher relating directly to the litigation, such as for travel. Arkansas Teacher shall have no obligation to pay any fee or expense related to the action. Typically, such fees or reimbursement of expenses are paid by or on behalf of State Street. If nothing is recovered, Arkansas Teacher shall owe Labaton no fees or expense reimbursement.

Labaton
Sucharow

Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

Labaton will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and decisions in the case. Labaton will provide periodic written reports on a regular basis and will notify Arkansas Teacher in advance regarding court appearances, depositions or other significant proceedings. Labaton will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, those decisions concerning settlement or fee proposals. Labaton agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to this matter and will provide significant pleadings to Arkansas Teacher in advance of submission to the court. Labaton agrees to meet with Arkansas Teacher, or its representatives, to discuss this matter, as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton with authority to execute documents and agreements relating directly to the litigation on its behalf and to collect and hold on its behalf monies paid to it by way of settlement. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with Labaton in its handling of the claims. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of Labaton and notify Labaton of any change of address.

It is hereby expressly recognized that Arkansas Teacher may at some future time choose to move to be lead plaintiff in an unrelated shareholder case and choose a firm other than Labaton as counsel. In such a case, Arkansas Teacher agrees that it is not a conflict if Labaton is retained by another investor also seeking to be lead plaintiff and hereby waives any possible conflict.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Your approval, please sign below and where indicated on the enclosed copy. Return one fully executed copy to us, keeping the second copy for your files.

Labaton Sucharow

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

Very truly yours,

Re: State Street Corporation

Dear Mr. Hopkins:

We are pleased that the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher" or the "System") has agreed to retain Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow" or the "Firm") in connection with the pursuit of claims against the System's custodian, State Street Corporation ("State Street"), as a result of State Street's misconduct as it relates to the pricing of foreign currency ("FX") transactions. The Firm's representation includes the commencement of class litigation against State Street and certain of its subsidiaries and/or officers or directors for, among other potential viable claims, breaches of fiduciary and other duties (the "Litigation"). The following confirms our arrangement with respect to the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will prosecute this Litigation on a wholly contingent fee basis. In addition, any fee request will be based upon customary and ordinary fees for class actions and our lodestar and submitted to the Court for its approval. Labaton Sucharow will be entitled to receive only such fees as the Court determines to award, plus expenses, which will be advanced by the Firm. Expenses will include, among other things, expert witness fees, photocopying, computer research, long distance telephone charges, fax charges, court fees, travel expenses, and delivery charges. Labaton Sucharow will also advance any Arkansas Teacher's out-of-pocket costs relating directly to the Litigation, e.g., travel costs.

Labaton Sucharow

Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the Class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and, on a regular basis, will provide periodic written reports and will notify the System as to court appearances, depositions, and other significant proceedings in advance thereof. Labaton Sucharow will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, decisions concerning settlement and fee proposals. Labaton Sucharow agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to the Litigation and will provide the System with significant pleadings in advance of submission to the court. Labaton Sucharow agrees to meet with the representatives of Arkansas Teacher to discuss this matter, from time to time as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton Sucharow with authority to execute documents and agreements on its behalf relating directly to the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with the Firm in its handling of the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of the Firm, and will notify Labaton Sucharow of any change of address and other administration changes relevant to the Firm's representation.

In the event that the Court does not certify the class and the Litigation is prosecuted individually, on behalf of Arkansas Teacher, Labaton Sucharow's fee will be negotiated in good faith based upon customary and ordinary fees for individual actions and our lodestar (the "Negotiated Fee"). Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that the Negotiated Fee will be subject to approval by the Arkansas Teacher's Board.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Arkansas Teacher's approval, please sign below where indicated on the enclosed copy. Please return one fully executed copy to us, and retain the second copy for the System's files.

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

Re: State Street Corporation

Dear Mr. Hopkins:

We are pleased that the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher" or the "System") has agreed to retain Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow" or the "Firm") in connection with the pursuit of claims against the System's custodian, State Street Corporation ("State Street"), as a result of State Street's misconduct as it relates to the pricing of foreign currency ("FX") transactions. The Firm's representation includes the commencement of class litigation against State Street and certain of its subsidiaries and/or officers or directors for, among other potential viable claims, breaches of fiduciary and other duties (the "Litigation"). The following confirms our arrangement with respect to the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will prosecute this Litigation on a wholly contingent fee basis. In addition, any fee request will be based upon customary and ordinary fees for class actions and our lodestar and submitted to the Court for its approval. Labaton Sucharow will be entitled to receive only such fees as the Court determines to award, plus expenses, which will be advanced by the Firm. Expenses will include, among other things, expert witness fees, photocopying, computer research, long distance telephone charges, fax charges, court fees, travel expenses, and delivery charges. Labaton Sucharow will also advance any Arkansas Teacher's out-of-pocket costs relating directly to the Litigation, e.g., travel costs.

Labaton Sucharow

Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the Class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and, on a regular basis, will provide periodic written reports and will notify the System as to court appearances, depositions, and other significant proceedings in advance thereof. Labaton Sucharow will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, decisions concerning settlement and fee proposals. Labaton Sucharow agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to the Litigation and will provide the System with significant pleadings in advance of submission to the court. Labaton Sucharow agrees to meet with the representatives of Arkansas Teacher to discuss this matter, from time to time as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton Sucharow with authority to execute documents and agreements on its behalf relating directly to the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with the Firm in its handling of the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of the Firm, and will notify Labaton Sucharow of any change of address and other administration changes relevant to the Firm's representation.

In the event that the Court does not certify the class and the Litigation is prosecuted individually, on behalf of Arkansas Teacher, Labaton Sucharow's fee will be negotiated in good faith based upon customary and ordinary fees for individual actions and our lodestar (the "Negotiated Fee"). Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that the Negotiated Fee will be subject to approval by the Arkansas Teacher's Board.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Arkansas Teacher's approval, please sign below where indicated on the enclosed copy. Please return one fully executed copy to us, and retain the second copy for the System's files.

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

Subject: State street fee regarding local counsel

Bob,

As you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this email regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be (4%, 5% etc.), will be paid off the top with the balance of the overall fee spilt between Lieff, Labaton and Thornton pursuant to our agreement.

The local asked that I copy him on this email so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him he was agreeable to this as well.

Garrett

If the Arkansas and ERISA fees didn't come off the top, I guess the split would look like this:
&
Labaton& - 20%
LCHB – 20%
Thornton – 20%
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 26%
&
&
If the Arkansas and ERISA fees do come off the top, I guess the split looks like this:
&
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton – 17.2%
LCHB – 17.2%
Thornton – 17.2%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 34.4%
I'm not the math wizard, so please correct me if anyone comes up with different figures.

Just my own thinking on this but I think the deal with them would be that their percentage does come off the top (although what the top is is another question). I can't imagine how else it would be calculated since all the other fees are two customer counsel.

Dan sorry for that last email that I didn't spellcheck.&
Basically what I'm trying to say is I understand the basic agreement to be that after payment of all other counsel, our three firms shall each receive 20%, with the distribution of the balance of 40% to be determined later.

Attached are my redlines to the preliminary approval order and final judgment.& These edits are consistent with the Court's January 2012 order concerning leadership structure.&
I'm emailing just you (and copying Bob) so as to try not to make a big thing over this, but I do think it's appropriate to memorialize what the fee allocation amongst customer class counsel is going to be (consistent with the understanding that the firms have been operating under for a couple years now) before we proceed much further.& & I think we'd be willing to support Lead Counsel having final authority over fee and expense allocations, etc., for purposes of the settlement stip, and thus present a united front against a perpetual troublemaker like McTigue—which should be in everyone's interest--provided we had some basic written comfort ourselves.& I don't think it's too early for that, given the interest in seeing the funds come in this year.

Thanks,
Dan

Thanks for sending this.& Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.
&
Two things:

1.& I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down.& & So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?
&
What do you think??

As you know, we had a prior deal with him that his fee would be "off the top". He understands that ERISA counsel is now in the same pool of money. He has agreed to come done to this number with a guarantee that it will be off the court awarded fee number. Please reply all if you agree. Given that it is off the total number their is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.

Need two letters with breakdown.
ERISA just gets sent to & ERISA counsel with 10% off top and then 1/3 each.
Class co-counsel gets one with:
ERISA 10% off top
Damon's percentage also off top
Then each of class co-counsel split with percentages agreed to.
In short, no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split.& They only need to see their 10% and then split 3 ways.
By the way I want to *Asterisk the 10% to ERISA with a footnote saying "Although our fee agreement with ERISA counsel only provides for a 9% allocation, & Class co-counsel have determined to increase that to 10% in light of the excellent work and contribution of ERISA counsel."

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Bank & Trust Co.,
No. 11-CV-10230 MLW

Dear Judge Wolf:

We are writing respectfully to advise the Court of inadvertent errors just discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees, which the Court granted following the fairness hearing held on November 2, 2016. See Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs ("Fee Order," ECF No. 111).

These mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media received after the hearing. The purpose of this letter is to disclose the error and provide a corrected lodestar and multiplier. We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the Court's ruling on attorneys' fees.

As the Court is aware, the submissions supporting Lead Counsel's fee application included individual declarations submitted on behalf of Labaton Sucharow, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser, reporting each firm's lodestar and number of hours billed. See ECF Nos. 104-15, at 7-9; 104-16, at 7-8; 104-17, at 8-9; see also ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

The professionals and paraprofessionals listed in these firms' respective lodestar reports include persons denoted as Staff Attorneys, or "SAs." SAs are bar-admitted, experienced attorneys hired on a temporary, though generally long-term, basis, and are paid by the hour. The SAs in this action were tasked principally with reviewing and analyzing the millions of pages of documents produced by State Street.

Seventeen (17) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.[1] Six (6) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[2] Both sets of overlap reflect the fact that as the litigation proceeded, efforts were made to share costs among counsel, such that financial responsibility for certain SAs located at Labaton Sucharow's and Lieff Cabraser's offices was borne by Thornton.

We have now determined that:

- The hours of the Alper SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly were also reported in the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.
- Certain hours reported by one of the Alper SAs (S. Dolben) in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly duplicated certain hours of another Alper SA (D. Fouchong).
- A portion of the hours of two of the Jordan SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report (C. Jordan and J. Zaul) mistakenly were also reported in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.
- The hours of two other Jordan SAs (A. Ten Eyck and R. Wintterle) mistakenly were included in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[3]

Because of these inadvertent errors, Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined lodestar of $41,323,895.75, and reported combined time of 86,113.7 hours, were overstated. See ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

[1] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are D. Alper, E. Bishop, N. Cameron, M. Daniels, S. Dolben, D. Fouchong, J. Grant, I. Herrick, D. Hong, C. Orji, D. Packman, A. Powell, A. Rosenbaum, J. Saad, B. Schulman, A. Vaidya, and R. Yamada (collectively, the "Alper SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7-8 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-15, at 7-8 (Labaton Sucharow lodestar report).

[2] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are C. Jordan, A. McClelland, A. Ten Eyck, V. Weiss, R. Wintterle, and J. Zaul (collectively, the "Jordan SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-17, at 8 (Lieff Cabraser lodestar report).

[3] The lodestar reports in the individual firm declarations submitted by ERISA counsel (ECF Nos. 104-18 to 104-23) are unaffected.

Labaton Sucharow

We have corrected these errors by removing the duplicative time. When a given SA had different hourly billing rates, we removed the time billed at the higher rate. Deducting the duplicative time from the $41.32 million reported combined lodestar results in a reduced combined lodestar of $37,265,241.25, and a reduced combined time of 76,790.8 hours.

Cross-checking the $37.27 million reduced combined lodestar against the $74,541,250 percentage-based fee awarded by the Court yields a lodestar multiplier of 2.00.[4] This is higher than the 1.8 multiplier we proffered in our submissions and during the hearing.

Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that a 2.00 multiplier remains reasonable and well-within the range of multipliers found reasonable for cross-check purposes in common fund cases within the First Circuit, and that such an enhancement of the reduced lodestar represented by the 24.85% fee awarded by the Court remains well-supported by the $300 million Settlement obtained and fees awarded in comparable cases. See Fee Brief, ECF No. 103-1, at 24-25.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that the Court should adhere to its ruling on attorneys' fees. See Fee Order ¶¶ 4, 6 (ECF No. 111)[5]; Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 36:1-2 (finding 1.8 multiplier "reasonable").

We sincerely apologize to the Court for the inadvertent errors in our written submissions and presentation during the hearing. We are available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

Respectfully submitted,

David J. Goldsmith

[4] The Court found it "appropriate in this case to use the percentage of the common fund approach in determining the amount of attorneys' fees that should be awarded." Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 22:25-23:2; see also id. at 35:12-13 ("I have used the percentage of common fund method. I've used the reasonable lodestar to check on that.").

[5] The Fee Order, at Paragraph 6(d), references the approximately 86,000 combined hours and $41.32 million combined lodestar reported in our written submissions.

SPOTLIGHT FOLLOW-UP

Critics hit law firms' bills after class-action lawsuits

By Andrea Estes | GLOBE STAFF DECEMBER 17, 2016

Attorneys at the Thornton Law Firm had just helped win a $300 million settlement from State Street Bank and Trust in a complicated lawsuit involving eight other law firms. Now, it was time to submit their legal fees to the judge so that they could get paid.

That's when the younger brother of Thornton managing partner Garrett Bradley emerged as a $500-an-hour "staff attorney" at the Boston firm.

Michael Bradley is a lawyer, but he normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court-appointed defender in Quincy District Court, records show. Yet, according to his older brother's sworn statement on Sept. 14, 2016, Michael Bradley's services were worth nearly 10 times that rate in the State Street case.

The elder Bradley said Michael worked 406.4 hours on the lawsuit, which centered on international currency trades, at a cost of $203,200.

Michael Bradley wasn't the only lawyerfor whose work Thornton claimed stratospheric — and questionable — legal costs in the filing to US District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf. Garrett Bradley listed 23 other staff attorneys, each with hourly rates of $425, who collectively accounted for $4 million in costs.

Comments

Law firm 'bonuses' tied to political donations

A small Boston law firm became a top funder of the national Democratic Party by paying lawyers "bonuses" for their political donations.

Candidates returning donations from Thornton Law Firm attorneys

Hassan to return law firm's donations

But one of the lawyers told the Globe he was actually paid just $30 an hour for his services — and not by Thornton. Like all the other staff attorneys on Garrett Bradley's list, except his brother, he worked for another firm in the case, which also counted his hours on its list of costs.

The sworn statement by Garrett Bradley — until recently an assistant House majority leader on Beacon Hill — raises troubling questions about the way Thornton and the other firms that brought the State Street lawsuit tallied legal costs to justify their enormous $75.8 million payday.

BRADLEY FOR SELECTMAN

Michael Bradley, Quincy attorney.

More than 60 percent of the costs that Thornton and two other law firms submitted to Judge Wolf came from the work of staff attorneys — all of them assigned hourly rates at least 10 times higher than the $25 to $40 an hour typical for these low-level positions — which involves document review.

A spokesman for the lead law firm in the case acknowledged that hourly rates the firms listed for staff attorneys were above the lawyers' actual wages, but argued that, essentially, everyone does it. Diana Pisciotta, spokeswoman for the Labaton Sucharow law firm in New York City, called it "commonly accepted practice throughout the legal community."

Critics of the way lawyers are paid in class-action lawsuits acknowledge that firms often dramatically mark up the rates of their lower-paid attorneys when seeking legal fees in court, but they say Thornton has pushed the practice to an extreme.

"This happens all the time," said Ted Frank, a lawyer at the Competitive Enterprise Institute in Washington and a leading national critic of legal fees in class-action lawsuits. "Lawyers pad their bills with overstated hourly work to make their fee request seem less of a windfall."

Lawyers in class-action lawsuits commonly receive a major share of any settlement because they are taking the risk that, if they lose, they will be paid nothing.

In fact, plaintiffs in the State Street case, many of them public pension funds, agreed in advance to set aside a quarter of any settlement for attorneys in their lawsuit alleging that the Boston-based bank routinely overcharged clients for their foreign currency exchanges, costing them more than $1 billion.

But, to actually collect the money, lawyers document their costs by filing affidavits under penalty of perjury.

The accounting must be based on actual time records, listing the names and hourly rates of the lawyers who worked on the case, and the total amount billed. The hourly rate is supposed to be what the lawyer would charge a paying client for similar work, including the lawyer's salary and a markup for office costs and other expenses.

That's where, critics of contingency fee lawsuits say, lawyers have a built-in opportunity to inflate their bills. And, for a variety of reasons, their bills often get little scrutiny.

"Imagine you're a lawyer and you're allowed to write your own check for your fee," explained Lester Brickman, a Yeshiva University law professor and author of "Lawyer Barons: What Their Contingency Fees Really Cost America."

"I could write $3,000, but I could add a zero and write $30,000 or add two zeroes and charge $300,000," Brickman said. "That's the honor system."

Thornton officials insist that they did nothing wrong and that the 23 staff attorneys who actually work for Labaton or a firm in San Francisco belonged on Thornton's list.

Under a cost-sharing agreement between the firms, Thornton paid part of their wages while they were reviewing millions of pages of documents in the State Street case. These lawyers just receive their usual salary and don't share in the proceeds from the settlement.

Garrett Bradley's brother, by contrast, will receive the $203,200 listed for him on the filing to Judge Wolf, according to Thornton spokesman Peter Mancusi, who noted that Michael Bradley, unlike the other staff attorneys, was not paid previously for his work.

Neither Michael Bradley nor a spokesman for Thornton would say what he did on the case, but the spokesman described him as an experienced prosecutor and fraud investigator.

Globe questions about the legal bills prompted the lead law firm in the State Street case to submit an extraordinary letter to Judge Wolf admitting that Thornton and

$4 million. The author, David Goldsmith of Labaton Sucharow, blamed the inflated bills on "inadvertent errors."

According to Goldsmith's Nov. 10 letter, Labaton and another firm, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, claimed the same staff attorneys that Thornton had listed on its legal expenses, double-counting the lawyers' cost. Goldsmith said the double-counted lawyers were employees of either Labaton or Lieff Cabraser, but their hours and costs should have been counted only once — by Thornton Law.

To resolve the issue, he said, the other firms dropped the lawyers and Thornton lowered the hourly rate it charged for numerous staff attorneys because it had assigned a higher rate than the other firms.

Despite the resulting drop in combined legal fees, Goldsmith urged Wolf not to reduce the lawyers' payment from the settlement. In class-action cases, lawyers commonly receive a payment that not only covers costs, but a financial reward for bringing a risky case that could have failed and paid nothing.

Goldsmith suggested that Wolf simply boost the reward to offset the reduced legal fees so that the firms still split the same $74 million, including $14 million for Thornton.

"We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the court's ruling on attorneys' fees," wrote Goldsmith, whose firm often joins forces with Thornton.

That may not be enough to satisfy Wolf, who has a reputation for closely questioning claims made in his court.

He called the legal fees "reasonable" at a Nov. 2 hearing and praised the plaintiffs' lawyers for taking on a "novel, risky case." But he approved the fees in part based on sworn statements that the lawyers now admit were in error. Wolf could reduce their payments, which were issued earlier this month, or hold a hearing to determine whether the lawyers knowingly submitted false information, a serious breach of professional ethics.

Case 1:11-cv-10230-MLW Document 147 Filed 12/06/12 Page 7 of 37

"The double-counting was likely the result of sloppiness, assuming that there would be no objectors' or court scrutiny of the fee request," said Frank, who has successfully challenged several settlements and fee requests in other cases, recouping more than $100 million for class members.

Frank said the problems with the legal fees go beyond the double-counting of attorneys. Other law firms contacted by the Globe said it's common to list an hourly rate for an attorney several times higher than the attorney's own pay, because the law firm has many other expenses aside from the lawyer him or herself. However, Thornton listed attorneys' rates at up to 14 times the lawyer's wages.

Frank said his analysis suggests that the $75.8 million award to the nine law firms was excessive — by at least $20 million and as much as $48.3 million — in part because the lawyers asked too much in the first place. He said that the lawyers' own documents show that, in similarly sized settlements, the legal fees average only 17.8 percent.

Thornton Law Firm, a personal injury firm that specializes in asbestos-related cases, is already the target of three investigations for its controversial campaign contribution program in which the law firm paid millions of dollars in "bonuses" to partners that offset their political contributions.

Federal prosecutors as well as two other agencies are investigating whether the bonuses were an illegal "straw donor" scheme to allow the firm to vastly exceed limits on campaign contributions. Thornton officials have insisted they did nothing wrong, because the bonuses were paid out of the lawyers' own equity in the firm.

Thornton's legal fees in the State Street case feed into a larger debate about how lawyers get paid in class-action lawsuits. Defenders of paying lawyers on contingency say the prospect of a high payoff encourages lawyers to take on exceptionally difficult cases, such as suing a wealthy bank like State Street.

However, Frank said there's little oversight of lawyers' fee claims. Defendants usually don't care what the plaintiffs' lawyers receive, because their costs don't change regardless of how much the plaintiffs' lawyers receive.

And individual plaintiffs typically get too little money to have a strong incentive to challenge legal fees. In the State Street case, the 1,300 plaintiffs would see increases in their individual payments of only about $20,000 apiece if the lawyers' fees were reduced by $20 million, Frank calculated. A plaintiff might have to spend that much or more to hire another lawyer to investigate.

None of the plaintiffs in the State Street case objected to their lawyers' request for legal fees. But neither the lawyers nor their clients apparently noticed that the exact same hours for nearly two dozen staff attorneys were claimed by more than one law firm.

"The mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media," explained Labaton partner Goldsmith, in his letter to Wolf.

Nor did they notice that Thornton consistently assigned a higher rate than the other firms for the same attorneys — often a difference of $90 an hour.

Labaton officials, in a prepared statement, said the affidavits supporting the fee request weren't as important as the percentage of the settlement fund the lawyers sought — just over 25 percent, once expenses are added.

"This fee award is reviewed by the Court for fairness . . . we believe the fees awarded are still fair," wrote Diana Pisciotta, a spokeswoman for Labaton.

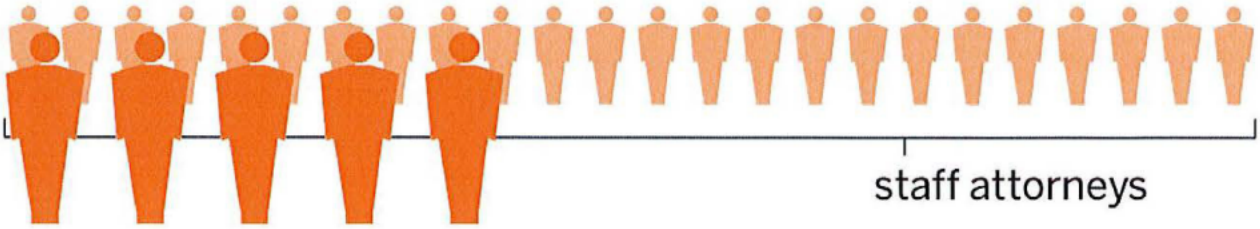
Comments

In addition to its fees from the State Street case, Thornton Law will receive a portion of the $20 million the Securities and Exchange Commission awarded a whistle-blower who alerted regulators to State Street's international currency practices.

Comments

Law firms commonly hire junior-level "staff attorneys" to review documents for $25 to $40 an hour. Thornton Law Firm took advantage of these low-paid lawyers to make millions in its lawsuit against State Street Bank.

1 Thornton says it employed 24 staff attorneys in the State Street case.



2 In court documents, Thornton listed the hourly rates for the staff attorneys at $425 to $500, more than ten times their actual pay.

One attorney's actual pay	$30
Rate listed by Thornton	$425

3 Thornton said the staff attorneys worked more than 10,000 hours on the case at a total cost of $4.5 million, accounting for 60 percent of the total costs of the case.

4 A federal judge approved Thornton's bills, and gave them a bonus for taking on such a risky lawsuit.

5 But there was a problem: 23 of Thornton's 24 staff attorneys were also listed as lawyers for other law firms working on the same case. Thornton and the other law firms double-counted the work of the staff attorneys, inflating their combined bills by $4 million.

6 The lawyers admitted the "inadvertent errors" to the judge and asked him not to reduce their legal fees.

Dear Counsel:

As you are aware, on November 8, 2016, after Judge Wolf issued the Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs (the "Fee Order," ECF No. 111), counsel in the Arkansas action received an inquiry from the Boston Globe concerning certain of the individual firm lodestar reports supporting our motion for attorneys' fees.

In response, as you are also aware, we filed a detailed letter with the Court on November 10, 2016 ("Letter," ECF No. 116). The Letter disclosed certain inadvertent errors in these submissions, and provided a corrected combined time spent, corrected combined lodestar, and the resulting corrected multiplier. Because the fee was determined based on the percentage-of-fund method, and the overstatement of the lodestar resulted only in a modest increase in the multiplier cross-check, we argued that the fee was fully supportable under the Court's stated rationale and that no changes were required.

Further, the Letter offered our apology for the errors, and indicated that we were available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

The Fee Order and the Court's Order and Final Judgment (the "Judgment," ECF No. 110) become Final on December 2, 2016, and the Settlement will become Effective shortly thereafter, on December 7, 2016.[1] Because there were no objections to the Settlement or requested fees, no Class member has standing to appeal the Fee Order or Judgment.

As of today, the Court has not acted in response to the Letter. If the Court remains silent as of close of business on December 7, 2016, we will begin the process of withdrawing the approved fees, expenses, and service awards from the Lead Counsel Escrow Account for prompt distribution to your respective firms pursuant to our agreements.

It is possible, however, that the Court, on or after December 8, 2016, will respond adversely to the Letter and ultimately reduce the fee award. This could occur after the fees, expenses and service awards have been distributed to your respective firms (and to the other ERISA counsel).

Accordingly, before we distribute your share of the fees, expenses, and service awards, we will require an undertaking, evidenced by your signature below, confirming your agreement to refund to us within five (5) business days, for redeposit into the Lead Counsel Escrow Account, your pro rata share of any Court-ordered reduction of fees, expenses, and/or service awards.

Please sign below and return an executed copy to us. Thank you for your cooperation. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Very truly yours,

Lawrence A. Sucharow

[1] The time to appeal the Judgment and Fee Order expires on December 2, 2016 (a Friday), 30 days after entry. See Settlement Agmt. ¶ 1(z)(iii). After that, however, State Street has two (2) business days to make its formal settlement offer to the SEC before the Effective Date is reached. That brings the Effective Date to December 7.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

WOLF, D.J. February 6, 2017

I. SUMMARY

Questions have arisen with regard to the accuracy and reliability of information submitted by plaintiffs' counsel on which the court relied, among other things, in deciding that it was reasonable to award them almost $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees and more than $1,250,000 in expenses. The court now proposes to appoint former United States District Judge Gerald Rosen as a special master to investigate those issues and prepare a Report and Recommendation for the court concerning them. After providing plaintiffs' counsel an opportunity to object and be heard, the court would decide whether the original award of attorneys' fees remains reasonable, whether it should be reduced, and, if misconduct has been demonstrated, whether sanctions should be imposed.

The court is now, among other things, providing plaintiffs' counsel the opportunity to consent or to object to: the appointment of a special master generally; to the appointment of Judge Rosen particularly; and to the proposed terms of any appointment. A hearing to address the possible appointment of a special master will be held on March 7, 2017, at 10:00 a.m.

II. BACKGROUND

After a hearing on November 2, 2016, the court approved a $300,000,000 settlement in this class action in which it was alleged that defendant State Street Bank and Trust overcharged its customers in connection with certain foreign exchange transactions. It also employed the "common fund" method to determine the amount of attorneys' fees to award. See In re

Thirteen Appeals Arising Out of San Juan Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 56 F.3d 295, 305 (1st Cir. 1995). The court found to be reasonable an award to class counsel of $74,541,250 in attorneys' fees and $1,257,697.94 in expenses. That award represented about 25% of the common fund.

Like many judges, and consistent with this court's long practice, the court tested the reasonableness of the requested award, in part, by measuring it against what the nine law firms representing plaintiffs stated was their total "lodestar" of $41,323,895.75. See Nov. 2, 2016 Transcript ("Tr.") at 30-31, 34; see also Manual for Complex Litigation (Fourth) § 14.122 (2004) ("the lodestar is . . . useful as a cross-check on the percentage method" of determining reasonable attorneys' fees); Vizcaino v. Microsoft Corp., 290 F.3d 1043, 1050 (9th Cir. 2002) ("[T]he lodestar may provide a useful perspective on the reasonableness of a given percentage award."). Plaintiffs' counsel represented that the total requested award involved a multiplier of $1.8%, which they argued was reasonable in view of the risk they undertook in taking this case on a contingent fee. See Memorandum of Law in Support of Lead Counsel's Motion for an Award of Attorneys' Fees (Docket No. 103-1) at 24-25 ("Fees Award Memo").

A lodestar is properly calculated by multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation by a reasonable hourly rate. See Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 889 (1984). The Supreme Court has instructed that "[r]easonable fees . . . are to be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community." Id. at 895. "[T]he rate that private counsel actually charges for her services, while not conclusive, is a reliable indicum of market value." United States v. One Star Class Sloop Sailboat built in 1930 with hull no. 721, named "Flash II", 546 F.3d 26, 40 (1st Cir. 2008)(emphasis added).[1]

In their memorandum in support of the fee request, plaintiffs' counsel represented that to calculate the lodestar they had used "current rather than historical billing rates," for attorneys working on this case. Fees Award Memo. (Docket No. 103-1) at 24. Similarly, in the related affidavits filed on behalf of each law firm counsel stated that "the hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm . . . are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services . . . ." See, e.g., Declaration of Garett J. Bradley on behalf of Thornton Law Firm LLP ("Thornton") (Docket No. 104-16) at ¶4; Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow on behalf of Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton") (Docket No. 104-15) at ¶7. In view of the well-established jurisprudence and the representations of counsel, the court understood that in calculating the lodestar plaintiffs' law firms had used the rates they each customarily actually charged paying clients for the services of each attorney and were representing that those rates were comparable to those actually charged by other attorneys to their clients for similar services in their community.

On November 10, 2016, David J. Goldsmith of Labaton, on behalf of plaintiffs' counsel, filed the letter attached hereto as Exhibit A (Docket No. 116). Mr. Goldsmith noted that the court had used the lodestar calculated by counsel as a check concerning the reasonableness of the percentage of the common fund requested for attorneys' fees. Id. at 3, n.4. Counsel stated that as a result of an "inquiry from the media" "inadvertent errors [had] just been discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heiman & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees . . . ." Id. at 1. Counsel reported that the hours of certain staff attorneys, who were paid by the hour primarily to review documents, had been included in the lodestar reports of more than one firm. Id. at 1-2. He also stated that in some cases different billing rates had been attributed to particular staff attorneys by different firms. Id. at 3.

The double-counting resulted in inflating the number of hours worked by more than 9,300 and inflating the total lodestar by more than $4,000,000. Id. at 2-3. As a result, counsel stated a multiplier of 2, rather than 1.8, should have been used to test the reasonableness of the request for an award of $74,541,250 as attorneys' fees. Id. at 3. Counsel asserted that the award nevertheless remained reasonable and should not be reduced. Id. The letter did not indicate that the reported lodestar may not have been based on what plaintiffs' counsel, or others in their community, actually customarily charged paying clients for the type of work done by the staff attorneys in this case. Nor did the letter raise any question concerning the reliability of the representations concerning the number of hours each attorney reportedly worked on this case.

Such questions, among others, have now been raised by the December 17, 2016 Boston Globe article headlined "Critics hit law firms' bills after class action lawsuits" which is attached as Exhibit B. For example, the article reports that the staff attorneys involved in this case were typically paid $25-$40 an hour. In calculating the lodestar, it was represented to the court that the regular hourly billing rates for the staff attorneys were much higher -- for example, $425 for Thornton, see Docket No. 104-15 at 7-8 of 14, and $325-440 for Labaton, see Docket No. 104-15 at 7-8 of 52. A representative of Labaton reportedly confirmed the accuracy of the article in this respect. See Ex. B at 3.

The court now questions whether the hourly rates plaintiffs' counsel attributed to the staff attorneys in calculating the lodestar are, as represented, what these firms actually charged for their services or what other lawyers in their community charge paying clients for similar services. This concern is enhanced by the fact that different firms represented that they customarily charged clients for the same lawyer at different rates. In general, the court wonders whether paying clients customarily agreed to pay, and actually paid, an hourly rate for staff attorneys that is about ten times more than the hourly cost, before overhead, to the law firms representing plaintiffs.

In addition, the article raises questions concerning whether the hours reportedly worked by plaintiffs' attorneys were actually worked. Most prominently, the article accurately states that Michael Bradley, the brother of Thornton Managing Partner Garrett Bradley, was represented to the court as a staff attorney who worked 406.40 hours on this case. See Docket No. 104-15 at 7 of 14. Garrett Bradley also represented that the regular rate charged for his brother's services was $500 an hour. Id. However the article states, without reported contradiction, that "Michael Bradley . . . normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court appointed defendant in [the] Quincy [Massachusetts] District Court." Ex. B at 1. These apparent facts cause the court to be concerned about whether Michael Bradley actually worked more than 400 hours on this case and about whether Thornton actually regularly charged paying clients $500 an hour for his services.

The acknowledged double-counting of hours by staff attorneys and the matters discussed in the article raise broader questions about the accuracy and reliability of the representations plaintiffs' counsel made in their calculation of the lodestar generally. These questions -- which at this time are only questions -- also now cause the court to be concerned about whether the award of almost $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees was reasonable.

III. THE PROPOSED SPECIAL MASTER

In view of the foregoing, the court proposes to appoint a special master to investigate and report concerning the accuracy and reliability of the representations that were made in connection with the request for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, the reasonableness of the award of $74,541,250 in attorneys' fees and $1,257,697.94 in expenses, and any related issues that may emerge in the special master's investigation. In the final judgment entered on November 11, 2016, the court retained jurisdiction over, among other things, the determination of attorneys' fees and other matters related or ancillary to them. See Final Judgment (Docket No. 110) at 10. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(h)(4) states that in class actions "the court may refer issues related to the amount of the [attorneys' fee] award to a special master . . . as provided in Rule 54(d)(2)(D)." Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(D) states that "the court may refer issues concerning the value of services to a special master under Rule 53 without regard to the limitations of Rule 53(a)(1)." As the 1993 Advisory Committee's Note explains, "the rule [] explicitly permits . . . the court to refer issues regarding the amount of a fee award in a particular case to a master under Rule 53. . . . This authorization eliminates any controversy as to whether such references are permitted . . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54 Advisory Committee's Note to 1993 Amendment.

The court proposes to exercise this authority to appoint Gerald Rosen, a recently retired United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan, to serve as special master; Judge Rosen's biography is attached as Exhibit C. The court proposes to authorize Judge Rosen to investigate all issues relating to the award of attorneys' fees in this case. If appointed, he would be empowered to, among other things, subpoena documents from plaintiffs' counsel and third parties, interview witnesses, and take testimony under oath. Judge Rosen would be authorized to communicate with the court ex parte on procedural matters, but encouraged to minimize ex parte communications, and to avoid them if possible. He would be expected to complete his duties within six-months of his appointment, if possible.

At the conclusion of his investigation, Judge Rosen would prepare for the court a Report and Recommendation concerning: (1) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made by plaintiffs' counsel in their request for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, including, but not limited to, whether counsel employed the correct legal standards and had proper factual bases for what they represented to be the lodestar for each firm and the total lodestar; (2) the reasonableness of the amount of attorneys' fees and expenses that were awarded, including whether they should be reduced; and (3) whether any misconduct occurred; and, if so, (4) whether it should be sanctioned, see, e.g., In re: Deepwater Horizon, 824 F.3d 571, 576-77 (5th Cir. 2016). The court would provide plaintiffs' counsel an opportunity to object to the Report and Recommendation and, if appropriate, conduct a hearing concerning any objections. See Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 53(f)(1). The special master's report would be reviewed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f)(3), (4) & (5).

Judge Rosen would be compensated at his regular hourly rate as a member of JAMS of $800 an hour or $11,000 a day.[2] Judge Rosen could be assisted by other attorneys and staff, who would be compensated at a reasonable rate approved in advance by the court. Judge Rosen and anyone assisting him would also be reimbursed for their reasonable expenses.

The fees and expenses of the Special Master would be paid, by the court, from the $74,541,250 awarded to plaintiffs' counsel.

[2] The court notes that plaintiffs' counsel reported billing rates of up to $1,000 an hour. See, e.g., Docket No. 104-17 at 8 of 135.

The court may order that up to $2,000,000 be returned to the Clerk of the District Court for this purpose.

As required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(b)(3)(A), Judge Rosen has submitted an affidavit disclosing whether there is any ground for his disqualification under 28 U.S.C. §455, which is attached as Exhibit D. The only matter disclosed relates to Elizabeth Cabraser, a partner in one of plaintiffs' law firms. Ms. Cabraser reportedly worked 29.50 hours on this case. Judge Rosen reports that about four years ago he asked Ms. Cabraser to become, with him and others, a co-author of the book Federal Employment Litigation. Since then they have had annually, independently submitted updates to different chapters of the book. They, and the other authors, share royalties from the book. In addition, Judge Rosen and Ms. Cabraser have participated together on panels on class actions. Although at least one lawyer from plaintiffs' law firms has appeared before Judge Rosen, Judge Rosen has had no other association with any of them.

Judge Rosen represents that he has no bias or prejudice concerning anyone involved in this matter, or any personal knowledge of potentially disputed facts concerning it. Therefore, it does not appear that his disqualification would be required by 28 U.S.C. §455(b)(1). It also appears to Judge Rosen and the court that his relationship with Ms. Cabraser could not cause a reasonable person to question his impartiality. Therefore, it appears that his recusal would not be justified pursuant to §455(a). See United States v. Sampson, 12 F. Supp. 3d 203, 205-08 (D. Mass. 2014) (Wolf, D.J.) (discussing standards for recusal under §455(a)).[3]

However, the court is providing plaintiffs' counsel the opportunity to consent to the appointment of Judge Rosen as special master on the terms discussed in this Memorandum, register any objections, and/or comment on the proposal. Among other things, plaintiffs' counsel may propose alternative eligible candidates for possible appointment. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1).[4]

IV. ORDER

In view of the foregoing it is hereby ORDERED that:

1. Plaintiffs' counsel shall file by February 20, 2017, a memorandum addressing, among other things deemed relevant: whether they object to the appointment of a special master; whether they object to the selection of Judge Rosen if a special master is to be appointed; whether they believe Judge Rosen's disqualification would be required under 28 U.S.C. § 455(a) or (b) and, in any event, whether they waive any such ground for disqualification; whether they object to any of the terms of the appointment and powers of a special master discussed in this Memorandum; and whether they propose the appointment of someone other than Judge Rosen as special master. Counsel shall provide an explanation, with supporting authority, for any objection or comment.

[3] Ideally, the court would propose a special master who presents no question of possible recusal. However, the court has found in exploring potential candidates to serve as special master that lawyers in larger law firms are unavailable because their firms have adversarial relationships with plaintiffs' counsel in other cases. Therefore, the court concluded that proposing a recently retired judge would be most feasible and appropriate.

[4] Any proposed alternative candidate must file an affidavit demonstrating that he or she does not have any conflict of interest and is not subject to disqualification pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455.

2. A hearing to address the proposed appointment of a special master generally, and Judge Rosen particularly, shall be held on March 7, 2017, at 10:00 a.m. Each of plaintiffs' counsel who submitted an affidavit in support of the request for an award of attorney's fees, see Docket Nos. 104-15 - 104-24, shall attend.[5] Michael Bradley shall also attend. In addition the representative of each lead plaintiff who supervised this litigation (not a lawyer) shall attend.[6]

[5] Such counsel are: Lawrence A. Sucharow of Labaton; Garrett J. Bradley of Thornton; Daniel P. Chiplock of Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein, LLP; Lynn Sarko of Keller Rohrback LLP; J. Brian McTigue of McTigue Law; Carl S. Kravtiz of Zuckerman Spaeder LLP; Catherine M. Campbell of Feinberg, Campbell & Zack, PC; Jonathan G. Axelrod of Beins, Axelrod, PC; and Kimberly Keevers Palmer of Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, LLC.

[6] Such individuals are: George Hopkins on behalf of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System; Arnold Henriquez; Michael T. Cohn; William R. Taylor; Richard A. Sutherland; James Pehoushek-

Judge Rosen shall also be present and may be questioned. Regardless of whether Judge Rosen is appointed special master, the court will order that he receive reasonable compensation for his time and expenses from the fee award previously made to plaintiffs' counsel.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Bank & Trust Co.,
No. 11-CV-10230 MLW

Dear Judge Wolf:

We are writing respectfully to advise the Court of inadvertent errors just discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees, which the Court granted following the fairness hearing held on November 2, 2016. See Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs ("Fee Order," ECF No. 111).

These mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media received after the hearing. The purpose of this letter is to disclose the error and provide a corrected lodestar and multiplier. We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the Court's ruling on attorneys' fees.

As the Court is aware, the submissions supporting Lead Counsel's fee application included individual declarations submitted on behalf of Labaton Sucharow, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser, reporting each firm's lodestar and number of hours billed. See ECF Nos. 104-15, at 7-9; 104-16, at 7-8; 104-17, at 8-9; see also ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

The professionals and paraprofessionals listed in these firms' respective lodestar reports include persons denoted as Staff Attorneys, or "SAs." SAs are bar-admitted, experienced attorneys hired on a temporary, though generally long-term, basis, and are paid by the hour. The SAs in this action were tasked principally with reviewing and analyzing the millions of pages of documents produced by State Street.

Seventeen (17) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.[1] Six (6) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[2] Both sets of overlap reflect the fact that as the litigation proceeded, efforts were made to share costs among counsel, such that financial responsibility for certain SAs located at Labaton Sucharow's and Lieff Cabraser's offices was borne by Thornton.

We have now determined that:

- The hours of the Alper SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly were also reported in the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.
- Certain hours reported by one of the Alper SAs (S. Dolben) in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly duplicated certain hours of another Alper SA (D. Fouchong).
- A portion of the hours of two of the Jordan SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report (C. Jordan and J. Zaul) mistakenly were also reported in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.
- The hours of two other Jordan SAs (A. Ten Eyck and R. Wintterle) mistakenly were included in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[3]

Because of these inadvertent errors, Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined lodestar of $41,323,895.75, and reported combined time of 86,113.7 hours, were overstated. See ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

[1] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are D. Alper, E. Bishop, N. Cameron, M. Daniels, S. Dolben, D. Fouchong, J. Grant, I. Herrick, D. Hong, C. Orji, D. Packman, A. Powell, A. Rosenbaum, J. Saad, B. Schulman, A. Vaidya, and R. Yamada (collectively, the "Alper SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7-8 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-15, at 7-8 (Labaton Sucharow lodestar report).

[2] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are C. Jordan, A. McClelland, A. Ten Eyck, V. Weiss, R. Wintterle, and J. Zaul (collectively, the "Jordan SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-17, at 8 (Lieff Cabraser lodestar report).

[3] The lodestar reports in the individual firm declarations submitted by ERISA counsel (ECF Nos. 104-18 to 104-23) are unaffected.

Labaton Sucharow

We have corrected these errors by removing the duplicative time. When a given SA had different hourly billing rates, we removed the time billed at the higher rate. Deducting the duplicative time from the $41.32 million reported combined lodestar results in a reduced combined lodestar of $37,265,241.25, and a reduced combined time of 76,790.8 hours.

Cross-checking the $37.27 million reduced combined lodestar against the $74,541,250 percentage-based fee awarded by the Court yields a lodestar multiplier of 2.00.[4] This is higher than the 1.8 multiplier we proffered in our submissions and during the hearing.

Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that a 2.00 multiplier remains reasonable and well-within the range of multipliers found reasonable for cross-check purposes in common fund cases within the First Circuit, and that such an enhancement of the reduced lodestar represented by the 24.85% fee awarded by the Court remains well-supported by the $300 million Settlement obtained and fees awarded in comparable cases. See Fee Brief, ECF No. 103-1, at 24-25.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that the Court should adhere to its ruling on attorneys' fees. See Fee Order ¶¶ 4, 6 (ECF No. 111)[5]; Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 36:1-2 (finding 1.8 multiplier "reasonable").

We sincerely apologize to the Court for the inadvertent errors in our written submissions and presentation during the hearing. We are available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

Respectfully submitted,

David J. Goldsmith

[4] The Court found it "appropriate in this case to use the percentage of the common fund approach in determining the amount of attorneys' fees that should be awarded." Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 22:25-23:2; see also id. at 35:12-13 ("I have used the percentage of common fund method. I've used the reasonable lodestar to check on that.").

SPOTLIGHT FOLLOW-UP

Critics hit law firms' bills after class-action lawsuits

By Andrea Estes | GLOBE STAFF DECEMBER 17, 2016

Attorneys at the Thornton Law Firm had just helped win a $300 million settlement from State Street Bank and Trust in a complicated lawsuit involving eight other law firms. Now, it was time to submit their legal fees to the judge so that they could get paid.

That's when the younger brother of Thornton managing partner Garrett Bradley emerged as a $500-an-hour "staff attorney" at the Boston firm.

Michael Bradley is a lawyer, but he normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court-appointed defender in Quincy District Court, records show. Yet, according to his older brother's sworn statement on Sept. 14, 2016, Michael Bradley's services were worth nearly 10 times that rate in the State Street case.

The elder Bradley said Michael worked 406.4 hours on the lawsuit, which centered on international currency trades, at a cost of $203,200.

Michael Bradley wasn't the only lawyerfor whose work Thornton claimed stratospheric — and questionable — legal costs in the filing to US District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf. Garrett Bradley listed 23 other staff attorneys, each with hourly rates of $425, who collectively accounted for $4 million in costs.

Comments

Law firm 'bonuses' tied to political donations

A small Boston law firm became a top funder of the national Democratic Party by paying lawyers "bonuses" for their political donations.

Candidates returning donations from Thornton Law Firm attorneys

Hassan to return law firm's donations

But one of the lawyers told the Globe he was actually paid just $30 an hour for his services — and not by Thornton. Like all the other staff attorneys on Garrett Bradley's list, except his brother, he worked for another firm in the case, which also counted his hours on its list of costs.

The sworn statement by Garrett Bradley — until recently an assistant House majority leader on Beacon Hill — raises troubling questions about the way Thornton and the other firms that brought the State Street lawsuit tallied legal costs to justify their enormous $75.8 million payday.

BRADLEY FOR SELECTMAN

Michael Bradley, Quincy attorney.

More than 60 percent of the costs that Thornton and two other law firms submitted to Judge Wolf came from the work of staff attorneys — all of them assigned hourly rates at least 10 times higher than the $25 to $40 an hour typical for these low-level positions — which involves document review.

A spokesman for the lead law firm in the case acknowledged that hourly rates the firms listed for staff attorneys were above the lawyers' actual wages, but argued that, essentially, everyone does it. Diana Pisciotta, spokeswoman for the Labaton Sucharow law firm in New York City, called it "commonly accepted practice throughout the legal community."

Critics of the way lawyers are paid in class-action lawsuits acknowledge that firms often dramatically mark up the rates of their lower-paid attorneys when seeking legal fees in court, but they say Thornton has pushed the practice to an extreme.

"This happens all the time," said Ted Frank, a lawyer at the Competitive Enterprise Institute in Washington and a leading national critic of legal fees in class-action lawsuits. "Lawyers pad their bills with overstated hourly work to make their fee request seem less of a windfall."

Lawyers in class-action lawsuits commonly receive a major share of any settlement because they are taking the risk that, if they lose, they will be paid nothing.

In fact, plaintiffs in the State Street case, many of them public pension funds, agreed in advance to set aside a quarter of any settlement for attorneys in their lawsuit alleging that the Boston-based bank routinely overcharged clients for their foreign currency exchanges, costing them more than $1 billion.

But, to actually collect the money, lawyers document their costs by filing affidavits under penalty of perjury.

The accounting must be based on actual time records, listing the names and hourly rates of the lawyers who worked on the case, and the total amount billed. The hourly rate is supposed to be what the lawyer would charge a paying client for similar work, including the lawyer's salary and a markup for office costs and other expenses.

That's where, critics of contingency fee lawsuits say, lawyers have a built-in opportunity to inflate their bills. And, for a variety of reasons, their bills often get little scrutiny.

"Imagine you're a lawyer and you're allowed to write your own check for your fee," explained Lester Brickman, a Yeshiva University law professor and author of "Lawyer Barons: What Their Contingency Fees Really Cost America."

"I could write $3,000, but I could add a zero and write $30,000 or add two zeroes and charge $300,000," Brickman said. "That's the honor system."

Thornton officials insist that they did nothing wrong and that the 23 staff attorneys who actually work for Labaton or a firm in San Francisco belonged on Thornton's list.

Under a cost-sharing agreement between the firms, Thornton paid part of their wages while they were reviewing millions of pages of documents in the State Street case. These lawyers just receive their usual salary and don't share in the proceeds from the settlement.

Garrett Bradley's brother, by contrast, will receive the $203,200 listed for him on the filing to Judge Wolf, according to Thornton spokesman Peter Mancusi, who noted that Michael Bradley, unlike the other staff attorneys, was not paid previously for his work.

Neither Michael Bradley nor a spokesman for Thornton would say what he did on the case, but the spokesman described him as an experienced prosecutor and fraud investigator.

Globe questions about the legal bills prompted the lead law firm in the State Street case to submit an extraordinary letter to Judge Wolf admitting that Thornton and

$4 million. The author, David Goldsmith of Labaton Sucharow, blamed the inflated bills on “inadvertent errors.”

According to Goldsmith’s Nov. 10 letter, Labaton and another firm, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, claimed the same staff attorneys that Thornton had listed on its legal expenses, double-counting the lawyers’ cost. Goldsmith said the double-counted lawyers were employees of either Labaton or Lieff Cabraser, but their hours and costs should have been counted only once — by Thornton Law.

To resolve the issue, he said, the other firms dropped the lawyers and Thornton lowered the hourly rate it charged for numerous staff attorneys because it had assigned a higher rate than the other firms.

Despite the resulting drop in combined legal fees, Goldsmith urged Wolf not to reduce the lawyers’ payment from the settlement. In class-action cases, lawyers commonly receive a payment that not only covers costs, but a financial reward for bringing a risky case that could have failed and paid nothing.

Goldsmith suggested that Wolf simply boost the reward to offset the reduced legal fees so that the firms still split the same $74 million, including $14 million for Thornton.

“We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the court’s ruling on attorneys’ fees,” wrote Goldsmith, whose firm often joins forces with Thornton.

That may not be enough to satisfy Wolf, who has a reputation for closely questioning claims made in his court.

He called the legal fees “reasonable” at a Nov. 2 hearing and praised the plaintiffs’ lawyers for taking on a “novel, risky case.” But he approved the fees in part based on sworn statements that the lawyers now admit were in error. Wolf could reduce their payments, which were issued earlier this month, or hold a hearing to determine whether the lawyers knowingly submitted false information, a serious breach of professional ethics.

"The double-counting was likely the result of sloppiness, assuming that there would be no objectors' or court scrutiny of the fee request," said Frank, who has successfully challenged several settlements and fee requests in other cases, recouping more than $100 million for class members.

Frank said the problems with the legal fees go beyond the double-counting of attorneys. Other law firms contacted by the Globe said it's common to list an hourly rate for an attorney several times higher than the attorney's own pay, because the law firm has many other expenses aside from the lawyer him or herself. However, Thornton listed attorneys' rates at up to 14 times the lawyer's wages.

Frank said his analysis suggests that the $75.8 million award to the nine law firms was excessive — by at least $20 million and as much as $48.3 million — in part because the lawyers asked too much in the first place. He said that the lawyers' own documents show that, in similarly sized settlements, the legal fees average only 17.8 percent.

Thornton Law Firm, a personal injury firm that specializes in asbestos-related cases, is already the target of three investigations for its controversial campaign contribution program in which the law firm paid millions of dollars in "bonuses" to partners that offset their political contributions.

Federal prosecutors as well as two other agencies are investigating whether the bonuses were an illegal "straw donor" scheme to allow the firm to vastly exceed limits on campaign contributions. Thornton officials have insisted they did nothing wrong, because the bonuses were paid out of the lawyers' own equity in the firm.

Thornton's legal fees in the State Street case feed into a larger debate about how lawyers get paid in class-action lawsuits. Defenders of paying lawyers on contingency say the prospect of a high payoff encourages lawyers to take on exceptionally difficult cases, such as suing a wealthy bank like State Street.

However, Frank said there's little oversight of lawyers' fee claims. Defendants usually don't care what the plaintiffs' lawyers receive, because their costs don't change regardless of how much the plaintiffs' lawyers receive.

And individual plaintiffs typically get too little money to have a strong incentive to challenge legal fees. In the State Street case, the 1,300 plaintiffs would see increases in their individual payments of only about $20,000 apiece if the lawyers' fees were reduced by $20 million, Frank calculated. A plaintiff might have to spend that much or more to hire another lawyer to investigate.

None of the plaintiffs in the State Street case objected to their lawyers' request for legal fees. But neither the lawyers nor their clients apparently noticed that the exact same hours for nearly two dozen staff attorneys were claimed by more than one law firm.

"The mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media," explained Labaton partner Goldsmith, in his letter to Wolf.

Nor did they notice that Thornton consistently assigned a higher rate than the other firms for the same attorneys — often a difference of $90 an hour.

Labaton officials, in a prepared statement, said the affidavits supporting the fee request weren't as important as the percentage of the settlement fund the lawyers sought — just over 25 percent, once expenses are added.

"This fee award is reviewed by the Court for fairness . . . we believe the fees awarded are still fair," wrote Diana Pisciotta, a spokeswoman for Labaton.

In addition to its fees from the State Street case, Thornton Law will receive a portion of the $20 million the Securities and Exchange Commission awarded a whistle-blower who alerted regulators to State Street's international currency practices.

How Comments

Law firms commonly hire junior-level "staff attorneys" to review documents for $25 to $40 an hour. Thornton Law Firm took advantage of these low-paid lawyers to make millions in its lawsuit against State Street Bank.

1 Thornton says it employed 24 staff attorneys in the State Street case.

2 In court documents, Thornton listed the hourly rates for the staff attorneys at $425 to $500, more than ten times their actual pay.

One attorney's actual pay	$30
Rate listed by Thornton	$425

3 Thornton said the staff attorneys worked more than 10,000 hours on the case at a total cost of $4.5 million, accounting for 60 percent of the total costs of the case.

4 A federal judge approved Thornton's bills, and gave them a bonus for taking on such a risky lawsuit.

5 But there was a problem: 23 of Thornton's 24 staff attorneys were also listed as lawyers for other law firms working on the same case. Thornton and the other law firms double-counted the work of the staff attorneys, inflating their combined bills by $4 million.

6 The lawyers admitted the "inadvertent errors" to the judge and asked him not to reduce their legal fees.

AFFIDAVIT OF GERALD E. ROSEN

Gerald E. Rosen, being duly sworn, deposes and says

1. That I make this affidavit based upon personal knowledge.
2. That I served as a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan from March 14, 1990 through January 31, 2017.
3. That I have been asked by United States District Judge Mark L. Wolf about my availability and ability to serve as the Special Master in a matter involving the application for attorney fees and costs to the Court in the case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System on behalf of itself and all others similarly situated v. State Street Bank and Trust Company, C.A. No. 11-10230 – MLW.
4. That the law firms submitting applications for fees and costs in this matter are: Labaton Sucharow LLP, The Thornton Law Firm LLP, Leiff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP, Keller Rohrback LLP, McTigue Law LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, Richardson Patrick Westbrook & Brickman LLC, Beins Axelrod PC, and Feinberg Campbell & Zack PC.
5. That pursuant to FRCivP 53(b)(3)(A) and 28 USC §455, a potential Special Master must disclose any possible conflicts or other grounds for disqualification.
6. That I do not believe there are any grounds for my disqualification to serve as a Special Master under 28 USC §455(b) and that no reasonable person would have grounds to question my impartiality under 28 USC §455(a).
7. That although there are no grounds for disqualification, I do wish to disclose a relationship with one of the named partners of one of the involved law firms, Leiff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein.
8. That I have known Elizabeth Cabraser of that firm for approximately four years and first met her when she was recommended to me as a potential new co-author of a then-existing book on which I am a co-author, Federal Employment Litigation, published by The Rutter Group, a subsidiary of Thomson Reuters.
9. That after I met with Ms. Cabraser and discussed the book, I asked her to join as a co-author. She agreed, and joined the book in 2013. The other current co-authors include Judge Amy St. Eve (ND IL), Judge Marvin Aspen (ND IL), and attorney Thomas Schuck of the Taft Stettinius & Hollister law firm.
10. That each of the five co-authors share an approximate 16% royalty from the publisher, paid semi-annually. The royalty income of one co-author is independent of that of the other co-authors.
11. That the co-authors update the book annually and divide the update work by allocating chapters with each co-author updating two or three chapters. The updates are submitted independently to the publisher, who edits the updates for incorporation into the book.
12. That beyond this, over the past four years I have attended continuing legal education programs with Ms. Cabraser and have spoken with her on two or three panels unrelated to our book.
13. That I have no other relationship with Ms. Cabraser or any other member of her firm.

14. That I have no relationships with any of the other law firms or lawyers in the case. However, it bears mention that one firm, Keller Rohrback LLP, concluded by settlement an antitrust class action before me in 2015-2016, and one of the partners of that firm, Lynn Sarko, was one of the lead lawyers on that case. Other than this, lawyers from the other firms may have appeared before me in cases over my judicial career, but I have no specific recollection of such lawyers.
15. That this affidavit is made under pain and penalty of perjury.

Further affiant sayeth not.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

WOLF, D.J. March 8, 2017

In a February 6, 2017 Order the court gave notice that it was considering appointing, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53, Retired United States District Judge Gerald Rosen as a Master to investigate and submit a Report and Recommendation concerning issues that have emerged concerning the court's award of more than $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards in this class action. The parties[1] responded to that Order. A hearing concerning this matter was held on March 7, 2017.

For the reasons described in detail at the March 7, 2017 hearing, it is hereby ORDERED that pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53:

1. Judge Rosen is appointed as Master (the "Master").[2] The Master may retain any firm, organization, or individual he deems necessary to assist him in the performance of his duties.

2. The Master shall investigate and prepare a Report and Recommendation concerning all issues relating to the attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards previously made in this case. The Report and Recommendation shall address, at least: (a) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made by the parties in their requests for awards of attorneys' fees and expenses, including but not limited to whether counsel employed the correct legal standards and had a proper factual basis for what was represented to be the lodestar for each firm; (b) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made in the November 10, 2016 letter from David Goldsmith, Esq. of Labaton Sucharow, LLP to the court (Docket No. 116); (c) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made by the parties requesting service awards; (d) the reasonableness of the amounts of attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards previously ordered, and whether any or all of them should be reduced; (e) whether any misconduct occurred in connection with such awards; and, if so, (f) whether it should be sanctioned, see e.g. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3)&(c); Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Rule of Professional Conduct 3.3(a)(1)&(3).

[1] In this Order, the nine law firms that served as class counsel and the named plaintiffs are collectively referred to as the "parties."

[2] After the disclosure required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(a)(2)&(b)(3) and discussion at the hearing, each of the law firms representing members of the class agreed that Judge Rosen's disqualification is not required by 28 U.S.C. §455(a) or (b). The McTigue Law firm withdrew its earlier objection under §455(a). Each firm also waived any possible objection under §455(a) as permitted by §455(e). The court also found that Judge Rosen's disqualification is not required by §455.

3. The Master shall proceed with all reasonable diligence, and either submit his Report and Recommendation by October 10, 2017 or request an extension of time to do so. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2).

4. The Master shall have the authority described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(c)(1) and (2). Therefore, among other things, the Master shall have the authority to compel, take, and record evidence. This includes the authority to: require the production of documents and other records from the parties and third-parties; require responses to interrogatories, and other requests for information and admissions; conduct depositions; and conduct hearings.

5. The Master may communicate ex parte with any party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

6. The Master may communicate ex parte with the court on administrative matters. The Master may also, ex parte, request permission to communicate with the court ex parte on particular substantive matters. Requests for ex parte communications with the court on substantive matters should be minimized.[3] See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

[3] In the February 6, 2017 Memorandum and Order the court proposed to permit the Master to communicate ex parte with the court only concerning administrative matters. At the March 7, 2017 hearing the court stated it might allow the Master to request an opportunity for an ex parte communication on a substantive matter. The court subsequently reviewed several orders appointing masters which all authorize ex parte communications with the court on any matter. The court now finds that substantive communications should not be completely prohibited in this case because there may be some unforeseen need for them.

As the February 6, 2017 Order did not provide notice that the court may allow the Master to communicate with it ex parte regarding substantive matters, and the court did not state at the March 7, 2017 hearing that it would do so, the parties may, by March 16, 2017, object to the granting of this authority and explain the basis for their objection. If any objection is made, the court will consider this issue further.

7. The Master may also request that a submission to the court which is being served on one or more parties be made under seal.

8. Any order issued by the Master shall be filed for entry on the docket of this case and served on each party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(d). However, the Master may request that an order be filed under seal and/or not be served on any party or all parties.

9. Any objection to an order issued by the Master shall be filed within 10 days of service. Any responses shall be filed within 10 days of the service of such objection. Any such objection will be decided in the manner described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f).

10. The Master's Report and Recommendation shall be served promptly on each party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

11. The Master shall make and preserve a complete record of the evidence concerning his recommended findings of fact and any conclusions of law. Such record shall be filed with the Master's Report and Recommendation. The Master may move to have the record filed under seal. If any such motion is made and granted, the court may require that a redacted version be filed for the public record. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(C)&(D).

12. Action on the Master's Report and Recommendation will be taken in the manner described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f).

13. Labaton Sucharow, LLP, shall, by March 14, 2017, pay to the Clerk of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts $2,000,000.[4] This payment shall be made only from the award of attorneys' fees and expenses distributed to Labaton Sucharow, LLP, the Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff, Cabrasser, Heimann & Bernstein LLP. See Fed R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3). This payment is without prejudice to any right such firms may have to seek contribution from other firms which received some of the attorneys' fees awarded on November 2, 2016 if that award is reduced in the future. It is the court's intention, however, that this $2,000,000 come solely from the funds distributed to the foregoing three firms that generated the issue that prompted the appointment of the Master.

14. From the fund established pursuant to paragraph 13 hereinabove, the court will pay the reasonable fees and the expenses of the Master and any firm, organization, or individual he may retain to assist him. The court understands that the Master will charge $800 per hour for his services and finds that rate to be reasonable.

The Master shall submit monthly, ex parte and under seal, a request for payment with a description of the hours worked and the services rendered, as well as supporting documentation for any expenses to be reimbursed.

The court intends to disclose the cost of the Master at the conclusion of these proceedings.

15. As the Master will be exercising judicial authority and performing judicial functions, the Master and those assisting him shall have the immunities of judicial officers of the United States. See Nystedt v. Nigro, 700 F.3d 25, 30 (1st Cir. 2012).

16. This Order may be modified upon request of the Master or a party, or by the court sua sponte, after providing notice and an opportunity to be heard. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4).

I spoke with David. Do you think we will have time to process his allocation once he wants it, or will it be a rush? If it will be a rush, then I want to tell accounting to bring the money into our IOLA. Otherwise, it can stay in the settlement fund, but it will take some hoops to get it out (Keller AND Larry signature).

I agree. They will threaten their own fee app which I say would invalidate the agreement we have.

That said, an agreement on allocation will not happen until the fees are actually in and need to be distributed.

THE ANDOVER COMPANIES EMPLOYEES SAVINGS AND PROFIT SHARING PLAN, on behalf of itself and JAMES PEHOUSHEK-STRANGELAND, and all others similarly situated, v. STATE STREET BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, Defendant.	No. 11-cv-11698 MLW

DECLARATION OF GEORGE HOPKINS

I, George Hopkins, hereby declare under penalty of perjury:

1. Since December 29, 2008, I have served as Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ATRS"). I am also a lawyer, and I understand the importance of a sworn declaration.

2. ATRS is the class representative in the above-captioned matter.

3. At all times during this matter, in ATRS' role as class representative I have been the primary contact between ATRS and attorneys for Labaton Sucharow ("Labaton") who represent ATRS. The majority of my communication with Labaton has been through Labaton partner Eric Belfi.

4. Labaton has done an outstanding job representing ATRS in this matter. I am very pleased with the result that Labaton helped obtain for the class. Personally, I am not aware of another law firm that could have worked as tenaciously or produced as good a result on behalf of the class as Labaton did.

5. Labaton has also represented ATRS in several other matters. In my opinion, Labaton's attorneys are talented and hard-working.

6. The fee awarded by the Court to the attorneys representing the class in this matter, including Labaton, was about 25% of the total $300 million settlement fund. Given the excellent result that Labaton helped obtain in this case, and Labaton's exceptional work representing the class throughout this case, I believe that 25% of the total settlement fund was a fair and reasonable fee award. I strongly believe that Labaton earned it.

7. I myself was not aware of Labaton's fee-sharing agreement with the Chargois & Herron law firm, or with Damon Chargois, until approximately August or September 2017.

8. I now understand that Labaton has had a fee-sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron for a number of years. I understand that, according to this agreement, Chargois & Herron believes that it is entitled to up to 20% of any fee Labaton earns as class counsel when representing ATRS as named Plaintiff. I further understand that this agreement was reached between Labaton and Chargois & Herron largely because attorneys at Chargois & Herron facilitated an introduction between ATRS and Labaton. This occurred prior to my service as Executive Director of ATRS.

9. I understand that, in the context of this matter, the "Customer Class Law Firms" – Labaton and the two other firms representing the "Customer Class," Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP and the Thornton Law Firm LLP – agreed that the three firms would fund from their respective fee awards Chargois & Herron's portion of the fee, equivalent to 5.5% of the total fee award, rather than Labaton paying 20% of its portion of the fee. I understand that, as a result of this agreement, Chargois & Herron received $4.1 million in connection with this matter.

10. In the past, Eric Belfi expressly offered to discuss with me how the plaintiffs' lawyers divide up the attorneys' fees awarded by the court. I told Mr. Belfi that I did not want to know the specifics of fee allocations between Labaton and other attorneys. I also told Mr. Belfi that if I ever wanted to know the details of Labaton's fee-sharing agreements, I would ask him. Those were my instructions, and I believe that a lawyer should follow the client's instructions.

11. My primary focus was, and has been, the amount awarded to the class, and the aggregate amount of attorney's fees. Once the aggregate attorney's fee award has been established by the Court, I am not concerned with how that aggregate fee is distributed among lawyers or law firms, because – in my view – those distributions do not affect the class.

12. Moreover, I have no interest in becoming a referee between various law firms, including local counsel. I believe that my knowledge of and involvement with fee agreements between attorneys would inevitably distract from my focus, which is protecting the class.

13. My time on this matter was extensive, and it was appropriately spent on staying very involved, including throughout the lengthy mediation process, in matters that helped protect the interests of the class.

14. Because of my instructions to Mr. Belfi regarding my desire not to know or otherwise be involved with the specifics of Labaton's fee agreements, I do not feel misled by the fact that I was unaware of Labaton's agreement with Chargois & Herron. In fact, I believe that Mr. Belfi and Labaton were following my express instructions.

15. In my view, this payment had no effect on the interests of the class. Moreover, because Labaton believed that it had an obligation to share its fee with Chargois & Herron, I understand that the Labaton lawyers would feel the need to fulfill that obligation. Although I'm sorry to see Labaton and the other Customer Class Law Firms lose any portion of their own fee, I do not object to the $4.1 million payment, paid by the Customer Class Law Firms from their own fee award, to Chargois & Herron in this matter.

16. Given my clear instructions to Mr. Belfi, I have no problem with the fact that the details of Labaton's agreement with, and payment to, Chargois & Herron were not explained to me. I am now aware of that specific agreement, the parameters of which I describe above. I now ratify that agreement, with full knowledge of it.

17. I am ratifying Labaton's fee-sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron because I do not object to it. My ratification of Labaton's agreement with Chargois & Herron is not a result of pressure from anybody, nor is it a result of any desire to avoid: inconvenience in obtaining new counsel; alienating ATRS' current counsel; any change in the quality of ATRS' representation in this matter; ATRS' position in this matter being affected; or any other reason.

I declare under the pains and penalties of perjury under the laws of the United States of America and the State of Arkansas that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed this 15th day of March, 2018 in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corporation
Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230-MLW (D. Mass.)

Dear Counsel:

I am pleased we were able to come to terms and will be working together in this matter. I have outlined below the terms of the agreement we have reached.

Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher") will be represented in the action by Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow") as Lead Counsel, and Thornton & Naumes LLP ("Thornton & Naumes") and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") will serve as additional counsel for Arkansas Teacher in this action.

Arkansas Teacher has made an application to the Court for appointment of its selection of Labaton Sucharow as Interim Lead Counsel. In the event that the Court appoints Labaton Sucharow as interim Lead Counsel and subsequently as Lead Counsel, we agree as follows:

We agree that our firms will act in good faith to divide the work so that each of the firms performs at least 20% of the work and each will receive at least 20% of the fees awarded in this matter. The remaining 40% of the fees awarded shall be allocated in good faith at the conclusion of the case based on each firms' actual time spent on this matter..

There is an "off the top" obligation to referring counsel of 6% of the fees awarded. In addition, we agree to exchange on a quarterly basis our then current lodestar reports showing quarterly and aggregate billings in this matter.

We also agree that any dispute arising under this agreement or in this case may not be litigated in court and that all such disputes or claims shall be resolved, upon election of any party, through binding arbitration conducted pursuant to the applicable rules of the American Arbitration Association in any jurisdiction in which any of the firms reside.

Please sign below indicating your agreement to these terms.

Very truly yours,

Christopher Keller, Esq.

Accepted and agreed by:

State Street can be a one off since it's not a securities class action and there are other relevant unique attributes. I like the idea of bringing him to the current best deal and that is 10% of our lodestar and 20% of our gravy. In most cases that will lead to a referral of about 15% and protects us in cases like spectrum where we only got a .7 on our time.

I do not have a problem with that. However, we need to deal with other issue soon – it does not make sense to leave it outstanding.
We also have to deal with Spectrum. Since we are getting .68 on our time, should we reduce him to 14 percent – I will call to discuss this issue with him.

Bob,

As you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this email regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be (4%, 5% etc.), will be paid off the top with the balance of the overall fee spilt between Lieff, Labaton and Thornton pursuant to our agreement.

The local asked that I copy him on this email so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him he was agreeable to this as well.

Bob,

I was thinking about our call this morning yesterday while working out and I thought it might be helpful to put things in writing so everyone can see what we at Thornton are thinking. As I have said, before we start being equal in state street we need to be on an even par in both cases. What I mean by that is, even though you had no client, jurisdiction or concept Mike Thornton went and fought for you, and Lieff the entity, by using his influence with Labaton to get you 20% of state street. As I said yesterday, who was looking out for his interests in Mellon? Where was the corresponding deal? There was discussion of the same deal when we were in CA but Hausfield, who you brought in, did not sign and then we got sent to the MDL. Then you brought in Ohio for leverage in the MDL and Mike asked you what our fee interests were. I know because I was pressing him on it. He told me you said "we are in it together". Let's put some numbers behind what I am saying.

Because of Mike's advocacy, and only Mike's advocacy, you have a minimum in State street.We both know what that number is will be subject to many factors. But even in a low scenario of a $60 million fee it could break down as follows:

$60 million fee:

$5,400,000 to Erisa
$3,000,000 to arkansas local

That leaves $51,600,000. For the sake of argument let's say Labaton sticks with the "we want half" that leaves $25,800,000. Under the deal we each get 20% of the $51,600,000 which is $10,320,000 each which equals $20,640,000. Leaving a balance of $5,160,000.

Your position is you want to give us 10% of Mellon but an equal split of the residual (and discussion with Labaton of coming off their "we want half"). In Mellon you have $20million in Lodestar and you want to get $30million. So we would get $2-3 million (plus our lodestar) in mellon only to give it back to you in state street by splitting the residual balance $5,160,000 50/50? Would you agree to this under these circumstances?

Here is how I propose we get to par. We fought for you to get at least $10,320,000 in state street and here is how I believe you should reciprocate:

Our lodestar $1.5 million- $2.5 million depending on Judge 20% of Lieff fee $4million-$6million depending on Judge (if you get Kessler to cover some that is your business) What we have or likely will get total from relator cases $1.5-$2 million

Gives us between $7 million and $9.5 million.

This gets us close enough to par with your $10,320,000 in state street. Then this is a basis for us to fight to get Labaton lower and certainly fair enough for us to split what ever the residual is. In our conversation, you keep trying to make up what you give us in Mellon back in state street and respectfully, that is unacceptable.

Also you raised that Chiplock said everything we provided in Mellon was already public. It was public because of our filings in Virginia and Florida (which were copied by Kessler, a point we will need to make in our own fee application). You also said Dan was considering his own fee application in State Street. The difference is we have real story to tell Judge Kaplan. We did what he said, we changed an industry and the federal investigations followed not the other way around. Lief can't tell a similar story to Judge Wolf in state street. Also, we would have to take the position, and I suspect Labaton would as well, that if you do that the deal we have is invalidated.

I really do not want to have to do my own fee application as my friends at Lieff may get hurt and I don't want that. However I do want them to recall we are friends and hope they treat us accordingly. I see no need to meet with Chiplock/Lesser but am happy to meet with you and Steve Fineman on Tuesday of next week perhaps for an early drink to see if we can come to a resolution and continue to work together on new projects in the future. Mike T is available as well. Together our firms have done great work and I hope we can equally be respected for that. Thanks for your time and effort.

Bob,
I am driving but took a quick look at your email and pulled over to type this. I think you are misunderstood. I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter. As I have said before, because of Mike Thornton's advocacy, you are guaranteed at least 20% of the State Street case in which you have no client and did not develop the concept. Yet, we have no corresponding protection in the Mellon matter. Happy to discuss further at any time.

Garrett,

I called and suggested that we have a meeting together with the Labaton people to talk about putting in writing an understanding of the fee division in this case.

You, Mike and I have discussed the State Street fee division and have focused on the existing verbal understanding that was reached on November 9, 2010, with Chris Keller. We agreed that among the three firms we will each have a 20% interest in the fee with the balance to be divided later. Of course, we also have to factor in the 9% that ERISA counsel get pursuant to written agreement and a provision for Arkansas local counsel.

You and I have agreed that it would be equitable to divide the balance of the fee with Labaton getting 50% and each of our firms 25%. This would result in a fee division as follows:

Labaton	33.0	(20 + 13)
Thornton	26.5	(20 + 6.5)
Lieff Cabraser	26.5	(20 + 6.5)
ERISA	9.0
Arkansas Local	5.0
	100.0%

If we put the above into an agreement among the three firms, that would certainly provide protection for everyone.

Thank you for the tip Dan. I did say something like that on the call, but preceded it by saying it was a guess and that I would have to ask Mike Lesser for the actual figure at that point which of course is not complete as with the other firms. I appreciate your concern and I guess I can only assure you that it generally our policy to truthful and accurate hour claims.

No problem. It may be tomorrow since I have to go back to archives.

In the meantime, while we're on the subject of credibility, I want to point out that we need to be consistent and credible with our lodestar reporting in State Street. We are gathering final lodestar reports now, but I heard third-hand that Mike recently said on a call (that I wasn't on) that Thornton Law Firm was showing $14 million. That number does not comport with the hours Mike Lesser told me for Thornton as of June 29 (around 12,750), which make more sense given what we know about the work that was done. I am hopeful Mike T. simply misspoke or was guessing when he said $14 million and that we are not going to suddenly see an additional 12,000 hours mysteriously appear on Thornton Law Firm's behalf. I would expect that you would object if LCHB or Labaton tried something like that, and ERISA counsel certainly will (and tie up this process as long as possible) if they suspect anything remotely amiss on that front. Let's not make problems for ourselves that we don't need. Also recognize that your reviewers were all housed outside of your firm and their respective overhead and facilities expenses were paid for by others, which we were happy to do as a courtesy. Thanks.

> This idea of "protection" in BNYM is where I think we keep talking past each other. The bottom line is that LCHB is the least protected of all in that case. This is the fact that has kept me up at night for 2.5 years while we've continued pouring lodestar into that case (because we had to). We invested the most in order to try to get a class certified there and to sufficiently man 110 depositions, defend counterclaims, etc., but if Judge Kaplan takes a negative view of the value of document review/analysis (our arguments to the contrary notwithstanding), then LCHB will get hit the hardest. You are totally shielded from this because you didn't invest in document review. In other words, LCHB has a real risk of actually losing money in BNYM. You have virtually no risk of that. If Thornton is not treated "fairly" in BNYM by the Court it will be because nobody (least of all LCHB) was treated "fairly." It's not clear to me what it is you expect in that circumstance.
> The $10 million in State Street that you mention below also does not make up for LCHB's investment in that case. And we've certainly contributed our share to the result in State Street, having litigated BNYM (thus substantially increasing the value of State Street) and developed the ch. 93A theory (the most readily certifiable claim in State Street, and by far the most valuable).

What I am pointing out is the inequities of our different positions. In Mellon, when we had created that case by developing the fx case all that we got was some work that resulted in $1.5 million in time. Also please elaborate on your statement that "the work was not getting done".

I think you would agree we have protected you better in state street than we are protected in Mellon. Once we have an idea of what our Mellon number looks like then we can discuss how to approach the balance of the 40% with Labaton .

I also gave your firm more assignments than others at the outset in BNYM, until it became clear that the work simply wasn't getting done. In other words, we've each tried to look out for the other in the past. This has been far from a one-way street.

I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter. As I have said before, because of Mike Thornton's advocacy, you are guaranteed at least 20% of the State Street case in which you have no client and did not develop the concept. Yet, we have no corresponding protection in the Mellon matter. Happy to discuss further at any time.

If the Arkansas and ERISA fees didn't come off the top, I guess the split would look like this:
Labaton& - 20%
LCHB – 20%
Thornton – 20%
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 26%
&
&
If the Arkansas and ERISA fees do come off the top, I guess the split looks like this:
&
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton – 17.2%
LCHB – 17.2%
Thornton – 17.2%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 34.4%
I'm not the math wizard, so please correct me if anyone comes up with different figures.

Just my own thinking on this but I think the deal with them would be that their percentage does come off the top (although what the top is is another question). I can't imagine how else it would be calculated since all the other fees are two customer counsel.

Dan sorry for that last email that I didn't spellcheck.&
Basically what I'm trying to say is I understand the basic agreement to be that after payment of all other counsel, our three firms shall each receive 20%, with the distribution of the balance of 40% to be determined later.

Attached are my redlines to the preliminary approval order and final judgment.& These edits are consistent with the Court's January 2012 order concerning leadership structure.&
I'm emailing just you (and copying Bob) so as to try not to make a big thing over this, but I do think it's appropriate to memorialize what the fee allocation amongst customer class counsel is going to be (consistent with the understanding that the firms have been operating under for a couple years now) before we proceed much further.& & I think we'd be willing to support Lead Counsel having final authority over fee and expense allocations, etc., for purposes of the settlement stip, and thus present a united front against a perpetual troublemaker like McTigue—which should be in everyone's interest--provided we had some basic written comfort ourselves.& I don't think it's too early for that, given the interest in seeing the funds come in this year.

Thanks for sending this.& Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.
&
Two things:

1.& I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down.& & So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?

What do you think??

Labaton - 20%
LCHB – 20%
Thornton – 20%
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 26%

If the Arkansas and ERISA fees do come off the top, I guess the split looks like this:

ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton – 17.2%
LCHB – 17.2%
Thornton – 17.2%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 34.4%

I'm not the math wizard, so please correct me if anyone comes up with different figures.

Just my own thinking on this but I think the deal with them would be that their percentage does come off the top (although what the top is is another question). I can't imagine how else it would be calculated since all the other fees are two customer counsel.

Dan sorry for that last email that I didn't spellcheck.
Basically what I'm trying to say is I understand the basic agreement to be that after payment of all other counsel, our three firms shall each receive 20%, with the distribution of the balance of 40% to be determined later.

If that is the agreement you are referring to, I can confirm it. Let me know.

David
Thanks for sending this. Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.

Two things:

1. I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down. So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?

What do you think??

Lynn

All: The below reflects our proposed revisions to the Term Sheet (in red boldface) to reflect the imminent deal with the DOL on fees and expenses as certain of us discussed this morning (DOL has advised that they want the deal memorialized in the Term Sheet). Please comment. Thanks.

8(n). Plan of Allocation. . . . The amount allocated to the ERISA Plans and Investment Companies and other Settlement Class Members shall be increased or decreased by their proportional share (with respect to the Class Settlement Amount) of any interest, costs (including costs of notice and administration), expenses (including taxes), and fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' Counsel obtained or paid pursuant to permission of the Court. However, notice and administration expenses attributable solely to the claims of Class Members categorized as Group Trusts shall be paid solely out of the ERISA allocation, and the cost of any ERISA Independent Fiduciary shall be borne solely by SSBT and shall not be paid out of the Class Settlement Amount.

12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel ~~shall~~ may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

1.4% of $70 Million (if we're lucky) or $1Million. That assumes 34.4% (also if we're lucky).

Dan - If you take ERISA and Arkansas local off the top, you end up with the following:

Labaton	34.4
Thornton	25.8
Lieff Cabraser	25.8
ERISA		9.0
Arkansas Local	5.0
			100.0

This is still predicated on dividing the remaining 25/25. Labaton and Thornton have not agreed to that as you can see from Garrett's email of 2:17pm EDT.

Can we leave para 8(n) the general way it is and protect the DOL through the express provision of para 12 limiting fees charged to ERISA allocation to $10.9 million?

David
Thanks for sending this. Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.

Two things:

1. I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works–but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"–since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees–that won't be going up or down. So–question–can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph–does it still work?

What do you think??

Subject: SST--Proposed Revision to Term Sheet for DOL Deal

All: The below reflects our proposed revisions to the Term Sheet (in red boldface) to reflect the imminent deal with the DOL on fees and expenses as certain of us discussed this morning (DOL has advised that they want the deal memorialized in the Term Sheet). Please comment. Thanks.

8(n). Plan of Allocation. . . . The amount allocated to the ERISA Plans and Investment Companies and other Settlement Class Members shall be increased or decreased by their proportional share (with respect to the Class Settlement Amount) of any interest, costs (including costs of notice and administration), expenses (including taxes), and fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' Counsel obtained or paid pursuant to permission of the Court. However, notice and administration expenses attributable solely to the claims of Class Members categorized as Group Trusts shall be paid solely out of the ERISA allocation, and the cost of any ERISA Independent Fiduciary shall be borne solely by SSBT and shall not be paid out of the Class Settlement Amount.

12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

Bob I resent it to you awhile ago. It is the agreement that whatever the obligation is to the Arkansas firm it is off the top. Everyone agreed several years ago. I'll send it when I am at the office. Your assent is in the email string.

So yes, everyone's 20% would be out of the net after Arkansas and after ERISA. That is our understanding, and from my conversations with Bob Lieff, that is his understanding as well as Larry's.

I think we'd be willing to support Lead Counsel having final authority over fee and expense allocations, etc., for purposes of the settlement stip, and thus present a united front against a perpetual troublemaker like McTigue—which should be in everyone's interest--provided we had some basic written comfort ourselves. I don't think it's too early for that, given the interest in seeing the funds come in this year.

> 12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

Bob,

As you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this email regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be (4%, 5% etc.), will be paid off the top with the balance of the overall fee spilt between Lieff, Labaton and Thornton pursuant to our agreement.

The local asked that I copy him on this email so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him he was agreeable to this as well.

I had to go through archives to find this, but I guess Garrett sent me this email back in April 2013 as well. I had no memory of it. In any event, it's useful because it confirms the 20-20-20 arrangement going back more than 3 years ago. But I have to admit being confused as to how the local counsel's fee gets calculated. I think what he is saying is that the local counsel's fee will be the equivalent of 20% of Labaton's fee, but Labaton is sharing the responsibility for that fee with us and Thornton. The challenging part is you don't know what local counsel's fee is until Labaton's fee has been decided upon.

EXPERT REPORT OF WILLIAM B. RUBENSTEIN

1. I am the Sidley Austin Professor of Law at Harvard Law School and a leading national expert on class action law generally and class action fees in particular.[1] The law firm Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") has retained me to provide my expert opinion in response to the class action aspects of Professor Stephen Gillers's Ethical Report for Special Master Gerald E. Rosen (hereafter "Gillers Report"), dated February 23, 2018, and his subsequent deposition testimony, provided on March 20–21. Based on my review of these materials and the record in this case,[2] I state the following three opinions:

- Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee allocation agreements absent judicial order, courts rarely order disclosure or involve themselves in fee allocation, and the Court in this case issued no such order. (Part I, infra). Rule 23(h) governs the procedures for fee awards to class counsel in class action cases. Rule 23(h)(1) states that the fee petition must be made according to the provisions of Rule 54(d)(2). Rule 54(d)(2) states that a fee petitioner must disclose "the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made," only "if the court so orders." Class action practice accords with the letter of the law. For purposes of this Report, I undertook an empirical review of all class action settlements in cases filed in this District in the past seven years. In the 127 settlements identified, I found not a single order requiring disclosure of fee agreements and only a handful of cases in which the Court even addressed fee agreements in any way. In this case, Judge Wolf did not utilize his authority to order disclosure of fee agreements.

- Professor Gillers's four attempts to advocate around the text of Rules 23 and 54 are unconvincing. (Part II, infra). Professor Gillers proposes a modified reading of Rules 23/54, requiring class counsel affirmatively to identify lawyers receiving a fee allocation whose identities may be unknown to the Court. The text of the

[1] In a report that I submitted to the Special Master on July 31, 2017, I provided my qualifications to serve as an expert and disclosed my prior relationship to this case and these firms, see Expert Declaration of William B. Rubenstein 3–12 (July 31, 2017). I therefore do not repeat that information here. The primary addition to my c.v. since that time is that the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania appointed me to serve as the court's expert witness on certain attorney's fees issues in the NFL concussion litigation, a task that I completed this winter. See In re National Football League Players' Concussion Injury Litigation, No. 2:12-md-02323-AB, ECF No. 8376 (Sept. 14, 2017).

[2] A list of the documents that I have reviewed is attached as Exhibit A.

applicable rules does not support this reading, no court has ever articulated it, it is at odds with an understanding of class action practice, and it requires a tortured use of the English language to defend. Similarly, Professor Gillers provides a set of six random snippets of class action law to argue that the principles underlying class action practice require disclosure of fee agreements absent judicial request. Although the principles themselves are largely unobjectionable, they do not magically reverse the language of Rule 54. This is particularly true in that the class action experts who drafted Rule 23(h) were well aware of these principles, yet struck the balance between the court's duty to absent class members and class counsel's representational authority by adopting the letter of Rule 54. Professor Gillers's Report implies that the Court investigated the fee allocation at the fairness hearing, triggering duties of disclosure and candor; he conceded at his deposition that the Court did not do so explicitly and his efforts to show that the Court did so implicitly are unconvincing. Finally, Professor Gillers argues that federal common law/equity required Lieff Cabraser to have sensed wrong-doing, inquired into the Chargois Arrangement,[3] and then reported it to the Court; but when presented with the facts surrounding Lieff Cabraser's actual knowledge in real time, Professor Gillers conceded that the firm lacked the information to detect wrong-doing and hence no investigatory duty – which would have been futile in any case – or disclosure obligation attached. In short, given Labaton's communications concerning Chargois's relationship to and work on the case, Lieff Cabraser simply had no reason to question the veracity of Chargois's fee allocation.

- Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee allocation agreements in the class's notice. (Part III, infra). Rule 23(e)(1) requires a court to provide notice to the class of a proposed class action settlement and Rule 23(h)(1) requires notice to the class of a proposed fee petition. Neither section requires provision of fee allocation agreements to the class. In a case in which the Court did not require disclosure of fee agreements under Rule 54(d)(2), counsel had no duty to supply fee allocation information to the class.

2. I am a strong proponent of transparency in the class action fee process and a strong believer that the more information the Court has, the better for the class. I am equally committed to the rule of law, that is, to not confusing my preference for what the law should be with the reality of what the law is. Current class action law and practice simply do not support the conclusion that Lieff Cabraser had an obligation to disclose the limited (and ultimately inaccurate) information it had about the Chargois Arrangement to the Court or to the class, absent an order requiring disclosure of fee agreements.

[3] This phase is a defined term in Professor Gillers's report. Gillers Report at 33 ("As consideration for Chargois' efforts, Belfi and Keller agreed to pay Chargois' firm, Chargois & Herron, a maximum 20% of any attorney's fees received by Labaton in any litigation involving an institutional investor for whom Chargois had facilitated the introduction, including ATRS (hereinafter 'the Chargois Arrangement').").

I.
RULE 23 DOES NOT REQUIRE DISCLOSURE OF FEE AGREEMENTS ABSENT JUDICIAL ORDER AND JUDGE WOLF ISSUED NO SUCH ORDER IN THIS CASE

3. Fees in class action cases of this magnitude proceed in two phases: first, the court awards an aggregate fee to all class counsel following the filing of a motion, notice to and possible objection by the class, and a hearing; second, the aggregate fee is allocated among the lawyers whose work benefitted the class.[4] While the court has complete authority over both the aggregate fee and the ultimate allocation, judges almost invariably leave allocation to lead counsel's initial discretion, saving judicial intervention for those instances in which the lawyers are unable to agree on an allocation.[5]

[5] Such deference is typically premised on expertise. See, e.g., In re High Sulfur Content Gasoline Prod. Liab. Litig., 517 F.3d 220, 234 (5th Cir. 2008) ("It is likely that lead counsel may be in a better position than the court to evaluate the contributions of all counsel seeking recovery of fees."). Courts are also content to permit counsel to self-allocate because the job is a messy one. See William B. Rubenstein, Divvying Up the Pot: Who Divides Aggregate Fee Awards, How, and How Publicly?, 1 Class Action Attorney Fee Digest 127 (May 2007) ("But once the aggregate fee has been awarded, to whom does it go and who decides? Technically, the court has the power to decide which plaintiff attorneys get what amount of money. But no judge in her right mind wants to undertake this task, particularly in cases involving large numbers of plaintiff attorneys."). Yet judicial involvement is occasionally necessary, particularly as lead counsel is not a disinterested allocator. See In re Diet Drugs Prod. Liab. Litig., 401 F.3d 143, 173 (3d Cir. 2005) (Ambro, J., concurring) ("[C]ounsel have inherent conflicts. They make recommendations on their own fees and thus have a financial interest in the outcome. How much deference is due the fox who recommends how to divvy up the chickens?").

4. Fee agreements may arise in either phase.[6] At the fee-setting stage, there may be agreements between the class representative and class counsel (particularly in cases governed by the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PSLRA)),[7] or agreements between class counsel and the defendants,[8] that may be pertinent in setting the aggregate fee. At the allocation stage, there may be agreements between and among the lawyers whose work generated the class's recovery;[9] indeed, if the lawyers are able to allocate the fee among themselves without judicial involvement, the allocation accord itself is effectively an agreement about fees.

5. Rule 23(h), enacted in 2003, provides clear guidance to these fee processes.[10] It mandates notice and opportunity to be heard to the class for the aggregate fee-setting,[11] as the class's interests are directly at stake. And it leaves allocation and other fee agreements to the lawyers, absent a judicial order requiring disclosure. Specifically, Rule 23 adopts the procedures of Rule 54(d)(2), as applicable.[12] Both Rule 23[13] and Rule 54[14] require a fee claim to be made by motion. Rule 54(d)(2)(B) sets forth the required content of a fee motion, including the requirement that the motion must "disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made."[15] Rule 23(h) and Rule 54 are therefore clear in mandating the submission of fee agreements – including those concerning the allocation of fees among counsel – only upon court order.

[7] Class counsel's retainer agreement with an individual class representative is rarely pertinent to their final fee given the general lack of sophistication of most class representatives. See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:74. In PSLRA cases, however, the class representatives (called "lead plaintiffs") are often large institutional investors who are statutorily charged with selecting class counsel (called "lead counsel") and who sometimes negotiate sophisticated fee agreements with class counsel; courts are more likely to respect such agreements when taxing the class for counsel's fee. Id. at § 15:75.

[8] These are often called "clear sailing agreements." See Rubenstein, 4 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 13:9. For a discussion of courts' deference to them, see id. at § 15:76.

6. Occasionally, local district court rules mandate disclosure of fee agreements,[16] but this is rare: even the Northern District of California – which has elaborate procedural guidance governing class action settlement approval, including the requirement that counsel submit their lodestar for cross-check purposes – does not mandate disclosure of fee-sharing agreements.[17] The District of Massachusetts has no local rule on point – indeed, no local rule regarding class action practice (or Rule 54) at all.[18] Some judges also maintain standing rules for litigation in their courtroom that could, in theory, address this topic. Judge Wolf has no such rules.[19]

7. In practice, judges rarely order disclosure of agreements as to fees.[20] To confirm that statement for purposes of this Report, my research assistants and I conducted an empirical investigation of the dockets in all class action cases filed in this District since February 2, 2011 (the date on which this action was filed).[21] Among the 1,226 dockets we reviewed, 127 reached a class action settlement. In those 127 class action settlements, we found not a single judicial order requiring that the lawyer disclose fee agreements under Rule 54(d)(2). In fact, other than reference to clear sailing agreements,[22] agreements as to fees were referenced in only about five cases altogether. In one case, the Magistrate Judge asked the lawyers during a conference if "there [was] any fee agreement with anybody in this case," to which class counsel responded by noting that they had entered into a contingency-fee agreement with the named plaintiff that they could submit if the court desired; we found no evidence that the court followed up on this matter, and class counsel received the fees it requested. In another case, the plaintiffs' attorneys disclosed sua sponte that two class counsel firms that were jointly representing one of the named plaintiffs had agreed to evenly divide their fees regardless of their individual lodestars; we again found no evidence that the court followed up on this matter, and the court granted class counsel's fee petition for the amount requested without commenting on the agreement. The final three cases were the Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island versions of 46 state-wide class actions against Sprint litigated by the same group of attorneys. Class counsel in all three cases disclosed that the group of firms that had settled the entire set of cases with the defendant had agreed to share a portion of the fee awards they received from each individual action. The courts in all three cases signed near-identical fee-approval agreements and do not appear to have inquired further about the fee-sharing agreement. Although it is possible that we missed some information in reviewing more than 1,000 dockets in a short period of time, I am confident that our data provide empirical support for the conclusion that courts rarely request fee allocation agreements and that class counsel do not typically volunteer fee allocation agreements without specific instruction from the court. This conclusion is further supported by the fact that a search in Westlaw for the operative legal rule – 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) – turns up 13 cases, only two of which contain the words "class action;" one is the Second Circuit's decision in the Bernstein case discussed below,[23] and the other denies a motion by a class member seeking disclosure of lead counsel's fee agreements with the lead plaintiffs.[24] CoPERA's request for Lead Counsel's retainer agreements is denied.").

[20] I have urged them to change this practice. See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:12 (stating that "[w]hile Rule 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) makes disclosure of such agreements dependent on a judicial order, there are at least two reasons that courts should regularly order disclosure" and discussing policy rationale in support of disclosure).

8. Applying class action law and practice to the facts of this case, it is inarguable that:

- Rule 23(h)(2) and Rule 54(d)(2) require disclosure of fee agreements only upon judicial order.
- The District of Massachusetts maintains no local rule that mandates disclosure of agreements as to fees.
- Judge Wolf has no standing order in his Court that mandates disclosure of agreements as to fees.
- Judge Wolf made no Rule 23/54 order mandating disclosure of agreements as to fees.

9. Given the governing legal structure, the absence of any local rule, standing order, or specific Rule 23/54 judicial order requiring disclosure of fee agreements, it is my first expert opinion that the parties settling this case generally, and Lieff Cabraser in particular, complied with the requirements of Rule 23 as to disclosure of fee agreements.

II.
PROFESSOR GILLERS'S ATTEMPTS TO ADVOCATE AROUND THE TEXT OF RULES 23 AND 54 ARE UNCONVINCING

10. Professor Gillers attempts to evade application of the clear mandate of Rules 23(h)(2)/54(b)(2) in four distinct ways: (a) by advocating that it does not apply to non-identified counsel; (b) by advocating that background principles trump reliance on the terms of the Rules; (c) by advocating that the Court, at the fairness hearing, implicitly solicited allocation information; and (d) by advocating that some general common law/equity principles required Lieff Cabraser to discern problems with, inquire into, and thence disclose the Chargois Arrangement. None of these efforts is convincing.

Rules 23/54 Do Not Distinguish Between Identified and Non-identified Counsel

11. Professor Gillers initially acknowledges, as he must, the clear text of Rule 23(h) and Rule 54, but he then aims to qualify the text's application with the following modifier:

> While there may not have been a duty under Rules 23 and 54 to disclose the division of fees among those lawyers whom the Court knew about, and so could inquire, the Court could not be expected to ask counsel about a division of fees with Chargois, a lawyer who had not appeared in the case and whom it did not know about. Labaton's construction of its obligation under Rule 54(d)(2), endorsed by its expert, would impose on the Court the affirmative responsibility to ask: "Is anyone else getting any portion of the attorney's fees you are asking me to award and whose existence you have not revealed?"[25]

As is evident from this text, Professor Gillers is obviously offering an interpretation of Rule 54(d)(2), specifically, that the Rule does not require the disclosure of fee agreements among known counsel absent judicial order, but that it places on class counsel an affirmative obligation to disclose fee agreements between known and unknown counsel in all circumstances. Five aspects of this approach, and the passage above, are telling.

a. First, Professor Gillers himself repudiated this entire argument at his deposition, disclaiming any reliance on Rule 54 "as the source of authority or obligation to disclose participation of a lawyer whom the Court does not know about."[26]

[25] Gillers Report at 67 (emphasis in original).

[26] The full colloquy reads:

> Q: All right. What are the circumstances under Rule 54 which specifically says under (d)(2)(B) that disclosure is only required if the Court orders it -- what are the circumstances, if any, in which you say that disclosure is required even if the Court didn't order it?
> A: I'm not relying on Rule 54 as the source of authority or obligation to disclose participation of a lawyer whom the Court does not know about.

b. Second, it is not surprising that Professor Gillers repudiated his reliance on Rule 54 as the source of this argument, as neither the text of Rule 23 nor that of Rule 54 contains the qualifier for which Professor Gillers once advocated.

c. Third, Professor Gillers does not cite a single case that supports the modifier that he once proposed.

d. Fourth, Professor Gillers's desired qualifier embodied a misunderstanding of class action law. It wrongly assumed that a class action court generally knows the identities of most of the lawyers who work on a class action case, likely because Professor Gillers assumes class counsel's lodestar is routinely submitted to a court at the fee stage. But in about 80% of class action cases, courts award fees according to the percentage method and in about half of those cases, courts do not ask for and counsel do not supply the lawyers' lodestar[27] – that is, the names of all of the timekeepers in the case, the hours they spent on the matter, and their hourly rates.[28] Thus, in nearly 40% of class action cases, courts are not provided the names of lawyers who worked on the case and who might, on that ground, be in line to receive a portion of the award. Moreover, class action fee awards are sometimes allocated to other lawyers, such as Gillers Dep. 114:23–115:7, Mar. 20, 2018 [hereinafter Gillers Dep.]. Under questioning from counsel for the Special Master, Professor Gillers repeated the concession. See id. at 349:11–13 ("Q: All right. How about Rule 54? Was your opinion based on that? A: No.").

[27] See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:67 (stating that courts use a pure percentage approach in 37.8% of cases and a percentage approach with a lodestar cross-check in 42.8% of cases) (reporting on data from Theodore Eisenberg & Geoffrey P. Miller, Attorney Fees and Expenses in Class Action Settlements: 1993-2008, 7 J. Empirical Legal Stud. 248, 272 (2010)).

[28] Courts do not ask and counsel do not supply their lodestar because most circuits explicitly provide district courts with discretion as to whether to perform such a "lodestar cross-check" in percentage award cases. See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:88 (surveying circuit approaches).

those who helped fund the case or whose work prior to the class action helped secure the class's relief.[29] Even if counsel submit a lodestar for cross-check purposes, these lawyers may not appear there. There are, therefore, a variety of situations in which the identities of counsel sharing in a fee award are routinely unknown to the class action court. This fact renders Gillers' once-proposed modifier peculiar: as the class court often does not know the identity of many lawyers working on the case, the obvious question an interested court would ask is, "Who all is sharing in the fee?," not, "Who is sharing in the fee that I don't know about?" Put differently, a theatre-goer would understand that she could identify the actors during the play but that she would need a playbill to identify the crew. So too, the class action experts who drafted Rule 23(h) were well aware that a class action case encompasses cast and crew – and they nonetheless chose the default embodied in Rule 54: that fee allocation agreements need not be disclosed absent judicial request, that the judge must ask for the playbill. Class action law and practice thus belie the new qualifier for which Professor Gillers once advocated, but no longer defends.[30]

e. Fifth, Professor Gillers's once-proposed modifier is tendentiously framed in two critical respects. He initially writes, "While there may not have been a duty under Rules 23 and 54 to disclose the division of fees among those lawyers whom the Court knew about, and [29] See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) advisory committee's note to 2003 amendment ("In some situations, there may be a basis for making an award to other counsel whose work produced a beneficial result for the class, such as attorneys who acted for the class before certification but were not appointed class counsel, or attorneys who represented objectors to a proposed settlement under Rule 23(e) or to the fee motion of class counsel. Other situations in which fee awards are authorized by law or by agreement of the parties may exist."). See generally Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:22.

[30] For a further discussion of the facts in this paragraph, see ¶ 13(a), infra.

so could inquire . . . ."[31] This is an odd phrase because it implies that a court can ask the lawyers how a fee is being allocated among lawyers identified but somehow would be unduly burdened if it had to make the more general inquiry as to who all is getting a fee. But in fact the latter locution – "How are the fees being allocated?" – is actually a far simpler and more natural one than Gillers's baseline – "How is the fee being allocated among the lawyers who have appeared in the case?" Professor Gillers then writes: "Is anyone else getting any portion of the attorney's fees you are asking me to award and whose existence you have not revealed?" This, too, is tendentiously framed as it implies a (non-existent) obligation on the part of class counsel to "reveal" information and suggests that class counsel is otherwise "hiding" information. Written less argumentatively – "Is anyone other than class counsel getting any portion of the attorney's fees you are asking me to award whose existence I might not know of?" or, more naturally and simply, "How are the fees being allocated?" – the question perfectly captures the "affirmative responsibility" that Rule 23(h) and Rule 54(d)(2) do in fact "impose" upon a court. Absent Professor Gillers's tortured approach, it is really not much of an imposition for a court to ask, "How are the fees being allocated?" as Rule 54(d)(2) proposes.

f. In short, the modified Rule 23(h)/54(b)(2) for which Professor Gillers advocated in writing, he himself has now repudiated and, in any case, is not the letter of those Rules, is not supported by a single case, does not comport with a sound understanding of class action practice, and requires peculiar linguistic contortions to defend.

[31] Gillers Report at 67 (emphasis in original).

(B)
Background Principles Do Not Reverse the Language of Rules 23/54

12. Equally unconvincing is Professor Gillers's second attempt to advocate around the text of Rules 23 and 54, an effort that relies upon the principles underlying class action law. Specifically, under a heading entitled "Federal Case Law Contradicts Labaton's Narrow View of its Disclosure Obligations to the Court,"[32] Professor Gillers provides snippets from six random[33] class action cases to set out four generic principles of class action law:

1. "Case law, including cases from the District of Massachusetts, amply supports recognition of the Court's fiduciary duty to protect the class and the Court's reliance on counsel to be forthcoming with the information the Court needs in order to do so."[34]

2. "Private agreements among counsel do not bind the Court, which can ignore them if they reward those who did little or nothing to serve the class."[35]

3. "[A] court [is not] bound to honor the retainer agreement between counsel and the named class members."[36]

[32] Gillers Report at 68.

[33] Two of the cases are district court decisions from this District (one from 2005, one from 2015), three are circuit court cases from other circuits (a Second Circuit case from 1987, a Third Circuit case from 2005, and a Ninth Circuit case from 1997), and the sixth is a 1980 district court case from a different judicial district. Professor Gillers does not acknowledge that most of these cases arise from inapposite legal and factual settings and he does not discuss the many other cases that interpret the rules less capaciously than these snippets imply. Moreover, not one of these cases is either a Supreme Court case or a First Circuit case that would have provided controlling precedent governing the lawyers in this case.

4. "Federal case law also recognizes the special danger of conflicts between a lawyer and her client at the fee-determination stage in common fund cases."[37]

While – with one caveat[38] – the principles themselves are anodyne, Professor Gillers's use of them to reverse the language of Rule 54(d)(2) is anything but.

a. First, Professor Gillers's advocacy once again ignores the fact that the framers of Rule 23(h) were well aware of the principles set forth in his random set of snippets, yet chose to have Rule 23(h) cross-reference Rule 54(d).[39] In other words, the class action law experts who wrote the rule after study and public input balanced the principles at stake by authorizing class counsel to keep fee-sharing arrangements confidential absent an explicit judicial order to the contrary.

agreements are largely irrelevant to a court's evaluation of the reasonableness of a proposed fee.").

[37] Gillers Report at 70–71. See generally Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:15 (discussing class members' right to object to fees and importance of safeguarding processes for objections).

[38] Professor Gillers's first principle states that, "Case law, including cases from the District of Massachusetts, amply supports recognition of the Court's fiduciary duty to protect the class and the Court's reliance on counsel to be forthcoming with the information the Court needs in order to do so." Gillers Report at 68 (emphasis added). He presents only two cases that address the highlighted second part of this sentence, regarding counsel's responsibility to the court: the Southern District of New York's 1980 decision in Lewis v. Teleprompter and the Second Circuit's 1987 Agent Orange decision which quotes Lewis. Neither is from this District. It is not quite precise, therefore, to conclude either that this proposition is supported by cases from this District or that it is "amply" supported.

[39] Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) advisory committee's note to 2003 amendment ("Courts have also given weight to agreements among the parties regarding the fee motion, and to agreements between class counsel and others about the fees claimed by the motion. Rule 54(d)(2)(B) provides: 'If directed by the court, the motion shall also disclose the terms of any agreement with respect to fees to be paid for the services for which claim is made.' The agreement by a settling party not to oppose a fee application up to a certain amount, for example, is worthy of consideration, but the court remains responsible to determine a reasonable fee. 'Side agreements' regarding fees provide at least perspective pertinent to an appropriate fee award.").

b. Second, Professor Gillers's advocacy position is illogical, as demonstrated by the following example. Assume a posted traffic sign explicitly states that the speed limit is 35 miles per hour, yet a police officer arrests a driver for travelling at 25 miles per hour and explains that (1) she has a duty to protect the public; (2) cars are dangerous; (3) a driver's belief about what is reasonable does not trump that duty and need not be deferred to; (4) the driver's interests may conflict with those of pedestrians and other drivers. While the officer's points are pertinent, no one alone – nor the combination of the four – is sufficient to trump the explicitly posted speed limit, i.e., the balance struck by the governing regulatory authority. So too here: the applicable federal rule states in no uncertain terms that class counsel must provide agreements to the Court if the court so orders. The presence of four underlying principles guiding judicial review no more trump that explicit federal rule than do the principles underlying automobile safety trump a posted speed limit.

c. Third, a review of the language of the cases from which Professor Gillers draws his snippets makes his argument even more far-fetched than the history and logic suggest. Professor Gillers's central case is the Second Circuit's 1987 decision in the Agent Orange litigation.[40] In that decision, the Second Circuit articulates the precise duty for which Professor Gillers advocates: "in all future class actions counsel must inform the court of the existence of a fee-sharing agreement at the time it is formulated."[41] Yet oddly, in extracting his snippets, Professor Gillers does not even quote this language. He likely omitted that specific language because it just as likely is based on local rules in the Second Circuit, not on his general [40] Professor Gillers testified that his methodology in selecting these particular snippets started from this case and involved reading cases it cited and cases citing it. Gillers Dep. 244:1–12.

[41] In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 216, 226 (2d Cir. 1987).

principles,[42] and because it certainly is not controlling of practice in the First Circuit. But what that means is that the structure of this argument is, "If you read these six random snippets you'll see that they create a generalized duty to disclose, but please ignore the one sentence in the key case that literally creates a specific duty to disclose." If merely stating the structure of this [42] In the Agent Orange case, a local rule (then 5(a), now 23.1) compelled disclosure of fee agreements, but Judge Weinstein initially waived its application to the case. In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 597 F. Supp. 740, 869 (E.D.N.Y. 1984). When a pertinent agreement later surfaced, he opined that the local rules should be altered to compel disclosure of fee agreements at their inception, not just at the time of the fee petition. In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 611 F. Supp. 1452, 1464 (E.D.N.Y. 1985) ("The fee application notice requirements of Local Rule 5(a) were waived in this class action 'because of the need for continued intensive work by the attorneys until the close of the fairness hearings and because of the complexity of the fee applications.' At the time the court allowed this waiver it was unaware of the existence of the PMC's fee-sharing arrangement. Disclosure of a fee-sharing agreement at the beginning of every class action is preferable to disclosure after settlement on application for attorney fees. Based on the Agent Orange PMC agreement problems, the Board of Judges of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York has unanimously agreed at one of its regular monthly meetings that Local Rule 5 should be modified to require early notice. This amendment will minimize fee-sharing problems in future litigations."). The Second Circuit then embraced this aspect of Judge Weinstein's opinion. In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 216, 226 (2d Cir. 1987) ("We do agree with the district court's ruling that in all future class actions counsel must inform the court of the existence of a fee sharing agreement at the time it is formulated. This holding may well diminish many of the dangers posed to the rights of the class."). The local rule was briefly repealed as it applied to class actions, leading the Second Circuit to hold that, "Federal Rule 23(h) . . . does not mandate automatic disclosure of all fee-sharing arrangements in class actions." Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 138 n.2 (2d Cir. 2016). After Bernstein, the Southern and Eastern Districts re-enacted the local disclosure rule, see note 16, supra.

This history – which fully contradicts Professor Gillers's belief that Agent Orange "preceded the adoption of a local rule," Gillers Dep. 124:4-7; 347:15-22 – provides fair evidence that the rule-makers and judges in the Second Circuit do not understand Agent Orange's key sentence to mandate disclosure absent an applicable rule. If they did, surely the Second Circuit would have noted that fact in the Bernstein decision and the local rule-makers would have either cited Agent Orange in enacting local rule 23.1 or not enacted 23.1 since it would be unnecessary if anyone thought Agent Orange stood for the principle absent a local rule. This is particularly true in light of the fact that Congress's 2003 enactment of Rule 23(h)(2), adopting Rule 54(d)(2)'s approach, post-dates Agent Orange and hence would, in any case, displace a common law approach to the contrary.

argument does not suffice to refute it, our class action jurisprudence has achieved terminal silliness.[43]

d. Again, not surprisingly, when pressed on his authority for a disclosure requirement within federal law at his deposition, Professor Gillers could offer only Agent Orange and was forced to concede that there is no applicable precedent in the First Circuit, no local rules in the federal courts here, no standing orders, and no order in this case.[44] Put simply, Professor Gillers could find no existing federal authority for his disclosure requirement that would apply to the lawyers in this case generally, and to Lieff Cabraser in particular.

e. In sum, the class action principles that Professor Gillers culls from a random sample of class action cases are important, to be sure, but underlying principles do not reverse the clear language of explicit rules.

(C)
The Court Did Not Solicit Fee Allocation Information At the Fairness Hearing

13. Professor Gillers makes two separate suggestions in his written report that the Court, at the final approval hearing, asked for fee allocation information and that counsel, in failing to provide it, thereby violated professional responsibility rules (and perhaps certain amorphous federal law norms).[45] Professor Gillers concedes that Judge Wolf never explicitly [43] Cf. Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620, 639 (1996) (Scalia, J., dissenting) ("If merely stating this alleged 'equal protection' violation does not suffice to refute it, our constitutional jurisprudence has achieved terminal silliness.").

[44] Gillers Dep. 130:1–133:22.

[45] While Professor Gillers often premises these points on the rules of professional responsibility, in other places he implies – with a remarkable lack of precision – that these principles arise from "federal common law and the judge's equity jurisdiction and authority." Gillers Dep. at 351:24–352:1. I can only assume from this statement that he is alluding to the snippets of class action law that he provided in his written report.

inquired into how the fees were to be allocated,[46] but he nonetheless creatively interprets two passages in the fairness hearing transcript as fee allocation discussions. The first of these arguments misunderstands class action practice and the second misrepresents the record.

a. Professor Gillers states:

> In [] courtroom statements and submissions to the Court, class counsel offered information about the fees they would request and the identities of the law firms who would share in those fees . . . The Court could assume that the lawyers who were going to participate in the fee it was asked to award were the lawyers who appeared before it because no other lawyer was identified. But here, that assumption would be wrong. In order for class counsel's statements and submissions to the Court not to mislead the Court through omission, Rule 3.3 required them to disclose to the Court the Chargois Arrangement and their intention to pay Chargois more than $4 million from the class recovery.[47]

Professor Gillers's statement that class counsel offered information about "who would share in the fees," implies that counsel provided fee allocation information to the Court. In reaching that conclusion, Professor Gillers appears to confuse the submission of class counsel's lodestar for cross-check purposes in a percentage award case with a fee allocation submission. The former apprises the court about who worked on the case,[48] but its function is not to apprise the court of, [46] See Gillers Dep. 143:16–144:1 ("Q. Have you reviewed the hearing transcripts in this case? A. Read them, yes. Q. And from that review you are aware that at no time did the judge pose any inquiry as to how counsel were dividing fees, even among those who were disclosed - - A. Yes. Q. -- correct? A. -- I'm aware of that."); see also id. at 147:4–11 ("Q. And then when you say by omission, that is, there was misrepresentation by omission, are you stating that in your memory of your review of the hearing that Judge Wolf asked about the allocation -- not between ERISA funds and customer class members but allocation among the attorneys? Is it your memory he asked? A. No, it's not."); see also id. at 176:23–177:4 ("Q. Okay. Just so that we're clear, there is nowhere in the transcript where Judge Wolf instructs or orders or directs that class counsel disclose the existence of any underlying referral fee agreements, correct? A. In that language, no, you're correct.").

[47] Gillers Report at 72 (emphasis added).

[48] As discussed below, see note 63, infra, a lodestar cross-check submission may not reflect the time of all the lawyers who worked on the case. In this case, for example, Lead Counsel did not and hence it need not reflect, how the fees will be allocated once awarded. In allocating fees among counsel, each lawyer's relative lodestar may be pertinent, but it is rarely controlling,[49] and, as noted above,[50] lawyers who do not appear in the lodestar cross-check submission may nonetheless be eligible for a portion of the fee. Thus his conclusion that "[i]n order for class counsel[] . . . not to mislead the Court through omission" they were "required to disclose to the Court the Chargois Arrangement" rests upon the faulty assumption that class counsel had made a presentation to the Court of how the fees would be allocated. In fact, the Court never asked, and counsel therefore never provided, information as to (including agreements about) how the fees would be allocated. The Court – or an observer – may have assumed that some of the lawyers identified in the lodestar cross-check submission would be among those receiving an allocation, submit to the Court the time of a law firm (that I assumed served as local counsel) in one of the ERISA complaints as part of the lodestar cross-check submission. Compare The Andover Companies Employee Savings and Profit Sharing Plan v. State Street Bank, No. 1:12-cv-11698, ECF No. 1 at 38 (listing Hutchings, Barsamian, Mandelcorn & Zeytoonian, LLP, as first counsel), with ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart of Lodestars, Litigation Expenses, and Plaintiffs' Service Awards, not listing lodestar for Hutchings, Barsamian, Mandelcorn & Zeytoonian, LLP).

Class action law does not worry about such an omission. The lodestar cross-check's sole purpose is to ensure against a windfall. See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:85. If class counsel omit time from the lodestar cross-check submission, it is only to their detriment as it serves to increase their multiplier, i.e., the measurement of their profit. See id. at § 15:87 (on multipliers). Class action law worries that the lodestar cross-check creates incentives for class counsel to pad their hours, not to winnow them, id. at § 15:86 (on the costs and benefits of the lodestar cross-check), and therefore in lodestar cross-check submissions, the lawyers tend to spend time explaining to the court how many hours they struck out of their submissions. See, e.g., ECF No. 104-17 (explaining, in Lieff Cabraser lodestar cross-check submission, that "any personnel who billed fewer than 5 hours in the litigation have not been included in my firm's total [lodestar cross-check submission].").

[49] See id. at § 15:23 (explaining that fees are allocated according to a series of factors, not just time).

[50] See ¶ 11(d), supra.

but that assumption does not turn the lodestar cross-check submission into a partial fee allocation filing.[51]

b. Professor Gillers states:

> The Court itself dispelled any uncertainty about what it expected. Just before approving Lead Counsel's fee request in full, the Court said: "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today." Nicole Zeiss of Labaton and Daniel Chiplock of Lieff were in the courtroom when the Court made this statement. Both knew about the intention to pay Chargois. Neither spoke up. David Goldsmith of Labaton, who was also in the courtroom, learned of the Chargois Arrangement within weeks and did not disclose it although he had quickly disclosed to the Court the double-counting of SA time. Earlier in the proceeding, the Court specifically asked to be reminded "of the terms of allocation." Mr. Goldsmith said, "I didn't want there to be something that was left that Your Honor wanted to hear." He then described the allocation to the class followed by a description of the basis for the fee request. Chargois was not mentioned.[52]

Professor Gillers engages in two mischaracterizations in this passage. First, the only discussion of "allocation" in the fairness hearing transcript had nothing to do with fees: it concerned the [51] At his deposition, Professor Gillers expanded his definition of what would constitute an event triggering the requirement that class counsel disclose all fee allocation details to encompass either (1) the fact that the parties explicitly identified the magnitude of fees attributable to those with ERISA-based claims and/or (2) the fact that the class notice mentioned fees at all. Gillers Dep. 196:13–200:10.

The first disclosure identified above spoke to where the fees were coming from, not to whom specifically they were going, and it highlighted the critical fact that, depending upon the ultimate aggregate fee level, ERISA-based class members could recover more on their claims than the rest of the class members. See ECF No. 95-3 at 6. This information was provided to disclose potential conflicts among the class members, not to provide the Court or class with specific fee allocation information.

Professor Gillers' second proposition above is nonsensical: all class action notices necessarily encompass the level of fees counsel will seek, see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1), but the very same section of the very same rule adopts Rule 54(d)(2), which states that agreements as to fees need be disclosed only upon court order. It therefore simply cannot be the case that because class counsel provides notice to the class of the level of fees it will seek it must therefore provide the specific amounts each lawyer will be allocated if/when the Court approves a fee.

[52] Gillers Report at 67–68 (citations omitted).

"plan of allocation" of the class's recovery among various class groups;[53] that phrase is a defined term in this case's settlement agreement unrelated to fees[54] and Professor Gillers's subjective view of the term for his advocacy purposes[55] cannot trump the parties' and Court's contemporaneous understanding of the term, as objectively documented in the settlement agreement. Second, Professor Gillers turns the Court's statement, "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today," into the conclusion that the Court "dispelled any uncertainty about what it expected," although that statement, too, had absolutely nothing to do with fee allocation and hardly can be read as one "dispelling all uncertainty," given Rule 54(d)(2)'s explicit language directly on point.

c. Because Professor Gillers himself concedes that the Court never explicitly inquired into fee allocation, and his more creative excursions to pretend that the Court did so implicitly are unconvincing, it is fair to conclude that there simply was no discussion of specific fee allocation information at the hearing and hence there was no misinformation provided to the Court for Lieff Cabraser to correct or amend.

(D)
Professor Gillers Has Identified No Facts Supporting the Conclusion that Federal Common Law/Equity Required Lieff Cabraser to Inquire Into or Disclose to the Court Information About the Chargois Arrangement

14. Lieff Cabraser was in no way involved in the Chargois Arrangement and Professor Gillers accordingly conceded at his deposition that his written report provided no basis for implicating the firm.[56] Yet in that setting he generated, for the first time,[57] an argument that some unspecified body of law required Lieff Cabraser's lawyers to (a) have smelled a rat, (b) inquired into it, and (c) disclosed it to the Court.[58] Because the threshold points (a) and (b) do not apply to Lieff Cabraser, however, no disclosure obligation ever arose in fact.

a. No visible evidence of wrongdoing. Professor Gillers bases his new argument that Lieff Cabraser should have detected wrongdoing on the ideas that (i) Chargois did no work on this particular case and (ii) yet received what he alleges is an unusually high fee.[59] Professor Gillers concedes that the first of these premises does not actually apply to Lieff Cabraser, as the firm was informed that Chargois was undertaking legal work on the class's behalf as local counsel and the firm had no reason to doubt those representations.[60] Furthermore, [57] Id. at 228:14–17 ("Q. Where is that in your report, sir? A. It's not. Q. It's not in your report? A. No.").

[58] Again, to the extent this argument is based on federal class action law, it appears to emanate from Professor Gillers's six random snippets of class action law, as he provides no other pertinent federal cases in his report, see note 33, supra. But again, as he made up this argument at his deposition, see supra note 57, and in so doing cited no law, I have no basis upon which to identify its alleged legal foundation.

[59] Gillers Dep. 227:4–18.

[60] Id. at 228:1–13 ("My opinion is based on the fact that all Lieff knows is that Chargois has been characterized as local counsel and is getting 4.1 million dollars and that the class has never been told when invited to consider whether to object to counsel fees. So I think you make a valuable

although Labaton submitted no lodestar for Chargois when the firm filed the full fee petition,[61] given Labaton's representations to Lieff Cabraser that Chargois was serving as local counsel and working on the case in that capacity,[62] Lieff Cabraser would have been justified in assuming that Chargois had spent time on the case but that Labaton had decided not to submit that time as part of its lodestar cross-check submission.[63] Professor Gillers's second supposition is that the "unusual nature of the payment for a local counsel would have at least impelled the firm in protecting its client to look into the matter,"[64] specifically referencing the fact that Chargois was in line to receive roughly $4 million.[65] Yet Professor Gillers – who acknowledged that he is not point that the knowledge of Lieff may be such that it didn't trigger any need to disclose Chargois because of his valuable contributions.") (emphasis added).

[61] Lead counsel typically collect, ideally scrutinize, and ultimately submit the lodestar submissions for each of the many firms in a large case like this without necessarily sharing each firm's lodestar with all other firms at this fee stage. Here, for instance, Lead Counsel submitted each individual firm's lodestar submission as an Exhibit to his own fee declaration. See ECF No. 104. Lieff Cabraser's lawyer testified that he "didn't have control over what went in," and that he had anticipated that "a declaration was going to be filed by this local counsel, too," referencing Chargois. Chiplock Dep. 132:17–24, Sep. 8, 2017 [hereinafter Chiplock Dep.].

[62] Id. at 109:22–110:18, 118:9–22, 130:11–16; see also Lieff Dep. 58:15–59:17, 61:9–21, 64:16–67:17, 72:15–74:5, 92:17–93:13, Sep. 11, 2017 [hereinafter Lieff Dep.].

[63] Lieff Cabraser might have assumed that Labaton did not include Chargois' lodestar in the cross-check for any number of routine reasons: (1) application of its billing discretion as Lead Counsel; (2) because it did not think it appropriate to include local counsel's time in the lodestar cross-check submission; (3) because it did not believe it needed to rely on those hours to justify its sought-after multiplier; or (4) simply because Chargois was delinquent in submitting his lodestar records to Lead Counsel. Any of these would have been legitimate reasons to omit Chargois' time from the lodestar cross-check submission – as noted above, see note 48, supra, one of the local ERISA counsel's time was not submitted in this case's lodestar – while nonetheless not omitting Chargois from sharing in the aggregate fee. And any of these explanations would have been far more obvious to Lieff Cabraser at the time than jumping to the assumption that Labaton might have misled it about Chargois' relationship to the case.

[64] Gillers Dep. 228:6–13.

[65] Id. at 229:9–10.

an expert on class action law[66] and that he has no class action experience[67] – conceded he had no basis for assessing the reasonableness of a (referral) fee in class action lawsuits,[68] while Robert Lieff – who has roughly 50 years of experience in class action law[69] – testified that the amount paid Chargois (for what he understood to be local counsel work) did not "seem on the face of it to be unusual."[70] The record therefore simply does not support the conclusion that Lieff Cabraser had knowledge that anything was amiss.

b. Inquiry futile. If Lieff Cabraser had inquired about the nature of Chargois's work on or connection to the case, that inquiry would have been directed to the Labaton firm, which was Lead Counsel in the case and which had represented Chargois's role to Lieff Cabraser. There is little doubt that such an inquiry would likely have been futile. A lead counsel's relationship with local counsel and the client are generally proprietary attorney-client relationships (particularly in the PSLRA context) and Labaton would have been unlikely to be forthcoming about further details of these relationships. Indeed, Chris Keller testified that the firm had not disclosed Garrett Bradley's service as local counsel in another case for precisely these reasons.[71] Similarly, Eric Belfi testified that the motivating factor in not disclosing the

A: If -- if we put his name on these papers, that means our competitors know that that firm has relationships with these clients and that means they'll be calling them up trying to poach them as local counsel.").

Chargois Arrangement was a fear that Chargois might sue for breach of contract and that such a suit would disrupt the firm's relationship with the Arkansas client.[72] Finally, Lawrence Sucharow testified that he believed the details of the Chargois Arrangement "irrelevant,"[73] just his firm's "business obligation" that had nothing to do with anyone else,[74] and that he made the decision not to disclose them (to ERISA counsel) for that reason. The record in this case therefore amply supports the conclusion that had any inquiry obligation arisen with respect to Lieff Cabraser, the ensuing inquiry would have proven futile.

c. No disclosure requirement triggered. Thus, when presented at his deposition with the facts of what Lieff Cabraser actually knew in real time, Professor Gillers was forced to concede that no disclosure obligation likely attached to them. Specifically, Lieff Cabraser's lawyer laid out a series of assumptions that paralleled the firm's knowledge in this case: (i) that Chargois served as local counsel; (ii) that he performed work commensurate with his proposed allocation; (iii) that the client was aware of and had approved of Chargois involvement and share in writing; and (iv) again (at Gillers's suggestion) that Lieff Cabraser believed Chargois contributions to the case made his proposed fee not unreasonable.[75] Presented with those circumstances, Professor Gillers conceded that no disclosure obligation arose, stating: "Fine. If all that is true, then I -- then my opinion is not that there was a need to disclose it."[76]

[76] Id. at 222:7–9.

15. For the foregoing reasons, Professor Gillers simply misstates the facts of this case and the law in concluding that:

> In deciding the amount of fee to award to class counsel, and to whom to award it, the Court, as a fiduciary for the class including unnamed class members, needed first to know – and class counsel had a duty to tell it – who would be participating in any fee the Court in its discretion might award from the class recovery and the basis for the claim.[77]

The Court in this case undertook no inquiry into the question of "to whom to award it" and accordingly never ordered the disclosure of fee agreements, as it was authorized to do under Rule 54(d)(2). Professor Gillers similarly misstates the underlying policy in further concluding that,

> Labaton's contrary argument would keep the Court in the dark and deny it the very information it needed in order to decide how much of the undifferentiated settlement funds should go to counsel, and which counsel, and how much should go to the class.[78]

Counsel's respect for Rule 23(h) and Rule 54(d) neither "keep the Court in the dark" nor "deny it . . . information." On the contrary, the rule structure could not be clearer in setting forth precisely what a court needs to do should it desire to review underlying fee agreements: ask.

16. In sum, it is my second expert opinion that Lieff Cabraser's duty to the class action court did not – as a matter of class action law[79] – require that it "disclose [the knowledge it had about] the Chargois Arrangement (and intended payment) to the Court before it awarded fees from which Chargois would be (and was) paid."[80]

[79] I am not opining about Lieff Cabraser's duties under Massachusetts' Rules of Professional Conduct, but it is my understanding that Lieff Cabraser's expert on those rules concurs with this conclusion as well.

[80] Id. at 74.

III.
RULE 23 DOES NOT REQUIRE DISCLOSURE OF FEE ALLOCATION AGREEMENTS IN THE CLASS NOTICE

17. As part of the class action settlement approval process, the "court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal,"[81] and notice of a motion for attorney's fees by class counsel must be "directed to class members in a reasonable manner."[82] Where settlement and fees are occurring simultaneously, Rule 23 envisions a single notice being sent to the class encompassing both,[83] as was done in this case.

18. Professor Gillers advocates for the position that the class should have been informed of the Chargois Arrangement because information "that a lawyer who did no work to produce the class recovery and who accepted no legal responsibility for the work of others stood to receive more than $4 million from the class recovery . . . could reasonably have influenced members of the class in deciding whether to exercise the right to object to the disclosure regarding attorneys' fees."[84] This is again a tendentious statement of the facts, at least as Lieff Cabraser knew them: as just noted, there is no evidence in the record that Lieff Cabraser had knowledge that Chargois undertook no work on this specific case.

[84] Gillers Report at 76–77.

19. Moreover, Professor Gillers's advocacy in this section is premised on class counsel's general fiduciary duty to the class[85] and on ethical rules (which are beyond the scope of my charge), not on Rule 23 itself – in this section, he does not cite a single provision of Rule 23's notice requirements nor a single Rule 23 notice case. Similarly, at his deposition, he conceded that he knew of no cases requiring disclosure of fee allocation agreements in the class's notice and disclaimed any reliance on Rule 23.[86] This is not surprising because the non-tendentious point – that class counsel must disclose fee-sharing agreements in the class's notice – is not supported by the text of Rule 23, nor the cases interpreting it.[87]

a.[88] Settlement notice. Rule 23(e)(1) requires that a court considering a proposed class action settlement "direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal."[89] Yet other than requiring that the notice be made "in a reasonable manner," Rule 23 does not dictate that the notice contain any specific content, with

[87] In this section of his report, Professor Gillers cites three cases – a 1985 Eleventh Circuit case, a 1995 Third Circuit case, and a 1998 Southern District of Florida case – articulating class counsel's general fiduciary duties in the class action context. one caveat: if a class is certified at the same time that a settlement is reached, the court must issue notice that complies with both 23(c)(2)(B)'s certification notice requirements (that do require specific content)[90] and 23(e)'s settlement notice requirement (which does not).[91] Aside from that scenario, the content of the settlement notice itself is dictated by two other aspects of Rule 23(e): the requirement that the settlement be fair, reasonable, and adequate[92] and the guarantee that class members have the right to object to the settlement if, in their opinion, it does not hit this mark.[93] To safeguard class members' opportunity to object, notice must be sufficiently clear and informative to make those opportunities meaningful. Thus, Rule 23 does not require that fee allocation agreements be explained to the class in the settlement notice.[94]

b.[95] Fee notice. Rule 23(h)(1) requires that a court considering a motion for reasonable attorney's fees and nontaxable costs in a certified class action direct notice to class members "in a reasonable manner."[96] Yet other than requiring that the notice be made "in a reasonable manner," Rule 23 does not dictate any specific content that the notice must contain.

[94] Rule 23's settlement provisions require that parties seeking approval of a proposed settlement "file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the proposal." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(3). Courts have not read this to encompass fee allocation agreements, see Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:12 & n.15, but even if they did, such a court-filing requirement does not automatically translate into a requirement that such agreements be made part of the class notice.

[95] This paragraph is taken from Rubenstein, 3 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 8:25.

[96] Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

The fee notice's content is primarily dictated by Rule 23(h)(2)'s guarantee that class members have the right to object to the fee motion.[97] The right to object connotes that class members ought to be given sufficient time to do so, but it also means that class members must be given sufficient information to do so. In the Newberg treatise,[98] and elsewhere,[99] I have strongly advocated for the position that class counsel should make their lodestar known to the court – and to the class – so as to assess the extent to which the proposed award reflects a multiplier of that lodestar. I have similarly argued that fee allocation agreements should be made known to the class, [100] but I do so within the terms of the governing legal regime: I contend that, using their authority under Rule 54(d)(2), courts should require greater disclosure of fee allocation agreements. Although I support such an approach on policy grounds, I am transparent in conceding that, absent a court order, Rule 23 contains no requirement that fee allocation agreements be disclosed to the court nor therefore provided to the class in the court's notice.[101]

(some citations omitted).

[100] See Rubenstein, 5 Newberg on Class Actions, supra note 4, at § 15:12.

[101] Local rule may do so, see, e.g., S.D.N.Y. Civ. R. 23.1, supra note 16, but no such Rule exists in this District.

20. In sum, it is my third expert opinion that neither Rule 23 itself, nor class action notice cases more generally, created a duty upon the Lieff Cabraser firm to disclose the allocation of fees to Chargois, as it understood that allocation at the time, to the class in the class's notice.

* * *

21. I have testified that:

- Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee allocation agreements absent judicial order, courts rarely so order, and Judge Wolf did not do so in this case.

- Professor Gillers's four attempts to create a disclosure requirement by advocating around the text of Rules 23 and 54 are unconvincing on the law and on the facts of the case as applied to Lieff Cabraser.

- Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee allocation agreements in the class's notice.

EXHIBIT B
Methodology for Empirical Study of Court Orders Relating to Fee Agreements in Class Action Cases

On March 9, 2018, we searched the dockets database in Bloomberg Law using the query <"class action" settlement> for cases filed in all District courts within the First Circuit since February 2, 2011, the date this action was filed. This returned 1,226 dockets. We then examined each docket to determine (1) whether the case was in fact a class action and (2) whether the case had in fact reached the preliminary approval stage. Applying these criteria, we identified a total of 127 class action settlements. Within in each of those 127 dockets, we then examined all filings related to the settlement, including: preliminary and final approval motions, memos, exhibits, and declarations; fee petitions; settlement agreements; court orders and opinions; objections; and hearing transcripts. We searched these filings for (A) any evidence that the court had directed class counsel to disclose any agreements regarding the manner in which they allocated fees; (B) submissions from the plaintiffs' attorneys indicating that they had entered into fee agreements amongst themselves, with outside counsel, or with the plaintiffs; and (C) any other evidence that the court or attorneys discussed fee-allocation agreements.

In 122 of 127 dockets, we found nothing more than clear-sailing agreements and references to class counsel's contingency-fee agreements with the named plaintiffs. Five of the dockets we reviewed contained more substantial discussions of fee agreements:

- Case 1. The court asked the lawyers during a conference if "there [was] any fee agreement with anybody in this case," to which class counsel responded by noting that they had entered into a contingency-fee agreement with the named plaintiff that they could submit if the court desired.[1] We found no evidence that the court followed up on this matter, and class counsel received the fees it requested.

- Case 2. The plaintiffs' attorneys disclosed sua sponte that two class counsel firms that were jointly representing one of the named plaintiffs had agreed to evenly divide their fees regardless of their individual lodestars.[2] Similarly, we found no evidence that the court followed up on this matter, and the court granted class counsel's fee petition for the amount requested without commenting on the agreement.

[1] Rossmeisl et al v. A.C. Moore Arts & Crafts, Inc., Docket No. 1:17-cv-10219 (D. Mass. Feb 08, 2017).

[2] In Re: Collecto, Inc., Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA) Litigation, Docket No. 1:14-md-02513 (D. Mass. Feb 19, 2014).

- Cases 3-5. The final three cases[3] were the Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island versions of forty-six state-wide class actions against Sprint litigated by the same group of attorneys. Class counsel in all three cases disclosed that the group of firms that had settled the entire set of cases with the defendant had agreed to share a portion of the fee awards they received from each individual action. The courts in all three cases signed near-identical fee-approval agreements and do not appear to have inquired further about the fee-sharing agreement.

Although it is possible that we missed some information in reviewing more than 1,000 dockets in a short period of time, I am confident that our data provide empirical support for the conclusion that courts rarely request fee allocation agreements and that class counsel do not typically volunteer fee-allocation agreements without specific instruction from the court.

MR. SINNOTT: Good morning, everyone. Professor, thank you for being here.

Paulette, if the witness could be sworn.

(Witness duly sworn.)

MR. SINNOTT: Good morning, everyone. This is the deposition of Professor Rubenstein. My name is Bill Sinnott, S-I-N-N-O-T-T. I'm counsel to the special master.

The special master has been appointed by Judge Mark Wolf in connection with Arkansas Teacher Retirement System versus State Street Bank & Trust Company, number 11-cv-10230-MLW.

The special master is The Honorable Gerald Rosen who is at my right formerly of the United States District Court in Detroit, Michigan.

Also on the special master's team to my left is Attorney Elizabeth McEvoy also of Barrett & Singal. To the special master's right is Professor Stephen Gillers.

We expect that Attorney Linda Hylenski will join us momentarily. She is also on the special master's team. And I would imagine that we'll have other participants join us by telephone during the course of the morning and afternoon.

At this time I would ask that the participants in the room identify themselves and their affiliation for purposes of the record. And, Mike, if we could start with you.

MR. CANTY: Michael Canty, Labaton Sucharow.

MR. GLASS: Stuart Glass, Choate Hall & Stewart for Labaton firm.

MR. HEIMANN: Richard Heimann for Lieff Cabraser.

MR. LIEFF: Robert Lieff, Lieff Cabraser.

MR. THORNTON: Michael Thornton, Thornton Law Firm.

MR. KELLY: Brian Kelly -- good morning -- of Nixon Peabody on behalf of the Thornton Law Firm.

MR. SINNOTT: All right. Good morning, everyone.

And I would just caution you that, as usual, we have at least one phone participant today and probably several so that I could ask -- if I could ask that the witness and questioners keep their voices up so that the folks on the phone can hear, and I would offer the same caution when the telephone participants join us, that if they can't hear something, that they let us know at the earliest possible moment they have trouble hearing us so that we don't have to reread the record or repeat testimony.

All right. As I indicated, this is the deposition of Professor William Rubenstein.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Good morning, professor.

A. Good morning.

Q. And, sir, you have provided an expert report to the special master; is that correct, sir?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

MR. SINNOTT: Paulette -- Madam Court Reporter, if this document could be marked as the next exhibit.

MR. HEIMANN: Do you want to swear the witness?

Page 9

MR. SINNOTT: He's been sworn. Do you think we need to do it again, Richard?

MR. HEIMANN: No.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Double sworn.

MR. SINNOTT: As soon as that's marked, I'll show you that document. Take your time, Paulette.

(Exhibit 1 marked for identification.)

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you, Madam Court Reporter.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. And, sir, viewing Exhibit 1, is that the expert report that you submitted to the special master in this matter?

A. Yes. I've submitted two. This is the second one.

Q. All right. The first one that you submitted was in approximately -- on approximately July 31st of 2017?

A. That sounds right, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, sir, with respect to that document, did you also submit on a prior occasion a CV?

Page 10

A. With my first expert declaration on July 31, 2017 I submitted a CV.
Q. All right, sir. With respect to your CV, which I won't mark as an exhibit although we do have that document, is it fair to say that you have a background and experience in class actions?
A. Yes. Yes, I was a practitioner in class action law for about a decade, and I've been a teacher and scholar and academic writing about class actions for over 20 years now -- 25 years.
Q. All right. And you consider yourself an expert in the field?
A. I do.
Q. And specifically do you consider yourself an expert in the area of attorney fee awards?
A. In class actions in particular, yes.
Q. Okay. So all aspects of that class actions would fall under that category of expertise?
A. Well, I just finished writing a ten-volume treatise on --
PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following participant has entered the conference: Linda Hylenski.
A. So I'll have to confess that, yeah, I have expertise on the whole gamut.

Q. With respect to your prior experience as an expert, I believe in your CV -- strike that.
In your previous report on July 31st of 2017 in paragraph 8 you described some of your expert witness work for and against a number of firms involved in this matter as well as current and past legal work on behalf of the Thornton Law Firm including at the inception of this case.
Could you describe for the special master and participants what your experience was first of all with Lieff Cabraser in the past?
A. Yeah, I don't have the document you're referring to in front of me.
THE WITNESS: Do you have the July --
MR. HEIMANN: I don't unfortunately.
A. But I think I wrote there that I've been an expert witness hired by the Lieff Cabraser firm I think two, three times.
Q. Okay.
A. I've been an expert witness and a lawyer against the Lieff Cabraser firm probably five or six times.
Q. All right, sir. And how about your prior work with or against Labaton?

A. I've been hired as an expert witness by the Labaton firm I think two or three times. I don't know exactly. And I've probably been an expert witness against them, but I don't know exactly.
Again, I don't know exactly what I wrote in that paragraph. I'd have to look at it again.
Q. All right, sir. Just your best memory is fine. Thornton Law Firm same question, please.
A. I've worked with the Thornton Law Firm for probably a decade on a number of different occasions, and on those occasions I would say that I worked not as an expert witness for them but as an expert consultant providing consulting advice and legal advice to them.
Q. All right, sir. And Keller Rohrback, same question.
A. I worked with Keller Rohrback as potentially co-counsel on a case, and I've worked as an expert witness for them on two or three occasions in the past, and I probably worked as an expert witness against them as well.
Q. Have you worked for or against any of the other firms that were listed on the joint fee petition to your knowledge?

A. I don't -- most of the other firms on the joint fee petition were smaller ERISA firms my memory is, and I wasn't familiar with any of those.
Q. All right. But you do remember Keller Rohrback?
A. Of course, yes.
Q. Have you ever been retained by a defense firm or a class objector?
A. Yes. Both.
Q. Could you describe those for us, please?
A. I've been retained by defense firms on a number of occasions. I'd have to go back through my CV. I'm working for a large insurance company right now. I've worked for a handful of Fortune 500 companies as expert witness in class action cases and attorneys' fees cases.
If you want, we can go through my CV, and I can point out the particular cases that I've worked for for defendants.
Q. No, sir, but if you could just give us a general idea as to the scope of your work on behalf of the defendants?
A. Yeah, I've been an expert witness in about close to a hundred cases -- 75 to a hundred cases. A lot of my work has been on attorneys' fees, and I get asked this question are you more plaintiff oriented or defense oriented.

A lot of the stuff that I do isn't plaintiff versus defendant per se. A lot of times it's plaintiffs fighting with each other or questions on whether the plaintiff should get a certain amount of money from the class.

But there are a number of occasions where I've been hired by defendants both to defend against fee petitions in class action cases.

I've also testified for defendants on questions that were -- I've also testified for defendants on questions about the binding effect of a class action settlement and whether it precludes a later class action on a number of occasions.

I think -- again, I'd have to look at my CV to go through it, but I think those two sets of issues, attorneys' fees and preclusive effect, are the main ones I've worked with defendants on.

Q. All right, sir. Thank you.

How about class objectors? Have you done any work on their behalf?

Page 15

A. Yes.

Q. Could you describe that, please?

A. Sure. I was hired as an expert witness for objectors in one of the cases I litigated against -- I was an expert witness against Lieff Cabraser, and I was an expert witness on some of the practices involved in that case hired by objectors to a settlement in that case.

I've also represented objectors in vouching that they should get attorneys' fees in certain instances where their work contributed to the class' relief.

Q. All right, sir. Thank you.

Sir, with respect to your time here today, are you being compensated?

A. Yes.

Q. And what's your rate of compensation?

A. I think it's $1100 an hour.

Q. And approximately how many hours have you spent on this case up until this point? Estimate.

A. Going back a year from -- I have no idea.

Q. Can you estimate whether it's more than a hundred hours?

A. I can't. If you're asking me have I been paid more than $100,000, the answer would be yes.

Page 16

Q. And was your rate the same with respect to the work that you did in the -- on your July 31, 2017 declaration?

A. Yes.

Q. So it was $1100 per hour?

A. Yes. To be clear, I charge a flat fee for a written declaration. Once I've submitted the written declaration, I charge an hourly rate of $1100 an hour. I think that's this contract.

The hourly rate has changed in the last year.

Q. As you prepared that July 31, 2017 declaration, did counsel inform you about the existence of a referral agreement with Chargois & Herron or with Damon Chargois?

A. I don't remember hearing about that issue until after later in the proceedings.

Q. Have you prepared for your testimony here today?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you prepare for it?

A. I read over a number of documents in the case, depositions from last week. I read Professor Gillers' report again. I read -- looked at his depositions. I looked over my report, and I had a telephone conference with the counsel who've retained me.

Page 17

Q. And when was that telephone conference?

A. Friday.

Q. And, sir, you indicated in preparation for today you reviewed documents as well as depositions. Let me direct your attention to your fact statement on pages 1 to 8 of the instant report, the report -- strike that. Wrong affidavit.

Sir, with respect to the facts that you've relied on in this case, how were those provided to you?

A. Well, again, we're talking about the present testimony or last July or both?

Q. Your present testimony first.

A. Present testimony? I looked at the facts that were provided to Professor Gillers by your team of course, and I -- again, I've read over a number of the depositions, and I learned about facts from reading the depositions.

And then I've talked to the counsel who retained me about some of the facts of the case as well. So my factual understanding I think has those three bases to it.

Q. All right. And tell me with respect to the documents that you've listed in your expert report, how were those documents selected for you to review?
A. We're now talking about the current report?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. So we're in Exhibit A.
Q. That's right.
A. I know when Lieff Cabraser first called me about this, they sent me Professor Gillers' report, and I think from there probably everything are things that I asked for. It may be that they supplied me some documents. I don't remember.
I tended to do my own research. I like getting on PACER and going through the whole PACER history of the case and looking at all the documents. I tend to do that in almost every case I'm involved in.
In fact, I often do it before I'm retained to be sure I'm understanding the case and the whole thing.
They may have sent me a few documents at the beginning of this, but the rest of this is probably as I started reading I asked them for. I know that's true of a lot of these deposition transcripts. I asked for them. I was interested in reading them.

Q. So with respect to those deposition transcripts, you list ten of them.
Did you read the entire transcript? Did you read selected portions? A combination? What's your best memory on that?
A. Well, I definitely did not read portions selected by counsel who hired me. I asked for the transcript of the deposition, and I looked through them.
I read some of them more closely than others. They're kind of -- were fascinating reads. But some of them I skipped through. I can't say I read every word of every one of them.
Q. And other than the documents that you've listed in Exhibit A to your expert report, did you review any additional documents?
A. You know, I try to be complete when I do this. And I have a system with my research assistants to make that work.
So the only thing I would have -- I would guess I would have added to this -- again, I say at the beginning everything I read last summer. And then anything that came up subsequent to my written report, which I think were the depositions last week, would probably be what I read beyond this.

Q. All right, sir. And you mentioned that you had a research assistant or assistants provide help to you in this case?
A. Yes.
Q. What did -- first of all, how many research assistants worked on this case?
A. On this phase of the case, I think two.
Q. All right. And on the previous phase of the case?
A. I think four.
Q. And you had four working -- when you say previous phase of the case, is that in preparation for your July 31, 2017 declaration?
A. That's correct. And in both instances we did a lot of empirical work where we looked at reported cases and crunched some numbers and ran data, and the students did a lot of that work.
Here I think my students went through like 1200 cases from the District of Massachusetts in the last six years.

Q. And that was the empirical study that you discuss in your report?
A. Correct.
Q. Sir, with respect to the opinions in your March 26, 2018 report, who wrote those opinions?
A. I did.
Q. And did you have any assistance in writing those opinions?
A. No.
Q. And is it fair to say that your research assistants provided some assistance to you?
A. Again, they primarily provided assistance doing the empirical work. Other than that, everything here is me. They didn't -- I don't think there's any even legal research they did here for this.
Q. All right. So your research assistants didn't do any of the legal research. They were strictly confined to the empirical study?
A. Correct.
Q. So you did your own legal research?
A. I do.

Q. All right. Now, sir, let me direct your attention to your expert report and direct your attention to page 3 first of all.
The heading -- your first of three sections in your report I believe states that Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee agreements absent judicial order, and Judge Wolf issued no such order in this case.
Have I correctly read that title for Section 1?
A. Yes.
Q. And, sir, is it fair to say that your basic premise contained in paragraph 3 is -- or one of your basic premises is that the aggregate fee is allocated among the lawyers whose work benefited the class? Did I read that correctly?
A. In paragraph 3 the first sentence --
PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following participant has entered the conference: Joan.
A. In paragraph 3 the first sentence identifies the two phases of the fee petition and fee work in a case like this, the petition phase where the Court decides in the aggregate how much the attorneys are getting and then the allocation phase where the attorneys or the Court divide the fee up, and I do state precisely what you said in the second of those phases "the aggregate fee is allocated among the lawyers whose work benefited the class."

Q. All right. But that's relegated to the allocation phase; is that correct?
A. I'm not sure what "that" means in your question. I'm sorry, I don't mean to be difficult.
The allocation phase is when the fee is split among the attorneys.
Q. Right. But with respect to your statement "the aggregate fee is allocated among the lawyers whose work benefited the class," are you speaking about the allocation phase with respect to that clause?
A. Yeah. I use that phrase, that's correct. I think it's an important distinction in a big case like this that there are these two phases; that the fee is set in the aggregate in the first phase. That's the important phase 'cause that's when the class' money is being taken from the class. And that's the key to the whole thing in my opinion.
And then once the Court has decided that that's a fair fee to take from the client, then the question of how the lawyers divide that fee up among themselves is what I refer to as the allocation phase which I think has less pertinence for the class in most cases.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does the Court have authority in both phases however -- THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
MR. HEIMANN: He hadn't finished the question.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you, Richard.
Does the Court have authority in both phases as to both the aggregate fee and the ultimate allocation?
THE WITNESS: Yes. The Court -- yes. The Court has the authority in both phases, absolute authority in terms of how much money is taken from the class.
And I think that's the key phase, and if we refer to the Court as a fiduciary for the absent class members in that phase. And then in the allocation phase it's the allocation of money coming out of a class action in front of the Court, and the Court has the authority to decide.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But the Court would also have authority in the first phase as to allocation if it saw something that it deemed unfair to the class before it approved the aggregate fee, yes?

THE WITNESS: Judge, I think you're suggesting in some sense that there could be allocational instances that would arise in the second phase that might affect the class, and you might think about them during the first phase.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No, that's not what I'm suggesting.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Try again. I'm sorry.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If there is something that the Court sees in what you say is the first phase -- I'm calling it the "fairness hearing" at which a settlement is approved --
THE WITNESS: Yeah.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- and all allocations, both allocations among class members but also allocations as to fees among attorneys, the Court has authority in that first phase if it sees something in the allocation that it believes is inappropriate or perhaps in some way unfair to the class, correct?

THE WITNESS: I feel like what you're saying is if the Court undertakes the allocation as part of the fee petition phase, in that instance it's essentially the way you're describing it collapsed what I'm describing as two separate phases into one. And its authority would be there.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Before the fee is awarded?
THE WITNESS: Again, most courts don't allocate before the fee is awarded.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not asking about most courts.
I'm only asking you if the Court has authority at that phase to make decisions about allocation?
And then I'll try -- after you answer that question, I'll try a hypothetical on you.
MR. HEIMANN: Well, that is a hypothetical, judge.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No, that is not. The first part is not --
MR. HEIMANN: Well --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- a hypothetical.

Page 27

It's a very direct question.
MR. HEIMANN: All right. Then I object to it if it's not a hypothetical.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is there anything about the question you don't understand, professor?
THE WITNESS: I'm a little -- just to be very clear, you're asking me what the law -- what my opinion of what the law is?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Yes. And you're asking me if the Court -- I've kind of -- I write a treatise. I try to describe how courts do this, and I've described this as a two-stage process.
You're asking me, hey, if a Court does both stages at stage one does it have the authority to do it that way. Yeah, I guess it does. I've not seen courts do that, but I don't think they lack the authority to do that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So if a Court sees an agreement -- this is the hypothetical part.
If a Court sees the agreement -- sees an agreement of the allocation of fees before -- before it has actually approved the settlement and the fees for the attorneys, you would agree that the Court at that point could question about the allocation? First could raise questions about the allocation?

THE WITNESS: So as I understand the question, if allocational information is provided to the Court or the Court asks for it and comes upon it prior to what I'm describing as the allocation phase, does the Court have the authority to look into that question? Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you would agree that the Court also has authority if it finds the allocation in any way unfair to reject the proposed allocation and either reallocate it or perhaps give some of it to the class?
THE WITNESS: A Court has authority over the allocation of attorneys' fees in a class action. And if the Court finds the proposed allocation unacceptable from the Court's point of view, the Court has the authority to remedy that.
In the Agent Orange case, for instance, that your experts talked about, the Court reallocated the money among the attorneys because it wasn't happy with the way the agreements did it.
Could the Court instead of reallocating among the attorneys take some of the allocation and return it to the class? I imagine it could. I've not seen a Court do that precisely because they separate these two phases. Once it's been decided that the aggregate fee is fair, it's unlikely that we need to return the money to the class.

But I doubt the Court lacks the authority to do that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. Thank you. In fact, on footnote 5 in that section, it's on page 3.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You call that out specifically, don't you?
Quoting from One Class Action Attorney Fee Digest May of 2007. You say -- after the quote you say, "Technically the Court has the power to decide which plaintiffs' attorneys get what amount of money."
And then you go on to say, "But no judge in her right mind wants to undertake this task particularly in cases involving large number of attorneys."
We'll put aside the question of whether judges are in their right mind when they see something they don't like.

And then --
MR. HEIMANN: I object to that comment, your Honor.
THE WITNESS: That's not what I said.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm putting it aside, Richard.
MR. HEIMANN: I object to the comment.
MR. GLASS: I join in that objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then you say, "Yet, judicial involvement is occasionally necessarily particularly as lead counsel is not a disinterested allocator." And then you quote In Re: Diet Drugs Product Liability Litigation Judge Ambro concurring "counsel have inherent conflicts."
"They make recommendations on their own fees and thus have a financial interest in the outcome. How much deference is due the fox who recommends how to divvy up the chickens?" And there's a question mark at the end of that.
That would certainly indicate that you believe that the Court has the authority to either reallocate fees before approving the fees or -- among counsel or to take some of the fees that were going to be allocated to counsel and give some of it to the class?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, I would only tweak the last thing you say in the sense that's saying give some of the fees that were going to be allocated to counsel, I think I say give some of the fees that the fee petition in the petition phase were going to go to counsel.
And as a remedy for misallocation, the Court could return some of that money to the class. I think the Court would have that authority, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Thank you.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. And just to follow up on that, professor, when Judge Ambro writes that "counsel have inherent conflicts," do you agree with that?
A. Well, again, what he's referring to here is something very specific. So let's -- let me zero in on it.
The way I'm describing this, there are two phases, and in the second phase, the allocation phase, the way most courts handle this is that they ask the lead counsel to propose an allocation in the hopes that lead counsel will propose an allocation and get all of the lawyers to agree to the allocation, and the Court therefore doesn't have to involve itself.

And in that setting what Judge Ambro is saying is lead counsel who's proposing the allocation is themselves involved. They're also proposing how much they're going to get. And so there's some question there about how disinterested they are.
There's unique tension though because lead counsel also would like to leave the Court out of it. So it has some incentive to try to propose an allocation that everyone agrees to; and, you know, that's the hope of what we're balancing here is that if they do that well, the Court doesn't have to get involved in these attorney inter -- intra-attorney disputes.
Q. All right. But let me ask you again do you agree that "counsel have inherent conflicts" under those circumstances?
MR. HEIMANN: Well, objection. He's answered that question.

A. Again, with specifically lead counsel who's charged with proposing the initial allocation is what Judge Ambro's referring to, and I agree with him that there's a conflict in some sense.
What I'm trying to point out is there's also incentives that help temper the conflict a little bit.
Q. All right. You know, obviously Judge Ambro makes reference to lead counsel making recommendations on their own fees and thus having a financial interest in the outcome.
Are there any other inherent conflicts for lead counsel that in your experience may exist?
A. In allocating fees?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. Among all the counsel when they're undertaking this task?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I think that would be the primary one. Again, if -- you know, if you're lead counsel in one of these cases, your hope is you're going to be lead counsel in another one of these cases. So you want to do a good job. And one of the ways of doing a good job is in this setting getting the other lawyers to agree to the allocation you're proposing, not having to involve the Court in the allocation.

In my experience I do a lot of work with MDL judges; and when MDL judges get an MDL for the first time or even multiple times, there are a lot of people that apply to be lead counsel. And a lot of times the MDL judges will talk to each other have you worked with this person before, how'd she do in your case.

And so there's a reputational interest the lead counsel have that's part of this whole process, too. They want to -- they want to make the MDL work. They want to work with the MDL judge and make that work.

So I think there's a lot of -- a lot of factors that go into how they're thinking about the allocation, and their self-interest is definitely one of them. These are entrepreneurial lawyers, but it's not the only one.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm curious that in arriving at these allocations amongst themselves in these large class actions, is there a duty of candor by lead counsel to other counsel to disclose what might be material facts?

Page 35

THE WITNESS: Again, I don't -- I'm not fighting the question. I'm happy to answer it and talk about it.

You're now asking me another question that's --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I am, yes.

THE WITNESS: -- not in Professor Gillers' report?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.

THE WITNESS: All right. So I'm here as a rebuttal witness, and I haven't prepared --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand. But you are an expert on class action which I assume includes the divvying up of fees among class counsel.

THE WITNESS: Correct. So if you're asking me to describe what the law is on this, there's very little.

The main precedent in my opinion is the fifth circuit case called In Re: High Sulfur, and there was kind of an allocation that was behind closed doors, and the fifth circuit opinion takes the position that there should be transparency in the allocation and that each attorney should be told what every other attorney is getting in the allocation. And I support that strongly in my treatise. I say transparency is a good idea in these circumstances.

So I don't know if I'd say that a Court has articulated it as a duty of candor. I would rather say that the courts have thought about this as a transparency issue that the lead counsel is open about what the allocation is.

Whenever I think about this I'm reminded when I was growing up my father was an accountant, and he ran a small accounting firm in Pittsburgh, and he allocated the partnership benefits at the end of the year. And he told me he would meet with all his partners and tell them what they were getting, and everyone was very happy. And then he would release the book that showed what everyone else was getting, and he'd have to meet with them all again a second time because they were all unhappy at that point. And so, you know --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: The first stage doesn't sound like a law firm. The second stage does having been on the management part -- transparency is an important aspect to this for that reason.

THE WITNESS: So I think the

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the touchstone in your view would be transparency meaning disclosure of material facts so that other counsel can make a determination as to whether or not they're getting their fair share?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that a fair way to put it?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I've really thought about this in terms of disclosure of how much. I'm kind of copying what my father says. You say to all the lawyers here's how I'm distributing this.

And I should say one other thing about this. I think in most of these cases you should also know what everyone's lodestar is at that point.

As I point out in my report here, about half the cases the lodestar -- the amount of time that counsel spent not submitted to the Court, and so it's not clear all the attorneys would have the information that lead counsel has about the time that the other attorneys had spent on the case.

So I think if I were doing this, I would make sure to share with all the attorneys here's everyone's lodestar, and here's how I'm divvying up the money.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is it not a good practice to make agreements before the lodestars are known as to allocation of fees amongst counsel? And -- let's just leave it at that.

MR. HEIMANN: You're asking him is it not a good practice?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it not a good practice?

MR. KELLY: Sorry. What is not a good practice?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: To make agreements to allocate fees before the lodestar is known.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: That's a tough question and let me say why.

It feels like a different question, your Honor, for this reason: When the lawyers are starting these cases, they're trying to think about what their investment in the case is going to be and what their potential return on the case is going to be and how much time and effort are they going to put into the case.

And take this case for instance. If Labaton is lead counsel and Lieff Cabraser's coming aboard and they're thinking, you know, how much -- how many attorneys should we put on this case, they want to get a sense of, well, how are the fees going to be divided up in the back end.

And so like any other investment, they're making an important investment of millions of dollars of their time here, I would imagine that there would be agreements up front about how to think about that. And I -- you know, I learn from my experience in doing -- in seeing how this all works, and I think what you see in this case feels somewhat right which is there was some agreement as to some portion of the fee, and then some we'll decide the rest at the end.

And I think they need some certainty in terms of the amount of money and time they're going to invest in the case up -- that they're going to get some of that back in the back end. I'm not sure agreements before anyone's lodestar is put in are necessarily a bad thing.

We want to encourage lawyers to invest in a case, and we may need to have them to have such agreements in order to make them comfortable to invest millions of dollars in the case.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to go back to this issue of transparency in making these agreements as to the allocation of fees amongst class counsel.

What information should be made available to the various counsel before they agree on an allocation?

MR. HEIMANN: Now I'm going to object. Maybe I can have a standing objection. You're going way beyond his report now.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I am going beyond his report.

MR. HEIMANN: And I object to that. I don't think it's appropriate for you to do that with a rebuttal expert witness.

As long as I get the objection on the record, he can answer it if he thinks he can then respond.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It actually is not beyond one of the premises in his understanding of the facts in his report, and I'll get to that.

MR. HEIMANN: I would disagree. So I would be interested to see you get to it.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, can you repeat the question? Sorry.

MR. HEIMANN: We can have the court reporter read it back.

(Reporter read back.)

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So as I understand the question, you're saying if there's a lead counsel that's going to propose the initial allocation, in proposing that initial allocation what information should they give.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or at any point in the allocation process -- or at any point in the process of agreeing upon the fee allocation, either the initial or subsequently or the final.

MR. HEIMANN: And you're asking him for what his view is what is good practice or best practice or what is required under the law?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm asking what constitutes transparency? That was what -- what kind of information should be provided?

Page 42

MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It's a question -- again, in my experience the main thing to be provided by the counsel are the lodestar and -- and then the proposed allocation.
And I think what most lawyers do is they look at their lodestar, and they see, hey, I'm getting 1.12 of my lodestar, and you're getting 2.4 of your lodestar, and they call lead counsel and say why is he getting two-and-a-half, and I'm getting 1.2. And then lead counsel says something like his contributions were more important.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are those the only material facts, the facts contained in a lodestar?
THE WITNESS: No. Again, for what the reason I just said, lead counsel may well say something like the value of his contribution were more important, and that's why I'm allocating more money than the lodestar represents.
Look, there's no secret we're talking about this case and the facts of this case. And I think one of the things, obviously, you're concerned about is the allocation of Mr. Chargois.
According to what I'm saying, at the point at which the allocation would have happened if the lodestar had been shared, the lawyers would have seen that he had little or no lodestar in the case and might have been asked questions.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that's exactly my question.
You know that Mr. Lieff has testified that when the agreement was made amongst what we call the customer class counsel -- and, indeed, a number of the e-mails and other documents indicate -- that it was Mr. Lieff's understanding from what he was told that Mr. Chargois was performing in the role of local counsel or liaison counsel.
He was not told that the agreement was to pay Mr. Chargois dated back long before the case started; that it was an agreement to pay Mr. Chargois 20 percent of Labaton's fee on every case in which Arkansas was lead plaintiff and Labaton was lead counsel.
He says he was also not told that -- he was also not told that Mr. Chargois had done no work on the case and provided no value in the case itself.

Page 44

Would that have been material information that lead counsel should have shared with the other co-counsel in the case? And I should add that Mr. Bradley -- Garrett Bradley also testified to the same effect.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection. This is outside the scope of this witness as an expert witness.
THE WITNESS: So, again, my understanding -- and it's consistent with what you just said -- Lieff Cabraser was under the understanding that he was serving as local counsel in the case.
And, in fact, I talk in my report --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You do.
THE WITNESS: -- about the fact that then when Mr. Chargois submitted no lodestar at the time of the fee petition, how did Lieff Cabraser understand -- how might have Lieff Cabraser understood that at that time and how they might have thought all kinds of things other than there was an agreement, and he wasn't doing anything in the case whatsoever.

Page 45

So I think what your question is consistent with my understanding of Lieff Cabraser's very limited knowledge. You then asked me was there a duty upon Labaton to provide more information about the Chargois Arrangement.
And I'm not exactly -- I'm not running from the question. I'm not exactly sure how to answer it. When you say duty, you're asking about ethical duty --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Actually, I used the word "obligation."
THE WITNESS: Obligation. Is there a legal obligation? I don't know. Is there an ethical obligation? That's not my area of expertise.
Is it a best practice for class counsel -- lead counsel in certain such circumstance? Maybe not. But primarily because you want to maintain good relationships with the other lawyers who are working on the case. And this is reputationally not going to be a great thing if the other lawyers find out about this after the fact and feel like they weren't treated fairly in this way.
There's an aspect of the allocation phase in which you kind of feel like the lawyers will work it out between themselves; and, frankly, if they feel like they've been harmed in one case, they may then, you know, think about that reputational interest in future cases.

But I don't -- it's harder for me to say -- put my finger on a legal obligation that Labaton had to the other lawyers per se. I've not seen anything litigated like that.

I have no doubt that if the Court had asked for the agreements, that Labaton would have had a legal duty to provide the agreements at that point.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm actually not asking about the Court at this point.

I'm asking about the obligation of Labaton as lead counsel to other counsel to fully disclose the nature and origins of the Chargois agreement.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection again. It's outside the scope of this witness' testimony.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's actually not, Richard. On pages 22 and 23 he relies for his facts on exactly what Mr. Lieff's testimony was. I don't want to have to read the whole thing.

But he relies on -- in part at least on the fact that Lieff Cabraser had no knowledge of the background and true nature of the Chargois agreement.

MR. HEIMANN: I maintain my objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

THE WITNESS: Again, the question -- you're asking again do they have an obligation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: And I guess I'd give the same answer again.

I'm breaking it down into a legal obligation. I don't know anything in class action law that addresses this directly. I don't think it's a great practice for the reasons that I've already testified to.

And, you know, lead counsel in a case like this --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry, you don't think what is a great practice?

THE WITNESS: Again, my testimony is that when lead counsel is dividing up the fees, it's a -- it's in my opinion a best practice to share the lodestar that everyone has and to explain then when asked why you're divvying up the fees in particular ways.

And in this case had that happened, at some point someone may have said here's Chargois' lodestar, and there is nothing, and someone would have asked a question. And I think at that point Labaton would have said here's why we're giving that amount of money -- should have said. If they were asked that question.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And are you aware that Mr. Lieff testified that had he known that Mr. Chargois did no work on the case, contributed no value, did not serve as local counsel, he would not have agreed on behalf of Lieff to share Labaton's obligation to Mr. Chargois?

MR. HEIMANN: Can we see that testimony, judge?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I believe that fairly summarizes it.

MR. HEIMANN: No, I object because frequently I have found your summaries to be inaccurate.

Page 49

I don't see any reason why we can't look at the testimony if you're going to ask him --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We can call it up. Assume it, please.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: Assume that Lieff testified to that effect, and then what is the question?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: My question is does that increase the obligation or bear upon your answer of whether there was an obligation to disclose it to the customer class counsel?

MR. HEIMANN: All right. Again, objection. It's beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert witness.

MR. GLASS: I object as well.

THE WITNESS: I think what you're asking, if I understand it correctly, is you're using Mr. Lieff's testimony to say that this is a material fact.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: At least it was material to him.

Page 50

THE WITNESS: Yeah. And given that it's a material fact, does that increase their duty to disclose it?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Obligation.
THE WITNESS: Obligation.
And, again, I -- I go back to the same answer I had before.
If the Court is involved and the Court asks, absolutely. If you're talking about a private agreement among them, I don't know any law on the subject. It would be my testimony that if I were wanting to be lead counsel repeatedly, I'd be as forthright as possible in these circumstances.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So more in the nature of a best practice than an obligation?
THE WITNESS: I think that sounds right. But again it's not...
It's not something I prepared, I think, to testify on that point specifically and I've thought a lot about. As I'm right here, most judges leave this to the lawyers.
I think a lot of the allocation stuff goes to the lawyers' reputational interests and trust that they build up with other lawyers in these

BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Well, let me just focus on your report for a minute and the statement you make in paragraph 7 where you say in practice judges rarely order disclosure of agreements as to fees.
Do you see that, sir?
THE REPORTER: Did you say "really" order or "rarely"?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Rarely.
MR. SINNOTT: Rarely.
A. I do see that paragraph 7 first sentence.
Q. You're troubled by that, aren't you?
A. Yes. And let me say in the treatise I wrote years before these facts arose I point out that the judges have the authority to ask. They rarely do it. And I specifically encourage them to do it more.
Q. And notwithstanding your belief that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not require it, why are you troubled, and why do you urge them to do it more often?
A. Let me put this in perspective. Two reasons -- really one main reason.

The reason is that occasionally the fee agreements directly affect the class members' interest, and there are two aspects to the fee again. There's the fee petition stage and the fee allocation stage.
At the fee petition stage the key thing I adamantly advocate for in the treatise is that counsel -- that the Court make counsel submit their lodestar, and the reason I do that is because it makes transparent how much profit they're making at the class' expense, what the multiplier is.
And I think class members lose millions, if not tens of millions, of dollars a year because judges don't ask for submission of the lodestar and crosscheck the percentage of work. At the allocation phase I think this is much less pertinent but pertinent nevertheless. I spend a paragraph on it in the treatise.
I suggest that they should make agreements known for the same reason. Occasionally agreements have a negative effect on the class members' recovery.
And I think the Agent Orange case is a perfect -- is the best example of this, far better than this case in some ways.

What I worry about and what the judges worry about a lot are investors and particularly third-party investors. Agent Orange is a little different because they're kind of second-party investors, but they're outsiders who have an interest in the lawsuit. And you worry that the attorneys' incentives may be skewed by those outside investors.
And what I suggest here is that the fee agreements should be disclosed in part to make sure that the class hasn't been harmed by some agreements that have been made with respect to fees.
Q. All right. And you've advocated for that in the treatise?
A. Softly, yes.
Q. But you've advocated for it?
A. Yes.
Q. And specifically let me make reference to 5, Newberg on Class Actions Section 15-12 which states once again qualifying that -- where you see the Rule 54 in the federal rules fit in, you say, "While Rule 54(d)(2)(B)4 makes disclosure of such agreements dependent on a judicial order..." -- and, by the way, the heading for 15-12 is Fee Procedures At Class Actions' Conclusion--Disclosure of Fee-Related Agreements Requirement.

MR. HEIMANN: So you're reading from the treatise; is that correct?

MR. SINNOTT: Yes, sir.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. But going down to that paragraph, if I could begin again.

"While Rule 54(d)(2)(B)4 makes disclosure of such disagreements dependent on a judicial order, there are at least two reasons that courts should regularly order disclosure. First, given that the Court is acting as a fiduciary for absent class members in overseeing the settlement approval and fee process, there is a strong argument that requiring transparency as to the fees is in the class' interest, and hence a Court should so order their disclosure."

So if I could just direct your attention to requiring transparency as to the fees is in the class' interest so as to suggest disclosure, what was the interest in the class in this undisclosed payment going to Chargois & Herron?

Page 55

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.

A. So, actually, I think I see this slightly different in some ways -- in the following way: I appreciate the concern about the Chargois payment. I see it as an allocation issue more than a class issue for a few reasons, and I'll just go through them and explain why I say that.

Number one, in this case I think everyone agrees this is a good class action -- actually an excellent class action. The results and what the lawyers did here is really tremendous.

A lot of class actions are copycat cases or piggyback cases on government actions. This is an important case that the lawyers did themselves, invested a lot of money in and brought a terrific result for the class. I don't think anyone really argues with that.

And so I think I kind of start from the place that they did a good job, and they were paid fairly.

Second, when I look at Chargois' involvement, I don't see anything like in the Agent Orange case where anyone's worried that the payment to Chargois conflicted with the class' interest in litigating the case.

When I say that, there's no evidence that anyone thought during the case, well, we should take this to trial, but we have to pay Chargois so let's settle now, or we should settle, but we have to pay Chargois so let's take this to trial or something like that.

That's what we worried about in Agent Orange. You don't really have any of that here with Chargois.

Third, I don't think there's any evidence -- you guys have got all of the e-mails back and forth. And I don't also see any evidence there was an overreaching for the aggregate fee because of Chargois. There's nothing in the e-mails that says, you know, this is a 20 percent case, but we owe Chargois 5 percent so let's get 25 percent for the class or anything like that.

I think the 25 percent is a fair fee, and in my terms it's a two multiplier which I think is far more important than the percentage. It's a two multiplier. And for what the attorneys accomplished here a two multiplier is a perfectly reasonable -- in fact, quite a modest fee for them. I don't see any evidence that the Chargois fee payment kind of made them overreach in terms of the fee that they were asking for here.

And fourth -- finally, I just throw in one other thing. I think when you look at the Agent Orange case, you have the second circuit there talking about what you really worry about which is that an agreement as to fees alters the incentives in representing the class.

And there what the Court was worried about was the investment return that the lawyers were getting -- some of the lawyers were getting would mean you would settle the case before it should be settled in the class' interest or litigate too long against the class' interests.

And that the second circuit -- notice the second circuit's very upset about this. This is an outrageous set of fee agreements. Notice what they didn't do. Even though the class' interests were at stake, they didn't give the class back the money. They just kind of reorganized the money among the lawyers who were in the case themselves -- throughout the agreements reorganized the money.

I just don't -- I'm not defending the Chargois payment per se --
PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following participant has entered the conference.
A. I'm not saying you shouldn't be upset about it. But I see it less as a fee petition interest affecting the class than as an allocation interest that maybe he shouldn't have been allocated money, and you could give it back to the class if you want.
You could reallocate it, but I don't see how it had a direct effect on the litigation here and undermined the class' interest which is the most important thing at the end of the day.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if I could understand. Is your testimony that because the overall fee was reasonable when juxtaposed against the results in the complexities of the case and the challenges, the payment to Chargois raises no issues for the class?
THE WITNESS: That's an interesting way of putting it. I wouldn't exactly say it that way.
Again, because the fee petition stage I think was fair and the fee was fair as an overall fee, at the allocation stage if you don't think Chargois should have been allocated some money, I don't think that misallocation to Chargois affected the class' recovery in the case or what they -- how they were represented in the case directly.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You've sort of taken my question and put it on your own terms. I'd like you to answer my question.
Is your testimony then that because the overall fee was reasonable to the result, the class has no interest in the payment to Mr. Chargois?
MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Outside the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: A lot turns on how you understand the Chargois payment in that regard. And I think it's a misallocation. If you were to go so far as to say there was something to find, that there was something illegal about it -- and I haven't made that conclusion -- then it would be hard for me to say the class had no interest in that allocation.
But, again, my testimony is that allocation generally comes after fee setting. I'm comfortable with the fee setting here. The allocation may have gone wrong. I'm not sure how the class was directly harmed by that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: In this case the allocation to Mr. Chargois was actually agreed upon by counsel before the fee petition was approved. Are you aware of that?
THE WITNESS: Again, I'm aware that from Lieff Cabraser's standpoint their understanding was that they were agreeing to an allocation of a fee to local counsel in the case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah. But the agreement as to allocation in terms of timing and your division was made before the fee petition itself.
MR. HEIMANN: You mean the decision on the fee petition? Or the submission of the fee petition? Or the drafting of the fee petition?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: The agreement on the allocation to Mr. Chargois was made before the submission of the fee petition.
THE WITNESS: And?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that say anything about your view on the propriety of the allocation here? As I understand it, you've divided up allocation pre approval and then allocation post approval.

MR. HEIMANN: And you're representing that that's the fact? I don't know.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I believe it is.
MR. HEIMANN: I don't know one way or the other.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I believe it is. It certainly is the fact that the allocation was made before the fee petition was approved. That is certainly the fact.
MR. HEIMANN: That I'll agree with.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah.
THE WITNESS: I think I'm dividing up something slightly different. It is less a temporal thing than it is a substantive thing.
The substantive thing is how much money is the class giving up versus how are the lawyers then going to split up that money. And, you know, how much money the class is giving up, based on my expertise I think they got a good deal. How the money was divided up...
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That goes back to the earlier question about whether the class has an interest at the time of the allocation, whether the allocation is made before the fee petition, before the hearing on the fee petition or after.

And my question to you is doesn't the class have some interest, at least in knowing about the allocation to Mr. Chargois in this case?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I thought you were going to end the sentence doesn't the class have some interest in knowing about the allocation period.

My answer to that would be yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I wish you would just answer my questions instead of rephrasing.

My question was does the class have some interest in knowing about the allocation to Mr. Chargois?

MR. HEIMANN: Well, I object now again because we don't know now whether you mean the Chargois Arrangement --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. The fee allocation.

MR. HEIMANN: Just the amount?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, more than the amount. The fact that he did no work on the case. The fact that he was not local counsel. The fact that he did not appear in the case. The fact that the arrangement -- I guess it would be the entire Chargois Arrangement.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, I would approach this question by -- you want to make up a rule after the fact. I wrote a treatise before the fact, and before the fact I said I hope all the fee agreements would be -- that the Court would order that the fee agreements be made transparent.

So I'm agreeing before the fact that I'd love all this stuff to be transparent. Has nothing to do with Chargois. I'm not making up a rule for one case. I'm saying I would like fee allocations to be transparent in every case.

So I'm on record saying that, and I'm comfortable with that. I don't need a special rule for this case.

But I should say I'm on record saying that and therefore urging the Court to order that this stuff be made transparent. That's what the rule structure is.

Page 64

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Hm hm.

THE WITNESS: And if the judge had followed my order -- my recommendation, we wouldn't be here.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand, I'm sure, the background in this case which is a little different than most cases in terms of the posture of the case as it went to the judge for approval of the settlement class and the fee petition and the entire settlement in that there were three cases, two of which were ERISA cases, that were consolidated for pretrial purposes. You're aware of that?

THE WITNESS: I'm aware there are three cases consolidated for pretrial purposes. You had said this is different than most cases. There are lots of different ways these work. Sometimes it works this way. So yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that it is possible that the interests of all of the different class members were not completely aligned as to the allocation of fees.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So your question is am I aware that in this case --

Page 65

THE SPECIAL MASTER: To start with, are you aware of the procedural posture first of all?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So my understanding the Arkansas cases file. There are also some ERISA-related complaints that come later which is fairly typical in these cases. And then they all get consolidated. Eventually they're settled as one single case, one class settlement, one class.

I don't -- I worry about the sense that there are conflicts among class members as to fees. If there are conflicts among class members, that makes class certification more problematic.

And I think there was a little bit of transparency in the class notice and in the settlement agreement about the ERISA -- the members of the class whose claims were ERISA based and how they might be treated slightly differently, and all of that was made transparent. So I'm aware of all that background.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Should the Chargois Arrangement have been noticed to the class because of this procedural posture in which three different cases were consolidated together and the class representatives of all three were in different classes to begin with, and then there was one settlement class that included all of these different class members?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't -- I feel like you're struggling to find some way of --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think everybody's struggling here.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: From my point of view -- and I think this is what I testified to -- it's not complicated. The judge should have ordered that the fee agreements be released. He didn't do that. And absent him doing that, I just don't think there was an obligation to make public any of the fee agreements.

And I count like a dozen -- at least a dozen fee agreements in this case. And I just don't think the judge ordered their release, and I don't think, as I testified, that there's a need to put it in the notice in the case.

And I don't understand how the ERISA -- consolidation of the ERISA cases in the one class changes that conclusion of mine.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It really goes back to this issue of transparency that you've identified. Not only was the Chargois Arrangement not fully disclosed to the other customer class counsel, it was not disclosed at all to the ERISA lawyers.

And my question to you is was there any obligation to, at the very least, disclose the Chargois Arrangement to the ERISA lawyers, if not to the class, so that they could then advise their class representatives, their named representatives in the two other actions?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think the way I'm hearing your question -- and I don't mean to be fighting it -- it sounds like an allocation -- you're asking me in the allocation process should they have made known to the ERISA lawyers the Chargois Arrangement?

Page 68

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: And I just fall back on the testimony I said earlier. I think it would have been a best practice to say here's how we're allocating, and here's who's getting what and here's why.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that the ERISA lawyers have testified that had they known about this, they would not have agreed to the allocation?

THE WITNESS: And, again, I experience that as a similar question as to materiality to Mr. Lieff and his testimony, and I think I'm saying that if I were lead counsel in these circumstances, I would consider it a best practice to be transparent about what I'm doing, and I wish Judge Wolf had ordered transparency of the fee agreements here.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's also another interesting wrinkle to this case that may be different from most cases which was the involvement of governmental agencies in the negotiation of the settlement.

There's been testimony that State Street was insisting upon what we've all called a global settlement to include the governmental agencies but particularly the Department of Labor who, of course, has oversight responsibility over ERISA-fied funds and ERISA-fied claims.

There is other testimony and evidence in the record that the Department of Labor was very interested in this settlement and particularly in the amount of fees should it -- the Chargois Arrangement -- have been disclosed to the Department of Labor?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.

THE WITNESS: You're asking me should Labaton have disclosed the Chargois Arrangement --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That could have been accomplished in any number of ways. It could have been accomplished through the notice process. It could have been accomplished by giving notice to other lawyers who were dealing directly with the Department of Labor. It could have been accomplished whether Labaton did it directly or not.

Should it -- should the Chargois

Arrangement and the particulars of it here have been disclosed to the governmental agencies who were very much a part of the negotiation process?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: But, again, from Lieff Cabraser's point of view, they thought Chargois was the local counsel. So you're asking me should Labaton --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: -- have disclosed some facts about the Chargois Arrangement.

And I -- you know, I wish Judge Wolf had ordered disclosure of fee agreements. I don't know if there was an obligation other than that. The law is clear that fee agreements should be disclosed when the Court orders them, and I wish he had ordered them to do that, and they would have been disclosed.

I --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you're -- I'm sorry, were you done?

THE WITNESS: I was going to say one other thing. And, again, I'm not fighting the sense that you might -- that there's concern about the Chargois Arrangement.

If there had been disclosure of it say in the class notice, I think in fairness to Labaton they would have been part of the process of writing the class notice, and I think they would have tried to explain in the class notice that some of the fees in this case are going to a lawyer who we've worked with in the past in conjunction with the client in this case. There's one named plaintiff that was willing to step up and take on State Street in this circumstance.

We got that named plaintiff because of our portfolio monitoring work in response to a request by the state to apply for such a position. We've been providing that service, and it's been of great value to the shareholders beyond Arkansas in stepping up. And because of that value, we have an arrangement with the lawyer who introduced us to them that he gets a part of our fee in these cases.

So that kind of notice is slightly different than the way you keep describing the notice. So I think there would have been some sense in which if we got to that point -- if the judge had asked them to -- for the agreements, had seen this agreement, had said now let's tell the class, it would have been framed -- they would have argued it should have been framed in those kinds of terms.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So it seems that you are pinning all of this on the fact that the judge didn't ask under Rule 54, and there was no local court rule? Is that right?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection --

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: -- to the judge said "all of this."

THE SPECIAL MASTER: The lack of -- thank you, Richard. Let me rephrase it.

You are pinning all of the non-obligation to disclose the Chargois Arrangement on the fact that Judge Wolf didn't ask, did not have a standing order and that there was no local rule, correct?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes "and." Correct. I hesitate to say I'm pinning it. I'm saying the rules were clear. And the judge could have and in my treatise I argued I hope he does ask for these.

Page 73

And so he bears some of the responsibility here, yes, absolutely.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It sounds like you're saying he bears all of the responsibility. Either he or the Court as a whole in adopting a local rule.

THE WITNESS: Another way I think about this -- and I'm kind of agreeing with you. I'm not totally comfortable with it, but I'm kind of agreeing with you.

I think about it this way: When I was writing the treatise section five years ago without the Chargois facts in my head but knowing a lot about class action law, I said, boy, I hope judges ask for this.

If instead I had written in the treatise what your expert wrote, I don't think it would have been believable. I think it was made up after the fact to fit the facts of this case.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, my expert was actually opining under the Rules of Evidence.

THE WITNESS: He says a lot about class action law, too. Doesn't anymore --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We don't need to argue about that, but...

My question to you is very succinct. In this case as to the Chargois Arrangement, the burden is entirely -- the burden of disclosure is entirely upon either Judge Wolf or the Court to adopt a local rule or a specific court order or even just him asking at the hearing? Is that accurate?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think Rule 23 and Rule 54 are clear that fee agreements must be disclosed upon judicial order. And absent that, that's correct. With one caveat.
Again, I divide this up into these two phases. During the allocational phase stuff comes out among the lawyers, and then it gets raised, and it can be raised that way in that setting.
I think what you have here is a situation where you found out something during -- in your investigation you found out something about the allocation. I don't think it really affected the class that much.
I think you and Judge Wolf have every power to say this was a bad allocation if that's what you think, and we think the money should be reallocated or sent back to the class. But going forward either -- I am adamantly saying the rule was clear. The judge has to order the fee agreements. And I hope they follow my advice and order them in the future. And this is a great case to show why they should do it. Or change the rule.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You actually anticipated my next question which is what phase are we in now? Are we in the allocation phase still now that we've discovered --
THE WITNESS: Yes --
MR. HEIMANN: I don't know that the question had been finished but --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are we in the allocation phase now that we've discovered the Chargois Arrangement?
MR. HEIMANN: Now I object again. This is well beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.
THE WITNESS: For reasons I said earlier, your Honor, when you discovered the Chargois payment, I think you did discover something about the allocation.
I nonetheless, like you, asked myself do

I think this harmed the class in the way the second circuit asked in the Agent Orange case. Were the fee agreements such that it changed the mechanics of the litigation in ways that upset the class' interests?
So I asked myself those questions, and I just don't see any evidence that there was -- that Chargois played any -- that anyone's worry about Chargois played any role in the litigation of this case whatsoever. I really do feel like it's an allocational thing.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the lawyers for the ERISA members of the class have testified that had they known about the Chargois Arrangement, they would not have recommended the settlement to their representatives -- named representatives.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection. That's not their testimony, your Honor.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We don't need any speaking objections, Richard.
MR. HEIMANN: You ought to be honest to the record, judge, really.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Rule 30(c). I'm happy to read.

Page 77

MR. HEIMANN: Please do.
MR. GLASS: I'm objecting as well, but I don't think there's a question pending yet.
(Pause.)
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. I'm going to ask some questions while we're digging that out, professor.
A. Sure.
Q. Let me see if I understand you correctly.
In the treatise where it says there's a strong argument that requiring transparency as to the fees is in the class interest, and hence a Court should so order their disclosure, you're not saying that it's any less in the class interest if the class got a good deal, are you?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. No, but that is the point, right?
The reason to disclose the fees is to make sure the class' interests weren't undercut in any way by the agreements that were made. And so the transparency and disclosure is a means to an end, and the end is making sure the class' interests weren't sold out in some ways.
Q. Would you agree it's in the class' interest to get a better deal on occasion?

MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. I was raised by a Jewish mother. You always want a better deal.
Q. I'll take that as a yes in deference to your Jewish mother.
A. I think the Court's role is to make sure that the class -- both the class and class counsel get a fair deal.
The Court has a real interest in making sure that the lawyers are paid fairly 'cause the whole system is premised upon the lawyers investing their own money, and we want them to be able to do that.
And so I think the Court has a strong interest in making sure the lawyers are fairly paid and at the same time has a very important interest in making sure the class doesn't overpay.
Q. But you're not saying that your advocacy for transparency and the imperative of transparency ends when the lead counsel or class counsel determine that there's been a good deal, are you?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
Q. Good deal for the class?

Page 79

MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. No. I think I've already testified that in my opinion the allocation phase should be transparent as well.
Q. All right. Thank you.
Now in Section 1 on page 3 --
A. We're going back to my current report?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. Okay.
Q. And you quoted from High Sulfur previously.
A. Hm hm.
Q. But looking at footnote 5, it says, does it not, it is -- quoting from High Sulfur. "It is likely that lead counsel may be in a better position than the Court to evaluate the contributions of all counsel seeking recovery of fees."
Did I read that correctly?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you understand the Court to have meant by contributions in High Sulfur?
A. Well, again, I've testified that in -- we're talking about the allocation phase, and the fifth circuit's there saying -- as I do in the next quote -- generally speaking, the Court's going to defer to lead counsel to allocate in the first instance.
And the reason it's going to do that is that lead counsel is essentially running a small law firm -- often a big law firm in running one of these cases, and in doing so it has the best understanding of the value -- not just the time but also the value of various contributions to the case.
Those contributions can be -- they can be heavy lifting, pure hours. They can be brilliant thoughts, creative ideas. They can actually be monetary investments in the case.
This case was going to be lost, and at the last minute someone came in and invested this amount of money and enabled us to depose an expert witness and win the case on that ground.
So I think what lead counsel knows better than anyone having run the law firm on the plaintiffs' side of the case is all of the types of contributions that went into the case and what value they -- how they served the class, what value they brought to the class.
Q. All right. Professor, but based on your understanding of the facts in this case, what was the contribution of Chargois & Herron?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. You know, I've written and taught about this for a long time, and I have perhaps a little more forgiveness in some ways in the following sense: That I think the Labaton firm made the decision that Chargois had brought enough value by introducing them to the Arkansas plaintiff that it was worth it to them to give him some benefit of the cases they got in working with Arkansas.
So I think what Arkansas -- what Arkansas brought to this case is that they stepped up and were a named plaintiff in a situation where no one else would do that. You have to remember that the whistleblower case was unsealed about a year and a half before the Arkansas case was ever brought.
And so my guess -- and this is just a pure guess -- is that the lawyers were looking for a client for a year and a half and didn't find one until the Arkansas plaintiff agreed to step up.
Why did the Arkansas plaintiff agree to do that? Because Labaton had an ongoing relationship with them. They were performing portfolio monitoring for them. The Arkansas Fund trusted Labaton because of that. And that relationship I think is very valuable to the class getting 300 million dollars in relief here.

So you then go back to its origin, and Labaton feels like it has some indebtedness, I guess, to the origin of that relationship.

So, you know, I think you could say there's a but-for cause if -- if Labaton had never met the Arkansas Fund, there may never have been a State Street case.

Q. And you believe that that constituted a contribution to the State Street case?

A. Again, you could make an argument that it's a but-for cause.

Q. But you would agree that in the State Street litigation based on your understanding of the facts there was no contribution?

MR. GLASS: Objection. He just answered that.

A. Again, it's my understanding -- and, again, I have no -- I'm not a fact witness. It's my understanding that Mr. Chargois was not directly involved in the State Street litigation, but my testimony is, you know, really you got to go back to the congress' enactment of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995.

When it was enacted in 1995, I predicted that it would fail because no institutional investor would ever step up to run a securities case. It was a crazy idea. I was basically right. No private institutional investor really ever has.

The public institutional investors have done so, but it's really out of the genius I think of the entrepreneurial attorneys to engage them in this process and get them involved.

And so I have a kind of long, deep understanding of these relationships, and I think, for better or for worse, congress created a situation that required the plaintiffs' attorneys to get institutional investor clients interested in securities class actions, and the plaintiffs' attorneys are kind of ingenious in finding portfolio monitoring as a way of engaging institutional investors to serve the public interest by stepping up and doing that.

And in that sense, you know, you're looking at the warts part of it, but how did they do it? They got people like Chargois to introduce them to the Arkansas funds in the world, and the Arkansas Fund stepped up in this case, and it's kind of a but-for cause in some ways.

Q. All right. And that but-for cause is not undermined in your view by the fact that there was no work in this particular litigation?

MR. HEIMANN: Again objection. Beyond the scope.

MR. GLASS: Objection.

A. It doesn't make it any less of a but-for cause. It could have been more of a but-for cause, but it doesn't make it any less of a but-for cause.

Q. So an introduction years prior to this litigation in your opinion would constitute the work or contributions called for?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

A. I can imagine -- I think what I'm testifying -- again, I'm not a fact witness here, but I think what I'm testifying to is apparently Labaton thought so.

Q. And that's enough as far as you're concerned?

Page 85

A. Well, I'm not -- now I'm a little bit lost. You asked me how I would interpret what the fifth circuit means by contribution.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And I said lodestar, creative ideas, hard work, investment opportunities. And one possibility I guess you're asking me is could Labaton interpret contribution to be the introduction.

Yeah, I think they could interpret it that way.

Q. But I notice that in that list of contributions and how the fifth circuit might interpret it you didn't list making an introduction, correct?

A. You're saying -- I said making an introduction could be interpreted as a contribution.

Q. No. What I'm saying is when you testified as to what contributions could consist of, the list of items that you provided did not include making an introduction, did it?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: Meaning in the testimony he gave a few minutes ago is what you're asking about?

Page 86

MR. SINNOTT: Yes, sir.
A. I don't remember.
Q. But to you the important thing is what Labaton thought a contribution was?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. I'm sorry. I'm a little bit lost. I think -- I think I'm now testifying that I could imagine that Labaton -- it appears Labaton did put value on the introduction sufficient to give him a share in future cases.
And I'm just reflecting back what I see. I'm not a fact witness here. But what I see in the facts is that to Labaton that introduction was important enough that they were willing to agree to give him a portion of what their share of future cases would be coming out of that introduction.
It's a business deal. It happens to be a business deal about lawsuits, but it's a business deal.
Q. Are there limitations to that kind of a business deal as far as what can constitute contributions?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection on scope.

Page 87

A. Well, there's certainly -- I think you're asking are the limitations on with whom lawyers can share their fees, and there are certainly ethical limitations on that which I'm not testifying to.
I'm not sure -- we're putting a lot of -- we're reading a lot into one word in the fifth circuit opinion. I'm not sure -- well, I'd stop there.
I'd say I think the major limitations can be from the ethics rules because they so limit that you can't share a fee with non-lawyers, for instance. They so circumscribe who's in the circle of potential sharing of fees. That kind of is far more important than anything else.
Q. So can you opine as to when judicial involvement would be necessary in assessing whether a party had or would it be necessary at all in assessing whether a party had contributed to a case?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. Yeah, again, there's a huge incentive for self-policing here because -- and this is why I like transparency. When the lawyers -- when lead counsel says to the other lawyers here's who I'm giving the fees to, you'd hope someone would say, Bob Smith?

I've never heard of Bob Smith; why are we giving money to Bob Smith? He had nothing to do with this case.
So there's a lot of self-policing. And if lead counsel said Bob Smith is my second cousin, and we're giving him money, I suspect at some point someone would go to the Court and say, judge, you know, they're divvying up money in ways that don't seem right.
Q. All right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In deference to Richard, I want to read the entire quote I was thinking of from Mr. Sarko who was one of the lawyers for one of the ERISA-named representatives in one of the two ERISA suits.
He was the lawyer for what we've referred to as the Andover case.
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: This was a question by Mr. Sinnott: "What would you have done, counsel, if during the course of this case you had learned about Mr. Chargois?
Answer: Well, I think in my answer if we go back to the original time, the 9 percent deal,

Page 89

I would not have agreed to that."
He's talking here about the fee agreement.
"I guess I would not have agreed to file a joint petition if some money was going to Mr. Chargois now that all this information has come out. I mean the first thing is I would have asked some questions, but I think that's -- you know, that's 20/20 hindsight.
I think the real issue is if I would have known this information, I would have not agreed to file a joint petition because I would not have wanted -- I mean bluntly in order to do that, I would have had to first talk to the other ERISA counsel, and they would not have agreed. I would have had to get approval from the named plaintiffs who would not have agreed. I mean you've met our named plaintiffs. They're straight shooters. They would say this doesn't sound right."
I can go on if you want me to.
MR. HEIMANN: No, but you understand the difference between that and what you said when you represented in your question that they had said they wouldn't have gone -- that they wouldn't have agreed to the settlement agreement.

And they're talking about fees, not the settlement agreement.
THE WITNESS: Joint petition.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's a little unclear, but, at any rate, they would not have agreed to the fees. Let's limit it now to that.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: What I heard in what you're reading is --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That the named plaintiffs -- the ERISA-named plaintiffs in the other cases would not have agreed to the fees.
THE WITNESS: Well, I think what he's testifying -- what I heard was that they would not have agreed to a joint fee petition with Labaton in those circumstances.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's one of the things he's saying, yes. At the very least they're saying I would have had to get approval from the named plaintiffs who would not have agreed.
It may be a little unclear as to what they would not have agreed to, but at the very least they would not have agreed to a payment going to

Page 91

Mr. Chargois under the Chargois Arrangement at the very least.
MR. GLASS: Objection. That's not what it says.
MR. HEIMANN: What's the question?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that in any way impact your view that it was not necessary to give notice of the Chargois Arrangement to the settlement class?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why not?
THE WITNESS: First of all, I hear the testimony as saying our clients wouldn't have agreed to a joint fee petition. So they wouldn't have agreed to a joint fee petition.
I don't know -- I think -- I think what you're getting at is if we had originally said Mr. Lieff would find this material, Keller Rohrback would have found it material, now I think you're adding in maybe the class representatives would have found this material.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I'll accept that, yes.

Page 92

THE WITNESS: And, again, I -- you know, I come back to my testimony here. The rules are clear. The judge orders --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sorry.
THE WITNESS: Are you all right?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't know. I just got a cramp. I'm okay.
THE WITNESS: Those are the most painful cramps I've had myself.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Didn't have my banana this morning. Sorry.
THE WITNESS: I think it's a hundred percent clear there that if the judge had ordered the fee agreements to be disclosed, they should have been disclosed.
But looking at the agreements after the fact and working backwards and saying now that we know what they are should they be, I have a harder time with that. I think the rules are pretty clear.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So we're back to the judge ordering it, the "it" being the disclosure of the Chargois Arrangement, even as to the notice of the class.
THE WITNESS: The judge had many opportunities here. There was an interim counsel appointment at the front end of the case. There was a preliminary approval before notice went to the class.

He could have asked for the fee agreements at every stage, learned about the Chargois Arrangement, decided whether -- frankly, the judge may well have said that ain't happening at that point, or could have decided how to describe it to the class and put it in the class notice and say let's see what the class says about it.
Judge Wolf never did any of that. And the rules are clear.
MR. HEIMANN: Can we take a break at a convenient moment?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. This is a good moment.
I do have a -- I have a conference call I've got to do at noon. So let's take a short break, and then we can have our lunch break at noon, okay?
MR. SINNOTT: All right. So it's 11 o'clock. 11:05?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: 11:10 maybe.

Page 94

(A recess was taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: Is anyone on the phone?
MS. LUKEY: I am. This is Joan.
MR. SINNOTT: All right, Joan. Linda, are you on the phone?
MS. HYLENSKI: Yes, I am.
Q. Professor, let me direct your attention to page 4 of your report and paragraph 4.
You talk in that first paragraph fee agreements may arise in either phase. And then you say at the fee-setting stage there may be agreements between the class representative and class counsel, particularly in cases governed by the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, or agreements between class counsel and the defendants that may be pertinent in setting the aggregate fee.
And that phrase "agreements between class counsel and the defendants" is footnoted, and in footnote 8 you indicate these are often called "clear sailing agreements," and you cite the treatise.
Let me just talk very briefly about clear sailing agreements as referenced in footnote

8. And in Newberg 13-9 you say clear sailing agreements are agreements whereby the defendant agrees not to contest class counsel's fee petition as long as it does not exceed a specified amount.
And then you say, "These agreements are troubling because they demonstrate that class counsel negotiated some aspect of their fee arrangement with the defendant when counsel's ethical obligation is to the class, not to its own fees."
So striking that you use the expression "these agreements are troubling," and -- you say they demonstrate that some aspect of the fee arrangement was negotiated by class counsel with the defendant because the ethical obligation should be to the class, not its own fees.
And counsel's ethical obligation -- when we refer to class counsel who negotiated this, is that to the entire class?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. 23(g) specifically says that class counsel's ethical obligations are to the entire class, and it explicitly makes clear that although there's an attorney/client type relationship with the class representative, class counsel's client is the entire class.

And so it's kind of a peculiar situation. They may have an individual client, but regardless of that, their ethical obligation as class counsel is to the entire class.
Q. Because you don't want divided loyalties. Is that a fair statement?
A. Well, the reason 23(g) did this is completely different. There are situations in which the class representative who's kind of standing in as the client may say, for instance, don't take this settlement, even though class counsel thinks it's a good settlement for the whole class; and having been a class action attorney myself in many cases sometimes you have class representatives who are unique, peculiar, have their own views, and the rules want to make quite clear that it's class counsel's obligation to do what's in the best interest of the whole class, even if the class representative has a different particular idea.
This had been a conflict, and Rule 23 tried to clarify that class counsel's serving the interest of the entire class.

Q. All right. And we'll talk more about that later.
But are some of those same concerns implicated in a blind referral arrangement or referral agreement such as the Chargois Arrangement?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. I -- I don't understand the question.
Q. You've articulated some of the concerns in these clear sailing agreements, the matter that the primary concern of which is that the interest of the class are not being paramount.
Is that a fair paraphrasing of your concern?
A. Well, in the clear sailing agreement what you would worry about is that the class counsel's trading off the class' interest for their fees. So that the defendant says, hey, you know what, if you'll agree to settle the whole case for 50 million, we'll agree not to contest a fee up to 35 percent. But if you hold out for a hundred million, we're going to fight you on fees or something like that.
That's the tension there. And I don't see how the Chargois Arrangement has anything to do with that.

Q. Are you aware that State Street was not the only case that Chargois -- was not the only case that Arkansas served as lead plaintiff?
A. I'm aware that Arkansas's been lead plaintiff in other cases.
Q. And are you aware that Chargois stood to receive fees in those other cases as well?
A. I'm aware that he stood to receive fees in some other cases, yes.
Q. All right. And are you aware that that relationship arising out of his introduction of Labaton to Arkansas continued beyond State Street?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. When you say beyond State Street, State Street's still ongoing it sounds to me like.
Q. And it may never end.
A. Yeah, I don't know what that means.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Oh, it's going to end.
Q. If the judge could have kicked me at that comment, I think he would have.
You understand that Chargois -- initially Chargois & Herron, and at least Chargois, currently still stands to make referral fees or whatever you want to call them, some sort of fees as a result of other Arkansas cases, correct?

MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. Yeah, look, I think what you're trying to ask me is the following -- which I think I've testified to already -- I did ask this question when I think about this case, and I went through this earlier, is the Chargois Arrangement, did it get in the way of the class' interest here, and I think that's what you're getting at again.
Q. It is.
A. Yeah. And, again, the way I looked at it myself was to say in litigating this case was Labaton's indebtedness to Chargois, did it interfere with how they litigated the case in any way whatsoever or interfered with anyone related to this case.
Frankly, it's kind of interesting that no one else knew about it, or Lieff didn't know about it, seems to really have played no role in this.
Remember what I just said about the clear sailing agreement. What you worry about in the clear sailing agreement is, hey, okay, if they're going to let us get 35 percent, we'll settle lower than we would otherwise settle; and what I said earlier about the Chargois Arrangement is I can't see how the lawyers cared about it at all when they were dealing with State Street and doing the best they could on behalf of the class against State Street. I just don't think it figured in.

You got all the e-mails. You got everything anyone ever said about Chargois, and I just don't think there's any evidence anyone was saying, boy, we'd love to take this case to trial, but we owe Damon Chargois so we can't go to trial, or we should try to get more money, or we shouldn't get more money.
I just felt like it was something they're going to deal with at the end of the case in terms of the allocation, but I don't see it creating the same kinds of concerns that the Agent Orange case created -- the agreements in the Agent Orange case created or the clear sailing agreements in theory could create and why judges worry about.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you saying that if the class had received notice of the Chargois

Arrangement, that class members could not rationally or reasonably have objected to it?
THE WITNESS: Again, if it had been -- if notice had been given to the class, and we've talked a little bit about what it would sound like, putting it in the best light possible from Labaton's point of view and explaining why they made this arrangement.
If you put it in the class notice, no, absolutely, you're saying to the class here's something that's happening in this case; do you want to object, or do you not want to object to it. You'd be inviting them to react to it by putting it in the class notice.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And my question following on that is are you saying that class members could not reasonably object to the payment -- the Chargois Arrangement in the payment of four million dollars to Mr. Chargois?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Are you asking for my opinion whether it was a good payment or not? Is that what you're asking?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm asking you if it would have been reasonable for at least some of the class members to have objected to the payment to Mr. Chargois?

Page 102

MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Had they received notice.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I like class member objections. So I'm going to answer yes. But I like them because they focus the Court and help bring information to the Court.
In saying yes I'm not necessarily saying they would have won or they would have been right, but I think it's a good thing when class members bring things to the attention of the Court.
Remember the Court has a fiduciary duty to the absent class members. I read that in saying to the Court wake up; it's on your shoulders. It's all on your shoulders. You got to do something here.
And it's just more helpful -- it's, you know, somewhat helpful if a class member will come forward and say look at this in particular.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But, of course, they can only do that if they're given notice of it, correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes, correct. The class members can't object to what they don't know about. That's why I want judges to take the authority that they have and use it.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me direct your attention, professor, to page 6 of your report and paragraph 7. And in that paragraph you talk about an empirical study that you conducted that yielded no cases in which disclosure of fee agreements under Rule 54 was ordered.
Is that a correct statement?
A. Yeah. I don't want to overclaim here. I use the phrase "empirical investigation." You know, my students and I quickly looked at a thousand dockets but did a pretty good job.
Q. Okay. And what importance do you draw from this study or this review?
A. What I draw from this review is that the lawyers' actions in this case are consistent with class action practice, and class action law says that fee agreements have to be disclosed only upon judicial order. And what I found in this investigation was that judges rarely order it, and lawyers rarely disclose it.

And so what happened here is kind of consistent with what happens in class action practice, and there is nothing that the lawyers did here that was unusual.
Q. Did your research assistants read the pleadings or transcripts in each of these cases?
A. Yeah. So it's amazing what they did. And they walked me through it, and then I spot checked it, but we went -- they went through the dockets. And you pull up the docket. Then they search to see if there was a settlement.
If there was a settlement -- and we got down to 127 cases with a settlement. If there was a settlement, they then searched for all of the fee-related documents that were submitted in the settlement process and read the transcripts as available of the preliminary fairness hearing -- the preliminary approval hearing and the fairness hearing, if they were available.
So we looked through everything we could find that was on PACER that was public to see if any of these agreements had been submitted to the Court or asked for.

Q. And how many of the 127 cases that your research identified was there a fee to a lawyer who had not been identified to the Court at all and who was getting paid solely for a recommendation or introduction and did no work?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. Of course, we'd have no way of knowing that, unfortunately, because the judges do not make transparent the fee allocation information, although they have the authority to do it.
So I don't have -- we generally don't have the fee allocation information in any of those cases.
Q. And it's fair to say that this empirical review that you did would not reasonably turn up fees that were not disclosed to the Court?
A. Again, when you say not disclosed, I would say that unless a judge asks how are the fees being allocated and then puts that information on paper when it's submitted to the Court, that information would not be publicly available. It depends on the Court to request and make available the fee allocation.

Q. Sure. So in cases where -- let's say there might have been cases where fees were concealed from the Court.
There wouldn't be anything in the record for your research assistants to learn, would there?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. I don't -- my research assistants weren't looking to see if there are other Damon Chargois arrangements or what you're all calling the "Chargois Arrangement."
They were looking to see what class action practice was in this district with regard to whether fee agreements were submitted to the Court and/or asked for by the Court.
It's a different empirical project. If you said to me we want you to go out and discover every Chargois-type arrangement that exists in the world, this isn't the empirical investigation I would undertake.
Q. Sure. Would it be fair to say that even if you did say that or if you said I want you to go out and find cases where fees were concealed, there'd be nothing to find, correct --
MR. GLASS: Objection.

Page 107

Q. -- because by nature of those arrangements there'd be nothing in the record?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. Again, I see this case slightly differently in the sense that I wouldn't -- I would put this under the practices that evolve with the PSLRA, and I could do an empirical investigation of PSLRA cases and what fee information is available in the PSLRA context and who gets paid.
As we talked about earlier, I wrote a little piece about some of that a few years ago.
Q. All right, sir.
Let me direct your attention, professor, to page 8, Section 2. And the heading reads Professor Gillers' attempts to advocate around the text of Rules 23 and 54 are unconvincing.
Did I read that correctly?
A. Yes.
Q. And among the things that you reference here, would you say that Professor Gillers wrongly assumed that the identities of lawyers working on a class action case are known to the Court at the fee stage? Is that a fair summary?
A. In one part of this section I say that I think the mistake he was making was mistaking the lodestar submission for a fee allocation submission.

Q. All right. But you read the November 2nd fairness hearing, correct?
A. Yes. The transcript.
Q. The transcript of it. Is it fair to say that Judge Wolf reviewed the lodestars as a crosscheck?
MR. HEIMANN: You mean he referred -- are you representing that he referred to the lodestar as a crosscheck at the hearing itself?
MR. SINNOTT: No. He reviewed the lodestars for purposes of being a crosscheck.
MR. HEIMANN: And you're saying that's referenced at the fee hearing?
MR. SINNOTT: I'm asking, yes, if that was reflected in the November 2nd transcript.
MR. HEIMANN: Can you tell me where in the transcript you had in mind?
MR. SINNOTT: Sure. We'll dig that out, and we'll indicate it.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Is that your recollection?
A. No -- well, let's be clear.

Page 109

My recollection is that the lawyers submitted their lodestar for crosscheck purposes. This is a percentage of work case. The lodestar was submitted to see what the multiplier was going to be, the crosscheck.
Q. Yeah.
A. I don't remember -- I may be wrong, but I don't recollect that at the fairness hearing the Court reviewed the lodestar submission at all.
Q. Let me direct your attention to page 11. You talk about a variety of situations in which the Court does not know the identities of counsel sharing in the fee award.
Do you see that, sir?
A. I do.
Q. Third line from the top. Can you describe those situations?
A. Sure. So, number one, I said in a percentage award case, unless the Court asks the lawyers to submit their lodestar for crosscheck purposes, the Court's not going to have the identities of the lawyers who worked on the case. It's just going to have a fee petition from lead counsel perhaps. Maybe signed by other counsel,

But it's not going to have the breakdown of who all the lawyers were, what all they were doing, etcetera. I'm in another case right now where there are 50 -- there are 63 law firms in the case, 300 timekeepers. If the Court hadn't asked for the lodestar breakdown, it probably would have known only of the four lead counsel in the case.
So this is a huge thing, one I'm very, very critical about. But in about half the cases that are percentage award cases, probably 40 percent of all class actions the judges never ask for a lodestar breakdown, and they don't know most of the identities of many of the lawyers working on the case, especially in the big cases. So that's the big category.
You have other lawyers who may not show up in the lodestar. Sometimes lawyers are tardy getting their lodestar submissions to lead counsel, and they just don't put 'em in. In this case Lieff Cabraser, for instance, said any timekeeper with fewer than five hours they didn't put them in.
There's an ERISA law firm in this case that doesn't show up in the lodestar for some reason. No one put them in the lodestar submission. I don't know why.

There are investors in cases sometimes who might not show up in the lodestar submission, but I think -- or whose identity might not be known to the Court. So I think I have a variety of circumstances where that could happen.
Q. All right.
MR. SINNOTT: So, Richard, in response to your question on page 30 of the November 2, 2016 fairness hearing transcript, line 18 Attorney Goldsmith says, "Finally, your Honor, there was one other matter I did want to note on the fee, if I may, which is that many courts apply a lodestar crosscheck. It's not required."
And Judge Wolf responds: "And I do that."
And subsequently on page 35 of that same transcript on line 3 Judge Wolf in presenting his decision in this case starts off by saying, "So, again, I'll decide this orally." And he talks about the request for attorneys' fees and expenses as being reasonable.
Then on line 12, if you drop down, he says, "I have used the percentage of common fund method. I've used the reasonable lodestar to check on that."

So I guess, getting back to my question, you'd agree that in this particular case and in this hearing Judge Wolf was reviewing the lodestars as a crosscheck?
A. No, I wouldn't agree with that.
Q. Why not?
A. I think what he's doing at the hearing is discussing the method. He's saying I used the percentage method with the lodestar crosscheck. I don't think at the hearing he's reviewing the lodestar at all.
Q. So you don't consider that to be a review of the lodestar?
A. I do not.
Q. On page 11 you talk about the question the Court should have asked, that being who all is sharing in the fee. And -- do you see that, sir?
A. I do.
Q. And let me ask you in your opinion who would counsel being asked that question have to list in response?

Page 113

MR. GLASS: Objection.
A. Anyone who was sharing in the fee.
Q. And that would include Damon Chargois?
A. Correct. In this case.
Q. Let me move ahead to page 13. I want to thank you for teaching me what the word capacious means.
But beyond that, you state a series of principles beginning on the following page, the fiduciary role of the Court, and you describe in the treatise Section 13-40 which highlights novel and noteworthy aspects of the Court's role in approving a settlement --
MR. HEIMANN: You've lost me, Bill.
MR. SINNOTT: Let me see if I can find...
(Pause.)
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. So specifically in the subheading 1 case law including cases from the district -- strike that. Let me just back up.
Professor Gillers provides snippets from six random class action cases to set out four generic principles of class action law. And you list number 1 as case law including cases from the district of Massachusetts amply supports recognition of the Court's fiduciary duty to protect the class and the Court's reliance on counsel to be forthcoming with the information the Court needs in order to do so.

So you're quoting Professor Gillers in that; is that correct?

A. That's correct. That's his language.

Q. Right. But then in the footnote you -- footnote number 34, after you've cited where in Professor Gillers' report this appears, you say see generally Rubenstein for Newberg on class action supra note 4 at Section 13-40, fiduciary role of the Court.

And with respect to that 13-40, would you agree that that section of the treatise highlights novel and noteworthy aspects of the Court's role in approving a settlement?

A. I would agree with one thing. Chapter 13 is about settlement approval --

Q. Yep.

A. -- not fees in particular.

But -- and in Chapter 13 I guess, yeah, from the heading in Section 40 of Chapter 13 I talk about the fact that in approving the settlement -- and, frankly, I would also say fees -- the Court is acting as a fiduciary for absent class members.

Page 115

Q. Okay.

A. Without having the treatise in front of me -- you're reading something. I don't have the language --

MR. HEIMANN: Sorry, you don't have it memorized?

THE WITNESS: I don't have it memorized.

A. So I don't know what you're reading.

Q. I'm disappointed.

A. Yeah.

Q. Let me see if we have that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: While you're looking for that -- we're skipping ahead a little bit, but I want to get this in before lunch because I want to go to this issue of notice to the class and what would have been reasonable, and I'm trying to understand the relationship between Rule 23(e), settlement notice requirement, and Rule 23(h), the fee notice.

Rule 23(e) requires that the notice of

-- that the settlement be fair and reasonable and adequate and that class members have the right to object to the settlement if it doesn't hit this mark. I mean -- right?

THE WITNESS: Correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, as you say on page 29, to safeguard class members' opportunity to object, notice must be sufficiently clear and informed to make those opportunities meaningful. Right?

THE WITNESS: Correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thus Rule 23 does not require that fee allocations be explained to the class members.

That's a general statement that fee allocations generally not be required --

THE WITNESS: I think that's fair.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- to be included in the notice?

THE WITNESS: I think that's fair, yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that change when -- and here I'm still focusing on 23(e).

Does that change when you have a situation like we have here where lawyers obtaining a payment for having done nothing in the case, not appeared in the case, not filed a lodestar, does that change at all?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't know of any cases that say that.

Again, I feel like we're kind of trying to make up a rule to fit the facts of this case after the fact. And I'm describing here -- I'm actually quoting from the treatise what I say the rules are in general.

So I'm not kind of reverse engineering what I think the rules are, but, rather, this is what they are, the way they're written.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What about 23(h) and notice of the content? 23(h)(2) I believe the object of that rule is that class members have the right to object to the fee. Correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then you go on to say the right to object connotes that class members ought to be given sufficient time to do so, but it also means that class members must be given sufficient information to do so.

Page 118

THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That seems unobjectionable, that statement?
THE WITNESS: Agreed.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Agreed. And then you go on and say, "I've strongly advocated for the position that class counsel should make their lodestar known to the Court and to the class so as to assess the extent to which the proposed award reflects a multiplier of the lodestar. I have similarly argued that fee allocation agreements should be made known to the class."
And then you caveat that by saying "but I do so within the terms of the governing legal regime."
"I contend that using their authority under 54(d)(2) the Court should require greater disclosure of fee allocation agreements."
So you seem to be conflating there the obligation of the Court to ask lawyers under 54(d) about fee allocations with the obligation of class counsel to give notice sufficient to inform the class and sufficient information to give them the opportunity to object.

Page 119

You seem to be conflating those two considerations. Is that right?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Somewhat. Rule 23 -- you said class counsel's obligation under Rule 23 to give notice to the class.
Rule 23 is actually peculiarly written, and it's different than the phrasing of who has the duty to give notice, whether it's the Court or the lawyers.
My own opinion is it's the Court's duty to make sure the class members have all the information that they need. And so I would say it's the Court's duty to make sure of this. Regardless of what the lawyers want to disclose, the Court has an obligation to make sure that the class members have all the information they need with regard to the settlement and the fees.
And I do say here -- I think what I'm conflating is if the Court does what I want them to do and says make the fee allocation agreements -- disclose the fee allocation agreements, then I think that information should be conveyed to the class as well.

The Court has thought enough to ask for it; let's then give it to the class members as well.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We all know in practice that the lawyers draft the notice to the class of settlement, right?
THE WITNESS: Um --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Draft.
THE WITNESS: Yes and no. They also nowadays, as you probably know, have professional companies that do this.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Yeah. And so there's a -- in my experience the lawyers and these professional notice givers will come up with a notice. I never know who writes the first draft. Sometimes I think these companies do. Sometimes the lawyers do.
The Court then has to approve the notice, but rarely does the Court write the notice in the first instance, yeah.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's either done by one of these companies at the direction of class counsel, correct? Or class counsel itself?
MR. HEIMANN: Well, I know you don't want speaking objections, but I know of exceptions where the Court writes the notice.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm going to get to that. At any rate, yes?
THE WITNESS: Generally speaking, that's my understanding.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I believe what you're saying here again is that the burden is on the Court at the notice stage to make sure that fee allocation agreements are in the class notice?
THE WITNESS: I'm saying Rule 23 puts that burden on the Court, that's correct. I'm not saying it's the burden. I'm saying Rule 23 says that's the burden's on the Court. That's how the framers wrote it.
They -- the experts who wrote this picked up the language of Rule 54 and put that burden on the Court.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the obligation under Rule 23(h)(2) that class members be given sufficient information to do so, meaning to object to a fee petition, is an obligation as to fee agreements and allocation agreements that is on the Court?
MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes. And I think the drafters thought to put that obligation on the Court because allocation agreements are much less likely to affect the class' interest whereas what you have to give the class information about is what's the magnitude of the fee that's being sought and where's it coming from and how much are we paying for the fees. That's the stuff they're centrally interested in.

I think we'd agree in most cases the fee allocation would be distracting to the class members I think the drafters thought. And rather than inundate them with that information, give them the key information they need to know. How much am I paying the lawyers. How the lawyers split it up is their problem. How much am I paying for the lawyer.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the obligation to provide sufficient information for the class means that as to fee allocation agreements the Court has to ask? Yes?

THE WITNESS: Yes. That's what Rule 23 says. That's correct.

And, again, remember, you know, in this case I can count at least a dozen different fee agreements. At least a dozen different fee agreements in this case. And this is a small case relatively speaking -- I mean it's a big case, 300 million dollars, but the quantity of lawyers to create it is relatively small. I don't know what a notice would look like with a dozen fee agreements explained. Or more.

And I think Rule 23 focuses the limited time of the federal judge -- you know this better than any of us in this room -- on the key thing in the class' interest which is how much is the class paying.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: How much is the class paying in the aggregate in fees.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And an important part of that information for it to be sufficient is not to know whether the lawyers getting money did any work at all on the case? That's not important for the class to know?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't think that's my testimony.

I think my testimony is in my opinion I would hope the judge would ask for the fee agreements and learn if such a situation existed and inquire into it and figure out what the judge felt about it and whether the class should know about it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's a lot to put on a judge.

Separate and aside from what Rule 54 says and the incorporation of Rule 54 into Rule 23, you said earlier the class only knows what it knows and can only object to what it knows, right?

Is that -- obviously that's a --

THE WITNESS: Sounds like a truism.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- truism. That was the word I was going to use. It's also true of a judge.

And this burden of requiring the judge to ask in every case tell me everything about every fee agreement, you know, that is in this case, don't judges have the right to rely upon what the lawyers are giving them as to be all of the necessary and material important information?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Without having to ask is anybody getting a fee here that didn't work in the case, this didn't appear in the lodestar, that didn't appear in the case?

MR. GLASS: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: I'd object to that question as compound. There are at least four questions there.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can answer any one of them or all of them.

THE WITNESS: I -- the sense that you're -- it's a lot to ask of a judge. I think we ask an enormous amount of federal judges. They're incredibly busy in a wide range of things.

And then at this moment in a class action lawsuit we say to the federal judge, hey, you're now a fiduciary for absent class members is an enormous burden to put on judges, but I think the courts that use that language do so specifically to remind the judge you're the backstop. It's up to you. And you have to do something here.

And I in writing the treatise am saying to the judges you're busy, rely on me, and I'll tell you. I'm an expert in this area. Here's what I think you should be doing. Ask for the lodestar and do a crosscheck and get the fee agreements and make sure there's no chicanery going on.

And I'm not -- by the way, I'm not testifying there was any chicanery. I'm not taking a position here but --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There was a generalized chicanery going on here.
THE WITNESS: Generalized comment, yeah.
So I don't dispute that that's putting a lot on the federal judge, and I'm trying to help. I do a lot of work with federal judges trying to get them to understand this.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: My question was -- the other part of my compound question was doesn't the judge have the right to expect the lawyers to tell him or her everything that the judge should know so that the judge can fully perform his or her fiduciary duties to the class?
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'd answer it this way, your Honor. I think that lawyers have the right to rely on the rules, and the rule is the Court can ask for the fee agreements if they want.
I think beyond that, it's a tough question for a lawyer to answer because you're now asking them to interpret what would be pertinent to a judge, and it varies wildly.

Remember 40 percent of the judges don't even ask for a lodestar submission which I find outrageous. So are the lawyers then required to submit the lodestar when the judge doesn't ask for it? I find it incredibly pertinent.
But if a judge doesn't ask for it, are they supposed to predict that the judge really means to ask for it and didn't?
Now I appreciate your reaction to the Chargois Arrangement makes it feel very negative, and you think you should have been told it. I suspect there are other judges who would think, wow, this is the price of doing business in a PSLRA, and a firm like Labaton has to give away this amount of money for this introduction, that's kind of an amazing fact. I'm busy.
And so I think that lawyers appearing in these cases have the right to rely on the rule structure, and it's hard to put on them a burden to predict what else would be important for the judge to know.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. It's

11:59. I have to -- you can continue, Bill.
THE WITNESS: Or not.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We'll break for lunch. We're going to continue. This feels a lot ask like "Don't Ask, Don't Tell."
MR. HEIMANN: So I object to that.
THE WITNESS: I know more about "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" than anyone in the room. Why does it feel like Don't Ask --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If the judge doesn't ask -- maybe it should be "doesn't ask, don't tell."
MR. HEIMANN: I mean is that really a question?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
MR. GLASS: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It's not -- I don't think it's a fair way of stating it because it implies that there's always hiding going on, and I just don't think that's a fair way of characterizing class action lawyers in general.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. If you want -- if you folks want to continue, I have to go get on this call.

Page 129

MR. HEIMANN: We generally want to break for lunch at some reasonable point. Now is fine if you want or if you want to continue --
MR. SINNOTT: Why don't we break now for 45 minutes?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah.
MR. SINNOTT: Forty-five minutes, and then we'll resume.
(A lunch recess was taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: Welcome back, everyone.
Paulette, I have in my hand the expert declaration of Professor Rubenstein dated July 31, 2017 and the accompanying exhibits which include his CV and publications.
So at this time I'd like to offer this as an exhibit.
(Exhibit 2 marked for identification.)
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, for purposes of authentication, if you could look at that and confirm that that's your July 31, 2017 declaration?
A. It looks like it, yes.
Q. Okay. And does that include a CV as well in the content?

Page 130

A. Yes.
Q. All right, thank you.
Now prior to the break I had started to ask you some questions about your report and the section that begins on page 13 through 17, and I brought up a section of the Newberg treatise, and specifically this is under the title of Chapter 13 Settlement, Roman numeral four, Final Judicial Approval of Proposed Class Action Settlements, Section 13-40 Fiduciary Role of the Court.
MR. SINNOTT: Paulette, if we could mark that as Exhibit 3.
(Exhibit 3 marked for identification.)
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. All right, professor, if you'd look at that document before you.
A. Okay.
Q. And directing your attention to the first paragraph, it says, "Rule 23 requires judicial approval of any settlement of a class action lawsuit. That requirement distinguishes settlement of a class suit from settlement of a non-class suit:

The latter requires no judicial approval in most circumstances."
And then you go on to say, "A Court must approve a class action settlement because the parties that are present in settling the case, the class counsel, the class representatives and the defendants, are proposing to compromise the rights of absent class members. The settlement process aims to ensure that the interest of these absent class members are safeguarded. It primarily does so by charging the judge with that responsibility in requiring her judicial stamp approval."
Then you talk about three components or aspects of this process in this fiduciary responsibility -- fiduciary role of the Court.
And in the first bullet you say, "First, so central is the protection of absent class members' rights that the Court is said to have a fiduciary duty toward absent class members during the settlement of a class suit. This is a peculiar judicial function as the normal job of a Court is to act as a neutral arbiter between two competing parties, not as the fiduciary for a group of people."

And then in the second bullet you say, "Second, the Court's role as fiduciary is primarily to ensure that the class's own agents, its class representatives and class counsel have not sold out its interest in settling this case. In this sense the Court's activity is to review the work that lawyers have undertaken to make sure it is noncollusive in nature and successful in substance. This, too, is a peculiar judicial function particularly to the extent it requires the Court to examine how class counsel has carried on extra judicial negotiations on behalf of the class."
And then in the third bullet you write: "Third, to make matters worse, the presentation of the settlement for judicial approval is non-adversarial in nature: The prior competing parties, class counsel and the defendants have resolved their differences and are now in harmony seeking the Court's approval. The Court is therefore required to make a decision using a mode of decision making unfamiliar to courts. Typically courts resolve an issue after the parties present their cases in an adversarial matter. In a class settlement absent objectors, the Court is presented information representing only one side of the issue." And in parentheses pro settlement. "And even if objectors appear and argue against the settlement, the pro settlement presentation is typically far stronger. Hence, the Court often lacks the information necessary to make a truly informed decision."

And then let me just -- before I ask you some questions, let me just read the next few lines.
"In sum, at the settlement of a class suit, the law requires the judge to act as a fiduciary, making an unusual, largely non-legal judgment and to do so in an informational vacuum. The manual for complex litigation describes this peculiar judicial task this way: Because there is typically no client with the motivation, knowledge and resources to protect its own interest, the judge must adopt the role of a skeptical client and critically examine the class certification elements, the proposed settlement terms and procedures for implementation."
So let me ask you a few questions on that section, at least the portions that I've covered here.

It sounds like, you know, words like "to make matters worse," this is a process for the judge -- this fiduciary role -- that's fraught with difficulties? Is that a fair statement, professor?
A. Yes and no. Yes in the sense that, as I describe, it's an unfamiliar -- it's not the formal thing judges do. So it can be difficult in that regard.
No in the sense that settlement's a good thing. The judicial system strongly encourages settlement. The next or previous section of this treatise emphasizes how much weight is given to settlement, and I think at the moment of settlement there's kind of a congratulatory sense that the legal system has for itself.
So on the one hand, you know, you put the Court in a difficult role; on the other hand, it's a good moment generally speaking.
Q. Is it fair to say that the system and the fiduciary role of the Court in particular relies upon the good faith of the parties?
A. Yes. You know, I feel like you all want to read a lot into that further than I do.
Q. Well, in your treatise you talk about how the Court's role is -- in the second bullet -- to ensure that the class' own agents, its class representatives and class counsel have not sold out its interest in settling the case.

So what am I reading into that? That's a very valid consideration, is it not?
A. Yeah. Three things I think we differ on.
Number one, when I see that the Court is a fiduciary for the class members, I immediately think that means the Court has a responsibility to do something. I don't immediately think that means the parties have a responsibility to do something.
The whole point of the appellate court saying to the district court you are a fiduciary is to say to the trial judge, sit up, do something; you're a fiduciary duty to the absent class members. So the first thing I think is I don't want to slough over or forget how important it is that the Court is the fiduciary here.
Second, if you kept reading on the next page, I say under the -- it's my second point now; it's my third point here -- the Court has available to it a variety of mechanisms for actively seeking assistance.

And as I've testified in writing and throughout the day, one of those mechanisms is the Rule 23 via Rule 54 says to the Court you can ask for fee agreements to be submitted to the Court.
So that's a second thing that I think is important.
And, third, the other thing I think here is that I, for the reasons I've testified throughout the day, am not convinced that the class' interests were compromised by the Chargois Arrangement at the moment that we're talking about here --
Q. Well, let me ask you this --
A. -- if ever.
Q. Do you -- are you finished?
A. I'm sorry, I said "if ever" at the end of that.
Q. Okay. Because you do specifically make reference to class representatives and class counsel not selling out its interest -- the class' interest. I'm assuming you mean there in settling the case.
Have you seen the declaration of George Hopkins that was submitted last month?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall that in that declaration

Page 137

Mr. Hopkins indicates that he didn't know about the Chargois Arrangement?
A. I'm willing to accept -- I don't recall the specifics of it, but that sounds right.
Q. All right. And do you recall him writing words to the effect that he didn't want to know?
A. I recall him testifying to that effect, correct.
Q. Do you regard that declaration and specifically those portions of it that I just asked you about as a disqualifier or as undermining Mr. Hopkins' ability to be an adequate class representative?
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
MS. LUKEY: Objection. I already stipulated he was only ratifying Arkansas Teachers Retirement System.
MR. HEIMANN: I'm objecting on the grounds that it's beyond the scope of this witness' testimony as an expert in this matter.
A. So, again, now you're asking me do I think George Hopkins was an adequate -- George Hopkins and the Arkansas Teachers were adequate class representatives?

Page 138

Q. Yes, sir.
A. And, again, I'm testifying here as a rebuttal witness to Professor Gillers, and we agree Professor Gillers said nothing about this whatsoever in his report.
So you're asking me to testify to something fresh that I haven't had a chance to read the argument in favor of, if there is one.
Q. Yes, sir.
A. And so if this becomes a pertinent fact, I would then have the opportunity to update my opinions after having to reflect on them since I am here as a rebuttal witness.
I don't -- so here's the way I would think of this question: You're asking is the class representative a good monitor of fee allocations among class counsel, and I would say that the class action law -- I'm now describing class action law to you -- doesn't depend on the class representative in the fee allocation process very much, if at all.
And I would come back here and say, look, the thing we're reading from my treatise says the Court is the fiduciary; the Court is the fiduciary for the absent class members at this point.

I know of very few instances, if any, in which class counsel present the fee allocation to the class representative, go over the details of it with the class representative, ask the class representative to sign off on it and proceed in that particular manner.
If you read the cases about the fee allocation process like High Sulfur, Agent Orange, actually all the cases your expert cites, not one of them mentions the class representative as being part of that process.
In Agent Orange, for instance, the second circuit said this arrangement is outrageous because the class representative didn't approve it, or the class representative did approve it, and it's still outrageous or something like that.
So we generally don't think as the class representative of being a monitor of the fee allocation process. There's one exception.
That exception is cases litigated literally under PSLRA, the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, and the exception occurs because the relationship is switched.

Under the PSLRA the Court appoints lead plaintiffs, and the lead plaintiffs then select lead counsel. And so in that circumstance where the lead plaintiff has the legal responsibility to choose the lead counsel, the Court has to sign off on it, but they choose the lead counsel.
In that situation some courts, the third and second circuit in particular, have held that there's some deference to the class representative -- lead plaintiff -- if they approve the fee allocation, there'll be some deference -- some deference, still judicial approval -- that some deference to lead plaintiffs in the PSLRA context. And a kind of -- it's very specialized.
It reverses everything we know, but it's because the lead plaintiff in the PSLRA case is hiring the lawyer for the class.
Q. All right. So let me just back up.
What is the responsibility of in this case George Hopkins with respect to the members of the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not sure how to answer that question. The Arkansas Teachers Fund -- I think that's the name of it. Let's say Arkansas. They're the class representative, but I think at the end there's a handful of class representatives. They're one of the class representatives. And their responsibilities to the class are those that go with being class representative.

There's probably a whole book of the treatise on this topic which we don't really have time for. The shorthand version would be to some extent the class representative plays the function of being the client for the absent class members, stands in as the client to the lawyer for the absent class members. And in a pretty limited way.
And I say that for two reasons. What we ask of class representatives are basically two things: Number one, that they don't have obvious conflicts of interest; and, number two, that they hit some minimum threshold of performing their job, and the threshold is put at a minimum so that in a lot of cases the defendants will attempt to disqualify the proposed class representative and depose them.
And at that deposition it will come out that the proposed class representative doesn't know very much about the lawsuit, doesn't understand the lawsuit, doesn't understand the law, may not completely understand their functions, and nonetheless courts are very forgiving and say the class representative is fine in these circumstances.

So, you know, I don't want to pretend we expect too much of the class representative in class action lawsuits.
Q. Are the courts forgiving enough to say that a class representative who says he doesn't wish to know about a fee allocation is doing his job to his members?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Look, the law says that the judge is a fiduciary and oversees fee allocation. Ninety-nine percent of the judges say we don't want to know.
Q. But that's not what I'm asking you.
A. I know, but that's my answer.
If the judges themselves who have the ultimate authority to oversee the fee allocation do not want to know and do not get involved, I don't see how the judges can then say to the class we expect more from the class representative, who I've just said is expected to know very little, and not really to be able to oversee and manage the lawyers.

It's precisely why we make the judge the fiduciary for the absent class members, and the judges themselves neglect this authority.
Q. But let's get away from the responsibility of the judges, and let me ask you about the responsibility of the class representative.
Would it be reasonable for an Arkansas class member to feel that he or she was entitled to a class representative that was actively in the know about issues of attorney allocation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. When you say an Arkansas class member, you're asking me specifically about a member of the State Street class who happened to be a resident of Arkansas?
Q. No. I'm asking you about -- Arkansas's our shorthand for --
A. Oh, for this case.
Q. -- ATRS.
A. Any class member in the case?
Q. Yes.
A. If you stopped someone on the street and says are you a member of the class, someone's representing you, are you asking me what that person would say?

I don't know what the person would say.
Would it be reasonable --
Q. No, I'm not asking you that.
I'm asking you what the responsibility of a class representative such as George Hopkins would be to that inquiry from one of his members?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, you asked me would it be reasonable for the class member to expect something, and I said I don't know how to answer that question from the class member's point of view.
I can tell you what class action law thinks about this question, and what I'm telling you is class action law has no expectation that a class representative in a standard non-PSLRA case will oversee the fee allocation process.
I don't know of a single fee allocation case that references the class representative's involvement in any way whatsoever, even the cases in which they kind of suggest the judge should have done more.
Q. Well, have you been involved in cases in which a class representative had a conflict of interest or where there was something preventing that class representative from adequately representing the class?

A. Yes.
Q. Tell us about that. How many cases?
A. Oh, I've probably -- I'd have to go through my CV and my history, but I can think of at least a handful off the top of my head.
Q. Okay. And what was the problem with the class representative in those cases as best you recall?
A. You know what? I'm sorry, I should back up.
The cases that I'm thinking of have more to do with class counsel's relationship with the class representative and that relationship going wrong more than the class representative themselves having done something wrong.
Q. All right.
A. So in one case lawyers said to the class representative if you agree to this settlement, you'll get an incentive award which is a kind of bonus that the class representative gets at the end. But if you don't agree to the settlement, you won't get that.

And I was an expert testifying that I didn't think that was appropriate to be made to the class representative because if the class representative didn't agree with the proposed settlement, that was information that the lawyer should want to hear rather than coercing them into agreeing to the settlement.
And I've been in other cases where class counsel -- there are often situations in which there are competing class actions. Someone has a good class action going. It's going very well. All of a sudden, lo and behold, out of nowhere the whole case settles in another court somewhere across the country that precludes that the case go forward.
The lawyers in the good case --
THE WITNESS: Are you getting down my hands?
A. The lawyers in the good case then go in and object to the proposed settlement that's going to preclude their case, and in some sense they're saying to the judge in objecting to the settlement that the proposed settlement isn't fair, adequate and reasonable, and the class representatives in that case and class counsel shouldn't have approved it or proposed it.

I was in another case in which I was actually an expert witness for objectors in a case where there was an antitrust case against BARBRI -- the bar preparation course.
Q. Yeah?
A. The class consisted of everyone who took the bar preparation course which, of course, is all the lawyers.
So the proposed class representatives were all lawyers, and the proposed class representatives had thought up the case and bargained in advance for themselves to get an incentive award on a sliding-scale basis.
And the ninth circuit struck that down as being a conflict of interest between their duties to the class and their own self-interest in the case. And so there's an example of kind of a class representative gone bad. Lawyers' class representatives gone bad.
Q. Well, I think all of us in the room want to know can we still join that class?
A. Exactly. So there's a few examples.

Page 148

Q. Okay.
A. But the ninth circuit case sticks out because it's so rare that the class representatives are found inadequate. Absent them being, you know, the first cousin of the lawyer or the sister of the lawyer or brother of the lawyer or something like that.
Q. All right. Let me ask you specifically about the fiduciary duty of the Court. Is the Court only bound by Rules 23 and 54 in carrying out its fiduciary duty?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I wouldn't say the Court was only bound by 23 and 54. I would have said the Court is -- in this case what we're talking about, I would say the Court is authorized by Rule 23 and 54 specifically to ask for the disclosure of fee agreements.
So I don't know if it's bound by that. Rule 23 and Rule 54 are what structure the fee process in class action cases.
Q. Yeah. Let me put it another way.
Are those rules the only mechanism by which the Court can scrutinize the circumstances in which a fee petition is made?

A. It's hard to answer that question in the abstract. Rule 23 clearly sets out a process and the structure for the fee process in class action cases. It's the governing rule. In the case we're talking about it has a specific subpart directly on point.
So, you know, look, I feel like you all are trying very hard to find a way around that specific law, and you've built kind of a group Goldberg contraption with lots of other things going on but --
Q. Well, thank you very much.
A. -- from where I sit there's a specifically rule directly on point. Just doesn't happen to say what you want it to say, but it's there.
Q. Well, you're an expert on class actions, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. You're not an expert on ethics, correct?
A. You know, I never know how to answer that question. I like to think of myself as having ethics. And use of the word "expert" -- we're now talking about it in the context of an expert witness -- depends on how you define that.

Page 150

Q. Well, would you be prepared to opine as an expert on ethics with Judge Wolf at some point in the near future?
A. I'm not here as an expert on ethics.
Q. There's an old expression that "when you're a hammer every problem in the world looks like a nail."
When you're an expert on class actions, does every problem in the world look like a class action problem?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not testifying that there are no ethical rules involved in lawyering. I'm here as a rebuttal witness because your ethics expert testified as to the content of class action law.
Q. But you are not opining as an expert on ethics, correct?
A. I'm not here as an expert on ethics. There's someone waiting outside that I will be happy to cede the seat who is Lieff Cabraser's expert on ethics.
Q. Let's see if I can save us a little time. So if you'll just bear with me.
(Pause.)

BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Just as a related question, would you agree that lawyers for a class may have obligations to the Court or to the class other than under Rules 23 and 54?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Putting aside whether they did or did not in this case.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I think all lawyers in any case have an obligation to follow the ethics rules that govern the practice that they're in.
Q. Okay. Would you agree that after certification in this case that the class and its members were clients of class counsel?
A. So I've written a lot about this question, and my answer is there is no answer to this question.
And to be more specific, they are clients for some purposes, and they're not clients for other purposes.
Q. All right. Could you explain that?
A. Sure. After a class is certified, the class members are clients for the following purpose -- we're now talking about the ethics rules. Again, I should qualify this by saying I'm not here as an expert on the ethics rules --

Page 152

Q. Okay.
A. -- but I have written a section in the treatise on this.
And, for instance, once the class is certified, they are clients for purposes of say defendants wanting to communicate with the class members. In a normal lawsuit the defendants can't communicate directly with the plaintiff; they have to communicate through the ethics rules with the plaintiff's lawyer.
Similarly, once a class has been certified, the class members are considered clients of the class lawyer for those purposes, and defendant communications have to be through the lawyer.
On the other hand, they're not clients for some other purposes. For instance, in conflicts rules are much laxer so that in a normal lawsuit the lawyer representing a client has to clear all types of conflicts like representing the opponent in a different lawsuit.

But it's much different in a class action lawsuit because of the absent members of the class, and there's all kinds of overlapping possibilities, and we don't think of the client -- class members being clients for conflicts purposes in quite the same way we would in an individual lawsuit. Top of which, Rule 23's commentary makes quite clear that class members can't fire their lawyer. And so they're very much unlike clients in that regard.
Q. Would you agree that after certification counsel has a fiduciary duty to class -- the class and to its members?
A. So, again, you're asking me a question that I think isn't Rule 23 specific. I would say that in reading the case law courts sometimes use that language, but, again, I'd be very careful about what it means because there's a whole set of cases, and I'll now walk you through these -- there's a whole set of cases in which former class members sue class counsel for malpractice, and in those malpractice cases their cause of actions brings in breach of fiduciary duty. And in many of those cases the courts will say that the class action lawyers complied with Rule 23, and therefore they did not breach their fiduciary duties and hence appear to conflate what those two things mean.

So I think the phrase comes up class --
Q. Wasn't that a case --
MS. LUKEY: Wait. You interrupted him.
Q. I'm sorry, go ahead.
A. I think that the phrase is used that class counsel have fiduciary duties to the class, but it's kind of used in a general generic sense, and it's very hard to be more specific about what that means.
Q. Well, weren't those examples that you just described cases in which the Court found there was not a fiduciary duty?
A. No, I'm sorry. I might not have been clear. What the Court found was that there was not a breach of the fiduciary duty because Rule 23 had been complied with, and hence in some ways what the Court's saying is that whatever fiduciary duty the lawyer had was co-extensive with its Rule 23 duties.
And if that's the case, then Rule 23 creates the set of so-called fiduciary duties that we're talking about.
Q. Okay. Thank you.

Page 155

And prior to certification, before the class is certified, what duties does counsel for a putative class and for the putative class representative owe to the class and its members?
A. Again, speaking most carefully under Rule 23 because Rule 23(g) and the commentary that the advisory committee notes speak directly to this question.
There's really three possibilities here. There's a lawyer who files a putative class action full stop. There's the appointment of interim class counsel without class certification which actually happened in this case. And then there's for class certification, and there are varying -- there are varying things that happen at each stage.
The Supreme Court has been quite clear if you're not literally class counsel you lack the ability to bind the class in a recent case they so held. I'm not actually entirely sure they're right but they so held.
On the other hand, Rule 23's commentary makes clear that any lawyer who files a putative class action should beware of the actions they take because of the effect it may have on absent class members. So Rule 23's commentary suggests that there's some duty that arises in the filing of a putative class action.
Q. Okay. Thank you.
What if at a hearing in this matter that Judge Wolf had asked counsel or had said to counsel why didn't you tell me about Chargois, and assume the lawyers had retained you as an expert and asked how they should reply to that question, how would you advise them?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. So I'm sorry. Walk me through this again.
Q. Sure.
A. There's a hearing -- like tomorrow?
Q. Judge Wolf -- or at some point in the past Judge Wolf says why didn't you tell me about Chargois?
MR. HEIMANN: Before or after the fee award? Does if matter for your question?
MR. SINNOTT: After the fee award.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. How would you respond?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Sorry.

Page 157

A. So to make this so I understand it, let's say Judge Wolf reads everything that's happened here, and the Chargois Arrangement has come out and says to one of the lawyers why didn't you tell me about the Chargois Arrangement?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. You're asking me what advice I would give that lawyer about how to answer that question?
Q. Right.
A. So now I'm a --
Q. The question has not been answered yet.
A. Yes.
Q. And your clients say how do we answer that question?
A. Well, I'd say I have a conflict of interest because I'm an expert witness in this case. I can't now be consulting counsel.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In the abstract.
THE WITNESS: Yeah.
A. I think, you know, I'd pretty much say what I said which is I think he should be honest with the Court and tell the Court the way you understood the rules.
There was no requirement to disclose fee agreements absent judicial request.

Q. All right, sir.
A. If you can honestly say that.
Q. Yeah. Let me direct your attention to pages 22 and 23 of your report. And the header at the top of page 22 says Professor Gillers has identified no facts supporting the conclusion that federal common law/equity required Lieff Cabraser to inquire into or disclose to the Court information about the Chargois Arrangement.
(Pause.)
Q. Specifically within this section you indicate that 5.5 percent of the total fee award such as occurred in this case is not an unusually high referral fee.
A. Hm hm.
Q. What's a referral fee? How do you define that?
A. I say the 5.5 percent is not an unusual --
MR. HEIMANN: Yeah, I'm not finding that.
Q. Are you relying on that?
A. I don't know what you're talking about.
Q. Just give me a moment to find that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think you were relying on some testimony that we've had or at least a statement that was made that 5.5 percent was not -- we can find it.
A. What I say -- it's on page 24. I say Mr. Lieff who has roughly 50 years of experience in class action law testified that the amount paid Chargois, which I don't think was 5.5 percent, for what he understood to be local counsel work did not seem on its face to be unusual.
But I -- yeah. Is that what you're referring to?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think that's it.
MR. SINNOTT: Yes, that section.
A. He's here if you want to talk to him.
MR. LIEFF: I'm not an expert.
Q. We've already heard from him.
A. Okay.
Q. Let me ask that question again though. How do you define a referral fee? Or do you?
MR. HEIMANN: Are you referring to the use of the referral fee in that sentence when he's referring to --
MR. SINNOTT: No, in general terms.

Page 160

MR. HEIMANN: Oh.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. What's a referral fee?
A. How do I define a referral fee?
Q. Yeah.
A. You're asking me a question now not about class action law. So I think it's a question about legal practice, of legal ethics or one or the other?
Q. All right. So would it be fair to say that your expertise in class actions does not inform your definition of what a referral fee is?
A. That's probably fair, yeah.
Q. All right.
A. Maybe. I don't know. There's some situations in which referral fees come up in class actions. So I'd have to say my studying of class actions over many years, my work in the field has given me some data points about referral fees. I wouldn't consider myself a world expert on referral fees.
Q. All right. Among those data points does your expertise in class actions inform you as to the reasonableness of referral fees?
A. I'd be hesitant to call myself an expert on what a reasonable referral fee is. There's an old saying a third of a third. Anytime I ask lawyers about it, they -- especially when I'm asking for a referral fee, they tell me that's not what it is.

Q. All right. Thank you.
Let me direct your attention to page 27 and the header for this under Roman numeral three says Rule 23 does not require disclosure of fee allocation agreements in the class notice.
So my -- and you then go on to describe that the Court -- as part of the class action settlement approval process the Court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal, and notice of a motion of attorneys' fees by class counsel must be directed to class members in a reasonable manner.
And you subsequently argue that Rule 23 only requires that the settlement notice be fair, reasonable and adequate and that class members have the right to object to the settlement.
Is that a fair statement?
A. No. The settlement has to be fair, reasonable and adequate.
Q. Yes.

Page 162

A. The class members have a right to object. I think what I was trying to say here is that those two ideas inform what should be put into the notice.
Q. All right. So you're not saying that the notice needs to be fair, reasonable and adequate?
A. The notice has to hit the mark of -- I forget the exact language of Rule 23; I'd have to go back and look, but then it has to hit the Constitutional mark that it has to be reasonable.
Q. Is it accurate to say that 23(h)(2) guarantees that class members have a right to object to the fee motion?
A. Yes.
Q. And that sufficient information should be provided upon which to object to that fee motion?
A. I'm not sure (h)(2) says that exactly, but I would say that exactly -- I do say that exactly.
Q. All right. So you would agree with that?
A. Yes.
Q. What information must be disclosed in order for the class to have sufficient information upon which to object?
A. The key piece -- two key pieces of information are how much are the attorneys asking for literally. What's the level of the fee request?

And I think implicit -- explicit is -- 'cause this hugely goes together with the settlement notice -- how much is the class getting. So kind of how much is the -- are the lawyers getting and what are the class getting. It's kind of a combination of those two things are the bases of making sense of the fee request and whether it seems to be a reasonable -- for a class member to assess whether it seems like a reasonable fee request.
Again, my own opinion -- this is not the law -- is that the class members should be given a sense of what multiplier of class counsel's lodestar the fee request is. I wished that were the law, but it's not.
I think that it's an important fact to determine the sufficiency -- the fairness of the fee request because it shows you how much profit they're getting on your case.
Now having said that, you know, most courts don't agree with me, and I think in most individual arrangements when you hire a contingent fee lawyer, they usually don't keep a lodestar, and you don't know what multiple of their time they're making. So I'm kind of in the minority in thinking this.

Q. Well, minority or not, why do you think that would be important? Why do you advocate for that?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I advocate it -- I spend dozens of pages on this in the treatise. I think the problem with the percentage award is that 25 percent in one case and 25 percent in another case could mean completely different things.
In one case it could be the counsel's lodestar; in another case it could be 20 times their lodestar. To say, oh, all we're asking for is 25 percent, we always get 25 percent, yeah, but what does it mean. What's your lodestar?
That -- if I'm a class member, I want to know, you know -- I think the lawyers should be fairly paid. And in being an advocate of the lodestar crosscheck, I'm also an advocate of them getting a multiplier. But not a ten multiplier. Not a 20 multiplier. And the multiplier should fit the case. That's I think the most important thing.
I think the allocational stuff takes a backseat to that in every way. And if I have a judge in front of me, and I say you have a fiduciary duty, and in the abstract here's how I want you to spend your time, I want you to spend your time figuring out what the multiplier is. Let the lawyers work out the allocation.

Q. All right. In what manner should the class receive information as to their grounds for objection?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm sorry, could you -- I apologize.
Q. Sure.
A. Could you say that again?
Q. How do you propose that class members receive information on grounds by which they can object to a fee award?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That I think is a good question. I'm actually -- I have several concerns here I've talked about in the treatise.
I think in today's world everything should be at a settlement website. And this generally happens in big cases. There'll be a settlement website, and the fee petition will be put at the settlement website. I don't -- you know, it's a lot to ask of most class members to go to a settlement website and read the fee petition. It's crazy to assume they'd know how to go on PACER and get the documents off of PACER.

So my own feeling about this is the class members should -- there's a notice that will go out to them in some way, but there should be a repository to which they have access of the pertinent information which would be the fee petition and the declarations that go with the fee petition, and they'd be able to take a look at that if they had the time and interest in doing so.

So I'm an advocate for the website. The other thing I talk about in the treatise is the time. Needless to say, the lawyers want to file the fee petition with as little time as possible before the objection deadline. And I'm a big proponent of pushing that out giving the class 30 days, 60 days to take a look. They often want to do it in 14 days. I think you've got to give the class information that's easily accessible, and you've got to give them time to review that information.

We don't generally give them allocation information as part of that, and I'm not entirely sure we should. I would really like to focus anyone who cares on the multiplier and not inundate them with, you know -- and again, in this relatively big case -- small case you've got, you know, 20 some, 15 some fee agreements. I'm not sure I would put them all at the settlement site.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You have advocated though that information about the fee allocation agreement should be known to the class? Have you not advocated for that? I thought you had.

THE WITNESS: I mean I think I -- well, I say the fee agreement should be made available, yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Fee allocation agreements.

THE WITNESS: Fee allocation would be one of the agreements, correct. Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

THE WITNESS: Yeah. If the judge asks for them and gets them, then -- first of all, there'll be on PACER at that point, but, yeah, they should probably put them at the settlement website. I think maybe -- that's a good question. I haven't thought this through 'cause it never happens.

The judge might want to parse through them. In this case you've got six class representatives. So they're going to be retainer agreements I assume with each of the class representatives, and maybe the judge wants to look through and say let's put these six up but not these six or put all twelve up or whatever. You got the third, third and third with the ERISA lawyers, the two sets of ERISA lawyers and then subagreements with other ERISA lawyers and that they're sharing agreements among them and -- so I don't know. I mean the Court would have to decide how much of that the class would want to see.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You may have answered this while I was gone, and I apologize for missing some of the deposition, but I think you said earlier that the settlement class was a client of class counsel. Is that right?

THE WITNESS: What I said is yes and no. And I'm not being evasive.

What I say in the treatise -- and I have a whole section on this -- is once a class is certified, class members are considered clients for some reasons and not for others -- for some purposes and not for others. And I gave examples of each. I can go back over it if you want me to.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is when I was out of the room?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Not necessary.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Do you agree that a class member can consult with a lawyer about whether to object to a settlement?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And would you agree that if a class member requests information on fee allocations, that it should be provided?

A. You know, I think I cite the case here where that didn't happen. There was an objector who sought discovery of the fee agreements, and the Court denied discovery of the fee agreements.

I think, you know, my general view of transparency would probably say why not make the fee agreements transparent, and I think you all would take the position after what happened in this case this is a good example of why we should make them transparent, so we could see them.

So I -- if there were a lawyer who sought them -- sought discovery at that point and tried to get the fee agreements made public, I'm not sure why a Court would not make them public.
Q. Okay. In an article you wrote called The Fairness Hearing: Adversarial and Regulatory Approaches -- do you recall that?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Two thousand six UCLA Law Review.
In that article you proposed court-designated attorney to serve as a devil's advocate I believe was the expression used in evaluating class action settlements. Is that a fair summary?
A. You know, it sounds like you read it more recently than I did. In that article --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We have just the guy for you.
THE WITNESS: So I heard.
MR. SINNOTT: Let's not go there.
A. In that article I examine four possibilities. I think the devil's advocate was one of them. I had a -- like a rating agency, like a restaurant rating agency where you put a sign up and say this is a B settlement or A settlement.

So I had -- I was looking at different ways of assisting the Court in its oversight process, and devil's -- appointing a lawyer to advocate was one of them. Using money, making the lawyers put up a bond; and if the settlement was denied, having them forfeit the bond was another one.
And I went through a series of mechanisms of trying to perfect the fairness hearing. That was one of them. I don't remember that I advocated for that one, but I may have. I don't remember which one I came down in favor of.
Q. What were your grounds for believing that devil's advocate was necessary to the settlement process?
A. Yeah, again, I think I was exploring the idea. I'm not sure I was in favor of it, but it goes back to what we were talking about earlier; that the judge at the fairness hearing is hearing a one-sided presentation of the issues and doesn't have the benefit of an adversarial presentation.

And judges are best I think -- they're most familiar with the process of making an adversarial decision. So let's give them an adversarial presentation.
Sometimes you have that when objectors show up, but sometimes the objectors are worse. And the idea would be make -- make the process worse because they have their own interests. And the idea of the Court-appointed devil's advocate would be to be kind of more of a straight shooter.
I think I ended up having concerns about that proposal because it implies that the devil's advocate would have to come up with a problem all the time, and maybe there's no problem. So maybe the person who was assigned that role would then have to say, look, I looked into this, your Honor, and I think that I couldn't find anything to object to. So I wasn't sure kind of how that would all play out in the end.
Q. Just to refresh your memory with a quote, you wrote: "When attorneys file a motion seeking preliminary approval of a class action settlement, the Court could appoint an attorney to argue against the settlement."

Page 173

So you say "could" appoint --
A. Yep.
Q. -- an attorney to argue against the settlement.
And then you go on to say, "A Court-designated attorney could function in a similar manner. She would take the position that the settlement is not fair, reasonable and adequate within the terms of Rule 23(e)(1)(C) or the equivalent state rule. Each Court could maintain a list of attorneys in the community capable of providing this function and could pay the appointed attorney using public funds or from the settlement if it is a monetary settlement."
Does that sound familiar?
A. Sure.
Q. All right. You still believe in that?
A. I'm not sure I was proposing that. I was laying -- again, I don't remember, but I think I was laying out here's an option.
So when you say do you still believe in that, I'm not sure I even believed in it. I was laying it out as an option there.
Q. All right. And later on you say, "The advantages of the devil's advocate concept mirror the advantages of Court-appointed criminal attorneys. The requirement that a person perform this task helps to ensure that the system gives attention and respect to arguments against depriving individuals of liberty or property thereby serving a legitimate function." You use the analogy of Court-appointed criminal attorneys.

Were you concerned about a lack of equilibrium or parody between class members and sophisticated counsel who might be recommending a settlement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, I put it slightly differently. Look, most class action cases are about small amounts of money, and that's why they're class action cases. There's not enough money at issue to fund the litigation if you don't aggregate the claims that are -- so that the clients, the class members themselves, they're not only somewhat unsophisticated -- most of them are not lawyers, but they don't just have enough money in interest in most cases to spend a lot of time providing oversight of the attorneys. So there's kind of an oversight process inherent of what the class action is -- an oversight problem inherent to what the class action is.

And, you know, that's why we have these varying mechanisms. We have the judge acting as a fiduciary in some respects. We have class representatives which we kind of pretend do this but don't really do a good job of it in most cases, and we struggle.

And that's what I was struggling with in this article, to figure out how to deal with the fact that the absent class members lack both the sophistication and the incentive to provide significant monitoring of their class counsel.

Q. All right. And considering that -- those shortcomings or lack of parody, do you think it's reasonable that a class member in considering whether to object to the notice of pendency with respect to Chargois can do so when there's no information there to object to?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. So you're asking --

Q. Let me put it another way.

A. Yeah.

Page 176

Q. Could a class member reasonably have considered the Chargois fee in deciding whether or not to object to the fee application as the notice of pendency told the members they could do so under the circumstances in this case?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I guess you're asking me would any class member have had reason to know about the Chargois Arrangement.

Q. Yes. That's one way of -- one component of it.

A. That's a factual question. As I understand the facts, I think the answer to that question is no.

Q. All right. And would not that circumstance be exacerbated if there was a class representative that had professed to not want to know about fee allocations?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. And I would add a Court that professed not to want to know about fee allocations, too. Remember it was the Court that had the authority to ask for the disclosure of fee agreements and didn't do it.

Page 177

And again, my testimony -- and I'll repeat it -- is that I don't expect much of the class representatives as to fee allocation, nor does class action law. I don't know of a single class action case that says the class representatives oversee fee allocation. In all the cases that your expert cited no one ever mentions a class representative as being a key factor in the fee allocations or the fee agreements. It's the Court.

And so, no, the class here didn't have information about the Chargois Arrangement. The Court never required the disclosure of fee agreements.

I should at -- and, you know, I'll keep adding this as long as I'm here -- two things: I'm not sure the class was harmed by the Chargois Arrangement for the reasons I went through this morning. And, second of all, if you had taken the time to explain why a firm like Labaton would agree to share its fees with someone like Chargois in the class notice, I don't know how much class members would have focused on that, understood it and/or objected to it.

Q. Of course, we'll never know because the class members were not aware of it, were they?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Again, you're asking me a factual question, and the answer factually -- I'm not a fact witness, but I think the answer's no.
Q. You're not saying that the notice is, if you will, a paper drill in the process, are you?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Paper drill?
Q. Does the -- the notice has to mean something, doesn't it?
A. Yes. Yeah. I mean, yeah, the notice is important -- is an important part of the process. It's the point at which you tell the class, hey, this is what you're getting, and here's what the lawyers are getting, and here's what we did, and here's why they're getting it, and here's what happened.
Q. And if the notice does not contain full information, it does not fulfill its purpose, does it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. If the notice doesn't contain information relevant to a class member figuring out, (a), if the settlement is fair, adequate and reasonable from their perspective, and, (b), if the aggregate attorneys' fees seem appropriate for the case, then the notice hasn't provided -- served its purpose.

Q. And how does it benefit the class to give Damon Chargois 4.1 million dollars from the class recovery rather than to ask Judge Wolf to redirect the money to the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Beyond the scope.
MS. LUKEY: I'm objecting, too, but I'm not stating my reasons because I've been asked not to.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can state them concisely in a non-suggestive manner under Rule 30(c). Non-argumentative --
MS. LUKEY: It was a hypothetical that built in a fact that's not in evidence or expected to be in evidence.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you.
A. Look, Bill, I could go through the fee allocation lawyer by lawyer and ask the same question. Why is Mike Thornton getting two-and-a-half times his lodestar, and someone else is getting one time their lodestar? Why does that benefit the class?

And, you know, there are answers to that question. The value he brought to the case. Lead counsel made the decision that that was, you know, the worth of his services.
You got to remember I'm -- I'm a total transparency person. I'm all for the Court ordering this. There are some stuff on the other side of this which is class counsel's running a law firm, and it's providing a set of legal services with its own money. It's investing millions of dollars of its own money, and we want them to do this. You have to give them some leeway to run their law firm.
So, you know, I think the argument on the other side is this isn't something -- you know, absent criminal stuff going on -- let the lawyers run their law firm, and let's see in the aggregate that the class not overpay, and my feeling is let's see what the multiplier is, make sure the class isn't overpaying.
How the lawyers split up the money amongst themselves is part and parcel of how we get them to invest in these lawsuits in the first place, and you got to give them some -- what's the word? -- authority to do that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm trying to understand your point on this. I thought I did earlier but maybe not.
Is your testimony that so long as the aggregate fee is commensurate to the result, the lodestar, hours worked, then the specific allocation of lawyers' fees is not the business of the class, is not -- the class doesn't have an interest in that?
THE WITNESS: Yes. With the exception I'm a little bit more -- I like transparency partly 'cause I learn a lot from it, and it helps me teach people how these cases work and understand how they work.
And so I kind of like the transparency. I'd like to know how the fees are allocated. I learn from these cases. Unfortunately, all this stuff's under seal so I can never talk about it again.
But, generally speaking, when I look at the allocation from your point of view, the questions I'd ask -- which I said earlier -- are did the Chargois Arrangement -- did the allocational arrangements pervert the incentives in representing the class. And if they didn't, then I think it's fair to let the lawyers work it out among themselves just as the second circuit suggested in Agent Orange where you had perverted incentives in that case.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So that may answer the second part of my question.

If the aggregate fee is reasonable, then is it your further opinion that the class has no interest in a situation such as this in which a lawyer is paid 5.5 percent of the fee for doing no work, never appearing, pursuant to an agreement that predates even the case by years?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I'd separate the two, and I'd say the following thing: I don't think anyone in the State Street class was harmed by the Chargois Arrangement. At least I haven't seen facts. And, again, I come back to all the e-mails you've seen.

I've not seen anything where anyone said we got to settle 'cause we got to pay Damon or anything like that. I don't think anyone in the

State Street class was harmed by Chargois Arrangement. Point one.

Point two. Now that you've uncovered the Chargois Arrangement, it helps us understand the practices that have arisen really under the PSLRA, and that might be a subject congress would want to look at again some day. We passed the PSLRA. We wanted institutional investors to take the lead in these cases. Look what we've created, and maybe we're not happy with what we've created in that way.

I don't see the investors -- I don't see the class in the State Street being directly harmed by that. And I will say that, you know, as many warts as it seems like on the system, there are some good stuff that's come from the PSLRA. All things being equal, attorneys' fees have come down. In many of these cases the institutional investors actually negotiate lower fees up front from class counsel.

And I think in a case like this -- I'm guessing -- we only got Arkansas to step forward because Labaton had this arrangement with them to report fully on monitoring.

So in the old days you had, you know, the Milberg Weiss firm; they had clients who had one share of stock in every stock in The Stock Exchange. Congress didn't like that, and they went to this system. And it encouraged portfolio monitoring and the Chargois arrangements, but you have institutional investors playing kind of an important role in this stuff.

It just has, you know, some warts to the system.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you seem to be saying here that because in your view the class was not harmed, the class had no interest in being informed of the Chargois Arrangement. Is that accurate?

THE WITNESS: Again, yes. I would say the judge had every authority to ask about the fee agreements; and had he done so and given them to the class, terrific.

But when I'm reverse engineering looking back from the end of the case, the questions I ask are similar to what I see the second circuit asking in Agent Orange. Did this pervert the incentives of the lawyers to the detriment of the class? And now, judge, that's just a factual question.

Page 185

I haven't seen it in this case that it perverted the lawyers' incentives in representing the class. In what I've read about the case I haven't seen that evidence. So I don't feel like this class was directly harmed by the Chargois Arrangement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And therefore the class had no interest in being informed in the notice?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: And, again, I think the public's interest in the whole system creates some interest in this kind of information being out there, and that's why I'd like judges to ask about it. But I don't see that it was the kind of information that had to be put in the class notice in this case for those reasons.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think you're answering my question is yes, right?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Try me again. I'm sorry.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why don't we have the court reporter read back my last question?

THE WITNESS: Judge, I promise you I'm not trying to prolong this.

Page 186

(Reporter read back.)
MR. HEIMANN: Are you insisting on a yes or no answer to that?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'd like a yes or no answer.
MR. HEIMANN: He can give you a yes or no answer, and then he's entitled to explain it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's start with a yes or no answer. I think he's explained it, but if he wants to explain it again, then he can.
THE WITNESS: All right. No. I don't feel like the question is fair because you have to ask the question ex-ante which is was the class notice wrong for any reason when it went out. And the judge didn't ask for the disclosure of the fee agreements. I don't think there was anything missing from the class notice.
Ex post we find out about the Chargois Arrangement. Now that we know about the Chargois Arrangement, you want me to go back and say should the class notice have been different now that I know about the Chargois Arrangement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't think I'm going to get a yes or a no answer, but, okay, that's fine.

MR. HEIMANN: You got an answer. It was no with an explanation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which built in the assumption that the judge has to ask. Which we know that's his testimony. So that's fine.
MR. HEIMANN: I know that -- well, I'll be quiet.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: My question focused only on whether the class had an interest in knowing as part of the 23(h) notice process -- whether the class had an interest in knowing about the Chargois arrangements independent of whether the judge asked or not.
MR. KELLY: And now we're defining interest --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Whether they had an interest in knowing.
MR. KELLY: -- or some legal duty?
MS. LUKEY: I would join in that objection.
MR. HEIMANN: There's no question.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There is a

Page 188

MR. HEIMANN: Oh, I'm sorry.
THE WITNESS: And now I think I understand a little better. So I think I would say this: The Chargois Arrangement is a fee allocation arrangement, and we -- class action law generally does not put fee allocation information in the class notice. And so you want me to say, therefore, I'm saying the class has no interest in that. It's not -- I wouldn't quite say that.
But I would say it's not an expected part of the notice process in a class action that the allocations as to what each lawyer's getting is put in the notice.
If the class members want to know that information, they can come forward and ask the Court to release it. I hope the Court would. But it's not expected in a class action that the allocation as to what each lawyer is getting is ever in the notice in a class.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, was there a lodestar check in this case?
A. So the lawyers applied for a fee award based on a percentage of the settlement.

Q. Yep.
A. They asked for 25 percent. They then also submitted their lodestar for crosscheck purposes which is very different than saying the award was based on their lodestar.
All they were saying to the Court in submitting their lodestar is, look, this is how many hours we spent on the case. So if you give us 25 percent, we'll be getting twice as much as we would be getting using our hourly rates. And, therefore, our profit, if you will, our multiplier is twice our hourly rates, and we think that's reasonable in these circumstances.
So the lodestar was submitted for crosscheck purposes, but it was not a lodestar-based fee award which is a whole different thing. It makes the lodestar far more important.
Q. So -- maybe I'm missing this.
What role, if any, do those lodestar calculations have in the plaintiffs seeking approval from Judge Wolf?
A. Yeah, good, good. This is really important. In a lodestar-based fee award like a fee-shifting case where the defendant is directly going to pay the fee, when you submit your lodestar and the Court approves the lodestar, you're getting dollar for dollar. You're submitting your lodestar here, and you're saying here's what I want payment for, and the Court goes kind of hour by hour, if you recall, or lawyer by lawyer or however, firm by firm, and pays that lodestar. The lodestar itself is like the bill that you're submitting to the Court.

In a percentage award case the lodestar is not a bill that you're submitting to the Court. It's like a credit check. It's a crosscheck. You're saying give me 25 percent, and the Court's thinking to itself is 25 the right number. Is it too much? Is it too little?

And the only way of assessing whether 25 percent is the right number -- the one way of doing it -- I think the only good way of doing it is to say what multiple of your lodestar -- when the lawyers submit their lodestar for crosscheck purposes, the law is very clear on this. In almost every circuit the law is we don't look at the lodestar for crosscheck purposes hour by hour; we don't think about it in those terms.

It's just like a back-of-the-envelope calculation. And the reason is partly we went to the percentage method to get judges out of the business of doing a lodestar audit going line by line, and it's much easier to award a percentage.

So if you put the lodestar crosscheck back in, you've introduced all the downsides of the lodestar method, and so courts are very clear that in using the lodestar for crosscheck purposes it's just kind of more like a back-of-the-envelope check.

Q. All right. But even on that back-of-the-envelope check, shouldn't the Court be able to rely on the identification of the lawyers who worked on the case contained within those lodestar calculations?

A. What I say in the footnote in this report is that we don't worry at all about underinclusion in a lodestar crosscheck. We kind of encourage underinclusion because if there's underinclusion, people are left out. It means that the lawyers are submitting a lower lodestar for crosscheck purposes, and that means that the multiplier -- the profit that they're getting -- seems higher.

And so they want to leave people out of the lodestar and submit a high cross -- and get a higher multiplier and they think they can get it, let me them go for that.

What we worry about a lot is the exact opposite; that they're going to pad the lodestar with all kinds of extra hours and bring down their multiplier and make their fee award more reasonable.

So, generally speaking, in doing the back-of-the-envelope crosscheck, we don't care that hours are left out or that people are left out. We like it. 'Cause it means the lawyers are asking for a higher profit and seem to think they can justify it.

Q. Even in cases where the lawyer did nothing?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, if the lawyer has no lodestar in the case, then they're not going to show up in the lodestar crosscheck.

Q. And that back-of-the-envelope assessment of the value of the attorney's work is not frustrated by the lack of identification of that lawyer?

A. No, on the contrary. Again, it's -- we're only using a lodestar for a crosscheck. And so if you're not in the lodestar for crosscheck purposes, the fee petitioner's goal is harder to reach. The more lodestar they leave out, the more multiplier they're getting of their lodestar, and the harder their task becomes.

And so there's no -- from the Court's point of view if they want to ask for a three multiplier and leave time out of their lodestar, they better prove they can -- they're worth the three multiplier rather than a two multiplier. So we don't worry about underinclusion in the lodestar for crosscheck purposes.

And if the lawyer doesn't have any lodestar, if it's an investing lawyer or a referring lawyer or something along those lines, they wouldn't show up in the lodestar crosscheck anyway. They'd only be getting a share of someone's else's lodestar.

Q. It's strictly a factor of multiplication?

A. You minimize it. To me the lodestar crosscheck is the key to the whole thing because it's precisely putting your finger on what the profit is.

And the profit on a hundred-million-dollar case, and the profit in a two-million-dollar case are wildly different at the 25 or 30 percent, but it's the multiplier that brings them altogether. If it's one time your lodestar, two times the lodestar, it's going to be the same one time your lodestar or two times your lodestar in a 50-million-dollar case as a two-million-dollar case.

Q. In this particular case before approving lead counsel's fee request, Judge Wolf said "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today," and then he approved the fee request.

What did Judge Wolf mean when he said that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. What do I think he meant?

Q. Yeah.

A. I think he meant he was relying on the submissions. You know, that he was relying on the submission.

I don't know what to add -- what I could add to that. What I don't think he meant is that I asked you for fee agreements.

Q. Well, let's say Judge Wolf had said I'm relying heavily on what counsel said in ruling on the fee petition, do you think that counsel would have been required to disclose the Chargois Arrangement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. So go back in time five years. I'm sitting in my office writing a treatise, and I'm on this section of the treatise, disclosure of fee agreements, and I write in the treatise the parties have to disclose a fee agreement under two circumstances: One, if the Court asks for it; or, two, if the judge says at the fairness hearing I'm relying on the submission of the parties, I just don't think that passes the laugh test.

Q. What would the Court have to have asked in order for Chargois's arrangement to be revealed?

A. How are the fees being allocated would be one way of asking. Please disclose the fee agreements would be another way of asking.

Q. All right.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I just want to understand your testimony.

So Judge Wolf's statement before he approved the fees and the settlement that "I'm relying heavily on what has been submitted here" could not under any circumstances be construed as the judge telling the lawyers, hey, I'm relying on what you guys are giving me? And I'm trusting you to tell me that this is everything I need to know?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: That's two questions, maybe three. I object.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can pick any one.

MS. LUKEY: Objection nonetheless.

THE WITNESS: I would say one hundred percent if Judge Wolf had said how are the fees being allocated or disclose the fee agreements, and no one had mentioned Damon Chargois, and he then said at the fairness hearing I'm relying on what you're telling me, I think in those circumstances you'd have a real problem.

I don't think Judge Wolf was interested in the fee allocation. It didn't come up. And I don't -- it doesn't distinguish him from most judges in these circumstances.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So by saying I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said here or words to that effect, he wasn't asking enough in order to elicit information about the Chargois Arrangement?

THE WITNESS: He did not ask the lawyers to disclose their fee agreements, correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Professor, given the Court's fiduciary duty to the class, the power of the Court which you've acknowledged to abrogate the Chargois fee, your own frequent emphasis that you've referred to on transparency in class action settlements and fee determinations, class counsel's fiduciary duty to the certified class and its members as their lawyers and the fact that at the fee determination stage the lawyers and the class have opposing interests, does it trouble you that no one, not Hopkins, not the class members and not the judge, were told that a lawyer who did no work for the class was going to get 4.1 million dollars for a recommendation or representation and so those parties could do nothing to question the payment?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. It bothers me that judges do not use their authority to ask for fee agreements. If Judge Wolf had used his authority and found out about the Chargois Arrangement, I am not sure the knowledge of that arrangement as I know it now would bother me as much as I think it bothers you all for the reasons that I've testified to.

But I think -- you know, the law is clear here, and the lawyers have every reason to rely on the clearness, the clarity of the law. Rule 23 and Rule 54 could not be more clear in saying they should disclose fee agreements -- they must disclose fee agreements when the Court orders them to do so.

Q. So again it comes back to the judge not asking the question?

A. Yes. You make it sound like I'm crazy for saying that. It's the law. It's what the law says.

The judge has a fiduciary duty to absent class members. She, he -- he, in this case Judge Wolf, should be asking these questions. That's what I'm telling him.

Q. And just to be clear once again, your opinion is based on Rules 23 and 54 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure?

A. Yes.

Page 199

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not on any ethical rules or ethical obligations?

THE WITNESS: I'm not here as an ethics expert, correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

THE WITNESS: I did read your ethics expert's report, and I'm not convinced that -- it didn't convince me that it trumps the clear rule structure of Rule 23 and 54.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You may have answered this question when I was out of the room. If so, that's fine.

Was Arkansas the class representative for the entire settlement class after -- once the class was certified?

THE WITNESS: One of several I believe.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. The others being?

THE WITNESS: I think in the --

MR. HEIMANN: I don't think so. This is on the record. I think there was only one class representative for the settlement class.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I'm asking -- you know the procedural posture here. The procedural posture was there were three separate cases. In each of these cases there were named class representatives.

Then the case was consolidated for pretrial purposes and settled during the pretrial on this two-track discovery and mediation.

At that point there was a preliminary hearing in August of 2016, and the class was certified, and that class included members from all three of the cases including the ERISA -- the members of ERISA funds that were in the other two cases.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So my question to you is was Arkansas the class representative for that settlement class?

THE WITNESS: That's a factual question, and my memory I thought was that the settlement agreement defined class representative to include all of the class representatives from all of those putative class actions.

If Richard's suggesting -- my memory may be wrong on that point, but I think Arkansas was at least one of, if not the only one.

Page 201

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, we'll look at the settlement agreement and see if it calls out the others.

In your view under 23(a)(4) was Arkansas -- if Arkansas was the class representative, was Arkansas an adequate class representative for the entire settlement class?

THE WITNESS: This is not a question I --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand you haven't opined on it --

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- but you're an expert --

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- and the adequacy under 23(a)(4) is certainly within your strike zone.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, yeah, yeah. I just haven't drilled down on it. I mean it's a big question. You have to look through the whole thing. Sitting here today, I don't have any reason to believe they weren't.

And I think what you're suggesting -- and I'll just put it out there -- is their disinterest in the fee allocation suggests that they were an inadequate class representative.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: One of the questions, certainly --
MS. LUKEY: Your Honor, that was covered while you were out.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That was covered?
THE WITNESS: Briefly. I'll be happy to say it again.
I just -- what I tried to say earlier, I'd love to think the class representatives were monitoring class counsel and the fee allocation arrangements, but I think it's completely unrealistic to believe that. And outside of the PSLRA, none of the cases about fee allocation ever referenced the class representative as being a player in that.
So Agent Orange, all the other cases your expert cites that are class action cases, none of them say this fee allocation process went bad because the class representative wasn't a part of it or didn't sign off on it or wasn't informed of it. I don't think anyone even talks about it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I was going to --

I'm asking the question for perhaps a different reason. And I'm asking you to help me here.
Knowing what we know now with the benefit of hindsight, would it have been better to have broken this settlement class into subclasses and have what we've been referring to as the customer class and the ERISA class in subclasses?
And maybe everything else remaining the same, the allocation to the ERISA class, the allocation to the customer class, but to have -- for purposes of managing it and managing the notice process, would that have been a better way to handle it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: From what I've -- in my review of the case, I was more surprised about the differentials between what the ERISA class members got and the non-ERISA class members got and the potential conflict that created 'cause it felt like the non-ERISA class members were getting less money per dollar and were paying higher fees per dollar than the ERISA class members were paying. And that's a potential conflict which was made somewhat transparent in the class notice.

Page 204

That to me may have called for subclassing. I think it was okay. May have called for subclassing. The Chargois Arrangement I don't -- I don't completely understand how that all gets mixed up in all of that. To me the differentials are far more important than the fee allocation from the class' perspective.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Effectively, weren't all of the class members then being asked to effectively share in the Chargois Arrangement, even though the only sharing was done on the surface by the customer class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: 'Cause they were all handled as one class.
THE WITNESS: Well, that's a hard question to answer 'cause, you know, I'm chafing at the sense that any of the class members were involved in the Chargois Arrangement.
They were all taxed an aggregate attorney's fee, and the attorneys' fees were allocated by the attorneys. The ERISA class members did quite well. They were only taxed 18 percent. The rest of the class was taxed over 25 percent to balance that out.

So it seems to me the ERISA class members did really well. I'm not worried about the ERISA class members. They seem to have done great.
Look, I understand why you would be concerned about the Chargois Arrangement, and I think if I had students it would take me a whole seminar to go through the PSLRA and all the practices and teach it all.
I don't completely understand why you're concerned about the ERISA versus non-ERISA stuff as to the attorneys and whatnot. That part I understand less I have to say.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: One of the reasons I'm asking about it, and I am concerned about it, is because of the testimony of the ERISA lawyers themselves.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, and part of their testimony the way I understood it -- and I know they're not here today, and I've worked with the Keller firm many times, and I have great respect for them; I think they're a terrific firm -- just felt like a little bit like they felt like they didn't get enough money at the end of the day.

Page 206

And that part of the fee allocation I'm not worried about Keller Rohrback. They'll do fine.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did you read the testimony of Lynn Sarko and Carl Kravitz?

THE WITNESS: Not Kravitz. I read Lynn's testimony.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just Lynn Sarko's?

THE WITNESS: Yeah. I haven't read Kravitz.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's stick with Lynn Sarko's. Is it fair to say that he seemed to you to be concerned about the fact that he simply wasn't told about it at all?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: He testified that he was concerned that he wasn't told about it. I think that sounds right. He also testified he wasn't happy with the 9 or 10 percent.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So knowing what we know now with the benefit of hindsight, would it have been a good idea to have handled these for purposes of settlement approval at the fairness hearing as separate subclasses?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Knowing what we know now about two different things. One is the Chargois Arrangement. I don't think the Chargois Arrangement has to me -- to me it has no meaning for ERISA versus non-ERISA. I can't figure out what it does.

Knowing what we know now which we knew then, which is the potential conflict between the ERISA and non-ERISA class members, I think it's a close call, but I think making transparent what the discrepancy was between the two, the judge handled that fine I think in those circumstances.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. I don't have anything else.

MR. SINNOTT: I'm done. That concludes our examination. Richard?

MR. HEIMANN: Yes, I have a few questions.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. HEIMANN:

Q. You were asked about -- a few moments ago about what was said by the judge at the fairness hearing regarding what he had relied upon. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. I'm putting in front of you now a copy of the settlement agreement itself in this case.

And I'll ask you, first of all, as you understand it, would that agreement have been presented to the Court at least as early as the preliminary hearing on preliminary approval?

A. It should have been, and I believe it was.

Q. All right.

A. It's got a PACER number on it consistent with that.

Q. All right. And is there any discussion in the settlement agreement about the procedure that was to be followed with respect to the allocation of the attorneys' fees to be awarded among the plaintiffs' counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. And what does that provide, if you would, please? And give us the page number while you're doing that.

A. I'm in paragraph 21 which is on PACER page 28 to 29. And it's on the settlement -- it's on the settlement agreement page 27 to 28, but it's paragraph 21.

Page 209

And it lays out 9 percent in the aggregate shall be distributed to ERISA counsel in full satisfaction of ERISA counsel's interest in any attorneys' fees awards -- is this what you're asking me?

Q. Yes, that's part of it.

A. And of the attorneys' fees awarded by the Court, if any, 91 percent in the aggregate shall be distributed to counsel for plaintiff -- counsel for plaintiff and/or the class in the ARTRS action in full satisfaction of customer counsel's interest in any attorneys' fees awarded by the Court.

Q. How is that to be allocated according to the agreement?

Not in terms of percentages, but how was the decision to be made according to the settlement agreement?

A. Oh. If customer counsel disagree about the amount of the fee to be distributed amongst customer counsel by lead counsel, they shall mediate their dispute with Jonathan B. Marks, esquire. If unsuccessful, present the dispute to Court for presentation.

I think you're saying -- I think you're asking me and showing me the settlement agreement itself explained to the Court that lead counsel would be overseeing the fee allocation and that the lawyers had set up a dispute resolution mechanism with regard to the fee allocation process, and that dispute resolution mechanism had a mediator followed by appeal to the Court if there were disputes about the allocation.

Q. All right. And in your experience and based upon your academic work, how common is it in a class action for the Court to leave up to lead counsel in the first instance the allocation of attorneys' fees among the various plaintiffs' counsel?

A. I'd say it happens close to a hundred percent of the cases.

MR. HEIMANN: Miss Reporter, if you could mark as the next exhibit in order this e-mail exchange. The last e-mail I think is dated August 8.

Then after that the next e-mail exchange where the last e-mail is dated August 28.

(Exhibit 4 marked for identification.)

(Exhibit 5 marked

for identification.)

BY MR. HEIMANN:

Q. So you've been asked a number of times today about testimony by Lynn Sarko regarding what he might have done had certain permission about Chargois Arrangement been made known to him, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were asked specifically questions about whether or not in your view the payment to Chargois should have been disclosed to the ERISA counsel including Mr. Sarko?

A. Yes, I think I was.

Q. Also questions about whether or not the payment to Mr. Chargois should have been disclosed to the Department of Labor, either directly or through ERISA counsel?

A. I think I was asked that, yep.

Q. Take a look please, if you would, at this first document. That's the e-mail that ends -- the last e-mail's August 9 from Mr. Sarko. If you look at the top.

A. Hm hm.

Q. So it's an e-mail from Mr. Sarko dated

Page 212

August 9 addressed to a number of lawyers including Bradley, Chiplock, Sucharow, Lieff, Thornton, Goldsmith. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. With copies to Kravitz and McTigue. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. And Mr. Sarko wrote in the e-mail: "I want to share a few thoughts prior to Tuesday's call with the DOL." Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. So that would suggest, would it not, that the lawyers who are on this e-mail string were getting together to talk about or consider issues that Mr. Sarko wanted to address in advance of a call with the Department of Labor.

A. It does.

Q. And the first item -- the first line item is the DOL wants to talk about the amount of attorneys' fees in the ERISA portion of the case only. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. I want you to drop over to the next page where the e-mail continues. You'll see a section about a third of the way down that begins "expect the DOL to ask." Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. And then there's a numbered 1 paragraph where he says, "Are the attorneys planning on filing one fee application or separate application?" Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. And now the next paragraph. And this is the one I want to focus on.

Mr. Sarko wrote are there -- under the heading "expect the DOL to ask," item 2 he says, "Are there deals/arrangements on how to divide the fees between the class lawyers, and are we willing to tell the DOL what those arrangements are? (I have stayed away from commenting on this and have always changed the subject or ignored their question--as I feel it is none of their business)."

Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Does that suggest to you that Mr. Sarko was unwilling to share information with the Department of Labor about fee arrangements of deals when the DOL was asking about it?

Page 214

A. It does.
Q. To go over to the next e-mail string, this from the -- the last e-mail's August 28, 2015. Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. The context -- well, below that e-mail from Mr. Sucharow is an e-mail from Mr. Sarko again dated August 28 where he writes to -- it looks to me the people that are on the string of this e-mail which includes many of the same folks I just mentioned a moment ago, the lawyers -- both the ERISA lawyers and the customer lawyers.
A. Yes.
Q. Because he's responding to an e-mail from Mr. McTigue in which Mr. McTigue wrote: "I don't agree with lead settlement's counsel distributing attorneys' fees and expenses in its sole discretion. Attorneys' fees and expenses should be distributed pursuant to the existing written agreements of counsel."
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. And then Mr. Sucharow responded to that e-mail as follows: --

Page 215

A. Sarko -- Mr. Sarko?
Q. Mr. Sarko. Just above the McTigue e-mail you'll see it reads -- on August 28, Lynn Sarko wrote --
A. Hm hm.
Q. -- and then here's what he wrote. "We need to be careful about this as the DOL had asked if there were any agreements on fees between counsel. I would never answer their question, and then they seem to forget about it. But I'd rather not highlight it and have the DOL go sideways on us."
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. Does that suggest to you that Mr. Sarko was concerned that if he disclosed the fee arrangements that he was aware of they might have problems with the DOL?
A. It does.
MR. HEIMANN: That's all I have.
MR. SINNOTT: Brian.
MR. KELLY: Quick question for you, Professor.
EXAMINATION
BY MR. KELLY:

Page 216

Q. You said at the outset that the corrected multiplier of two -- it started out 1.8, but once they took out the double counting stuff, it became a multiplier of two. You found it to be both reasonable and modest. Could you explain that?
A. Sure. Brian, I think -- I forget the exact numbers. You're reminding me it started out as being 1.8. My memory is that after the correction it was around two.
Q. Yep.
A. And I think I testified originally back a year ago that a two multiplier is consistent with -- in fact, plausibly modest for this case. You have to look at empirical data on multipliers and in what circumstances lawyers deserve multipliers.
And, in fact, in my treatise I have what I refer to as a multiplier calculator and in which I set out a series of factors, and using those factors I would have guessed there might have been a higher multiplier in this case.
And those factors include the following: Number one, the -- this is a novel one-off case. This is not a case piggybacking government cases, and this is a case where the lawyers themselves working with the whistleblowers had developed the case and I think a very important case in that regard deserving of a good multiplier.

Second, the rewards that they got for the class I think everyone agrees are quite tremendous. It's a 300-million-dollar settlement.
Third, it appears -- and I think partly due to Judge Wolf -- it was done in a fairly efficient manner and in a good way which kept the multiplier kind of lower than it might otherwise have been in a different case.
And, you know, I'd have to think about it some more, but just looking at it, I was surprised that it didn't have a higher multiplier. A multiplier of two is modest.
One other fact I would put in here is there's a time investment of the money; and the longer the case goes, you might get a higher multiplier because part of what the multiplier should be capturing is the time of investment and money.
So putting all these factors together, I wouldn't have been surprised in a 300-million-dollar settlement to see a three or a four multiplier. I should add multipliers are often higher the higher the settlement. And so I wouldn't have been surprised, and I think it would have been justified to see a three or four.

Just by way of comparison, I've just finished being a Court-appointed expert in the NFL concussion case. And the judge in the NFL concussion case just approved a fee an award on 112.5 million dollars on what may be a billion-dollar settlement. So it's about an 11 percent award.

All I care about is the multiplier, and in that case the lawyers are getting a three multiplier -- 2.96, something like that. And they literally did nothing except negotiate a settlement. Now they would argue with me about this, but they -- there was no discovery. There was nothing but one motion and a settlement. And so a two multiplier is -- the class did very well. They were very well served.

Q. Okay. Final question.

Mr. Sinnott asked you a series of questions about what you think Judge Wolf was thinking when he said various things, but I don't think I heard him ask you what you may think Judge Wolf was thinking when he said -- on June 23rd prior to the submission of any fee declarations when Judge Wolf said, "I usually start with 25 percent in mind."

Did you get a chance to review that transcript at all?

A. I remember hearing that. And, again, I don't -- you know, you're asking me to say what I think Judge Wolf was thinking. I think Judge Wolf was thinking I usually start with 25 percent.

The ninth circuit, for instance, has what's called a benchmark of 25 percent. And I think a lot of courts kind of start in class action cases with a 25 percent. It's hard to know in a 300-million-dollar case is 25 percent too much or too little. It's a little different than a 10-million-dollar case.

And that's why I'm a strong believer in the multiplier, and I think Judge Wolf did quite the right thing here. You guys put in your multiplier; he was able to do a crosscheck. The lawyers put in the multiplier. They were able to do a crosscheck and see that the multiplier was a two.

And so the 25 percent he started with turned out to be a reasonable, again if not a modest, fee.

MR. HEIMANN: Nothing further.

MR. SINNOTT: Joan?

MS. LUKEY: Nothing. Thank you.

MR. SINNOTT: Judge, anything else?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just have a followup, but before I ask that, I want to make sure I understood Richard's question -- the very last question he asked.

Could you go back and find it please about what Mr. Sarko was referring to on this April 28, 2015 --

THE REPORTER: August 28?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. Did I say April? August.

(Reporter read back.)

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So Mr. Sarko -- in Mr. Heimann's question about what you thought he was conveying included the predicate "that he was aware of."

Mr. Sarko was aware of a lot of things that he did not disclose to the DOL. He was not aware of the Chargois Arrangement.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So does that change your answer at all as to whether or not he would have been concerned about the Chargois Arrangement?

MR. HEIMANN: That wasn't the question, your Honor. That wasn't my question. So I object.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. Let me ask it then in the predicate that Mr. Heimann asked, he asked "that he was aware of." He being Mr. Sarko, right?

He was not aware of the Chargois Arrangement.

THE WITNESS: Is that a question?

MS. LUKEY: I'm sorry? Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that your understanding that he was not aware of the Chargois Arrangement?

THE WITNESS: It's my understanding that Mr. Sarko was not aware of the Chargois Arrangement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's all I wanted to ask.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Page 222

MR. SINNOTT: All right. With that, this examination is concluded. Thank you, professor.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

(Whereupon the proceedings adjourned at 2:52 p.m.)

5 Newberg on Class Actions § 15:12 (5th ed.)

Chapter 15. Attorney's Fees
II. Class Action Fee Procedures [*]

§ 15:12. Fee procedures at a class action's conclusion—Disclosure of fee-related agreements requirement

Rule 23(h) governs fee petitions in class action lawsuits and that Rule, in turn, adopts the procedures of Rule 54(d)(2), as applicable. [1] Both Rule 23 [2] and Rule 54 [3] require a fee claim to be made by motion. Rule 54(d)(2)(B) sets forth the required content of a fee motion, [4] including the requirement that the motion must "disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made." [5] Relatedly, Rule 23(e), governing class action settlement approval, states that "[t]he parties seeking approval must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the [settlement] proposal." [6]

The parties to the suit and their counsel may have a range of private agreements concerning fees. Such agreements might include:

- a retainer agreement between the class representatives and class counsel;
- a retainer agreement between individual class members and their counsel, including objectors and objectors' counsel;
- an agreement between class counsel and the defendant—often embedded in the settlement agreement—whereby the defendant agrees to pay, or not to contest, a certain fee request by class counsel; [7]
- agreements among class counsel about the allocation of fees; and
- agreements between class counsel and non-class counsel about the allocation of fees, such as payment to counsel who helped fund the case but may not have played a material role in litigating it.

While Rule 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) makes disclosure of such agreements dependent on a judicial order, there are at least two reasons that courts should regularly order disclosure. First, given that the court is acting as a fiduciary for absent class members in overseeing the settlement approval and fee process, [8] there is a strong argument that requiring transparency as to the fees is in the class's interest and hence a court should so order their disclosure. [9] The Fifth Circuit has put the argument in these terms, writing in a case concerning the allocation of fees among counsel:

> On a broad public level, fee disputes, like other litigation with millions at stake, ought to be litigated openly. Attorneys' fees, after all, are not state secrets that will jeopardize national security if they are released to the public … From the perspective of class welfare, publicizing the process leading to attorneys' fee allocation may discourage favoritism and unsavory dealings among attorneys even as it enables the court better to conduct oversight of the fees. If the attorneys are inclined to squabble over the generous fee award, they are well positioned to comment—publicly—on each other's relative contribution to the litigation. [10]

Some courts may require disclosure of fee agreements by an initial case management order; others may do so at the conclusion of the case.

Second, in evaluating the merits of the fee petition, courts have "given weight to agreements among the parties regarding the fee motion, and to agreements between class counsel and others about the fees claimed by the motion." [11] As the Advisory Committee that adopted Rule 23's fee provision states, "[t]he agreement by a settling party not to oppose a fee application up to a certain amount, for example, is worthy of consideration, but the court remains responsible to determine a reasonable fee. 'Side agreements' regarding fees provide at least perspective pertinent to an appropriate fee award." [12] Moreover, the Committee noted that "[i]n some circumstances individual fee agreements between class counsel and class members might have provisions inconsistent with th[e] goals [of ensuring an overall fee that is fair for counsel and equitable within the class], and the court might determine that adjustments in the class fee award were necessary as a result." [13] These passages suggest the relevance of fee agreements, another factor suggesting that courts should routinely order their disclosure.

Finally, as noted above, in addition to Rule 54's disclosure requirements, Rule 23(e), governing class action settlement—not fee—approval, states that "[t]he parties seeking approval must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the [settlement] proposal." [14] This generally references the settlement agreement itself, but, given the broader language covering agreements "made in connection with the [settlement] proposal," agreements beyond the settlement agreement itself—such as any agreements about fees—may also fall within the purview of Rule 23(e). Courts generally do not read Rule 23(e)'s disclosure requirement as requiring disclosure of fee agreements among counsel on the ground that such agreements do not necessarily affect the class's interests. [15] There may be some cases where this reasoning is incorrect, as some agreements among counsel would impact settlement terms and hence should be disclosed to the class. For example, if one set of counsel's fee allocation was capped at a certain amount, that counsel would have less interest in pushing further on behalf of the class once her cap was met. Moreover, there is little obvious downside from transparency so not only should courts order disclosure of fee agreements under Rule 54(d)(2), but settling parties should also readily provide them under Rule 23(e) in any case.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yeah, I don't profess to be an expert in notice of class actions. I would only say that it's not like communicating with an individual client about settlement. In that case your communications about settlement are the result of a dialogue that began with the client back at the beginning of the case.
When you're telling a class that you've settled the case, it's more like publishing a notice in a newspaper. You have to sort of think about the things that as a general matter anybody reading the newspaper would want to know. And you would probably look at case law and court rulings about what should be in class action notices and start from there.
But I don't -- I'm not an expert by any means on what is customarily included in class

Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow" or the "Firm") respectfully provides this response to the Special Master's September 7, 2017 invitation for a further supplemental submission pertaining to the participation of Damon Chargois ("Chargois") and his firm, Chargois & Herron, in the fee award to the Firm and its customer-side co-counsel Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") and The Thornton Law Firm ("Thornton") in the State Street litigation.

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT OF FACTS[1]

Although Labaton Sucharow's relationship with Chargois & Herron[2] has changed over time, its business agreement with Chargois & Herron has not. After the initial introduction of the Firm to the then-Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS" or the "Client") by Chargois & Herron, i.e., during the RFQ process and in the early period after Labaton Sucharow was selected as panel monitoring counsel, the Firm expected that the two firms would jointly represent ARTRS: Chargois & Herron would serve as a key interface with ARTRS, handling issues local to the client and providing the client with the comfort of readily accessible local counsel, while Labaton Sucharow would provide the actual monitoring of events relating to ARTRS's investments that could lead to litigation.[3] With the introduction and the [1] This section presents a summary overview. Detailed facts, with record references, follow.

[2] Although Labaton Sucharow does not know the details (other than as Chargois described them in his deposition), the Firm understands that Chargois has used different names to describe his firm or firms. In this response, "Chargois & Herron" is used throughout, even where a different name may have been used at that particular time.

[3] Although the Firm and Chargois & Herron jointly responded to the RFQ, ARTRS's Chief Counsel informed Labaton Sucharow that, for administrative purposes, Chargois & Herron could not be listed on the same "state contract form" as Labaton Sucharow. LBS017456. As explained further below, this was not a "rejection" of Chargois & Herron by ARTRS; rather, Labaton Sucharow was added to the list of approved firms and given permission to "affiliate" Chargois & Herron. Id. ARTRS's Chief Counsel has not been deposed, but Labaton Sucharow witnesses took this to mean that they were free to affiliate with Chargois & Herron as they saw fit. See infra at pp. 6-8. Accordingly, the Firm continued with the expectation that the representation of ARTRS would be a joint effort on the terms set forth above.

expected division of responsibilities in mind, Labaton Sucharow agreed that Chargois & Herron would receive 20% of any fees awarded to the Firm, in cases where ARTRS was a named plaintiff and the Firm was appointed lead or co-lead counsel.

Shortly after Labaton Sucharow was awarded panel status, ARTRS changed Executive Directors, resulting in a new administration with no ties to either Chargois or his partner Tim Herron. Labaton Sucharow partner Eric Belfi, who focused substantial attention on the Firm's business development efforts, therefore developed his own relationship with the new Executive Director, George Hopkins, and Chargois & Herron's role dissipated. Unfortunately, the fee allocation agreement between the Firm and Chargois & Herron had not contemplated such a turn of events; and Chargois continued to take the position that his firm was entitled to share in Labaton Sucharow's fees pursuant to the agreement.

Labaton Sucharow was displeased with the unexpected turn of events, and believed that the fee sharing agreement had been based upon a condition that was not being satisfied. Although increasingly dissatisfied with the passage of time, Labaton Sucharow continued sharing fees with Chargois & Herron, fearing that the latter would otherwise sue the Firm in state court in Texas,[4] an event that could have an extremely adverse impact on a firm that works extensively with public pension and retirement plans. This litigation (the "SST Litigation") was the most recent matter in which Chargois & Herron benefited from the agreement, which the Firm believes ends with the conclusion of its current panel contract with ARTRS. After discussions with Garrett Bradley of Thornton, Chargois agreed that, instead of calculating the payment as an amount equivalent to 20% of Labaton Sucharow's fee allocation, in this case the payment to Chargois & Herron would be calculated as 5.5% of the total fee award, jointly paid by the three customer-side law firms. Chargois & Herron thus received a portion of the allocations of Labaton Sucharow, Thornton and Lieff Cabraser, but no portion of the allocations of the ERISA firms. And, of course, none of the Chargois & Herron allocation came from the pool of proceeds designated for class members in either the customer action or the ERISA action, which was consolidated with the customer action for pre-trial purposes.

[4] Indeed, Chargois implicitly threatened to do just that (see Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-59:22; LBS031137), although Chargois claimed a lack of memory in that regard (Chargois Dep. 320:9-14).

II. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT OF LAW

Based upon various statements made by and questions posed to witnesses by the Special Master or his counsel, the Firm understands that the Special Master is concerned about the following purported failures to disclose: Failure to disclose the fee allocation for no work performed to: (1) the client ARTRS, (2) the Court, (3) ERISA counsel, and (4) class members, and failure to disclose that the client had not approved the fee allocation to (5) Thornton and Lieff Cabraser (together with Labaton Sucharow, "Customer Counsel"). As discussed below, with the exception of the first category, no such disclosures were required (although in some instances the Firm believes that the information was nonetheless known to various of the constituencies).

As discussed below, under the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, which control in these circumstances, the only disclosure required was a full and complete disclosure to the client. Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that, erroneously, the disclosure to Hopkins was incomplete and imperfect. For the reasons also discussed below, however, that incomplete disclosure to the client does not justify sanctions in this case.

III. STATEMENT OF FACTS RELEVANT TO DETERMINATION OF EFFECT OF CHARGOIS & HERRON FEE ALLOCATION ON APPROPRIATENESS OF FEE AWARD[5]

Labaton Sucharow's relationship with Chargois & Herron originated through Labaton Sucharow partner, Eric Belfi. Belfi met Chargois in approximately 2004, when Belfi worked at a different law firm and met Chargois in connection with a litigation matter. See Labaton Sucharow LLP's Response to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Supplemental Interrogatories to Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Response to Supplemental Interrogatories") at 4; Belfi 2d Dep. 12:21-13:4.[6] As Belfi understood Chargois's work, Chargois & Herron did "some litigation, but mostly what they do is they find clients, and they refer [the matters] to other law firms." Belfi 2d Dep. 13:7-9.

Labaton Sucharow, a plaintiffs' class action law firm with a strong focus on securities litigation, often serves as "monitoring counsel" for its clients. In such situations, the Firm monitors the client's portfolio of investments — without charge to the client — for events (e.g., a drop in stock price) that might indicate a securities disclosure violation. See, e.g., Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation[7]; LBS017739-41. If an investment in the client's portfolio declines in value as a result of a potential securities violation, the Firm may ask whether the client would be willing to serve as lead plaintiff in a securities case. Id. Only if the client agrees does the Firm begin representing the client in litigation. Id.; see also Sucharow 2d Dep. 115:13-116:15.

[5] This Supplemental Submission deals exclusively with the issue of what, if any, effect the allocation of a portion of the Customer Counsel's fees to Chargois & Herron should have on the fee award. The original issues considered by the Master have been addressed previously in the Firm's original Submission.

[6] Chargois apparently did not recall this meeting during his deposition, because he testified that he first met Belfi through a friend, when Belfi was already working at Labaton Sucharow. Chargois Dep. 16:8-23.

[7] Available at http://www.labaton.com/en/practiceareas/Institutional-Investor-Protection-Services.cfm (last visited Oct. 11, 2017).

Belfi joined Labaton Sucharow in 2006, serving primarily in a role developing new clients, maintaining existing ones, and serving as the client contact in connection with ongoing litigation. Belfi Dep. 9:7-23. After the move, Chargois approached him about opportunities to introduce the Firm to pension plans in the Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma regions, and Belfi agreed. Belfi 2d Dep. 13:10-14. Although the precise date of the earliest discussions is somewhat unclear, Belfi, Chargois and Labaton Sucharow partner Christopher Keller discussed the terms of an agreement between the two firms: In a case brought on behalf of a fund for which Chargois & Herron facilitated the introduction, Chargois & Herron would generally receive 20% of the gross attorney fees based on what Labaton Sucharow earned, although the percentage would be lower in certain circumstances. See, e.g., LBS031185; Chargois Dep. 50:11-52:24, 162:19-164:2. As explained below, Labaton Sucharow's intention was that Chargois & Herron would serve as local counsel to the clients whose introductions they successfully facilitated, and would provide such assistance as would appropriately be provided by lawyers in geographic proximity to, and with an existing relationship with, a client. See Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-23, 27:11-15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

In April 2009, by which time Chargois & Herron had successfully facilitated an introduction with ARTRS as described below, Chargois sent a draft letter agreement to Belfi and Keller seeking to memorialize the previous discussions in writing. LBS030985-87. Keller edited the document and sent a return draft that, among other things, inserted an arbitration clause. LBS031192-95. While a written agreement was never finalized (Response to Supplemental Interrogatories at 8), Chargois at least viewed it as enforceable (LBS031137; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:1-22).

ARTRS was among the funds as to which Labaton Sucharow wished to serve on the monitoring panel. Tim Herron, Chargois' partner in Little Rock, knew Steve Farris, an Arkansas state senator who played an oversight role with respect to ARTRS. See LBS040318; LBS017432; Chargois Dep. 33:16-21; Hopkins 2d Dep. 35:6-36:8 (explaining that Farris served on the Arkansas legislature's Joint Committee on Public Retirement and Social Security Programs); Ark. Code Ann. §§ 10-3-701 and 10-3-703 (2017) (assigning oversight responsibilities to the joint committee).

Herron arranged a meeting for Belfi and Keller with Senator Farris in August of 2007, and they explained the services that the Firm provides. LBS040322; LBS 017438 (in which Chargois observes "[y]ou guys did well" and "represent[ed] the firm very well" in the meeting with Senator Farris); Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-10, 32:20-24. Thereafter, Senator Farris and/or Herron introduced Belfi and Keller to Paul Doane, the Executive Director of ARTRS at the time. LBS040329. In September or October 2007, Doane visited the Firm's offices in New York City while he was in the area on other business. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:2-6, 41:11-13. Belfi was traveling at the time, so Doane met with Keller during that trip. Keller Dep. Day 1 33:10-34:18; LBS040524-A. [8]

In mid-2008, ARTRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") which invited firms to submit qualifications to become additional monitoring counsel to the fund. Labaton Sucharow

[8] During depositions, questions arose about an email chain following this visit. LBS040523-A; see, e.g., Belfi 2d Dep. 43:3-47:6; Hopkins 2d Dep. 43:6-46:17. In the first email, Paul Doane tells Belfi that he appreciated the visit but clarifies that "this is an involved process and will involve further review and probably a formal RFP process." LBS040524-A. Thereafter, Herron states in an email that Doane "is going to be extremely careful in all public statements to avoid any difficulty" and that "[t]he Senator is cautious and doesn't want any impropriety to by [sic] imputed and wants this thing to proceed under the radar." LBS040523-A. Belfi explained that, in his mind, this simply meant that the process was going to proceed according to required protocol, with issuance of an RFQ followed by a chance for the Firm and Chargois & Herron to make a submission. Belfi 2d Dep. 46:18-47:6. The specific language appears to be attributable to Herron's harmless tendency to overstate and self-promote, and does not suggest any kind of improper influence or that a decision to select Labaton Sucharow had already been made.

and Chargois & Herron submitted a joint RFQ response on July 30, 2008. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. Labaton Sucharow contemplated that, if selected as panel monitoring counsel, both firms would work on the litigation, if any, filed on ARTRS's behalf. Belfi 2d Dep. 18:14-19; Keller Dep. Day 1 47:24-49:3. The plan was that Labaton Sucharow would serve as the lead counsel, and Chargois & Herron, with its Arkansas nexus and connections, would serve as counsel working locally with the client.[9] Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-27:15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21. The responsibilities assigned to this type of co-counsel could range from being the "on the ground" attorneys in Arkansas, responsible for coordinating with the client regarding updates, document review and discovery responses, preparation for depositions, and the like, to serving as co-counsel in virtually any other aspect of the litigation. Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-23; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:20-46:2; Sucharow 2d Dep. 113:8-115:12; Lieff Dep. at 80:9-14. As witnesses from Labaton Sucharow and other firms testified, although this position is not the same as a courtroom "local counsel," attorneys who are local to the client and work as co-counsel on litigation matters are common in connection with Plaintiffs' class action work on behalf of funds. Sometimes this type of local counsel is even required by the client. See, e.g., Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-18; Sucharow 2d Dep. 113:8-115:12; Lieff Dep. 80:21-81:12.[10]

On October 13, 2008, ARTRS's Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, emailed Belfi and advised that "ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system." LBS017456. She went on to say:

[9] As has become apparent in discovery, Firm attorneys sometimes used the phrase "local counsel" when referring to law firms in physical proximity to, and with some relationship with, a client. In such circumstances, the meaning differed from that of "local counsel" in litigation. In the latter instance, the phrase refers to locally admitted members of the Bar in the venue where litigation is pending.

[10] Given that representatives of multiple firms explained this local counsel role, it is of no moment that some witnesses who have different types of practices are not familiar with this type of arrangement. Cf. Sarko 2d Dep. 62:16-63:7.

> I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conductive to a joint proposal.

Id. As the email clearly indicates, the ARTRS system could not administratively accommodate a single panel monitoring member comprised of two unaffiliated firms seeking to act jointly. Id. Although ARTRS did not approve Chargois & Herron as panel counsel, it did inform Labaton Sucharow that the Firm had the authority and discretion to affiliate with Chargois & Herron in any case in which the Firm chose to do so, qualifying only that "[t]here would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case."[11] Id. (emphasis added); see also Belfi 2d Dep. 114:2-22, 117:20-118:10 (explaining that to the best of his recollection, Belfi had a follow-up conversation with Ms. Clark about the fact that Labaton Sucharow would be working with Chargois & Herron); Keller Dep. Day 1 49:10-22, 50:19-23; Keller Dep. Day 2 296:11-22.

During the same month that Labaton Sucharow was selected as additional monitoring counsel to ARTRS (October 2008), Paul Doane departed — unexpectedly at least from the Firm's perspective — as ARTRS's executive director. See Arkansas Times, "Doane to depart,"

[11] Given the nature of the relationship, discussed below, the payment to Chargois & Herron was never an "expense of a case." Keller Dep. Day 2 302:24-304:8. Except where they appeared as counsel in Court, Chargois & Herron only received a portion of Labaton Sucharow's attorneys' fees, which themselves were awarded on a percentage basis that were unrelated to "expenses."

Oct. 28, 2008.[12] The new Executive Director, George Hopkins, began in or about December 2008. Hopkins Dep. 10:17-21. Hopkins did not know Tim Herron or the Chargois & Herron firm. Hopkins 2d Dep. 21:5-10. Belfi and then-managing partner Lawrence Sucharow traveled to Little Rock, Arkansas, to meet with Hopkins, the new client representative, a few months after he began. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:18-21. Belfi and Hopkins related to each other quickly and well. Going forward, Belfi therefore handled the relationship personally, deducing (correctly) that this was Hopkins' preference. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:21-28:7, 56:22-57:10; Hopkins 2d Dep. 60:8-62:16.

Over time, the relationship between Belfi and Hopkins grew stronger, leaving no room for the "local counsel" role that had initially been anticipated for Chargois & Herron. Belfi 2d Dep. 57:5-19. Nevertheless, Chargois took the position that his firm was still owed 20% of recovered fees in cases brought on behalf of ARTRS. He pushed back hard in response to any suggestion that his "share" of the Firm's fees should be reduced or eliminated. LBS017594 (in which Chargois proclaims, among other things, that "[w]here Labaton is successful in getting appointed lead counsel and obtains a settlement or judgment award, we split Labaton's attorney fee award 80/20. Period."); LBS030876; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-15. Chargois claimed that the absence of a signed written agreement was immaterial, because the email and other correspondence constituted a binding contract under Texas law. Belfi 2d Dep. 58:10-59:12; Chargois Dep. 59:6-60:4; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:19-131:12. Although Chargois claimed to have no such recollection during his deposition, Belfi testified that Chargois effectively threatened to file suit in Texas state court in Galveston if Labaton Sucharow did not honor the agreement.

Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-59:22; see also Keller Dep. Day 1 130:22-131:132:3.[13] Labaton Sucharow was justifiably concerned that litigation over a fee dispute would be harmful to its reputation and to its relationship with ARTRS, and also concerned that, as Chargois threatened, a Texas state court would rule in Chargois & Herron's favor. See Belfi 2d Dep. 58:16-59:22; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:22-132:3; Keller Dep. Day 2 541:19-543:23 (describing Chargois' Sept. 2, 2016 email at LBS031137 as "push-back with a setup – with a potential contractual claim setup").

On September 24, 2010, before the SST Litigation was filed, Belfi sent Hopkins a draft retention letter for the matter, which contained the following:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

LBS019948-50. On February 8, 2011, Belfi sent a slightly revised, final retention letter to Hopkins with a modified first sentence to the quoted paragraph, allowing for allocation of "local or liaison" fees. LBS011061 (emphasis added). Hence, ARTRS was aware of the potential for a division of fees at the Firm's discretion for referral fees and local or liaison fees, among the several characterizations used for Chargois & Heron's allocation by the witnesses and in the documents in this case.

[13] Chargois' claim that he never made these statements is not credible. During his deposition, he repeatedly complained that Labaton Sucharow was attempting to pay him less than the 20% to which he apparently believes he is entitled. See, e.g., Chargois Dep. 66:4-67:7, 186:7-13, 226:20-24 . He also refused to say that he would abandon the agreement going forward if Labaton Sucharow refused to pay him a share of any future settlements. Id. at 323:4-324:1. Viewed in full context, Labaton Sucharow was more than reasonable in believing that Chargois was an actual litigation risk if the Firm attempted to walk away from the agreement.

Because ARTRS was the only named plaintiff in Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230 MLW, i.e., the action on behalf of the putative class of customers of State Street — as contrasted with the ERISA class plaintiffs in Civil Action Nos. 11-cv-12049 MLW and 12-cv-11698 MLW, which were consolidated with the customer action for pre-trial purpose — the three Customer Counsel agreed in 2013 that they would share in paying the allocation to Chargois & Herron from their own fee awards. LBS027776. Garrett Bradley of the Thornton firm handled the discussions with Lieff Cabraser and Chargois regarding this point. Id.; Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10. Bradley explained that he took on the role of negotiating with Chargois & Herron because he had a friendly relationship with Chargois, and he wanted to reach agreement out of concern that, because ARTRS was the only named (non-ERISA) plaintiff, Chargois could say his firm was entitled to 20% of the overall fee award, not just the portion that Labaton Sucharow received. Id.; see also Belfi 2d Dep. 94:5-23; Keller Dep. Day 1 122:6-124:19.

On April 24, 2013, Bradley sent a confirming email, copied to Chargois, that memorialized the agreement that the three firms would jointly pay the Chargois & Herron portion of any fee award. LBS027776. Bradley referred to Chargois & Herron in that confirmatory correspondence as "local counsel" or "the local." Id. This characterization did not raise any eyebrows at Labaton Sucharow, likely because (as explained above) that is how the relationship began; and, at that time Belfi (and perhaps Keller) were likely the only Labaton Sucharow attorneys who knew that Chargois & Herron was not performing any work in connection with ARTRS. See, e.g., Sucharow 2d Dep. 17:8-13; Zeiss 2d Dep. 49:23-51:5; Goldsmith 2d Dep. 108:20-109:6, 111:9-114:5; Keller Dep. Day 1 99:6-100:4.[14] [14] Lieff Cabraser and Thornton certainly were aware that Chargois & Herron was not local counsel in the courtroom use of that phrase, because at no time did Chargois & Herron enter an appearance in the litigation.

In June 2016, well after a settlement agreement-in-principle had been reached, Bradley reached out to Chargois for further discussions regarding the payment to Chargois & Herron. TLF-SST-060973. Bradley negotiated an agreement that Chargois & Herron would receive an amount equal to 5.5% of the total fee award (basically, a percentage calculated off the top that would be approximately equivalent to 20% of Labaton Sucharow's anticipated share of the total fee), which would be funded by the three Customer Counsel from their respective shares of the award. LBS040924; Bradley 2d Dep. 93:16-22. At various depositions, the Special Master or his counsel raised questions regarding the June 21, 2016 email to Chargois cited above, in which Bradley discussed ERISA counsel and what percentage will be allocated to them in the context of his dialogue with Chargois about what percentage would be paid to Chargois & Herron. TLF-SST-060973. No Labaton Sucharow lawyers were copied on this communication, and there is no evidence in the record suggesting that lawyers from Labaton Sucharow saw it before this investigation. Id. In any case, as Bradley explained, he was simply providing the context of the ERISA firms as background and as a negotiating point with Chargois. Bradley 2d Dep. 84:9-85:20; Keller Dep. Day 2 534:23-535:1 (observing that "Damon didn't exactly negotiate heavily and was probably thrilled to get what he was getting"). Bradley's reference in that 2016 conversation did nothing to change the agreement that the ERISA lawyers had struck with Customer Counsel more than two years earlier.

The fee sharing arrangement with Chargois did not impact the amount payable to the class, the overall amount of the fee award, or the amount of the fee owed and paid to ERISA counsel. Although the Chargois & Herron amount was computed as a percentage of the total fee award, the 5.5% of the total was merely a negotiated extrapolation of (approximately) 20% of Labaton's share of the total fee. Hence, the Chargois & Herron fee remained based only on the fee allocation to which Labaton Sucharow was entitled, and it was paid only by the three Customer Counsel from their allocations of the fee. See, e.g., Sucharow 2d Dep. 28:8-13; Zeiss 2d Dep. 51:10-22, 59:16-19; Goldsmith 2d Dep. 164:20-165:13; LBS041840. By the time Customer Counsel authorized these payments from their allocations to Chargois & Herron, ERISA counsel had long since agreed to their own allocation relative to the Customer Counsel. At the time that the ERISA cases were consolidated for pre-trial purposes with the ARTRS case, ERISA counsel negotiated with Customer Counsel and reached an agreement that ERISA counsel would receive 9% of the total fee award, should one be entered at the conclusion of the case, and Customer Counsel would receive 91%. TLF-SST-015649-54. The 9% was based upon the estimated amount of losses allegedly suffered by putative ERISA class members when compared to putative Customer Class members.[15] Sarko 2d Dep. 48:19-24; McTigue 2d Dep. 15:15-22. In the end, Customer Counsel voluntarily increased ERISA counsel's allocation to 10% and reduced their own to 90%. Sucharow 2d Dep. 29:2-6. The payment to Chargois & Herron did not impact this amount paid to ERISA counsel because it came exclusively from the amounts paid to Customer Counsel.

The Settlement Agreement provided that, "[u]nless otherwise ordered by the Court, and subject to the provisions of the Lead Counsel Escrow Account, Lead Counsel will in good faith promptly distribute any award of attorneys' fees and/or payment of Litigation Expenses among Plaintiffs' counsel." Settlement Agreement and Release (ECF No. 89) at ¶ 21. The Court entered its Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs ("Order Awarding Fees") (ECF No. 111) on November 2, 2016, the same day it entered judgment (ECF No. 110). Because no person filed a notice of appeal, on December 2, 2016 (30 days later), that order became final. See F.R.A.P. 4(a)(1). Accordingly, Labaton Sucharow was required to "promptly" distribute the attorneys' fees to the various firms, which at that point were held in the Lead Counsel Escrow Account.

[15] Despite what some suggested during depositions, ERISA class members did not suffer 20% of the total losses. Rather, the Department of Labor used its leverage to extract a premium, which is why $60 million out of the total $300 million settlement was allocated to ERISA class members. See infra at pp. 31-32.

In light of the double counting error, which had been disclosed to the Court several weeks earlier, the Firm wanted to be sure that all counsel receiving a portion of the fee award would refund their respective portion of the payment should the Court order a recalculation. Accordingly, the Firm circulated a "clawback letter" or "undertaking" which it requested that each firm or counsel sign. LBS017922. Bradley replied by email, which he sent only to several partners at Labaton Sucharow, saying "I think you should put Damon on this letter." LBS017920. Goldsmith responded that the Firm was planning to do a separate letter to Chargois, after which Sucharow gave more detail about the calculation and explained that the separate letter made sense because there was no reason for the ERISA counsel "to see Damon's split," given that they were paying no part of it.[16] Id.; see also Sucharow 2d Dep. 26:9-26:24 (discussing this exchange, and explaining that he "see[s] no rational explanation as to why [ERISA counsel] would need" information about the payment to Chargois & Herron).

Following execution of claw back letters, Labaton Sucharow distributed the attorneys' fees from the Lead Counsel Escrow Account as required. Zeiss 2d Dep. 124:16-126:2. From that account, fees and expenses were paid to Lieff and Thornton, as well as to Keller Rohrback, [16] Although Sarko requested that Labaton Sucharow "circulate the fee and expense breakdown" (LBS017934), Chargois' allocation was a fee split, not an "expense," and Sarko was clearly not looking for a fee breakdown among individual Customer Counsel (or to their referring counsel), because ERISA counsel provided no such breakdown to Customer Counsel or, indeed, even to each other. See Keller Rohrback L.L.P.'s Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 8; McTigue Law LLP's Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) McTigue Law, and Zuckerman Spaeder (collectively, the "Three Main ERISA Firms"). Zeiss 2d Dep. 125:16-21, 139:9-14; LBS041874-75. Fees and expenses payable to Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron, as well as service award payments (which Labaton Sucharow would send along to the respective named plaintiffs), were transmitted to Labaton Sucharow. Zeiss 2d Dep. 125:22-126:2.

Each of the Three Main ERISA Firms received 1/3 of the 10% of the attorneys' fee award that was allocated for ERISA counsel. Labaton Sucharow understands that those firms had fee-sharing obligations to other firms, some of which submitted affidavits in support of the fee petition, and at least one of which did not. Until they responded recently to interrogatories (which the Special Master served at Labaton Sucharow's request), none of the ERISA counsel ever shared with Labaton Sucharow or the Court the amount of the fee award the various firms were paid, much less the basis for the share they received, what facts they disclosed or discussed when they negotiated their fee sharing agreements with other ERISA counsel, or whether or how the work they did on the SST Litigation related to the amount they received. See McTigue Law LLP's Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories to McTigue Law at 5-6 (agreements "were not submitted to the Court" and "McTigue . . . did not disclose to Customer Counsel the division of fees among Henriquez Counsel"); Zuckerman Spaeder LLP's Answers to Special Master's Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 5 ("precise amounts were not disclosed"); Keller Rohrback L.L.P.'s Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 5-8 (amounts shared with Hutchings Barsamian not disclosed to the Court or Customer Counsel).

IV. RESPONSE TO ISSUES RAISED BY THE SPECIAL MASTER

Labaton Sucharow addresses below the main topics regarding the payment to Chargois & Herron that it understands are the focus of the Special Master's inquiry. Should the Special Master have follow-up questions regarding these or other points, the Firm requests that it be given the opportunity to respond and respectfully reserves its right to supplement this submission accordingly.

A. The Payment of a Portion of the Fee Award to Chargois & Herron was Permissible Under Controlling Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct.

Although ARTRS is an Arkansas entity, the ethical propriety of the payment to Chargois & Herron in connection with the SST Litigation is governed by the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct:[17]

> In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows: (1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a government tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise . . .

Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.5(b)(1); see also D. Mass Local Rule 83.6.1 (making the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct the governing rules in this Court); MBA Opinion No. 12-02 (2012) ("Massachusetts rules govern a fee contract entered into in another state relating to litigation in a Massachusetts court"); ABA Model Rule 8.5(b)(1). The Court's order appointing the Special Master also cited the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct as a governing source of authority. See March 8, 2017 Memorandum and Order (ECF No. 173) at 3.

The payment of a portion of Customer Counsel's share of the fee award to Chargois & Herron is governed by Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct 1.5. Subsection (e) of that rule states that the "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm" is permissible, provided client disclosure and consent requirements are met[18] and "the [17] The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct are contained within Supreme Judicial Court Rule 3.07. They are referred to and cited hereinafter as "Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct" or "Mass. R. Prof. C." See Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.0(r).

[18] The disclosure and consent requirements are discussed in Sections B and C, infra.

total fee is reasonable." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e). Labaton Sucharow respectfully suggests that the reasonableness of the total fee has already been determined, and that no reason exists to disturb that finding and ruling. See Order Awarding Fees (ECF No. 111) (finding the percentage-based award reasonable in light of "the factors considered within the First Circuit"); Memorandum in Support of Motion for Attorney Fees (ECF No. 103-1).[19] Indeed, virtually every witness who was asked that question has agreed. See, e.g., Kravitz 2d Dep. 118:9-119:12; Sarko Dep. 134:4-11; Cohn Dep. 18:20-19:1.

It is important to note — particularly in light of questions and statements of the Special Master or his counsel that seemed to suggest a contrary belief — that under the governing Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, Chargois & Herron was not required to work on the SST Litigation to receive a share of the fee award. Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e) "does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or require the lawyer to assume joint responsibility for the representation in order to be entitled to a share of the fee." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5, cmt. [7A]; see also Expert Declaration of Camille F. Sarrouf ¶¶ 19-20; Gilda M. Tuoni, Massachusetts Attorney Conduct Manual, at 2-61 (1992) ("the absence of such requirement effectively allows for 'referral' fees to be paid"). Massachusetts has a long history of allowing what some refer to as a "forwarding fee" or "origination fee." Sarrouf Decl. ¶¶ 20-21. Indeed, Massachusetts expressly chose not to adopt the requirements of proportionality or joint responsibility that exist in the [19] As Labaton Sucharow has explained, the unfortunate "double counting" issue did not impact this conclusion. The lodestar is used as a cross-check and is only implicated by one of the eight express findings the Court made in approving the award. Order Awarding Fees (ECF No. 111) at 4-5; see also Consolidated Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP, and Thornton Law Firm LLP to Special Master's July 5, 2017 Request for Supplemental Submission at 3.

ABA's Model Rule 1.5(e)[20] and the rules of some states. Id. ¶ 20. Massachusetts Disciplinary Rule ("DR") 2-107, the predecessor of the current Rule 1.5, also omitted these requirements. See MBA Opinion No. 76-3 (1976) ("When the Supreme Judicial Court, in its Rule 3:22, adopted the Canons generally, it omitted DR 2-107 (A)(2). Thus, in the common 'referral fee' situation, a referral need not measure the services or responsibility of the referring attorney.").[21]

Nor does it matter what term is used to describe the arrangement, e.g., referral fee, forwarding fee, origination fee, or as Mr. Chargois adamantly urged, "[j]ust an agreement" (Chargois Dep. 62:3-13).[22] Under the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, characterizations are irrelevant, as is the fact that the arrangement has applied to multiple litigation matters. Massachusetts Rule of Professional Responsibility 1.5(e) governs any "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm." Pursuant to that rule, a payment of a portion of Customer Counsel's fee award to Chargois &

[20] ABA Model Rule 1.5(e) provides that "[a] division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if: (1) the division is in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation; (2) the client agrees to the arrangement, including the share each lawyer will receive, and the agreement is confirmed in writing; and (3) the total fee is reasonable."

[21] In 1972, in rejecting the proportionality and joint responsibility requirements urged by the ABA Model Code Disciplinary Rule 2-107(A)(2), the Supreme Judicial Court concluded that these requirements "would interfere with the established custom of dividing fees with forwarding counsel." James Bolan et al., Ethical Lawyering in Massachusetts § 5.5.2 (4th ed. 2014); see also Harold Brown, ABA Code of Professional Responsibility, 17 Ann. Surv. Mass. L. 730, 738 (1969-1970) (describing the proportionality and joint responsibility requirements proposed by the ABA as "a radical departure from widespread custom of long duration"). Then again in 1988, "much debate arose" with respect to the proportionality and joint representation requirements of ABA Model Rule 1.5(e). Gilda M. Tuoni, Massachusetts Attorney Conduct Manual, at 2-61 n.218 (1992). Given the long history of referral fees in Massachusetts, the Supreme Judicial Court rejected those additional requirements. See In The Matter of Adoption of Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Petition of the Boston Bar Association, S-4357 (1988).

[22] Labaton Sucharow suggests that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from Chargois' position is that he wishes both to avoid sanctions under the ethical rules of his own jurisdiction (Texas) which — unlike Massachusetts — requires referral fees to be "in proportion to the professional services performed by each lawyer" or "made between lawyers who assume joint responsibility for the representation" (Texas Disciplinary Rule of Professional Conduct 1.04(f)(1)), and to preserve the purported breach of contract claim with which he previously threatened Labaton Sucharow if the Firm did not pay pursuant to the controversial email agreement.

Herron was permissible, even though that firm did not work on the SST Litigation.

B. Customer Counsel Had No Obligation to Disclose the Chargois & Herron Payment to the Court.

1. There was no provision of law, court rule, or order that required Customer Counsel to disclose a fee-sharing agreement to the Court.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(B) provides that, unless a statute or court order provides otherwise, a motion for attorney's fees must: (i) be filed within 14 days after judgment enters, (ii) specify the judgment and the statute, rule, or other grounds entitling the movant to the award, (iii) state the amount of attorney's fees the movant seeks, and (iv) "disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made" (emphasis added).[23] Thus, the rule is not merely silent as to whether fee arrangements must be disclosed to the court; it specifically calls them out as something that must be disclosed only if specifically ordered. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(iv); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 54, 1993 Notes of Advisory Committee, ¶ 8 (reinforcing that the obligation "to disclose any fee agreement, including those between . . . attorneys sharing a fee to be awarded . . . " only exists "[i]f directed by the Court" to do so). The leading class action treatise, Newberg on Class Actions ("Newberg"), similarly notes in the specific context of class actions that Rule 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) "makes disclosure of such agreements dependent on a judicial order." William B. Rubenstein, Newberg on Class Actions § 15:12 at 33-36 (5th ed. 2016). Although Newberg goes on to recommend that courts order disclosure of private fee agreements, that recommendation is premised upon the fact that absent such an order, disclosure is not required under the rule. Id.

No local rule exists in this jurisdiction that obligated Customer Counsel to disclose a fee-sharing arrangement with Damon Chargois to the Court. Nor did Judge Wolf have in place a standing order, case management order, or any other order that imposed such an obligation. This is not surprising given that, as witnesses who practice regularly in this area testified, most judges do not become involved in the allocation of a fee award among counsel. See, e.g., Zeiss 2d Dep. 62:19-63:12; Keller Dep. Day 2 501:7-22. Given that the Court never ordered or even requested that fee agreements or the allocation among counsel be disclosed, and absent an applicable rule or standing order requiring such disclosure, there is no basis to say that Labaton Sucharow specifically or Customer Counsel generally were required to disclose details regarding the Chargois & Herron payment.[24] See Sarrouf Decl. ¶¶ 29-31.

The lack of inquiry by the Court into the fee allocation among lawyers is not surprising given the role of the Court in fee award proceedings in class actions. The question before the Court in this context was whether the total fees sought were reasonable. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h); see Bezdek v. Vibram USA Inc., 79 F. Supp. 3d 324, 350 (D. Mass. 2015), aff'd, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 22925 (1st Cir. Dec. 31, 2015). "'[I]n a common fund case the district court, in the exercise of its informed discretion, may calculate counsel fees either on a percentage of the fund basis or by fashioning a lodestar.'" Medoff v. CVS Caremark Corp., No. 09-cv-554-JNL, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19135, at *25 (D.R.I. Feb. 17, 2016) (quoting In re Thirteen Appeals Arising Out of San Juan Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 56 F.3d 295, 307 (1st Cir. 1995)). "A [24] Despite what certain witnesses now say, ERISA counsel clearly reached a similar conclusion because none of the ERISA firms disclosed to the Court the details of their fee-sharing arrangements with other ERISA firms. See Keller Rohrback L.L.P.'s Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 5-6 and 8 (explaining that allocations were not disclosed to the Court); McTigue Law LLP's Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories to McTigue Law at 5-6 (agreements with other ERISA counsel not disclosed to the Court); Zuckerman Spaeder LLP's Answers to Special Master's Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 5 (amounts paid to other firms were not disclosed). The opinions they advance now, without authority, are beside the point. See, e.g., Kravitz 2d Dep. 105:9-14 ("And so my sort of gut reaction, without being able to cite you anything technical, is that Judge Wolf should have had that information. But, as I said, that is my personal view of this. I cannot cite you a technical rule. I can't cite you a case. I can only tell you what I think.").

percentage of the fund is precisely that: under that method, counsel receive a percentage of the recovered funds. Employing the lodestar method, on the other hand, requires the court to 'determin[e] the number of hours productively spent on the litigation and multiply[] those hours by reasonable hourly rates.'" Medoff, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19135, at *25-26 (quoting In re Thirteen Appeals, 56 F.3d at 305). In the First Circuit, courts normally employ the percentage of the fund method and then use the lodestar method only as a cross-check on the reasonableness of the fee request. Id. at *26. When using the percentage of the fund method, courts within the circuit "generally award fees in the range of 20-30%, with 25% as the benchmark." Bezdek, 79 F. Supp. 3d at 349 (quoting Latorraca v. Centennial Techs., Inc., 834 F. Supp. 2d 25, 27-28 (D. Mass. 2011)) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also In re Lupron Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., No. 01-CV-10861-RGS, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17456, at *18 (D. Mass. Aug. 17, 2005) ("Courts in the First Circuit have recognized that fee awards in common fund cases typically range from 20 to 30 percent.").[25]

In assessing the reasonableness of a requested fee award, courts in the First Circuit consider a set of factors:

> (1) the size of the fund and the number of persons benefitted; (2) the skill, experience, and efficiency of the attorneys involved; (3) the complexity and duration of the litigation; (4) the risks of the litigation; (5) the amount of time devoted to the case by counsel; (6) awards in similar cases; and (7) public policy considerations, if any.

Id. at *12. Among these factors, "the most critical factor is the degree of success obtained." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 436 (1983). It is undisputed here that the $300 million settlement achieved in this case was an enormously favorable outcome for the class and represented a tremendous amount of effort by Plaintiffs' counsel. See, e.g., Order Awarding Fees (ECF No. 111) at 4; Sarko 2d Dep. 44:16-17 ("It was a fabulous settlement. There was a fabulous recovery."). Neither that factor nor any others require the Court to investigate the fee allocation among counsel. Although one factor, the amount of time devoted to the case by counsel, asks how much time or work counsel performed during the case, even that inquiry does not ask what percentage each attorney will receive, whether the money paid to one attorney will then be shared with another, or whether the amount allocated to a lawyer is based upon that lawyer's specific work on the case or other factors. See id. Thus, the issue of fee allocation was simply not germane to the Court's analysis.

[25] Here, the requested fees represented 24.85% of the settlement fund and a 2.0 multiple of the lodestar, a modest multiplier compared to cases of similar size in the First Circuit. The original calculation of the lodestar multiplier submitted to the Court was 1.8; the 2.0 reflects the multiplier after the double-counting error was removed from the lodestar submissions. See Letter from D. Goldsmith to the Court, November 10, 2016 (ECF No. 116).

Based on questions and statements of the Special Master or his counsel, the Special Master appears reluctant to accept the absence of a disclosure requirement. See, e.g., Hopkins 2d Dep. 66:11-21; Sucharow 2d Dep. 31:1-4; Zeiss 2d Dep. 53:8-54:20. The skepticism appears to suggest that FRCP 54(d)(2)(B) is overridden by the general rubric concerning candor to the tribunal, or because a party should err on the side of more disclosure and "transparency." See, e.g., Sucharow 2d Dep. 54:6-12 ("In such a non-adversary process, does class counsel not have a heightened obligation of transparency and disclosure . . . ? Does the Court not have an obligation there to know everything?"). Labaton Sucharow respectfully suggests that the express language of FRCP 54(d)(2)(B)(iv), a rule specifically addressing whether a motion for attorney's fees must disclose "the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made" and concluding that it need not unless "the court so orders," cannot be reconciled with such an interpretation of general principles of candor and transparency. While such principles are generally admirable, they do not permit for sufficiently specific application in this circumstance to provide attorneys with meaningful guidance. See Sarrouf Decl. ¶ 30. At the very least, it would be improper to retroactively penalize Customer Counsel, or Labaton Sucharow, for a gloss on Rule 54 that, to the best of Labaton Sucharow's knowledge, has not been enunciated previously. Indeed, if the principle that full disclosure of fee allocations to the Court is required, that principle would necessarily be applicable across the board, to ERISA counsel as well as Customer Counsel. Labaton Sucharow does not advocate such a position, because it flies in the face of FRCP 54(d)(2)(B). The Firm simply notes that one party or group of parties cannot fairly be sanctioned or criticized for conduct in which another party or group has engaged without repercussions.

Moreover, if the controlling theory is that candor and transparency require disclosure of all information whether or not required under the applicable rules, e.g., hourly time entry backup, expense backup, and other related items that would fill multiple bankers' boxes for most petitions, the fee petition process would become unworkably slow and burdensome, making it far more difficult for the Court to sort through and find the key information needed to decide the actual question before it — whether the percentage of the total fund is reasonable. See Bezdek, 79 F. Supp. 3d at 350 ("Regardless of the calculation method employed, the touchstone of the inquiry is reasonableness."). Thus the rule identifies certain information that must be provided, and then broadly permits the Court to require more by order in a specific case, or more generally by standing order or by local rule. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B) and (D) (allowing "special procedures to resolve fee-related issues" and simplifying the process of referral of fee petitions to a special master or magistrate judge). Customer Counsel should not be criticized or penalized for disclosing exactly what the drafters of the rule chose to require.

2. The Imperfect Disclosure to George Hopkins did not create an obligation to disclose the Chargois & Herron payment to the Court where no obligation otherwise existed.

Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that George Hopkins should have been given more complete information about the Chargois & Herron payment, and that Belfi, who was in charge of the relationship, should have obtained explicit consent in writing to the division of fees. Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e); see Section C, infra (discussing a number of mitigating factors present here). Research has identified no authority, however, suggesting that the remedy, or penalty, for an imperfect or inadequate disclosure to a client of a fee sharing agreement is that the lawyer must disclose the agreement to the Court. Such a requirement would put the Court in the inappropriate position of having to assess whether a partial, or even total, ethical lapse in dealing with a client modifies the Court's responsibility under the particular circumstances (here, the determination of what constitutes a reasonable attorneys' fee on a percentage of the fund basis).

It is well established in Massachusetts that an ethical violation does not give rise to independent cause of action. See Fishman v. Brooks, 396 Mass. 643, 649 (1986) (noting that a violation of a disciplinary rule does not itself constitute "an actionable breach of a duty to a client"); Mass. R. Prof. C. Scope, Cmt. [6] (same). Following the same rationale, the Special Master should not, in essence, create a new rule saying that a possible ethical violation regarding client disclosure gives rise to an independent duty to disclose to the Court. Such a rule would, in effect, turn one violation into two,[26] while undermining the processes designed to investigate and adjudicate such potential violations. See Section C, infra. Because there is no authority supporting the existence of this type of derivative disclosure obligation, there is no basis to find that imperfect disclosure to Hopkins rendered Labaton Sucharow's disclosure to the Court inadequate.

[26] Similar attempts to turn one violation into two, based on failure to disclose the first, have been rejected in other contexts. See, e.g., Werner v. Werner, 267 F.3d 288, 299 (3d Cir. 2001) ("a plaintiff may not 'bootstrap' a claim of breach of fiduciary duty into a federal securities law by alleging that directors failed to disclose the breach of fiduciary duty") (quoting Kas v. Financial General Bankshares, Inc., 796 F.2d 508, 516 (D.C. Cir. 1986)).

C. The Firm's Incomplete Disclosure of the Chargois & Herron Agreement to ARTRS Does Not Justify Imposition of a Sanction.

The Special Master should not recommend a sanction based on the imperfect disclosure to ARTRS. Respectfully, it is not the role of a court overseeing litigation (or by extension, a special master appointed by the court) to impose a sanction for inadequate or imperfect disclosure of a fee agreement to a party. Although a court may sanction ethical violations that are, in effect, a wrong committed upon the court, a court should not investigate every possible failure to comply with a Rule of Professional Conduct. When an alleged failure does not directly impact the proceedings, there are processes in place that are designed to investigate and resolve the issue:

- Massachusetts law places the inquiry within the jurisdiction of the Board of Bar Overseers. See Mass. S.J.C. Rule 4:01(1) ("[a]ny lawyer or foreign legal consultant admitted to, or engaging in, the practice of law in this commonwealth shall be subject to this court's exclusive disciplinary jurisdiction and the provisions of this rule as amended from time to time"); Wong v. Luu, 472 Mass. 208, 219 (2015) (finding that a judge's inherent power to enter a sanction for violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct is limited to instances where such action "is necessary to punish, deter, or remedy misconduct that threatens a judge's ability to ensure the fair administration of justice" and that in other instances, the proper procedure is a referral to the Board of Bar Overseers) (internal citations omitted).
- For attorneys practicing in this federal district, there is a relatively new and complicated procedure that allows "Disciplinary Proceedings" based on alleged violations of the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Responsibility that come to the attention of the presiding judge. See Local Rule 83.6.5.[27] The presiding judge conducts the initial investigation and has a variety of referral options, including to the appropriate state authorities.

Here, although the disclosure to Hopkins was imperfect, in no way did it constitute litigation misconduct or an issue that was directed toward the Court or an issue that impacted the litigation. For example, there is no evidence to suggest that the disclosure to Hopkins impacted the question before the Court, i.e., whether the amount of the fees requested was reasonable. Accordingly, this is a matter that properly rests in the hands of the client, and/or appropriate disciplinary authority.

Even if this were the appropriate forum in which to investigate the disclosure to Hopkins, mitigating factors militate against the imposition of sanctions. This is not a situation where either the existence of Chargois & Herron or the possible payment of referral or liaison fees was hidden from ARTRS. To the contrary, ARTRS knew of the relationship between Chargois & Herron, stated that Labaton Sucharow was free to associate with Chargois & Herron if the firm wished to do so (LBS017456), and agreed through its engagement letter that Labaton was free to pay referral fees to others from the Firm's own fees (LBS019948-50; LBS011061). Although the disclosure did not include the specific percentage or amount of the sharing arrangement, such disclosure is not required in Massachusetts. See Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), cmt. [7A] ("The [27] The new rules, adopted in 2015, appear to contemplate a division similar to the one that exists in Massachusetts state court: the court handling a litigation matter remains authorized to impose a sanction "for contempt of court or for litigation misconduct" (Local Rule 83.6.4(b)), but for other possible violations of the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, the court would invoke the process that puts the matter in a separate proceeding before the presiding judge.

Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer."). Nonetheless, the disclosure was imperfect: It did not specifically disclose the nature of the arrangement, which evolved with the change of Executive Directors, nor was the client's written assent obtained.[28]

Second, both Hopkins and Belfi testified that, when asked, Hopkins told Belfi that he wanted to deal with Labaton Sucharow and would leave it to the Firm to decide with which other lawyers it would affiliate. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:21-28:7, 56:22-57:10; Hopkins Dep. 60:8-62:16 . Relatedly, Hopkins (and thus ARTRS) have now effectively ratified the fee sharing relationship. See Hopkins 2d Dep. 73:1-75:10; Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699, 705 (Mass. 2005) (declining to sanction attorney under precursor to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) for failure to disclose fee sharing arrangement, finding, among other things, that the client's actions constituted adequate ratification of fee-sharing agreement). The fact that the Executive Director of the client that was "wronged" (to the extent anyone was wronged), did not want more information at the time, and does not feel misled, is a significant mitigating factor.

Third, any question about whether a sanction would be appropriate requires consideration of the reason behind and objectives of the disclosure rules. The applicable disclosure rules in [28] Although Belfi did "blind courtesy copy" or forward ARTRS information to Chargois & Herron separately from his communication with Hopkins, this was after the firms made their joint submission. As Belfi explained, this practice began when Hopkins had very recently come on as Executive Director: "It was a brand new person. I did not want to bring another person in that wasn't from our firm at this point. So I thought it was best to just keep him apprised but not put him on the correspondence." Belfi 2d Dep. 110:12-18; see also id. at 111:9-22 ("I didn't know if Tim knew who George was or if George knew who Tim was . . . I really just wanted to keep it very uncomplicated"). (As explained, infra, Hopkins subsequently told Belfi that he did not want to know specific information about other attorneys with which the Firm was affiliating.) Belfi was not improperly revealing privileged information in these communications, because he "believe[d] them to be co-counsel with us" and indeed, for a period of time, Chargois & Herron was counsel to ARTRS in litigation involving HCC Insurance Holdings. See, e.g., Zeiss 2d Dep. 16:18-17:1.

Massachusetts do not prohibit fee sharing. Rather, recognizing that referral fees and other fee sharing relationships can be good for the client because they encourage cases to be handled by the best lawyers for that case, the rules merely seek to impose controls. See, e.g., Leo Boyle, The Referral Fee Rule: If It's Not Broken, Don't Fix It, 34 Boston Bar Journal 26, 26 (May/June 1990) (citing a 1987 FTC comment that "forcefully stated to the S.J.C. that changing the rule would be a detriment to consumers, reducing consumer access to highly competent and specialized legal counsel."); Geoffrey C. Hazard et al., The Law of Lawyering § 9.20, at 73-74 (4th ed. 2017) (noting that the practice of fee splitting "can also serve both the public interest and the interests of clients in many situations."). Here, the record confirms time and again that the SST Litigation was litigated zealously and vigorously, and that the result was good for the client and for the class. See, e.g., Sarko 2d Dep. 44:16-17; McTigue 2d Dep. 42:25-43:25; Kravitz 2d. Dep. 118:14-21. Even if a technical violation of the disclosure requirement occurred, this is not an appropriate case to take the extreme step of imposing a sanction.

Finally, it is important to note that the failure to obtain more fulsome consent was a technical lapse by a single person at the Firm. There is no evidence to suggest that anyone at Labaton Sucharow, apart from Eric Belfi, was aware that Hopkins had not been fully advised of the relationship and provided consent. See, e.g., Zeiss 2d Dep. 74:15-18; Goldsmith 2d Dep. 162:9-15; Sucharow 2d Dep. 51:14-21; Keller Dep. Day 1 94:23-95:10. Such an omission by one partner should not be the basis for imposition of a sanction. Indeed, it is noteworthy in this regard that, although the controlling Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct create obligations with respect to attorneys, they do not impose obligations upon law firms, as entities. To the contrary, in 2015 the Supreme Judicial Court declined to adopt a provision recommended by the Rules Advisory Committee that would have imposed responsibility on law firms. See Rules Advisory Committee Proposed Revisions to Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct Rules 1.0-6.2, 7.1-7.5, 8.1-8.4, as revised as of May 14, 2014, at proposed Rule 5.1(d); March 2015 Supreme Judicial Court Order adopting changes to the Rules of the Supreme Judicial Court (adopting rule without proposed Rule 5.1(d)).

In light of the partial disclosure to ARTRS that occurred and in consideration of the foregoing mitigating factors, the Special Master should not recommend a sanction based on the incomplete disclosure to ARTRS regarding the payment to Chargois & Herron in this matter.

D. Customer Counsel Had No Obligation to Disclose the Chargois & Herron Payment to ERISA Counsel.

As explained above, no information was improperly withheld from ERISA counsel.[29] To the contrary, Labaton Sucharow genuinely believed and continues to believe that ERISA counsel had no reason to know what Customer Counsel planned to do with their portion of the fee award, because it did not impact what ERISA counsel received or what they were entitled to receive. See Sucharow 2d Dep. 26:9-24; see also id. at 23:8-15; Goldsmith 2d Dep. 167:12-168:21; Zeiss 2d Dep. 80:22-81:5. ERISA counsel struck their agreement to receive 9% of the fee early in the litigation, based on estimates of losses, and they received that to which they had agreed, with a sweetener to 10% at the end. Sucharow 2d Dep. 29:2-6; 48:19-24; Sarko 2d Dep. 48:19-24; McTigue 2d Dep. 15:15-22. The payment to Chargois & Herron came from the Customer Counsel's share of the award and, thus, did not impact ERISA counsel's share.

There is no law, rule or regulation that required Customer Counsel to disclose this obligation to ERISA counsel. See Sarrouf Decl. ¶¶ 23-25. To the contrary, referral fees or other fee-sharing arrangements are common and they are not generally disclosed among Plaintiffs'

[29] Indeed, Mr. Lieff testified that he may have informed Mr. Sarko of the existence of the fee-sharing arrangement, although he acknowledged that Mr. Sarko's present recollection is that he did not. Lieff Dep. 90:5-18, 104:1-11.

counsel. See Keller Dep. Day 1 117:8-14 (explaining that referring relationships are confidential and can be sensitive because, if known, a competitor "would be calling them up and taking them out to lunch next week"); Sarrouf Decl. ¶ 24; Zeiss 2d Dep. 76:12-14; Sucharow 2d Dep. 59:13-22; Goldsmith Dep. 19-23, 130:3-8. Indeed, ERISA counsel never shared the details of their own fee splitting arrangements with Customer Counsel. See Keller Rohrback L.L.P.'s Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 7-8; McTigue Law LLP's Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories to McTigue Law at 5-6; Zuckerman Spaeder LLP's Answers to Special Master's Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 5.[30]

Any claim now by ERISA counsel that, had they known that Customer Counsel were paying a portion of the fee to Chargois & Herron they would not have agreed to the deal they struck (see, e.g., Sarko 2d Dep. 75:2-7.), rings hollow. They urge, with the benefit of hindsight and their unique position in this investigation, that they would have used this fee-sharing obligation as a negotiating tactic to extract more than that to which they had agreed. Such a purely strategic consideration does not create a legal obligation on Customer Counsel's part to disclose. To the contrary, ERISA counsel's self-serving testimony appears to be little more than an attempt to use these proceedings to increase their fee award after-the-fact. See, e.g., Kravitz 2d Dep. 115:13-116:4; McTigue 2d Dep. 24:11-25:2.

As part of an apparent attempt to suggest that the deal they struck was unfair, certain ERISA counsel have suggested that, because $60 million of the $300 million settlement was earmarked for ERISA claims, the actual amount of losses suffered by ERISA claimants was 20% of the total. See, e.g., Sarko Dep. 48:19-11. That suggestion is belied by the facts for at least two distinct reasons. First, the 91%-9% split was negotiated; the parties knew at the time that it was not an exact split. Indeed, there could never be an exact split, because a number of class members — referred to in the Settlement Agreement as "Group Trusts" (ECF No. 89 at 11) — are custodial clients of State Street that have some ERISA-governed assets and some that are not. Second, under any calculation, it is clear that the losses of ERISA class members were well below 20% when compared to losses suffered by others in the settlement class. Zeiss 2d Dep. 163:16-164:2. The Department of Labor used its leverage — and the implicit ability to hold up the settlement — to extract a premium for the ERISA class members. See, e.g., McTigue 2d Dep. 38:12-20 ("I know we got a premium"); Lieff Dep. 47:23-48:18 (discussing TLF-SST-051653).

[30] Similarly, Labaton Sucharow learned only in the context of this investigation that Lieff and Thornton negotiated regarding their portion of the fee award in this case at least in part by discussing fees in a different lawsuit involving BNY Mellon. See, e.g., TLF-SST-040617-18; TLF-SST-038574-79. Lieff and Thornton had these discussions while they were strategizing how they would jointly negotiate with Labaton Sucharow regarding the fee allocation in this case. Id. Those firms never revealed any of the details of these negotiations to Labaton Sucharow, nor would the Firm expect that they would.

Finally, the $10.9 million cap on fees that was demanded by the Department of Labor and is referenced in the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement (ECF No. 089) does not impact this analysis. A "cap" sets a ceiling, not a floor. Here, it meant that no more than $10.9 million could be taken from the $60 million of the settlement that was earmarked for ERISA claims. The provision does not say, and there is no evidence to suggest, that the full amount of that "cap" was required to be paid to ERISA counsel. Goldsmith 2d Dep. 254:13-255:2. Such a contention would be directly contrary to the agreement that counsel reached years earlier. See TLF-SST-015649-54 at ¶2 (providing that the 9%-91% division of fees between ERISA and Customer Counsel "shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise"). Relatedly, any suggestion that the Chargois & Herron payment needed to be disclosed to the DOL is mistaken. The only information in the record regarding the DOL and fee allocation is that the DOL asked Sarko what the breakdown was, and he chose not to give them that information, apparently believing it to be something they are not entitled to know. TLF-SST-052975-80. Certainly Customer Counsel cannot be faulted for not providing a further breakdown that would show the downstream payment to Chargois & Herron (which payment did not impact the ERISA class), when Mr. Sarko chose not to disclose the higher-level allocation among the attorneys actively handling the litigation.

What Customer Counsel chose to do with their portion of the fee award simply did not impact ERISA counsel or the amount of the fee award that ERISA counsel received. They had no reason to know that a portion would be paid to Chargois & Herron, and the failure to make such disclosure is not a basis for the ERISA counsel to complain, much less a reason to impose a sanction or order disgorgement of any portion of the fee.

E. Customer Counsel Had No Obligation to Disclose the Chargois & Herron Payment to the ERISA Plaintiffs.

During depositions, certain of the ERISA counsel introduced the idea that perhaps there was an obligation to disclose the Chargois & Herron relationship to the ERISA plaintiffs. See, e.g., Sarko Dep. 91:4-12. Any such claim by ERISA counsel also rings hollow. Not one of the Three Main ERISA Firms who received a distribution of fees from the Lead Counsel Escrow Fund disclosed complete information to the ERISA plaintiffs regarding their own fee sharing arrangements. See Keller Rohrback L.L.P.'s Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 7 (explaining that the named plaintiffs approved ERISA counsel receiving 9% of the aggregate award and approved the 25% award being sought, but that "[t]he specific dollar allocations of fees to individual class law firms from the gross fee award was not detailed in any written disclosure to the ERISA named plaintiffs, other ERISA class member, or the ERISA counsel"); McTigue Law LLP's Responses to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Second Supplemental Interrogatories to McTigue Law at 4-5 (contending that the filing and posting of lodestars operated as disclosure to the ERISA class, but conceding that neither the agreements with Customer Counsel nor agreements among ERISA attorneys about the sharing of fees were disclosed to ERISA class members); Zuckerman Spaeder LLP's Answers to Special Master's Second Supplemental Interrogatories at 4 (claiming that ERISA class members had "constructive notice" that other firms might receive some amount of the fees, but conceding that actual payments by Zuckerman Spaeder to three different law firms were never disclosed to the ERISA class). Given the varying, incomplete disclosure the ERISA counsel made regarding their own fee-sharing arrangements, they should not be heard to claim, without authority, that Customer Counsel had an obligation to disclose the payment to Chargois & Herron.

Moreover, there is a reason that fee sharing arrangements are required to be disclosed to a client, typically in the engagement letter at the commencement of litigation: It is to allow the client to choose other counsel if the client does not like the idea of its retained lawyers sharing fees with others, a practice that (as explained above) is perfectly permissible in Massachusetts. See ABA/BNA Lawyers' Manual on Professional Conduct, at 41:709 (2014) (explaining that the policy behind the client consent prong of Model rule 1.5(e)(2) "is that clients should be able to choose which attorney finally represents them and the type of legal fees to be charged.") (quoting Norton Frickey, P.C. v. James B. Turner, P.C., 94 P.3d 1266, 1268 (Colo. App. 2004)). Labaton Sucharow had no engagement letter with the ERISA plaintiffs, who were represented by their own counsel throughout the litigation. See, e.g., McTigue Dep. 42:20-24. Indeed, in the circumstances of this case, Labaton Sucharow, as lead counsel, was one large step removed from the typical pre-certification situation because the ERISA plaintiffs were in a separate lawsuit from the customer plaintiffs, with the lawsuits consolidated for expediency during the pre-trial process. ECF No. 63. There was no attorney-client relationship between Labaton Sucharow and the ERISA plaintiffs, except arguably by operation of law when the class was certified at the conclusion of the settlement process. Goldsmith 2d Dep. 65:4-66:5. "While lead counsel owes a generalized duty to unnamed class members [prior to certification], the existence of such a fiduciary duty does not create an inviolate attorney-client relationship with each and every member of the putative class." In re McKesson HBOC, Inc. Securities Litigation, 126 F. Supp. 2d 1239, 1245 (N.D. Cal. 2000). See Fulco v. Cont'l Cablevision, Inc., 789 F. Supp. 45, 47 (D. Mass. 1992) ("[O]nce the court enters an order certifying a class, an attorney-client relationship arises between all members of the class and class counsel.") (quoting Bower v. Bunker Hill Company, 689 F. Supp. 1032, 1033 (E.D. Wash. 1985)); Joseph M. McLaughlin, 2 McLaughlin on Class Actions §1:11 (13th ed. 2016) ("The majority rule is that . . . absent class members are not represented parties prior to class certification and the expiration of any opt-out period."). Labaton Sucharow has identified no authority suggesting that where, as here, a class is certified for settlement purposes, a law firm like Labaton Suchrow suddenly becomes obligated to disclose a fee sharing arrangement pursuant to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e).[31] See Sarrouf Decl. ¶¶ 26-28.

Nor is there some inherent reason that this particular payment needed to be disclosed to [31] It would be virtually impossible to comply with such a requirement. In this case, certification and conclusion of the opt-out period occurred when the case was essentially over. It would be illogical to force a firm like Labaton Sucharow at that point in time to disclose a fee agreement (as well as, presumably, conflicts that the client may have waived, or the host of other items required to be disclosed to a client), much less obtain written consent from each class member. Research has identified no authority suggesting that these kinds of disclosure obligations arise in connection with this type of settlement class certification.

ERISA class members. The payment to Chargois & Herron did not come from the $225 million of the settlement funds set aside to pay class members, or the $60 million earmarked for ERISA claims. Likewise, the amount paid to Chargois & Herron did not come from ERISA counsel's agreed-upon 9% share of the fees. It was a payment made by the three Customer Counsel firms from their shares of the fee award. The payment did not impact the ERISA class or ERISA counsel in any way. Therefore, no disclosure was required.

F. Labaton Sucharow Had No Obligation to Disclose Further Details Regarding Chargois & Herron To Customer Counsel.

Thornton and Lieff already possessed information as to all relevant points other than Labaton's imperfect disclosure of terms to ARTRS. More specifically, Lieff and Thornton knew about the relationship, knew the terms of the payment that was required under the agreement, and knew that it was on-going (i.e., not limited to the SST Litigation). Indeed, it was Garrett Bradley of Thornton who negotiated the application of the on-going fee sharing agreement to this case. Nonetheless, Labaton Sucharow recognizes with the benefit of hindsight that it would have been prudent for the Firm to share the information known by Belfi (although not others) concerning the imperfect disclosure to ARTRS as well as information regarding Chargois' actual role in the SST litigation, and the lack of written consent from ARTRS, with Thornton and Lieff because those firms were sharing the payment burden.

Representatives from the other firms have testified that they did not know that Chargois & Herron was performing no services on the SST Litigation — although they certainly knew that firm had not filed an appearance in the litigation and did not appear on any lodestar report. But, as explained above, the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct did not require Chargois & Herron to perform services in order to share in the fees. Otherwise stated, fees such as referral and forwarding fees are perfectly permissible in Massachusetts.

Lieff and Thornton apparently did not know that the disclosure to ARTRS lacked precise details of the respective roles and payment amount, as well as the consent of George Hopkins, which placed the members of those two firms in the same boat as the members of Labaton Sucharow, other than Eric Belfi. The lack of fulsome disclosure and of written consent constituted violations, even if inadvertent, of a Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct. But, as discussed above, that violation is visited upon the individual attorney, not any of the three law firms. Hence, no sanction or disgorgement can be imposed upon any of the firms for Belfi's mistake; and Lieff and Thornton, like Labaton Sucharow, should therefore suffer no consequences.

G. There Was Nothing Improper About Paying Chargois & Herron from Labaton Sucharow's IOLA Account.

Finally, during depositions there were a number of questions asked about why the payment to Chargois & Herron was transmitted from Labaton Sucharow's Interest on Lawyer Account ("IOLA"), the New York version of what Massachusetts calls an Interest on Lawyers' Trust Account ("IOLTA"). The relevant New York authority provides the following:

- A lawyer "in possession of any funds or other property belonging to another person . . . must not . . . commingle such funds or property with his or her own." N. Y. R. Prof. C. 1.15(a).
- However, "[f]unds belonging in part to a client or third person and in part currently or potentially to the lawyer or law firm shall be kept in such special account or accounts, but the portion belonging to the lawyer or law firm may be withdrawn when due unless the right of the lawyer or law firm to receive it is disputed by the client or third person, in which event the disputed portion shall not be withdrawn until the dispute is finally resolved." Id., part (b).

- When third-party funds received by an attorney, "in the judgment of the attorney, are too small in amount or are reasonably expected to be held for too short a time to generate sufficient interest income to justify the expense of administering a segregated account for the benefit of the client or beneficial owner," such funds "shall be deposited in an IOLA account." N. Y. Judiciary Law §§ 497 (2) and (4)(a).

Here, consistent with these requirements, Labaton Sucharow arranged for one lump-sum transfer from the attorneys' fee escrow account to its IOLA that included (1) the portion of the fee award payable to Labaton Sucharow; (2) the portion of the fee award payable to Labaton Sucharow, Lieff Cabraser and Thornton that was going to be transmitted to Chargois & Herron; and (3) the service awards that belonged to named plaintiffs. Zeiss 2d Dep. 137:13-138:8; id. at 140:21-141:5; LBS041839-43; LBS041970-71. Thereafter, from its IOLA account, the Firm sent out the service awards, the Chargois & Herron payment, and transferred the portion of the fee award that the Firm would retain to a different Firm account. Zeiss 2d Dep. 137:13-138:8. Structuring the transfers in this manner was compliant with the applicable provisions of New York law cited above.

V. BEST PRACTICES

Labaton Sucharow previously identified a number of recommended "best practices" aimed at preventing errors like those that prompted the referral to the Special Master. See Consolidated Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP, and Thornton Law Firm LLP to Special Master's July 5, 2017 Request for Supplemental Submission at 20-24. The Special Master has now asked that the Firm propose best practices in connection with Chargois & Herron fee sharing arrangement in this case.

As explained above, the fee sharing relationship was proper, except for the failure to disclose the specific relationship and fee division and to obtain the client's written consent. Identifying specific best practices is a challenge because every attorney should always be conducting him or herself in compliance with the applicable Rules of Professional Conduct, without verification by others. Nevertheless, Labaton Sucharow suggests the following best practices, which it has already begun to implement, for avoiding situations of this nature:

- Training should be undertaken for all partners, even at senior levels, regarding client disclosure and consent requirements. The Firm retained Hal R. Lieberman, a partner at Emery Celli Brinckerhoff and Abady LLP in New York and one of the top legal ethics lawyers in New York, to provide such training and to review the Firm's compliance with all ethical guidelines in its current cases. (Mr. Lieberman's biography is attached as Exhibit A.) Mr. Lieberman conducted ethics training at the Firm on October 10, 2017 to all partners and attorneys involved in business or client development. In addition, the Firm has revised all of its current cases[32] in which it has co-counsel and/or referral arrangements and, with the assistance of Mr. Lieberman, has brought all such arrangements into compliance with applicable ethics requirements.
- Approval should be required by an internal or external ethics counsel of each engagement letter, and no litigation could be undertaken without a signed approved letter. The ethics counsel would ensure, among such other items as s/he deemed appropriate, that the Firm had determined which state(s)' rules of professional conduct applied, and that the letter was tailored to those rules.

[32] The one exception is the Chargois & Herron relationship, which the Firm intends to address separately.

- An in-depth review should be undertaken of all existing on-going and one-off fee splitting agreements with other firms/attorneys to ensure that such agreements are in full compliance with the rules of professional conduct in the applicable state(s). Where non-compliance is identified, the agreements should be modified promptly to bring them into compliance. If the other firm/attorney refuses to agree to the required modification, the agreement should be promptly terminated as contrary to public policy.
- In firms that employ a "silo" model to allow specialists to effectuate each very specific phase of a litigation, from client intake to settlement documentation, a single individual should be assigned on each litigation team as the case "czar," and that attorney would be personally responsible for ensuring continuity and providing oversight at every phase of the process. Such individual case "czars" should receive training in the legal and ethical requirements attendant upon each phase and should report annually and at the conclusion of the litigation to the Firm Committee regarding the performance of the team in each phase.

Finally, to the extent that courts wish to be informed, in the context of fee petitions, about any referral relationship or fee sharing agreement that may result in another attorney receiving a portion of a fee, Labaton Sucharow respectfully suggests that those courts should issue a standing order that sets forth precisely what they require. Clear guidance about what the court does and does not want to receive in connection with a fee petition should help minimize confusion or questions regarding these issues going forward.

VI. CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, Labaton Sucharow respectfully suggests that the Special Master conclude that the payment to Chargois & Herron was not improper and, although the disclosure to ARTRS was imperfect, there was no misconduct, no impact on the class or other counsel, and thus no basis for a sanction or disgorgement regarding the shared fee.

EXPERT DECLARATION OF CAMILLE F. SARROUF

I, Camille F. Sarrouf, Sr., Esq., hereby declare:

1. I am a senior partner at Sarrouf Law, LLP. I have been retained by Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow" or the "Firm") to provide several opinions relevant to the Special Master's inquiry regarding the payment in this litigation (the "SST Litigation") to Chargois & Herron LLP from the portion of the fee award allocated to Labaton Sucharow and two other law firms, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff") and the Thornton Law Firm ("Thornton"). My opinions, which are discussed more fully below, can be summarized as follows:

- The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct did not require that Chargois & Herron perform work on the SST Litigation in order to receive a portion of the fee award allocated to Labaton Sucharow, Lieff and Thornton (collectively, "Customer Counsel").
- Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to counsel who brought the ERISA cases ("ERISA Counsel") the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the fee award allocated to Customer Counsel.
- Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to ERISA plaintiffs the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the fee award allocated to Customer Counsel.
- Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to the Court the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the award allocated to Customer Counsel.

Background And Qualifications[1]

2. I graduated from Bowdoin College in 1955, and earned my Juris Doctorate from the University of Texas in 1960. I served as Special Assistant Attorney General – Eminent Domain Division for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from 1960-1961. I have been engaged in the private practice of law since that time, in a number of law firms. My professional areas of practice include personal injury, aviation law, products liability, medical and professional malpractice, general liability, contracts, securities, and commercial litigation. Although I have handled a wide variety of civil litigation over the course of my almost six decades in practice, the vast majority of my work has involved plaintiffs' contingency fee work.

3. Over the course of my career, I have served as Plaintiffs' counsel in many litigation matters that had multiple attorneys representing the same or different plaintiffs, and in many litigation matters in which there was a referral fee (sometimes called an origination fee or forwarding fee) or some other fee sharing arrangement. I thus have extensive, personal experience interacting and negotiating with other attorneys in connection with the allocation of attorneys' fees and attorneys' fee awards.

4. In addition to practicing law, I served as an Adjunct Professor of Law for the New England School of Law from 1974-1993, where I taught Trial Advocacy and Trial Preparation. In 1980 the school awarded me an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

5. I served as the President of the Massachusetts Bar Association from 1998-1999, Vice President in 1996, and Treasurer in 1995. I became a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers ("ACTL") in 1983, and served as the State Chair for Massachusetts from 1991-

[1] My curriculum vitae is attached as Exhibit A.

1993, Regent for the Northeast Region from 1998-2002, and Trustee of the ACTL Foundation from 2007-2014. I was also selected as a Fellow of the International Academy of Trial Lawyers in 1999, and an Advocate for the American Board of Trial Advocates in 1989. I served as the President of the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Lawyers from 1986-1988, as a member of the Board of Governors of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America from 1982-1986, and I am a Fellow of the Massachusetts Bar Foundation, the American Bar Foundation, and the Roscoe Pound Foundation.

6. In 1999, I served as the Chair of the Magistrate Review Committee for the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. I served on the Massachusetts Commission on Judicial Conduct from 1990-1996, on the Recall Committee of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court from 1986-1990, and on the Massachusetts Judicial Nominating Commission from 1980-1984.

7. I have been appointed a Discovery Master and Special Master by the Massachusetts Superior Court, and have served as Mediator and Arbitrator by agreement of counsel and at the request of the Massachusetts Superior Court. I have testified on issues of legal negligence and legal fees for Plaintiffs and Defendants in Massachusetts Superior Courts. See, e.g., Zabin v. Picciotto, 73 Mass. App. Ct. 141, 154 (2008) (discussing expert testimony presented at trial).

8. I have been retained in this case to provide the opinions concerning the issues set forth in the first paragraph, above. I am being compensated for providing this expert opinion on an hourly basis. My compensation is in no way contingent upon the content of my opinion.

Summary of Facts Relevant to Opinions

9. In analyzing these issues, I have discussed the case with the counsel who retained me, and reviewed certain documents produced in this case as well as the applicable law and secondary sources relevant to my opinions. I understand and assume the accuracy of the following background facts relevant to the opinions I offer.

10. In mid-2008, Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS") issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") which invited firms to submit qualifications to become additional securities monitoring counsel for the retirement fund. Chargois & Herron partner Tim Herron had previously facilitated the introduction of Labaton Sucharow partners to certain officials in Arkansas who played a role with respect to ARTRS. Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron submitted a joint response to the RFQ. Labaton Sucharow witnesses have testified that they expected that if selected, both firms would work on any litigation that may be filed on ARTRS's behalf. The plan was that Labaton Sucharow would serve as the monitoring counsel and lead counsel on any litigation matters, and Chargois & Herron, with its Arkansas connections and presence, would work with the client.

11. On October 13, 2008, ARTRS's Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, emailed Labaton Sucharow partner Eric Belfi and advised that ARTRS had selected Labaton Sucharow as monitoring counsel, but that ARTRS was "unable to process the state contract form" with Chargois & Herron also listed. I understand that Labaton Sucharow witnesses have testified that they believed, as a result of Ms. Clark's email and other communications with her, that the Firm was authorized to affiliate with Chargois & Herron on ARTRS matters.

12. Belfi, Labaton Sucharow partner Chris Keller and Damon Chargois agreed that Chargois & Herron would receive 20% of the gross attorney fees that Labaton Sucharow earns in any case brought on behalf of ARTRS in which ARTRS is a named plaintiff and Labaton Sucharow is lead or co-lead plaintiffs' counsel, subject to certain exceptions. The parties exchanged emails and draft versions of a written agreement, but never signed a final contract.

13. On September 24, 2010 and February 8, 2011, Belfi sent engagement letters to George Hopkins relating to the SST Litigation. Both versions of the letter advised that the Firm may divide fees with, or allocate fees to, other attorneys, upon a percentage basis or based upon time spent in assisting in the matter, and that the division is the Firm's sole responsibility and will not increase fees payable by ARTRS.

14. In February 2011, the three Customer Counsel filed a putative class action against State Street Bank and Trust Company ("State Street") on behalf of ARTRS. (This case is commonly referred to as the "Customer" portion of the SST Litigation, which is why Labaton Sucharow, Lieff and Thornton are defined above as "Customer Counsel.") Labaton Sucharow informed Lieff and Thornton that it had a fee sharing obligation to Chargois & Herron. All three firms agreed to share the burden equally for that obligation. In June 2016, after a settlement agreement-in-principle had been reached, Garrett Bradley of Thornton negotiated an agreement with Damon Chargois that, rather than calculating the payment as 20% of Labaton Sucharow's portion of a fee award, Chargois & Herron would receive an amount equal to 5.5% of the total fee award, with the funds coming from the three Customer Counsel's respective shares.

15. In November 2012, the ARTRS case was consolidated for pretrial purposes with two cases filed on behalf of individuals and plans seeking to assert claims against State Street pursuant to the ERISA laws (referred to hereafter as putative "ERISA class members"). ERISA Counsel negotiated with Customer Counsel and in December 2013 reached an agreement that ERISA Counsel would receive 9% of any fee award, should one be entered at the conclusion of the case. The 9% was based upon the estimated amount of losses allegedly suffered by putative ERISA class members when compared to putative class members in the customer portion of the litigation. In the end, Customer Counsel voluntarily increased ERISA Counsel's allocation to 10% and reduced their own to 90%. As explained above, the payment to Chargois & Herron came from Customer Counsel's 90% share of the overall fee award, not from ERISA Counsel's 10% share.

16. The Customer Counsel firms did not advise ERISA Counsel of the payment to Chargois & Herron. Labaton Sucharow witnesses have testified that they did not believe the payment needed to be shared with ERISA Counsel, because it would be paid out of Customer Counsel's share of any fee award and therefore did not impact the amount that the class or ERISA Counsel received.

17. The Customer Counsel firms did not disclose the Chargois & Herron relationship to the Court in connection with the fee petition or otherwise. The Court did not inquire as to the allocation of fees among any counsel.

18. Upon approval of the settlement, the Court approved the fee award that plaintiffs' counsel had jointly requested. Thereafter, each of the three main ERISA firms received 1/3 of the 10% of the attorneys' fee award that was allocated for ERISA Counsel. I understand that these three firms, in turn, paid portions of their shares to other firms with which they had fee-sharing agreements.

Opinions

I. The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct did not require that Chargois & Herron perform work on the SST Litigation in order to receive a portion of the fee award allocated to Customer Counsel.

19. Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e), which governs all forms of fee sharing in connection with matters subject to the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, does not require a referring or originating attorney to work on a matter in order to share the fee.

20. Over the years, there have been a number of proposals to change Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e) and impose additional requirements, including (for example) a requirement that attorneys sharing a fee must be paid "in proportion" to work they have performed or must jointly represent the client. After hearing objections from members of the bar, including myself, the Supreme Judicial Court has consistently declined to impose these additional requirements.

21. As a result, in Massachusetts, attorneys routinely are paid referral fees or origination fees for work that another attorney performs. In my view, these arrangements benefit clients because they encourage attorneys to pass work along to attorneys who are better suited to handle the representation.

II. Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to ERISA Counsel the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the fee award allocated to Customer Counsel.

22. I understand that the plaintiffs' attorneys agreed in 2013, after the ARTRS case was consolidated for pretrial purposes with the two ERISA cases, that (i) Customer Counsel would receive 91% of any fee award generated in the litigation; and (ii) ERISA Counsel would receive 9% of any fee award. I understand that this distribution was based, at least in part, on relative losses to putative class members as the attorneys understood them to be at that time. I further understand that when the case settled, the Customer Counsel voluntarily agreed to increase the share to the ERISA Counsel to 10%.

23. I do not believe in these circumstances that Customer Counsel had an obligation to inform ERISA Counsel about the existence of the fee sharing arrangement with Chargois & Herron. The split of 91% and 9% appears to have resulted from arms' length negotiations among plaintiffs' counsel. The fact that Labaton Sucharow had an obligation to pay a share of its allocation to a third party, Chargois & Herron, or the fact that Lieff and Thornton agreed to contribute from their allocations toward that amount, would not impact the 9% (or ultimately the 10%) that ERISA Counsel received pursuant to the agreement that they negotiated.

24. In my experience, it is common for plaintiffs' attorneys to have referral or origination obligations to other lawyers. Where, as here, the existence of such an obligation did not impact the amount paid to ERISA Counsel, I am aware of no explicit or implicit rule that would require Customer Counsel to share with ERISA Counsel the existence of the obligations. In my experience, plaintiffs' attorneys do not typically disclose these obligations to each other in circumstances such as this.

25. I understand that certain of the ERISA Counsel have said during depositions that if they knew about the payment to Chargois & Herron, they would have, or may have, declined to join Customer Counsel in submitting a common fee petition, or attempted to renegotiate their agreement with Customer Counsel. This testimony does not change my opinion. Regardless of what they now say, I do not believe that ERISA Counsel were entitled to know about the payment to Chargois & Herron, nor do I believe that Customer Counsel were required to inform them of the payment.

III. Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to ERISA plaintiffs the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the fee award allocated to Customer Counsel.

26. I understand that at all times in this litigation, ERISA Counsel represented and advocated on behalf of their clients, the named ERISA plaintiffs, as well as the putative ERISA class members. I understand that Labaton Sucharow did not have an engagement letter with the named ERISA plaintiffs and Labaton Sucharow attorneys handling the SST Litigation did not consider themselves to have an attorney-client relationship with those plaintiffs or the putative ERISA class members prior to the certification of a class at settlement.

27. Labaton Sucharow attorneys had an obligation to disclose the fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the Firm's client, Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, pursuant to Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e). I do not believe that Labaton Sucharow had an obligation to make a similar disclosure to the ERISA plaintiffs or the putative ERISA class members.

28. I understand that a class was certified by the Court at the conclusion of the case when the settlement was accepted, and that Labaton Sucharow was designated as "lead counsel" (which in my experience is primarily done for the convenience of the Court, to bring order to the litigation). Nevertheless, I do not believe that Rule 1.5(e) required disclosure to or approval in writing from the ERISA plaintiffs or the entire settlement class. In my experience and in my view, in class actions such as this, Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e) does not require an attorney to make a disclosure to an entire class. Based on my understanding of the facts and the applicable rules, I believe that Labaton Sucharow's disclosure and consent requirements under Rule 1.5(e) only required disclosure to, and consent from, its immediate client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System. In addition, in this case there were separate lawsuits—the ERISA lawsuit (which was actually two separate cases) and the Customer lawsuit—which were consolidated for pre-trial matters. Labaton Sucharow was not counsel in the ERISA lawsuit, which removes them one more step from a traditional attorney-client relationship.

IV. Customer Counsel had no obligation to disclose to the Court the fact that Chargois & Herron would receive a payment from the portion of the award allocated to Customer Counsel.

29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) provides that fee arrangements must be disclosed to the court only if ordered. To my knowledge, there is no local rule, standing order, or order in this case that required the parties to disclose fee arrangements to the Court. Accordingly, Customer Counsel were not obligated to disclose to the Court the payment to Chargois & Herron. The fact that Chargois & Herron did not perform work on this litigation does not impact this opinion because, as set forth in my first opinion above, Massachusetts law does not require counsel to work on a matter in order to receive a share of the fee.

30. I understand that there has been some question about whether the fee sharing arrangement should nevertheless have been disclosed even in the absence of a requirement, under a general theory of "candor to the tribunal." I do not believe such disclosure was required, particularly where (as here) the payment of a portion of the fee to Chargois & Herron did not affect what the clients or class members received. The rule cited above sets forth what information must be provided in a fee petition, and judges are free to ask for more information or ask follow-up questions if they wish to know details that the drafters of the rule chose not to require. In my view, a general principle like candor to the tribunal is not sufficiently specific to overcome the application of Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(iv), which so clearly governs in this type of situation.

31. My opinion is consistent with my experience. Referral fees, or origination fees, are very common in connection with plaintiffs-side litigation work. If the payment does not impact the total amount of a fee paid or awarded (which I understand to have been the case here), and if the court does not request this detail, in my experience referral or origination fee arrangements are not normally disclosed to the court.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed this 31st day of October, 2017 in Boston, Massachusetts.

Expert Report, March 26, 2018
Professor Peter A. Joy

I. QUALIFICATIONS AND DISCLOSURES

I was retained by Labaton Sucharow ("Labaton") to prepare a legal ethics report and to render my independent expert opinion on certain questions. I agreed to an hourly rate of $400 for time in a non-testimonial context and an hourly rate of $500 for time in a testimonial context, which includes time spent testifying and/or waiting to testify at hearings, depositions, trials or any dispute resolution processes. The following describes my qualifications to offer my opinions in this matter, and a current CV is attached to this Report [Exhibit 1] and incorporated herein.

I am an attorney at law admitted to practice and on active status and in good standing in the State of Missouri (1998), the State of Ohio (1977), and I was admitted to practice in the District of Columbia (1979), where I am in good standing but on inactive status. I have also been admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court (1995), the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals (1983), the Third Circuit Court of Appeals (1984), the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals (1999), the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals (1999), and the District Court for the Northern District of Ohio. I have had a Martindale-Hubbell AV rating since 1980.

I am the Henry Hitchcock Professor of Law at Washington University in St. Louis School of Law, where I have taught since 1998. I previously taught at Case Western Reserve School of Law from 1978-1980, and 1981-1998. I have also had visiting professor positions at other universities in the United States and other countries.

My major areas of teaching are legal ethics, clinical teaching, and trial practice and procedure. My primary area of research and scholarship is legal ethics, though I also write about legal education and less about trial practice and procedure. I teach legal ethics both in classroom setting and in an applied setting through clinical courses. I am a co-author of Professional Responsibility: A Contemporary Approach (3d ed. West 2017), and co-author of the second and third editions of the teaching manual for that textbook. I have published another book, several book chapters, and numerous articles on issues of legal ethics, and the articles have appeared in law reviews, American Bar Association (ABA) publications, and state and local bar association publications. I am a columnist (previously contributing-editor) for an ethics column for the ABA publication Criminal Justice. My legal ethics scholarship has been cited widely, including by: United States House of Representatives, Committee on the Judiciary, Committee Report, Lawsuit Abuse Reduction Act of 2011, 112-174 (resubmitted in 2013, 2015, and 2017); ABA/BNA Lawyers' Manual on Professional Conduct; Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct; ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Development; Association of the Bar of the City of New York Committee on Professional and Judicial Ethics; Supreme Court of Ohio Board of Professional Conduct; and various state and federal court decisions. I am frequently quoted by news media on a variety of legal ethics issues, including several quotes in the ABA Journal.

I am a member of the American Bar Association, ABA Center for Professional Responsibility, Missouri Bar Association, and a former member of the Ohio Bar Association, Cleveland Bar Association, and Cuyahoga County Bar Association. I was a Special Investigator for the Ohio Supreme Court Board of Commissioners on Character and Fitness (1990-91), and I served on the following bar committees: Cleveland Bar Association Ethics Committee (1987-98) and Advertising Committee (1989-90); Cuyahoga County Bar Association Ethics Committee (1989-90, 1991-98, Vice-Chair, 1997-98), Judicial Selection/Standards Committee (1994-98), and Lawyer Referral Service Committee (1996); and the Joint Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Bar Admissions Committee (1987-92). I am also a former member of the executive committee and a former chair of the Association of American Law Schools' Professional Responsibility Section.

I am a frequent presenter in the area of legal ethics for continuing legal education (CLE) courses sponsored by federal and state courts, bar associations, law firms, and law schools. Sponsoring organizations include: the ABA; the ABA Center for Professional Responsibility; the Federal Judicial Center; and the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri.

I have been retained as a consulting expert for legal ethics issues in more than a dozen different states, and those issues have included fee sharing, advertising, of counsel arrangements, conflicts of interest, confidentiality and attorney-client privilege, and other legal ethics issues. I have been retained as a testimonial expert witness in Ohio, Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, and New York on issues of legal malpractice, professional discipline for alleged ethics violations, and other legal ethics issues, though not all matters required my testimony in court. I have testified as an expert in state courts in Ohio and Missouri, and in Federal District Courts for the Northern District of Ohio and the District of Kansas.

In the past five years, I have testified in a hearing in United States v. Lorenzo Black, Case No. 16-CR-20032, United States District Court for the District of Kansas. I testified pro bono in that hearing on behalf of the Federal Public Defender for the District of Kansas.

II. FACTUAL ASSUMPTIONS

For the purposes of rendering this report and my opinions, I have assumed the following facts provided to me by Choate Hall & Stewart LLP, counsel for Labaton. I addition, I have reviewed certain documents and items referenced in the factual assumptions.

Labaton is a plaintiffs' law firm that focuses on large-scale and complex class action litigation, which often involves securities matters. In the context of its securities work, Labaton frequently acts as "monitoring counsel" for its clients. In that role, Labaton monitors the client's portfolio of securities investments for signs of possible securities law violations, such as a drop in stock price. See, e.g., Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation[1]; LBS017739-41. In doing so, Labaton uses sophisticated in-house investigators and analysts to monitor the securities market. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-14. If Labaton believes a client's portfolio may have been involved in a securities violation that could lead to a viable case, Labaton may ask the client whether it would be interested in serving as lead plaintiff in a class action case. Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation; LBS017739-41. If the client agrees, Labaton may represent the client in the litigation. Id.; see also Sucharow 2d Dep. 115:13-116:15.

Because of its complex role as monitoring counsel, it "takes a while for people to … understand [Labaton's work] to the point where it can be useful to them." Keller Dep. Day 1 24:20-23. Thus, Labaton relies on informational presentations that explain Labaton's work to potential clients, such as institutional investors. Keller Dep. Day 1 21:8-18, 24:10-27:10. These presentations are often the first step in Labaton's retention by a potential client. From there, Labaton typically participates in a submission process before being selected to represent an institutional investor. Keller Dep. Day 1 37:19-38:10.

A. Labaton's Relationship with Damon Chargois

Chargois & Herron was a law firm based in Little Rock, Arkansas. Labaton's relationship with Chargois & Herron originated through Labaton partner, Eric Belfi. Belfi met Damon Chargois, a partner at Chargois & Herron, in approximately 2004, when Belfi worked at a different law firm and came into contact with Chargois during a litigation matter pending in the Southern District of New York. See Labaton Sucharow LLP's Response to Special Master

Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Supplemental Interrogatories to Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Response to Supplemental Interrogatories") at 4; Belfi 2d Dep. 12:21-13:4.[2]

Belfi joined Labaton Sucharow in 2006. He focused on building and maintaining client relationships for Labaton. Belfi Dep. 9:7-23. Early in Belfi's tenure at Labaton, he was approached by Chargois, who told him that he had "some opportunities" to introduce Labaton to "pension plans in the Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma region." Belfi 2d Dep at 13:10-13. Belfi "asked him to proceed." Id. By mid-2007, Chargois was focused on introducing Labaton to the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System ("ARTRS"), along with other entities that may have been interested in Labaton's services. Keller Dep. Day 1 156:6-13; LBS031465. In addition, beginning in spring of 2007, Chargois served as local counsel for Labaton on a class action case pending in Texas. Keller Dep. Day 1 146:8-149; LBS017411. In that role, Chargois participated in mediation and performed other legal work. Chargois Dep. 17:7-18:22; 121:4-22:12; Keller Dep. Day 1 175:20-176:11; LBS031585.

B. Labaton's Early Contact with ARTRS

Tim Herron, Chargois' partner in his Little Rock office, knew Steve Farris, an Arkansas state senator who served in an oversight role with respect to ARTRS. See LBS040318; LBS017432; Chargois Dep. 33:16-21; Hopkins 2d Dep. 35:6-36:8 (explaining that Farris served on the Arkansas legislature's Joint Committee on Public Retirement and Social Security Programs); Ark. Code Ann. §§ 10-3-701 and 10-3-703 (2017) (assigning oversight responsibilities to the joint committee).

Herron arranged for Belfi and his Labaton partner Chris Keller to meet with Senator Farris in August of 2007. Keller viewed this initial meeting as educational in nature and designed to explain Labaton's work as monitoring counsel to Senator Farris. Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-21:18. In connection with that meeting, Chargois informed Belfi and Keller that they would need to "impress[] the Senator with [their] firm credentials" in order to have a chance to retain ARTRS as a client. Keller Dep. Day 1 157:6-159:9; LBS017432. Apparently, Chargois remarked after the meeting that Belfi and Keller "did well" and "represent[ed] the firm very well" in the meeting with Senator Farris. LBS040322; LBS017438; Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-10. Chargois later stated that he and Herron felt "very optimistic about Labaton firm's doing a lot of good things in Arkansas. This is thanks to [Belfi and Keller] representing the firm very well" to Farris. LBS017437.[3]

After this initial meeting, Senator Farris and/or Herron introduced Belfi and Keller to Paul Doane, the Executive Director of ARTRS at the time. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:10-15. In September or October 2007, Doane visited Labaton's offices in New York City while he was in the area on other business. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:2-6, 41:11-13. Belfi was traveling at the time, so Doane met with Keller during that trip. Keller Dep. Day 1 33:10-34:18; LBS040524-A. Keller introduced Doane to members of the firm and showed him the office. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-23. Doane expressed interest in Labaton after the meeting but explained that retention of Labaton would require further review by ARTRS and a request for proposals. LBS040524-A; Keller Dep. Day 1 180:7-21.

According to Chargois, during the fall of 2007 Senator Farris maintained contact with Doane regarding the possibility that Labaton would represent ARTRS as monitoring counsel.

[3]The testimony regarding this initial meeting is somewhat inconsistent. Chargois testified that, at Senator Farris' suggestion, he placed a "cold" telephone call to ARTRS director Paul Doane. Chargois Dep. 33:12-35:7. During this conversation, Chargois explained that Chargois & Herron was a local firm working with a New York firm specializing in representing institutional investors. Id. As a result, according to Chargois, Doane met with Eric Belfi and possibly Chris Keller in Little Rock. Chargois Dep. 35:8-36:20. However, while Keller testified that he met Senator Farris in Little Rock, he does not believe that Doane was present. Keller Dep. Day 1 32:12-33:23.

LBS017442.[4] Chargois and Tim Herron continued to relay information regarding Senator Farris' contact with ARTRS and other funds that could potentially be interested in Labaton's services. LBS017450; Keller Dep. Day 1 193:2-196:2. Similarly, in spring of 2008, Herron communicated information regarding Senator Farris' contact with Doane and the possibility that ARTRS would retain Labaton. LBS017451; LBS017453; Keller Dep. Day 1 218:18-224:16.

C. ARTRS' Retention of Labaton

In mid-2008, ARTRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") which invited firms to submit qualifications to become additional monitoring counsel to the fund. Labaton and Chargois & Herron submitted a joint RFQ response on July 30, 2008. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. Labaton contemplated that, if selected as panel monitoring counsel, both firms would work on the litigation, if any, filed on ARTRS's behalf. Belfi 2d Dep. 18:14-19; Keller Dep. Day 1 47:24-49:3. Labaton would serve as the lead counsel, and Chargois & Herron would work with ARTRS in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-27:15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

On October 13, 2008, ARTRS's Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, emailed Belfi and informed him that "ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system." LBS017456. Clark further stated:

> I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
>
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conductive to a joint proposal.

[4] Concurrently, Chargois purportedly continued to seek introductions for Labaton with other entities. E.g., LBS031472 ("Damon is really moving on all of the fronts.").

Id. [5]

After receiving this email, Belfi had a telephone conversation with Clark. Belfi 2d Dep. 114:2-22, 117:20-118:10. Belfi explained to Clark that Labaton "would be working with Chargois & Herron" and that Chargois & Herron "were going to be involved in the relationship." Belfi 2d Dep 117:20-118:10.

In October 2008, very shortly after ARTRS selected Labaton as monitoring counsel, Doane departed as ARTRS's executive director. See Arkansas Times, "Doane to depart," Oct. 28, 2008.[6] The new Executive Director, George Hopkins, began in or about December 2008. Hopkins Dep. 10:17-21. Meanwhile, Clark – ARTRS' Chief Counsel – remained in her position at ARTRS until approximately October 2009. See Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, "Faulted on Contracts, Teacher-System Lawyer Quits," October 22, 2009.[7]

Unlike Doane, Hopkins did not know Tim Herron or the Chargois & Herron firm. Hopkins 2d Dep. 21:5-10. A few months after Hopkins began at ARTRS, Belfi and then-managing partner Lawrence Sucharow met with him in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:18-21. Because Belfi got along well with Hopkins, and because Hopkins desired a direct relationship without intermediaries, Belfi became Hopkins' primary contact with regard to Labaton's monitoring relationship. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:21-28:7, 56:22-57:10; Hopkins 2d Dep. 60:8-62:16.

[5] Given the nature of the relationship, discussed below, the payment to Chargois & Herron was never an "expense of a case." Keller Dep. Day 2 302:24-304:8. Except where they appeared as counsel in Court, Chargois & Herron only received a portion of Labaton's attorneys' fees, which themselves were awarded on a percentage basis that were unrelated to "expenses."

[6] Available at https://www.arktimes.com/ArkansasBlog/archives/2008/10/23/doane-to-depart (last visited March 9, 2018).

[7] Available at https://www.pressreader.com/usa/arkansas-democrat-gazette/20091022/283927403838722 (last visited March 9, 2018).

Thus, Chargois & Herron were uninvolved with ARTRS as Belfi's relationship with Hopkins developed. Belfi 2d Dep. 57:5-19

On September 24, 2010, Belfi sent Hopkins a draft retention letter for the State Street matter, which contained the following provision:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

LBS019948-50. On February 8, 2011, Belfi sent a slightly revised, final retention letter to Hopkins with a modified first sentence to the quoted paragraph: "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS011061. Throughout this case, Chargois & Herron's portion of the State Street fee has been referred to by witnesses and in documents as, among other things, a "referral fee," a "local counsel" fee, and a "liaison fee."

During Labaton's representation of ARTRS, Belfi spoke with Hopkins about "how fees worked." Belfi 2d Dep. 23:17-23. According to Belfi, Hopkins said that "he only wanted to deal with [Labaton] and wasn't concerned about how [Labaton] would cut fees up if [they were] working with other firms." Id. Hopkins was only interested in the aggregate attorney fee amount, rather than allocations of that aggregate fee among various firms. Id. at 23:24-24:5. According to Belfi, Hopkins "was not concerned with who [Labaton was] splitting fees with." Id. at 120:11-22. Belfi believed that Hopkins "didn't want to deal with" allocations of fees between lawyers. Id. Hopkins' testimony supports this belief. Hopkins 2d Dep. 68:23-69:3 ("I told Eric if I ever want to know about your attorney fees and who all you hired, I'll ask you.

And, you know, on any case because I intentionally didn't want to know a whole lot."); id. at 73:11-19 ("I don't feel misled because I made it real clear to them that I didn't want to be the gatekeeper on all this attorney relationship. And I think if they thought I wanted to know, they would have told me because Eric always said if you ever want to see how we do all these fees, just let me know. And I said that's fine."); see also id. at 74:10-75:8.

D. Labaton's Agreement with Chargois

Early in the relationship between Labaton and Chargois & Herron, Belfi, Keller, and Damon Chargois discussed the terms of an agreement between the two firms. The crux of the agreement was that when Chargois & Herron facilitated the introduction between Labaton and a client, Chargois & Herron would receive up to 20% of the gross attorney fees Labaton earned representing that client, if the client was a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel. See, e.g., LBS031185; Keller Dep. Day 1 42:15-46:14; Chargois Dep. 50:11-52:24, 162:19-164:2. Initially, the understanding was that Chargois would play a local counsel role relative to the entities with which he facilitated introductions, and that he would be active assisting in litigating Labaton's cases if needed. See Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-23, 27:11-15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

Labaton's agreement with Chargois was never reduced to a formal written contract. However, as Labaton's relationship with ARTRS developed, Chargois and Labaton began to formalize their agreement. In February 2009, Chargois indicated that he expected a relatively informal arrangement, but expressed the terms as he understood them in a written email. LBS030990. Roughly one week later, Chargois inquired whether a written "letter agreement" would be necessary. LBS030993; Keller Dep. Day 1 255:16-257:4. Chargois and Keller discussed via email the terms of the potential contract. LBS031492; Keller Dep. Day 1 258:8-

19. In April 2009, Chargois sent a draft letter agreement to Belfi and Keller seeking to memorialize the previous discussions in writing. LBS030985-87. Keller edited the document and sent a return draft that, among other things, inserted an arbitration clause. LBS031192-95. While a written agreement was never finalized (Response to Supplemental Interrogatories at 8), Chargois at least viewed it as enforceable. LBS031137; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:1-22. As time passed, Labaton and Chargois maintained the basic referral arrangement of an 80/20 fee split, if ARTRS became a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel.[8]

Because ARTRS was the only named plaintiff in Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230 MLW, i.e., the action on behalf of the putative class of customers of State Street,[9] the three Customer Class Law Firms (Labaton, Lieff Cabraser, and the Thornton Law Firm) agreed in 2013 that they would share in paying the allocation to Chargois & Herron from their own fee awards. LBS027776. Garrett Bradley of the Thornton firm handled the discussions with Lieff Cabraser and Chargois regarding this point. Id.; Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10.[10]

In June 2016, well after a settlement agreement-in-principle had been reached, Bradley reached out to Chargois for further discussions regarding Chargois' fee allocation. TLF-SST-

[8] Although it became apparent that Chargois' total contribution would be limited to the initial assistance in introducing Labaton to ARTRS, Chargois maintained that he was entitled to 20% of any fee earned by Labaton. LBS017594; LBS030876; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-15. Chargois intimated that he would seek legal redress to vindicate his perceived contractual right, if necessary. Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-59:22; Chargois Dep. 59:6-60:4; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:19-131:12. Labaton was concerned by the possibility of litigation in Texas state court. See Belfi 2d Dep. 58:16-59:22; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:22-132:3; Keller Dep. Day 2 541:19-543:23.

[9] Civil Action Nos. 11-cv-12049 MLW and 12-cv-11698 MLW, involving the ERISA Plaintiffs, were consolidated with the customer action for pre-trial purpose.

[10] Bradley explained that he took on the role of negotiating with Chargois & Herron because he had a friendly relationship with Chargois, and he wanted to reach agreement out of concern that, because ARTRS was the only named (non-ERISA) plaintiff, Chargois could say his firm was entitled to 20% of the overall fee award, not just the portion that Labaton Sucharow received. Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10; see also Belfi 2d Dep. 94:5-23; Keller Dep. Day 1 122:6-124:19.

060973. Bradley negotiated an agreement that Chargois & Herron would receive an amount equal to 5.5% of the total fee award (basically, a percentage that would be approximately equivalent to 20% of Labaton's anticipated share of the total fee), which would be funded by the three Customer Class Law Firms, by agreement, from their respective shares of the award. LBS040924; Bradley 2d Dep. 93:16-22.[11]

Given his desire not to be informed of the allocation of fees among counsel (Hopkins Dec. at ¶¶10-12, 14), George Hopkins personally was unaware of the Chargois agreement until August or September of 2017. Id. ¶ 7. Thereafter, when informed of the details of the fee-sharing agreement between the Customer Class Law Firms and Chargois in this case, Hopkins expressly consented to and ratified the agreement. Id. at ¶¶ 16-17.

The fee-sharing arrangement was not disclosed to the Court or to the class. No local rule or court rule required disclosure to the Court, nor did the Court have a standing order, or case specific order, requiring disclosure.

III. SUMMARY OF QUESTIONS ADDRESSED AND OPINIONS RENDERED IN THIS REPORT

I have been retained by Labaton to render legal ethics opinions on the following issues, and in formulating my opinions I have reviewed relevant ethics rules, case authority, other legal and ethics authorities, and relied upon my own professional knowledge, experience, skill, training and education:

[11] In that June 21, 2016 email to Chargois cited above, Bradley discussed ERISA counsel and what percentage would be allocated to them in the context of his dialogue with Chargois about what percentage would be paid to Chargois & Herron. TLF-SST-060973. No Labaton lawyers were copied on this communication, and there is no evidence in the record suggesting that lawyers from Labaton saw it before this investigation. Id. Bradley explained that he was simply providing the context of the ERISA firms as background and as a negotiating point with Chargois. Bradley 2d Dep. 84:9-85:20; Keller Dep. Day 2 534:23-535:24. Bradley's reference in that 2016 conversation did nothing to change the agreement that the ERISA lawyers had struck with Customer Counsel more than two years earlier.

1. If there is a flawed or imperfect division of fee arrangement between law firms and a client under Massachusetts' Rules of Professional Conduct (Mass. R. Prof. C.) 1.5(e), is a resulting fee division between the law firms considered under Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c),[12] which prohibits a lawyer giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services?

   Answer: No. As will be explained more fully below, I have concluded to a reasonable degree of professional certainty that under both the ethics rules and legal precedent in Massachusetts, a flawed or imperfect division of fee arrangement between law firms and a client under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) does not convert any resulting fee division between the law firms into a matter in which Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b) would be controlling. There is nothing in Massachusetts case law or other authorities that would support the proposition that a flawed or imperfect division of fee arrangement between law firms and a client under Mass R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) should be considered under Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). [See infra IV.A. for a more complete analysis.]

2. Whether there was an ethical or legal requirement for Labaton to provide notice to the Court of its fee sharing arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230?

   Answer: No. As will be explained more fully below, I have concluded to a reasonable degree of professional certainty that there was no ethical or legal requirement for Labaton to provide notice to the Court of its fee sharing arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230. Neither Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) nor 54(d) require fee sharing arrangements to be disclosed to the Court. No local rule or court rule required disclosure to the Court, nor did the Court have a standing order, or case specific order, requiring disclosure. The Board of Judges of the Eastern District of New York and the Southern District of New York adopted, and the Judicial Council of the Second Circuit, adopted Local Rule 23.1 to provide for disclosure of "any fee sharing agreements with anyone" after the Second Circuit's decision in Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 137 n.2 (2nd Cir. 2016), made it clear that without such a local rule or court order disclosure of fee sharing agreements is not required. In addition, neither Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) nor 8.4(c) independently create an ethical duty that required Labaton to disclose to the Court its fee sharing arrangement with Chargois & Herron, nor did the lack of disclosure of the fee sharing agreement violate these ethics rules. [See infra IV.B. for a more complete analysis.]

[12] During the relevant time period, including when Belfi sent a final retention letter to Hopkins on February 8, 2011, the provision stating that a lawyer not give anything of value to a person recommending the lawyer's services, with some exceptions, appeared in section (c) and not (b) of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2. See Exhibit 2. Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2 was amended on March 26, 2015, effective July 1, 2015, section (b) of the former version of 7.2 was deleted, and section (c) became section (b). See Exhibit 3.

3. Whether there was an ethical or legal requirement for Labaton to provide notice of the fee sharing agreement between Labaton and Chargois & Herron to the class members in the above-stated case?

   Answer: No. As will be explained more fully below, I have concluded to a reasonable degree of professional certainty that there was no ethical or legal requirement for Labaton to provide notice of the fee sharing agreement between Labaton and Chargois & Herron to the class members in the above-stated case. Disclosure to class members flows both from class counsel's disclosure obligations to the Court and from class counsel's obligations to class members. Without a disclosure obligation to the Court and without a clear obligation to disclose how fees would be divided to the class, there was no obligation for Labaton to disclose the fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the class members. [See infra IV.C. for a more complete analysis.]

4. Do courts or ethics authorities impose sanctions on or discipline a lawyer or law firm when a legal or ethical duty is unclear?

   Answer: No. Courts and ethics authorities do not impose sanctions on or discipline a lawyer or law firm when a legal or ethical duty is unclear. Mass. R. Prof. C. Scope [5] states, in pertinent part:

   > The Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer's conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act on uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. Moreover, the Rules presuppose that whether or not discipline should be imposed for a violation, and the severity of a sanction, depend on all the circumstances, including the willfulness and seriousness of the violation, extenuating factors, and whether there have been previous violations.

   If at the time of an alleged violation of a legal or ethical duty the legal or ethical duty is unclear, the facts and circumstances, as well as fundamental due process, guide courts and ethics authorities to refrain from imposing sanctions or discipline on a lawyer or a law firm. [See infra IV.D. for a more complete analysis.]

5. Does Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" apply to the Mass. R. Prof. 1.5(e) "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm"?

   Answer: No. Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" does not apply to the Mass. R. Prof. 1.5(e) "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5 has to be construed in its entirety, and it is clear that Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" does not apply to each lawyer's share of fee pursuant to a division of fee under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) because (e) requires that "the total fee is reasonable." [See infra IV.E. for a more complete analysis.]

IV. REASONING AND SUPPORT FOR EXPERT OPINIONS

A. A Flawed or Imperfect Division of Fee Arrangement Between Law Firms and a Client Under Massachusetts' Rules of Professional Conduct (Mass. R. Prof. C.) 1.5(e) and a Resulting Fee Division Between the Law Firms Should Not Be Considered a Violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

1. There is no authority in Massachusetts or the First Circuit holding that a division of attorney fees under a fee arrangement that does not fully comply with Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), or the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), would violate Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c), or the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

Massachusetts state courts, Massachusetts disciplinary authorities, and the United States District Court for Massachusetts have never considered a fee division between law firms based on a flawed or imperfect division of fee arrangement between law firms and a client under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) to be a violation Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). In addition, no other District Court in the First Circuit has conflated any state's version of ABA Model Rule of Professional Conduct ("Model Rule") 1.5(e) with the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c).

There are very few Massachusetts cases that discuss client-attorney fee agreements that do not fully comply with Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), and none of those cases even mention Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). For example, Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699 (Mass. 2005), involved a dispute between an attorney, Alfred Saggese, who had an oral fee sharing agreement with Kelley Law Associates, P.C. ("Kelleys").[13] Id. at 702-03. When Saggese sought payment of his expected referral fee, the Kelleys argued that the oral fee sharing agreement should not be enforced because it violated Mass. DR 2-107(A)(1), which was in effect at the time of the client-attorney relationship was formed and was replaced with Mass. R. P. C. 1.5(e). Id. at 703. The [13] Initially, Kelley Law Associates, P.C. was known as Kelley & Donovan, P.C. Saggesse 837 N.E.2d at 701-02.

Kelleys did not argue, and the Court did not consider, that payment to Saggese would violate the old Massachusetts Disciplinary Rule that was the equivalent of Mass R. Prof. C. 7.2(c), or Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c), prohibiting giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, which Saggese had done for the Kelleys.

The Court in Daynard v. Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, P.A., 188 F. Supp.2d 115 (D. Mass 2002) was faced with an "oral fee-splitting agreement made in contravention of the rules of professional conduct . . . ." Id. at 117. In considering the oral fee-splitting agreement to be "an imperfect fee agreement," the Court only looked to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) and the corresponding N.Y. Code of Prof'l Resp. DR 2-107(A). Id. at 124. Again, at no time did the court consider Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c) or the corresponding disciplinary rule in New York.

I conducted additional legal research into the following materials: other Massachusetts state court cases; advisory ethics opinions of the Committee on Professional Ethics for Massachusetts Bar Association; advisory ethics opinions of the Boston Bar Association Ethics Committee; articles and reports of the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers;[14] a selection of public Disciplinary Decisions of the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers;[15] all of the available non-public discipline matters called Admonitions by the Massachusetts Board of Bar [14] I reviewed "The Year in Ethics and Bar Discipline" reports for all available years, 2007 to 2017, "That Was The Year That Was: Noteworthy Decisions On Ethics And Bar Discipline in 2003," and all reports that mentioned fees, advertising, or solicitation found on the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers website. Articles, MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF BAR OVERSEERS, https://www.massbbo.org/Ethics.

[15] There appear to be hundreds of public disciplinary decisions on the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers. See Disciplinary Decisions, MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF BAR OVERSEERS, https://www.massbbo.org/Decisions. There is no apparent way to search the decisions based on the alleged rule violation or subject matter, and I determined that there were too many decisions to review individually. Instead, I reviewed the first ten cases in alphabetical order that were decided in 2017, and then selected the first and last case or cases (some individuals had multiple disciplinary cases or rulings) for each letter of the alphabet.

Overseers;[16] searched and reviewed United States District Court opinions in the First Circuit, and searched and reviewed First Circuit Court opinions. I could not find a single case that held, or any disciplinary decision, ethics opinion, or bar report that stated, that a division of attorney fees under a fee arrangement that does not fully comply with Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), or the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), would violate Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c), or the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c).

There were two Admonition matters, discussed below, that have some relevance. Unlike the case for which this report is being written where the engagement letter contained permission for fee sharing, including referral fees, the two Admonitions involved matters in which there was no notice to or consent of the client.

Admonition No. 16-25 (2016), https://bbopublic.blob.core.windows.net/web/f/admon-2016.pdf, is classified "Improper Division of Fee with Other Lawyer [Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e)]. This Admonition involves two respondents, A and B, who were both lawyers. Respondent A, the referring lawyer, took a referral fee when "[n]either lawyer notified or obtained the prior or contemporaneous written approval of the client of the referral fee taken by Respondent A." Id. When the client later learned of the referral fee, the client "brought the matter of the unauthorized referral fee to the attention of bar counsel." Id. The Admonition held that for "failing to obtain the client's advance, written consent to the division of fees, the respondents violated Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e). They each received an admonition for their conduct in this matter." Id. If in 2016, or any time before 2016, ethics authorities in Massachusetts viewed sharing fees in violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) as a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b)

[16] I reviewed all of the Admonitions issued from 1999 through March 20, 2018. I searched these using the find function and "1.5(e)" and then "7.2" to identify Admonitions that dealt with fee sharing or giving a thing of value to another person for referring a client.

(previously Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)), then, in my opinion, I would have expected the Admonition to discuss a violation of Mass. R. Prof. 7.2(b).

The only other Admonition to mention an improper fee sharing is Admonition No. 99-58 (1999), https://bbopublic.blob.core.windows.net/web/f/admon.pdf, which is classified "Improper Division of Fee with Other Lawyer [DR 2-107(A(1)]." In this Admonition, a client consulted with respondent, a lawyer admitted to practice in Massachusetts, about a summons the client had received in a Rhode Island matter. Id. The client paid the respondent a consultation fee and the respondent referred the client to a lawyer in Rhode Island. Id. The client paid the Rhode Island lawyer a retainer of $1,500, and, thereafter without the client's knowledge the Rhode Island lawyer sent respondent $500, one-third of the initial retainer. Id. The client only learned of this division of fee after she discharged the Rhode Island lawyer and obtained her file to give to successor counsel. Id. She questioned payment to respondent and filed a complaint with Bar Counsel. Id. The Admonition found: "By failing to obtain the client's consent to a division of fees, the respondent violated Canon Two, DR 2-107(A)(1), as well as the analogous Rhode Island Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e). The respondent received an admonition for his conduct in this matter." Id. Again, there is no mention of any violation of Rhode Island R. Prof. C. 7.2 or the equivalent Disciplinary Rule in Massachusetts.

2. Leading resources on legal ethics do not maintain that a violation of Model Rule 1.5(e), or a jurisdiction's equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), is also a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b), or a jurisdiction's equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

In researching this issue and in forming my opinions, I also reviewed leading legal ethics resources, including treatises and texts on legal ethics, and I could not find any authority for the proposition that a violation of either the Model Rule 1.5(e), or a jurisdiction's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), is also a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b), or a state's version of Mass. R. Prof.

C. 7.2(c). These authorities either are silent on this issue or, in one instance, state that the original Model Rule 7.2(c), which is the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c) at the relevant time, does not apply to lawyers.

a) Some authority maintains that Model Rule 7.2(c) does not apply to lawyers sharing fees

Cornell Law Professor W. Wolfram has stated: "The prohibition in MR 7.2(c)[17] is broader in that it prohibits giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services except for advertising and lawyer referral plans. Its comment,[18] however, suggests that it is limited to traditional touting arrangements (§ 14.2.5)" (emphasis added). Charles W. Wolfram, Modern Legal Ethics § 14.2.4, at 782 n.58 (1986). Professor Wolfram goes on to explain what the touting and related arrangements targeted in Model Rule 7.2(c) typically involve:

> Lawyers – either directly or through their runners, cappers, or touts – have paid money to taxi drivers in "divorce haven" states who brought prospective divorce clients from the airport to the lawyer's office; have accepted referrals from a nonlawyer who solicited prospective clients of a mass accident for the lawyer in the hope of becoming his investigator; have paid gratuities to police officers, ambulance drivers, doctors and other medical workers in emergency rooms, or professional runners who might be first award of a personal injury, or to bail bond

[17] At the time that Professor Wolfram was writing, ABA Model Rule 7.2(c) provided: "A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that the lawyer may pay the reasonable cost of advertising or written communication permitted by this Rule and pay the usual charge of a not-for-profit lawyer referral service or other legal service organization." ABA Model Rule 7.2(c) (1986).

[18] The comment to which Professor Wolfram referred was titled "Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer," and it stated:

> A lawyer is allowed to pay for advertising permitted by this Rule, but otherwise is not permitted to pay another person for channeling professional work. This restriction does not prevent an organization or person other than the lawyer from advertising or recommend the lawyer's services. Thus, a lawyer may participate in not-for-profit lawyer referral programs and pay the usual fees charged by such programs. Paragraph (c) does not prohibit paying regular compensation to an assistant, such as a secretary, to prepare communications permitted by this Rule.

ABA CENTER FOR PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY, THE LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF THE MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT: THEIR DEVELOPMENT IN THE ABA HOUSE OF DELEGATES 182 (1987).

> writers or others involved in the criminal process; or have had nonlawyer employees find and sign up prospective clients.

Id. at § 14.2.5, at 786.

According to Professor Wolfram, Model Rule 7.2(c) is aimed at lawyers, or those working for lawyers in some capacity, paying nonlawyer persons, such as taxi drivers, police officers, ambulance drivers, doctors, other medical professionals, bail bond writers, nonlawyer employees, and other "nonlawyers" for referring clients or signing up prospective clients. In Professor Wolfram's account, none of the impermissible payments to other persons involve fee sharing among lawyers who are not members of the same firm.

b) The legislative history of Model Rule 7.2(c) and Model Rule 1.5(e) does not support the conclusion that Model Rule 7.2(c) applies to lawyers sharing fees

The Proposed Final Draft Model Rules of Professional Conduct discusses what was to become ABA Model Rule 7.2, and it contains comparisons with the relevant ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility Disciplinary Rules and legal background with case citations and notes. ABA Commission on Evaluation of Professional Standards, Proposed Final Draft Model Rules of Professional Conduct 255-61 (1981). There is nothing in the Model Code comparisons, the cases cited, or the notes that maintain that the prohibition against giving anything of value to a person embodied in Model Rule 7.2(c) also referred to sharing fees with another lawyer. Nor is there anything in the discussion of what was to become Model Rule 1.5 and comments to Model Rule 1.5, id. at 44-52, that suggests that a fee sharing agreement that does not fully comply with the requirements of Model Rule 1.5(e) (which was proposed Model Rule 1.5(d) in the draft) should be considered under Model Rule 7.2(c).

There are two official ABA publications for the legislative history of the ABA Model Rules, and the historical accounts in neither publication support the conclusion that an imperfect fee sharing agreement with what was to become Model Rule 1.5(e) should be considered under what was to become Model Rule 7.2(b). ABA Center for Professional Responsibility, The Legislative History of the Model Rules of Professional Conduct: Their Development in the ABA House of Delegates 39-47, 178-82 (1987); ABA Center for Professional Responsibility, A Legislative History: The Development of ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct 1982-2005 at 77-97, 709-31.

The absence in the legislative history drawing a connection between imperfect fee agreements under Model Rule 1.5(e) and giving anything of value to a person under Model Rule 7.2(b) is an indication that these two ethics rules should not be conflated because each addresses a different ethical issue.

c) None of the authoritative example disciplinary cases and ethics opinions based on the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. 7.2(c) involve dividing fees with or giving anything of value to lawyers, nor do disciplinary cases involving the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) refer to the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

The ABA's Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct provides examples of how states' versions of the Model Rules are interpreted and applied. In discussing current Model Rule 7.2(b) prohibiting compensating others for recommending a lawyer, none of the eight disciplinary cases or the fifteen state advisory ethics opinions that this authoritative reference identifies and discusses involve fee sharing with or giving anything of value to a lawyer. Ellen J. Bennett et al., Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Eighth Edition 604-05 (8th ed. 2015) ("Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct"). This reference also identifies two disciplinary cases as examples of typical disciplinary cases involving state versions of Model Rule 1.5(e), and neither of these fee sharing cases are discussed in the context of a state's equivalent to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). Id. at 96.

The ABA describes that Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct as "the ABA's definitive resource for information about courts, disciplinary bodies, and ethics committees apply the lawyer ethics rules." Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Eighth Edition, AmericanBar.org, https://tinyurl.com/y9tlhx65. The following excerpt contains the description of the disciplinary cases collected to illustrate Model Rule 7.2(b), and in every instance the representative cases selected involve persons who are not lawyers:

> Unless the exceptions of paragraph (b) apply, a lawyer may not pay someone else to recommend his or her services. See People v. Shipp, 793 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1990) (suspending lawyer for paying his inmate client to refer other inmates to him); In re Maniscalco, 564 S.E.2d 186 (Ga. 2002) (payment to operator of lawyer referral business who used nonlawyer "runners" to obtain clients violates rule even if lawyer initially did not know about runners and believe operator was a lawyer and refused to pay percentage of fees after learning truth); Office of Disciplinary Counsel v. Au, 113 P.3d 203 (haw. 2005) (lawyer paid nonlawyer runner 5 percent of fees earned on cases that runner referred); In re Geoff, 837 So.2d 1201 (La. 2003) (lawyer suspended for participating in scheme to employ nonlawyer "runners" to refer personal injury clients); Son v. Margolius, Mallios, Davis, Rider & Tomar, 709 A.2d 112 (Md. 1998) (sufficient evidence for trial whether fee paid to personal injury client's nonlawyer "consultant" who referred case to law firm was a referral fee in violation of the rule; summary judgment reversed); Emil v. Miss. Bar, 690 So.2d 301 (Miss. 1997) (lawyer suspended for using paid investigator to find prospective person injury clients); In re Disciplinary Action against McCray, 755 N.W.2d 835 (N.D. 2008) (lawyer paid marketing firm to tout firm's service as credit repair seminars); Cincinnati Bar Ass'n v. Haas, 699 N.E.2d 919 (Ohio 1998) (lawyer suspended for paying insurance salesperson for referring person injury clients) . . . .

Id. at 604 (emphasis added). Out of these eight disciplinary cases, the authors' descriptions of four of the cases specifically refer to the persons receiving payment as nonlawyers, and in the remaining cases the nonlawyers receiving payment are a client, an investigator, a marketing firm, and an insurance salesperson.

The Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct also summarizes fifteen advisory ethics opinions addressing states' versions of Mass. R. 7.2(c), and these ethics opinion cover a range of topics such as directly giving a thing of value to a nonlawyer for referrals, giving a thing of value indirectly to clients on a pro bono reduced fee bases in exchange for client referrals, and the permissibility of giving nominal gifts for referrals under certain situations. See id. at 604-05. All of these ethics opinions involve some aspect of giving a thing of value to nonlawyers for referrals, and none of these ethics opinions involved fee sharing with lawyers.

In addition to the cases and ethics opinions focusing on state ethics rules that are the equivalent to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c), the Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct provides two examples of disciplinary cases involving the equivalent to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e). Id. at 96. Neither of these two cases involving the violation of a state's ethics rule that is the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) also discuss the state's ethics rule that is equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). See Statewide Grievance Comm. v. Dixon, 772 A.2d 160, 165 (Conn. App. Ct. 2001) (finding Rule 1.5(e) violated when current counsel divided fees with client's former counsel without informing client, without obtaining the client's consent, and over the client's objection); Cleveland Bar Ass'n v. Mishler, 886 N.E.2d 818, 825 (Ohio 2008) (finding no violation of fee sharing rule when lawyer did not bill client for payment made to a lawyer not in the same firm).

d) Leading treatises and texts do not maintain that fee sharing between lawyers pursuant to an imperfect fee agreement under Model Rule 1.5(e), or a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), becomes a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b), or a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

In addition to the legislative history of the Model Rules and the cases and ethics opinions in the Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct, other leading treatises and texts do not maintain that fee sharing between lawyers pursuant to an imperfect fee agreement under Model Rule 1.5(e), or a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), becomes a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b), or a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). In reaching this conclusion, I reviewed the Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers ("Restatement"), The Law of Lawyering, and Lawyer Law, which are generally considered leading treatises and texts concerning the ethical obligations of lawyers. The following discusses each in turn.

The Restatement does not conflate fee sharing among lawyers under circumstances where a fee sharing rule is not strictly followed into giving something of value to a person. The Restatement has a section titled "Fee-Splitting Between Lawyers Not in the Same Firm." American Law Institute, Restatement (Third) The Law Governing Lawyers § 47 (1986-2017). Comments and Reporter's Notes to this section discuss a number of different aspects of fee sharing, but none of the discussion states that fee sharing between lawyers that does not comport with the requirements in the Restatement, or in a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), becomes a violation of a state's version of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). See id., 332-40. The Restatement does not have a direct corresponding section for giving a thing of value to a person for a referral, but a comment to § 10, "Limitations on Nonlawyer Involvement in a Law Firm," states: "The general prohibition against fee-splitting with nonlawyers is often applied to schemes for compensating a nonlawyer for referring clients (e.g., ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 5.4(a), which is directly prohibited by ABA Model Rule 7.2(c) (with exceptions, "a lawyer shall not give a thing of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services"). Id. at § 10 cmt. (d).

The Law of Lawyering discusses fee sharing among lawyers. Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr., et al., The Law of Lawyering § 9.20 (4th ed. 2015). This section discusses fee splitting and the enforceability of referral fee agreements, and the authors note that "Model Rule 1.5(e) now permits fee splitting in virtually all situations, provided the client agrees to the arrangement in writing." Id. at § 9.20, 9-73. They also note that fee splitting can also involve the "forwarding" of cases and that in some instances "whatever portion of the total fee is paid to the first lawyer is nothing more than a referral or 'finder's fee.'" Id. Nothing in the discussion of fee sharing states that fee sharing between lawyers not in the same firm becomes a violation of the prohibition on giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services. The discussion of Model Rule 7.2(b) focuses on advertising and exceptions to the rule against giving something of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services. Id. at § 60.02. It discusses the prohibition on "[u]sing a 'runner' (such as an ambulance driver or a hospital nurse) to drum up business in person" and notes that this would also violate other ethics rules. Id. at § 60.02, 60-6. The Law of Lawyering does not conflate an imperfect fee sharing arrangement under Model Rule 1.5(e) with a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b).

The final text I reviewed is Lawyer Law, which is published by the ABA Center for Professional Responsibility. Thomas D. Morgan, Lawyer Law: Comparing the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct with the ALI Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers (2005) ("Lawyer Law"). This text divides its discussion into fee-splitting among lawyers, id. at 727-32, fee-splitting with nonlawyers, id. at 732-35, and referrals. Id. at 733-38. None of the discussion states that an imperfect fee sharing arrangement under either Model Rule 1.5(e) or a state's version of the rule should be considered a violation of Model Rule 7.2(b) or a state's version of the rule.

e) No case in other possibly relevant jurisdictions has held that a violation of the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) is a violation of the equivalent ethics rule to Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c)

I was also asked to research the ethics rules and cases in Arkansas, New York, and Texas, and I could not find any state or federal case that considered a fee division between law firms based on a flawed or imperfect division of fee arrangement between law firms and a client to be controlled by a state's ethics rule that is the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c). In doing this research, I found an ethics rule that explicitly states that the equivalent of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c) does not apply to lawyers:

> Texas Disciplinary Rules of Professional Conduct 7.03 states, in pertinent part:
>
> Rule 7.03. Prohibited Solicitations and Payments
>
> (b) A lawyer shall not pay, give, or offer to pay or give anything of value to a person not licensed to practice law for soliciting prospective clients for, or referring clients or prospective clients to, any lawyer or firm, except that a lawyer may pay reasonable fees for advertising and public relations services rendered in accordance with this Rule and may pay the usual charges of a lawyer referral service that meets the requirements of Occupational Code Title 5, Subtitle B, Chapter 952 (emphasis added).

This Texas rule makes it explicit that persons licensed to practice law in Texas are excluded under the ethics rule that is the equivalent Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c).

f) The agreement between Labaton and ARTRS satisfied the requirements of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e)

Labaton's engagement letter with ARTRS for the State Street Litigation met the requirements of Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) as it existed at the time of the engagement letter. Although Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) did not require Labaton to identify the referring attorney, the extent to which ARTRS's consent was sufficiently informed requires an understanding of how the client-lawyer relationship between ARTRS and Labaton developed.

Labaton and Chargois & Herron jointly submitted a response to an ARTRS Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") on July 30, 2008. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. If litigation on behalf of ARTRS would occur, Labaton anticipated being lead counsel and Chargois & Herron would serve as local counsel for ARTRS through the Little Rock, Arkansas, office of Chargois & Herron. Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-27:15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

When ARTRS selected Labaton as one of its monitoring counsel in 2008, its Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, stated, in relevant part, that because Labaton and Chargois & Herron

"are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed. . . . Your firm may affiliate that firm [Chargois & Herron] or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis." LBS017456. Eric Belfi from Labaton later explained to Clark that Labaton "would be working with Chargois & Herron" and that Chargois & Herron "were going to be involved in the relationship." Belfi 2d Dep. 117:20-118:10.

At the time that ARTRS chose Labaton as monitoring counsel, the Executive Director of ARTRS was Paul Doane, who knew of the Chargois & Herron law firm and its joint proposal with Labaton. Doane left ARTRS after Labaton had been selected as monitoring counsel, and he was replaced by George Hopkins, who did not know the Chargois & Herron firm. Hopkins 2d Dep. 21:5-10. While Hopkins did not know of the Chargois & Herron firm, in his deposition Hopkins testified that, "I told Eric if I ever want to know about your attorney fees and who all you hired, I'll ask you." Id. at 68:23-69:3. Hopkins also testified that, "I don't feel misled because I made it real clear to them that I didn't want to be the gatekeeper on all this attorney relationship. And I think if they thought I wanted to know, they would have told me because Eric always said if you ever want to see how we do all these fees, just let me know. And I said that's fine." Id. at 73:11-19.

On February 8, 2011, Belfi of Labaton sent ARTRS a final retention letter for litigation involving State Street, and the retention letter contained this clause:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

LBS019948-50; LBS011061.

Mass. R. P. C. 1.5(e), in effect until March 2011, stated, in pertinent part: "A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable." Comment [4A] to Mass. R. P. C. 1.5 further explained:

> Paragraph (e), unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer unless, with a client's written consent, each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation. . . . The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer.

Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) in effect in February 2011,[19] when Labaton and ARTRS finalized their fee agreement, permitted Labaton to share fees with Chargois & Herron for its role in securing ARTRS as a client. Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) also did not require Labaton to disclose how it would divide its fees with Chargois & Herron, and did not expressly require that the division of fees be confirmed in writing. The fee agreement Labaton had with ARTRS permitted Labaton to allocate fees to other lawyers, including as referral fees. The fee agreement did not – and was not specifically required to – identify Chargois & Herron. The omission of Chargois & Herron's name was consistent with previous instructions from Hopkins. Further, in the context of the monitoring counsel role, former counsel Christa Clark, with whose knowledge ARTRS should be charged, was aware of Chargois & Herron, had given written permission for Labaton to affiliate with or use Chargois & Herron as Labaton deemed appropriate, LBS017456, and had been told by Belfi that Labaton would be affiliating with Chargois & Herron.

[19] In December 2010, Mass. R. P. C. 1.5(e) was amended, effective March 15, 2011, to state, in pertinent part: "A division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if the client is notified before or at the time the client enters into the fee agreement for the matter that a division of fees will be made and consents to the joint participation in writing and the total fee is reasonable."

Hopkins stated in a written declaration that he did not desire to be informed of the allocation of fees among counsel, and so informed Belfi. Hopkins Dec. at ¶¶10-12, 14. Although Hopkins stated that he was personally unaware of the Chargois agreement until August or September of 2017, id. ¶ 7, when Hopkins was informed of the details of the fee-sharing agreement between the Customer Class Law Firms and Chargois & Herron in this case, he expressly consented to and ratified the agreement in writing. Id. at ¶¶ 16-17.

Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), which was in effect at the time of the retention letter between Labaton and ARTRS, was discussed in Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699, 706 (Mass. 2005). As discussed previously, Saggese dealt with the enforcement of an oral fee sharing agreement wherein Saggese sought one-third, or a total of $90,931.50 of fees, for referring to the Kelleys a client for whom the Kelleys obtained an attorney's fees award of $309,498. Id. at 702. In Saggese, the client was unaware of the referral fee arrangement between the Kelleys and Saggese, but later consented to it. Id. at 705. The Court stated: "Ratification is not the preferred method to obtain a client's consent to a fee-sharing agreement, but it is adequate." Id. The Court then found "that the fee-sharing agreement was not void as against public policy or unenforceable for failure to comply with the applicable fee-sharing rule prior to the client referral, and the judge did not err in so ruling." Id.

The Court in Saggese then addresses a matter not at issue in the case, which it denominated as "Future fee-sharing agreements." Id. It noted that Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), in effect at that time, "does not speak to when disclosure to the client must be made, who must make the disclosure, or when consent must be given." Id. The Court then declared that Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) would be construed in the future so that the lawyer, preferably the referring lawyer, "is required to disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secures the client's consent in writing." Id. The Court continued that if the referring lawyer does not comply, the lawyer who undertakes the representation "should confirm, before undertaking such representations, that there has been compliance with rule 1.5(e)." Id. In the present matter, Labaton secured the client's consent to fee sharing in writing, including with regard to referral fees, in the engagement letter for the representation. In this way, Labaton complied with how the Court in Saggese stated Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) should be construed.

However, if the Special Master or the Court concludes that the written consent did not constitute perfect compliance with Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e), there is precedent in the United States District Court, District of Massachusetts, considering an "imperfect fee agreement" that does not comply fully with Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e). In Daynard v. Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, P.A., 188 F. Supp.2d 115 (D. Mass 2002), an "oral fee-splitting agreement made in contravention of the rules of professional conduct," id. at 117, was nonetheless held enforceable. Id. at 132.

B. There Was Not an Ethical Duty or Legal Requirement for Labaton to Provide Notice to the Court of Its Fee Sharing Arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the Case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230

For there to be an ethical duty or legal obligation for Labaton to provide notice to the Court of its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron, such a duty would have to originate in one of these: the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("Fed. R. Civ. P."); a local court rule for the United States District Court, District of Massachusetts; a standing order issued by the Honorable Judge Mark L. Wolf applicable to all cases or to all class action cases; a special order issued by the Honorable Judge Mark L. Wolf applicable to the instant case; or clear precedent either from the United States Supreme Court, the First Circuit, or the District of Massachusetts. My research into this matter did not reveal any rule, order, or clear precedent. As will be described in greater detail below, without a legal duty to provide notice to the Court of its fee sharing agreement, Labaton could not have an ethical obligation to do so under Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3 or 8.4(c). The only other basis for finding a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3 or 8.4(c) would be if Labaton knowingly made a misrepresentation to the Court, or engaged in dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation, which the record demonstrates it did not.

1. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure did not require Labaton to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement it had with Chargois & Herron

The two Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that are relevant to this inquiry are Fed. R. Civ. P. R. 23(h) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d). Neither rule requires notice of fee sharing agreements with the court.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) does not, on its own, require the automatic disclosure of fee sharing agreements to the court in class actions. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) addresses the issue of attorney's fees and nontaxable costs in a certified class action, and it provides, in pertinent part: "(1) A claim for an award must be made by motion under Rule 54(d)(2), subject to the provisions of this subdivision (h), at a time the court sets." The rule does not address the issue of fee sharing agreements.

In Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann LLP, 814 F.3d 132 (2nd Cir. 2016), a lawyer had raised "ethical and legal implications of the arrangement" in which the law firm Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP ("BLB & G") paid a lawyer in a different firm without disclosing the payment to the Court in its fee petition. Id. at 137. The Court stated:

> Formerly, the local civil rules of the Southern District of New York required that the fee applicants in derivative and class actions disclose to the court "any fee sharing agreements with anyone." By a rule amendment effective July 11, 2011—three weeks before BLB & G submitted its fee petition—the automatic-disclosure provision was repealed as to class actions. See S.D.N.Y. Local Civil Rule 23.1 (repealed effective July 11, 2011); S.D.N.Y. Local Civil Rule 23.1.1. According to the Joint Committee on Local Rules note, the committee recommended that the > automatic-disclosure rule as applied to class actions be deleted "because it is redundant [with] ... Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)." Federal Rule 23(h), in turn, does not mandate automatic disclosure of all fee-sharing arrangements in class actions.

Id. at 137 n.2. Thus, the Second Circuit recognized that Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) "does not mandate automatic disclosure of all fee-sharing arrangements in class actions." Id.

As a result of the Bernstein decision, the Joint Committee on Local Rules recommended, the Board of Judges of the Eastern District of New York and the Southern District of New York adopted, and the Judicial Council of the Second Circuit approved, Local Rule 23.1, which states, in pertinent part:

> Fees for attorneys or others shall not be paid upon recovery or compromise in a class action or derivative action on behalf of a corporation except as allowed by the Court after a hearing upon such notice as the Court may direct. The notice shall include a statement of the names and addresses of the applicants for such fees and the amounts requested respectively and shall disclose any fee sharing arrangements with anyone.

Local Rules of the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York Local Civil Rule 23.1 (effective Nov. 1, 2017), http://www.nysd.uscourts.gov/rules/rules.-pdf.

The 2016 Committee Note to Local Rule 23.1 states:

> The Committee in 2011 recommended that prior Local Rule 23.1 regarding class actions be deleted as unnecessary. The Second Circuit's recent decision in Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 137 n.2 (2nd Cir. 2016), stated that the prior Local Rule is not redundant with Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) regarding fee sharing arrangements. The Committee therefore recommends reinstating Local Rule 23.1 and combining it with Local rule 23.1.1 to cover both class actions and derivative actions.

Id.

The Bernstein case, the resulting Local Rule 23.1, and the Committee Note regarding Local Rule 23.1, establish two important points concerning the legal obligation to notify a United States District Court of a fee sharing agreement in a class action case. First, the Second Circuit has decided that on its own Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) does not require a law firm to notify a District Court of a fee sharing agreement with others. Second, there is no obligation to notify a District Court of a fee sharing agreement unless there is precedent in a particular Circuit or District Court, a local court rule, a standing order, or a case specific order requiring disclosure of a fee sharing agreement.

Based on my research, I have concluded that the First Circuit has not addressed the issue of whether Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) on its own terms requires disclosure of fee sharing agreements. I have also determined there is no clear precedent in either the First Circuit or the District of Massachusetts that has held that Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) requires disclosure of a fee sharing agreement to the court.

In addition to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h), Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d) also does not, on its own, require the disclosure of all fee sharing agreements to the court in class actions. Rather, Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) states that a motion for attorney fees must "disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made" (emphasis added). Thus, Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B)(iv) specifically states that disclosure of any fee agreement is not required unless ordered by the court.

Based on my research, I have concluded that there is no precedent from the First Circuit Court of Appeals that has held that Fed. R. Civ. P. 54 requires disclosure of any fee agreement without a court order or local rule. I have also determined that there is no precedent in the District of Massachusetts holding that Fed. R. Civ. P. 54 requires disclosure of any fee agreement without a court order or local rule.

2. There was no local court rule or standing order in the District of Massachusetts or the First Circuit that required Labaton to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement it had with Chargois & Herron

I reviewed the website for the District of Massachusetts and searched the Court Website Links, http://www.uscourts.gov/about-federal-courts/federal-courts-public/court-website-links, and I could not find a local rule for the District of Massachusetts or any rule issued by the First Circuit that would have required Labaton to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement it had with Chargois & Herron. I also looked at the website for the Honorable Judge Mark L. Wolf, http://www.mad.uscourts.gov/boston/wolf.htm, and under the heading "Chambers Procedures/Standing Orders/Sample Orders" it stated "N/A", which I understood to mean "not applicable" in that there were no Chambers Procedures, Standing Orders, or Sample Orders accessible from the website.

3. Cases cited for the proposition that Labaton had a legal duty to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement it had with Chargois & Herron are not applicable to the facts in this matter

Upon examination, the underlying facts of the cases cited in the Ethical Report for Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen ("Ethical Report") for the proposition that Labaton had a legal duty to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement it had with Chargois & Herron make the reasoning in the cases inapplicable to the instant matter. There is no clear and controlling federal case law that required Labaton to disclose to the Court its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron.

a) District of Massachusetts cases discussed in the Ethical Report

There are no First Circuit cases and only two District of Massachusetts cases cited in the Ethical Report. Neither of the District of Massachusetts cases holds that there is a disclosure obligation in the District of Massachusetts requiring a law firm to disclose to the Court its fee sharing agreement with others. In addition, the underlying facts of the cases cited are distinct from the instant matter.

i) In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation

In In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation, 89 F.supp.3d 155, 183 (D. Mass. 2018), the Court addressed a number of issues including a request of a non-class counsel firm to consider the effect of a joint venture agreement that the non-class counsel firm maintained covered issues litigated before the court. Id. at 182. The joint venture agreement contained fee-sharing clauses, and non-class counsel sought fees in the class action pursuant to the joint venture agreement and the fee-sharing clauses. Id. The Court noted that the joint venture agreement had already been the subject of a breach of contract action between some of the firms in Alabama state court, "but the claims appear to have been dismissed in light of the fee motions pending in this Court." Id. The Court concluded that the "joint venture agreement and the circumstances under which it was made . . . has no effect on the pending matters in this case. Id. The Court noted that the joint venture agreement was "rendered moot by the consolidation of cases – only some of which were being tried by firms in the joint venture – into this multidistrict class action litigation, and by the subsequent appointment of other, non-joint venture firms to the Class Counsel team." Id. "Simply put, there is no way for this Court to reconcile the agreement with what this case became." Id. at 183. Thus, the joint venture agreement was both "rendered moot" and not applicable to the Volkswagen and Audi warranty extension class action.

After concluding that the joint venture agreement was not applicable to the class action, the Court stated, "even if the joint venture agreement did more neatly fit the circumstances of this litigation, the Court is not inclined to defer to its strictures." Id. The Court then proceeded to state the passage quoted in the Ethical Report about the Court not being "bound blindly to follow such private arrangements." Id.

It is clear from the underlying facts that In re Volkswagen is much different than the instant matter. In re Volkswagen dealt with a fee dispute among class counsel and non-class counsel that was brought to the Court's attention. If all of the counsel involved had believed that the joint venture agreement was applicable and had shared fees pursuant to it, it would not have been brought to the Court's attention. When the Court was asked to decide the applicability of the joint venture agreement, it decided that it was rendered moot and not applicable. At no point in its consideration did the Court announce a rule that in class actions the Court must be notified of fee sharing agreements.

ii) In re Relafen Antitrust Litigation

In re Relafen Antitrust Litigation, 231 F.R.D. 52 (Mass. 2005) involved a nationwide consumer class action, and the Court's decision focused on approval of a proposed settlement. Id. 57. The court did not discuss a joint venture, as in In re Volkswagen, nor any type of fee sharing agreement. The language quoted in the Ethical Report comes in the context of the Court's discussion of its fairness determination of the settlement. Id. at 71. Nothing in the language quoted and at no place in this decision does the Court announce a rule that in class actions the Court must be notified of fee sharing agreements.

b) Other cases discussed in the Ethical Report

The Ethical Report also quotes from and discusses cases from the Second Circuit, Third Circuit, Ninth Circuit, and the United States District Court, Southern District of New York. None of these cases cited to Supreme Court authority requiring notice to the Court of fee sharing agreements, and none of these cases announce a rule that would require notice of fee sharing agreements to the Court in class actions in the District of Massachusetts. In addition, the underlying facts of the cases cited are distinct from the instant matter.

i) In re "Agent Orange" Product Liability Litigation

In re "Agent Orange" Product Liability Litigation, 818 F.2d 216 (2d Cir. 1987), focuses on the District Court's approval of a fee sharing agreement entered into by a nine-member Plaintiffs' Management Committee ("PMC"). Id. at 217. Under the agreement, each PMC member who contributed funds for general litigation expenses would receive a "three-fold return on his investment prior to the distribution of other fees awarded to individual PMC members by the district court." Id. A non-investing member challenged the validity of the agreement on two bases: the ethics prohibition against a lawyer acquiring an interest in an action, and as an impermissible fee sharing agreement. Id.

The District Court was not advised of the fee sharing agreement until four months after a settlement was reached, and "the district court approved the agreement, holding that 'there is no reason to believe that the existence of the PMC's fee-sharing agreement had any appreciable untoward effect on the decision to settle.'" Id. at 218. The Second Circuit Court reversed, finding that the agreement "violates established principles governing awards of attorneys' fees in equitable fund class actions and creates a strong possibility of a conflict of interest between class counsel and those they were charged to represent." Id.

The Court noted that the District Court had waived a local rule "requiring notice to the class of all fee applications and fee sharing agreements prior to the hearing on such fee petitions." Id. at 219. The Court also noted that the District Court was unaware of the PMC agreement when it waived the local rule. Id.

In reviewing the agreement and the dispute among the counsel over fees, the Court stated that "tying the fee to be received by individual PMC members to the amounts advanced for expenses, [the agreement] completely distorted the lodestar approach to fee awards." Id. at 222.

The Court continued: "The distortion was so substantial as to increase the fees awarded to one investor by over twelve times that which the district judge had determined to be just and reasonable, and, in a second case, to decrease the otherwise just and reasonable compensation of a non-investor by nearly two-thirds." Id. at 223.

The excerpt from In re "Agent Orange" quoted in the Ethical Report comes directly after this reasoning by the Second Circuit. Thus, the language excerpted does not deal with a fee sharing agreement like the one between Labaton and Chargois & Herron, but rather an agreement for a return on advancing litigation expenses that distorted the fee award by the District Court.

In re "Agent Orange" informs, and is consistent with, my opinion that without a standing order, specific order, inquiry from the court, local court rule, or precedent in a Circuit, there is no obligation to disclose fee sharing agreements with a court.

ii) In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation

In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation, 396 F.3d 294, 307 (3rd Cir. 2005) is an appeal of a District Court's decision on the reasonableness of attorney fees following a fairness hearing and the process used in calculating the fees. Id. at 296. A class member, Walter Kaufman, filed the appeal objecting to the fees awarded and to the fact that the District Court did not appoint a guardian or fee award expert to protect the interests of the class members. Id. at 299. The Third Circuit Court found that the District Court had erred in one respect, which was failing to use the blended hourly rates of all of the attorneys working on the case in approving a lodestar cross-check multiplier of 4.07, reflecting the average hourly billing rate of the senior-most partners at lead co-counsel firms. Id. at 306.

The final point the Court addressed was the issue of the District Court failing to appoint a guardian or fee award expert to protect the interests of the class members. Id. at 307-08. The excerpt of this case quoted in the Ethical Report is from the Court's discussion of this issue and the obligation of the District Court Judge to protect the class's interests. Id. at 307. On this point, the Court decided that the District Court Judge did not abuse his discretion in deciding the fee award without appointing a guardian or fee award expert. Id. at 308.

Nothing in In re Rite Aid Corp. dealt with a client agreement that permitted fee sharing or notice to the court of a fee sharing agreement. The holding in In re Rite Aid Corp. does not announce a rule or create precedent that would have required Labaton to disclose its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the Court.

iii) In re FPI/Agretech Securities Litigation

In re FPI/Agretech Securities Litigation, 105 F.3d 469 (9th Cir. 1997) involves an attorneys' fee dispute. The dispute arose after an attorney, Jamie Chuck, filed an application for allocation of fees from an aggregate attorneys' fee award. Id. at 472. Another law firm, Lieff Cabraser & Heimann ("LCH") contested Chuck's right to a portion of the fee. Id. At a hearing on the matter, LCH requested an opportunity for the attorneys to work out a compromise, and the District Court granted that request. Id. When presented with the a compromise agreement on how to divide the fees from the aggregate attorneys' fee award, the District Court Judge rejected it and denied Chuck any portion of the fees. Id.

The excerpted passage quoted in the Ethical Report comes from the Ninth Circuit Court's explanation why the District Court Judge and the Court are not required to approve an agreement when "the parties merely submitted orally a fee allocation proposal, arrived at, figuratively speaking, 'on the courthouse steps'." Id. at 474. Thus, the agreement in In re FPI/Agretech is much different than the fee sharing agreement in the instant matter. The agreement in In re FPI/Agretech did not have its origin in an agreement with a client that permitted fee sharing. The issue before the In re FPI/Agretech Court was a fee dispute among lawyers.

Nothing in In re FPI/Agretech dealt with a client agreement that permitted fee sharing or notice to the court of a fee sharing agreement. The holding in In re FPI/Agretech does not announce a rule or create precedent that would have required Labaton to disclose its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the Court.

iv) Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp.

Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp., 88 F.R.D. 11 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) involved an application for attorney fees by lead counsel ("Wolf Popper") and two other firms ("Pomerantz" and "Kaufman"), and lead counsel's opposition to attorney fees filed by attorneys representing other plaintiffs. Id. at 11. In the course of considering fee applications, the Court was advised that there were "undisclosed fee-splitting agreements between legal counsel and certain other plaintiffs' counsel [the Pomerantz and Kaufman firms] on whose behalf lead counsel applies for fees," and undisclosed agreements to pay additional lawyers attorney fees for furnishing clients to lead counsel. Id. at 16-17. Among these undisclosed agreements was the one between Wolf Popper and Pomerantz, in which the Court found "the fee agreement was directly related to Pomerantz' support of Wolf Popper's application to be lead counsel." Id. at 19. This agreement had not be disclosed to the trial court judge at the time of consolidation of different related lawsuits. Id. Similarly, the Court found that agreement between Wolf Popper and Kaufman "was directly related to Wolf Popper's application to be lead counsel," which Kaufman supported. Id. at 20.

Next, the Court addressed "forwarding fee agreements with two other attorneys." Id. These agreements were made by Wolf Popper with two other attorneys who essentially provided Wolf Popper with clients.

From reading the case, it is clear that Court was upset with the various arrangements Wolf Popper entered into to obtain support for its application to be lead counsel. Id. 19-20. Indeed, this is the first issue the Court addressed after the passage of the opinion excerpted in the Ethical Report. The Court also disapproved of the agreements Wolf Popper made with two other lawyers who provided clients to Wolf Popper.

The underlying facts and the types of agreements in Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp. are much different than the agreement Labaton had with ARTRS that expressly stated that Labaton could allocate fees to other counsel, including referral fees. The circumstances of Lewis v. Teleprompter are also distinct in that the Court was called upon to resolve a dispute among attorneys before approving attorney fee applications.

Nothing Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp. involved a client agreement that permitted fee sharing or notice to the court of such a fee sharing agreement. The holding in Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp. does not announce a rule or create precedent that would have required Labaton to disclose its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the Court.

4. Neither Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) nor Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c) required Labaton to disclose to the Court its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron

At all times relevant to this matter, Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) stated, in pertinent parts: "A lawyer shall not knowingly: (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer; (2) [omitted]; or (3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, except as provided in Rule 3.3(e). . . ." In addition, Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c) stated: "It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." As will be discussed more fully below, neither Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) nor 8.4(c) required Labaton to disclose to the Court its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron.

For there to be an ethical duty for Labaton to disclose to the Court its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron under Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) or 8.4(c), the ethical duty would have to be based on Labaton knowingly engaging in impermissible conduct. As described previously in Part IV.B. of this Ethics Report, I could not find any legal obligation for Labaton to disclose its fee sharing agreement to the Court either based on the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a local court rule, order of the Court, inquiry from the Court, or controlling precedent in the First Circuit or the District of Massachusetts.

Without such legal obligation to notify the Court of its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron, Labaton was not on express or constructive notice that it had an obligation to do so. Even if there had been controlling precedent, a local court rule, or arguably some other constructive notice to Labaton, neither Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) nor 8.4(c) would be violated unless there was actual notice to Labaton, or sufficient facts and circumstances from which to infer Labaton's knowledge of the precedent, local court rule, or other requirement to disclose to the Court the fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron.

Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.0 addresses terminology in the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, and it states, in pertinent part: "'Knowingly,' 'known,' or 'knows' denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances.'" Thus, to violate Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) Labaton would have had to have actual knowledge of both an obligation to notify the Court of its fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron, and it would have had to knowingly make false statements or offer false evidence.

Comment [3] to Mass R. Prof. C. 3.3 states: "There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation." For an omission to be the equivalent of a misrepresentation, the omission has to occur where there is a duty to speak. This opinion is supported by my research into Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a), the ABA Model Rule 3.3(a), state ethics rules that correspond to Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a), review of disciplinary cases addressing this issue, my knowledge, skill, and experience.

Without a legal obligation to disclose the fee sharing agreement to the Court, the next inquiry is whether Labaton engaged in dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or made a misrepresentation to the Court. Based on the factual assumptions and my review of certain documents and materials cited in the factual assumptions, I find no basis to conclude that Labaton engaged in dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentations to the Court.

Mass. R. Prof. 8.4(c)'s prescription against a lawyer engaging "in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation" involves specific intent on the part of a lawyer to violate this ethics rule by engaging in fraud or deceit. While dishonesty and misrepresentation may not require specific intent, dishonesty and misrepresentation require scienter of at least knowingly as required in Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a), or recklessness. See, e.g., In re Discipline of an Attorney, 884 N.E.2d 450, 462 (2008) (holding that the "assertion of a lien on a client's potential recovery when the lawyer knows he has no right to do so plainly constitutes misrepresentation and is dishonest" and violates Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c)); In re Surrick, 338 F.3d 224, 234 (3d Cir. 2003) (stating that "misrepresentation" – one of the types of misconduct prohibited by RPC 8.4(c) – included statements made with reckless disregard for the truth");

In re Iowa Supreme Court Att'y Discipline Bd. v. Netti, 797 N.W.2d 591, 605 (Iowa 2011) (holding that "some level of scienter that is greater than negligence to find a violation of rule Rule 32: 8.4(c)"); In re Skagen, 149 P.3d 1171 (Or. 2006) ("Although proving that a lawyer acted dishonestly does not require evidence that the lawyer intended to deceive, it does require a mental state of knowledge – that is, that the accused lawyer know that his conduct was culpable in some respect.").

In addition, Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.0(e) states: "'Fraud' or 'fraudulent' denotes conduct that is fraudulent under substantive or procedural law and has a purpose to deceive." Comment [1] to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.0 further amplifies this definition and further explains, in pertinent part: "When used in these Rules, the terms 'fraud' or 'fraudulent' refer to conduct that is characterized as such under the substantive or procedural law and has a purpose to deceive. This does not include merely negligent misrepresentation or negligent failure to apprise another of relevant information" (emphasis added).

If the Court decided that the fee sharing agreement between Labaton and Chargois & Herron was relevant information that the Court wanted before approving the fee award to class counsel, negligence on Labaton's part is not sufficient to find a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c). There would have to be at least at least a knowing or reckless misrepresentation to the Court to constitute a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c). A few Admonition cases illustrate this.

Admonition No. 17.07 (2017), https://bbopublic.blob.core.windows.net/web/f/-admon2017.pdf, involved a respondent representing a client in a personal injury matter, and the respondent signed the client's signature on a formal release of claim rather than have the client sign the release. The Admonition held: "By furnishing the insurance company with a release he knew had not been signed by the client, the respondent violated Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c). Id.

Admonition No. 16-11 (2016), https://bbopublic.blob.core.windows.net/web/f/-admon2016.pdf, involved a respondent who notarized the signature of the co-purchaser of an investment property without seeing the co-purchaser sign the documents. The Admonition held: "By notarizing the signature of a person who was not present before him, the respondent violated Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c)." Id.

Admonition No. 15-26 (2015), https://bbopublic.blob.core.windows.net/web/f/-admon2015.pdf, dealt with a respondent representing a wife in a divorce in which she was to remain in the marital home while the husband made the mortgage payments. The husband subsequently lost his job, and the respondent's client informed respondent that she feared that her husband would not make payments and she wanted to sell the house. Id. The respondent filed a motion with the probate court for permission to sell the house, and stated in the motion, "on information and belief, the mortgage currently is not being paid by [the husband] and the parties are as risk of losing their equity in the martial home." Id. This was not true because the husband had been current in the mortgage payments, and respondent's client had not told respondent that her husband was behind in the mortgage payments. Id. The Admonition held: "By making an assertion to the court without adequate basis in fact to do so, the respondent engaged in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentations, in violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c); and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice, in violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(d)." Id.

The facts and reasoning of the cases in the Ethical Report additionally shows that in each instance a lawyer either made a misrepresentation or failed to speak up under circumstances where there was a clear obligation to do so. A review of those cases is useful to seeing that Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3 and 8.4(c) are not applicable in this matter.

a) In re O'Toole

In re O'Toole, 2015 WL 90309021 (Mass. St. Bar Disp. Bd. 2015) is a disciplinary matter involving respondent and statements he made that the Disciplinary Board determined were "half truths" and "clearly meant to mislead." Id. at *5. Respondent's client was ordered to pay plaintiffs $192,500, and execution issued for approximately $211,000, including interest. Id. at *1. Respondent's client eventually wired a total of $192,000 to respondent, who informed the plaintiffs' attorney that he had that amount available for payment on July 8, 2008. Id. at *2. Plaintiffs' lawyer replied that the wire transfer to the plaintiffs could be made, but that the total owed was approximately $211,000. Id. Respondent did not wire any funds to plaintiffs or their counsel, but, in mid-July, transferred approximately $35,000 back to the client in order for the client to make his payroll. Id. In early August, the client then instructed to return the balance of the funds, which respondent did. Id.

Later in August, the plaintiffs' lawyer wrote to respondent that the plaintiffs planned to begin execution proceedings. Id. The respondent then made a series of statements that the Disciplinary Board said were not "the failure fully to disclose," but rather "the respondent engaged in affirmative misrepresentations." Id. *5. The Disciplinary Board continued: "It matters little that he crafted those misrepresentations in formulations that, while facially ambiguous, could be expected to deceive, and did so." Id.

To illustrate the type of affirmative misrepresentations the respondent made, consider the first statement that the Disciplinary Board found to be misleading. The first affirmative misrepresentation was a voice mail respondent left for the plaintiffs' attorney in response to the plaintiffs' lawyer writing to respondent that the plaintiffs planned to begin execution proceedings. Id at *2. In the voice mail, the respondent stated that "the money . . . is available to the extent that it was available previously." Id. at *2. The Disciplinary Board stated: "In theory, this statement could have meant that the client was still willing to pay the plaintiffs $192,500. In context, however, it would have been understood to mean that that sum was still in the respondent's possession, available to be paid. By this point, however, the respondent knew that the client was unlikely to be capable of satisfying the judgment against him." Id.

The other misrepresentations are similar, and all are affirmative misrepresentations. In re O'Toole is not a case about omissions, but one about deliberate misrepresentations.

b) In the Matter of Attorney

In the Matter of Attorney, 2007 WL 4284758 (Mass. St. Bar Disp. Bd. 2007) the Disciplinary Board found a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c) when respondent sent a letter that the Disciplinary Board found, under the circumstances, "was deliberately misleading." Id. at *4. The letter was calculated to be misleading in several respects because it set out facts and responded to concerns of the opposing party in a way that "deliberately misleads the reader." Id.

It is clear from the facts of this case, and analysis of the Disciplinary Board, that this case did not deal with an omission but rather a deliberate plan to mislead that was obvious given the wording of the letter and the circumstances under which it was written. In the Matter of Attorney is not a case about omissions, but one about deliberate misrepresentations.

c) Comparing Bronston v. United States with United States v. DeZarn and statements and submissions of class counsel

In Bronston v. United States, 409 U.S. 353 (1973), the Supreme Court reversed a perjury conviction because the defendant had given a literally true but unresponsive answer. Id. at 361-62. United States DeZarn, 157 F.3d 1042 (6th Cir. 1998), is distinguished from Bronston because the defendant, DeZarn, gave "unequivocal and directly and fully responsive answers to questions asked," and in context there was "more than ample context and evidence to test the meaning and context." Id. at 1051. Unlike the literally true unresponsive answer in Bronston, in DeZarn the defendant gave directly responsive answers under circumstances where a finder of fact could conclude that they were calculated to be misleading and false. Id.

The Ethical Report cites to these cases in the context of discussing in-court statements and submissions to the Court by class counsel concerning "the identities of the law firms who would share in those fees." Ethical Report at 72. The Ethical Report then asserts: "The Court could assume that the lawyers who were going to participate in the fee it was asked to award were the lawyers who appeared before it because no other lawyer was identified." Id. Assuming arguendo that the Court did in fact have that assumption, it is my opinion that the Court's assumption alone is not enough to serve as the basis for a violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) or 8.4(c) unless it can be shown that the Labaton knew that this was the Court's assumption. That is, unless the Court's assumption was communicated to class counsel, class counsel could not know what the Court was assuming.

In addition, I believe that assertion in the Ethical Report that the "Court could assume that the lawyers who were going to participate in the fee . . . were the lawyers who appeared before it" is speculative and overbroad for at least two reasons.

First, as discussed in Part IV.B of this Ethics Report, some judges and some District Courts have realized that in order to know to whether a fee award will be shared with a lawyer or law firm not in a fee application, it is necessary to have a local court rule, a standing order, a case specific order, or the Court has to inquire of class counsel about fee sharing agreements. If this was not the case, then either Rule Civ. P. R. 23(h) or 54(d) or controlling authority for the District of Massachusetts would make it clear that all fee sharing agreements must be disclosed to the Court.

Second, it is well-understood that while class action attorney fees are awarded to law firms on the basis of fee applications of the lawyers in the individual law firms working on the class action, how each law firm divides the fees among the lawyers in the firm is not necessarily based on the fee petition. Indeed, an originating lawyer in a law firm may not even be listed in a fee petition but may receive a very large share of the fee awarded to the firm. Or, a partnership agreement in a law firm may reallocate a portion of fees awarded in a class action to lawyers in the firm who may have not worked on the class action. I believe that a judge would know that, in awarding a fee to a law firm, exactly how the fee is divided, and to whom the fee will be divided, is not necessarily in a fee petition or stated to the court.

C. There Was Not an Ethical Duty or Legal Requirement for Labaton to Provide Notice to the Class of Its Fee Sharing Arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the Case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230

There was no ethical or legal requirement for Labaton to provide notice of the fee sharing agreement between Labaton and Chargois & Herron to the class members in the above-stated case. Disclosure to class members flows both from class counsel's disclosure obligations to the Court and from class counsel's obligations to class members. Without a disclosure obligation to the Court and without a clear obligation to disclose how fees would be divided to the class, there was no obligation for Labaton to disclose to the fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron to the class members.

Nothing in Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d) or 23(h) states that class counsel has an obligation to give notice of fee sharing agreements to class members. In addition, the cases cited previously in Part IV.B. of this Ethics Report do not discuss the issue of notice to class members of the fee sharing, fee-splitting, or even the return on investment agreements they reviewed. I reviewed additional cases, law review articles, and other materials,[20] and none of the cases or materials I reviewed stated that there was a legal or ethical duty for class counsel to notify class members of fee sharing agreements.

In reaching my opinion, I also paid particular attention to the treatise, Newberg on Class Actions. William B Rubenstein, Newberg on Class Actions (5th ed. (2016) (West online version, Dec. 2017 Update) ("Newberg"). Some sections in Newberg are helpful in understanding the basis for my opinion.

Section 8:25 of Newberg states that "Rule 23(h)(1) requires that a court considering a motion for reasonable attorney's fees . . . direct notice to class members 'in a reasonable manner.' Yet other than requiring that the notice be made 'in a reasonable manner,' Rule 23 does not dictate any specific content that the notice must contain." Id. at § 8:25. Newberg continues that class members "must be given sufficient information" to be able to object to the fee motion. Id. Newberg states that this requires that this information must conform to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h), and Newberg explains:

> Rule 23(h) requires that the fee petition be made by motion according to Rule 54(d), and Rule 54, in turn requires that the motion: (ii) specify the judgment and statute, rule, or other grounds entitling the movant to the award; (iii) state the amount sought or provide a fair estimate of it; and (iv) disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made.

Id. (emphasis added). Newberg makes it clear that notice to the class of "any agreement about fees" starts with an order from the court requiring disclosure in the fee petition.

[20] See, e.g, Barbara J. Rothstein & Thomas E. Willging, Managing Class Action Litigation: A Pocket Guide for Judges, FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER (3rd ed. 2010), https://www.fjc.gov/sites/default/files/-2012/ClassGd3.pdf (omitting reference to fee sharing agreements); Written Submission of Judge Arlin Adams to Third Circuit Task Force on Appointment of Counsel in Class Action Lawsuits (Mar. 14, 2001), http://www.ca3.uscourts.gov/sites/ca3/-files/adams1.pdf (discussing class counsel issues and omitting reference to fee sharing).

Another section of the Newberg states "Rule 54(d)(2)'s motion requirement—concerning disclosure of fee agreements—is discretionary with the court. Id. at § 15:11. In the following section, Newberg opines that "courts should regularly order disclosure" of fee agreements. Id. at § 15:12.

Absent a legal duty to disclose to class members the fee sharing agreement with Chargois & Herron, Labaton did not have an ethical duty to do so.

D. Courts and Ethics Authorities Do Not Impose Sanctions on or Discipline a Lawyer or Law Firm When a Legal or Ethical Duty Is Unclear

Courts and ethics authorities do not impose sanctions on or discipline a lawyer or law firm when a legal or ethical duty is unclear. When a legal or ethical duty is unclear, courts and disciplinary authorities follow basic principles of fairness and due process and do not impose sanctions or punishment.

Mass. R. Prof. C. Scope [5] states, in pertinent part:

> The Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer's conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act on uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. Moreover, the Rules presuppose that whether or not discipline should be imposed for a violation, and the severity of a sanction, depend on all the circumstances, including the willfulness and seriousness of the violation, extenuating factors, and whether there have been previous violations.

As this passage suggests, courts and ethics authorities must take into consideration "all of the circumstances, including willfulness," and willfulness cannot be present when a legal or ethical duty is unclear.

In In re Crossen, 800 N.E.2d 352, 379 (Mass. 2008), the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts stated: "Due process requires fair notice of the proscribed conduct, meaning that attorneys may not be subject to rules that are so broad that they implicate concerns about 'potential random application or unclear meaning,' i.e., rules that are unconstitutionally vague." Id. at 379 (citing Matter of Discipline of an Attorney, 815 N.E.2d 1072 (Mass. 2004)). If a legal or ethical obligation is not clear, sanctions or discipline based on such an unclear obligation would violate the principle announced in Crossen and other Massachusetts disciplinary cases.

Section 3.28 the Rules of the Board of Bar Overseers for Massachusetts also states that in disciplinary proceedings there is "the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence." Index to the Rules of the Board of Bar Overseers Section 3.28 (effective 9/1/17), Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers, https://www.massbbo.org/Rules; see also Matter of Hocika, 809 N.E.2d 1013, 1015-16 (2004) (finding "substantial evidence" to support hearing officer's findings of ethics violations). When a legal or ethical duty is unclear, there cannot be a "preponderance" or "substantial" evidence of the scienter required for the violation of the legal or ethical duty. Otherwise, courts or disciplinary authorities would be randomly imposing sanctions on or disciplining lawyers and law firms, which would not only lack fairness but would undermine public confidence in the judicial system and bar disciplinary authorities.

Finally, the Annotated Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions states: "It is a well-established principle that the punishment of lawyers is not the purpose of lawyer disciplinary sanctions." ABA Center for Professional Responsibility, Annotated Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions Standard 1.1, at 11 (2015). Rather, the purpose of attorney discipline is to protect the public and to deter other attorneys from engaging in the same prohibited conduct. See, e.g., Matter of Concemi, 662 N.E.2d 1030, 1033 (1994) ("We must consider what measure of discipline is necessary to protect the public and deter other attorneys from the same behavior."); In re Balliro, 899 N.E.2d 794, (1994) (stating that in determining discipline protection of the public and deterrence of other lawyers is the aim) (quoting Matter of Concemi, 662 N.E.2d 1030, 1033 (1994).

E. Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a)'s Prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" Does Not Apply to the Mass. R. Prof. 1.5(e) "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm"

Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5 has to be construed in its entirety, and it is clear that Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" does not apply to each lawyer's share of a fee pursuant to a division of fee under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) because (e) requires that "the total fee is reasonable." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a)'s purpose is to ensure that the client is protected from being charged illegal or clearly excessive attorney fees or unreasonable expenses. When it comes to the division of fee, the same client protection purpose is found in the Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) requirement that "the total fee is reasonable."

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has recognized that client protection is the rationale for Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e). In Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699 (Mass. 2005), the Court noted that the trial judge enforced the oral fee sharing agreement Saggese had with the Kelleys even if Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) had been violated "because the rule was intended to protect the client from excessive fees, and here the client was not harmed because the referral fees came directly out of the Kelleys' hourly rate, which had not been adjusted upward as a result of the referral." Id. at. 703. In discussing whether the older equivalent to Massachusetts Disciplinary Rule of Mass. R Prof. C. 1.5(e) was controlling, the Court stated: "The rule, and it is immaterial which version applies, was intended to protect clients from unreasonable fees." Id. at 704.

Applying Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) to a lawyer's share in a division of fee under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) is also contrary to Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct's approval of a pure forwarding or referral fee. Comment [7A], previously Comment [4A] in February 2011,[21] to Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5, states, in pertinent part: "Unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), Paragraph (e) does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or require the lawyer to assume joint responsibility for the representation in order to be entitled to a share of the fee." The rule and its comment makes it clear that a lawyer's share of a division of fee is permissible as long as the total fee is reasonable.

In addition to relying on my knowledge, skill, experience, and training, in reaching this opinion, I conducted research into the following resources: Massachusetts state court cases; advisory ethics opinions of the Committee on Professional Ethics for Massachusetts Bar Association; advisory ethics opinions of the Boston Bar Association Ethics Committee; articles and reports of the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers;[22] and all of the available non-public discipline matters called Admonitions by the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers.[23] I could not locate a single case, advisory ethics opinion, or any authority for the proposition that a lawyer's share of a fee in a division of fee under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) must not be clearly excessive. I also performed additional research into this issue, and none of the sources I reviewed support the view that each lawyer's share of a fee in a division of fee under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) must not be clearly excessive.

[21] Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5, cmt. [4A] in effect in February 2011 is worded slightly differently, and it provided: "Paragraph (e), unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer unless, with a client's written consent, each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation."

[22] See supra note 14 for a description of the articles and reports I reviewed."

V. CONCLUSION

As discussed in greater detail above, I have concluded to a reasonable degree of professional certainty that:

- A Flawed or Imperfect Division of Fee Arrangement Between Law Firms and a Client Under Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) and a Resulting Fee Division Between the Law Firms Should Not Be Considered a Violation of Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(c).

- There Was Not an Ethical Duty or Legal Requirement for Labaton to Provide Notice to the Court of Its Fee Sharing Arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the Case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230.

- There Was Not an Ethical Duty or Legal Requirement for Labaton to Provide Notice to the Class Members of Its Fee Sharing Arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the Case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230.

- Courts and Ethics Authorities Do Not Impose Sanctions on or Discipline a Lawyer or Law Firm When a Legal or Ethical Duty Is Unclear.

- Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) Prohibition on a "clearly excessive fee" Does Not Apply to the Mass. R. Prof. 1.5(e) "division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm."

These are my independent opinions formed on my own and without the assistance of any person. These opinions are based upon my knowledge, skill, experience, training, and education, and informed by the facts assumed, materials I reviewed, and research I performed. I reserve the right to expand upon or modify the opinions in this report if presented with additional facts or materials, or if I conduct supplemental research after the submission of this report.

Rule 7.2. Advertising

(a) Subject to the requirements of Rule 7.1, a lawyer may advertise services through public media, such as a telephone directory, legal directory including an electronic or computer-accessed directory, newspaper or other periodical, outdoor advertising, radio or television, or through written, electronic, computer-accessed or similar types of communication not involving solicitation prohibited in Rule 7.3.

(b) A copy or recording of an advertisement or written communication of services offered for a fee shall be kept for two years after its last dissemination along with a record of when and where it was used.

(c) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that a lawyer may:

(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;

(2) pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit lawyer referral service or legal service organization;

(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17;

(4) pay referral fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e); and

(5) share a statutory fee award or court-approved settlement in lieu thereof with a qualified legal assistance organization in accordance with Rule 5.4(a)(4).

(d) Any communication made pursuant to this rule shall include the name of the lawyer, group of lawyers, or firm responsible for its content.

COMMENT

2006 Main Volume

[1] To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising.
[2] [Reserved]
[3] Questions of effectiveness and taste in advertising are matters of speculation and subjective judgment. Television and other electronic media, including computer-accessed communications, are now among the most powerful media for getting information to the public. Prohibiting such advertising, therefore, would impede the flow of information about legal services to many sectors of the public. Limiting the information that may be advertised has a similar effect and assumes that the bar can accurately forecast the kind of information that the public would regard as relevant.

[3A] The advertising and solicitation rules can generally be applied to computer-accessed or other similar types of communications by analogizing the communication to its hard-copy form. Thus, because it is not a communication directed to a specific recipient, a web site or home page would generally be considered advertising subject to this rule, rather than solicitation subject to Rule 7.3. For example, when a targeted e-mail solicitation of a person known to be in need of legal services contains a hot-link to a home page, the e-mail message is subject to Rule 7.3 but the home page itself need not be because the recipient must make an affirmative decision to go to the sender's home page. Depending upon the circumstances, posting of comments to a newsgroup, bulletin board or chat group may constitute targeted or direct contact with prospective clients known to be in need of legal services and may therefore be subject to Rule 7.3. Depending upon the topic or purpose of the newsgroup, bulletin board, or chat group, the posting might also constitute an association of the lawyer or law firm's name with a particular service, field, or area of law amounting to a claim of specialization under Rule 7.4 and would therefore be subject to the restrictions of that rule. In addition, if the lawyer or law firm uses an interactive forum such as a chat group to solicit for a fee professional employment that the prospective client has not requested, this conduct may constitute prohibited personal solicitation under Rule 7.3(d).

[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.

Record of Advertising

[5] Paragraph (b) requires that a record of the content and use of advertising be kept in order to facilitate enforcement of this Rule. It does not require that advertising be subject to review prior to dissemination. Such a requirement would be burdensome and expensive relative to its possible benefits, and may be of doubtful constitutionality.

Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer

[6] A lawyer is allowed to pay for advertising permitted by this Rule and for the purchase of a law practice in accordance with the provisions of Rule 1.17, but otherwise is not permitted to pay another person for channeling professional work. However, a legal aid agency or prepaid legal services plan may pay to advertise legal services provided under its auspices. Likewise, a lawyer may participate in not-for-profit lawyer referral programs and pay the usual fees charged by such programs. Paragraph (c) does not prohibit paying regular compensation to an assistant, such as a secretary, to prepare communications permitted by this Rule. Paragraph (c) also excepts from its prohibition the referral fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e).

Corresponding ABA Model Rule. Substantially similar to Model Rule 7.2, except minor differences in (a) and (b), subclauses (4) and (5) were added to paragraph (c), and paragraph (d) was modified.

Currentness

(a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, a lawyer may advertise services through written, recorded or electronic communication, including public media.

(b) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that a lawyer may:

(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;

(2) pay the usual charges of a legal service plan, not-for-profit lawyer referral service, or qualified legal assistance organization;

(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17;

(4) refer clients to another lawyer or a nonlawyer professional pursuant to an agreement not otherwise prohibited under these Rules that provides for the other person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer, if

(i) the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive, and

(ii) the client is informed of the existence and nature of the agreement; and

(5) pay fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e) or Rule 5.4(a)(4).

(c) Any communication made pursuant to this Rule shall include the name of the lawyer, group of lawyers, or firm responsible for its content.

COMMENT

[1] To assist the public in learning about and obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising.

[2] [Reserved]

[3] [Reserved]

[3A] The advertising and solicitation rules can generally be applied to computer-accessed or other similar types of communications by analogizing the communication to its hard-copy form. Thus, because it is not a communication directed to a specific recipient, a website or home page would generally be considered advertising subject to this Rule, rather than solicitation subject to Rule 7.3. For the distinction between advertising governed by this Rule and solicitations governed by Rule 7.3, see Comment 1 to Rule 7.3.

[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.

Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer

[5] Except as permitted under paragraphs (b)(1)-(b)(5), lawyers are not permitted to pay others for recommending the lawyer's services or for channeling professional work in a manner that violates Rule 7.3. A communication contains a recommendation if it endorses or vouches for a lawyer's credentials, abilities, competence, character, or other professional qualities. Paragraph (b)(1), however, allows a lawyer to pay for advertising and communications permitted by this Rule, including the costs of print directory listings, on-line directory listings, newspaper ads, television and radio airtime, domain-name registrations, sponsorship fees, banner ads, Internet-based advertisements, and group advertising. A lawyer may compensate employees, agents and vendors who are engaged to provide marketing or client development services, such as publicists, public-relations personnel, business-development staff and website designers. See also Rule 5.3 (duties of lawyers and law firms with respect to the conduct of nonlawyers; Rule 8.4(a) (duty to avoid violating the Rules through the acts of another).

[6] A lawyer may pay the usual charges of a legal service plan, not-for-profit lawyer referral service, or qualified legal assistance organization. A legal service plan is a prepaid or group legal service plan or a similar delivery system that assists people who seek to secure legal representation. A lawyer referral service is a consumer-oriented organization that provides unbiased referrals to lawyers with appropriate experience in the subject matter of the representation and affords other client protections, such as complaint procedures or malpractice insurance requirements. A qualified legal assistance organization is defined by Rule 1.0(j).

[7] A lawyer who accepts assignments or referrals from a legal service plan or referrals from a lawyer referral service must act reasonably to assure that the activities of the plan or service are compatible with the lawyer's professional obligations. See Rules 5.3 and 8.4(a). Legal service plans and lawyer referral services may communicate with the public, but such communication must be in conformity with these Rules. Thus, advertising must not be false or misleading, as would be the case if the communications of a group advertising program or a group legal services plan would mislead the public to think that it was a lawyer referral service sponsored by a state agency or bar association. Nor could the lawyer allow in-person, telephonic, or real-time contacts that would violate Rule 7.3.

[8] A lawyer also may agree to refer clients to another lawyer or a non-lawyer professional, in return for the undertaking of that person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer. Such reciprocal referral arrangements must not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment as to making referrals or as to providing substantive legal services. See Rules 2.1 and 5.4(c). Except as provided in Rule 1.5(e), a lawyer who receives referrals from a lawyer or nonlawyer professional must not pay anything for the referral, but the lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) of this Rule by agreeing to refer clients to the other lawyer or nonlawyer professional, so long as the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive and the client is informed of the referral agreement. Such arrangements are governed by Rule 1.7, and therefore require the client's informed consent in writing. Reciprocal referral agreements should not be of indefinite duration and should be reviewed periodically to determine whether they comply with these Rules. This Rule does not restrict referrals or divisions of revenues or net income among lawyers within firms comprised of multiple entities.

Expert Report of Hal R. Lieberman

CONFIDENTIAL – SUBJECT TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

Hal R. Lieberman
Emery Celli Brinckerhoff & Abady LLP
600 Fifth Avenue, 10th Floor
New York, NY 10020
212-763-5000

On behalf of Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton"), I have been retained to provide an expert ethics opinion responding, in part, to the "Ethical Report for Special Master Gerald E. Rosen" authored by Professor Stephen Gillers. Specifically, my opinions will address Professor Gillers' contention that the fee-splitting arrangement between Labaton and the referring law firm, Chargois & Herron ("Chargois"), constituted an unethical payment for the recommendation of a client, and not a valid division of fee arrangement in accordance with the applicable Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct ("Mass. Rule") 1.5(e).

My primary opinion, based on my experience as an attorney whose practice for the past thirty-five years has focused on legal ethics and professional discipline in Massachusetts and New York, based on relevant case law, and based on standard treatises, including one interpreting the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct,[1] is that Professor Gillers is incorrect. For the reasons more fully set forth below, in my view the fee-splitting arrangement at issue constituted an ethically valid and enforceable agreement, in accordance with Mass. Rule 1.5(e), because:

- Mass Rule 1.5(e) does not require that a referring law firm (Chargois) perform any work in order to receive a portion of the fee award allocated to trial counsel (Labaton and other firms);
- Mass. Rule 1.5(e) does not require disclosure to the client of the precise fee division to which the lawyers have agreed;

[1] See, e.g., The Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers, ALI (2000); the ABA's Annotated Rules of Professional Conduct (8th Ed., 2015); Massachusetts Professional Responsibility, Gilda Tuoni Russell (Lexis Nexis, 2nd Ed., 2003).

- While Mass. Rule 1.5(e) requires disclosure to the client of the fee-splitting arrangement, Labaton substantially complied with that obligation, and the facts fully support the conclusion that Labaton's client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), knowingly consented thereto;
- Even if Labaton's compliance with Mass. Rule 1.5(e)'s disclosure to client requirement was deemed technically deficient – which I do not believe would be appropriate - insofar as the successor Executive Director of ARTRS did not assent in writing at the time to a fee-splitting agreement with Chargois specifically, given the factual circumstances, in my opinion that insubstantial "deficiency" is not a basis to sanction, discipline, or penalize Labaton.

The opinions set forth infra are offered as my best professional assessment of the pertinent ethical concerns raised by the Court and its Special Master, and the reasonable and customary standards that apply. My compensation in connection with this matter is $750 per hour.

I. Professional Qualifications

My qualifications as an expert on lawyers' ethics and disciplinary enforcement are set forth in detail in the resume that is attached hereto as Exhibit "A." It describes my educational background, legal experience, bar admissions, academic affiliations, professional activities, bar committee memberships, publications and participation as a lecturer at bar seminars or on CLE panels related to professional responsibility or attorney discipline. In brief, I have worked in the field of legal ethics and attorney discipline on a full-time basis for the past thirty-five years, initially (1984 – 1987) as an Assistant Bar Counsel in the Massachusetts Office of the Bar Counsel, and subsequently, from June, 1987 until June, 1998, as Principal Trial Counsel and then as Chief Counsel to the Departmental Disciplinary Committee (the "Committee") for New York's First Judicial Department (covering approximately 75,000 lawyers in Manhattan and the Bronx). In those positions, I reviewed literally thousands of lawyer disciplinary matters, including numerous cases involving interpretation of the lawyer disciplinary rules and rules of professional conduct concerning, among other things, the ethics of referral fees. During the same period, I formally prosecuted more than 50 cases involving lawyer misconduct, and personally handled hundreds of less serious matters.

Further, in my capacity as Chief Counsel to New York's disciplinary committee, I provided my professional opinion on legal ethics and disciplinary issues on numerous occasions to Justices of the Appellate Division and the Appellate Term, to the New York Office of Court Administration, to other state and federal judges (including, frequently, the Chair of the Grievance Committee for the Southern District of New York), to lawyer and non-lawyer members of the Committee, to bar committees, and to members of the bar who sought my advice. Additionally, for thirteen years I was a member of the adjunct faculty of Brooklyn Law School, where I taught a course entitled The Legal Profession, was recently an Adjunct Professor at Columbia Law School teaching legal ethics, and have been a visiting lecturer on legal ethics at a number of other law schools, including Harvard Law School in Massachusetts. I have also published articles for professional journals on the subject of legal ethics and professional discipline, have lectured widely in the field, and have served on New York State, New York City and New York County bar committees concerned with professional discipline and professional responsibility. In 1996, I was elected to membership in the American Law Institute and served on the Members' Consultative Group for the Restatement of the Law Governing Lawyers. I was formerly a member of the Ethics Committee of the Boston Bar Association, a member of the Committee on Professional Ethics of the New York City Bar Association, a member of the Committee on Professional Responsibility of the New York City Bar Association, the principal author of N.Y. City Op. 2000-1 (2000), and I was Chair of the Committee on Professional Discipline of the New York City Bar Association. Since 1998, I have provided expert testimony on legal ethics, professional discipline, and legal malpractice in approximately 40 cases, state and federal. I am co-author of NEW YORK ATTORNEY DISCIPLINE: PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE (ALM, 2017) and a regular columnist for the New York Law Journal on the subject of Professional Discipline.

II. Assumed Facts

For purposes of the opinions expressed below, I rely upon the following facts provided to me by Labaton's counsel as well as the Declaration of George Hopkins, Executive Director of ARTRS:

A. Background

Labaton Sucharow ("Labaton") is a plaintiffs' law firm that focuses on large-scale and complex class action litigation, which often involves securities matters. In the context of its securities work, Labaton frequently acts as "monitoring counsel" for its clients. In that role, Labaton monitors the client's portfolio of securities investments for signs of possible securities law violations, such as a drop in stock price. See, e.g., Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation[2]; LBS017739-41. In doing so, Labaton uses sophisticated in-house investigators and analysts to monitor the securities market. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-14. If Labaton believes a client's portfolio may have been involved in a securities violation that could lead to a viable case, Labaton may ask the client whether it would be interested in serving as lead plaintiff in a class action case. Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation; LBS017739-41. If the client agrees, Labaton may represent the client in the litigation. Id.; see also Sucharow 2d Dep. 115:13-116:15.

Because of its complex role as monitoring counsel, it "takes a while for people to . . . understand [Labaton's work] to the point where it can be useful to them." Keller Dep. Day 1 24:20-23. Thus, Labaton relies on informational presentations that explain Labaton's work to potential clients, such as institutional investors. Keller Dep. Day 1 21:8-18, 24:10-27:10. These presentations are often the first step in Labaton's retention by a potential client. From there, Labaton typically participates in a submission process before being selected to represent an institutional investor. Keller Dep. Day 1 37:19-38:10.

B. Labaton's Relationship with Damon Chargois

Chargois & Herron was a law firm based in Little Rock, Arkansas. Labaton's relationship with Chargois & Herron originated through Labaton partner, Eric Belfi. Belfi met Damon Chargois, a partner at Chargois & Herron, in approximately 2004, when Belfi worked at a different law firm and came into contact with Chargois during a litigation matter pending in the Southern District of New York. See Labaton Sucharow LLP's Response to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Supplemental Interrogatories to Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Response to Supplemental Interrogatories") at 4; Belfi 2d Dep. 12:21-13:4.[3]

Belfi joined Labaton Sucharow in 2006. He focused on building and maintaining client relationships for Labaton. Belfi Dep. 9:7-23. Early in Belfi's tenure at Labaton, he was approached by Chargois, who told him that he had "some opportunities" to introduce Labaton to "pension plans in the Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma region." Belfi 2d Dep at 13:10-13. Belfi

[3] Chargois apparently did not recall this meeting during his deposition, because he testified that he first met Belfi through a friend, when Belfi was already working at Labaton. Chargois Dep. 16:8-23.

"asked him to proceed." Id. By mid-2007, Chargois was focused on introducing Labaton to the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System ("ARTRS"), along with other entities that may have been interested in Labaton's services. Keller Dep. Day 1 156:6-13; LBS031465. In addition, beginning in spring of 2007, Chargois served as local counsel for Labaton on a class action case pending in Texas. Keller Dep. Day 1 146:8-149:19; LBS017411. In that role, Chargois participated in mediation and performed other legal work. Chargois Dep. 17:7-18:22; 121:4-22:12; Keller Dep. Day 1 175:20-176:11; LBS031585.

C. Labaton's Early Contact with ARTRS

Tim Herron, Chargois' partner in his Little Rock office, knew Steve Farris, an Arkansas state senator who served in an oversight role with respect to ARTRS. See LBS040318; LBS017432; Chargois Dep. 33:16-21; Hopkins 2d Dep. 35:6-36:8 (explaining that Farris served on the Arkansas legislature's Joint Committee on Public Retirement and Social Security Programs); Ark. Code Ann. §§ 10-3-701 and 10-3-703 (2017) (assigning oversight responsibilities to the joint committee).

Herron arranged for Belfi and his Labaton partner Chris Keller to meet with Senator Farris in August of 2007. Keller viewed this initial meeting as educational in nature and designed to explain Labaton's work as monitoring counsel to Senator Farris. Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-21:18. In connection with that meeting, Chargois informed Belfi and Keller that they would need to "impress[] the Senator with [their] firm's credentials" in order to have a chance to retain ARTRS as a client. Keller Dep. Day 1 157:6-159:9; LBS017432. Apparently, Chargois remarked after the meeting that Belfi and Keller "did well" and "represent[ed] the firm very well" in the meeting with Senator Farris. LBS040322; LBS017438; Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-10. Chargois later stated that he and Herron felt "very optimistic about Labaton firm's doing a lot of good things in Arkansas. This is thanks to [Belfi and Keller] representing the firm very well" to Farris. LBS017437.[4]

After this initial meeting, Senator Farris and/or Herron introduced Belfi and Keller to Paul Doane, the Executive Director of ARTRS at the time. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:10-15. In September or October 2007, Doane visited Labaton's offices in New York City while he was in the area on other business. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:2-6, 41:11-13. Belfi was traveling at the time, so Doane met with Keller during that trip. Keller Dep. Day 1 33:10-34:18; LBS040524-A. Keller introduced Doane to members of the firm and showed him the office. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-23. Doane expressed interest in Labaton after the meeting but explained that retention of Labaton would require further review by ARTRS and a request for proposals. LBS040524-A; Keller Dep. Day 1 180:7-21.

According to Chargois, during the fall of 2007 Senator Farris maintained contact with Doane regarding the possibility that Labaton would represent ARTRS as monitoring counsel. LBS017442.[5] Chargois and Tim Herron continued to relay information regarding Senator Farris' contact with ARTRS and other funds that could potentially be interested in Labaton's services. LBS017450; Keller Dep. Day 1 193:2-196:2. Similarly, in spring of 2008, Herron communicated information regarding Senator Farris' contact with Doane and the possibility that ARTRS would retain Labaton. LBS017451; LBS017453; Keller Dep. Day 1 218:18-224:16.

[4] The testimony regarding this initial meeting is somewhat inconsistent. Chargois testified that, at Senator Farris' suggestion, he placed a "cold" telephone call to ARTRS director Paul Doane. Chargois Dep. 33:12-35:7. During this conversation, Chargois explained that Chargois & Herron was a local firm working with a New York firm specializing in representing institutional investors. Id. As a result, according to Chargois, Doane met with Eric Belfi and possibly Chris Keller in Little Rock. Chargois Dep. 35:8-36:20. However, while Keller testified that he met Senator Farris in Little Rock, he does not believe that Doane was present. Keller Dep. Day 1 32:12-33:23.

[5] Concurrently, Chargois purportedly continued to seek introductions for Labaton with other entities. E.g., LBS031472 ("Damon is really moving [on] all of the fronts.").

D. ARTRS' Retention of Labaton

In mid-2008, ARTRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") which invited firms to submit qualifications to become additional monitoring counsel to the fund. Labaton and Chargois & Herron submitted a joint RFQ response on July 30, 2008. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. Labaton contemplated that, if selected as panel monitoring counsel, both firms would work on the litigation, if any, filed on ARTRS's behalf. Belfi 2d Dep. 18:14-19; Keller Dep. Day 1 47:24-49:3. Labaton would serve as the lead counsel, and Chargois & Herron would work with ARTRS in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-27:15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

On October 13, 2008, ARTRS's Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, emailed Belfi and informed him that "ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system." LBS017456. Clark further stated:

> I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
>
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conductive to a joint proposal.

Id. [6]

After receiving this email, Belfi had a telephone conversation with Clark. Belfi 2d Dep. 114:2-22, 117:20-118:10. Belfi explained to Clark that Labaton "would be working with

[6] Given the nature of the relationship, discussed below, the payment to Chargois & Herron was never an "expense of a case." Keller Dep. Day 2 302:24-304:8. Except where they appeared as counsel in Court, Chargois & Herron only received a portion of Labaton's attorneys' fees, which themselves were awarded on a percentage basis that were unrelated to "expenses."

Chargois & Herron" and that Chargois & Herron "were going to be involved in the relationship." Belfi 2d Dep 117:20-118:10.

In October 2008, very shortly after ARTRS selected Labaton as monitoring counsel, Doane departed as ARTRS's executive director. See Arkansas Times, "Doane to depart," Oct. 28, 2008.[7] The new Executive Director, George Hopkins, began in or about December 2008. Hopkins Dep. 10:17-21. Meanwhile, Clark – ARTRS' Chief Counsel – remained in her position at ARTRS until approximately October 2009. See Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, "Faulted on Contracts, Teacher-System Lawyer Quits," October 22, 2009.[8]

Unlike Doane, Hopkins did not know Tim Herron or the Chargois & Herron firm. Hopkins 2d Dep. 21:5-10. A few months after Hopkins began at ARTRS, Belfi and then-managing partner Lawrence Sucharow met with him in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:18-21. Because Belfi got along well with Hopkins, and because Hopkins desired a direct relationship without intermediaries, Belfi became Hopkins' primary contact with regard to Labaton's monitoring relationship. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:21-28:7, 56:22-57:10; Hopkins 2d Dep. 60:8-62:16. Thus, Chargois & Herron were uninvolved with ARTRS as Belfi's relationship with Hopkins developed. Belfi 2d Dep. 57:5-19.

On September 24, 2010, Belfi sent Hopkins a draft retention letter for the State Street matter, which contained the following provision:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole > responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

LBS019948-50. On February 8, 2011, Belfi sent a slightly revised, final retention letter to Hopkins with a modified first sentence to the quoted paragraph: "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS011061. Throughout this case, Chargois & Herron's portion of the State Street fee has been referred to by witnesses and in documents as, among other things, a "referral fee," a "local counsel" fee, and a "liaison fee."

During Labaton's representation of ARTRS, Belfi spoke with Hopkins about "how fees worked." Belfi 2d Dep. 23:17-23. According to Belfi, Hopkins said that "he only wanted to deal with [Labaton] and wasn't concerned about how [Labaton] would cut fees up if [they were] working with other firms." Id. Hopkins was only interested in the aggregate attorney fee amount, rather than allocations of that aggregate fee among various firms. Id. at 23:24-24:5. According to Belfi, Hopkins "was not concerned with who [Labaton was] splitting fees with." Id. at 120:11-22. Belfi believed that Hopkins "didn't want to deal with" allocations of fees between lawyers. Id. Hopkins' testimony supports this belief. Hopkins 2d Dep. 68:23-69:3 ("I told Eric if I ever want to know about your attorney fees and who all you hired, I'll ask you. And, you know, on any case because I intentionally didn't want to know a whole lot."); id. at 73:11-19 ("I don't feel misled because I made it real clear to them that I didn't want to be the gatekeeper on all this attorney relationship. And I think if they thought I wanted to know, they would have told me because Eric always said if you ever want to see how we do all these fees, just let me know. And I said that's fine."); see also id. at 74:10-75:8.

E. Labaton's Agreement with Chargois

Early in the relationship between Labaton and Chargois & Herron, Belfi, Keller, and Damon Chargois discussed the terms of an agreement between the two firms. The crux of the agreement was that when Chargois & Herron facilitated the introduction between Labaton and a client, Chargois & Herron would receive up to 20% of the gross attorney fees Labaton earned representing that client, if the client was a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel. See, e.g., LBS031185; Keller Dep. Day 1 42:15-46:14; Chargois Dep. 50:11-52:24, 162:19-164:2. Initially, the understanding was that Chargois would play a local counsel role relative to the entities with which he facilitated introductions, and that he would be active assisting in litigating Labaton's cases if needed. See Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-23, 27:11-15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

Labaton's agreement with Chargois was never reduced to a formal written contract. However, as Labaton's relationship with ARTRS developed, Chargois and Labaton began to formalize their agreement. In February 2009, Chargois indicated that he expected a relatively informal arrangement, but expressed the terms as he understood them in a written email. LBS030990. Roughly one week later, Chargois inquired whether a written "letter agreement" would be necessary. LBS030993; Keller Dep. Day 1 255:16-257:4. Chargois and Keller discussed via email the terms of the potential contract. LBS031492; Keller Dep. Day 1 258:8-19. In April 2009, Chargois sent a draft letter agreement to Belfi and Keller seeking to memorialize the previous discussions in writing. LBS030985-87. Keller edited the document and sent a return draft that, among other things, inserted an arbitration clause. LBS031192-95. While a written agreement was never finalized (Response to Supplemental Interrogatories at 8), Chargois at least viewed it as enforceable. LBS031137; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:1-22. As time passed,

Labaton and Chargois maintained the basic referral arrangement of an 80/20 fee split, if ARTRS became a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel.[9]

Because ARTRS was the only named plaintiff in Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230 MLW, i.e., the action on behalf of the putative class of customers of State Street,[10] the three Customer Class Law Firms (Labaton, Lieff Cabraser, and the Thornton Law Firm) agreed in 2013 that they would share in paying the allocation to Chargois & Herron from their own fee awards. LBS027776. Garrett Bradley of the Thornton firm handled the discussions with Lieff Cabraser and Chargois regarding this point. Id.; Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10.[11]

In June 2016, well after a settlement agreement-in-principle had been reached, Bradley reached out to Chargois for further discussions regarding Chargois' fee allocation. TLF-SST-060973. Bradley negotiated an agreement that Chargois & Herron would receive an amount equal to 5.5% of the total fee award (basically, a percentage that would be approximately equivalent to 20% of Labaton's anticipated share of the total fee), which would be funded by the three Customer Class Law Firms, by agreement, from their respective shares of the award. LBS040924; Bradley 2d Dep. 93:16-22.[12]

---

[9] Although it became apparent that Chargois' total contribution would be limited to the initial assistance in introducing Labaton to ARTRS, Chargois maintained that he was entitled to 20% of any fee earned by Labaton. LBS017594; LBS030876; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-15. Chargois intimated that he would seek legal redress to vindicate his perceived contractual right, if necessary. Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-59:22; Chargois Dep. 59:6-60:4; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:19-131:12. Labaton was concerned by the possibility of litigation in Texas state court. See Belfi 2d Dep. 58:16-59:22; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:22-132:3; Keller Dep. Day 2 541:19-543:23.

[10] Civil Action Nos. 11-cv-12049 MLW and 12-cv-11698 MLW, involving the ERISA Plaintiffs, were consolidated with the customer action for pre-trial purpose.

[11] Bradley explained that he took on the role of negotiating with Chargois & Herron because he had a friendly relationship with Chargois, and he wanted to reach agreement out of concern that, because ARTRS was the only named (non-ERISA) plaintiff, Chargois could say his firm was entitled to 20% of the overall fee award, not just the portion that Labaton Sucharow received. Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10; see also Belfi 2d Dep. 94:5-23; Keller Dep. Day 1 122:6-124:19.

[12] In that June 21, 2016 email to Chargois cited above, Bradley discussed ERISA counsel and what percentage would be allocated to them in the context of his dialogue with Chargois about what percentage would be paid to

Given his desire not to be informed of the allocation of fees among counsel (Hopkins Dec. at ¶¶10-12, 14), George Hopkins personally was unaware of the Chargois agreement until August or September of 2017. Id. ¶ 7. Thereafter, when informed of the details of the fee-sharing agreement between the Customer Class Law Firms and Chargois in this case, Hopkins expressly consented to and ratified the agreement. Id. at ¶¶ 16-17.

The fee-sharing arrangement was not disclosed to the Court or to the class. No local rule or court rule required disclosure to the Court, nor did the Court have a standing order, or case specific order, requiring disclosure.

III. Questions Posed

1) Whether the facts support the conclusion that Labaton substantially complied with its obligation under Mass. Rule 1.5(e) to disclose to its client, ARTRS, that its fees would be shared with Chargois?
Answer: Yes.

2) Whether, because disclosure to ARTRS of its fee-splitting arrangement with Chargois may have been imperfect in that ARTRS' new Executive Director did not consent in writing to a division of fee with Damon Chargois or Chargois & Herron specifically, Labaton should therefore be sanctioned, disciplined, otherwise penalized by this Court?
Answer: No.

3) Whether the payment to Chargois violated Mass. Rule 1.5(a)?
Answer: No.

Chargois & Herron. TLF-SST-060973. No Labaton lawyers were copied on this communication, and there is no evidence in the record suggesting that lawyers from Labaton saw it before this investigation. Id. Bradley explained that he was simply providing the context of the ERISA firms as background and as a negotiating point with Chargois. Bradley 2d Dep. 84:9-85:20; Keller Dep. Day 2 534:23-535:24. Bradley's reference in that 2016 conversation did nothing to change the agreement that the ERISA lawyers had struck with Customer Counsel more than two years earlier.

IV. Opinions

Mass. Rule 1.5(e) is a more liberal rule with respect to fee sharing among unaffiliated law firms than similar provisions in the prior ABA Model Code, the current ABA Model Rules, and fee-splitting rules in most other jurisdictions.

In February 2011, when ARTRS engaged Labaton for the State Street litigation, Mass. Rule 1.5(e) stated, in pertinent part:

> (e) A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable.

At that time, the Supreme Judicial Court had applied a gloss to Rule 1.5(e) through its decision in Saggese v. Kelly, 445 Mass. 434 (2005), which construed the rule prospectively to require written consent obtained before the referral. However, that interpretation was not codified. On March 15, 2011, the following version of 1.5(e) was adopted:

> (e) A division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if the client is notified before or at the time the client enters into a fee agreement for the matter that a division of fees will be made and consents to the joint participation in writing and the total fee is reasonable.
>
> Comments [7] and [7A] also provide as follows:
>
> Division of Fee
> [7] A division of fee is single billing to a client covering the fee of two or more lawyers who are not in the same firm. A division of fee facilitates association of more than one lawyer in a matter in which neither alone could serve the client as well, and most often is used when the fee is contingent and the division is between a referring lawyer and a trial specialist. Paragraph (e) permits the lawyers to divide a fee if the client has been informed that a division of fees will be made and consents in writing. A lawyer should only refer a matter to a lawyer whom the referring lawyer reasonably believes is competent to handle the matter. See Rule 1.1.

> [7A] Paragraph (e), unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer unless, with a client's written consent, each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation. The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer.

Notably, under either version of the Rule, there is no requirement that any work be performed, or responsibility assumed, by the referring lawyer or law firm, nor that disclosure of the precise division of fees be made unless the client so requests.

A) Contrary to Professor Gillers' central argument, the facts support the conclusion that Labaton substantially complied with its obligation under Mass. Rule 1.5(e) to disclose to its client, ARTRS, that its fees could be shared with Chargois.

Specifically, the record reflects that in mid-2008, in response to a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") by ARTRS, inviting firms to submit proposals (qualifications) to become additional monitoring counsel to the funds, Labaton and Chargois submitted a joint RFQ response. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. Following that, a Labaton partner had discussions with ARTRS's then counsel, Christa Clark, regarding the joint submission, during which the Labaton partner expressly informed Clark that Labaton would be working with Chargois and that Chargois "were going to be involved in the relationship." Belfi 2d Dep 117:20-118:10.

Subsequently, in 2010, the Labaton partner sent ARTRS's new executive director, George Hopkins, a draft retention letter for the instant (litigation) matter, which contained a provision that clearly disclosed the fact that Labaton would be authorized to pay referral fees to other attorneys serving as local counsel, but that the overall fee would not increase. LBS019948-50. A slightly modified version of the retention letter, in final form, was sent to Hopkins in 2011. It too contained an almost identical provision, to wit:

> "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS011061.

Both the Labaton partner who interacted with Hopkins, and Hopkins himself, have testified to conversations about allocation of fees among law firms. Belfi 2d Dep. 23:17-24:5; Hopkins 2d Dep. 73:11-19. Hopkins has also recently provided a Declaration confirming that he retroactively approves of the instant fee-splitting arrangement. Indeed, Hopkins has affirmatively stated that he did not wish to be involved in discussions concerning fee allocation, or becoming a referee between law firms, because that would have distracted him from focusing on protecting the class. His only concern about fees was that the overall attorney fee award remained the same. Declaration of George Hopkins ¶¶ 10-15.

The forgoing facts support the conclusion that Labaton obtained ARTRS' consent to divide its fees with Chargois, and therefore complied with Rule 1.5 (e), as it then existed. My opinion does not change even when considering the Supreme Judicial Court's uncodified statements in Saggese. In my opinion the foregoing facts fully support the conclusion that ARTRS was adequately informed, in writing, at the inception of the retention, and de facto, and retroactively, assented to Labaton's sharing of its fees with Chargois. Professor Gillers' overly technical focus on the failure to obtain formal written consent from Mr. Hopkins elevates form over substance, ignores relevant case law, and is inconsistent with the policies and goals of Mass. Rule 1.5(e), as discussed below.

B) Even if Labaton's disclosure to Hopkins and the ARTRS was imperfect because the written consent did not contain any details of the arrangement (which the rule did not require), Professor Gillers cites no controlling authority for the proposition that Labaton should be sanctioned, disciplined, or otherwise penalized, because there is none.

There is no support in Massachusetts or First Circuit case law, let alone premised in simple fairness, for the proposition that Labaton's fee-splitting arrangement was invalid, or that Labaton engaged in unethical conduct under Mass. Rule 7.2 by paying a "person" to refer the State Street case. In Saggese v. Kelley, 445 Mass. 434, 442-443 (2007), Professor Gillers concedes that the Supreme Judicial Court enforced an oral agreement between a referring and referred lawyers where the client, who was not a fiduciary, was only later notified of the agreement (Gillers Report, p. 64).

Notably, to the best of my knowledge, neither lawyer in Saggese was subsequently disciplined following the Court's opinion. Nor is there any evidence that the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers took (or has ever taken) the position that lawyers who engage in imperfectly documented but nonetheless enforceable fee-splitting arrangements, are thereby automatically subject to discipline or sanctions for violating Mass. Rule 7.2 by sending a forwarding fee, not to another law firm, but to a "person." I am not aware of any such bootstrapped interpretation or application of Rule 7.2 in any jurisdiction, and Professor Gillers cites no authority beyond his own expansive reading of the Rules.

The same applies with even more force as regards Professor Gillers' analysis of Daynard v. Ness, Motley et al., 188 F. Supp. 2d 115 (D. Mass. 2002). In that case, law Professor Richard Daynard, in the context of his substantial contributions to plaintiffs in ground-breaking tobacco litigation, sought to enforce an oral fee-splitting agreement "made in contravention of the rules of professional conduct," Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 117. The District Court, per then Chief Judge William Young, held that under Massachusetts law, "even if the alleged agreement was made in contravention of the rules of professional conduct, it was enforceable." (emphasis added).

Professor Gillers labors mightily to distinguish the circumstances in Saggese and Daynard by focusing on what he terms the "equities." (Gillers Report, pp. 65-66) He claims that the "equities" are somehow different here, because in Saggese the lawyer tried to keep the fee for himself justifying that claim, in part, by the fact that the referring lawyer did no work, and in Daynard, that the law professor, as referring counsel, contributed substantially to the success of the litigation. But neither of these alleged differentiating rationales holds water. Mass. Rule 1.5(e) does not require the referring firm to do any work on the case, as Professor Gillers is aware. It is also unclear why the "equities" here are any different with respect to Daynard. Labaton and its co-counsel achieved an excellent result for their client, ARTRS, and the class clients it represented. Labaton may not have been able to do so absent Chargois' introduction of Labaton to ARTRS. It is also undisputed that ARTRS is very satisfied with the outcome of the litigation, and that it's Executive Director, Hopkins, ratified the fee-splitting arrangement when he repeatedly testified that he was disinterested in the details of the fee-split as long as the overall fee paid to lawyers was fair and reasonable to his organization, which it indisputably was.

In short, in my opinion the equities here are not meaningfully different. The possible payment of a referral or forwarding fee was not kept from ARTRS, which agreed through its engagement letter that Labaton was free to pay referral fees to other law firms. LBS011061. Hopkins, on behalf of ARTRS, ratified the fee-splitting arrangement as well. Declaration of George Hopkins ¶¶ 10-17. As a matter of good policy and the public interest, it is well recognized that the bar should encourage fee sharing relationships that serve the client by helping to ensure that cases, especially litigation matters, like this one, are handled by the best, most experienced lawyer in the particular area of the law. That is exactly what happened here, and the results speak for themselves.

Finally – and critically – even if Labaton did not technically comply with the Court's construction in Saggese, it should not be sanctioned for conduct that was not prohibited by a Rule of Professional Conduct during the relevant time period. The Mass. Rules provide the codified notice of what behavior is permissible, and what behavior is not. It would be manifestly unfair to impose a sanction for conduct that did not violate a Rule, but did – arguably – imperfectly comply with the judicial gloss on a Rule. In my opinion, which is informed by decades of practice in the disciplinary realm, an attorney would not be expected to research case law in order to ascertain the relevant standards of conduct, and should not be sanctioned for failing to do so. This would present a due process problem, and would not comport with the spirit of the Rules of Professional Conduct in any jurisdiction. Respectfully, no sanction is warranted.

C) The Payment to Chargois Did Not Violate Rule 1.5(a).

I understand that Professor Gillers recently testified that the payment to Chargois may have violated Mass. Rule 1.5(a). In my opinion, this does not withstand scrutiny. On its face, Mass. Rule 1.5(e) applies to fee divisions and requires only that "the total fee is reasonable." The Rule does not require that each segment of the fee be reasonable. Beyond the plain reading of Mass. Rules 1.5(e) and 1.5(a), in my experience I cannot recall a single instance in which a referral fee was scrutinized for reasonability under the Mass. Rules, nor do I understand how a referral fee even could be scrutinized under the factors set forth in Mass. Rule 1.5(a).

V. Conclusion

Thus, in my opinion, to a reasonable degree of professional certainty, Labaton's payment of a referral fee to Chargois was not ethically improper. Nor is there any basis, in my view, to sanction, discipline or otherwise penalize Labaton.

Expert Report – March 26, 2018
Professor W. Bradley Wendel

I. Introduction, Qualifications, and Summary of Opinion.

I have been retained by Labaton Sucharow ("Labaton") to testify concerning the firm's compliance with the applicable Rules of Professional Conduct. I am a tenured full Professor of Law and the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs at Cornell Law School in Ithaca, New York. My primary area of teaching and research specialization is legal ethics, professional responsibility, and the law governing lawyers. I am a co-editor of a widely adopted law school casebook, Hazard, Koniak, Cramton, Cohen & Wendel, The Law and Ethics of Lawyering, now in its Sixth Edition with Foundation Press; the sole author of a textbook, Wendel, Professional Responsibility: Examples and Explanations, now in its Fifth Edition, with Wolters Kluwer; and co-editor of a rules supplement, Martyn, Fox & Wendel, The Law Governing Lawyers: National Rules, Standards, Statutes, and State Lawyer Codes, also with Wolters Kluwer. In addition I have published numerous law review articles on these topics. I have regularly taught law school courses on legal ethics and professional responsibility for 18 years, frequently teach CLE programs on legal ethics for practicing lawyers throughout the country, including a recent North Carolina Bar Association statewide CLE on truthfulness in the practice of law, at which I was the keynote presenter. Since 2007, I have been a member of the drafting committee for the Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination (MPRE). In 2011-12 I served as a Reporter to a working group within the ABA Commission on Ethics 20/20, which considered amendments to the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct. In 2012 I was the recipient of the Sanford D. Levy Memorial Award from the New York State Bar Committee on Professional Ethics. In 2015 I served as Vice Chair and Subcommittee Co-Chair for the New York State Commission on Statewide Attorney Discipline.

Within the last four years, I have testified by deposition in Wadler v. Bio-Rad Laboratories, Inc., U.S. District Court, N.D. California, Case No. 3:15-CV-2356 JCS, on November 17, 2016. I was retained by counsel for plaintiff, the former general counsel of a corporation who was fired for blowing the whistle on violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

II. Facts Assumed for this Opinion.

The following statement of facts was prepared by counsel for Labaton. I assume these facts to be true for the purposes of my opinion. I have reviewed the documents supporting the statement of facts prepared by counsel. I have also reviewed Labaton's Response to the Special Master Report, the Ethical Report of Professor Stephen Gillers, and the Expert Declaration of Camille F. Sarrouf.

A. Background.

Labaton is a plaintiffs' law firm that focuses on large-scale and complex class action litigation, which often involves securities matters. In the context of its securities work, Labaton frequently acts as "monitoring counsel" for its clients. In that role, Labaton monitors the client's portfolio of securities investments for signs of possible securities law violations, such as a drop in stock price. See, e.g., Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation[1]; LBS017739-41. In doing so, Labaton uses sophisticated in-house investigators and analysts to monitor the securities market. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-14. If Labaton believes a client's portfolio may have been involved in a securities violation that could lead to a viable case, Labaton may ask the client whether it would be interested in serving as lead plaintiff in a class action case. Portfolio Monitoring and Case Evaluation; LBS017739-41. If the client agrees, Labaton may represent the client in the litigation. Id.; see also Sucharow 2d Dep. 115:13-116:15.

Because of its complex role as monitoring counsel, it "takes a while for people to . . . understand [Labaton's work] to the point where it can be useful to them." Keller Dep. Day 1 24:20-23. Thus, Labaton relies on informational presentations that explain Labaton's work to potential clients, such as institutional investors. Keller Dep. Day 1 21:8-18, 24:10-27:10. These presentations are often the first step in Labaton's retention by a potential client. From there, Labaton typically participates in a submission process before being selected to represent an institutional investor. Keller Dep. Day 1 37:19-38:10.

B. Labaton's Relationship with Damon Chargois.

Chargois & Herron was a law firm based in Little Rock, Arkansas. Labaton's relationship with Chargois & Herron originated through Labaton partner, Eric Belfi. Belfi met Damon Chargois, a partner at Chargois & Herron, in approximately 2004, when Belfi worked at a different law firm and came into contact with Chargois during a litigation matter pending in the Southern District of New York. See Labaton Sucharow LLP's Response to Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen's (Ret.) Supplemental Interrogatories to Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Response to Supplemental Interrogatories") at 4; Belfi 2d Dep. 12:21-13:4.[2]

Belfi joined Labaton Sucharow in 2006. He focused on building and maintaining client relationships for Labaton. Belfi Dep. 9:7-23. Early in Belfi's tenure at Labaton, he was approached by Chargois, who told him that he had "some opportunities" to introduce Labaton to "pension plans in the Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma region." Belfi 2d Dep at 13:10-13. Belfi "asked him to proceed." Id. By mid-2007, Chargois was focused on introducing Labaton to the

[2] Chargois apparently did not recall this meeting during his deposition, because he testified that he first met Belfi through a friend, when Belfi was already working at Labaton. Chargois Dep. 16:8-23.

Arkansas Teachers Retirement System ("ARTRS"), along with other entities that may have been interested in Labaton's services. Keller Dep. Day 1 156:6-12, LBS031465. In addition, beginning in spring of 2007, Chargois served as local counsel for Labaton on a class action case pending in Texas. Keller Dep. Day 1 146:8-149:18; LBS017411. In that role, Chargois participated in mediation and performed other legal work. Chargois Dep. 17:7-18:22; 121:4-22:12 Keller Dep. Day 1 175:20-176:11; LBS031585.

C. Labaton's Early Contact with ARTRS.

Tim Herron, Chargois' partner in his Little Rock office, knew Steve Farris, an Arkansas state senator who served in an oversight role with respect to ARTRS. See LBS040318; LBS017432; Chargois Dep. 33:16-21; Hopkins 2d Dep. 35:6-36:8 (explaining that Farris served on the Arkansas legislature's Joint Committee on Public Retirement and Social Security Programs); Ark. Code Ann. §§ 10-3-701 and 10-3-703 (2017) (assigning oversight responsibilities to the joint committee).

Herron arranged for Belfi and his Labaton partner Chris Keller to meet with Senator Farris in August of 2007. Keller viewed this initial meeting as educational in nature and designed to explain Labaton's work as monitoring counsel to Senator Farris. Keller Dep. Day 1 20-21. In connection with that meeting, Chargois informed Belfi and Keller that they would need to "impress[] the Senator with [their] firm credentials" in order to have a chance to retain ARTRS as a client. Keller Dep. Day 1 157:6-159:9; LBS017432. Apparently, Chargois remarked after the meeting that Belfi and Keller "did well" and "represent[ed] the firm very well" in the meeting with Senator Farris. LBS040322; LBS017438; Keller Dep. Day 1 20:3-10. Chargois later stated that he and Herron felt "very optimistic about Labaton firm's doing a lot of good things in Arkansas. This is thanks to [Belfi and Keller] representing the firm very well" to Farris. LBS017437.[3]

After this initial meeting, Senator Farris and/or Herron introduced Belfi and Keller to Paul Doane, the Executive Director of ARTRS at the time. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:10-15. In September or October 2007, Doane visited Labaton's offices in New York City while he was in the area on other business. Belfi 2d Dep. 38:2-6, 41:11-13. Belfi was traveling at the time, so Doane met with Keller during that trip. Keller Dep. Day 1 33:10-34:18; LBS040524-A. Keller introduced Doane to members of the firm and showed him the office. Keller Dep. Day 1 35:2-23. Doane expressed interest in Labaton after the meeting but explained that retention of Labaton would require further review by ARTRS and a request for proposals. LBS040524-A; Keller Dep. Day 1 180:7-21.

According to Chargois, during the fall of 2007 Senator Farris maintained contact with Doane regarding the possibility that Labaton would represent ARTRS as monitoring counsel. LBS017442.[4] Chargois and Tim Herron continued to relay information regarding Senator Farris' contact with ARTRS and other funds that could potentially be interested in Labaton's services. LBS017450; Keller Dep. Day 1 193:2-196:2. Similarly, in spring of 2008, Herron communicated information regarding Senator Farris' contact with Doane and the possibility that ARTRS would retain Labaton. LBS017451; LBS017453; Keller Dep. Day 1 218:18-224:16.

[3] The testimony regarding this initial meeting is somewhat inconsistent. Chargois testified that, at Senator Farris' suggestion, he placed a "cold" telephone call to ARTRS director Paul Doane. Chargois Dep. 33:12-35:74. During this conversation, Chargois explained that Chargois & Herron was a local firm working with a New York firm specializing in representing institutional investors. Id. As a result, according to Chargois, Doane met with Eric Belfi and possibly Chris Keller in Little Rock. Chargois Dep. 35:8-36:20. However, while Keller testified that he met Senator Farris in Little Rock, he does not believe that Doane was present. Keller Dep. Day 1 32:12-33:23.

[4] Concurrently, Chargois purportedly continued to seek introductions for Labaton with other entities. E.g., LBS031472 ("Damon is really moving on all of the fronts.").

D. ARTRS' Retention of Labaton.

In mid-2008, ARTRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") which invited firms to submit qualifications to become additional monitoring counsel to the fund. Labaton and Chargois & Herron submitted a joint RFQ response on July 30, 2008. LBS017738-55; LBS017756-67. Labaton contemplated that, if selected as panel monitoring counsel, both firms would work on the litigation, if any, filed on ARTRS's behalf. Belfi 2d Dep. 18:14-19; Keller Dep. Day 1 47:24-49:3. Labaton would serve as the lead counsel, and Chargois & Herron would work with ARTRS in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-27:15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

On October 13, 2008, ARTRS's Chief Counsel, Christa Clark, emailed Belfi and informed him that "ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system." LBS017456. Clark further stated:

> I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
>
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conductive to a joint proposal.

After receiving this email, Belfi had a telephone conversation with Clark. Belfi 2d Dep. 114:2-22, 117:20-118:10. Belfi explained to Clark that Labaton "would be working with

[5] Given the nature of the relationship, discussed below, the payment to Chargois & Herron was never an "expense of a case." Keller Dep. Day 2 302:24-304:8. Except where they appeared as counsel in Court, Chargois & Herron only received a portion of Labaton's attorneys' fees, which themselves were awarded on a percentage basis that were unrelated to "expenses."

Chargois & Herron" and that Chargois & Herron "were going to be involved in the relationship." Belfi 2d Dep 117:20-118:10.

In October 2008, very shortly after ARTRS selected Labaton as monitoring counsel, Doane departed as ARTRS's executive director. See Arkansas Times, "Doane to depart," Oct. 28, 2008.[6] The new Executive Director, George Hopkins, began in or about December 2008. Hopkins Dep. 10:17-21. Meanwhile, Clark – ARTRS' Chief Counsel – remained in her position at ARTRS until approximately October 2009. See Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, "Faulted on Contracts, Teacher-System Lawyer Quits," October 22, 2009.[7]

Unlike Doane, Hopkins did not know Tim Herron or the Chargois & Herron firm. Hopkins 2d Dep. 21:5-10. A few months after Hopkins began at ARTRS, Belfi and then-managing partner Lawrence Sucharow met with him in Little Rock. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:18-21. Because Belfi got along well with Hopkins, and because Hopkins desired a direct relationship without intermediaries, Belfi became Hopkins' primary contact with regard to Labaton's monitoring relationship. Belfi 2d Dep. 27:21-28:7, 56:22-57:10; Hopkins 2d Dep. 60:8-62:16. Thus, Chargois & Herron were uninvolved with ARTRS as Belfi's relationship with Hopkins developed. Belfi 2d Dep. 57:5-19.

On September 24, 2010, Belfi sent Hopkins a draft retention letter for the State Street matter, which contained the following provision:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole > responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

LBS019948-50. On February 8, 2011, Belfi sent a slightly revised, final retention letter to Hopkins with a modified first sentence to the quoted paragraph: "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS011061. Throughout this case, Chargois & Heron's portion of the State Street fee has been referred to by witnesses and in documents as, among other things, a "referral fee," a "local counsel" fee, and a "liaison fee."

During Labaton's representation of ARTRS, Belfi spoke with Hopkins about "how fees worked." Belfi 2d Dep. at 23:17-23. According to Belfi, Hopkins said that "he only wanted to deal with [Labaton] and wasn't concerned about how [Labaton] would cut fees up if [they] were working with other firms." Id. Hopkins was only interested in the aggregate attorney fee amount, rather than allocations of that aggregate fee among various firms. Id. at 23:24-24:5. According to Belfi, Hopkins "was not concerned with who [Labaton was] splitting fees with." Id. at 120:11-22. Belfi believed that Hopkins "didn't want to deal with" allocations of fees between lawyers. Id. Hopkins' testimony supports this belief. Hopkins 2d Dep.68:23-69:3 ("I told Eric if I ever want to know about your attorney fees and who all you hired, I'll ask you. And, you know, on any case because I intentionally didn't want to know a whole lot."); id. at 73:11-19 ("I don't feel misled because I made it real clear to them that I didn't want to be the gatekeeper on all this attorney relationship. And I think if they thought I wanted to know, they would have told me because Eric always said if you ever want to see how we do all these fees, just let me know. And I said that's fine."); see also id. at 74:10-75:8.

E. Labaton's Agreement with Chargois.

Early in the relationship between Labaton and Chargois & Herron, Belfi, Keller, and Damon Chargois discussed the terms of an agreement between the two firms. The crux of the agreement was that when Chargois & Herron facilitated the introduction between Labaton and a client, Chargois & Herron would receive up to 20% of the gross attorney fees Labaton earned representing that client, if the client was a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel. See, e.g., LBS031185; Keller Dep. Day 1 42:15-46:14; Chargois Dep. 50:11-52:24, 162:19-164:2. Initially, the understanding was that Chargois would play a local counsel role relative to the entities with which he facilitated introductions, and that he would be active assisting in litigating Labaton's cases if needed. See Belfi 2d Dep. 26:15-23, 27:11-15; Keller Dep. Day 1 44:8-46:21.

Labaton's agreement with Chargois was never reduced to a formal written contract. However, as Labaton's relationship with ARTRS developed, Chargois and Labaton began to formalize their agreement. In February 2009, Chargois indicated that he expected a relatively informal arrangement, but expressed the terms as he understood them in a written email. LBS030990. Roughly one week later, Chargois inquired whether a written "letter agreement" would be necessary. LBS030993; Keller Dep. Day 1 255:16-257:4. Chargois and Keller discussed via email the terms of the potential contract. LBS031492; Keller Dep. Day 1 258:8-19. In April 2009, Chargois sent a draft letter agreement to Belfi and Keller seeking to memorialize the previous discussions in writing. LBS030985-87. Keller edited the document and sent a return draft that, among other things, inserted an arbitration clause. LBS031192-95. While a written agreement was never finalized (Response to Supplemental Interrogatories at 8), Chargois at least viewed it as enforceable. LBS031137; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:1-22. As time passed, Labaton and

Chargois maintained the basic referral arrangement of an 80/20 fee split, if ARTRS became a named plaintiff and Labaton was appointed lead or co-lead counsel.[8]

Because ARTRS was the only named plaintiff in Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230 MLW, i.e., the action on behalf of the putative class of customers of State Street,[9] the three Customer Class Law Firms (Labaton, Lieff Cabraser, and the Thornton Law Firm) agreed in 2013 that they would share in paying the allocation to Chargois & Herron from their own fee awards. LBS027776. Garrett Bradley of the Thornton firm handled the discussions with Lieff Cabraser and Chargois regarding this point. Id.; Bradley 2d Dep. 53:14-54:10.[10]

In June 2016, well after a settlement agreement-in-principle had been reached, Bradley reached out to Chargois for further discussions regarding Chargois' fee allocation. TLF-SST-060973. Bradley negotiated an agreement that Chargois & Herron would receive an amount equal to 5.5% of the total fee award (basically, a percentage calculated off the top that would be approximately equivalent to 20% of Labaton's anticipated share of the total fee), which would be funded by the three Customer Class Law Firms from their respective shares of the award. LBS040924; Bradley 2d Dep. 93:16-22.[11]

[8] Although it became apparent that Chargois' total contribution would be limited to the initial assistance in introducing Labaton to ARTRS, Chargois maintained that he was entitled to 20% of any fee earned by Labaton. LBS017594; LBS030876; Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-15. Chargois intimated that he would seek legal redress to vindicate his perceived contractual right, if necessary. Belfi 2d Dep. 58:5-59:22; Chargois Dep. 59:6-60:4; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:19-131:12. Labaton was concerned by the possibility of litigation in Texas state court. See Belfi 2d Dep. 58:16-59:22; Keller Dep. Day 1 130:22-132:3; Keller Dep. Day 2 541:19-543:23.

[9] Civil Action Nos. 11-cv-12049 MLW and 12-cv-11698 MLW, involving the ERISA Plaintiffs, were consolidated with the customer action for pre-trial purpose.

[10] Bradley explained that he took on the role of negotiating with Chargois & Herron because he had a friendly relationship with Chargois, and he wanted to reach agreement out of concern that, because ARTRS was the only named (non-ERISA) plaintiff, Chargois could say his firm was entitled to 20% of the overall fee award, not just the portion that Labaton Sucharow received. Bradley 2d Dep. 53:15-54:10; see also Belfi 2d Dep. 94:5-23; Keller Dep. Day 1 122:6-124:19.

Given his desire not to be informed of the allocation of fees among counsel (Hopkins Dec. at ¶¶ 10-12, 14), George Hopkins personally was unaware of the Chargois agreement until August or September of 2017. Id. ¶ 7. Thereafter, when informed of the details of the fee-sharing agreement between the Customer Class Law Firms and Chargois in this case, Hopkins expressly consented to and ratified the agreement. Id. at ¶¶ 16-17.

The fee-sharing arrangement was not disclosed to the Court or to the class. No local rule or court rule required disclosure to the Court, nor did the Court have a standing order, or case specific order, requiring disclosure.

III. Opinion.

A. Labaton Obtained the Written Consent of ARTRS to the Fee-Sharing Arrangement.

A national law firm such as Labaton must dedicate effort and resources to building and maintaining relationships with clients. The Texas law firm of Chargois & Herron had relationships with a State Senator in Arkansas who had an oversight role with respect to a potential client, ARTRS. Either the Senator or Chargois & Herron partner Tim Herron introduced a Labaton partner to the Executive Director of ARTRS, Paul Doane. Subsequently, Labaton and Chargois & Herron jointly submitted a proposal to serve as counsel for the ARTRS, with Chargois & Herron serving in a role as local liaison and relationship-management counsel. Labaton and Chargois & Herron initially intended that both firms would provide legal services to the ARTRS. However, for reasons related to state procurement procedures, counsel for the would be paid to Chargois & Herron. TLF-SST-060973. No Labaton lawyers were copied on this communication, and there is no evidence in the record suggesting that lawyers from Labaton saw it before this investigation. Id. Bradley explained that he was simply providing the context of the ERISA firms as background and as a negotiating point with Chargois. Bradley 2d Dep. 84:9-85:20; Keller Dep. Day 2 534:23-535. Bradley's reference in that 2016 conversation did nothing to change the agreement that the ERISA lawyers had struck with Customer Counsel more than two years earlier.

ARTRS, Christa Clark, requested that Labaton be listed as the sole firm serving as monitoring counsel. Aware of Labaton's association with Chargois & Herron, Clark agreed that Labaton could share responsibility for the representation with the local firm. She wrote: "Your firm may affiliate [Chargois & Herron] or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate [sic], on a case by case basis." Labaton partner Eric Belfi orally explained to Clark that Labaton would continue to work in association with Chargois & Herron.

The retainer letter agreed upon by Labaton and the ARTRS indicates that "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation."

The applicable rule on sharing fees with other lawyers is Mass. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5(e) in effect at the time of the engagement in February 2011,[12] which provided:

> A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable.

The client was notified of the association of Labaton with Chargois & Herron at the outset of the monitoring relationship and the retainer letter for the litigation that was a product of the monitoring permitted a division of fees. Both Eric Belfi and new ARTRS Executive Director George Hopkins testified that Belfi and Hopkins had conversations about the division of fees, and that Hopkins said, essentially, that he did not care how the firms divided up the fee as long as the total amount was reasonable. In my opinion, the writings exchanged by Labaton and the ARTRS constitutes client "consent[] to the joint participation," as was required by Mass. RPC 1.5(e). Unlike the version of Rule 1.5(e) in the ABA Model Rules, the Massachusetts rule does not require that the client give consent to the "share each lawyer will receive" of the joint fee. Compare Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct, Rule 1.5(e).

Prof. Gillers relies on additional requirements set out in Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699 (Mass. 2005). Prof. Gillers reads Saggese to impose a requirement of contemporaneous written consent by the client to the fee-sharing agreement. In my opinion, the email from Christa Clark and the retainer letter satisfy the writing requirement and they also satisfy the timing requirement, because both were acknowledged in writing by the client before the commencement of the representation. Prof. Gillers argues that the email from Christa Clark and the subsequent engagement letter fail to satisfy the writing requirement of Mass. RPC 1.5(e). See Gillers Report, p. 59. But there is no reason to believe these writings are insufficient. Discussing the requirement in the conflict of interest rules that informed consent be "confirmed in writing," Comment [20] to Mass. RPC 1.7 states: "Such a writing may consist of a document executed by the client or one that the lawyer promptly records and transmits to the client following an oral consent. See Rule 1.0(c). See also Rule 1.0(q) (writing includes electronic transmission)." Exchanges of emails are frequently sufficient to constitute written consent (or "consent confirmed in writing") to important decisions such as a client waiving a conflict of interest.

It is important to recognize that the court's concern in Saggese was with so-called midstream modifications of fee agreements. Saggese, 837 N.E.2d at 705-06. It is true that modifications of existing fee agreements are regarded with considerable skepticism because of the fiduciary nature of the lawyer-client relationship. See ABA Comm. on Ethics and Prof'l Resp., Formal Op. 11-458 (2011). Additional, very specific disclosures, as well as a substantive showing of changed circumstances, may be required for a midstream modification of an existing fee agreement. The interpretation by the Supreme Judicial Court of the fee-sharing rule is aligned with this concern to avoid pressure on clients to accede to a lawyer's request for a modified (and presumably more favorable to the lawyer) fee arrangement. See Saggese, 837 N.E.2d at 706. In this case, the agreement to share fees with Chargois & Herron was not adopted after the commencement of the representation. Rather, the relationship with Chargois & Herron, and the sharing of fees, was within the contemplation of the parties from the outset.

In my opinion, the negotiations between Labaton and the ARTRS and the written consent provided by Clark and Hopkins satisfy the requirements of Mass. RPC 1.5(e) and the interpretation placed on the rule by the Saggese court. It is worth noting again, however, that the text of the fee-sharing rule in effect at the time the fee agreement between Labaton and the ARTRS was entered into does not require written consent, although the Saggese opinion does. See Saggese, 445 Mass. 434, 443. The amendment to Rule 1.5(e) formally requiring written consent took effect on March 15, 2011. Labaton sent its final engagement letter to the ARTRS on February 8, 2011. Thus, the agreement was not subject to the requirement of written consent, unless pursuant to a court decision without the benefit of rulemaking and the rule. As noted above, even if it were, my opinion is that it satisfies the requirement. From the standpoint of proper professional conduct, however, it is significant that the firm (which was admitted pro hac vice from out of state, and thus not as likely to be familiar with recent cases interpreting the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct) complied with the requirements of the rule in effect at the time.

In substance, both Mass. RPC 1.5(e) and Saggese are concerned with the client having sufficient information to be able to object to the lawyer's proposed fee arrangement. As ARTRS Executive Director George Hopkins testified, he was uninterested at the time the contract pertaining to the matter was formed with the details of any sharing of fees among law firms representing the ARTRS. In his Declaration he reaffirmed that he was concerned with ensuring that the total fee was reasonable, but he did not want to play the role of referee between law firms regarding their arrangement for dividing up the total fee. See Hopkins Dec. ¶¶ 11-12. (Hopkins is a lawyer and was presumably well aware of the considerations that the law firms may take into account in deciding how to divide up the total fee.) His subsequent express ratification of the fee-sharing arrangement is evidence that it did not disadvantage the client in any way, but it is clear under both the text of Mass RPC 1.5(e) and Saggese that the consent requirement then in effect was met.

B. Even if Labaton Had Failed to Perfect Its Fee-Sharing Agreement with Chargois, the Matter Does Not Fall Within Rule 7.2(b), on Referrals by Non-Lawyers.

Prof. Gillers makes a creative, and as far as I know unprecedented, argument in his Report to the Special Master. See Gillers Dep. at 52-56. He contends that, in the event a fee-sharing agreement with another lawyer does not comply with every element of Mass. RPC 1.5(e), the counterparty should be treated as a non-lawyer and the situation governed by the rule prohibiting payments to non-lawyers for referrals. See Mass. RPC 7.2(b) (providing that "[a] lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services"). In essence, his argument is that an unperfected agreement to engage in otherwise permissible sharing of fees by lawyers not associated in the same law firm transforms the situation into one in which a non-lawyer is providing client referrals. I am unaware of any ethics opinion, reported case, or disciplinary proceeding that takes this position.

To put the matter differently, Prof. Gillers contends that there is a generally applicable rule prohibiting payments for referrals, Mass. RPC 7.2(b), which is subject to a limited exception for lawyer fee-sharing agreements, as provided in Mass. RPC 1.5(e). Assuming this structure, he then contends that an imperfect (under Rule 1.5(e)) fee-sharing agreement should throw the matter back under the default rule of Rule 7.2(b). See Gillers Report, pp. 61, 66. But this is not the right way to understand the relationship of these rules to each other. They are not related as default rule with exceptions; instead, they govern completely different types of activities. Rule 7.2(b) includes a number of exceptions, including not-for-profit lawyer referral services and paying for the reasonable cost of advertising. Rule 7.2(b) is intended to deal with referrals from non-lawyers. Lawyers are disciplined under this rule for employing "runners" or "cappers" to solicit personal-injury clients at accident scenes or hospitals, paying physicians or chiropractors for referring personal-injury clients, using non-lawyer marketing firms to tout a lawyer's services in seminars, and participating in online referral services other than those run by a bar association or a not-for-profit organization. See Ellen J. Bennett, et al., Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct (7th ed. 2011); ABA/BNA Lawyers' Manual on Professional Conduct ¶ 81:706-11; 2 Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr., et al., The Law of Lawyering § 56.5 (3d ed. & Supp. 2014). None of these standard reference works on legal ethics discusses Rule 1.5(e) as an exception to Rule 7.2(b), or even mentioned lawyer fee-sharing in connection with the prohibition on payments for referrals. Indeed, in his casebook Prof. Gillers does not mention the purported rule + exception structure in his discussion of solicitation by class-action lawyers. See Stephen Gillers, Regulation of Lawyers: Problems of Law and Ethics 879-80 (9th ed. 2012).

The Rules of Professional Conduct in Massachusetts differ from the ABA Model Rules in permitting so-called "bare" referral fees, in which the referring law firm need not assume joint responsibility for the representation, nor receive a fee proportional to the value of the legal services it provides. Compare ABA Model Rules, RPC 1.5(e). When Massachusetts changed from a system of professional-conduct rules based on the 1969 ABA Model Code to one based on the 1983 (amended in 2002) Model Rules, the Supreme Judicial Court elected to continue the practice in Massachusetts of allowing bare referral fees. See Saggese v. Kelley, 837 N.E.2d 699, 705 (Mass. 2005). That type of attorney fee-sharing has a long-established history in Massachusetts. See also Expert Declaration of Camille F. Sarrouf, Sr. Thus, even if Prof. Gillers's interpretation of the evidence is correct, and Chargois & Herron was compensated only for referring a client to Labaton, this type of arrangement is permissible under the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct.

For this reason, the Illinois appellate court decision relied upon by Prof. Gillers (see Gillers Dep. at 54-57, 81-85), Holstein v. Grossman, 616 N.E.2d 1224 (Ill. App. Ct. 1993), does not shed any light on what a lawyer ethically may do in Massachusetts. The Holstein case differentiates between a bare referral and an agreement under which the referring law firm will assume joint responsibility for the representation or perform additional legal service. Id. at 1232-33. Leaving aside the issue of whether Chargois & Herron provided services beyond a mere referral (which, in my opinion, it did), the public policy of Massachusetts and Illinois is very different with respect to bare referral fees. Law firms, in their capacity as such, and not as non-lawyers subject to Rule 7.2(b), are permitted in Massachusetts to receive compensation for client referrals.

C. Massachusetts Law Permits Enforcement of Imperfect Fee Agreements.

The Saggese case, upon which Prof. Gillers relies heavily in his Report, does not regard the lack of consent to a fee-sharing agreement as fatal to its enforceability. "Between lawyers, a fee-sharing agreement that fails to comply with the disciplinary rules is not necessarily unenforceable." See Saggese, 837 N.E.2d at 704. In another case involving an "imperfect fee agreement" – in that case, imperfect because the lawyer did not obtain the clients' consent – the District Court in Massachusetts applied a multi-factor test to determine whether to enforce the fee contract. See Daynard v. Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, P.A., 188 F. Supp. 2d 115, 125-31 (D. Mass. 2002) (citing and applying Town Planning & Eng'g Assoc. v. Amesbury Specialty Co., 342 N.E.2d 706 (Mass. 1976)). The court explained that "[t]here is no public policy against fee-splitting agreements per se," and ultimately concluded that the policy concerns underlying Mass. RPC 1.5(e) would not be undermined by enforcement of an imperfect fee-sharing agreement. Id. at 131.

D. Any Technical Imperfections in the Fee-Sharing Agreement Are Not Sanctionable.

As discussed above, it is my opinion that the writings exchanged by ARTRS representatives and Labaton lawyers satisfy Mass. RPC 1.5(e). The Saggese case does caution that, although an imperfect fee agreement – which this was not -- is enforceable, non-compliance with Rule 1.5(e) may nevertheless subject both lawyers to discipline. See Saggese, 837 N.E.2d at 706. Even if the fee agreement here is deemed technically out of compliance with Rule 1.5(e), it is an insignificant violation. Both Saggese and Daynard emphasize that the purpose of the fee-sharing rule is to inform the client of the arrangement between the lawyers, so that the client can object to anything it believes is disadvantageous in the fee-sharing arrangement. See Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 129; Saggese, 837 N.E.2d at 704-05. The retainer letter shows that ARTRS representatives consented to Labaton paying referral fees; and, to the extent that it could be deemed necessary, the Clark email shows that Labaton informed ARTRS that Labaton intended to share those fees with Chargois & Herron. If one were to accept the improper assumption that there was a violation of the letter of the rule even though it was followed in spirit, responsibility for determining whether to impose a disciplinary sanction is committed to an independent statewide process, not to individual courts. See ABA/BNA Lawyers' Manual on Prof'l Conduct ¶ 101:2001; Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 5, cmt. b (2000). Federal courts do have the inherent authority to sanction lawyers, but this authority is limited to cases of bad-faith conduct. See Chambers v. Nasco, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 43-45 (1991). Technical non-compliance with a state rule of professional conduct – particularly one regulating, rather than prohibiting, a practice – is not the kind of fraud or abuse of the judicial process that justifies sanctions under the federal court's inherent power.

E. The Massachusetts Fee-Sharing Rule Does Not Consider the Reasonableness of the Fee Division, But Only the Reasonableness of the Total Fee.

The Massachusetts fee-sharing rule, like ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), requires that the total fee to the client be reasonable. See Mass RPC 1.5(e) (". . . and the total fee is reasonable"). The reasonableness of the total fee is evaluated using an eight-factor test in Mass. RPC 1.5(a). The plain text of Mass. RPC 1.5(e) does not permit a reviewing court or disciplinary authority to second-guess the division of fees agreed upon by two or more law firms, as long as the total fee is reasonable. George Hopkins has testified that the total fee is reasonable (Hopkins Dec. ¶ 6), but of course in a class action the court must also approve a fee award, which it did here. From the point of view of legal ethics, however, the most important aspect of the relationship between Rule 1.5(a) (reasonableness) and Rule 1.5(e) (fee-sharing) is that the client has an opportunity to be informed of the fee-sharing arrangement. If the client objects, the client may refuse to consent or renegotiate the fee arrangement. (That is why Saggese and ABA Opinion 11-458 require additional scrutiny for the modification of a fee contract during the course of an existing attorney-client relationship.) Hopkins testified that he was indifferent to the agreement the firms made between themselves for sharing the fee, stating that he had no desire to act as a referee between law firms, including national and local counsel. Hopkins Dec. ¶ 12. From the client's point of view, what matters is that the total fee is reasonable. Mass. RPC 1.5(a) and Mass. RPC

1.5(e) both require a reasonable total fee. But neither rule requires that the division of the fee satisfy the reasonableness criteria in Mass. RPC 1.5(a).

Further support for this conclusion comes from the comparison of the Massachusetts fee-sharing rule with the version in the ABA Model Rules. Unlike Massachusetts, which permits "bare" referral fees, the ABA fee-sharing rule requires that "the division is in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation." ABA Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct, Rule 1.5(e)(1). In other words, there is a reasonableness requirement in the ABA version, requiring the fee to reflect either the amount of work performed by each law firm or each firm's willingness to be on the hook for potential malpractice liability. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court declined to adopt the ABA Model Rules in all their particulars, and adhered to the state's traditional permission for bare referral fees in Mass. RPC 1.5(e). If the Court had intended to permit scrutiny of the reasonableness of the fee for each law firm, it could have adopted the ABA Model Rules language.

F. The Massachusetts Rules Did Not Mandate Additional Disclosure to the Court.

This opinion relies solely on the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, although I believe the result is the same under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and other federal law, such as that governing the district court's inherent authority. Prof. Gillers seeks to ground an obligation to disclose in Mass. RPC 3.3(a) and RPC 8.4(c). See Gillers Report, pp. 71-72. Mass. RPC 3.3(a) states: "A lawyer shall not knowingly . . . make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." Mass. RPC 8.4(c) backstops this obligation by providing that a lawyer may not

"engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation."[13] Because there is no record of any affirmative false statement of fact made by Labaton lawyers to the court, and none is cited in his report, Prof. Gillers's position must depend on Comment [3] to Mass. RPC 3.3: "There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation." It is the case that a statement may be literally true but substantively misleading. Prof. Gillers cites the well-known U.S. Supreme Court case, Bronston v. United States, 409 U.S. 352 (1973), which turned on this exchange:

> Q. Do you have any bank accounts in Swiss banks Mr. Bronston?
> A. No, sir.
> Q. Have you ever?
> A. The Company . . . had an account there for about six months, in Zurich.

In fact, the defendant had a personal bank account in Zurich for about six months. The defendant's answer to the question, "have you ever had a Swiss bank account?", was literally true – the company did have a Swiss bank account – but intended to throw the questioner off the trail of Mr. Bronston's personal account.

Prof. Gillers reads Comment [3] to Mass. RPC 3.3 to prohibit that kind of literally-true-but-misleading statement, regardless of what the result would be under the criminal law of perjury, and I agree with that interpretation. See Ellen J. Bennett, et al., Annotated Model Rules of Professional Conduct 327-29 (7th ed. 2011). The trouble with his argument is not the law but the facts. I am aware of no statement in the record – and Prof. Gillers does not cite any in his Report – that would be a Bronston-type statement that misleads by omission. The substantive truth of the matter is that Labaton represented its clients effectively, and was entitled to a fee award. Part of the effective representation of clients may include working with local counsel who help manage the client relationship. It is also a long-standing practice in the plaintiffs' bar – expressly permitted by the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct – for one firm to act as a source of referrals for another firm that handles the lion's share of the litigation. See, e.g., Nora Freeman Engstrom, Attorney Advertising and the Contingency Fee Paradox, 65 Stan. L. Rev. 633, 674-78 (2013) (noting that "[s]ome aggressive attorney advertisers are mostly case brokers; they advertise heavily and, in exchange for a referral fee, distribute the cases they receive to other practitioners"). The client in question – the ARTRS – was aware that Labaton was working with a local law firm, and its current Executive Director indicated that it would not involve itself in the details of how the fee was allocated between Labaton and the local firm. At no time did a Labaton lawyer seek to shade this truth or tiptoe around full disclosure to the court. Even if the truth was that Chargois & Herron really was nothing more than a referring law firm – and again, I believe the evidence is that the parties had contemplated that Chargois & Herron would perform legal services in connection with the representation – there is no evidence that Labaton tried to hide the payment of a referral fee. Nor was there any obvious reason to hide such a fee, in that it would be permitted under the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct.

[13] In this case the citation of Rule 8.4(c) is redundant with Rule 3.3(a), which covers the same ground and sets out the duties of lawyers with specificity. The non-redundant role of Rule 8.4(c) in the ecosystem of the Rules of Professional Conduct is to cover dishonesty by lawyers in connection with conduct that occurs outside the practice of law, but nevertheless bears on the lawyer's character and fitness to practice law. See ABA/BNA Lawyers' Manual on Prof'l Conduct ¶ 101:401.

EXPERT REPORT OF TIMOTHY DACEY

I have been retained by the firm of Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") to provide an expert opinion in connection with proceedings before the Special Master in the case of Arkansas Teachers Retirement System v. State Street Bank & Trust Company, No. 11-cv-10230 MLW (D. Mass.). My qualifications to render such an opinion are summarized in Attachment A.

Specifically, I have been asked whether, in my opinion, lawyers at Lieff Cabraser violated the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct by failing to disclose to the Court or to class members that a portion of the fee awarded by the Court would be shared with the firm of Chargois & Herron. In my opinion, they did not. To violate the duty of candor imposed by Rules 3.3 and 8.4(c), a lawyer must have actual knowledge that his or her statements are false or misleading. Based on the facts as I understand them, the lawyers at Lieff Cabraser lacked the requisite state of mind to establish a violation of these Rules. It is also my opinion that neither Rule 1.2 nor Rule 1.4 of the Rules of Professional Conduct required lawyers at Lieff Cabraser to disclose the incomplete and inaccurate information available to them about the Chargois arrangements to class members when the motion for an award of attorneys' fees was filed in 2016.

I explain the factual and legal basis for my opinion in more detail below.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

In reaching my opinion, I have consulted the documents listed on Attachment B. The relevant facts, as I understand them, are as follows.

a. Overview of the State Street Litigation

Since 2008, the firm of Labaton Sucharow LLP has represented the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ATRS") as one of its securities monitoring counsel. Sometime in 2009, ATRS retained Labaton to investigate whether ATRS had claims against State Street Bank, which served as custodian for assets held by ATRS, relating to foreign exchange transactions executed by the Bank on ATRS's behalf. With the knowledge and approval of ATRS, Labaton subsequently associated with Lieff Cabraser and the Thornton Law Firm, both of which had relevant previous experience in litigation involving foreign exchange transactions by custodial banks.

In 2011, ATRS, represented by the three firms, filed a Class Action Complaint against State Street in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, claiming among other things that State Street's practices in executing certain types of foreign exchange trades violated the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, Mass. Gen. Laws c. 93A. The complaint alleged that ATRS brought the suit on its own behalf and on behalf of a class consisting of all funds for which State Street served as custodial bank and executed the specific types of foreign exchange trades at issue. Complaint ¶ 20. In 2012, the Court appointed Labaton interim lead counsel, the Thornton firm as liaison counsel, and Lieff Cabraser as additional counsel. The 2011 lawsuit has sometimes been referred to as the "Customer Class Action" and the three law firms as "Customer Counsel."

In late 2012, the Customer Class Action was consolidated for pre-trial purposes with three class action lawsuits brought against State Street of behalf of ERISA plans for which State Street served as custodian and the individual participants in such funds, asserting statutory ERISA claims distinct from the claims asserted in the Customer Class Action on behalf of all State Street custodial customers. These lawsuits have been referred to as the "ERISA Actions" and the three law firms representing the plaintiffs in those lawsuits as "ERISA Counsel." In 2013, Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel reached an agreement that ERISA Counsel would share in 9% of any fee awarded by the Court in the consolidated cases, later increased to 10%.

In July 2016, after extensive negotiations overseen by an experienced mediator, Jonathan Marks, the parties to the consolidated actions reported to the Court that settlement had been reached and filed the Settlement Agreement with the Court. Under the terms of the Agreement, State Street agreed to create a settlement fund of $300 million in full satisfaction of the claims asserted in both the Customer Class Action and the ERISA Class Actions. The Agreement designated the Labaton firm as Lead Counsel for the entire settlement class, subject to approval by the Court, and provided that Lead Counsel would apply for an award of attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards from the $300 million in an amount not to exceed $76,400,000, or approximately 25% of the settlement fund. The Agreement disclosed that 9% of the fee awarded by the Court would be distributed to ERISA Counsel and 91% to Customer Counsel, as agreed between Customer and ERISA Counsel in 2013. The Agreement further provided:

> If Customer Counsel disagree about the amount of the fee to be distributed amongst Customer Counsel by Lead Counsel, they shall mediate their dispute with Jonathan B. Marks, Esq. and, if unsuccessful, present the dispute to the Court for a determination. Settlement Agreement ¶ 21.

I understand that the method for allocating the aggregate fee award described in Paragraph 21 is widely used in class actions. See Expert Report of William Rubenstein dated March 27, 2018, ¶3 and n. 6. ("Second Rubenstein Report).

After notice and hearing, the Court gave preliminary approval to the settlement, approved a settlement class, appointed Labaton as Lead Counsel, and approved the sending of a Notice of Settlement to members of the settlement class. The Notice of Settlement informed class members that Lead Counsel would apply for an award of attorneys' fees not to exceed $74,541,250, litigation expenses of no more than $1,750,000, and service awards in the aggregate of $85,000, which together total approximately 25% of the settlement fund. Notice of Settlement, pages 5, 17. For additional details about the settlement, the Notice directed class members to the Labaton firm website and to www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com. The Notice did not address the allocation of fees among counsel. No class member objected to the proposed settlement or opted out of the class.

In September 2016, Lead Counsel filed a Motion for Final Approval of the Settlement and for Approval of Attorneys' Fees, supported by an affidavit by Lawrence Sucharow of the Labaton firm (the "Affidavit") and affidavits from Customer Counsel, ERISA Counsel, and three other law firms that had filed appearances in the ERISA cases. The motion sought a total award of fees for all plaintiffs' counsel in the total amount of $74,541,250, an amount equal to 24.85% of the settlement fund. Affidavit ¶ 162. The affidavits of the individual law firms disclosed, in summary tabular form, the hours worked by each attorney and paralegal on the consolidated cases, the customary hourly charge for each professional, and the lodestar amount for each firm. An exhibit to the affidavit added up the individual firm lodestars to produce a total lodestar for use as a cross-check on the requested fee award. Affidavit, Ex. 25. The Affidavit represented that the fee award requested in the Motion for Approval of Attorneys' Fees was 1.8 times the total lodestar amount disclosed in the law firms' affidavits. Affidavit ¶ 178.

On November 2, 2016, the Court heard argument on the Motions for Final Approval and for Approval of Attorneys' fees. Attorney David Goldsmith of the Labaton firm spoke on behalf of all the law firms representing the plaintiffs. After ruling from the bench that the class was properly certified and the settlement amount of $300 million was fair to the class, the Court turned to the issue of attorneys' fees, prefacing the discussion by observing that it was appropriate to use the percentage of a common fund approach in determining the attorneys' fees to be awarded. Hearing Transcript at 22-23. Mr. Goldsmith argued that a fee award of 25% of the settlement fund was reasonable in light of the results achieved, citing and discussing cases in the First Circuit and elsewhere that used the percentage approach. Mr. Goldsmith also acknowledged that many courts apply a "lodestar cross check" and that, if the Court awarded a 25% fee, the lodestar multiple would be 1.8, which he characterized as "pretty low under the circumstances." Tr. at 30. The Court did not ask how the fee would be divided among the plaintiffs' counsel. At the conclusion of the hearing, the Court, applying the percentage of the common fund approach and a lodestar cross-check, found that the total fee requested was reasonable. Tr. at 35. Final judgment entered that same day.

b. Discovery of Errors in the Lodestar Calculation.

On November 8, 2016, a reporter for The Boston Globe contacted the Thornton firm and raised questions about the lodestar figures submitted to the Court. Further investigation revealed that some staff attorney time listed on Labaton's and Lieff Cabraser's affidavits had also been included in Thornton's lodestar figures and that some attorneys had been assigned different rates by different firms. On November 10, 2016, after consultation among the three law firms, Mr. Goldsmith wrote the Court to disclose the mistakes and provide corrected lodestar information. The corrections resulted in a reduction of 9,322.9 in total hours, a reduction of $4,058,654.50 in the total lodestar used as a cross-check on the fee award, and an increase in the lodestar multiplier from 1.8 to 2.0. Goldsmith Letter, p. 3. Even as adjusted, the lodestar multiplier was comfortably within the range of multipliers approved by the courts in other class action cases.

Expert Declaration of William B. Rubenstein dated July 31, 2017, ¶45 ("First Rubenstein Report").

c. Labaton's Arrangement with Chargois & Herron

I understand that the Labaton firm was first introduced to ATRS by attorneys at the firm of Chargois & Herron in 2007. In exchange for Chargois' help in making the introduction, Labaton agreed to pay the Chargois firm a maximum of 20% of any fee that Labaton received representing an institutional investor introduced by the Chargois firm, including ATRS. The agreement did not require the Chargois firm to perform any additional work in connection with the cases that Labaton brought or assume any responsibility for such cases. This agreement is referred to on page 33 of Professor Gillers' Report as the "Chargois Arrangement." The Gillers Report raises questions about whether the Chargois Arrangement was properly disclosed to and approved by ATRS, as required by Rule 1.5(e).

Lieff Cabraser first became aware that Labaton had some relationship with the Chargois firm in April 2013, when Garrett Bradley of the Thornton firm circulated an email stating that Labaton had an obligation to share 20% of its fee in the State Street litigation with Damon Chargois, whom Bradley described as "local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System." Mr. Bradley proposed that Mr. Chargois instead get 4% "off the top" of any total attorneys' fees awarded in the State Street litigation. Bradley asked Robert Lieff to confirm that whatever Labaton owed the Chargois firm would be paid "off the top," thereby spreading the cost of Mr. Chargois' fee among all Customer Counsel, before Customer Counsel divided any fee award among themselves. Mr. Lieff agreed. See Email string dated April 24, 2013 (LCHB 0053538-39).

In August 2015, Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser inquired about the details of the proposed allocation of attorneys' fees amongst Class Counsel, including how "ERISA and local Arkansas counsel fits in." Mr. Bradley replied by indicating he had re-sent a copy of the April 2013 email exchange concerning the Chargois firm. See Email string dated August 29-30, 2015 (LCHB 0053531-32).

In July 2016, in connection with further negotiations among counsel about allocation of fees, Garrett Bradley sent an email to attorneys on the Customer Counsel team including Bob Lieff and Dan Chiplock reporting that Damon Chargois was willing to accept 5.5% of the total fee awarded in the State Street case, to be paid "off the top." The email described Chargois as "the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role." See Email dated July 8, 2016 (LCHB 0053542).

Other emails sent or received by Lieff Cabraser attorneys consistently described the Chargois firm as "local counsel." See Response by Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein to Special Master's September 7, 2017 Request for Supplemental Submission ("Lieff Cabraser Response to September 7 Request"), ¶¶2-4.

I understand that no attorney at Lieff Cabraser had any direct contact with Damon Chargois or anyone else associated with his firm. No attorney knew the terms of the Chargois Arrangement, apart from was what was disclosed in Garrett Bradley's emails. Based on the very limited information provided in Bradley's emails, both Robert Lieff and Dan Chiplock believed that Chargois & Herron was performing the role of local counsel dealing directly with ATRS personnel in Arkansas about the State Street litigation, similar to the role that Lieff Cabraser's local counsel in Ohio played in the BNY Mellon litigation. Lieff Dep. Transcript at 60-61, 73-74; Chiplock Dep. Transcript at 102-116. No one at Lieff Cabraser was aware that the Chargois firm had performed no work on the State Street lawsuit, or understood that there may be an issue about whether the fee-sharing agreement between Labaton and the Chargois firm had been properly approved by ATRS, until September 2017, when the underlying arrangement between Labaton and Chargois first came to light in the deposition of Eric Belfi, a Labaton attorney, taken by the Special Master. Lieff Cabraser Response, ¶ 6. That deposition took place ten months after the hearing on the motions for final approval of the settlement and award of attorneys' fees.

II. OPINION

I agree that the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct govern the conduct of the Lieff Cabraser lawyers who appeared in the State Street lawsuit, for the reasons given in Professor Gillers' Report at 55-56. In this Report, I will focus on a lawyer's duty of candor under Rules 3.3 and 8.4(c) of the Massachusetts Rules and will then briefly address Professor Gillers' contention that Rules 1.2 and 1.4 imposes additional obligations of disclosure to absent class members. In applying the Massachusetts Rules, I have tried to keep in mind the following admonition in paragraph 5 of the Scope section of the Rules:

> The Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer's conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act on uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. (Emphasis added).

a. Rule 3.3

Rule 3.3 provides, in relevant part:

> (a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:
>
> (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer; . . .
>
> (b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal. . . .

> (d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse. (Emphasis added).

The critical terms "knowingly," "knows," and "know" are defined in the Terminology section of the Rules as follows:

> "Knowingly," "known," or "knows" denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances. Rule 1.0(g).

The second sentence permits a Court or disciplinary agency to find that a lawyer had actual knowledge of a fact from circumstantial evidence, even if the lawyer denies such knowledge.

The standard of actual knowledge differs from the "reasonably should know" standard employed in some Rules. See, e.g., Rule 4.3. Under the Rules, "reasonably should know" means what "a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence" would ascertain regarding the matter in question. Rule 1.0(m).

b. Rule 8.4(c).

Rule 8.4(c) provides:

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

> (c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation; . . .

This Rule, unlike Rule 3.3, does not expressly define the state of mind required to find a violation of the Rule. The term "fraud," however, is defined in the Rules as conduct "that is fraudulent under substantive or procedural law and has a purpose to deceive." Rule 1.0(e). Moreover, Massachusetts decisions applying Rule 8.4 require proof that the lawyer's conduct was knowing. See, e.g., Matter of Zak, 476 Mass. 1034, 1038 (2017) (lawyer's statements contained "deliberate falsehoods"); Matter of Murray, 455 Mass. 872, 881 (2010) (no violation because the lawyer had "no intent to deceive."). I conclude, therefore, that the mental element required to show a violation of 8.4(c) is the same as the mental element required under Rule 3.3:

a lawyer must have actual knowledge that his or her statements or other conduct are false or misleading.

c. Application of Duty of Candor to Lieff Cabraser Attorneys.

In applying Rules 3.3 and 8.4(b) to the conduct of the Lieff Cabraser attorneys in this case, I find it helpful to distinguish the different ways in which a statement may be fraudulent or misleading.

First, a statement of fact may itself be incorrect. The total lodestar amount reported to the Court in the Motion for Attorneys' Fees was false in this primary sense. The error was, however, unintentional and was corrected as soon as it came to the lawyers' attention, so there was no violation of Rule 3.3 or 8.4(b).

Second, a statement of fact may be true as far as it goes but omit some critical information necessary to understand the significance of the statement for the purpose it was made, thus creating a misleading impression. An example of this type of fraud can be found in Kannavos v. Annino, 356 Mass. 42 (1969), which has been cited and followed in disciplinary cases. See Matter of O'Toole, 2015 WL 9309021 (Ma.St.Bar.Disp.Bd.), cited in Professor Gillers' Report at 71. In Kannavos, an owner advertised a building for sale as a multi-family, income-producing property. The owner knew but did not disclose that multi-family use in that location was illegal under the city's zoning ordinance. The Court held that the owner's statements about the use of the property were materially incomplete and therefore constituted fraud. As the Court explained:

> Although there may be 'no duty imposed upon one party to a transaction to speak for the information of the other * * * if he does speak with reference to a given point of information, voluntarily or at the other's request, he is bound to speak honestly and to divulge all the material facts bearing upon the point that lie within his knowledge. Fragmentary information may be as misleading * * * as active misrepresentation, and > half-truths may be as 712 actionable as whole lies * * *.' See Harper & James, Torts, s 7.14. Kannavos v. Annino, 356 Mass. 42, 48, 247 N.E.2d 708, 711–12 (1969).

In Kannavos, the owner's statements were intended to and did in fact attract a buyer who was interested in an income-producing property. The fact that the use of the property was illegal was plainly "a material fact bearing upon the point" of the owner's statement.

In the present case, the attorneys for the plaintiffs collectively applied for a single fee award for all legal services rendered based on a percentage of the fund recovered for the class, which I understand from Professor Rubenstein's First Report is consistent with the law in the First Circuit and the most common approach courts take to awarding fees in common fund cases. Rubenstein First Report ¶ 12 and n. 4. In addition, most of the firms that filed appearances in the State Street litigation also provided summary information about hours worked and billing rates to permit the Court to calculate a lodestar and perform a lodestar cross-check. To perform a lodestar cross-check, as I understand it, the Court divides the total lodestar number into the fee award requested, yielding a lodestar multiple. The multiple facilitates comparison with fee awards in other case, see Manual for Complex Litigation, §14.122, and a high multiple may indicate that the fee requested is disproportionate to the time and effort the lawyers put into the case and the risks they undertook. As Professor Rubenstein explains in his First Report,

> ". . . [U]sing a lodestar cross-check enables a court to make a rough estimate of counsel's lodestar for the purpose of ensuring against a windfall." First Rubenstein Report, ¶ 15.

Nothing in the lodestar affidavits served as an implied representation that the fee award will be distributed in proportion to the lodestars of the individual firms or that the firms submitting affidavits were all the firms who might share in the award. See Second Rubenstein Report, ¶ 13(a). [1] In fact, the Settlement Agreement disclosed that the fee award would be allocated among counsel by agreement, unless a dispute arose. Agreement, ¶ 21. Accordingly, nothing in the limited and inaccurate information available to Lieff Cabraser lawyers in 2016 would have alerted them that they needed to say something about the Chargois Arrangement in order to permit the Court to perform an appropriate lodestar cross-check. Accordingly, I conclude that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers' failure to disclose what little they knew about the Chargois Arrangement was not fraudulent in this second sense.

Third, a statement may be fraudulent if a person knows that he or she is under a duty to speak but says nothing. A duty to speak without being asked commonly arises in fiduciary relationships. See e.g. Restatement (Third) Of Agency § 8.11 (2006); Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 20 (2000). An example of this type of duty is found in Rule 3.3(d), which requires that a lawyer in an ex parte proceedings disclose material facts known to the lawyer to the court, even if the facts are adverse. Comment [14A] to the Massachusetts version of Rule 3.3 recognizes that the duties in Rule 3.3(d) may apply when adversaries jointly request relief from a court, "such as a joint petition to approve the settlement of a class action lawsuit."

To establish this third type of fraud, it is essential to show that a person knew he or she had a duty to speak without being prompted. In my experience, lawyers who wish to understand their duties in connection with pending litigation start by consulting the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. I assume for purposes of my opinion that the lawyers at Lieff Cabraser were familiar with the Rules and thus had actual knowledge of what the Rules required. Rule 23(h)(1) specifies that a claim for an award of attorneys' fees in a class action must be made by motion

[1] As Professor Rubenstein points out in his Second Report, there are a variety of reasons why Lead Counsel might have legitimately decided to omit the Chargois firm from the lodestar submission. Rubenstein Second Report, ¶14, n. 66.

"in accordance with Rule 54(d)(2)." Rule 54(d)(2) in turn specifies what issues a motion for fees must address, including "the terms of any agreement for fees," but only if the court so orders. Rule 54(d)(2)(B)(iv). Thus a lawyer who consulted Rules 23 and 54(d) would not be aware of any duty to disclose the terms of agreements among the lawyers about allocation of fees in the absence of a court order, because there is none under those rules.

A lawyer may also know that there is a duty to disclose if the Local Rules or customary practices of the courts where the lawyer appears establish such a duty. Unlike the local rules of some other jurisdictions (such as the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York), there is no Local Rule in the District of Massachusetts addressing motions for an award of fees in class actions or other cases. To determine the customary practices in District of Massachusetts, I have relied on Professor Rubenstein's Second Report, which reports the results of a survey of all in class action settlements in the District of Massachusetts since February 2011. The survey established that there were 127 such cases. In none of these cases did the court order that fee agreements be disclosed. In only a handful of the cases were fee agreements even mentioned. Second Rubenstein Report at ¶ 7. Thus, a lawyer familiar with the customary practices in the District of Massachusetts would conclude that there was no duty to disclose fee agreements unless the court specifically so ordered.

During oral argument on the Motion for Attorneys' Fees in the State Street litigation, the Court did ask one question about Labaton's agreement with ATRS, which Mr. Goldsmith answered. Hearing Transcript, p. 26 The Court did not ask any other questions about fee agreements or allocations and did not order any further disclosures. Nothing in these facts establishes that the lawyers at Lieff Cabraser knew of any duty to say more.

Professor Gillers also contends that a duty to disclose fee arrangements has been established by judicial precedent. I have reviewed the cases cited in the Gillers Report at pages 68-71. In most of those cases, the lawyers brought a dispute about fees to the court's attention for resolution. The cases stand for the general proposition that the court is not bound by agreements among counsel allocating fees and has the power to award fees itself. Language in In re Agent Orange Product Liability Litigation, 818 F.2d 216, 226 (2d Cir. 1987) to the effect that lawyers have a duty to disclose fee allocation agreements without being asked reflects the local rules applicable in the Eastern District of New York where the case was tried. See Second Rubenstein Report, ¶12, n. 45. In Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman LLP, 814 F.3rd 132, 138 n.2 (2d Cir. 2016), the Second Circuit recognized that Rule 23(h) itself does not require such disclosure. Citing precedent in another Circuit applying the local rules of different District Court does not establish that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers were aware that they had a duty to disclose what they knew about proposed fee payments to the Chargois firm.

d. Professor Gillers' Revised Opinion Regarding the Duty of Lieff Cabraser Lawyers.

At his deposition on March 20, Professor Gillers conceded that the lawyers involved in the State Street lawsuit were not required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to disclose fee allocations among counsel of record unless ordered to do so by the Court. Gillers Depos. Vol. I at 216-217. He also acknowledged that Lieff Cabraser's lawyers did not know all the terms of the Chargois Arrangement, and that they thought the Chargois firm was local counsel for ATRS and had rendered valuable services in connection with the class action. Gillers Depos. Vol. I at 225. Nevertheless, he contended that the size of the payment to the Chargois firm triggered a duty to investigate what Chargois had done to earn his fee. Gillers Depos. Vol. I at 226. Presumably, the argument goes, had the Lieff Cabraser attorneys performed such an investigation, they would have discovered facts leading them to agree with Professor Gillers that the Chargois Arrangement did not comply with Rule 1.5(e) and that the Chargois fee was clearly excessive under Rule 1.5(a), and would then have been under a duty to report the Chargois Arrangement to the Court.

At best, this is an argument that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers reasonably should have known that the description of Mr. Chargois' role and function provided by co-counsel raised some questions that required further investigation. It certainly does not establish that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers actually knew they had duty to say something about Mr. Chargois' fee interest in 2016 when the Motion for a Fee Award was submitted to the Court. In my opinion, without such actual knowledge, there is no violation of the duty of candor established by Rules 3.3 and 8.4(c).

Moreover, the premise of Professor Gillers' argument is that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers had enough information in 2016 to realize that there was something unusual about Labaton's agreement with Chargois that warranted further investigation. When the motion of an award of fees was submitted the Court in 2016, the Lieff Cabraser lawyers understood that Labaton had agreed to share 20% of its of its fee with the Chargois firm, that the Chargois firm was acting as local counsel, and that Chargois was performing valuable services for the case.[2] On the basis of these facts, Mr. Bradley, presumably speaking for Labaton as well, proposed to pay Chargois 5.5% of the total fee. It is not obvious that an agreement to split a fee 94.5%/5.5% between trial counsel and local counsel is so unusual that it triggers a duty among co-counsel to investigate further, and I found nothing in the record to support such a conclusion. Moreover, none of the [2] As Professor Rubenstein points out, Lieff Cabraser lawyers would have been justified in assuming that Labaton decided not to submit the Chargois firm's time as part of the lodestar submission for a variety of legitimate reasons. Second Rubenstein Report, ¶ 14(a), n. 66. Thus the absence of a lodestar declaration from the Chargois firm did not require the Lieff Cabraser attorneys to investigate further.

information available to Lieff Cabraser lawyers at the time suggested that ATRS had not properly authorized Mr. Chargois' role and share of the fee. I therefore disagree with Professor Gillers' contention that the limited and misleading information available to Lieff Cabraser attorneys triggered some duty to conduct a further investigation.

e. The Duty of Lieff Cabraser Attorneys to Class Members.

In his Report at pages 75-78, Professor Gillers also contends that each of the firms designated as attorneys for the class had an ethical duty to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to absent class members, citing Rules 1.2 and 1.4 of the Rules of Professional Conduct. It is undoubtedly true attorneys for the class have fiduciary duties to the class as a whole. It is not, however, feasible to require class counsel to follow the letter of Rules 1.2 and 1.4 in dealing with absent class members. For example, an individual client has the absolute right under Rule 1.2(a) to accept or reject settlement for any reason or no reason. Applying such a rule in class actions would make settlement impossible. Similarly, Rules 1.2(a) and 1.4(a)(2) require a lawyer to consult with an individual client about the means by which the client's objectives are to be accomplished, including such issues as the expenses to be incurred and the impact legal tactics on the interests of third parties. See Rule 1.2, Comment [2]. It is plainly impractical to require lawyers for a class to consult with absent class members about the means for achieving their objectives. Accordingly, courts have recognized that duties of lawyers to individual clients cannot be mechanically applied in class actions. See, e.g., In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig., 800 F.2d 14, 19 (2d Cir. 1986) (holding that the traditional rules governing the representation of individual clients should not be mechanically applied in the settlement of class actions); Advisory Committee's Notes to Rule 23(g) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (recognizing that the duties of class counsel may be different than "the customary obligations of counsel to individual clients.")

In practice, lawyers for a class communicate with absent class members about settlement and about any application for fees by following the notice provisions in Rules 23(e)(1) and 24(h)(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, and by posting relevant documents relating to the settlement on a website accessible to class members. Those procedures were followed in the State Street case. Nothing in the Federal Rules or applicable case law requires class counsel to disclose proposed fee allocations in the notice to absent class members. See Second Rubenstein Report, ¶¶ 17-20. Professor Gillers' claim that the Lieff Cabraser lawyers had a duty to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to class members is simply a variant of his claim that they duty to disclose the arrangement to the Court: namely, that on the basis of the limited and misleading information available to them in 2016, they should have realized that there was something problematic about letting Chargois share in the fee award and conducted a further investigation, which would have led them to conclude that absent class members needed to know about the Chargois Arrangement. In my opinion, that is Monday morning quarterbacking, not a fair description of the fiduciary duties of Lieff Cabraser lawyers at the time notice was given to the class in 2016.

III. CONCLUSION

In summary, it is my opinion that:

1. The Lieff Cabraser lawyers did not knowingly make a false statement of fact to the Court.

2. The Lieff Cabraser lawyers were not required to disclose what they knew about the Chargois Arrangement in order to permit the Court to calculate an appropriate percentage of the settlement to award as a fee or to perform a lodestar cross-check.
3. Nothing in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Local Rules of the District of Massachusetts, or the customary practices of lawyers in this District required Lieff Cabrasser attorneys to disclose what they knew about the Chargois Arrangement without being ordered to do so.
4. The limited and incorrect information about the Chargois Arrangement known to the Lieff Cabrasser attorneys in 2016 did not trigger a duty of disclosure to the Court or to class members or a duty to further investigate the Arrangement.

Accordingly, I conclude that the Lieff Cabrasser attorneys did not violate the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. Professor Gillers' contrary opinion, it seems to me, ignores the admonition in the Scope section of the Rules of Professional Conduct that a lawyer's conduct should be judged "on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act on uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation." Statement of Qualifications of Timothy J. Dacey

I have been asked to state my qualifications to express an opinion regarding the professional conduct of lawyers.

I graduated from law school in 1969 and became a member of the bar of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court in 1970. Since 1970, I have practiced as a trial lawyer in Boston, Massachusetts at the firms of Hill & Barlow and Goulston & Storrs, representing clients before Massachusetts state and federal courts and arbitration panels in a wide variety of matters, including contract disputes, antitrust cases, construction litigation, probate matters, and professional malpractice cases involving accountants, architects and engineers.

Beginning in the mid-1980's, a substantial portion of my practice (half or more of my time) has been representing lawyers and law firms in malpractice claims and partnership disputes before the Massachusetts Superior Court, the federal district court, and arbitration panels, and in disciplinary matters before the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers. I have also regularly advised lawyers, law firms, and corporate law departments concerning compliance with the Rules of Professional Conduct and other law governing lawyers.

At Hill & Barlow, I was the loss prevention partner and chair of the Ethics Committee. In these positions, I was responsible for managing claims against the firm for professional malpractice and in advising other attorneys in the firm about their ethical responsibilities. Since joining Goulston & Storrs, I have served as Assistant General Counsel to the firm with responsibilities similar to those I performed at Hill & Barlow.

I have been a member of the Committee on Professional Ethics of the Massachusetts Bar Association since 1984 and Vice-Chair of the Committee since 1991. During my tenure, the Committee has issued several hundred opinions (published and unpublished) for the guidance of members of the Massachusetts bar. In addition, as Vice-Chair of the Committee, I have been responsible for providing emergency advice on ethical issues to inquiring lawyers who needed answers before the next regularly scheduled meeting of the Committee.

In 2005 and 2006, I was a member of the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility.

Since 2012, I have been a member of the Advisory Committee on the Rules of Professional Conduct. The Committee is appointed by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court to advise the Court concerning proposed amendments to the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Since 2012, I have been a Lecturer at Harvard Law School, where I teach a course on the Legal Profession in the Fall Semester. The primary focus of the course is on the Rules of Professional Conduct.

I have not testified as an expert witness in the last four years.

I am being compensated at the rate of $710 per hour.

Additional information is on the attached resume.
