Attached are a summary and detailed report that we ran in State Street late last year. It's for State Street but you get a sense of what these are supposed to look like.

I have rough manual records. Please send your samples.

Thanks,

Mike

I've been meaning to check in with you guys and make sure you are keeping adequate time records for all of the good work you are doing -- class action fee requests require time reports, and you don't want to be creating those after the fact. We can chat about it and I can send you samples if you like, just let me know. Thanks, Mike.

Mike Rogers: 1,349.4
David Goldsmith: 931.2
Eric Belfi: 610.5

Labaton TOTAL hours = 29,012.7

-Thornton doc review external (Thornton reviewers working Lieff + Labaton paid by Thornton) = 8,889.25
-Thornton doc review internal = 1,262.5
-Mike Lesser: 1243.2
-Evan Hoffman: 827.6
-M Thornton: 500 (estimated from the records we have now)

Thornton total, excluding G Bradley = 12722.55

2. I do not have a specific recollection of when I wrote the notes on the pages cited in paragraph 1 of this Declaration. Some of the notes appear to contain my thoughts on the documents, or are notes of meetings. Most of the notes appear to show an amount of time. One of my practices was to record the amount of time I spent reviewing a particular document on the document itself. I assume this is the case with respect to the time notations appearing on the pages cited in paragraph 1 of this Declaration.

3. I am the author of some, but not all, of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-090729. In particular, I am the author of the notation in the upper left corner of the page. I am not the author of the notation in the bottom right corner of the page. Nor am I the author of any of the markings that appear on subsequent pages of this document (i.e., TLF-SST-090730 to TLF-SST-090749).

4. I am the author of some, but not all, of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-090832. In particular, I am the author of the notation in the lower left corner of the page. I am not the author of the notations above the words "Chicago" and "Agent" in the paragraph at the bottom of the page.

5. I am the author of some, but not all, of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-090872. In particular, I am the author of the notation on the lower left corner of the page. I am not the author of the notation on the top right corner of the page.

6. I am the author of some, but not all, of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-090901. In particular, I am the author of the notation on the lower left corner of the page. I am not the author of the notation above and to the right of the quotation in what is marked paragraph 2.

7. I am the author of some, but not all, of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-090905. In particular, I am the author of the notation on the lower left corner of the page. I am not the author of the notation immediately below the title of the page.

8. I am not the author of the handwritten notes on the page produced to the Special Master at Bates numbers TLF-SST-090887, TLF-SST-090400, TLF-SST-090615, TLF-SST-090723, and TLF-SST-090833.

9. The time records at Bates Numbers TLF-SST-090931 to TLF-SST-091187 appear to be copies or drafts of the master spreadsheet created by TLF and maintained during the course of the State Street litigation. It is my understanding that the final version of this spreadsheet was previously produced to the Special Master at Bates number TLF-SST-000001.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on March 23, 2018.

Massachusetts General Laws Annotated Currentness
Rules of the Supreme Judicial Court (Refs & Annos)
Chapter Three. Ethical Requirements and Rules Concerning the Practice of Law Rule 3:07. Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct and Comments (Refs & Annos) Client-Lawyer Relationship

Rule 1.5. Fees

(a) A lawyer shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee. The factors to be considered in determining whether a fee is clearly excessive include the following:

(1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;

(2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer;

(3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;

(4) the amount involved and the results obtained;

(5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;

(6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;

(7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services; and

(8) whether the fee is fixed or contingent.

(b) When the lawyer has not regularly represented the client, the basis or rate of the fee shall be communicated to the client, preferably in writing, before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation.

(c) A fee may be contingent on the outcome of the matter for which the service is rendered, except in a matter in which a contingent fee is prohibited by paragraph (d) or other law. Except for contingent fee arrangements concerning the collection of commercial accounts and of insurance company subrogation claims, a contingent fee agreement shall be in writing and signed in duplicate by both the lawyer and the client within a reasonable time after the making of the agreement. One such copy (and proof that the duplicate copy has been delivered or mailed to the client) shall be retained by the lawyer for a period of seven years after the conclusion of the contingent fee matter. The writing shall state:

(1) the name and address of each client;

(2) the name and address of the lawyer or lawyers to be retained;

(3) the nature of the claim, controversy, and other matters with reference to which the services are to be performed;

(4) the contingency upon which compensation to be paid, and whether and to what extent the client is to be liable to pay compensation otherwise than from amounts collected for him or her by the lawyer;

(5) the method by which the fee is to be determined, including the percentage or percentages that shall accrue to the lawyer out of amounts collected, and unless the parties otherwise agree in writing, that the lawyer shall be entitled to the greater of (i) the amount of any attorney's fees awarded by the court or included in the settlement or (ii) the percentage or other formula applied to the recovery amount not including such attorney's fees; and

(6) the method by which litigation and other expenses are to be deducted from the recovery and whether such expenses are to be deducted before or after the contingent fee is calculated.

Upon conclusion of a contingent fee matter for which a writing is required under this paragraph, the lawyer shall provide the client with a written statement stating the outcome of the matter and, if there is a recovery, showing the remittance to the client and the method of its determination.

(d) A lawyer shall not enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect:

(1) any fee in a domestic relations matter, the payment or amount of which is contingent upon the securing of a divorce or upon the amount of alimony or support, or property settlement in lieu thereof; or

(2) a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.

(e) A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable. This limitation does not prohibit payment to a former partner or associate pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement.

(f) The following form of contingent fee agreement may be used to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (c). The authorization of this form shall not prevent the use of other forms consistent with this rule.

(2) The contingency upon which compensation is to be paid is:

(3) The client is not to be liable to pay compensation or court costs and expenses of litigation otherwise than from amounts collected for the client by the lawyer, except as follows:

(4) Compensation (including that of any associated counsel) to be paid to the lawyer by the client on the foregoing contingency shall be the following percentage of the (gross) (net) [indicate which] amount collected. [Here insert the percentages to be charged in the event of collection. These may be on a flat rate basis or in a descending scale in relation to the amount collected.] The percentage shall be applied to the amount of the recovery not including any attorney's fees awarded by a court or included in a settlement. The lawyer's compensation shall be such attorney's fees or the amount determined by the percentage calculation described above, whichever is greater. [Modify the last two sentences as appropriate if the parties agree on some other basis for calculation.]

COMMENT

2006 Main Volume

Basis or Rate of Fee

[1] When the lawyer has regularly represented a client, they ordinarily will have evolved an understanding concerning the basis or rate of the fee. In a new client-lawyer relationship, however, an understanding as to the fee should be promptly established. It is not necessary to recite all the factors that underlie the basis of the fee, but only those that are directly involved in its computation. It is sufficient, for example, to state that the basic rate is an hourly charge or a fixed amount or an estimated amount, or to identify the factors that may be taken into account in finally fixing the fee. When developments occur during the representation that render an earlier estimate substantially inaccurate, a revised estimate should be provided to the client. A written statement concerning the fee reduces the possibility of misunderstanding. Furnishing the client with a simple memorandum or a copy of the lawyer's customary fee schedule is sufficient if the basis or rate of the fee is set forth.

[1A] Rule 1.5(a) departs from Model Rule 1.5(a) by retaining the standard of former DR2-106(A) that a fee must be illegal or clearly excessive to constitute a violation of this rule. However, it does not affect the substantive law that fees must be reasonable to be enforceable against the client.

[1B] Rule 1.5(b) states, as the ABA Model Rule does, that the basis or rate of a fee shall be communicated "preferably in writing". Appropriate caution and ease of proof of compliance with Rule 1.5(b) indicate that the presentation of a fee arrangement to a client in writing is desirable.

Terms of Payment

[2] A lawyer may require advance payment of a fee, but is obliged to return any unearned portion. See Rule 1.16(d). A lawyer may accept property in payment for services, such as an ownership interest in an enterprise, providing this does not involve acquisition of a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of the litigation contrary to Rule 1.8(j). However, a fee paid in property instead of money may be subject to special scrutiny because it involves questions concerning both the value of the services and the lawyer's special knowledge of the value of the property.

[3] An agreement may not be made whose terms might induce the lawyer improperly to curtail services for the client or perform them in a way contrary to the client's interest. For example, a lawyer should not enter into an agreement whereby services are to be provided only up to a stated amount when it is foreseeable that more extensive services probably will be required, unless the situation is adequately explained to the client. Otherwise, the client might have to bargain for further assistance in the midst of a proceeding or transaction. However, it is proper to define the extent of services in light of the client's ability to pay. A lawyer should not exploit a fee arrangement based primarily on hourly charges by using wasteful procedures. When there is doubt whether a contingent fee is consistent with the client's best interest, the lawyer should offer the client alternative bases for the fee and explain their implications. Applicable law may impose limitations on contingent fees, such as a ceiling on the percentage.

Division of Fee

[4] A division of fee is a single billing to a client covering the fee of two or more lawyers who are not in the same firm. A division of fee facilitates association of more than one lawyer in a matter in which neither alone could serve the client as well, and most often is used when the fee is contingent and the division is between a referring lawyer and a trial specialist. Paragraph (e) permits the lawyers to divide a fee after disclosure of the fact of division to, and consent by, the client. It does not require disclosure to the client of the share that each lawyer is to receive. Moreover, as under the former rule, the total fee must be reasonable to be enforced.

[4A] Paragraph (e), unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer unless, with a client's written consent, each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation. Paragraph (e) is substantively the same as former DR 2-107, which was adopted by the Justices in 1972 without subparagraph (A)(2) of DR 2-107 of the ABA Code (prescribing the basis for fee division). The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer.

Disputes over Fees

[5] In the event of a fee dispute, the lawyer should conscientiously consider submitting to mediation or an established fee arbitration service. Law may prescribe a procedure for determining a lawyer's fee, for example, in representation of an executor or administrator, a class or a person entitled to a reasonable fee as part of the measure of damages. The lawyer entitled to such a fee and a lawyer representing another party concerned with the fee should comply with the prescribed procedure.

[6] Former Rule 3.05(6), with its limitations period for challenging contingent fee agreements, was eliminated as inappropriate for a disciplinary rule.

Form of Fee Agreement

[7] Rule 1.5(f) provides a form of contingent fee agreement that may be used, as did S.J.C. Rule 3.05, which was repealed on the adoption of the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. The new form largely follows the language of the form that appeared in S.J.C. Rule 3.05. Inclusion of the reference to court costs and expenses of litigation in clause (3) reflects the permission granted in Rule 1.8(e)(1) to make repayment of such costs and expenses contingent on the outcome of the matter. Deletion of the reference to "reasonable compensation" that appeared in clause (4) of the former form makes no substantive change. The contingent fee must be reasonable to be enforced against the client and may not be clearly excessive in order to avoid violating Rule 1.5(a). See Comment 1A.

(8) When attorney's fees are awarded by a court or included in a settlement, a question arises as to the proper method of calculating a contingent fee. Rule 1.5(c)(5) and paragraph (4) of the form agreement contained in Rule 1.5(f) state the default rule, but the parties may agree on a different basis for such calculation, such as applying the percentage to the total recovery, including attorney's fees.

Corresponding ABA Model Rule. Identical to Model Rule 1.5(b), and (d); (a) first two sentences based on DR 2-106; (c) different but in many respects similar to Model Rule 1.5(e); (e) different; (f) is an expanded version of S.J.C. Rule 3:05(7).

Corresponding Former Massachusetts Rule. Current S.J.C. Rule 3:05, DR 2-106, 2-107.

NOTES OF DECISIONS

Contingent fee agreement 1
Duty to inform 2

1. Contingent fee agreement

All contingent fee agreements between attorneys and clients are subject to the overarching requirement of reasonableness. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client 147

Discipline was not appropriate in connection with contingent fee agreements providing that on discharge by the client, the attorney would be entitled to recover the greater of the reasonable value of his services or one-third of any settlement offer made up to that point; rule of professional conduct did not bar an attorney from negotiating such a term in a contingent fee agreement, and record did not indicate that attorney had ever recovered a fee from clients that exceeded a quantum meruit recovery. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client 44(1)

Contingent fee agreement, which did not expressly foreclose the possibility that if the attorney were discharged by the client, he could seek fees even though the client had not recovered funds from a third party, would not be read in disciplinary proceeding involving that agreement to allow such a recovery, where the attorney had made no argument that he would be entitled to recover fees in such a circumstance. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client 148(1)

Rule of professional conduct permits attorneys and clients to negotiate specific terms of contingent fee agreements for themselves. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client 147

2. Duty to inform

It is not inherently wrong or improper for a lawyer to negotiate, with explanation, a term in a contingent fee agreement that provides a general, contractual lien on the client's recovery, if any, as security for unpaid fees and expenses. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client 147

Lawyers should be required to explain specifically the meaning of any terms in contingent fee agreement that differ from the model agreement contained in rule of professional conduct and to obtain the client's written consent to those provisions; terms added to model agreement presumably are intended to protect the lawyer's ability to collect his or her legitimate fee, rather than to advance an independent interest of the client, and an explanation of these terms would likely increase the client's understanding of the proposed contractual relationship with the lawyer and enable the client to make a more informed decision about whether to go forward. DR 2-07. Division of Fees Among Lawyers

(A) A lawyer shall not divide a fee for legal services with another lawyer who is not a partner in or associate of that lawyer's firm or law office, unless:

(1) The client consents to employment of the other lawyer after a full disclosure that a division of fees will be made.

(2) The division is made in proportion to the services performed and responsibility assumed by each.

(3) The total fee of the lawyers does not exceed reasonable compensation for all legal services they rendered the client.

(B) This rule does not prohibit payments to a former partner or associate pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement.

PETER JOY, called as a witness, having been duly sworn by a Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. SINNOTT: Good afternoon, sir.

THE WITNESS: Good afternoon.

MR. SINNOTT: For the record, my name is William Sinnott, S-I-N-N-O-T-T, from the firm of Barrett & Singal. I'm counsel to the special master.

We are here on a special master investigation deriving from Arkansas Teachers Retirement System versus State Street Bank, Number 11-cv-10230-MLW.

The special master is the Honorable Gerald T. Rosen, R-O-S-E-N, formerly with the United States District Court in Detroit, Michigan. He is a retired federal district court judge.

Also on the special master's team to my left is Attorney Elizabeth McEvoy, also of Barrett & Singal.

On the telephone is Linda Hylenski, also on the team. The special master will be joining us shortly.

I would ask, at this time, that the parties, beginning with our witness, identify themselves and their affiliation.

THE WITNESS: My name is Peter Joy, and I am a witness on behalf of the law firm of Labaton & Sucharow.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you, Peter.

Joan?

MS. LUKEY: Joan Lukey from Choate Hall, representing Labaton Sucharow.

MR. CANTY: Michael Canty on behalf of Labaton.

MR. GLASS: Stuart Glass, Choate Hall, for Labaton.

MR. HEIMANN: Richard Heimann for Lieff Cabraser.

MR. LIEFF: Robert Lieff, Lieff Cabraser.

MR. THORNTON: Michael Thornton, Thornton Law Firm.

MR. KELLY: Brian Kelly, Nixon Peabody, on behalf of Thornton Law Firm.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you. And if the phone participants could identify themselves, beginning with David.
MR. COPLEY: David Copley for Keller Rohrback on behalf of the ERISA plaintiffs.
MR. SINNOTT: Josh?
MR. SHARP: Josh Sharp of Nixon Peabody for the Thornton Law Firm.
MR. SINNOTT: Thank you. And outside of Linda, I don't believe we have anyone else on the telephone, do we? Okay. Great. Thanks.
EXAMINATION BY
MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Good afternoon, sir.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. Thank you for being here. And thank you for your patience in waiting.
Professor, I would like to ask you a few questions, but not many, about your background.
A. Okay.
Q. And I note that with your report came a CV?

A. Yes.
Q. In the name of Peter A. Joy.
And have you had a chance to look at this CV recently?
A. I prepared it. And the last time I looked at it is probably a week ago.
Q. Okay.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter, if I could ask that this be marked as Exhibit 1.
(Joy Exhibit 1, Curriculum Vitae of Peter A. Joy, marked for identification.)
Q. And, Professor, if you'll take a look at that.
A. Yes.
Q. And tell me whether there are any changes or additions that need to be made to that CV.
A. No, there aren't.
Q. Okay. And beyond that CV, were there any other relevant experiences that informed your opinion in this case?
A. One thing that's not on the CV is I successfully litigated a class action case on behalf of various classes of taxicab drivers that resulted in a reported decision out of the Northern Districts of Ohio. It happened to be an ERISA case.

Q. Okay. And what was the name of that case?
A. Bruchac, B-R-U-C-H-A-C, versus Universal Cab. They are et al. because there were several cab companies, all owned by the same family, but Universal Cab is the first defendant. If you were to look it up, you would find the decision was written by the Honorable David Dowd who, unfortunately, is now deceased.
Q. And when you say "successfully litigated," was it a trial?
A. Cross-motions for summary judgment on the issue of liability. And we prevailed on the issues of liability. And then we settled the matter for the class.
This was before the Supreme Court decision in Evans versus Jeff D. So we settled the class issue, their damages, and then we later submitted our attorneys' fee petition. The defendants didn't really fight us over it, and then we got awarded our attorneys' fees separately.

So unlike what happens sometimes today.
Q. Okay. Congratulations. Successful in litigating and got attorneys' fees.
A. That's right.
Q. It's a good day.
According to your report, you receive $400 an hour for each hour spent preparing your opinion; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And can you estimate how many hours you've spent up until this point, both writing your report and preparing for your testimony?
A. Total is in the area of about 95.
Q. 95 hours?
A. Yes.
Q. All right, sir. And did you prepare for your testimony today?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And how did you do that?

Page 14

A. I read my report twice, and also I met with counsel for Labaton for approximately two hours yesterday.
Q. All right, sir. And, Professor, I'm holding in my hand a report whose face sheet says, "Expert Report, March 26, 2018, Professor Peter A. Joy."
Is this your rebuttal report in this case?
A. My report, that's correct.
Q. Okay.
MR. SINNOTT: And Madam Court Reporter, if I could ask that that be marked as Exhibit 2.
(Joy Exhibit 2, Expert Report of Professor Peter A. Joy, dated March 26, 2018, marked for identification.)
Q. And the witness has that report. And looking at that, is that a complete copy of your submission in this matter as an expert?
A. (Perusing.) Yes, it is.
Q. All right. And let me direct your attention to that report, Exhibit 2, Professor, and specifically with respect to the factual statement.

A. Okay.
Q. Beginning on page 2.
A. Yes.
Q. And going to page 13.
A. Yes.
Q. Who drafted that factual statement?
A. The factual statement was drafted by counsel for Labaton. I indicate that on page 13. I then reviewed the various portions of depositions and other items that were cited to verify the citations in the factual report to confirm that those citations supported the facts in the report.
Q. Okay. And did you request any additional facts in the course of that review?
A. I did not request additional facts. Initially, before I got the factual statement, I had asked about some matters, some of which are in the factual statement, but I did not request any additional facts after I received this factual statement.
Q. Okay. And the documents that you received, do you recall what they were?

A. Well, there are the items that are either cited in the factual report. I could go through them, but --
Q. In general terms, if you can describe them.
A. Okay. They were depositions, copies of e-mails that went back and forth, a draft retention letter between Labaton and Arkansas Teachers Retirement System, which if it's okay, I'll refer to as Arkansas, because it's kind of a mouthful.
Q. I'll do the same.
A. Okay. I received a copy of the expert report written by Professor Stephen Gillers. I received a copy of a submission by lawyers representing Labaton. And then I looked at some things just for me to get a feel of the underlying litigation.
I didn't ask for copies, but I accessed the docket for the underlying case in just -- I wanted to take a look at the class notice that went out, and relative -- I mean, just having to deal with this case. I think that's about it.

Q. And was that on your own initiative to request the notice?
A. Well, I didn't request the notice. I just looked for the notice.
Q. But that had been provided to you?
A. I didn't -- I had already -- I already downloaded a copy of it, so I didn't ask for it.
Q. Okay. And when you received the transcripts, were they the full transcripts or excerpts?
A. I received -- I definitely received excerpts that conformed with this, but there was also some documents that were made available to me through an internet connection site that I believe were the full transcripts, but I did not read the full transcripts.
I looked for the portions that supported the facts that were -- the facts that I accepted.
Q. All right. So even when you received a full transcript, you focused on what you considered to be the relevant portions?
A. That's correct.

Q. Did Labaton indicate to you which portions of those transcripts you should focus on?
A. Only in the sense of the facts -- factual statement that I adopted.
Q. Okay. Now, let me direct your attention to the opinion in Exhibit 2.
A. Okay.
Q. That begins on page 13 and goes to page 56.
A. Okay.
Q. Who wrote that opinion?
A. I did.
Q. And did you have any assistance in writing that opinion?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Did you have any assistance in researching the law underlying that report?
A. No.
Q. And were you in conversation with Labaton as to your opinions?
A. Before I wrote the report, after I got a good feel, but hadn't drilled down, you know, totally deep on every one of the issues, but where I felt comfortable, I verbally stated what my tentative opinions were at that point in time, subject to changing if anything else developed.

Then I wrote the report, and the only thing, after I wrote the report, is some of the lawyers working on behalf of Labaton proofed it, and there were some typographical errors that they helped me with, but that's the only assistance I received.
Q. Did the Labaton attorneys have any role in your opinions?
A. No.
Q. All right. So you didn't bounce certain opinions off of them and receive their take on those opinions or suggestions on those opinions?
A. No. They framed the questions that they wanted my opinions on. And as I said, I gave them my tentative, you know, what I thought they were going to be, and then I wrote up my report and that was it.
Q. Okay. So let me start off by referencing something that you discuss early in your report, and that's so-called imperfect fee divisions under Rule 1.5(e).

A. Okay.
Q. You state that no Massachusetts court has opined on Rule 7.2(b) and 1.5(e) together, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Now, you are aware that New York has opined on these together, correct?
A. Not that I'm aware of.
Q. All right. Does the fact that Massachusetts or other courts have not discussed 7.2(b) and 1.5(e) in a single opinion make those rules ineffective as written?
A. No. Separately, each is effective. But what I do not see is that if a violation of 1.5(e) automatically then converts any fee division under 1.5(e) into a -- what was then Massachusetts Rule 7.2(c), that that's the connection that is, as far as I could tell, non-existent.
Q. And what is the significance of the Massachusetts court failure to address these together, in your opinion?

A. It demonstrates that the understanding is that they're not connected, that they are separate rules meant to address separate issues.
Q. All right, sir. You state in your report that Rule 7.2(b) prohibits only payments to non-lawyers; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And, specifically, let me address you -- direct your attention to footnote 18.
MS. LUKEY: In his report?
Q. In your report.
A. I think on page 20.
Q. Thank you.
A. Yes.
Q. And just for the record, footnote 18 on page 20 of Professor Joy's report states, "The comment to which Professor Wolfram referred was titled 'Paying Others to Recommend A lawyer,' and it states, 'A lawyer is allowed to pay for advertising permitted by this rule, but otherwise is not permitted to pay another person for channeling professional work. This restriction does not prevent an organization or person, other than lawyer' -- 'other than the lawyer from advertising or recommend the lawyer services. Thus, a lawyer may participate in not-for-profit lawyer referral programs and pay the usual fees charged by such programs. Paragraph C does not prohibit paying regular compensation to an assistant, such as a secretary, to prepare communications permitted by this rule.'"

So footnote 18 says that "the rule prohibits payments made for channeling professional work." Rather, that's how you refer to that -- that comment.

A. Well, that's what Professor Wolfram states. I'm quoting him.

Q. You are quoting Wolfram.

Do you consider Damon Chargois' call and Herron's meeting to be channeling?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. No, I don't.

Q. How else would you characterize it?

A. Initially, my understanding, and based on everything I have reviewed, is he was going to be local counsel, and then later, when he did not act in that capacity, he received a referral fee.

So referral fee is separate from something, again, that Professor Wolfram would refer to as touts or runners or cappers. And those are people like who are trying to, basically, do like in-person advertising. So, you know, a taxicab driver, one of the examples he uses in Nevada would try to steer somebody, literally drive them to the lawyer's office to do a divorce for them, but that's separate and distinct from referral fees.

Q. You would agree with me, would you not, that Chargois did not act as an attorney in the traditional sense --

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Q. -- in this case?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. When you say "the case," you mean just the class action or what are you talking about?

Q. No. I mean with respect to --

A. Everything with Arkansas?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, again, initially, he was going to be acting as local counsel, though my understanding is that did not develop in terms of the class action. And I guess the other thing is, even in terms of recommending another lawyer, if one lawyer recommends another lawyer, the first lawyer is basically telling the client this is somebody I think is competent and capable of handling your work, but putting in the lawyer's professional judgment on that issue.

And that's why fee sharing or fee splitting or referral fees are permitted, because there's that act of basically vouching on the professional qualifications for a particular lawyer or law firm to assist a client.

Q. But you would agree that, in this case, the client, Arkansas, never sought legal advice from Chargois?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. In terms of the class action, I didn't see evidence of that, but I'm not sure if Arkansas had sought other advice from him, because my understanding is he was known to the first director, not the -- not the second, not Mr. Hopkins, but Mr. Hopkins' predecessor.

So I don't know, since he knew Mr. Hopkins, if he ever gave any advice or representation to Arkansas prior to Labaton's involvement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it your understanding that the relationship between Arkansas, Labaton and Mr. Chargois was at the initiation of Arkansas?

THE WITNESS: At one point, Arkansas invited Labaton and Chargois Herron to submit a proposal of qualifications to be monitoring counsel. So they extended that invitation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm actually going back to the inception of the relationship.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what is your understanding of how the relationship initially evolved?

THE WITNESS: That Mr. Chargois and/or others from Chargois & Herron helped to arrange a meeting where lawyers from Labaton could meet with the predecessor, I think Mr. Doane, but I don't want to say that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: So Mr. Doane. And then subsequent to that meeting, at some point while Mr. Doane was still head of Arkansas, he invited them to submit a proposal showing their qualifications to be monitoring counsel.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So it is your understanding that Mr. Chargois and Mr. Herron initiated the relationship with Arkansas and facilitated it through -- with the help of a state senator?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I've seen some indication of that. The only thing I'm not sure about is what may have preceded that or things in addition to that, but I do know that either Mr. Chargois or others from Chargois & Herron helped to arrange the meeting. And I know that a senator in Arkansas was also helpful in that regard.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So it is your understanding that Arkansas did not reach out to Mr. Chargois or Chargois & Herron and effectively invite them to find somebody to have a relationship with Arkansas?

THE WITNESS: I did not see anything that indicated that they did, but like I said, I don't know what happened, you know, prior to that. But based on what I've seen, I didn't see that.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Was it, in fact, in this case, this was the opposite, where Chargois & Herron's role was to find a client or solicit a client?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Again, based on everything that I saw, I saw them serving in that role, but I do know that there was some pre-existing relationship of some sort between lawyers in the Arkansas office of Chargois & Herron and Mr. Doane, and perhaps others with Arkansas.

So -- but based on what I saw, I would say yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If there is no evidence in the record that there was a pre-existing relationship between Mr. Doane or anyone else at Arkansas and Chargois & Herron, does that change your view as to whether this was a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay. I mean, the one thing I do know that's in the record is, is that lawyers at the Arkansas office of Chargois & Herron had some pre-existing relationship with Mr. Doane, that they were -- at least one of the lawyers was known to Mr. Doane. I don't know the nature of that relationship. Like I said, I don't know if he had ever provided any legal services to either Arkansas or Mr. Doane individually or anybody associated with Arkansas.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If there was no relationship pre-existing, would that be a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: It depends. What I mean by that is it depends on what the form of the interaction is. So that if a lawyer calls somebody up and says, you know, I can help you with your legal problems, that would definitely be a solicitation.

If a lawyer sees somebody they know and the person says, you know, I have this problem and, you know, do you think you might be able to help them, then that's not a solicitation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If the lawyer, in this case, Chargois and his partner, Tim Herron, initiate the contact with Mr. Doane and Arkansas for purposes of introducing Labaton to Arkansas, initially to serve as monitoring counsel, if that's what the record shows, would that be a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: It could be. And the only hesitation I have here is this.

Again, it depends on the nature of the interaction. So that if Arkansas is looking for monitoring counsel, and it's known to Mr. Herron or Mr. Chargois and they respond to that, then that's not a solicitation. But if they are coming out of the blue, then it would be solicitation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And would that solicitation, absent compliance with 1.5(e) and the exception in 7.2(b)(5), absent -- putting that aside for a moment, would that bring the relationship within 7.2(b)?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If it was solicitation?

THE WITNESS: No. It would bring it within 7.2(b) if a lawyer with Chargois & Herron was, you know, basically going around knocking on doors saying, I have somebody, you know, that could help you with your legal problems, you know, if they were not acting in a lawyer capacity.

So like, for example, a lawyer who's a taxicab driver in Nevada steering clients to divorce lawyers, that's --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That doesn't insulate them.

THE WITNESS: Then the person is a taxicab driver.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So that's an interesting issue. Where is the line between acting as a lawyer and acting as a, what I think is referred to as a tout? Where is that line? What you seem to be saying is it's not simply having a law degree. That's not enough. Just because the person has a law degree, that's not enough to insulate them from 7.2(b), right?

THE WITNESS: Again, yeah, that's right. If they are not acting in a lawyer capacity, that's right.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, at some level, for 7.2(b) to apply or to not apply, I should say, the person who is doing the recommending has to be acting in some capacity as a lawyer.

THE WITNESS: That's right. And that capacity could be simply knowing that the lawyer/law firm they are recommending is well qualified to assist the potential client.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that's sufficient to insulate them from 7.2(b)?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just knowing that they are well qualified?

THE WITNESS: That's right. And that's especially true in Massachusetts, that allows for pure referral fee without either working on the matter or accepting joint responsibility for the case.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. You mentioned earlier that you had reviewed, among other things, e-mails, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you remember seeing an e-mail exchange between Damon Chargois and Eric Belfi in which Chargois reminds Belfi of what he has done to acquire Arkansas as a client?

A. I recall seeing e-mail exchanges between the two of them involving Arkansas, as you characterize it, about reminding him what he's done. If you have the e-mail exchange, and I could see it, I would let you know if that was one I definitely reviewed.

MR. SINNOTT: I will ask that Madam Court Reporter mark this. This is an e-mail, and the relevant portion begins on LBS017593. At the top of the page, it says from Damon Chargois, sent October 18, 2014, to Eric Belfi, subject, concerning Eric. "In reviewing your text regarding HP it," and it starts to say "appears."

So if I could ask that this item be marked as Exhibit 3.

(Joy Exhibit 3, E-Mail Chain, Bates Stamped LBS017593 through 17594, marked for identification.)

Q. And, Professor, you are welcome to read the whole thing but my question will begin with the e-mail that begins at the very bottom of the first page of 593.

A. Okay.

MS. LUKEY: Do you have any other copies?
MR. SINNOTT: I'm sorry. We do.
MS. LUKEY: Thank you.
A. I'm reading it.
Q. Yep. Take your time.
A. (Perusing.) I can't say, with a hundred percent certainty, that I've seen this. Colonial Bank does not ring any bell to me -- any bell to me. I mean, but the idea of like sort of expending political capital or something, I know I've read that. So I can't say, with a hundred percent certainty, that I've seen this.
Q. So some of it appears to be familiar?
A. Yeah, some of it does -- I mean, some of the ideas appear to be familiar, but there are other things that I think I would remember. But, you know, I don't have perfect memory.
Q. All right. And directing your attention to that second page, and approximately a third of the way down that second page, there's a paragraph that reads, "I am very concerned that you guys are attempting to significantly, substantially and materially alter our agreement. Our deal with Labaton is straightforward. We got you, ATRS, as a client (after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas), and Labaton would use ATRS to seek lead counsel appointments in institutional investor fraud and misrepresentation cases."

And then it finishes by saying, "Where Labaton is successful in getting appointed lead counsel and obtains a settlement or judgment award, we split Labaton's attorney fee award 80/20, period."
And, sir, it's fair to say that this is an e-mail from Damon Chargois to Eric Belfi on Saturday, October 18, 2014, at 9:15 a.m. correct?
A. That's what it states, yes.
Q. So looking at that paragraph that I just read, isn't it apparent from the language in that paragraph that Labaton used Chargois to get Arkansas as a client? Would you agree with that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. They were involved in getting Arkansas as a client. I'm not sure -- I mean, I know you used the word "used," but in the context of this e-mail, it seems like -- I just want to be sure -- Mr. Chargois was characterizing this as sort of feeling like he was being used in some fashion.
Q. Okay. And I wasn't using it in that sense, but that may be reflective of how he feels based on the first paragraph.
A. Because I know that they were involved in getting Arkansas as a client, and as I stated previously, initially, they were going to be local counsel, and then that didn't develop.
Q. Well, let me back up to the dash, dash, and then read from there on the second line of that paragraph.
"We got you ATRS," or Arkansas," as a client (after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas.)"

Do you see anything about legal services in that parenthetical reference?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not -- well, I'm not sure, when he talks about considerable favors and time dedicated in Arkansas, I just don't know what he's referring to.
Q. Doesn't it sound like the tout that you were referring to previously?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No.
Q. I mean, isn't it apparent here that Chargois' role, at least as portrayed in this paragraph, was to get Arkansas as a client for Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. According to Chargois' paragraph there, he was involved in getting Arkansas as a client, absolutely.
Q. And there's nothing about Arkansas asking Labaton to -- or asking Chargois to get Labaton as counsel, is there?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, there isn't, except it's my understanding that, after Labaton was serving as monitoring counsel, that's when later they got involved as being class counsel for Arkansas.

So I think this paragraph is referring to the initial involvement of Chargois & Herron in securing Arkansas as a client on the monitoring counsel.

Q. Sure.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I would like you to assume that the testimony from Mr. Chargois was that Eric Belfi asked him if he knew any people that he could be -- he, on behalf of Labaton, could be put in touch with -- that were institutional investors, and could he help make introductions to institutional investors.

Mr. Chargois' testimony was he didn't know what an institutional investor was, and he had to find out what an institutional investor was, and he found out that he understood what an institutional investor was once he found that out, and that he then proactively, along with his partner, Tim Herron, set about initiating the relationship, the introduction to Arkansas, and he did that through the good offices of Senator Faris, who chaired the committee that oversaw state pension activity. And that this was all at the initiation of, in the first instance, Labaton. And, in the second instance, Mr. Chargois, and that that was how the relationship started for the purpose of bringing institutional investors to Labaton as clients.

Does that inform your opinion as to whether this was a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I still don't see it as a solicitation if that's the bottom line of your question.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It is.

THE WITNESS: I still don't see it as a solicitation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What is it about that chain of facts that takes it out of being a solicitation?

Page 40

THE WITNESS: All right. The following. It's all right for a lawyer to contact a client that they have to see if that client needs any more legal assistance. And lawyers do that all the time.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: The client that they have who --

THE WITNESS: That's right. So what I don't know is if --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume there was no existing relationship at all, at least of the record, I want you to assume it, that there was no existing relationship between Chargois & Herron and Arkansas.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: And then the next thing is, assuming that there was no relationship whatsoever, that they had never had any type of a relationship --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We are not talking about running into people at a cocktail party. We are talking about a professional relationship.

THE WITNESS: Okay. That they have no professional relationship.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: And that either Mr. Doane or other people at Arkansas hadn't been putting out any requests for any assistance, then it could be a solicitation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if it was just what we call a cold call? Now, obviously, there were more than calls involved, but what if it was a cold call? They went to Senator Faris, and Senator Faris, at Chargois' initiation, on behalf of Labaton, helped facilitate the introduction, and that there had been no previous relationship between Mr. Chargois, Mr. Herron, their firm and Arkansas.

THE WITNESS: And no relationship with Senator Faris either?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's assume

there was a relationship between Mr. Herron, but not Mr. Chargois, but Mr. Herron and Senator Faris.
THE WITNESS: Then it wouldn't be a solicitation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Because?
THE WITNESS: Because it's okay for a lawyer to talk to a client or someone that they have other kinds of relationships with, to say, do you know anyone who could use my services. And it's okay, then, for that person to facilitate them getting other clients. Lawyers do that every day.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So Mr. Chargois, again, no relationship between Chargois & Herron and Arkansas, so Mr. Chargois or Mr. Herron could go to the senator and say, we have this law firm that does securities work, we would like an introduction to Arkansas for purposes of Arkansas -- for purposes of Labaton serving as monitoring counsel. And by the fact they went to Senator Faris, that would take it out of a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, assuming they have a relationship with Senator Faris and then Senator Faris, I don't know what he says to either Mr. Doane or others at Arkansas, but if he says something to the effect of, I would like you to meet with or I know a lawyer or a law firm that might be able to assist you, they still, then, have the opportunity to say, sure, we will set up a meeting or, no, we won't set up a meeting.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So using somebody as an intermediary who does have the relationship, when the lawyer who's doing the recommending does not have the relationship with the client, takes it out of solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It depends in what we have talked about, I mean, in the abstract, it could still be solicitation. But, in this situation, if they have a relationship with Senator Faris and if Senator Faris doesn't compel Arkansas to have the meeting, just suggests, you know, this is an opportunity, have it or not.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You know that Senator Faris chaired the committee with oversight responsibility over Arkansas.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the fact that the senator with oversight responsibility over this public retirement system calls and says I'd like you to meet with this firm, is that a professional relationship that takes it out of solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: When you say "a professional relationship," do you mean Senator Faris' relationship with Arkansas? I have lost which relationship.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We have a number of different levels of the relationship.
THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: For the first level, we have the relationship between Labaton and Chargois & Herron. We will use those two together. At that level, we have Labaton, through the person of Eric Belfi, asking Mr. Chargois to introduce him to institutional investors for the purpose of getting them positions as monitoring counsel at least.
We then have the relationship between Mr. Herron, as part of Chargois & Herron, having some kind of relationship, we don't know, really, what kind of a relationship, but some kind of relationship with Senator Faris who chaired the committee with oversight responsibility over Arkansas.
And then we have the relationship between Senator Faris and Arkansas.
I want you to assume these facts. Labaton initiated the relationship with Chargois for the purpose of having Chargois & Herron get introductions to institutional investors. Chargois didn't know any institutional investors. Herron didn't know any institutional investors. But Herron knew Senator Faris.

Mr. Herron goes to Senator Faris and says, we'd like your help in getting an introduction for Labaton to Arkansas to serve as monitoring counsel for Arkansas.
I want you to assume that chronology. And Senator Faris initiates the contact with Arkansas to facilitate that relationship.
That's not a solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I still don't see it as one. And I remember seeing some e-mail exchanges that whether or not Arkansas would end up retaining, at least initially, Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron would depend on how the meeting went, and then I remember some e-mail that meeting went well and then the initial retention occurred.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Clerk -- Madam Court Reporter, Melissa, if you would mark this as an exhibit.

(Joy Exhibit 4, Excerpt of Deposition of Damon Chargois, dated October 2, 2017, marked for identification.)
Q. For the record, an item has just been marked as Exhibit 4. It's an excerpt of the deposition of Damon Chargois taken on October 2, 2017. Let me direct your attention to page 33 in the lower right quadrant, Professor.
A. Okay.
Q. And you see where -- about line 12 --
A. Okay.
Q. -- I ask Mr. Chargois, "At some point, did you have some success in making inroads into this area?"
And Chargois answers, "Yes, sir."
And I say, "Tell us about that."
And Chargois responds as follows, "Tim," I will suggest to you that Tim is Tim Herron, "was friends with Senator Faris -- Steve Ferris and asked him, do you know anyone or point us to anyone we might be able to talk to, and he told Tim that recently a gentleman named Paul Doane had taken over Arkansas Teachers, and you might want to give him a try. Good luck."

Do you see that, sir?
A. Yeah, I do.
Q. Had you seen that before?
A. I don't recall this, no.
Q. Would you agree that this indicates that, having been asked as Judge Rosen questioned you about -- by Labaton to find institutional investors, that Chargois & Herron, Damon and Tim, leverage a contact with a Senator Faris, and he made the introduction to Mr. Doane; is that correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That appears to, but there's just one thing that I need clarification on, and it's this statement. He, which I believe refers to Senator Faris, this is line 18, toward the end, he, and I'm just -- "he told Tim that recently a gentleman named Paul Doane had taken over Arkansas Teachers, and you might want to give him a try. Good luck."

So, you know, I just -- I need to know what happens after this, because my reading that almost sounds like the senator is telling Tim Herron, why don't you try Paul Doane, and then good luck.
So, you know, I need to know like what happens after this to be able to say what the import of this is.
Q. If you were to assume that Senator Faris was treated to dinner and other things, would that indicate -- would that inform your curiosity?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Treated to dinner by Mr. Herron, his good friend or --
Q. Or by Labaton.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. If -- it may be relevant. I just don't know. I mean, I would need to know more to be able to say, because dinner by itself could be meaningless.
Q. I appreciate your caution, but based on that passage between lines 16 and 21, without knowing what happened in the future, does that passage, in and of itself, indicate that Chargois & Herron was trying to bring --

A. Trying to what?
Q. Was trying to bring Arkansas on board as a client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That passage by itself? No, it doesn't by itself.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter -- and I apologize for calling you clerk before -- let me show you another document that's an excerpt from that same transcript, but it's the follow-on page, page 34.
(Joy Exhibit 5, Excerpt of Deposition of Damon J. Chargois, dated October 2, 2017, marked for identification.)
Q. And that is Exhibit 5.
A. So should I then continue reading where I stopped off?
Q. Yes, please.
A. Okay. Just please give me a moment.

(Perusing.)
MS. LUKEY: So we got another page that wasn't on the first exhibit. So it's -- the previous one is incorporated in this one, but then there is a second page as well.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. But the second page is there.
MS. LUKEY: Yeah.
MR. SINNOTT: For a fleeting moment, we thought we had given you exactly the same exhibit.
A. (Perusing.) Okay.
Q. All right, Peter. So looking at the bottom of page 33, which is the second of these three pages, if you count the face sheet, after the passage that we discussed previously, I asked Mr. Chargois, "Did he," referencing Paul Doane, "facilitate that introduction in any way?" The introduction to -- I'm sorry -- that Ferris, being he, facilitating the introduction of Paul Doane, and did he facilitate that introduction in any way.
And Chargois answers, "No, sir. Tim just told me about it." And then going on to the next page, 34, "and I looked up Paul Doane and called him.

And Judge Rosen says, "Cold?"
Chargois replies, "Yes, sir."
"And what was Mr. Doane's response when you called him?
"The gist of it was who are you and why are you calling me, but I told him who I was, who our firm was. We're local, not far from your office, and how I got his name and why I was calling."
Then I asked, "And did he offer to help you?"
And Chargois said, "I don't understand."
I said, "Did he ask you to come in for a meeting? Or did he --"
Chargois answers, "No, sir."
"-- extend -- you know, try to arrange for you to talk again with him?
"No, sir.
"All right. What did he say?
"He listened to what I had to say and I asked him if I could meet with him. And then I told him that, you know, I was working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors."

And so then there is some further discussion on page 35. And the bottom of 34, I say, "So how did you leave it after that conversation?"
Chargois answers, "Let me know if you're willing to give us some time.
"Okay. And what happened next?
"He -- I don't know if it was a follow-up call by me or if it was that call, but he ultimately agreed to meet."
And then I ask, "Did you meet with him by yourself or were you accompanied by someone else?"
And Chargois answers, "The Labaton -- I believe it was Eric Belfi and Chris Keller, but I can't swear to that. I know Eric Belfi was there. I don't know if Chris Keller was there."
And then -- "And how soon after the telephone conversation did this meeting take place?

"I'll guess within a week or two."
And I ask, "Okay. And is it fair to say that Eric and Chris were responsive and came down -- "Yes.
" -- at the time that you told them that the meeting would be -- time and date?
"Yes, sir.
"Okay. So tell us what happened at that meeting."
And then on page 36 he starts to answer, "Eric."
Special master says, "Hold that thought."
Special master says, "Was this the first institutional investor that you had been successful in meeting up with?"
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Setting up.
Q. I'm sorry, "setting up a meeting with?
"THE WITNESS: Yes, sir."
And then the questioning continues.
Special master says, "If you remember the question.

"I do."
And I say, "Tell us what happened at the meeting."
And Chargois answers, "Eric Belfi presented all of the services that Labaton has available and what their -- what they could do and presented as a courtesy that they do this monitoring of the portfolio.
"Okay. And did Mr. Doane ask any questions of Eric?
"I'm sure he did. I don't remember specific questions."
And then I ask, "Okay. Did you participate in the conversation?
"ANSWER: I was there. But as far as substantive matters, no.
"You let Eric do the talking?
"Yes, sir."
And then there's some follow-up conversation on that.
So is it apparent to you, from those pages that I read, that Chargois & Herron did their job in setting up a meeting for Eric

Belfi?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I don't know about "did their job," but I would say that, according to Mr. Chargois' testimony here, he set up a meeting with Mr. Doane.
Q. Okay. And does it also appear that, once that meeting was effected, and Doane sat down with Chargois or Chargois and Herron and Eric Belfi, that Chargois and Herron's role was basically as a silent partner here?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I mean, at that meeting, according to Mr. Chargois, he didn't say a lot. He says, you know, as far as substantive matters, no, but as far as local counsel role, which is what the original plan was, that might be what local counsel would do.
Q. Okay. But at least with respect to -- without speculating as to anything that happened in the future, it would appear that this meeting was set up and Chargois & Herron's role was essentially effective, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, they set up the meeting. So they were effective in setting up a meeting.
Q. That's what I mean.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay. Thank you.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask -- now that you've read the full transcript -- not the full transcript. You're welcome to read the full transcript, but the transcript of Mr. Chargois' description of the inception of the relationship and his role in it, does that not sound like solicitation to you?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, I mean, actually, what this sounds like, and I'm just assuming that what Mr. Chargois says is true, where he calls up Mr. Doane, then not the solicitation that we have been talking about in terms of 7.2(b), but there is also a prohibition against realtime communication with a person who is not already a client.

Now, with institutional, you know, with corporations, there is some authority, and I wasn't retained for this, so I didn't drill down, but this could be a realtime, in-person solicitation that would raise ethical concerns.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does it sound like Mr. Chargois is acting as an agent of Labaton, and I don't mean any negative connotation by the term "agent," but as an agent for Labaton in seeking to open a relationship between Labaton and Arkansas?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, again, I do have an issue with the word "agent," because --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Use a different word.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: As simple as acting on behalf of Labaton.
THE WITNESS: Well, if he is acting as local -- someone who would be local counsel with Labaton, so -- but that's -- I mean, acting on behalf, I guess he's acting on behalf of -- well, I'm just like -- I'm just hesitant here about how it's been characterized, so.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: How would you characterize it?
THE WITNESS: Maybe facilitating, so trying to -- but --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Opening the door?
THE WITNESS: Again, I mean, it could be, but there are a lot of different individuals here and the depth of their relationships with one other is something I would want to know more about, but he is facilitating the meeting.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I think it's pretty obvious, from the colloquy, again, crediting Mr. Chargois, that there was no relationship at all --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- between Chargois and Doane.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's the way

Page 60

Mr. Chargois characterizes it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: "What was Mr. Doane's response when you called him?
"The gist of it was who are you and why are you calling me."
THE WITNESS: I guess the part that I don't know is how Mr. Chargois is representing this to Labaton, you know, Mr. Belfi. What's he saying?
Because, you know, if he is telling Labaton, oh, look, I have a relationship with this person or that person, Labaton could be relying on that. So that's what I mean.
All these different people and I think, to understand what's going on here, it would be good to take a look at, at the same time, what is Mr. Chargois telling Mr. Belfi or anybody else at Labaton to see if they line up, because he might be saying one thing to them and now something else when he's under oath in a deposition.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if he was saying to Eric Belfi, I know Paul Doane and I'm happy to make an introduction to Paul Doane on your behalf, that would take it out of solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It very well could, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I take it your answer would be that it would take it out of solicitation if he told Mr. Belfi that he had some sort of a professional relationship with Mr. Doane.
THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But assume there is -- for now, assume that Mr. Chargois' testimony is credited for now, he was asked by Mr. Belfi to help find institutional investors. He didn't know what an institutional investor was. He had to find out.
He went to Senator Faris and Senator Faris said you should call Paul Doane, who is executive director of Arkansas. He calls Paul Doane cold, as he says. Paul Doane doesn't know him at all, as he says.

And in that first conversation he says, "I am working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors."
And he makes a request that Paul Doane meet with this New York law firm. That's not a solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: And what am I supposed to assume about what he has told Mr. Belfi?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just assume that Mr. Belfi -- just assume the facts that I gave you.
THE WITNESS: And Mr. Belfi doesn't know what's going on.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Belfi doesn't know.
THE WITNESS: Again, as I said, it very well may be the realtime, in-person solicitation issue that I mentioned, but that's something I didn't look into for this.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If that were the case, would that bring 7.2(b) into play?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It wouldn't bring it into play in terms of -- no, it wouldn't, because by the time -- this is the initial meeting. Then there is the monitoring counsel agreement. And subsequent to the monitoring counsel agreement, there's the retention of Labaton to be lawyers.
So this -- this is, as I said, it's the, you know, kind of in-person or telephonic realtime solicitation issue, but by the time we get to the class action being filed, there's a retention letter. It's a fee-sharing issue.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Don't we have to look at what the purpose of the payment that was made to Mr. Chargois was to determine what he was being paid for?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, he was being paid a referral fee.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: For recommending to Arkansas that Labaton be retained as monitoring counsel?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I mean, I guess I'm just a little hesitant here on the issue of recommending. And I'll tell you why. And I'm just looking at what we have here, pages 34 to 37, because I'm just doing what you said, assume that what Chargois says is true.
He calls Doane. And he says, we are a local firm. Then he listened to what I had to say, and I'm on line, I guess, 19 of page 34, "And I asked him if I could meet with him. And then I told him that, you know, I was working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors."
And then, you know -- and I may have missed it here, but I don't see him say that I am recommending Labaton. What I see is he is setting up a meeting between him and some lawyers from a firm that he's working with that specializes in institutional investors.

So it's this in-person solicitation issue that I told you about, you know, initiated via telephone and in person and telephone. It's a realtime solicitation issue.
So it's not a recommending. You know, I don't see him say that, you know, I want to meet with you to recommend that you hire this firm. He is saying, I want to meet with you so a firm that I'm working with, we might be able to help you, or something to that effect.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. But isn't it implicit, when Chargois & Herron go to great lengths to get a sit-down with Mr. Doane, and they come to that meeting with Eric Belfi, that they are recommending Eric Belfi and Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I know Chargois, in that e-mail exchange, talked about, you know, putting in a lot of effort. Again, if he is to be believed, in his deposition, it sounds like he had one or maybe two telephone calls with Mr. Doane out of the blue. So something here is -- gives me hesitation. I don't know what to believe. But if I'm to assume that his deposition is true, then that contradicts what he says in his e-mail to Belfi.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is there anything in Chargois' deposition testimony that you've now read that indicates that Mr. Chargois was acting in his capacity as a lawyer, using his legal skills and professional expertise, to make a recommendation or to facilitate the introduction of Labaton to Doane?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, he says he is working with a law firm, and what I don't know, because it's not in what I've read, is what he knows about Mr. Belfi and what he knows about Labaton.

So I don't know that, but he talks about working with a New York law firm which we know to be Labaton, and I know originally -- the inception is I've understood this all along, was he was going to be local counsel.

So, yes, that would be what -- you know, part of what local counsel would be doing.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Just so that I've got it straight, Professor, you're not claiming that the word "person" in rule 7.2(b) refers only to non-lawyers, are you?

A. Not 100 percent. That's how the cases have broken down. But, you know, I mentioned before, it could conceivably apply to a lawyer who is not acting in a lawyer capacity in any way.

Q. All right. But as a matter of statutory construction, you're not making that claim, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Not on its face. But I guess, as I said before, how it's been interpreted, and then I also mention -- well, anyway, how it's been interpreted, because there haven't been instances where we have the lawyer taxicab driver that I mention, though I suspect that, in today's job market, there may be.

Q. All right. Let's talk a little bit about 1.5(e).

A. Okay.

Q. And compliance with the pre-2011 rule.

You talk about Saggese, and you talk about Professor Gillers' references to it.

Is it your opinion that the writing requirement articulated in Saggese did not apply prior to the rule change in 2011?

A. You know, that was something that I wondered about, because when I read Saggese, I thought maybe it applies, but then, as I looked, I couldn't find any cases where it applied in between Saggese, the decision, and then the rule change.

And then the other thing that bothered me to some extent is what Saggese said, henceforth, this is what 1.5(e) means, isn't what the ultimate new rule 1.5 actually says. So that was something else.

And then the third thing that was kind of puzzling to me is when the rule change is made, I forget, I think they gave at least three months notice. Here's the proposed rule and here's the effective date.

So the fact that neither disciplinary body or the courts were following Saggese after Saggese, the fact that the bar didn't immediately change the rule, and then when they did change the rule, they didn't use the same wording that Saggese had, and then when they changed the rule, they had a period of time between the new rule and when it came into effect led me to conclude that Saggese, you know, I don't know if I would say, you know, probably dicta. I mean, that wasn't an issue in the case. That's what the court said it was going to do, but then, you know, there weren't any instances where the court did it, and then the bar didn't do what the court said they should be doing.

So that's why I think it's most likely dicta and, you know, the writing requirement in some of what Saggese said just was not implemented in the fashion that I think, just reading the case, I would normally have believed. And then after I did all the research, I saw, well it doesn't seem to line up.

Q. You also say that, on page 29 of your report, "The fee agreement did not and was not specifically required to identify Chargois & Herron."
A. That's right.
Q. What's your authority for that opinion?
A. Because the rule that was in effect didn't require it.
Q. Well, can you cite any cases for that proposition?
A. Well, you know, when you're trying to prove something that is well understood, you're generally not going to find cases that are dealing with it.
So if everybody -- let me put it this way. I didn't find any cases that said, oh, you didn't have a writing, so now you've violated this rule.
Did I find a case that says you didn't have a writing and you didn't violate the rule? I didn't find that case either.

MS. LUKEY: I think he was asking slightly different. Weren't you asking about identifying the referral firm?
MR. SINNOTT: Yes.
A. That's what I meant, the firm name in writing in the agreement.
Q. Okay. With respect to that identification of the firm, let me just read 1.5(e).
"A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable."
Now, what language, what portion or what clause in 1.5(e) supports your opinion that the fee agreement was not specifically required to identify Chargois & Herron?
A. Because if you have a fee agreement that says that either fee sharing will be taking place or may be taking place, and the ultimate total fee is reasonable and the client agrees that you may share fees with others, that fits what you just read.

Q. And the phrase that "a division of fees will be made" does not indicate to you that a specific informing of the client as to that referring arrangement needs to be made?
A. As long as the client is informed that there will be or may be a division of fees and agrees to that, under that old rule, I'm not saying all Rule 1.5(e)s are worded in the same way, but under that rule, that was permissible.
Q. And when, in the life of the State Street case, was that complied with?
A. When the original retention letter between Labaton and Arkansas was consummated in February of 2011, I believe.
Q. And it never happened before that?
A. When you say "it never happened before that," what it are you referring to?
Q. Was 1.5(e) complied with?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, there was the prior retention letter for monitoring counsel that contained similar language. I would have to take a look at that earlier one, but 1.5(e) was complied with in the retention letter that Labaton had with Arkansas.

Q. So you believe that the retention letter satisfied the requirement that the client be informed that a division of fees will be made and the client consents to the joint participation?
A. That's right.
Q. But prior to that, you say there was similar language in the?
A. The original?
Q. The application for monitoring.
A. That's right. When they submitted their qualifications, there was an earlier letter where Labaton was retained by Arkansas.
Q. And what, to the best of your recollection, did that similar language say?
A. It was very similar, but I know that there was some change between the first letter and the second letter, but I'd have to look at both of the letters to tell you what that change is.

MR. SINNOTT: Let me reference a letter dated February -- strike that.
Let me first reference an item that was previously introduced by a prior witness as Exhibit 5. You should all still have this.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's the RFQ.
Q. Have you seen that document before, Professor?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And let me direct your attention to page 13.
A. Okay.
Q. And item 5.10.
A. Okay.
Q. And that reads, "Please describe proposed billing arrangements, including contingency fees, for securities litigation. If other than contingency fees are contemplated, please state the range of hourly billing rates, by timekeeper status (paralegal, first or third-year associates, et cetera, staff attorney, shareholder or partner, of counsel, et cetera) of all attorneys and paralegals proposed for assignment to ATRS matters. State what discount, if any, to these rates the firm proposes to provide to ATRS. While this RFQ primarily seeks the services of one lead attorney, the involvement of other firm attorneys may be required from time to time, depending on that matter."

And I'm not going to read it, but I ask that you look at the responses of Labaton and of Chargois in the following three pages.
A. Okay. (Perusing.) Okay.
Q. All right. Now, looking at those responses to 5.10, would it be fair to say that there's no reference in there to division of fees or a fee referral arrangement?
A. Not in this request.
MS. LUKEY: I may have misunderstood the question. May I ask that the reporter read it back?
MR. SINNOTT: Sure.
(Record read.)
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. In this request for qualifications, that's not discussed.

Page 76

Q. All right. And based on your previous reading of this document, does that appear elsewhere?
A. Not that I recall in this document.
Q. All right. So is it fair to say that this previous application, this request for qualifications, did not reference a division of fees?
A. It does not. And I may have been mistaken. I thought I saw an earlier fee arrangement between Labaton and Arkansas for the -- I thought it was for the monitoring counsel, but it may have just been a draft of the letter that ultimately was modified for the class action litigation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could you be -- so that the chronology is clear, the response to the RFQ was in 2008.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could you be thinking of the retention agreement, which took place in February of 2011?
THE WITNESS: Well, as I said, I thought and I am thinking I must be mistaken, that subsequent to the 2008 request for qualifications, and I'll explain why I'm thinking this, I recall that there was a discussion, I think maybe initially via e-mail, but then on telephone with the woman whose name I forget.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Christa Clark?
THE WITNESS: Yeah, Christa Carter, is that it?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Clark.
THE WITNESS: Christa Clark. That's it.
Who said to Eric Belfi, is my recollection, we can only have one firm name listed, and -- and I believe that I saw an agreement that resulted from that, referring to the monitoring counsel role. Now, it could have just been me thinking I saw an agreement because of the back and forth, but I know that it was explicitly understood that there was going to be fee division with Chargois & Herron that Arkansas knew through Christa Clark. And the only reason that that wasn't memorialized specifically was because she informed Mr. Belfi that the contracting system in Arkansas wouldn't permit it if the firms did not have a -- some kind of formal affiliation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could you be thinking of the e-mail that Christa Clark sent to Eric Belfi in October of 2008?

THE WITNESS: I'm definitely thinking of that e-mail. The thing I think I must be mistaken about is I thought that there was a subsequent written agreement.

I still, although, I'm hesitating, I still think, based on the way her e-mail read, that there must have been something, because she said it can only be one, but maybe that had some more internal function with Arkansas, that they were just going to list Labaton themselves, but that's what led me to think I saw another agreement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: There is an e-mail that I'm referring to which talks about some other possible role for Mr. Chargois other than jointly with Labaton as monitoring counsel.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And this is the October 13, 2008, e-mail.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do we have that?

MR. HEIMANN: Maybe it would be useful to show it to him.

MS. McEVOY: I think all the copies were distributed.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's actually in your fact statement on page 8.

MS. LUKEY: It was marked this morning, too.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. It's actually in your fact statement on page 8. It's quoted. Maybe you could just take a look and see if that's what -- if that refreshes your recollection as to what informed the relationship.

THE WITNESS: Right. (Perusing.) Right. And so it is just the e-mail exchange and then the subsequent telephone discussion that I, in my own mind, imagine resulted in a separate kind of retention letter between Labaton and Arkansas.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So do you read Christa Clark's e-mail together with the subsequent retention letter in February of 2011 as creating the relationship together?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: No. What I'm saying is there were two separate relationships. There was the relationship for monitoring counsel, and then there was a separate relationship created when Labaton represented Arkansas and then ultimately became class counsel.

So they were retained to do one body of work, and that led to a second body of work.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: For which there was a separate retention letter?

THE WITNESS: That's right, a separate retention letter.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. To your knowledge, Professor, what did Eric Belfi or others from Labaton tell George Hopkins about Damon Chargois?

A. Specifically --

Q. I'm not asking for specific words, but as best you can characterize their context.

A. I know there were discussions, and now we are shifting from Doane to now --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Hopkins.

A. Hopkins. That there were conversations about -- to the effect of, and so this is my paraphrasing, so excuse me, to the effect of there is some fee sharing, and do you want to know who's involved in it, to which Mr. Hopkins, again, my paraphrasing, said I just don't want to know about how you are dividing the fees or how the lawyer fees are working.

So I know that there was a conversation to that effect as represented both by Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Belfi.

I know that, subsequent to the class action settlement, that, at some point, Mr. Hopkins became aware of Chargois & Herron. I don't believe, though I could be wrong, that specifically Mr. Hopkins was informed about Chargois & Herron until -- I don't believe he was informed about them before the class settlement. That's the best of my recollection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Hopkins testimony was that he didn't know anything about Chargois and the agreement between Labaton and Chargois until this investigation.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's Mr. Hopkins' testimony.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. As a general matter, does a client's request not to be informed of case developments supersede or obviate an attorney's obligation to inform that client?

Page 83

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. You have a duty to keep your client informed. The detail of, you know, the granular nature of the information will depend a lot on what the client wants to know, that there are certain decisions the client, you know, in typical arrangements, has to make. And for those decisions, you have to keep them well informed, and they make those decisions.

So if it's a matter going to trial, whether or not the client is going to testify is the client's decision. And if it's a case that's going to be settled or if you're going to be going to trial, making the decision between settlement and trial those are all client decisions, and they have to be well informed about those, but some clients want more detailed information, and other clients don't.

Q. Do you consider the payment of $4.1 million to an attorney that performed no services in a case to be a significant development?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Not in this -- in the abstract, yes. But in this particular case with a client who says I don't want to know how the fees are being divided, no.

Q. What if that request runs counter to the attorney's obligations under the professional rules?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. If there is a clear professional obligation and a client wants you to violate that obligation, you have to live up to your ethical obligation.

Q. And then, in the February 8, 2011, engagement letter, there is a specific reference, is there not, to Labaton keeping Arkansas apprised of significant investments. Do you recall that?

A. I believe so, but if I could see the letter, then I could say yes without just saying I believe so.

Q. Sure.

MR. SINNOTT: Do you have that, Joan?

MS. LUKEY: Yes.

Page 85

A. I'm being shown it now.

Q. Second page, second paragraph, first line.

A. Okay. (Perusing.) Okay. Yes.

Q. So the engagement letter memorializes an obligation on the part of Labaton to keep Arkansas informed of matters of significance, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was a $4.1 million payment to Damon Chargois a matter of significance?

A. In this particular case, I don't believe so.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, it -- first of all, the preceding paragraph says that, "Arkansas agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed."

And it goes on but -- and it then says, "Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the class upon successful resolution of the litigation."

So, in that context, it would be significant if Arkansas Teachers were going to be paying the total bill themselves, but not in this instance.
Q. All right. So the answer is no?
A. That's correct.
Q. Not significant.
Beginning on page 31, you discuss the issue of disclosure.
A. Yes.
Q. And you list several grounds for a disclosure or several authorities that would require a disclosure.
A. And you are referring to disclosure to the court, correct?
Q. Yes, disclosure to the court.
And these include the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, local court rules, standing orders, special order applying to class actions and clear precedent, correct?
A. That's correct.

Q. You don't list ethical duties, correct?
A. Not here. I get to ethical duties later on.
Q. Okay. Why don't you list them here?
A. Because these are the sources of law that inform what the ethical duties are.
Q. You don't put ethical duties as an independent basis for disclosure?
A. Well, I discuss it later, that the ethical rules, in and of themselves, don't create an independent basis and did not create for Labaton to provide notice of the court of its fee-sharing arrangements with Chargois & Herron.
But then later when I do discuss the ethical duties, there could be situations where the ethical duty would have been triggered.
Q. All right. And could be triggered independent of the federal rules?
A. That's right. There could be no local rule. There could be no precedent. If the judge said, I want to know exactly how all the fees are being divided, then that would trigger the ethical duty to tell the judge how all the fees were being divided.

Q. Would candor to the court, Rule 3.3, be an independent grounds for disclosure to the court?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Only in a situation where you have a duty to speak.
Q. In addressing the obligation of customer class counsel to the court, did you consider what authority the court had to disallow the Chargois payment even if it was a valid division of fees?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not sure what your question is.
Q. Sure. Did you consider the fact that the court, regardless of whether it was a valid division of fees, could say not good enough?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. I'm not going to accept it?
A. If the court had required or there was some other authority that required disclosure of all the fees and how they were being divided, then, yes, the court would have had that authority. But without the requirement of disclosure, then that doesn't -- I guess the court's authority isn't implicated.

Q. Well, the court's authority remains the same, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's right. But the court only decides on what's before it and what's required to be before it.
Q. So what's the responsibility of the court to a certified class?
A. It has a fiduciary duty to the certified class.
Q. And do you have any view on whether Judge Wolf, who would have considered the existence of the Chargois arrangement, relevant to his exercise of that fiduciary duty?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I have no view on that.
Q. You don't have any view as to whether it's relevant?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't see it as relevant unless his view was made known to counsel or was required -- or that the information was required to be disclosed to the court.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the burden is totally on the court to ask?

THE WITNESS: Or to have a court rule or a standing order as many judges in different courts have.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And in the absence of the court asking, before a judge approves a settlement agreement, the lawyers have no responsibility or duty to make the judge aware of an agreement such as the Chargois agreement?

THE WITNESS: That's right, absent a local rule, a standing order or a case-specific order. That's why, you know, rule -- Civil Rule Procedure 54(d), you know, specifically has a clause, "if the court requests."

THE SPECIAL MASTER: How is a judge supposed to perform his or her obligations to the class in a proceeding at a settlement hearing, what we call a fairness hearing --

THE WITNESS: Right.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- in determining that the allocation of fees is fair to the class if the lawyers don't tell him anything about this agreement that's out there to pay $4.1 million to somebody who did no work on the case and appears nowhere in the fee petition filings? How is a judge supposed to perform his or her obligation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: That's for the judge to decide. Some judges decide that they are going to have a local rule, and they get together, like the judges of the Southern District and the Eastern District of New York did.

Other judges have standing orders. Some judges might have a case-specific order.

Even absent all those orders, a direct request made to counsel could fulfill that.

Is the absence of having all of those rules an indication that the judge is not fulfilling his or her fiduciary obligation? Absolutely no. Because the rules are there. I think it's -- and I haven't opined on this, and I haven't researched the judge's fiduciary obligation, but I've read enough class action cases to see that the primary obligation is to see that the settlement is fair to the class members and that the attorney fees awarded, the gross amount of the attorney fees awarded appears to be fair.

What obligation beyond that, I haven't been asked to opine on it, and I haven't researched it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in the absence of a local rule or a judge's standing order, there is no obligation to the lawyers to make a disclosure of a fee agreement or agreement to pay a lawyer $4.1 million who never appeared before the court, appears in no fee declaration, appears in no Lodestar petition, never filed an appearance in the court, there is no obligation for the lawyer to come forward to disclose this so that the judge may make a determination as to whether this payment is in the interests of class?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: That's what I've said. And I guess if there was an obligation for 4.1 million, my position would be if there's an obligation for 4.1 million, there would be an obligation for any amount.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the judge -- well, that raises a good question.

What if the amount was $10 million instead of $4.1 million?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: In Massachusetts, where you can have a peer referral fee, sometimes known as a naked referral fee or a bear referral fee, again, it would not make a difference.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the amount is irrelevant?
THE WITNESS: I think the amount is irrelevant.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the judge says, I want to know about the allocation in the case, tell me about the allocation in the case without more.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that trigger an obligation on the part of a lawyer to talk about this fee agreement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Based on the way you've characterized it, no, because I think that's just talking about the allocation among the firms. And then what the firms do with their allocation is, absent the standing order or local court rule or case-specific order or precedent, of which there is none in Massachusetts District Court, no, it doesn't trigger an obligation.

Page 95

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that this particular settlement fairness hearing and fee petition was a non-adversary proceeding. There was nobody objecting, nobody there to raise objections or even to raise questions other than the judge. You understand that?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I can assume that based on what you've said. I believe I saw something to the effect that there were no objectors and it was not non-adversarial.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does this raise in any way the obligation of the lawyers to more fully disclose fee agreements to the court?
THE WITNESS: No.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware of the comment to the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, specifically comment 14(a) to Rule 3.3, are you aware of that?

THE WITNESS: I know I've read it, but if you are going to question me on it, if I had a copy, it would be greatly appreciated.
MS. LUKEY: Your Honor, can I ask when we might be breaking? I think we have been going two hours.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In a little bit. Okay?
14(a). I don't want to mismark it.
THE WITNESS: I can remember 14(a).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just for the record, I will read it.
THE WITNESS: If I could follow along with you, or if I could read it silently.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then I will ask you about the next as well.
MR. SINNOTT: Why don't we mark it as an exhibit.
(Joy Exhibit 6, Excerpts from the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, marked for identification.)

Page 97

MS. LUKEY: Given the issue we had earlier in the case, do we know if this is what the rule was at the time? I just don't know what the answer to that is.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think it was, but we can check that.
Elizabeth, didn't we check to make sure this was the rule and comment? The time would be August '16 or November 2016 hearings. So we think it is.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does this comment at least imply some higher duty of disclosure to the court where there is a class action settlement and it is in the nature of a non-adversary proceeding?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, it does.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And it seems to define what that is within -- within that comment as being the same duties of candor to the tribunal as lawyers in ex parte proceedings.
THE WITNESS: That's correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And should be guided by Rule 3.3(d).
THE WITNESS: That's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I think 3.3(d) is next there right in front of you.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We should read that for the record.
"In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse."
THE WITNESS: Uh-huh.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which raises the question. A judge who has to decide whether or not this is a fair settlement to the class in his or her fiduciary role to the class, is this not a material fact, this, the Chargois agreement, not a material fact that a judge, known to the lawyer, that would enable a lawyer to make an informed decision?

Page 99

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't believe it's a material fact.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Really?
THE WITNESS: Really.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me ask you this. You understand that the class consisted of not just what we have called the customer class, but also members of two other ERISA lawsuits, correct?
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that, and that those two other cases were consolidated for all pre-trial purposes?
THE WITNESS: That's my understanding.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That would include settlement.
THE WITNESS: That's my understanding.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you understand that the ERISA members of that class, including the named class representatives in the other two lawsuits, were never told of the Chargois arrangement? Do you understand that?

THE WITNESS: I understand the class members were not told, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Including the ERISA class members?
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you understand also that their lawyers were not told of the Chargois arrangement? Their lawyers, meaning the lawyers for the ERISA class members, and specifically the ERISA class representatives were not told of the Chargois arrangement?
THE WITNESS: It's my understanding, at some point, they were, but I'm not sure at what point they were.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume that they knew nothing about it until this investigation.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to further assume that there were efforts made to ensure that they knew nothing about it by not disclosing it to them in various documents in which it could have been disclosed to them. There were specifically efforts made to not disclose it to them.

My question to you, sir, is how would the interests of the class be protected, and here we are talking about the settlement class, which included ERISA members, how would the interest of the class be protected if the ERISA lawyers were not told, the ERISA class members were not told, and the court was not told?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Because, at the hearing, the decision is, was what was submitted in terms of the attorneys' fees, was that, you know, substantiated, and was that fair, you know, given the amount of award that was going to all of the class members.
So it would be the same thing as, let's assume that Mr. Chargois happened to be a lawyer with Labaton, and the only thing that he did at Labaton was help get Arkansas as a client, and that's the only thing he did, but his agreement with Labaton is he gets $4.1 million. Nobody takes a look once the firm gets the fee. The judge is looking at what the amount is and how much is going to each of the firms involved.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: With one exception, right? The Labaton firm was appearing before the court as lead counsel, right?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: They are appearing, that's correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the court is aware that the Labaton firm is before the court. Yes?

THE WITNESS: That's right, sure.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the court is further aware that the Labaton firm has done a lot of work on the case, correct?

THE WITNESS: That's right.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And there's no distinction there between that and Mr. Chargois, who had no relationship to the case, did no work on the case, never appeared in the case, was not in a fee petition, was not in a Lodestar petition, and you still see that as exactly the same?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't see it exactly the same, but I think -- and I see in this case that it doesn't make a difference because there was no obligation to disclose to the court the fee-sharing arrangement because the court didn't ask for it under 54(d). There was no local rule. There was no standing order. There wasn't a specific request from the judge. There's no precedent that says that you have to do it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And Rule 3.3 and 3.3(d) and the comments thereto create no higher obligation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: In this instance, they don't create an obligation to disclose the fee to Chargois Herron.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in the absence of a court rule --

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: In the absence of a court's standing order, is the only thing the court is to look at, then, is the total fee, and whether that's fair and reasonable in light of all the factors that courts look at, and not to be concerned about how that fee is being divided among the lawyers?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection, compound.

THE WITNESS: If I understand your question correctly, that's right, because the same way -- although various lawyers at the firm submit their time, the firm's own agreement is going to decide what portion of those fees the lawyers who have done the work is going to get.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You are aware that there is, or maybe you're not aware, that there is testimony in this case from the lawyers for the ERISA clients that, had they known of the agreement with Mr. Chargois, they would not have agreed to the settlement. Are you aware of that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I'm not aware of that.

MR. HEIMANN: I object. There is no such testimony, Your Honor.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: They would not have recommended it.

MR. HEIMANN: That's not true. I'm sorry.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I'm not aware of any of this.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware that the ERISA lawyers have said that they would not have agreed had they been aware of the Chargois arrangement, that they would not have agreed with the allocation of their fees?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: No, I'm not.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware of the role of the Department of Labor in this case?

THE WITNESS: I'm aware that they were involved in working out what the ERISA class members were going to get, like what percentage. But, you know, I wasn't asked to opine on that. So that's something I have some awareness of, but only because of digging into this, you know, that is something I became aware of.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You are aware that the Department of Labor has jurisdiction to oversee ERISA plans?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that the Department of Labor was involved in these negotiations?
THE WITNESS: I know they had some role.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And are you aware that one lawyer in particular for the ERISA, who was representing the ERISA clients in this, had primary responsibility for negotiating with the Department of Labor?

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That sounds like something I may have come across, but I'm not -- not aware of that entirely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware that the defendant in the case with whom the settlement negotiations were going on, was insisting on a global settlement to include the Department of Labor, the SEC and the Department of Justice?
THE WITNESS: I'm not aware of that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume that one of the lawyers for the ERISA class was taking primary and lead responsibility for dealing with the Department of Labor, and that that's the testimony of a number of lawyers, not just the ERISA lawyers.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume that.
And that that lawyer has testified that, had he known of the Chargois arrangement, he would have been obligated to tell the Department of Labor about the Chargois arrangement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm assuming that. Go ahead.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And that he believes that the Department of Labor would not have agreed to participate, it's his belief, but he testified to that.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which then would have had the effect of blowing up the settlement because there wouldn't be a global settlement.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware of that?
THE WITNESS: I'm making those assumptions as you've asked me to.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that change your view that there was no obligation to tell any of the other lawyers in this case?

Page 109

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I wasn't asked to opine on that issue.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you believe that there was an obligation to tell the lawyers for the ERISA members of the class?
THE WITNESS: Like I said, I wasn't asked to opine on it. I don't believe so. I would, before rendering an opinion on that, I would want to look deeper into that, but I don't believe so based on everything I'm come across.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to go back, taking the objections to the way I characterized the ERISA lawyers. Let me read you exactly what this ERISA lawyer said and other ERISA lawyers.
This is the testimony -- is this from Kravitz or Sarko?
MR. SINNOTT: Sarko.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is questioning by Mr. Sinnott.
"What would you have done, Counsel, if during the course of this case, you had learned about Mr. Chargois?

"ANSWER: Well, I think, in my answer -- if we go back in the original time, the 9 percent deal, I would not have agreed to that. I guess I would not have agreed to file a joint fee petition if some money was going to Mr. Chargois now that all of this information has come out. I mean, the first thing, I would have asked some questions, but I think that's, you know, 20/20 hindsight.
"I think the real issue is if I would have known this information, I would not have agreed to file a joint petition, because I would not have wanted, I mean, bluntly, in order to do that, I would have had -- I would have had -- I would have first had to talk to the other ERISA counsel and they would not have agreed."
MS. LUKEY: What's the question, sir?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: "I would have had to get approval from the named plaintiffs who would not have agreed. I mean, you have met our named plaintiffs. They're straight shooters. They would say this doesn't sound right."

MR. SINNOTT: Could we mark that as an exhibit, please?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. We'll mark it as an exhibit.
(Joy Exhibit 7, Excerpt of Deposition of Lynn Lincoln Sarko, dated September 8, 2017, marked for identification.)
MS. LUKEY: Is there a question?
THE WITNESS: You were reading from?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. Page 75. If you want to take a moment to read it, it starts at the very bottom of page 74, line 23.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you. (Perusing.)
And you just want me to read that section for your question, then?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can read as much as you want.

THE WITNESS: If you let me know what I need to read for your question, then that will keep me focused.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. My question to you is, does this impact your opinion at all that members of the class were not told about the Chargois arrangement and there might well have been a significant impact upon whether or not they would have agreed to the settlement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: As I said, I didn't render an opinion about communications between the various law firms, class counsel, the various counsel for the different classes, but in terms of my opinion about notice to the court and my opinion about notice to the class members, it won't change my opinion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So how are the interests of the ERISA class members protected here, where this arrangement with Mr. Chargois was not disclosed to the class, was not disclosed to the ERISA lawyers, was not disclosed to the ERISA class members, and was not disclosed to the court, how can a court protect the interests of the class members under these circumstances?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: As I said, I wasn't asked to opine about what, as we referred to them, the customer class lawyers told the ERISA class lawyers and what the ERISA class lawyers knew or didn't know. That was not something I investigated or looked into.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, you did say that it wasn't necessary to inform the class.
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the ERISA members were members of the class.
MS. LUKEY: I think your question had built in the lawyers as well as the class. And I think he is just making that point.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. Well, all right. You believe there was no obligation to inform the ERISA class members at all of the Chargois agreement as members of the class.

THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Even though their lawyer has now testified that that would have been material information, which may have caused them to not file a joint petition with the customer class and to have to tell their clients, the representatives of the ERISA class members, and to -- and in this lawyer's view, that their clients would never have agreed to it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the question is, that doesn't change your opinion as to the obligation to tell the class?
MR. HEIMANN: Judge, what's the "it" in your question, please?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: "It," about the Chargois agreement.
MR. HEIMANN: And not agreed to the fee. That's what you're saying, correct?

MS. LUKEY: That they would not have agreed to the settlement?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: "To file a joint fee petition," let me read, "because I would have not have wanted -- I mean bluntly in order to do that, I would have had -- I would have first had to talk to the other ERISA counsel, and they would not have agreed.
"I would have to get approval from the named plaintiffs who would not have agreed. I mean you've met our named plaintiffs. They are straight shooters. They would say this doesn't sound right."
Does that change your opinion at all that there was no obligation to tell the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It does not change my opinion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So my question to you is, how are the interests of the class protected by keeping the Chargois agreement from the class, from the class members who were specifically named in the ERISA cases and in the petition, you understand there were three -- the three cases were listed, and the case -- cases had been consolidated for pre-trial purposes, including settlement.

So given all of this, how are -- how can the interests of the class, including the ERISA members, be protected?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: In my opinion, by the judge's determination that the amount going to the class members was fair and equitable, and the amount of attorneys' fees were justified by what had been submitted to the court, and that those were also fair and equitable.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So all the judge has to know, all the judge has to know, is that the total fee is fair. The judge has no interest in knowing anything else, in the absence of a court rule or a standing order?

Page 117

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, I'm comfortable in saying no interest in knowing about fee sharing, but in terms of what has been submitted to the court in terms of what firm A is getting and what firm B is getting, the judge might have an interest between -- you know, in that way, in terms of deciding what's fair and equitable.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's as to lawyers before the court and the allocation of fees between those lawyers?
THE WITNESS: Yeah. Typically, between the firms before the court. That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why would the judge have any lesser interest in knowing about a lawyer who's getting $4.1 million who's never appeared before the court, is not listed on any fee petition, is not listed on a Lodestar petition, is not listed as an expense, is not in anywhere, any place brought to the court, why would the judge have more interest in the allocation between the lawyers before him than in a payment to a lawyer who's not appeared at all in any way before the court?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: For two reasons. The first reason is the same reason the judge has no interest in what the firm does when it gets its fee and how it shares its fee.
And the second reason is we have civil rule -- Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d) that says when the judge wants to know about fee sharing, the judge will ask. And then we have standing orders where some judges say, I always want to know, or we have court local court rules, like in the Southern District and the Eastern Districts of New York, where all of the judges there have gotten together and say we want to know in every one of these cases.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So to put a cap on this, in these instances in which there's not a court rule and not a standing order, the lawyer has no obligation, the lawyers, here, lead counsel, has no obligation to inform the court whatsoever, either under any Rule of Civil Procedure or under the rules of candor to the court and, particularly in light of comment 14(a) and the nature of a settlement brought to the court in a non-adversary context.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's correct, no obligation.
MR. SINNOTT: Just a couple questions and we can break.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. I know, in your report, you cite 3.3(a) and you cite comment 3 to 3.3. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I did not see comment 14(a) or 3.3(d) referenced in your report.
A. That's correct.
Q. Were you aware of comment 14(a) when you wrote your report?
A. I know that I read the rule and all of the comments, and I was focusing on the way that the issue had been presented up to that point in time.

I didn't focus on this particular comment. And I would have if that had been already identified as an issue, and I would have done more research and I would have seen if I could have come up with anything one way or the other.
Q. So Labaton had not identified it as an issue for you --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. -- is that correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No, no, the only thing --
MS. LUKEY: Go ahead.
A. Okay. No. What was identified to me was, is there a 3.3(a) issue or is there an 8.4(c) issue here. That's what was identified to me.
Q. But if you read the rule, and let me read it again, read the comment, rather.
"When adversaries present a joint petition to a tribunal, such as a joint petition to approve the settlement of a class action suit or the settlement of a suit involving a minor, the proceeding loses its adversarial character and, in some respects, takes on the form of an ex parte proceeding.

"The lawyers presenting such a joint petition thus have the same duties of candor to the tribunal as lawyers in ex parte proceedings, and should be guided by Rule 3.3(d)."
And Rule 3.3(d), again, states, "In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision whether or not the facts are adverse."
Would you agree with me that comment 14(a) and 3.3(d) are inconsistent with the opinion that you've offered?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No, I would not.
Q. Well, would you agree with me that they speak to the same issues as -- on duty of candor to the court as you've spoken to?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I'm not quite following your question.
Q. Let me just break it down.
You've got a comment that makes specific reference to a joint petition to a tribunal such as a joint petition to approve the settlement of a class action suit. And we had that in this case, correct?
A. Right.
Q. So that's relevant, isn't it?
A. Yeah. Please correct me if I'm wrong, because I read the ethical report by Professor Gillers, and I don't recall him identifying this as an important issue.
And so I suspect that when I did, you know, when I read through it, I thought, well, Professor Gillers doesn't see this as bearing on this, and he's focusing on 3.(a), and he is focusing on 8.4(c) and I'm focusing on there.
If you would like me to prepare a supplemental report, I would be happy to do so, and I would research this, and I would do a very thorough job, as I have tried to do throughout this.

Q. All right. But your testimony is that you did not leave this out because it was adverse or inconsistent to your position?
A. Absolutely not. I did not leave it out because it was adverse. If I had thought it was adverse, I would have looked into it and I would have disclosed it to the lawyers that had retained me and said, look, I think you have a problem here. I've done that more times than I could say, because I want to stand by what I've done.
Q. And this is a significant comment, isn't it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. It could be significant. It could be significant.
Q. It deserved attention, didn't it?
MS. LUKEY: Well, objection.
A. Not in the context that I was doing this. Absolutely not.
MS. LUKEY: This is a rebuttal report. Professor Gillers did not cite to the rule, to the note or to 3.3(d).

Page 124

All we asked him to do was a rebuttal to Professor Gillers' report.
MR. KELLY: Objection. May I add a legal point on the comments?
MR. SINNOTT: Let me ask my question and then you can make any objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But not speaking objections, please.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. You have testified, Professor, that the judge could have issued a standing order, the judge could have required or asked questions of the parties if he wanted to know that information about fee allocation or fee referrals, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Isn't it just as likely that a judge could say, I don't have to do that. Based on Rule 3.3 and the comments, these parties have to be candid with me, they have to treat this like it's a non-adversarial setting in which they have a duty to provide this information. Isn't that just as likely?
MR. HEIMANN: Objection, calls for speculation, among many other reasons to object.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. So this is my pure speculation, and that is, first of all, we get to the fact that 3.3(d) talks about all material facts, right?
And so what are the material facts? The material facts at this hearing are what the fees is going to be and what the amount to the class is going to be.
As I said, I haven't researched this, but based on my experience, based on everything I've done, I would be very surprised if I would find a case that would say that because of 3.3(d) incorporated through comment 14(a) of the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, there is some heightened duty of candor that would have been applicable in this case that would have required disclosure of the Chargois Herron in the amount of -- the fee that they were going to get out of the fee awarded to class counsel.
I would be very surprised, and as I said, I would be happy to provide you with the research that would back up what I've just said.

Q. All right. Thank you, Professor.
A. You're welcome.
MR. SINNOTT: On the phone, 15 minutes. We will reconvene at 4:25.
(Recess taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: All right. We are back on the record. And on the phone, I believe we are now joined by Professor Gillers as well.
And, David, are you there?
MR. COPLEY: Yes, I am.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Linda, are you there?
MS HYLENSKI: I am.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Emily has not returned, has she?
Okay. Josh, are you on the phone?
MR. SHARP: Yes, I am.
MR. SINNOTT: Is anyone else on the phone? Could whoever is shuffling papers into the speaker cease and desist? Thank you.

Page 127

BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. All right. Professor, welcome back.
In your report on page 39, you conclude your examination of one of the cases that Professor Gillers had cited in his report, the Agent Orange case.
A. That's right.
Q. And on page 39, the last paragraph in the middle of the page says, "In re: Agent Orange informs and is consistent with my opinion that without a standing order, specific order, inquiry from the court, local court rule or precedent in a circuit, there is no obligation to disclose fee-sharing agreements with the court."
I read that correctly, didn't I?
A. You did.
Q. But I would suggest to you or let me suggest that Agent Orange does, in fact, require disclosure of a private fee-sharing agreement, and let me just point out a couple things to you.
In that case, and you have read the case, obviously, because you rebutted it or wrote a rebuttal to it.

A. Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter, if we could mark that as the next exhibit.
(Joy Exhibit 8, In re: Agent Orange Product Liability Litigation, marked for identification.)
Q. And looking at what has now been marked as Exhibit 8, this is In re: Agent Orange product liability litigation, 818 F.2d 216, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.
And would you agree with me that, in Agent Orange, the Second Circuit refused to enforce the agreement among the lawyers despite the absence of a court rule that would have required the lawyers to inform the District Court judge of the agreement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Not exactly, because there was a court rule that required it, but the District Court waived the application of the rule in that particular case, and waived the rule at a time when the court was unaware of the agreement among counsel.

Q. It was more than just a waiver, wasn't it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not sure what you mean by "waiver."
Q. Let me direct your attention to page 12 of the opinion. It would be page 8 at the bottom of your copy.
A. Okay. Page 8. All right.
Q. And you see up above the bracketed 12?
A. Yes.
Q. "We do agree with the District Court's ruling that, in all future class actions, counsel must inform the court of the existence of a fee-sharing agreement at the time it is formulated."
I read that correctly, didn't I?
A. You did.
Q. How do you understand the meaning of the word "all" in that sentence?
A. That the -- wait. That all means all. In the Second Circuit, the court was saying you had to disclose in all class actions.

Q. And how do you understand the meaning of the words "a fee-sharing agreement"?
A. As the words state, an agreement to share fees.
Q. Okay. And the Second Circuit did not limit itself to a particular kind of fee-sharing agreement, did it?
A. Not by that language, no, it did not.
Q. Because it said "all," correct?
A. It did.
Q. And it did not limit itself, certainly, to the kind of fee-sharing agreement in the Agent Orange case, did it?
A. Not by that language, it did not.
Q. Let me direct your attention also to page 5 at the bottom of your pages on the right-hand side of the section bracketed 5.
A. All right.
Q. And the court quotes Lewis versus Teleprompter.
A. Yes -- hold on. I'm not -- I'm on page 5. Do you mean on the right-hand side?

Q. Page 5, down here, yeah.
A. Okay. Okay. I'm sorry. I was looking on the left column, not the right column.
Q. Yeah, go to the right-hand side, and specifically the sentence that begins "We reject this authority."
Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And if I could read it. "We reject this authority, however, to the extent it allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any," and you can see that the word "any" is emphasized there.
A. Right.
Q. "Manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee-sharing agreement."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. "Such a division overlooks the District Court's role as protector of class interests under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e) and its role of assuring reasonableness in the awarding of fees in equitable fund cases.

"In addition, this approach overlooks the class attorney's duty," let me just make sure I'm reading it correctly.
A. So you skipped over the citations.
Q. Yeah. So I skipped the citations. And if you go down below the quoted reference there, it says, "In addition, this approach overlooks the class attorney's duty to be sure that the court, in passing on the fee application, has all the facts."
A. That's right.
Q. "As well as their fiduciary duty to the class not to overreach."
And you see where Lewis versus Teleprompter is cited there.
A. That's right.
Q. My question to you is, how do you interpret the words "has all the facts"?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I'd have to take a look at Lewis versus Teleprompter Corp. to answer that, because it's making -- you know, that's a quote out of context, and I just would want to take a look at how they are talking to it.

I know the next paragraph talks about that, you know, the decisions where these internal fee agreements have been approved were not ones where there was a return on investment as a factor.
So, I mean, I might infer that, you know, if you have an agreement where, you know, having an investment agreement where you're going to get a big multiple of what you've invested, that that's a fact that the court needs to know. But like I said, I want to take a look at Lewis versus Teleprompter to be certain.
Q. But you would agree that it doesn't say that -- strike that.
You would agree that it doesn't say "has all the facts that the parties believe to be relevant," correct?
A. It does not say that.
Q. And why didn't you quote these passages in your discussion of the Agent Orange case?
(Discussion off the record.)

Page 134

A. I have no idea why I didn't quote those particular passages out of, you know, the various -- I think I quoted the passages that I quoted because I thought that they were relevant to what I was saying, and I can't tell you why I didn't just append the entire decision.
Q. Would you agree with me that these passages are relevant to the questions that will come before Judge Wolf in this case?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. They may be, but I think everything has to be in context.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: While he is considering his next line of questioning or next question, was the class, once it was certified, a client of Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Labaton had certain duties to the class as a whole, but they weren't a client like an individual client is.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Without going through the entire record, there are a number of references to the ERISA members of the class as they were our clients.

MR. HEIMANN: I'm objecting to this unless you show us in the record where that was said.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We can spend time. I will get them all out if you want to do that.
Can you get all those? There's a list of them that we have.
But I want you to assume there's a number, including what's been referenced in this litigation as the lobby conference, in which the judge was told there are overlapping interest, words to the effect, I'll get it exactly, but they are all our clients.
Does that change your view about whether the class was class counsel's clients?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't think what you're saying is inconsistent with what I said.

Page 136

I said that class counsel for -- or Labaton let's just say Labaton had certain obliges to the class but those obligations were not exactly the same as a lawyer to the class members, that a lawyer would have to an individual client.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So once the class is certified, Labaton does not have an obligation to comply with the disclosure requirements and consent requirements under Rule 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: Not to every individual class member, it does not.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What about in this case, where you have three cases consolidated for pre-trial purposes, and you have specific class representatives in those other two cases that are consolidated, no obligation to disclose the Chargois agreement to those class representatives or at least to their lawyers so that it can be disclosed to those class members?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: As I said, I did not look into any obligation that Labaton had to the lawyers representing the ERISA class members.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Fine. Let's just stick with the named ERISA class members in the two other cases that have been consolidated and are now members of the settlement class. No obligation to disclose --
THE WITNESS: None, that I could find.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: How would the interest, if there's no obligation, are we -- let me start again.
No obligation under 1.5(e) to disclose this arrangement. Is that what you're referring to, the Chargois arrangement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm referring to that, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And no obligation under any other rule of ethics or legal obligation that you're aware of to disclose it to the named ERISA plaintiffs in the other two cases?

THE WITNESS: Not that I could find.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Were these ERISA members of the class clients of Labaton for purposes of 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: Not in terms of getting each individual's agreement to fee sharing, no.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And when you say "each individual's" you are referring to the named representatives in the two other lawsuits?
THE WITNESS: I'm referring to the named representatives, and I'm also referring to every member of those classes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And there was no obligation to give them, in the notice that went out of the settlement and the payment of attorneys' fees, there was no obligation to tell them of that either?
THE WITNESS: That's correct. There was no obligation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. I garbled that.
There was no obligation in the notice that went out to the class to tell them of the Chargois arrangement in that notice?
THE WITNESS: That's correct. I could not find any obligation to do so.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Would you agree with me that the Agent Orange decision and Lewis, which is cited within it, did not depend on a court rule or a local rule?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Could I take each one separately?
Q. Please.
A. Okay. So, in Agent Orange, there was a court rule that the judge, and I think I used word "waived" and you used --
Q. You did.
A. But, anyway, the court did not require that the firms follow the local court rule.

Page 140

And then, in the Lewis case, I know also refer to Lewis case in my report, and before I speak to it, I would like to take a look at that again to refresh my recollection.
Q. Please feel free.
A. Okay. Thank you. (Perusing.)
Q. What page is that, Peter?
A. Starting on page 41.
Q. 41 to 42?
A. It starts on 41 and goes over to 42. (Perusing.) Yeah. And then in terms of Lewis versus Teleprompter, there wasn't any agreement between a law firm and a client about fee sharing. These were all agreements just between the firms concerning fee -- well, some type of fee sharing or fee splitting, is what the court referred to it.
Some of the fee splitting had to do with firms that were supporting the application of the Popper Pomerantz firm. Some of the other were for firms that were helping to identify clients, but there was nothing that -- between the Popper Pomerantz with the client that permitted the fee sharing, and so that's how I distinguish that particular case from the case that we have here, where Labaton did have an agreement with Arkansas that explicitly referenced fee sharing.

Q. But didn't Lewis specifically reject the premise that counsel could divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee-sharing agreement?
A. Yes, it did.
Q. It did. And, in fact, it referenced the role of the District Court as a protecter of the class, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell me if you agree with this statement, Professor. "A representation stating the truth so far as it goes, but which the maker knows or believes to be materially misleading because of its failure to state additional or qualifying matter, is a fraudulent misrepresentation."
Do you agree with that?
A. Basically, yes.
Q. All right. Now, I'm going to ask you to assume that, in this case, the notice of pendency to the class informed recipients that, in September, I believe this was 2016, the lawyer's fee petitions would be placed on the website for the State Street FX class action. Assume that this happened, and the petition listed the Lodestar numerous firms, including customer class counsel.

Would it be rational for a class member to conclude, from the fee petition, that only lawyers listed on it would receive a payment from the class recovery?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't believe it would be rational for a class member to believe that. An unsophisticated class member, yes, that would be rational. But anybody that knows anything about law firms would know that there are other lawyers who are sharing in those fees who aren't specifically listed because of partnership agreements that the firms have and how fees get divided.
Q. But that notice doesn't just go out to sophisticated class members, does it?

Page 143

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's right.
Q. It goes out to unsophisticated class members. It goes out to semi-sophisticated class members, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I assume so, yes.
Q. So with respect to those two categories, would you agree with me that it would be rational for one of those unsophisticated or semi-sophisticated class members to assume that that's it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, again, it may be rational for them to make that assumption, but I -- it may be rational for them to make that assumption.
Q. I believe it's on page 50 and 52, Peter. You discuss how the duty to inform the class of the Chargois arrangement depended on the duty to inform the court.
Is that a correct statement?
A. I say it flows from that, and it also flows from any other disclosure obligations that the class counsel would have to class members.
So it might not be solely to the court.
Q. And you cite Newburg in your opinion, correct?
A. I do.
Q. And specifically on page 51, if I could just find it. (Perusing.)
Now on page 51 you quote section 8:25.
A. Yes.
Q. And you say that, "Rule 23(h)(1) requires that a court considering a motion for reasonable attorney fees direct notice to class members in a reasonable manner. Yet, other than requiring that the notice be made in a reasonable manner, Rule 23 does not dictate any specific content that the notice must contain.
"Newburg continues that class members must be given sufficient information to be able to object to the fee motion. Newburg states that this requires that the information must conform to Federal Rule Civil Procedure 23(h), and Newburg explains that 23(h) requires that the fee petition be made by motion according to Rule 54(d), and Rule 54, in turn, requires that the motion specify the judgment and statute, rule or other grounds entitling the movant of the award, state the amount sought or provide a fair estimate of it, and disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made."

So I ask you again, Professor, was the notice in this case sufficient to adequately inform class members of the division of fees?
A. It was sufficient to notify class members about the fees. It didn't have to describe the division of fees because the court did not use Rule 54(d) to order that the terms of any agreement about fees for which the claim is being made be disclosed.
Q. I don't believe you quoted it in your opinion, but do you recall Newburg, in that same section and text -- of the text saying that, "In addition to these bare bones requirements, the manual for complex litigation notes that the party seeking fees has the burden of submitting sufficient information to justify the requested fees and taxable costs."

Now, you didn't quote that, did you?
A. I did not.
Q. Why didn't you quote that?
A. Because I read that to talk about justifying the fees and taxable costs, meaning the fees that were going to be going in the fee petition to the various firms, and then what those firms did with the fees would be controlled by what the firms decided to do with them, provided that they followed the ethics rules.
Q. Do you recognize that members of the certified class are clients of class counsel?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I indicated previously that they are clients, but they are not exactly the same as an individual -- the relationship between class counsel and individual class members is not the same as a lawyer's relationship with an individual client.
Q. But are they clients of class counsel?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. They are a type of client of class counsel, that's correct.
Q. And Newburg says they are, correct?
A. That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me interject. I found some of the -- some of the excerpts from both depositions and the rest of the record that I was alluding to earlier, so let me read those to you, okay?
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is from Mr. Chiplock's deposition. Mr. Chiplock is a lawyer who's with the Lieff firm, and he is talking about the responsibility to the ERISA members of the class.
"We had a responsibility as class counsel to the class, and that included ERISA plans.
"I felt that customer class counsel had a responsibility to the entire customer class with no distinctions. We didn't discriminate in our class definition. We didn't see the need to when we filed our case."

That's from Mr. Chiplock.
MR. HEIMANN: What page? I didn't hear the word "clients" in that section.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He didn't use the word "clients." He talked about responsibility.
MR. HEIMANN: Right.
MS. LUKEY: And he said to the entire customer class.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: First. But then he said we didn't discriminate in our class definition.
Mr. Goldsmith, who is a lawyer with Labaton, who represented the class, at the preliminary hearing in August and at the fairness hearing in November, said "We did not assert an ERISA claim in our complaint, but we did allege a class that was broad enough to encompass ERISA-governed assets. How much of the settlement would go to ERISA clients was something that DOL was focused on. Of course, we were focused on it as well, because they were our clients.

"There was a lobby conference on November 15 of 2012."
THE WITNESS: Excuse me. May I ask a question?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: I'm assuming, when you say "lobby," you mean like in the lobby.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In the lobby of the judge's chambers.
THE WITNESS: I just wanted to make sure that my vision of the lobby was what you were referring to.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All of the lawyers were there for both State Street and for the class.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And Michael Thornton, who's sitting over, was there. Bob Lieff, who's sitting over there, was there. And Labaton lawyers were there. And the lawyer for State Street had just given a summary of where they were in the case.

And Michael Thornton says, "I just want to clarify one thing of Mr. Rudman's, State Street's attorney, excellent summary that we might differ on.
"There are two clear ERISA cases."
THE WITNESS: May I ask one more question?
MS. LUKEY: Who's saying this now?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Michael Thornton.
THE WITNESS: Just so I'm clear on this, it seems to me that you're reading from a transcript at this point.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I am.
THE WITNESS: Good. I just wanted to make sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is a transcript of the November 15, 2012, lobby conference.
MS. LUKEY: An excerpt, I assume.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: An excerpt.
THE WITNESS: Thank very much.

Page 151

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I will start over. This Mr. Thornton.
"I just want to clarify one thing of Mr. Rudman's, State Street's attorneys, excellent summary that we might differ on. There are two clear ERISA cases, Enriquez and Andover and, in the third case, Arkansas.
"The ERISA claims are included in the class definition. We also have a claim. And then Mr. Lieff says there is on overlap. That's all we're trying to say. We represent the same people."
And the court asks, "You do represent the same people?"
And Mr. Lieff says, "Yes."
MR. HEIMANN: I didn't hear the word "clients" there.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He used the word "represent."
Mr. Goldsmith, in his deposition, used the word "clients."
MR. HEIMANN: He is the only one so far I've heard, yes.

Page 152

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Does any of that change your view as to the obligations that the -- what we have referred to as the customer class law firms, but particularly Labaton, as lead counsel, had to the members of the class to provide notice and as to whether they were clients of Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection, compound.
THE WITNESS: If I'm understanding your question correctly, you mean an obligation of Labaton to inform the ERISA class members that they were clients of Labaton?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No, not that they were clients. Of the Chargois relationship.
THE WITNESS: No, absolutely not.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, would you agree that the Chargois agreement or arrangement would be information relevant to a class member's decision on whether to object to the fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 153

A. Not in this case.
Q. And why do you say "not in this case"?
A. Because there wasn't an obligation to disclose the fee-sharing arrangement with Chargois & Herron.
If you were to say to me, if it had been disclosed, may a class member have objected, then that's a possibility, but since they didn't have an obligation to disclose it, that's why I'm saying not in this case.
Q. But that's not what I asked you. I asked you if it would be relevant to the class member's decision whether to object, and regardless -- strike that.
Would it be relevant to that member's decision?
A. Not in this case.
Q. Do you think that information would matter --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. -- to a class member?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. It might matter to them, but they --

that information was not required to be disclosed to them.
Q. Because the lawyers had come up with an agreement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Because there was no rule, court order, case-specific order or inquiry from the court asking about fee-sharing agreements.
Q. But there was a fiduciary duty to the class members, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. They had a fiduciary duty, but not one that encompassed disclosing the fee-sharing arrangement.
Q. And there was a duty of candor to the court as well, wasn't there?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's correct. But, again, the duty of candor to the court did not require disclosure of the fee-sharing arrangement.
Q. But that duty of candor also encompassed the obligation to tell the court any material facts, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. We've talked about material facts in the context of the cases that you were talking about, absolutely, correct.
Q. Would you agree with me that there was no way for a class member to learn of the Chargois agreement --
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Who just entered the conversation?
MS HYLENSKI: Sorry. It's just me. I got disconnected.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay, Linda. Thanks.
Q. Let me start again, Peter.
Would you agree with me that there was no way for a class member to learn of the Chargois arrangement if class counsel didn't disclose it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Absent the court requiring disclosure, that's correct.
Q. All right. And do you agree that Rules 1.2 and 1.4, the duty to inform, require that a lawyer give a client information about any "circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent is required by these rules"?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I didn't -- I wasn't asked to opine on the application of those rules to this situation.
What you've paraphrased or read is my recollection of what the rule says, but, again, I haven't done the research to see if they could be implicated in a particular matter.
Q. And, once again, I appreciate your caution. Thank you.
Do you agree that the decision whether to settle belongs to the client under Rule 1.2A?
A. Absolutely.
Q. Do you agree that the Chargois arrangement could rationally bear on a class member's actions regarding the decisions the notice invited class members to make?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Not in this particular case, as I understand the application of that rule, which I have not done thorough investigation into.

Page 157

Q. All right. But you just agreed that it's the client's decision whether to settle, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And my question was, that arrangement could rationally bear on a class member's actions. I'm not asking about disclosure of it. I'm asking you whether that information could rationally bear on a class members actions regarding the decision to settle.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Again, I'm hesitant to say anything in an absolute on this matter, because I haven't done the research into this issue.
It's conceivable, but I think that the client's decision, at least a class member, and I have been a class member of many classes, as I'm sure many people around this room has, and, you know, and even as a lawyer, when I get the packet of material, I oftentimes don't read it all. I'm just sort of looking at, am I going to get anything, and what is it that I'm going to get.

But as I said, I mean, it may, but I'd have to do more research into that particular rule as it applies to class members and what bounds the courts have said or ethics authorities about how much information has to be provided to the class members for them to make a decision about, you know, whether they are going to be an objector. Because, essentially, if you are a class member, unless you are an objector, you are agreeing to the settlement.

So I think the vast majority of class members don't even think they are agreeing. They are just thinking, am I going to be an objector. And then, you know, even as a lawyer, when I've looked at that, I've, you know, thought that it's rather onerous to take on the role of an objector.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's put aside whether there was a duty of disclosure of the Chargois agreement and Chargois payment to the class. Let's just put that aside, okay?

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Page 159

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you think that, in making its -- their decision about whether to accept the settlement, that the existence of the Chargois agreement and the payment to Chargois something -- payment is something class members would want to know?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Maybe. And the reason I say maybe is, you know, I have a colleague who's done some work dealing with class actions and also another colleague who's done work about privacy disclosures when we waive all of our privacy rights, and both of them have concluded that most of us waive our rights or we don't assert our rights, because it's just an overload of information.

So that's why I'm saying maybe. I'm not going to say absolutely.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If it were disclosed in the notice to the class that a lawyer, who did not appear in the class, did no work in the case, was note on any of the Lodestar petitions, and if it were to appear that this lawyer was going to receive $4.1 million, do you think that is something that reasonably might impact a class member's decision as to whether to accept the settlement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: As I said, maybe. Because I could also see a class member looking at, by the time you get the notice of proposed settlement, there's also some indication that there's been some preliminary approval by the court, and a lot of people defer to the legal process and what judges are doing. Not everybody, because there are some objectors.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to focus on the ERISA class members.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you aware that the amount that Chargois received was more than any single ERISA firm received?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I did not look at how the fees were -- you know, what the fee petition -- I mean, I looked at the notice of class, but I didn't pay attention. I was just trying to sort of get a feel for it, but I am not aware of that.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. SINNOTT: If you could, go on mute, everyone.

THE WITNESS: Or does candor to the court require whoever was shuffling the papers to identify themselves? We're not in court.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think my question was, as to the ERISA class members, do you think it would have been important for them to know that Mr. Chargois, who never appeared in the case, did no work on the case, was receiving more money than any single ERISA firm law firm?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, it may be.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you think it would have been important to the ERISA class members to know that the payment that Mr. Chargois received for doing no work, not appearing in the case, was just about 60 percent of the entire ERISA fee award?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You don't have an opinion of whether that might be important to the ERISA class members to know that?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No. Because I'm speculating on what's important to them. That's why I said maybe. And I'm not sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to recalculate my arithmetic. I don't want to mislead you.
THE WITNESS: Okay. So now we are dealing with candor to the witness.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Candor to the witness. 55 percent, not 60 percent.
MR. HEIMANN: Has anybody done the computation of how much it really impacted the members of the class in terms of how much less they got than what they would have gotten.

Page 163

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We are looking at it.
MR. HEIMANN: I can tell you what it is.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You want to be under oath here, Richard?
MR. HEIMANN: I don't need to be under oath. You just need to do the math. It's very simple.
MR. SINNOTT: We welcome anything you want to give us.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me just get this for the record, Professor. And if I'm wrong, excuse me, but I didn't see you cite Rules 1.2 or 1.4, or the duty to inform in your opinion. Did you?
A. That's correct. No, I did not.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Is that because you were not asked to analyze those?

Page 164

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's correct. I was not asked to analyze them, and I focused -- I was working under a limited time frame, and I focused on the issues I had, which continued to grow a little.
MS. LUKEY: Bill, again, it's a rebuttal report.
MR. SINNOTT: Yeah. Got it.
Q. But do you think they bear on the issue?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. They may.
Q. Assume, Professor, that Judge Wolf could have ordered the money intended for Chargois to instead go to the class.
Between paying Chargois, on the one hand, and having the money, on the other hand, go to the class, what do you believe is in the best interest of the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's too speculative for me to answer.
Q. Could a class member reasonably conclude that the class had no interest in any money going to Chargois?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Again, you're -- this is kind of deep speculation, and I just -- I am very reluctant to speculate on to this frame.
Q. We quoted Newburg earlier on class members having sufficient information to decide whether to object to a fee request.
Did they have sufficient information in this case?
A. I believe so.
Q. On page 54, I'm wrapping up here, in your opinion, you hold that Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(a)'s prohibition on a clearly excessive fee does not apply to the Mass. Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5(e), division of a fee, including a referral fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Let me just approach this with some questions.
Two lawyers, Jones and Smith, enter into an otherwise valid division of a fee agreement and collect, between them, $200,000 for their work. That sum is considered reasonable for the work.

Jones does ten hours of work. Smith does 500 hours of work. They divide the fee, 50,000 for Jones and 150,000 for Smith.
A. And Smith is the one who did the less amount of work?
Q. Jones. Jones did ten hours. Smith did 500.
A. All right. I would like a piece of paper, because if I don't, you will be repeating it. Okay.
Q. We can handle that. Let me start again.
A. Jones and Smith.
Q. Jones and Smith enter into an otherwise valid division of fee agreement.
A. Okay.
Q. And, between them, they collect $200,000 for the work.
A. Okay.
Q. That sum, you can presume, is reasonable for the work.

Page 167

A. Right.
Q. Jones does ten hours of work. Smith does 500 hours of work. They divide the fee, 50,000 for Jones, 150,000 for Smith, who did the 500.
A. Okay. Uh-huh.
Q. Smith earns $300 hourly, which is deemed reasonable for Smith. Jones earns $5,000 hourly, although he has never billed more than $500 hourly.
Can a court apply 1.5(a) and conclude that Jones' fee is clearly excessive?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. In Massachusetts, under the rule that existed at the time, and assuming we are talking about a division of fee under 1.5(e), no, I don't think the court would even, you know, address the issue, because in Saggese, he gets $90,000 from what sounds to be like ten minutes worth of work, and the court didn't even blink an eye at it.
Q. Okay. Let me just change the facts a little bit.

I want you to assume, instead, that Jones and Smith are both working on the matter, but there is no division of fee agreement. Jones works for ten hours on the matter.
A. And they are separate firms? I mean, we're dealing now, we've got separate firms?
Q. Yes. Assume that.
A. Okay. And you say no division of fees. So this is not under a 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: No agreement, I think he said.
Q. No agreement.
A. No agreement of how they are going to divide?
Q. That's right.
A. But it is a 1.5(e), where the client agrees that they can divide the fee?
Q. Hold on. So Jones works for ten hours on the matter. Smith works for 500 hours. Each of them bills the client separately. Smith bills at $300 an hour. Jones bills at $5,000 an hour.
Under those circumstances, is a court empowered to find the Jones fee is clearly excessive?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Okay. Before I answer it, I just want to make sure, because I was trying to ask this. So we are no longer dealing with the 1.5(e). We are dealing with a straight 1.5(a) situation, and the court may conclude that, but the court could also conclude that, actually, the $5,000 to Jones is not clearly excessive.
It would depend. If the client were a corporation and it had corporate counsel and corporate counsel was aware of what these billing rates were and approved of it, it's very unlikely that a court would intrude on it.
In fact, there's a case called the Brombeck case that I've taught many times, where a lawyer gets this really outrageously, to me, it seemed, high fee, and it's usually juxtaposed against situations where lawyers get even less fee, but the courts have said, under the circumstances, it was clearly excessive, and in Brombeck, they don't do that because there was corporate counsel involved approving of the fee arrangement that resulted in this, and I'm sure, under today's dollars, the amount would be far in excess of $5,000 an hour.

Q. All right. So, under 1.5(a), you are prepared to say that it could be found to be clearly excessive?
A. If it's not under 1.5(e), yes.
Q. Okay. Would it be a basis for discipline?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. It could be. It could be. You know, like I said, it could be. There are a lot of factors that would go into it, but it could be.
Q. Okay. Thank you.
A. You're welcome.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I just want to ask some general questions from your testimony, and there may be --
THE WITNESS: Before we do that, may I have a very short break?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sure.
THE WITNESS: I have been drinking water to keep lubricated.

Page 171

MR. SINNOTT: On the phone, we are taking a brief break, five minutes.
(Recess taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: Back on the record.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to ask to try to understand your testimony and where it fits in the larger scheme of things here in this case.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to understand your view about the following questions, and I'm going to try to break them out individually. And in asking this question, I want to give you every opportunity to explain or correct or modify or add caveats to your opinion, okay?
THE WITNESS: All right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So as to the Chargois agreement, under which he and his firm would receive 20 percent of the fee for doing no work in a case, in a class action in which Arkansas is the class representative and Labaton is lead counsel, is it your view that there is no ethical or legal obligation upon Labaton first, to inform the client of the nature of the relationship with Chargois if the client doesn't ask?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Under these facts, especially where the relationship began, where the client knew that they were going to be working together, where Christa Clark said, we can only have the one name on the agreement, where the resulting agreement does talk about a division of fees, including referral fees, where that agreement does conform to Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e) that was in effect at the time, then, yes, there's no obligation to go into the details of the arrangement between Labaton and Chargois Herron.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did it also conform to the Supreme Court's decision in Saggese?
THE WITNESS: We have talked about that before, and I think it's not inconsistent with the Supreme Court's decision in Saggese.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think you said that the retention agreement resulted from the earlier relationship from -- as spelled out by Christa Clark in her October 2008 e-mail. Is that what you meant to say?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Oh, if you're talking about previously, when I thought there was a separate agreement, yes, I was referring to the e-mail, the subsequent communications.
I -- as I said, I had it in my mind that that had a separate kind of fee agreement, but that was the initial agreement that -- about how things were to be done.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So in your answer, that there is no obligation to inform the client of the nature of the Chargois arrangement unless the client asks, that includes going back to 2008 and the Christa Clark e-mail.

THE WITNESS: Not necessarily, no.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Standing on its own, the retention agreement standing on its own, there's no obligation --
THE WITNESS: The retention agreement, standing on its own, met 1.5(e) as it existed at the time.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So no obligation to inform the client of the nature of the relationship if the client doesn't ask, the relationship being the Chargois relationship.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: You said I could have qualifiers?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: So here is one the qualifiers. There are two things.
One is there was already imputed to the entity itself, because of Christa Clark's understanding that Chargois Herron was going to be affiliated, so even though, at the time of that particular agreement, she was no longer there, that gets imputed to the entity.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. In that imputation, let me ask you --
MS. LUKEY: Were you done with your answer?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He is going to answer in two parts.
THE WITNESS: I have more to say, that if I could say it now, then I might not forget it later, okay? So that's one thing.
The second thing is there was an offer to try to explain how all the fees -- the fee-sharing situation, and the then head of Arkansas said, that's okay, I don't want to know it. And so, under that set of circumstances, you know, I stand by what I said, which --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're not testifying, you're not trying to tell us that there was anything in Christa Clark's e-mail in which she said it's fine if you want to have an agreement with

Mr. Chargois to pay him for 20 percent for every case in which Labaton was lead counsel or co-lead counsel and Arkansas was lead or co-lead plaintiff.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're not trying to tell us there was anything in that e-mail that they knew that.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not saying she put in a specific percentage amount. I'm not saying that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or any amount.
THE WITNESS: She didn't put in any amount, that's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And is it your belief that the Christa Clark e-mail also says that he could be paid, he, Chargois, could be paid in every one of these cases in which Chargois -- in which Labaton was lead counsel and Arkansas was lead plaintiff for doing no work? Is there anything in that e-mail that you impute to that condition?

Page 177

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: She doesn't say that in that e-mail.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So with that, let me ask that part of the question again.
There is no obligation, ethical or legal, upon Labaton to inform the client, in this case, Arkansas, of the nature of the relationship if the client doesn't ask.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Given the agreement that Labaton had with Arkansas, it met its ethical and legal obligation. So that's what I'm saying. That's how I'm qualifying what I'm saying.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And there is no obligation to inform co-counsel in the class of the true nature, the full scope of the Chargois relationship, including the fact that he did no work in the case?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yeah. I didn't opine on that. I didn't research it, and I'm not in a position to give an opinion on that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it your opinion that there is no ethical or legal obligation upon Labaton to inform the ERISA counsel on behalf of the ERISA members of the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, I didn't research that issue. I would -- I didn't form an opinion on that, and I'm not in a position to give an opinion on that at this time.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it your opinion that there's no ethical or legal obligation upon Labaton to inform the class itself of the Chargois relationship?
THE WITNESS: Absent a court rule, court order, standing order, direct inquiry from the court or precedent in either the District of Massachusetts or the First Circuit or Supreme Court, that's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it your opinion that there is no ethical or legal obligation upon Labaton to inform the ERISA class members independently from other class members?

THE WITNESS: Again, it's my opinion no obligation with the same provision that absent a court order, absent a standing order, absent a local rule, absent precedent either in the District, the First Circuit or the Supreme Court, or the Federal Rules of Civil procedure clearly requiring.
THE WITNESS: Right. And no precedent that would be controlling over the matter, and no ethical rule specific requirement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Taking all of this, what is the public policy that is served by all of this non-disclosure?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In fairness to the witness, I ask this because we are going to be in a court. It's likely that my report, the responses of the law firms will receive the attention of the media. That's how this case started, I think you know. So it's likely that this will receive the attention of the media, which means it will receive the attention of the public.
What is the public interest in all of this non-disclosure? Where is the public interest here?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, I didn't offer an opinion on this. I didn't look at the public policy. I tell you, you know, about various public policies of different rules. Once something gets in the media, it takes on a life of its own. And I'm not in a position to give an opinion that would be well-informed about public policy concerning the non-disclosure or disclosure.

Why we don't have a court rule that says that it's automatically disclosed, some circuits like the Second Circuit has concluded that that's something they want to have. Some judges have made that decision. Other, you know, District Courts have made that decision.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in this case, the burden is on the Massachusetts District Court or Judge Wolf or both --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- to require disclosure.
THE WITNESS: To require disclosure, that's correct.
It could also be something that the First Circuit could do.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or a First Circuit rule either by rule or by decision.

Page 182

THE WITNESS: That's right. They could do that. And some circuits have seen that that was how they could promote what they view to be a good public policy, is what I would presume, but I'm not offering an opinion as to what their reasoning was.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: But, in any event, the burden is on the courts or an individual judge to either adopt a rule, a local rule, a circuit rule, case precedent or to ask?

THE WITNESS: You know, I'm not sure I would use the word "burden." I guess I would say --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Obligation?

THE WITNESS: Maybe obligation, or maybe requirement. That's what the rules say. And, again, I don't know why the drafters of the rules have drafted them in the way they have drafted them, but that's what they've done.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you think it was -- putting aside the rules and your answers, we've got your answers, they're on the record -- was it prudent for Labaton not to disclose this obligation to Chargois and the payment, was it prudent not to disclose it to -- let's start with Arkansas?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Was it prudent?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, I haven't looked into what was prudent and what wasn't prudent.

In my own experience, what seems to be imprudent is informed by 20/20 hindsight, and there are many well-meaning lawyers and law firms and judges who have done things that, at the time, they thought was perfectly fine, and then later somebody is saying maybe it isn't. And sometimes they are proven to be fine. And other times, people say, well, you know, that wasn't prudent.

But, you know, I'm not in a position to make an opinion about what's prudent or not.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: On any of these questions, including -- well, let me ask you separately.

Was it prudent not to inform the court about the fact that Chargois was going to receive $4.1 million without the court asking?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, I'm not in a position to say what was prudent at the time that things were occurring.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And if the court says, in making its decision to approve a settlement and the fee allocation in the settlement, I'm relying heavily upon what the lawyers have submitted to me here, that's not sufficient for the lawyers to have to speak up.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Making an assumption that that's what a judge has said, I would say --

Page 185

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I should say when. At the settlement hearing, the November 2 fairness hearing.

MR. HEIMANN: Objection.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, assuming that's what's said. There's no obligation to disclose a fee-sharing agreement in response to that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Let me just ask you, Professor, if you agree with this statement.

"Legal ethics experts should not offer an opinion, even if defensible, unless they would adopt that opinion if they were the judge in the case."

MS. LUKEY: You asked him that exact question this morning. That exact one.

MR. SINNOTT: The other witness.

MS. LUKEY: Okay. Sorry. They're blending.

Q. Do you agree with that statement?

Page 186

A. Could you repeat it again?
Q. "Legal ethics experts should not offer an opinion, even if defensible, unless they would adopt that opinion if they were the judge in the case."
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Okay. If you're asking me if I were the judge in this case, would I adopt my opinions, the answer is absolutely yes.
Q. Okay. So it would be correct to say that you are prepared to testify in court that Judge Wolf should rule as you've testified today?
A. I mean, I would give the testimony I have given today, and it's up to Judge Wolf to decide how he wants to rule. My job isn't to tell a judge what to do, and I would never make any attempt to do that.
That isn't what the role of an expert witness is. I would be a resource for the judge. He would form his own conclusion, but I was saying, if I were a judge in a case like this, I would adopt these opinions.
Q. Okay. Thank you.

Page 187

MR. SINNOTT: That's all the questions I have.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Joan, you had some questions?
EXAMINATION BY
MS. LUKEY:
Q. Professor Joy, this is a copy of Exhibit 6, which is the excerpts from the Mass. Rules of Professional Conduct.
A. Okay.
Q. The opening line under comment 14.(a) to Rule 3.3 says, "When adversaries present a joint petition to a tribunal, such as a joint petition to approve the settlement of a class action or the settlement of a suit involving a minor, the proceeding loses its adversarial character and, in some respects, takes on the form of an ex parte proceeding."
Who were the adversaries in the State Street case?
A. They were the -- well, Arkansas and the various classes. The ERISA classes were the plaintiffs. And then State Street, and there was some other State Street-type entities. I can't tell you how many. I believe at least three different ones, but I could -- I know at least two, because there's an et al. in it, and they were the defendants. So those are the adversaries, the plaintiffs and the defendants, those are the adversaries.

Q. To your knowledge, sir, did the State Street defendants join in a joint petition for the award of fees in this case?
A. Not -- to the best of my knowledge, they didn't join in for an award of fees. I believe that the only place where they were non-adversarial was on the underlying settlement, but I don't believe that they were joining in on the fee petition.
Q. So as far as you were aware, sir, there was no joint petition in which the adversaries were involved on the fee petition in this case, correct?
A. Not that I'm aware of.
Q. Sir, with regard to the Agent Orange case, that's not a First Circuit case, is it?
A. No. It's a Second Circuit case.
Q. Is it the most recent Second Circuit case that deals with the obligation of disclosure to the court?

A. No, it isn't.
Q. Is there a superseding case?
A. Yes. It's the Bernstein versus Bernstein, other names.
Q. And that is a case that you cite in your report, isn't it?
A. That's correct.
Q. And what is the significance of the superseding Bernstein case to you, sir?
A. Well, that's -- first of all, that's the controlling case authority in the Second Circuit that says, absent a local rule -- well, no. Actually, it says that Rule 26(e), on its own, does not require disclosure of a fee-sharing agreement.
And then, subsequent to that decision, the rules committee revisited the local rules and then they ended up having two layers of the judiciary in the Eastern and Southern Districts adopting and approving a new rule that now requires disclosure in those districts of fee-sharing agreements in class action cases.

Q. Sir, I believe you said that, upon questioning today, that you are not aware of any authority in New York that suggests the relationship between 1.5(e) and 7.2(b) that is propounded by Professor Gillers; is that right?
A. That's correct.
MS. LUKEY: And, Mr. Sinnott, you asked a question that suggested there is such authority. Are you able to provide us with that authority?
MR. SINNOTT: Yes.
MS. LUKEY: Will you provide it?
MR. SINNOTT: I will.
MS. LUKEY: Okay. Thank you. I have nothing further.
MR. SINNOTT: Richard?
MR. HEIMANN: No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: Brian?
MR. KELLY: No questions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't have anything further.
MR. SINNOTT: David, on behalf of Keller Rohrback, any questions?

MR. COPLEY: No. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Thanks, everyone. This will conclude this deposition.

(EXHIBITS RETURNED TO ATTORNEY SINNOTT)

MR. SINNOTT: For the record, it's approximately 1:27, and we are ready to begin the examination of Attorney Hal Lieberman.

If the witness could be sworn.

H A L L I E B E R M A N, called as a witness, having been duly sworn by a Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you, Hal.

For the record, my name is William Sinnott, S-I-N-N-O-T-T. I'm counsel to the special master. The special master is the Honorable Gerald Rosen, retired. Formerly of the United States District Court in Detroit, Michigan.

Judge Rosen has been appointed as special master in the matter of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System versus State Street Bank, Number 11-cv-10230-MLW.

Also on the special master's team to my left is attorney Elizabeth McEvoy, also of Barrett & Singal. And to her left, Professor Gillers of the New York University School of Law.

On the phone, Linda, are you there?

MS. HYLENSKI: I'm here.

MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Is Attorney Linda Hylenski, also on the special master's team.

And, at this time, if I could ask participants who are in the room first to identify themselves beginning with Attorney Lieberman.

THE WITNESS: Yes. Hal Lieberman.

MS. LUKEY: Joan Lukey from Choate Hall, for Labaton Sucharow.

MR. CANTY: Michael Canty for Labaton Sucharow.

MR. GLASS: Stuart Glass, Choate Hall, for Labaton.

MR. HEIMANN: Richard Heimann, Lieff Cabraser.

MR. LIEFF: Robert Lieff, Lieff Cabraser.

MR. THORNTON: Michael Thornton, Thornton Law Firm.

MR. KELLY: Brian Kelly of Nixon Peabody, on behalf of Thornton Law Firm.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you, folks. On the telephone, we've already identified Attorney Hylenski.

Is Josh on the phone?

MR. SHARP: Yes. Joshua Sharp of Nixon Peabody for the Thornton Law Firm.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you, Josh.

Is David on the phone?

MR. COPLEY: Yes. David Copley, Keller Rohrback, for the ERISA plaintiffs.

MR. SINNOTT: All right. Is Emily on the phone? Okay.

Has anyone else joined us on the telephone? All right. Hearing none.

The usual caveats with respect to encouraging witnesses and questioners to speak up loudly and clearly so that the participants by phone can hear us.

And a word of caution to the participants by phone. If you can't hear us or if there's distortion in the line, please bring it to our attention at the earliest possible time so that we don't have to revisit testimony.

All right, with those preliminaries out of the way.
EXAMINATION BY
MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Good afternoon, sir.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. Thank you for being here. And pardon me if I mistakenly call you professor, because it's been professor palooza for the last day and a half here.
But you are a practitioner, correct?
A. I have also been an adjunct professor over the years, but I am a practitioner, yes, sir.
Q. All right, sir. And in the course of this case, you were asked to write a report; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And in conjunction with that report, you submitted a CV; is that correct?
A. Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter,

if I could pass to you this document and ask that you mark that as Exhibit 1.
(Lieberman Exhibit 1, Curriculum Vitae of Hal R. Lieberman, marked for identification.)
Q. And, Attorney Lieberman, showing you Exhibit 1. Is that the CV that you submitted in conjunction with your expert report?
A. (Perusing.) Yes.
Q. All right. And, sir, your expert report was submitted on March 26 of 2018.
Since that time, have you drafted any more recent copies of the CV?
A. No.
Q. So there are no changes or additions that need to be made to that CV?
A. No.
Q. Is there any other relevant experience, beyond what's in the CV, that informs your opinion, the opinions that you've submitted in your report?
A. (Perusing.) No.
Q. All right. And, Attorney Lieberman, are you being compensated for being here today?

Page 12

A. Yes.
Q. And what's your rate of compensation?
A. $750 an hour.
Q. And can you estimate how many hours you've worked on this case up until this point?
A. I haven't really thought about it. It would be -- no, I can't really estimate.
Q. All right, sir. Would it be in excess of 25 hours?
A. Probably not.
Q. And in preparation for today's deposition, did you conduct any review or other kind of preparation?
A. Yes.
Q. And would you describe what you did in order to prepare for today's deposition?
A. Well, in the course of preparing my report, I reviewed various documents that were provided to me by counsel for Labaton, and I also met with counsel for Labaton on -- well, several occasions on the telephone and once in person.
Q. All right. And was that meeting in person today?

A. Well, we did talk briefly today, but the meeting that I'm -- where I prepared was last week.
Q. Okay. And, sir, referring to the -- referencing the documents that you mentioned, that were used in the preparation for your deposition, were those the same documents you used in order to write your report?
A. Well, I referred to those to understand the case better. I didn't use those documents to write my report, but they were helpful in terms of providing facts and background and understanding people's positions, if that's what you mean.
Q. All right, sir. Well, let me ask you about the facts in this case.
Who drafted the factual statement that appears between pages 3 and 13 of your report?
A. It was a joint effort between myself and Labaton counsel.
Q. All right. And could you describe for us what that process was?

Page 14

A. Sure. I asked Labaton to provide to me a set of facts that I would base my opinion on, my assumed facts. They did. We worked on it together and, ultimately, it's what you see in the report.

But I needed my -- my practice is to request facts on which I'm going to rely and then to provide an opinion based on those facts.

Q. All right. And was that a static process? And by that I mean, once you received statement of facts from counsel for Labaton, did that remain the statement of facts that you operated on in formulating your report?

A. No. It evolved.

Q. And how did it evolve?

A. Based on discussions with counsel and with --

Q. Can you give us some insight as to the types of things that made it evolve?

A. Sure. One of the things was the fact that I was under the impression, initially, that the rule that was applicable to the time period at issue was the so-called newer rule promulgated in 2011 when, in fact, it turned out, and I found out, and it affected my opinion to a degree -- I shouldn't say it substantially affected my opinion, but it affected my opinion that, in fact, the old rule applied at the time of the signing of the retention letter.

Q. Okay.

A. So that was an issue that evolved.

Q. Any other things that evolved with respect to the facts during the course of that process?

A. That's probably the main thing.

Q. All right. And with respect to the underlying documents in this case, can you describe for us, in general terms, what those documents were?

A. Professor Gillers' report, the Camille Sarrouf declaration, the George Hopkins declaration, various deposition excerpts.

I'm trying to think what else there might have been. There probably are other things. Those would be the things I recall right now.

Page 16

Q. And you say deposition excerpts.

Did you receive any complete transcripts?

A. I don't know if I did. I doubt it. I may have. I know that there was testimony by Eric Belfi. There was testimony by George Hopkins.

I don't recall -- I don't recall any additional testimony offhand, but there may have been others.

Q. All right. Thank you, sir.

And with respect to your opinion that appears between pages 13 and 20 of your report, who wrote that opinion?

A. I did.

Q. And did you have any assistance in that?

A. I had assistance from my research associate in my law firm, but I wrote the opinion.

Q. And prior to you writing the opinion with the assistance of your research associate, had you seen Mr. Sarrouf's declaration?

A. Yes.

Page 17

Q. And in addition to Mr. Sarrouf's declaration, did counsel for Labaton give you any additional guidance?

A. I'm not sure I understand your question.

Q. Did they, for example, tell you what questions they wanted you to address?

A. No. I formulated the questions.

Q. Okay. And how did you formulate the questions?

A. Based on Professor Gillers' report. I wanted to respond to it.

Q. All right. And was that strictly -- strike that.

So beyond reading Professor Gillers' report and Mr. Sarrouf's declaration, did you receive anyone -- input from anyone else, suggestions, if you will, as to what your report should encompass?

A. No.

Q. And did you personally perform all the research in your opinion or did your research assistant did all or some of it?

A. He did some of it.

Page 18

Q. All right. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: And Madam Court Reporter, if I could pass over to you the expert report of Hal R. Lieberman and ask you to mark that as Exhibit 2.
(Lieberman Exhibit 2, Expert Report of Hal R. Lieberman, marked for identification.)
Q. Now, sir, showing you that expert report that's been marked as Exhibit 2, and directing your attention to page 15.
A. Okay.
Q. Under the letter A, you write, "Contrary to Professor Gillers' central argument, the facts support the conclusion that Labaton substantially complied with its obligations under Mass. Rule 1.5(e) to disclose to its client, ARTRS," and if you don't mind, I'll call them Arkansas, "that its fees could be shared with Chargois."
Do you see that, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. And just so it's fresh in everyone's mind, although I suspect that most people in this room have it memorized, stated in full, that provision reads, "A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable."

Page 19

Is that your understanding of how the rule reads, Attorney Lieberman?
A. Yeah. I'm reading the rule as you spoke.
Q. Okay. And I have accurately stated the rule?
A. You read the words in the rule, yes.
Q. So when you say that "Labaton substantially complied with its obligation under 1.5(e) to disclose its client, Arkansas, that its fees could be shared with Chargois," what do you base that on?
A. First of all, I would amend that slightly. I think now I would take out the word "substantially," and I would simply say Labaton complied. I don't think it was substantial. I think it was full compliance.

Page 20

And you are asking the question, what do I base it on?
The facts that were provided to me and on which I assumed for purposes of my opinion.
Q. Let me just back you up there.
In changing from the word "substantially" to full or fully complied, do you base that on more recent information or have you just changed your mind?
A. No, I haven't changed my mind. Yeah, I think -- I think that -- I think it was just ill advised to include the word "substantial," because I think they fully complied with both 1.5(e), as stated in February 2011 and as later changed by the adoption of 1.5(e) in revised form, based on -- on page 14. I think they fully complied with either -- either rule -- either version of the rule.
Q. And, specifically, Attorney Lieberman, with respect to the provision of the rules that states that after saying, "The division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if," specifically with respect to the words "after informing the client that a division of fees will be made," I ask you, how did Labaton adhere to or comply with that provision?

A. I think, on the final retention letter, it states, "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees or for other services performed in connection with the litigation."
Q. All right. So you're basing compliance with that particular phrase on the retention agreement?
A. Yes, sir, among other things.
Q. What are the other things that you base it on?
A. Well, that they also disclosed the existence of the relationship with Chargois to Mr. Hopkins' predecessor and to the general counsel.
Q. What did they disclose, first of all, to the general counsel, and then I'm going to ask you what they disclosed to Mr. Hopkins, but, to your knowledge, what was disclosed to George Hopkins?

A. I'm sorry. You said you were going to ask me -- you reversed the order.
Q. Yes, I did.
A. I'm sorry.
Q. Tell me first what you understand was disclosed to George Hopkins.
A. Well, the retention letters.
Q. All right. And that's it?
A. At the time, that's the best of my knowledge. Maybe there were conversations with Mr. Hopkins. I think there's some testimony about that on -- on page 9 of my report, there is reference to that, but I don't -- I mean, I don't know anything more specific than that.
Q. So you're not aware of any conversations between Eric Belfi or other Labaton attorneys and George Hopkins with respect to a division of fees?
A. I'm only aware of what's in the facts section of my report.
Q. All right. But with respect to what's in the facts section of your report, in making or concluding that Labaton complied with its obligations under 1.5(e) and specifically that phrase that I asked you about, informing the client that the division of fees will be made, is it your testimony that that is, with respect to Mr. Hopkins, solely contained within that line that you read from the retention agreement?

A. No, that's not my testimony. My testimony is that that's one thing, but that there may have been conversations as well. It appears that there were, and that Mr. Hopkins apparently said he wasn't interested in knowing about the fee split as long as the overall fee was whatever it was, and it was fair to him and to the prospective class.
Q. All right. Now, who did he say that to?
A. I don't know. I wasn't there. But my assumption is that he said it to Belfi.
Q. When did he say it to Belfi?
A. I don't know precisely when he said it to Belfi.
Q. Is it important as to when he said it to Belfi?

Page 24

A. Not for purposes of 1.5(e) in terms of the compliance aspect.
Q. So if he said it to Belfi yesterday, that would be sufficient?
A. It might be.
Q. If he said it to Belfi a month from now, that would be sufficient in order to indicate that the client has been informed that a division of fees will be made?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's not my -- that's not my testimony, but the courts certainly have enforced fee-splitting agreements where there's been even no notice to the client ahead of time, such as in the Daynard case, which Professor Gillers cites in his report.
Q. Well, do you adopt that view, that a division of fees can be in satisfaction of 1.5(e) if there's no notice to the client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Do I adopt that point of view with respect to 1.5(e)?
Q. Yes, sir.

Page 25

A. No, I don't.
Q. So you would agree that 1.5(e) requires that a division of fees can be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents, correct?
A. That's what the rule says.
Q. So the rule would indicate that the client needs to be informed before a division of fees will be made.
Do you agree with that?
A. Well, it's not so clear. In Massachusetts, the Saggese decision seems to suggest that that would be the preferred practice going forward. But, apparently, the court enforced that fee agreement as -- fee-splitting agreement as between the lawyers when it was not disclosed.
So it's not clear.
Q. It's your view that Saggese said that that would be the preferred practice?
(Emily Harlan attends telephonically at this time.)
A. That's what I just said, yes.

Page 26

Q. So you don't ascribe to the belief that the Saggese court said it should be done in all agreements?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. All fee agreements?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The opinion speaks for itself. It was -- certainly, it was dictum, but it was certainly important, and that's what the court said. It wasn't a rule at the time.
Q. All right. But when you say it's preferred practice, was it optional in Saggese?
A. I'm sorry. Was what optional in Saggese?
Q. Was the -- for example, the requirement that the consent be in writing optional?
A. No. The court enforced the agreement even though it wasn't in writing.
Q. And the court said that it would apply to all future agreements, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The opinion speaks for itself, sir. I can't get into the head of the court. That's the way I read the opinion.

Q. All right. But -- and the reason I asked you is because you used the expression "preferred practice."
And would you agree with me that preferred practice connotes that something is not mandated by the court?
A. That's a complicated question. It's unclear what the court meant when it said that this should be the practice going forward, because the rule was not amended in accordance with Saggese for many years.
And the SJC certainly had the authority to do that if it chose to.
Q. So as a practitioner after the Saggese case, but before the rule was codified to mirror that or to comply with that, how would you have advised a client with respect to a division of fees agreement? And by that specifically I mean whether to comply with Saggese. Was it optional?
A. When you say "as a practitioner," do you mean when I was a regulator prosecuting lawyers, or when I was a defense lawyer representing lawyers? Which do you mean?

Q. The latter. I'm saying, what would you have advised your client?
A. I would have advised my client to comply with the rules applicable at the time under the Code of Professional Responsibility or then Rules of Professional Conduct.
I would have advised my client, if I knew about Saggese, which I would have, presumably, that there was this case out there and to, you know, if possible, follow the greater formality that Saggese was suggesting, although I'm not sure that it really would have changed anything in this case.
But, I mean, as a defense lawyer for lawyers, I would have said that the lawyer is bound by the rule as it is written, not by a decision of a court, albeit, the high court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Q. So, in your view as a practitioner, advising clients, you would not have informed your client, you got to comply with Saggese?
A. Of course, I would have suggested to my client that the client comply with Saggese.

Page 29

Q. Okay.
A. But I don't think that changes anything, as I said.
Q. I'm not asking you if it changes anything.
A. I understand. Okay.
Q. If I could just get back to this phrase "informing the client that a division of fees will be made."
A. Yes.
Q. And ask you, outside of the retention letter, what other evidence do you have of that, that that was complied with?
A. Well, the declaration of George Hopkins.
Q. All right. And did George Hopkins claim to have been told about Damon Chargois?
A. Not in his declaration. He didn't say that in his declaration. He may have -- he said he wasn't interested.
Q. He said he wasn't interested.
And, in your view, is that sufficient to obviate any obligation on the part of the parties to inform the client about a division of fees?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Whether or not the client is interested, it doesn't obviate the obligation to say there will be a division of fees, no.
Q. All right. And, once again, going back to the engagement letter that we have already referenced, you pointed to the first sentence at the top of page 2 that says, "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees or for other services performed in connection with the litigation," correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Now, where does it say there that a division of fees will be made?
A. It's the whole sentence says that. It says they have permission to do that. "May" means permission.
Q. Right. But permission and actually being informed are two different things, are they not?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 31

A. I don't agree.
Q. So when the rule says "informing the client that a division of fees will be made," you believe that this "may allocate" satisfies that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And as a long-time practitioner and regulator, it's not your view that had the rule wanted to convey that a division of fees may be made, it would have put it in the rule itself? That's not your belief?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I actually don't understand the question.
Q. Well, let's look at 1.5(e).
A. Okay.
Q. And change -- change the words, after it says "a division of fees between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees may be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable."
Wouldn't that more accurately

encapsulate your interpretation of that first sentence --
A. No.
Q. -- in the agreement?
A. No.
Q. Why not?
A. Because it's substantially the same thing. The client is being informed that there may be a division of fees, and the client needs -- doesn't need to know any more than that if the client is not affected by it because the overall fee is reasonable.
Q. And what legal authority do you have for that interpretation?
A. I don't have any legal authority for it other than the plain language and my knowledge of regulation and enforcement over the years and my experience in advising people about fee-sharing agreements.
Q. All right. So the answer is you do not have any legal authority for it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Legal authority for what, sir?
Q. For your interpretation that, had the court wished to make that optional, if you will, it would have said, "Informing the client that a division of fees may be made."

A. When you say "legal authority," you're referring to either case law or ethics opinions. And you certainly -- there's a wealth of case law out there where courts have enforced imperfect or substantial compliance fee-splitting arrangements between -- when there's a fight between lawyers, where there's not a perfect following or compliance with this rule.
So I guess I would rely on that as well.
Q. Let me ask you this, sir.
In the requirement for -- that "the division of fees may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation," did you interpret "consent" to be informed consent?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. There's a definition in New York that says that consent implies informed consent. I don't believe that there's a similar definition of consent or there was at that time in the Massachusetts Code of Professional Responsibility, but consent implies informed consent. And so I would read it into the rule.

Q. And reading it into the rule, as you do, what does the requirement that the consent be informed suggest with respect to what the client would be told?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Client would be told that there's going to be a fee splitting or there might be a fee-splitting arrangement between law firms.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Nothing more than that?

THE WITNESS: The rule doesn't require anything more than that. And that's been the common understanding of the rule.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. And it's your opinion that 1.5(e) did not require that Arkansas be informed of anything more than that Labaton may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees or for other services performed in connection with the litigation.

Is that your opinion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was no requirement that Labaton inform Arkansas of the existence of Damon Chargois and his role in this case?

A. Not beyond what I just said.

Q. So, in your opinion, it was not necessary that, even though Labaton was aware of the role of Damon Chargois, that it inform Arkansas?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Inform Arkansas of what?

Q. Of his role and of his existence.

A. Of Chargois' existence?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No.

Q. And the fact that informed consent would be at issue -- would be operative here does not change that opinion of yours?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 36

A. No, sir.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me ask just a couple questions about what the engagement letter -- do you have a copy of it?

THE WITNESS: I have a copy of the quote.

MS. LUKEY: (Handing.) He has got it now.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You quoted in your opinion, you can read the whole letter if you'd like, but I would like to focus on the paragraph at the top of page 2, which seems to be the operative language here.

And, by the way, we haven't met. I'm Gerry Rosen.

THE WITNESS: How do you do? Nice to meet you, Judge.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Nice to meet you.

What do you interpret or infer Labaton was permitted, reading "may" as permissive, to do under this agreement?

Page 37

THE WITNESS: It seems to me that Labaton was basically trying to tell the client, and did tell the client, that they might need to retain local or liaison counsel, that they might need to pay a referral fee to such local counsel, and that they might need to pay somebody for services performed in connection with the litigation, and that they were getting the permission of the Arkansas Teacher Fund to do that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you read the phrase who -- "may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees"?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Modifying and referring back to local or liaison counsel.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: No, I don't read it that way, sir.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. I thought that's what you said.

Page 38

THE WITNESS: No, no. I read it that they have the right to, under this agreement, allocate fees to people who serve as local or liaison counsel or allocate fees as referral fees or allocate fees for other services performed in connection with the litigation. I read it as the --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Each phrase in the disjunctive?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Of course, that's not what it says, is it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: On its face.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't agree. That's the way I read it. It's plain language to me, sir.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You don't read "as referral fees" as modifying local or liaison counsel?
THE WITNESS: No, I don't.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You read it

Page 39

separately and independently as a permissive separate and independent payment?
THE WITNESS: I do.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: On page --
THE WITNESS: By the way, I'm not sure it makes a difference, but I do.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Well, you agree that the contract forms the basis of the relationship and what Labaton is permitted to do under the contract?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I agree that a contract is a written agreement, sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if it were read as referral fees to modify local or liaison counsel, the payment would be made to Mr. Chargois in this case as a referral fee for serving as local counsel or for serving as liaison counsel.
THE WITNESS: It's possible. I don't read it that way.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or the payments could be made for other services performed, right?

THE WITNESS: I think there are three different possibilities there.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Three different possibilities for payment?
THE WITNESS: For allocation of fees among counsel.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Reading it the way you say you read it, there are four different possibilities, right?
THE WITNESS: Well, I suppose you could say local or liaison counsel could be two different possibilities, sure. Sure. So there could be four.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In fact, there may well be.
THE WITNESS: Could be.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But if you read it the other way this could be read, and parse the sentence differently, whereby, as referral fees modifying local or liaison counsel, that would indicate that the referral fees would be paid for serving as local or liaison counsel because it's an offset clause divided by commas.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: You could read it that way. I just don't read it that way, sir.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And the fact that the next phrase says "or for other services performed," does that not indicate that the agreement contemplates some form of services that relates to a fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I would imagine it relates to a fee, an allocation of fees to other counsel besides Labaton. That's what the purpose was.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm interested in your view of what a referral fee is.
I have been interested from the beginning of this investigation as to what people's views are as a referral fee. People seem to have very different views about, first of all, what it was that Mr. Chargois got paid. We've had vastly different views, including Mr. Chargois' own view.

I'm interested in yours. What was the nature of the payment to Mr. Chargois?
THE WITNESS: As best I understand, it was a referral fee.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What informs that view?
THE WITNESS: The fact that Mr. Chargois introduced the client to Labaton.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But not in connection with this case specifically?
THE WITNESS: And it followed from this -- it followed, as part of the introduction, that there would be potential litigation, although, initially, it was monitoring. And that, therefore, the -- but for Chargois' introduction, Labaton would not have perhaps become counsel in the State Street litigation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you read referral fee as any kind of a fee paid for an introduction that preceded the instant case by years, that the payment would be a referral fee?

THE WITNESS: Well, it depends on the facts and the circumstances, but I suppose it could conceivably be, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So let's talk about the facts and circumstances.
Assume that the deposition testimony, including Mr. Chargois', but also including the witnesses from Labaton, indicate that Mr. Chargois was asked to make an introduction to what was termed institutional investors, and that out of that came a phone call by Mr. Chargois to the executive director of Arkansas, and that out of that came a meeting, the first meeting at which Mr. Chargois participated. And after that, he participated in no other meetings.
But as a result of that, there was an agreement between Labaton and Mr. Chargois and Chargois & Herron that Mr. Chargois would receive 20 percent of every fee Labaton got in which Arkansas was either lead or co-lead plaintiff and Labaton was either lead or co-lead counsel.

And that this was the genesis of the relationship and the agreement, and that this continued forward until February 8 of 2011. And that it was pursuant to this agreement with this context that Labaton paid Mr. Chargois.
Is that a referral fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think this is a referral fee, and it happens all the time, common.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you see any difference between this and a finder's fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Finder's fee? I don't know what a finder's fee is.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In other context, such as real estate or businesses in which a business agent goes out and finds a client for another business, it's often referred to as a finder's fee.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: A referral fee, in my world of legal ethics, refers to a fee paid by one lawyer to another lawyer who is not affiliated with the first lawyer.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: For anything?
THE WITNESS: For referring a case or a matter.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And is that what happened in this case? Was a case referred or was a matter referred?
THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And exactly when was this case referred?
THE WITNESS: Whenever the litigation was about to begin, to my knowledge.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Chargois referred the State Street matter to Labaton. That's your understanding?
THE WITNESS: There was a referral fee arrangement between Labaton and the Chargois & Herron firm that had basically incorporated the notion that Labaton would be counsel in this kind of litigation. So that was the arrangement that they had. I don't understand why --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And it didn't matter that it is not case specific at all?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: But just that it's kind of a floating lien over all cases in which Labaton serves as lead counsel and Arkansas as lead plaintiff?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I can't answer the way you've described it as a floating lien, but it certainly is not an uncommon arrangement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: How about a continuing interest, is that better?

THE WITNESS: I don't know. I can't -- I don't have an opinion on that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You say it's common that, where a lawyer makes an introduction to a client, that that lawyer, the introducing lawyer, receives a fee in every case that that client has going forward without limitation to specific referrals for specific cases.

THE WITNESS: Judge Rosen, I know a number of lawyers in New York, and probably in Massachusetts, although I can't think of anybody specifically in Massachusetts, I know a number of lawyers in New York who have referral fee arrangements on an ongoing basis with trial counsel who are not litigators, but who refer, essentially, all or most of their matters to trial counsel, and it's an understood, sometimes oral, but usually in writing at the outset agreement, and a stream of cases are referred to the same trial counsel because the referring lawyer knows that that trial counsel is an excellent litigator and has excellent results, and it's common.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to parse that more carefully.

Is that on a case-by-case basis?

Page 48

When more clients come in, that referring lawyer gets the case and says, you know, I know Lawyer Smith, he's excellent, he has handled a number of cases, I'm going to refer it. Is that the situation you are referring to?

THE WITNESS: All the time.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. That didn't happen in this case, though.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't know what you mean by that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, let me explain it to you so you do.

THE WITNESS: Sure.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Chargois had no involvement whatsoever, the testimony shows, no involvement whatsoever in this specific matter. His fee was paid simply and only for the original introduction with no specific involvement in this or any of the other nine cases he received a fee for.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what I'm trying to parse down on here is whether, in all of these other cases you say happened, there is -- the referring lawyer has no contact whatsoever with the client, but only receives the fee for the initial introduction, not touching or having anything else to do with the specific case at issue.

THE WITNESS: It's common, Judge.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the lawyer who is referring makes no independent judgment, has no independent role, has no specific involvement or even touches on a case-by-case basis. He simply has a continuing interest in every single case.

THE WITNESS: It's common, Judge.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the referring lawyer isn't involved at all? What if the relationship then reverts back to the lawyer that is being referred, in this case, Labaton, and the client, and the client continues to hire Labaton without any involvement of the initial lawyer?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Unless there is an understanding between the referring lawyer and the referred lawyer that that is going to be the case, then the fee agreement wouldn't be enforceable between the lawyers. But if there's an understanding between them, and the client is told that there is a fee-splitting agreement, that's sufficient, whether the lawyer, the referring lawyer does a stitch of work or not.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not focusing on the work.
THE WITNESS: I thought you were.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I am focusing on the act of referring a specific case.
THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, then. What's your question? I may have misunderstood it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me be clear

again. I'm trying to be clear.
THE WITNESS: I understand.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Let me be very clear.
THE WITNESS: Sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: As I understood your description, you say it's done all the time, where cases come into a lawyer and they say, I'm referring it to Lawyer Smith. That's a specific case.
And then other cases come in, maybe on the same matter or maybe on a different matter, and that lawyer says, I'm referring this to Lawyer Smith.
Is that the relationship you're referring to?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: As a referral fee?
THE WITNESS: Very frequently what happens is that lawyer A does a lot of advertising and gets people to respond to his or her advertising, and if it's a particular type of case which involves litigation, and lawyer A is not a specialist in litigation, if you can call him that, if he doesn't concentrate in litigation --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is lawyer A referring --
THE WITNESS: Yes. Then lawyer A will refer to lawyer B. And that's it. There is a relationship between lawyer A and lawyer B that is either written or unwritten, but that is an understanding of a fee-splitting arrangement and the client is told, in one form or another, that lawyer B will be handling the matter henceforth. And lawyer A doesn't do anything further. And that is common.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think we are talking past each other.
THE WITNESS: Maybe.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In your hypothetical, lawyer A, the referring lawyer, is actually getting the cases or matters in. Whether he does any work or she does any work at all on it, he then refers it to lawyer B.

THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That didn't happen here.
What happened here is lawyer A, the referring lawyer, made an introduction three years before. Never touched the case. Never had any involvement in any other specific case in which Arkansas served. Well, there was one. Sorry.
There were eight cases in which he had no specific involvement at all. The relationship then was directly between lawyer B, Labaton, the referred lawyer, and the client. Lawyer A was never involved, Mr. Chargois. Never even knew about it until the cases were filed and, in some cases, after the cases were filed.
You see the distinction?
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not asking you now whether there is a legal distinction. I'm asking you if you see the factual distinction so that I can understand your view?

THE WITNESS: I don't see the factual distinction either, sir.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't know what more I can do to explain it to you, except to say this directly to you.
In this case, as contra to the cases you described, lawyer A never touched this specific case, ever. The client did not come into him and say, I want to file a case and lawyer A then referred it to lawyer B.
In this case, lawyer A, the only thing he did, I'm not asking you whether it's proper or under 1.5, all that happened in this case was three years before or four years before, lawyer A opened the door, made the introduction, and then, in every subsequent case in which the client used lawyer B to represent the client in the case, totally divorced at this point from anything lawyer A did, other than the initial introduction, a fee was paid.

And my only question to you, is that a referral fee?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why?
THE WITNESS: Because A caused the introduction to be made and A caused the attorney/client relationship to come to be.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that's sufficient to be a referral fee, whether or not lawyer A has any more involvement whatsoever in any of the future cases?
THE WITNESS: In my opinion, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Now, you said it happens all the time. Common practice.
Is the description I have now given you common practice as a referral fee?
THE WITNESS: It's a variation on a theme, if I can put it that way. It's not common practice in the sense that I was describing a moment ago, but it's not dissimilar in substance. Same concept.
The real question here, for purposes of this case, I think, is what's the purpose of the referral fee rule, and who is supposed to be the beneficiary of the referral fee rule, and I have views on that, if you want to ask me.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does the referral fee rule not contemplate, at least in part, and the policy behind the referral fee, that a lawyer who, by virtue of his or her practice and expertise, is not or does not feel totally competent to handle a case, but knows of another lawyer who is more competent and more experienced to handle that case, refers the case out to that lawyer, who is more experienced and more competent.
THE WITNESS: I agree with that, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Does that not, just as a policy matter, imply that what we have been calling lawyer A, the referring lawyer, make some judgment, however modest, however scarce, however skimpy, that that lawyer makes some judgment that lawyer B should handle the case rather than him or her?

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. That's not what happened in this case.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What happened in this case is that lawyer A, the referring lawyer, made an introduction. There's even some question in this case as to whether or not, by other experts not retained by the special master, as to whether or not, in that introduction, there was even a recommendation.
The previous expert testified that there was not even a recommendation, that it was simply an introduction.
Is the policy behind referral fees served in those circumstances?
THE WITNESS: The policy behind referral fees is served when clients are able to retain, through the referral process, competent counsel to handle their matter, whatever that may be.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What's the difference between somebody who does what Mr. Chargois did here, makes an introduction, a lawyer who does it, and a non-lawyer who maybe knows the client, who calls him and says, hey, you know, I have got this friend who's a lawyer, and I'd love for you to meet him because he does this kind of work.

THE WITNESS: The rules preclude paying referral fees to non-lawyers.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that's the only difference?

THE WITNESS: That's one of the differences.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you see no significance right now just in terms of the policy basis behind referral fees, you see no significance in the fact that the cases in question, and this case in particular, developed out of the relationship that Labaton had with the client once it had -- once it was hired as monitoring counsel, and, at that point, Mr. Chargois is totally out of the relationship. You see no difference there?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: In terms of the policy behind referral fees, do you see a difference?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the fee can simply relate back?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is what I was referring to when I said it was a floating lien, because that sure is what it sounds like to me.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: A floating interest in any cases that the client that was introduced, as to subsequent cases by the referred lawyer. It sounds to me like just simply -- you can call it a floating lien, you can call it a floating interest, but it doesn't sound like a referral fee in the way I've always thought of referral fees and I have seen them, at least in my court, because there is no judgment whatsoever exercised, no participation whatsoever exercised by lawyer A in these subsequent cases. He just has an interest in future cases.

Is there any professional -- that was a speech. Let me stop the speech and ask you a question.

Given the scenario, is there any professional aspect of this for which Mr. Chargois was compensated in his role as a lawyer?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: There is a professional aspect, and it has to do with the referral fee rule and his right to referral fees if there's a referral fee arrangement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Isn't that circular?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's a referral fee, because it's a referral fee because he's a lawyer.

THE WITNESS: Because the purpose is for the client's benefit to have competent counsel, and if Chargois plays a role in that, a meaningful role in getting the client competent counsel, then under the rules as I understand them, the referring lawyer is entitled to a fee.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Irrespective of whether he ever touched the case again, even whether he knew about the case?

THE WITNESS: That's what the rule says.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Where does the rule say that, please? And we can look at the rule that was in effect at the time.

THE WITNESS: All the lawyer has to do is inform the client that a division of fees will be made and the client agrees and the total fee is reasonable. That's what happened here.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It does say the client consents to the joint participation.

Where was Mr. Chargois'

Page 62

participation, please?
THE WITNESS: He was -- participated by referring the matter. That's sufficient for the rule.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Joint participation can refer back however long ago it was?
THE WITNESS: The courts do not require that a lawyer be -- appear as co-counsel, file a notice of appearance, supervise the lawyer to whom the case is referred.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or do any work?
THE WITNESS: Or do any work.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or even know about the case?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't understand that question.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Suppose Mr. Chargois didn't even know about this case until after it was filed and much later into its gestation. Suppose he doesn't know about that. Is that joint participation for purposes of the rule?

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Because he initiated the relationship.
THE WITNESS: The relationship, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Years before.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And, again, tell me how the policy behind referral fees is served by that.
THE WITNESS: Because the idea is that the client should get counsel who is competent in the particular area, and it's for the client's benefit that we have the referral fee rule to encourage lawyers who are not specialists or practice in particular areas, to refer those matters rather than try to handle them and dabble in them or try to somehow participate so they can get some kind of a proportionate fee. That's why the rules changed so that it added the joint participation or joint responsibility as opposed to simply in proportion to the fee.

It was never the case in Massachusetts, but it certainly was the case in other jurisdictions.
The ABA really went out of its way to liberalize the rules so to encourage referral fees. That was the idea.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the phrase "joint participation" connotes not a single, not a single piece of participation in the case itself?
THE WITNESS: I'm not going -- I'm not going to say that joint participation means that there is not a single piece of effort, but the effort that the courts have said is sufficient is the referral itself.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not -- not of the specific case, I'm not quibbling about that, of the client. It's really a referral of a client, not a case.
THE WITNESS: Referral of a client to a lawyer, that's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you think that's what joint participation anticipates in the rule?

THE WITNESS: That's what the courts have said, and that's the way I read it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me direct your attention, Counsel, to page 16 of your report.
A. Sure.
Q. And specifically in the paragraph that begins near the top, "Both the Labaton partner."
The second sentence says, "Hopkins has also recently provided a declaration confirming that he retroactively approves of the instant fee-splitting arrangement. Indeed, Hopkins has affirmatively stated that he did not wish to be involved in discussions concerning fee allocation or becoming a referee between law firms because that would have districted him from focusing on protecting the class. His only concern about fees was that the overall attorney fee award remain the same."
Then you go on in the next paragraph to say that, "The foregoing facts support the conclusion that Labaton obtained ARTRS' consent to divide its fees with Chargois and, therefore, complied with Rule 1.5(e) as it then existed."

So let me focus on the declaration, Attorney Lieberman. What's the significance of this declaration which was drafted years after the engagement letter in this case?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, as I think about it, it may not be all that significant because Hopkins did sign the engagement letter. Just, I guess, the parties couldn't find a signed copy.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So that's why the ratification declaration was necessary, because they couldn't find a signed copy?

THE WITNESS: I don't know. I don't know why it was necessary.

Q. Well, how is it significant to your report, or is it?

A. Well, it's simply -- it corroborates or reemphasize -- it reemphasizes that he gave, you know, gave consent and that he knew what he was doing and that he is a sophisticated individual who was focused on the more meaningful issue which was, you know, getting the right counsel for the case.

Q. Did you view any documents that seem to suggest that he did not consent in an informed fashion to referral fee arrangements or division of fees?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Q. Do you recall any such documents?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Would it have informed your interpretation of the declaration if you were to have learned that both before and after the engagement letters were signed that Eric Belfi took steps that might be interpreted to have concealed the involvement of Damon Chargois from Mr. Hopkins?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I don't know that Mr. Belfi did that, but, in any event, the main thing was Mr. Hopkins emphasized repeatedly, apparently, that he wasn't really concerned about that.

That was something that was between the lawyers and he didn't want to know about it.

Q. But would you agree that, assuming that there was an attempt to circumvent Mr. Hopkins before and after the signing of that or the execution of that retention letter, that that would be significant on the issue of whether Mr. Hopkins had provided consent to this arrangement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Not according to Mr. Hopkins. It wouldn't have mattered.

Q. Well, I'm asking, according to you?

A. I don't have an independent opinion of Mr. Hopkins. According to me, if Mr. Hopkins said it doesn't matter to him, it didn't matter. So it wouldn't change my opinion.

Q. What if, upon learning that, Mr. Hopkins had said, geez, I had no idea that they were going around my back with this guy, Chargois, who I just found out was paid $4.1 million, I never consented to that, would that have affected your opinion as to whether 1.5(e) was complied with?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. It would not have, because 1.5(e) doesn't require disclosure of the name of the firm. It simply requires disclosure of the fee-splitting arrangement. That's all it requires.

So, as a regulatory matter, it would be tough to prove that case against the lawyers.

Q. But you've indicated that the subjective view of Mr. Hopkins is relevant as to whether 1.5(e) was complied with, correct?

A. I have indicated that Mr. Hopkins testified and also provided the declaration and also signed an agreement that acknowledged the understanding that there was a fee-splitting agreement, but didn't care. That's what I said.

Q. All right. And, in your view, it's important that he didn't care, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. No. What's important is that the disclosure was made to him of the fee-splitting agreement, and that the overall fee was reasonable.

His subjective feelings about it -- if he had objected, presumably, that would be a different matter, but he consented, and that's all that counts.
Q. So that provision in the retention letter that indicates that Labaton may allocate attorneys' fees obviates, in your view, any attempt by Labaton to deprive Mr. Hopkins of information about the referring attorney?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't understand your question exactly. What do you mean "obviates"?
I think I testified that the important thing was the compliance with the rule and the terms of the rule, and the rule required disclosure and consent by the client and that the overall fee is reasonable, and those things were complied with.
I don't understand what else you are asking me.
Q. Can that disclosure be considered complete or sufficient if it does not contemplate or include information that the client is being deprived of important information?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The rule doesn't define what kind of information as long as there's a fee-splitting arrangement disclosed. It doesn't say specifically you have to say the name of the lawyer or lawyers. It doesn't say you have to say the amount of the fee split. It doesn't require any of that in Massachusetts.
Q. Sure. But my question to you is, can the client be considered to be informed if he's been consciously deprived of important information?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Again, the rule doesn't require important information be disclosed. It's a very simple rule. It only requires that information be disclosed -- to repeat myself -- about the fact of the fee-splitting arrangement -- a fee-splitting arrangement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And no details about the arrangement whatsoever, to whom

it's going, whether or not any work will be done, whether or not this lawyer has ever touched the case, has anything to do with the case, or even knows about the case. None of that is required to get the informed consent of the client; is that right?
THE WITNESS: That's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'd like to go back to this issue. I'm stuck on this, I know, of what a referral fee is and the policies that we discussed.
Are you familiar with the secondary source, "Massachusetts Legal Ethics, Substance and Practice"?
MS. LUKEY: Is that the Gilda Tuoni?
THE WITNESS: Yes, I mentioned it in my footnote.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I thought I saw it in yours. I couldn't immediately put my hands on it.
THE WITNESS: It's on the first page.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Maybe that's

Page 73

why. I was looking further.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I knew her when she was actively practicing.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Actually, it's not. This is a secondary source that was referred to by another expert, and it's called "Massachusetts Legal Ethics, Substance and Practice."
THE WITNESS: Who is the author, sir?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I knew you would ask that, and I couldn't find it.
MS. McEVOY: It's the draft BBO treatise.
THE WITNESS: Oh, that's the 2015 draft.
MS. McEVOY: 2017 draft? I don't know which one, actually.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I am familiar with that. I know -- I used to work there.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Good. So that treatise says, "Unlike almost every other jurisdiction in the nation, Massachusetts permits an attorneys' fee to be divided with a lawyer who does not practice in the firm of the primary lawyer, i.e., a referral fee, even if the referring lawyer does nothing more than refer the matter."

That sounds like what we were talking about when you initially told me what a referral fee was, refer the matter.

Can we read anything into referral fee in the context of 1.5(e) from that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I think it reenforces my opinion.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're going around in circles here, Mr. Lieberman.

I want to know how Mr. Chargois referred the matter, State Street matter, in this case.

THE WITNESS: He referred ARTRS to Labaton. And subsequently --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Referred Labaton to ARTRS.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. Well, he created -- he introduced them. Let's put it that way.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you believe that constitutes referring the State Street matter?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. All right. Let me direct your attention to page 17, Counsel.

A. I'm there, sure.

Q. All right. The middle paragraph that begins, "Notably," and just for context, I'll read that.

"Notably, to the best of my knowledge, neither lawyer in Saggese was subsequently disciplined following the court's opinion, nor is there any evidence that the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers took or has ever taken the position that lawyers who engage in imperfectly documented, but, nonetheless, enforceable fee-splitting arrangements, are thereby automatically subject to discipline or sanctions for violating Mass.

Rule 7.2 by sending a forwarding fee not to another law firm, but to a person."

And then you say, "I am not aware of any such bootstrapped interpretation or application of Rule 7.2 in any jurisdiction, and Professor Gillers cites no authority beyond his own expansive reading of the rules."

Drawing your attention to that last sentence, "I'm not aware of any such bootstrapped interpretation," does the fact that the courts have not discussed 7.2 and 1.5(e) in a single opinion make those rules ineffective as written, in your view?

A. I don't understand your question at all. I'm sorry.

Q. Is bootstrapped interpretation of Rule 7.2 in any jurisdiction, what specifically are you referring to when you say "bootstrapped interpretation"?

A. Well, there have been many situations where lawyers, in referral-fee arrangements, have not crossed their Ts and dot their Is, if I can put it that way, and the only litigation, to the best of my knowledge, has been between lawyers, one lawyer trying to enforce a fee arrangement, a referral fee agreement with another. I don't know of any litigation where clients have litigated the issue of a referral fee arrangement presumably because they are satisfied with the idea of the overall reasonableness of the fee.

So, in those cases, where lawyers have litigated referral fees and where disputes have arisen about referral fees, I don't know of any court that has ever said, because the referral fee arrangement was imperfect, therefore, the lawyer somehow violated Rule 7.2 by referring the matter and seeking a referral fee from a person as opposed to another lawyer. I don't know of any court that's ever said that or any ethics opinion has ever said that as between lawyer-to-lawyer referrals.

There may be some obscure ethics opinion somewhere that says something where those two rules are mentioned, but I don't know of anything that relates to anything close to this case where that would be the case.

I have never heard this

interpretation before, and if you look in the ALI restatement, if you look in the treatises, you never see any case that talks about if you violate the specific express terms of 1.5(e), then you are, therefore, in violation of 7.2 by attempting to get a referral fee from a person. I've never seen that.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask a question another way, please?

THE WITNESS: Sure.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Suppose there's no attempt whatsoever to comply with 1.5(e)? There's just simply a recommendation by a lawyer to a client that another lawyer be used. Simply that. There's no notice to the client. No consent by the client, written or otherwise.

Are we then in 7.2(b)?

THE WITNESS: No, we're not.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why?

THE WITNESS: Because it's between lawyers. 7.2 doesn't talk about referrals to -- between lawyers. 7.2 talks about the policy of not seeking -- not paying non-lawyers for referrals. It has nothing to do with lawyers.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Suppose the lawyer is no longer practicing, but maintains his law license.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: If the lawyer is a member of the bar, then that takes it out of Rule 7.2, in my judgment.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So a lawyer degree and being a member of the bar insulates any transaction from 7.2(b)?

THE WITNESS: I've never heard of an interpretation that 7.2(b) -- 7.2 or 7.2(b) would apply in that circumstance, ever.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Then why have subsection 5 in 7.2(b), which looks to be a safe harbor provision for agreements that comply with 1.5(e)?

THE WITNESS: Right. Just to emphasize the very point that I just made.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Surplusage, unnecessary and surplusage.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't agree with that.

MS. LUKEY: Do we happen to have a copy of the rule or shall I pull it up electronically?

MS. McEVOY: I can give you a hard copy.

MS. LUKEY: 7.2(b).

THE WITNESS: This is the Massachusetts 7.2(b). I'm familiar with it.

MS. McEVOY: This is the language that's been consistent throughout.

THE WITNESS: This is the language in 2011?

MS. McEVOY: Currently.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's the current language.

MS. LUKEY: I think the language was the same, but it was 7.2(c) at the point.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, it was a different number, 7.2(c).

So it says, "7.2(b). A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services." And then there's an exception, "Except that a lawyer may," and then there are permissive applications and specifically permissive -- pay fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e).

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what's the purpose of that if, as long as the person doing the recommending is a lawyer, what's the purpose of subsection 5?

THE WITNESS: Just perfectly consistent with the rest of the rules. I have no idea why it was necessary, but if they put it in, they put it in. It doesn't change a thing in terms of what I just said.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. So, for your purposes, a lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person. A lawyer is not a person under 7.2(b).

There are many people who would agree with that, but for purposes of construing that rule, a lawyer is not a person?

THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Period.
THE WITNESS: Period.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So a law degree and membership in the bar insulates a person from violating 7.2(b), period?
THE WITNESS: Correct. Period.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And 7.2(b)(5) is merely surplusage, unnecessary?
THE WITNESS: It's probably redundant.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Redundant.
THE WITNESS: That's not the only place in the rules where the rules are redundant, but that's one of them.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You are familiar with statutory construction, rules of statutory construction? Or maybe you're not.
THE WITNESS: I don't purport to be an expert in statutory construction.

Page 83

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
THE WITNESS: I understand something about it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There is a presumption that language in a statute is not surplus, that language in a statute is there for a purpose.
THE WITNESS: I can only tell you that I know something about the Rules of Professional Conduct and the prior Code of Professional Responsibility, and there is redundancy. That's all I can tell you, sir.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And this would be one of those issues of redundancy?
THE WITNESS: It seems to be, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And it should be viewed as redundancy and not construed pursuant to normal rules of statutory construction, which is that we read rules, we read statutes as having a purpose and not to assume that statutory language or rules language is redundant or surplusage.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I have no opinion on that one way or the other.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So in considering whether 7.2(b) covers lawyers, just that question at the top, one should ignore 7.2(b)(5), yes?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I testified what I testified to. It's redundant.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Has nothing to say about the construction of the rule?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Same answer.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And your answer, correct, has nothing to say about construction of the rule?
THE WITNESS: No. My answer is that it's redundant.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Attorney Lieberman, let me direct your attention, again, to that middle paragraph on page 17. And the first sentence that I read before, "Notably, to the best of my knowledge, neither lawyer in Saggese was subsequently disciplined following the court's opinion."

Isn't it true, though, that the court, in Saggese, did say that the lawyers could be disciplined, even as it enforced the agreement between the lawyers?
A. I'd have to look at the Saggese opinion to see what it says on that. I don't think that's the wording of the opinion.
I just want to look at the opinion.
And can I have the specific reference, if you wouldn't mind?
Q. Yeah.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
(Lieberman Exhibit 3, Saggese v. Kelley Decision, marked for identification.)
Q. If I could direct your attention to the page that has a 6 in the lower right of the page on the right-hand side.
A. Yep. I'm there.
Q. So the paragraph that begins, "These problems are avoidable in fee-sharing situations if the referring lawyer, who usually is in the best position to secure compliance with Rule 1.5(a), is required to disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secures the client's consent in writing. This rule will be construed to require this in fee-sharing agreements that are formed after the issuance of the rescript in this decision."

I want to bring you down to the final sentence of that paragraph. "We emphasize that, although failure to comply with the rule may not necessarily render a contract unenforceable between lawyers, it may subject both lawyers to disciplinary action upon division of a fee."

A. Right.

Q. Does that refresh your memory as to what the court said?

A. It does.

Q. Let me direct your attention to --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask a more general question? And I'm interested in your view.

Page 87

Let's assume here there was not compliance with 1.5(e), but there was an attempt to comply.

THE WITNESS: When you say "here," you mean in Saggese or in this case?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: In this case. There was an attempt to comply.

Does that go to whether or not the rule is technically violated or does it go to consideration of discipline and sanction?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, that's a good question, and a hard question to answer.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I'm very interested in your answer.

THE WITNESS: I can tell you, from a disciplinary and sanction standpoint, first, that the substantial compliance or imperfect compliance would be certainly taken into consideration. The equities would be looked at. But the most important factor, really, is letter of the rule.

And if there is no notice that a rule requires, for example, disclosure of the name of the, you know, lawyers who referred, it would be very, very difficult for a prosecuting lawyer, as I was for many years, to bring charges against that lawyer, notwithstanding that it says so in a case of the high court, because of the notice and due process concerns.

So from an enforcement standpoint, sanctions, discipline, what really counts is the attempt to and the substantial compliance with the rule as written in the code of professional responsibility.

From an enforcement standpoint in terms of enforcing a contract, the courts have pretty much said that they will enforce imperfect or substantially complied with fee-sharing agreements when the equities so suggest.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: As between the lawyers.

THE WITNESS: As between the lawyers, as was the case in Daynard, which was clearly -- I mean, kind of shocking for a law professor not to have anything but an oral agreement with a bunch of lawyers, law firms, but never the less, Judge Young took the position, hey, ten years of work.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I was going to say, in Daynard, the lawyer did a lot of work.

THE WITNESS: I say ten years of work. And I knew Daynard when I was in Massachusetts.

So, I mean, I think it's, from all standpoints, this rule is viewed in context, very much in context.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I want you to assume, as a hypothetical, there is consent to a division of fee, but it is not informed consent in the context of all the circumstances. It is not informed. Is that an imperfect compliance?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't think the rule says the word "informed." It says consent. You could read into it informed, but it doesn't say informed.

So according to -- if I'm a prosecutor and we are talking about discipline or if I'm looking at potential sanctions under Rule 11 or some other rule, I would not read into a rule language that's more than what's required by the rule for purposes of not only statutory construction, but also for purposes of due process.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If the consent given is not based upon full and complete information, but only the bare minimum that there would be a division of fee in light of all the circumstances, and I'm going to have a follow-up question, is that imperfect compliance with the rule?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not sure I would say it's imperfect. I would say it's in compliance with the rule as written.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Because it gives bare consent to the division?

Page 91

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if there is imperfect compliance, does that then go to discipline and sanction?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't know of any disciplinary cases in New York, and there might be private admonitions, but I don't know of anybody who's been disciplined for imperfect compliance in New York. And I don't know of anybody in Massachusetts, but I'm not ruling out the possibility that somebody once received a letter of caution or a letter of admonition. I don't know. I have not seen a public case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you can have imperfect compliance, not technically comply with the rule, and no discipline or sanction.
THE WITNESS: Judge, the bar disciplinary authorities are strapped for resources and money, and they focus on perjury, neglect, misappropriation of funds. And they don't focus, generally speaking, on imperfect compliance with the rule that ultimately benefits the client.

They're consumer protection agencies looking out for the rights and interest of the clients, vis-a-vis, the bar. They are not focused on disputes between lawyers, generally speaking.
So that's the emphasis. And I was -- I have been on both sides of that for many, many years. And I'm confident about that from a disciplinary standpoint, and from representing people in sanctions cases.
Could I possibly take a break and go to the washroom for a minute or two?
MR. SINNOTT: Absolutely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's break for 15 minutes.
(Recess taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: It's approximately 3:15.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Counsel, just to finish up on that middle paragraph on page 17, where you say, in the final sentence, "I'm not aware of any such bootstrapped interpretation or application of Rule 7.2 in any jurisdiction, and Professor Gillers cites no authority beyond his own expansive reading of the policies."

Page 93

A. Of the rules.
Q. Of the rules. I'm sorry.
You mentioned, before the break, that there might have been private admonitions. And is it fair to say that those private admonitions might have reflected such an interpretation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Anything is possible. I think the likelihood of that is practically zero.
Q. And why do you say that?
A. Because it doesn't make any sense, and I don't think that any bar disciplinary agency, and I have been involved with two of them, would interpret it that way.
Q. That's your --
A. That's my professional opinion.
Q. Your professional opinion.

Page 94

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Let me move on from that and direct your attention to the following page, page 18.
A. Sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Before you do that, I want to test your core belief that 7.2(b) has no application whatsoever to a lawyer. Isn't that what you said?
THE WITNESS: To a member of the bar.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: To a member of the bar, okay.
We're talking about lawyers A and B. I can't remember which was the referring lawyer. Let's say -- let's say lawyer A is the referred lawyer. Lawyer B is the one who's doing the referring.
But, anyway, let's say that if lawyer A, member of the bar, routinely gives a fee every time lawyer B makes a recommendation of a client who ultimately retains lawyer A.
Are you with me?
THE WITNESS: I'm with you so far.

Page 95

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Without regard to the eventual size of the fee to lawyer A, could that be a violation of 7.2(b)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't see how.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the clients don't even know about the arrangement? In other words, it doesn't comply with 1.5(e).
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I suppose the court could say that the agreement is unenforceable.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But we are still not under 7.2?
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I will add one more fact. There's no division of fee agreement whatsoever. So the client isn't told, and there is no agreement. He just gives him $5,000.
Are we then into 7.2(b)?
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Period.

Page 96

THE WITNESS: Period.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So you're pretty absolutist on this, right? If a referring lawyer or a recommending lawyer has a law degree and is a member of the bar and is paid a fee for doing the recommendation, nothing else matters. We are not under 7.2(b)?
THE WITNESS: Judge, I'm just giving you my best professional opinion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm just asking you a question.
THE WITNESS: I have never heard such an interpretation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And there's no purpose served in the --
THE WITNESS: Until now, I should say.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Well, you've heard it from Professor Gillers.
THE WITNESS: That's right. Other than that, I have never heard it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Professor Gillers is a respected member of your profession.

THE WITNESS: He is.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He is a nationally recognized expert in the area of legal ethics, is he not?
THE WITNESS: Absolutely. And he is a friend.
MS. LUKEY: I have to object to the fact that he is present, which I didn't do at the beginning.
THE WITNESS: Flattery won't matter to him.
MS. LUKEY: I just figured you are being nicer because he is here.
THE WITNESS: I would say that whether he is here or not.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So this gets me to my last question. Why?
THE WITNESS: I doubt that it's your last question.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: My last question about 7.2(b). That reminds me of what I always said to lawyers when they told me they only had one more question, and half an hour later.

If that is the way the rule is to be construed, and by "it," I mean that as long as the recommender has a law degree and is a member of the bar, it does not come under 7.2(b), why in the world would they have put 7.2(b)(5) in it?
THE WITNESS: I think you have asked me that question before.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I did ask it before. And I'm still searching for an answer.
THE WITNESS: I have no idea.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I do appreciate your candor.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Is it your testimony that person in 7.2(b) means non-lawyer?
A. Yes.
Q. How do you explain the fact that the drafters did not use the word "non-lawyer" when they used that word five other times in the rule or in its comment?

Page 99

A. Bad drafting.
Q. Bad drafting?
A. Perhaps.
Q. I know you say you are not an expert in statutory construction, nor am I, but doesn't it indicate that they would have used non-lawyer if that's what they wanted to use?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Maybe.
THE WITNESS: Sorry. I'm too fast.
MS. LUKEY: Yeah, you are.
A. Maybe.
Q. Let me direct your attention to page 18, and the top of the page. You describe Professor Gillers as "Professor Gillers labors mightily." I think I'm getting tired just reading that, "labors mightily to distinguish the circumstances in Saggese and Daynard by focusing on what he terms the equities," and you cite the page in his report.
You then say, "He claims that the equities are somehow different here, because in Saggese the lawyer tried to keep the fee for himself, justifying that claim, in part, by the fact that the referring lawyer did no work, and in Daynard, that the law professor, as referring counsel, contributed substantially to the success of the litigation."

And then you conclude as follows, "But neither of these alleged differentiating rationales holds water. Mass. Rule 1.5(e) does not require referring firm to do any work on the case, as Professor Gillers is aware. It is also unclear why the equities here are any different with respect to Daynard."
Does the court have the authority to enforce equities?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The court has -- certainly has the discretion to take into consideration the equities. I would agree with that.
Q. All right. Thank you.
Now, let me direct your attention to the bottom of the page and the paragraph that begins, "In short, in my opinion the equities here are not meaningfully different. The possible payment of a referral or forwarding fee was not kept from ARTRS, which agreed through its engagement letter that Labaton was free to pay referral fees to other firms. Hopkins, on behalf of ARTRS ratified the fee-splitting arrangement as well." And you cite the declaration.

And then you say, "As a matter of good policy and public interest, it is well recognized that the bar should encourage fee-sharing relationships that serve the client by helping to ensure that cases, especially litigation matters like this one, are handled by the best, most experienced lawyer in the particular area of law. That is exactly what happened here, and the results speak for themselves."
So going up to that statement "should encourage fee-sharing relationships that serve the client," who's the client in this case?
A. ARTRS.
Q. And how were the equities to the client served in this case?
A. How were the equities served? I don't understand what you mean by that.

Page 102

Q. Well --
A. The client's interests were served, if that's what you mean.
Q. Describe for me how the client's interest was served.
A. By the fact that it was, through Chargois, able to find or meet up with Labaton, and Labaton got a great result for them in the litigation matter that is at issue here.
Q. And beyond -- strike that.
Directing your attention to the following page.
A. I should say Labaton and other counsel. They didn't do it alone.
Q. All right. Because they are listening.
A. And they deserve to be.
MR. SINNOTT: On that note, Mike is going to walk out on us.
Q. In your final paragraph on page 19, you say, "The payment," under the heading C, "The payment to Chargois did not violate Rule 1.5(a)," and you reference that, "Professor Gillers recently testified that the payment to Chargois may have violated Mass Rule 1.5(a). In my opinion, this does not withstand scrutiny on its face. Mass. Rule 1.5(e) applies to fee divisions and requires only that the total fee is reasonable."

Shouldn't a reasonableness requirement be read into 1.5(e) for fee sharing?
A. I don't know where my friend came up with that idea. The answer is no.
Q. And what do you base that on?
A. First of all, there's no authority for that notion, that I'm aware of. And, secondly, it doesn't make any sense.
Q. Why not?
A. Because if you're going to have a rule that says that you don't have to share fees in proportion to the work done, but simply on the basis of a joint participation or joint responsibility, then there wouldn't be any scrutiny of fees at all.
So whether the fees were -- that were paid to the referring lawyer were $10,000 or $4.1 million wouldn't make any difference as long as the overall fee was reasonable for the client. And as I understand it in this case, the court has essentially concluded that it was.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the recommending fee were 90 percent of the total fee?
THE WITNESS: It wouldn't matter. You can say 99.9 percent, Judge. I wouldn't change my opinion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
THE WITNESS: Just to be clear.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Hal, I keep thinking of more questions to ask you about your view on 7.2(b).
THE WITNESS: I welcome your questions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not going to say one more, because I keep thinking of more.
THE WITNESS: Fire away.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Wouldn't your interpretation of 7.2(b) encourage ambulance chasing by lawyers who are members of the bar?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not sure I follow why that would be the case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Because they can get a fee without being subject to 7.2(b) simply by finding clients and recommending them. For example, going to hospitals, finding people who have been injured and recommending them.
THE WITNESS: Well, there are rules against that, rules that apply to lawyers as well as to laypeople.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Solicitation rules.
THE WITNESS: Solicitation rules. So that would be precluded under the solicitation rules, whether you're a lawyer or a layperson.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So maybe a better way to think about your view, correct me, is that if a lawyer who has a law degree and is a member of the bar engages in solicitation.

Page 106

THE WITNESS: Improper solicitation, you mean? Engaging in solicitation is perfectly proper.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Improper solicitation. Cold calling.
THE WITNESS: In-person solicitation would be improper, generally speaking, with some exceptions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Including a cold call by telephone?
THE WITNESS: Cold call or going to a hospital or talking to a person lying in the street after hit by a car, whatever.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So if the lawyer does that, then the appropriate section 2, construe the lawyer's conduct under, is the solicitation rule, and not the -- and not Rule 7.2(b).
THE WITNESS: In my view, yes, Judge.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what if --
THE WITNESS: And, by the way, there is a criminal statute in New York about that as well. Not in Massachusetts, but in New York.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what if a lawyer engages in solicitation and receives a fee for it?
THE WITNESS: Proper or improper solicitation?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's assume it's improper solicitation.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's assume improper solicitation.
THE WITNESS: Well, the lawyer would be subject to discipline for improper solicitation, and the fee aspect would be, you know, just another add-on, but it would basically be -- the violation would be improper solicitation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in that situation, 7.2(b) would still not be implicated, but the solicitation rule would be?
THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. If I'm a disciplinary enforcement lawyer, yes, that's the way I would view it.

Page 108

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the lawyer picks up the phone on behalf of another lawyer and calls a client cold, doesn't even know the client, and says, I'm working with lawyer A, and I'd like you to have a meeting with him. Will you meet with him?
Is that improper or proper solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It's improper for lawyers to cold call people they don't have a relationship with and seek their business. It's not the proper way to go about getting the client business.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's assume that that's what happened in this case by Mr. Chargois. Let's not focus on Labaton yet. Let's assume that Mr. Chargois cold called Arkansas, the executive director, says, I am working with a New York law firm that specializes in securities litigation. Will you meet with them?
THE WITNESS: And Mr. Chargois and the ARTRS has no -- they have no relationship, no knowledge, he just picks them out of the phone book.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: No pre-existing relationship.
MS. LUKEY: You two said two different things.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We did. No pre-existing relationship, but there's a recommendation from a third party that that lawyer should call Arkansas, and he does.
THE WITNESS: Well, if there's a connection, if there's a reasonable connection, I'm not sure that would violate the solicitation rule, but if there wasn't, then that might violate the solicitation rule. It might.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then we are under the solicitation rule and not under 7.2(b).
THE WITNESS: I think that's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Even if the lawyer gets paid a fee for facilitating that introduction?

THE WITNESS: It's -- the fee aspect of it is not really relevant to 7.2. That would be relevant, I suppose, to 1.5(e), depending on the way in which that went down, but it wouldn't be relevant to 7.2.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, it is relevant because it says a lawyer shall not give anything of value.
A fee would be of value.
THE WITNESS: But to a person, that doesn't mean lawyers, as I read the rules, for what it's worth, based on my own experience in teaching and writing, there's a distinction.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It simply excludes every person who has a law degree and is a member of the bar, period.
THE WITNESS: That's my reading of it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I keep not wanting to beat this dead horse, but -- THE WITNESS: I don't have to catch a train.

MS. LUKEY: I do.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Tell me if you agree with this statement, Counsel.
"Legal ethics experts should not offer an opinion, even if defensible, unless they would adopt that opinion if they were the judge in the case."
Do you agree with that?
A. I'm not sure I understand that. Could you read that again, please, just one more time?
Q. Absolutely.
A. Thank you.
A. I don't think -- I don't agree with that. I mean, if the legal ethics expert believes there's a basis in law or ethics for a particular viewpoint on the Rules of Professional Conduct, I think the legal ethics expert can give that advice to the client.

I mean, if the judge -- the judge may not be knowledgeable or an expert in legal ethics. I mean, that's one of the reasons why expert opinions are provided to courts in this field.
Strange as it may seem, because it's about the law and the law of ethics, but we have often been asked to help the courts to address legal ethics issues and the courts have asked us to help them. Maybe I just said the same thing.
But I think that my opinion would be independent of what I thought a judge might adopt.
Q. Okay.
A. I wouldn't be offering an opinion that would be contrary to a judge's instruction or order or rule -- ruling, but I would try to be independent as I -- as I think I am in terms of that with clear respect for the court.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Speaking of judges, let me ask this.
There's been an allusion, although I don't believe by an expert, but I would like your opinion on it, if a lawyer violates a rule handed down by the Supreme Judicial Court, but that rule has not been codified as a rule of conduct, how should that be handled?

THE WITNESS: Well, approaching it from the standpoint of regulatory or disciplinary lawyer, first of all, you used the testimony "rule of court," and if you are referring to, as I think you are, the Saggese decision and the court's admonition going forward, my problem would be, as a regulatory lawyer in disciplining or recommending discipline for a lawyer who, theoretically or arguably, didn't comply with the admonition or prospective ruling, but was in compliance with the rule as it existed in the Code of Professional Responsibility, I would be very reluctant to charge that lawyer with misconduct if the lawyer were relying on, and as he would have a right or she would have a right to do, to the rule as it existed in the code, because the SJC, Supreme Judicial Court, is ultimately the authority for implementing and changing the rule. And if the SJC doesn't get around to changing the rule, but simply writes something that could be, arguably, called dictum in an opinion, there would be serious due process problems and notice problems.

And under, you know, under the Supreme Court juris prudence, you know, In re: Ruffalo, notice is the critical aspect of lawyer discipline from a due process standpoint.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So are lawyers not held to have notice of rulings of the Supreme Judicial Court?

THE WITNESS: Like I just said, you know, there's an old phrase, you know, ignorance of the law is no excuse, but I would certainly argue, if I were before the Supreme Judicial Court, that they could not enforce the Saggese ruling prospectively or at the time against a lawyer who was going by and who relied on the rule as it was written, because the court hadn't changed the rule.

So I would be very careful to describe the Saggese ruling as a -- as a rule of conduct. And I disagree with the notion that the -- a lawyer could be disciplined or sanctioned or otherwise criticized for following the existing rule in the Code of Professional Responsibility until it was changed, and if it was materially changed.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the change was adopted but yet not effective?

THE WITNESS: Same thing. Same thing. It's got to be effective.

As a prosecutor, I would never try to do that -- never try to charge somebody, just as I believe a criminal prosecutor would not charge somebody with a law that had not come into effect yet.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the fact that the Supreme Court adopts a rule and sets a future effective date --

Page 116

THE WITNESS: It's the effective date for me.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Isn't the important thing notice?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, certainly, when the Supreme Court adopts a rule, the lawyer should have notice of a rule change.

THE WITNESS: Not necessarily. Not necessarily. It would be published, but it might not be -- it doesn't even matter. I mean, to me, it's about enforcing the letter of the rule as it exists at the time.

As a prosecutor, I have done this work for 15 years as a prosecutor, and then many years as a defense lawyer. And I think I would have a very good case for reversal if a disciplinary body tried to enforce a rule that wasn't in effect at the time in the courts, both in Massachusetts and New York, notwithstanding the SJC's decision in Saggese.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand, to a judge, how counterintuitive that sounds?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: With all due respect, I think I understand, but I stick by my position as a government lawyer, former government lawyer. I think prosecutors owe duties.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: The question of prosecutorial discretion and whether a prosecutor prosecutes under it is one thing. A question of whether a lawyer is bound by it is a different thing. You would acknowledge that.

THE WITNESS: Well, no. I mean, in the context of discipline, as a prosecutor, I owe a duty to prosecute only those cases where I believe that there is probable cause to believe that the lawyer will be found guilty of the violation, and that's my ethical obligation as a prosecutor.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That doesn't really answer my question at all.
My question is, is a lawyer bound by a decision of the highest court in the jurisdiction, is he bound by it as opposed to whether or not a prosecutor should exercise discretion in enforcing it? Two different things.
Can you answer that?
THE WITNESS: A lawyer is bound by it in the sense that a lawyer should not knowingly violate a court order or ruling of the court. There's a specific rule of conduct about that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And a lawyer, then, is not held to know the law as pronounced by the highest judicial body in the jurisdiction.
THE WITNESS: That's a real problem, because the law that the highest body may have pronounced may be inconsistent with the law that is in the statute or rule. And so what's the lawyer supposed to do?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, it raises a good question. Which takes precedence, the rule or the highest judicial body interpreting that rule?

THE WITNESS: And I'm telling you, based on my own experience and my own views as a former government regulator and consumer protector, so to speak, that it would be the rule itself that would govern, and I would never prosecute somebody or charge them with misconduct based on an inconsistent ruling of the court when there's an existing rule.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Even when the Supreme Court says this rule shall apply prospectively?
THE WITNESS: It wasn't codified. They could have codified it the next day.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But that would have very strong, far-reaching, very far-reaching ramifications for rulings of supreme judicial bodies in every state and the United States, wouldn't it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not only as to lawyers, but as to common citizens.

THE WITNESS: I have never seen a disciplinary case for a lawyer where the court has disciplined a lawyer based on a ruling of a court as opposed to a violation of a Rule of Professional Conduct or a rule -- disciplinary rule under the old code. I have never seen a case. Maybe you know of one. I don't.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So lawyers should -- are held to know the law of the land or the jurisdiction. They're held to know it, yes?
THE WITNESS: In theory. I mean, we all know certain things, but I wouldn't presume to tell you that I know the law of the land in every instance. I would never presume that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So lawyers are not held to know the law of the land that governs their professional conduct?
THE WITNESS: They absolutely are.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So what are you saying?

Page 121

THE WITNESS: I'm saying that they are bound by the rules that are set forth in the lawyer's code or the lawyer's Rules of Professional Conduct. That's what they need to know.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Maybe I should ask it a different way.
A lawyer is not bound to conform with the law of the land as pronounced by the highest court of the jurisdiction if the rule is different. Is that what you're saying?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: The way -- the way the rules work is that a lawyer is bound not to engage in conduct that is illegal, fraudulent, dishonest or violates a particular Rule of Conduct.
To charge the lawyer with knowledge of what might be subtle distinctions between a ruling of a court and the actual rule, as written, would be unreasonable and unfair.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that go to the wilfulness of the misconduct?

Page 122

THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And does that get considered at -- in prosecutorial discretion as to whether to charge or if discipline is charged at the time the discipline is enforced?
THE WITNESS: I believe both.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in summary, we can have a violation of a law imposed by the Supreme Court, which has not yet been codified, and there is no actionable conduct by the lawyer.
THE WITNESS: It depends on the context and the facts. I don't know if you have given me enough facts.
If you are saying that the lawyer knowingly violates a law that he is aware of, that is embodied in a case in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, that may be one thing. If you are saying a law or the lawyer did something that technically was inconsistent with the ruling of the court, but conformed to the Rule of Professional Conduct, absolutely not. There would be no disciplinary action and no significant enforcement of it, in my view, by any reasonable court.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So for purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct, a lawyer is not held to know the law.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's not what I said.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me amend it.
A lawyer is not held to know the law as pronounced by the highest judicial authority --
THE WITNESS: How could that possibly be?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- of a jurisdiction.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: How could a lawyer possibly know every case? I wouldn't presume to know the law as set forth by the New York Court of Appeals and the Massachusetts SJC in all fields all the time. How could I know that?

Page 124

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I think the answer to my question is yes, that's true.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me restate the question.
A lawyer is not held to know the law of the land as pronounced by the highest court in the jurisdiction if that law has not been codified.
THE WITNESS: No, that's not what I testified to.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not sure what you're testifying to.
You're telling me that somebody can violate the law, as pronounced by the Supreme Judicial Court, not comply with it, but because that law has not been codified, it's not a violation of the governing law of professional conduct. That seems to be what you're saying.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not asking you whether it should be disciplined or sanctioned. I'm only asking you whether it's a violation.

Page 125

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It might be considered by some people to be a violation. I wouldn't consider it to be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the rules of -- or the Code of Professional Responsibility. It might be a violation of what the SJC said, but --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: About the Rules of Professional Conduct.
THE WITNESS: About what the rules should be. What the rules should be, Judge. Not what it is.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me focus on the word "actionable."
And you have been discussing this in terms of bar discipline authorities, but let's say an attorney, after Saggese, advises a client using pre-Saggese standards. And he doesn't inform the client of things like the writing requirement.

And, at a later point in time, the client is not happy and wants to take action against his attorney based on the lawyer's failure to inform him of the post-Saggese requirements, what the court had pronounced.
Is that actionable?
A. Actionable in what context?
Q. Can the lawyer reasonably -- can the lawyer reasonably be sued, for example, by the client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I doubt it. If the lawyer complied with the Rules of Professional Conduct or the -- whatever the existing rule was at the time, 1.5(e) at the time, I think the courts heavily rely on the language of the rules in their interpretation of -- in civil litigation.
I mean, the basic idea is that the rules are not, themselves, the basis for a cause of action. But the courts will interpret the rules in conjunction with actual recognized civil causes of action, violations of contract, conflicts of interest issues, disqualification motions and those things.

Q. So you don't think that there would be a private right of action on the part of that claim?
A. Not on the basis of 1.5(e). There might be a private right of action if there's a claim of breach of contract in some way, but not on the basis of 1.5(e).
MR. SINNOTT: Do you want to beat that dead horse some more, Judge?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not that one.
Did you believe that the rule pronounced by Saggese and its interpretation of 1.5(e), then existing 1.5(e), was dicta?
THE WITNESS: Well, it was certainly an add-on. They didn't need to say all that stuff to make the decision they made.
They were instructing the bar. It's not dissimilar from other cases I can think of where the Supreme Court of the United States, for example, added significant dicta to otherwise important rulings.

For example, in the case back in the day where the Supreme Court of the United States said there ought to be a rule on trial publicity, and the ABA went ahead and tried to adopt a rule they had never adopted before. That was dicta, but it was court dicta. It happens all the time. Well, maybe not all the time, but sometimes.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me ask you about, again, that private action that I asked previously.
What if the client sought to retract his consent under 1.5(e) because of the attorney's non-compliance with Saggese? Could he do so?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I think it would depend on the -- not only the equities of the matter, but also the contract or the retainer agreement, engagement letter between the attorney and the lawyer -- attorney and the client and what it said and what the client was told about the engagement. I think it would be a contract issue.

Q. And would you look to the equities?
A. Well, that would be a factor, for sure. I mean, there are some times where courts will enforce oral agreements, for example, based on the equities even if they -- you know, there's a dispute about them.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you have a view on who the client was in this case?
THE WITNESS: I mean, I have a view for purposes of my opinion that it was ARTRS. I understand that there's some discussion about class members being clients, but I'm not a class action lawyer, and I don't have an opinion about that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You don't have an opinion about whether, at the time that the class was certified, they became a client? They, the class members?
THE WITNESS: I don't have an opinion about that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Do you have an opinion about, if they did become clients, should there have been further compliance with 1.5(e) by notice and consent of the class to a fee-sharing agreement?

THE WITNESS: No. I don't have an opinion about that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And just to tie up Saggese a little bit, this is the rule we are talking about, which I finally found. I thought it was in a different place.
The court says, "These problems are avoidable in fee-sharing situations if the referring lawyer, who usually is in the best position to secure compliance with Rule 1.5(e), is required to disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secures the client's consent in writing. The rule will be construed to require this in fee-sharing agreements that are formed after the issuance of the rescript of this decision."
Is that dicta?

THE WITNESS: It is dicta, it seems. I also don't understand what they are talking about when they say "disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made." It doesn't make any sense, actually, in terms of the real world.
Usually, it's at the time of the referral, not before. So I don't quite understand what the court is saying. And it certainly didn't make its way into the rule. But, you know, you can characterize it any way you like.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: At what point should it be?
THE WITNESS: Should what be?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Disclosed. The referral fee.
THE WITNESS: At or about the time of the engagement. And that's what I think the rule does say these days.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And if the engagement changes and the client changes, does there have to be a notice to the additional client?

THE WITNESS: When you say "the engagement changes," I don't know exactly what you mean, Judge.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: At the time of the engagement here, ATRS was the client.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: After the certification of the class, I want you to assume that the class became the client.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: And as I testified before, I don't have an opinion on that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So then you don't have an opinion as to whether there should be a further notice to the class.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I assume you meant yes, you don't have an opinion.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I don't have an opinion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right.

Page 133

BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. So let me just follow up on something you said.
Because you're not a class action expert, your opinions here do not take into consideration, one way or the other, that ATRS, Arkansas, was a putative class representative and, eventually, class representative for a certified class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm sorry. What's the question?
Q. Sure. The question is, your opinions here do not take into consideration, one way or the other, that Arkansas was a putative class representative and eventually class representative for a certified class?
A. Right.
Q. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: Anything else, Judge?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Oh, I've got lots more questions, but I don't need to ask them.
MR. SINNOTT: I have nothing further.

Joan, any questions?
MS. LUKEY: No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: Richard I do not see.
Brian?
MR. KELLY: No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: David, on behalf of Keller Rohrback?
MR. COPLEY: I have nothing. No questions. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. All right. Hearing -- and there's no one on the phone from Lieff, is there?
Okay. So that concludes our examination.
Thank you, Attorney Lieberman.
THE WITNESS: You're very welcome.

PROCEEDINGS

MR. SINNOTT: For the record, this is a deposition, and the matter is Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, Number 11-cv-10230-MLW. Special Master Gerald Rosen, who is to my right, has been appointed by the Honorable Mark Wolf as the special master in this investigation.

And, in addition to Judge Rosen, my name is William Sinnott, S-I-N-N-O-T-T, from the firm of Barrett & Singal.

To my left also on our team is Attorney Elizabeth McEvoy, M-C, capital E-V-O-Y, of our firm, and to her left is Professor Stephen Gillers, who has also previously testified as an expert in this matter.

Madam Court Reporter, if the witness could be sworn.

WILLIAM BRADLEY WENDEL, called as a witness, having been duly sworn by a Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

MS. LUKEY: Before we begin, may I just note for the record an objection to having Professor Gillers present for the testimony of Labaton's experts. I don't understand why somebody who's proffered as an expert would be present for the other experts, and I do think it causes some discomfort in a relatively small field where everybody knows each other. We obviously have not had experts present.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You haven't asked. I would have certainly permitted it.

MS. LUKEY: Well, it's not the norm, usually, in civil discovery, but these have been unusual proceedings, shall we say. So I note our objection for the record. Thank you.

MR. KELLY: The Thornton firm joins that objection.

MR. SINNOTT: Any other comments before we begin?

EXAMINATION BY

MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Professor, if you could state your full name for the record?

Page 10

A. Sure. My name is William Bradley Wendel, W-E-N-D-E-L. I go by Brad.
Q. Thank you, sir. And we will talk more about your background in a moment.
MR. SINNOTT: But if counsel could identify themselves, beginning with Joan, and going around the table?
MS. LUKEY: Certainly. Joan Lukey from Choate Hall, on behalf of Labaton Sucharow.
MR. CANTY: Michael Canty from Labaton Sucharow.
MR. GLASS: Stuart Glass, Choate Hall, also for Labaton.
MR. HEIMANN: Richard Heimann from Lieff Cabraser.
MR. LIEFF: Robert Lieff, Lieff Cabraser.
MR. THORNTON: Michael Thornton from Thornton Law Firm.
MR. KELLY: Brian Kelly, Nixon Peabody, for the Thornton Law Firm.
MR. SINNOTT: On the telephone, beginning with David, could you identify yourself and your affiliation?

Page 11

MR. COPLEY: Yes. David Copley, Keller Rohrback, representing the ERISA plaintiffs.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. And, Emily, if you could identify yourself.
MS. HARLAN: Emily Harlan of Nixon Peabody, for the Thornton Law Firm.
MR. SINNOTT: Thank you. And Josh?
MR. SHARP: Joshua Sharp of Nixon Peabody for the Thornton Law Firm.
MR. SINNOTT: And has anyone else joined us on the telephone?
All right. Hearing none.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Good morning, sir.
A. Good morning.
Q. Professor, if you could please answer some questions that I will have, just very brief questions on your background, but let me first ask you, a CV was provided to us with your report.
Is that CV a current CV?

Page 12

A. Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: And Madam Court Reporter, if this could be marked as Exhibit 1.
(Wendel Exhibit 1, Curriculum Vitae of W. Bradley Wendel, marked for identification.)
Q. And, Professor, looking at that item that's been marked as Exhibit 1, is that your current CV?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Are there any changes or additions that need to be made to that CV?
A. No.
Q. Is there any other relevant experience that informs your opinions beyond what's in that CV?
A. No.
Q. And are you being paid to render your opinions here today?
A. Yes, I'm being paid for my time in preparing and taking this deposition.
Q. All right, sir. And what's the rate at which you are being compensated?

Page 13

A. $650 per hour.
Q. All right. And approximately how many hours have you spent, up until this point, in rendering your opinions and the time you spent preparing?
A. Probably about 15, 15 or 20.
Q. Okay. And do you have any idea what the amount that you've been compensated or you are due to be compensated is?
A. Well, I haven't looked exactly, but that times my hourly rate.
Q. All right, sir. And how did you prepare for your testimony today?
A. Today -- well, so yesterday, I came in and met with Joan and Mike and Stu and just talked about my report and my opinions.
Q. All right, sir. And your report that was submitted --
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter, if I could ask that this item be marked as Exhibit 2.
(Wendel Exhibit 2, Expert Report of Professor W. Bradley Wendel, dated March 26, 2018, marked for identification.)

Q. Sir, I'm showing you this item that's been marked as Exhibit 2, and the heading is "Expert Report, March 26, 2018, Professor W. Bradley Wendel."
Is that the report that you've submitted in this case?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. And between pages 2 and 11 in that report, there is a factual statement.
Do you see that, sir?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. All right. Who drafted that factual statement?
A. That was prepared by counsel just for convenience, really. I offered to do the facts myself based on the documents, but they have the citations handy and they were able to do it, so they agreed to do it for me.
Q. All right. Could you describe how that process worked? Was it all done at the same time or was there an interactive element to it? What do you recall as far as the compilation of that factual statement?

A. Well, it was interactive in the sense that they initially sent me a few documents to review to understand the case and to start formulating opinions and start talking about what my opinions would be, and then as I needed more documents, I requested more, and they sent more and I looked at those and read depositions.
They drafted the statement of facts and I looked at it, and then took a look at the underlying documents in support.
Q. All right. And what were the underlying documents that you --
A. Deposition transcripts, e-mails, reports, mostly deposition transcripts.
Q. All right. And do you recall which deposition transcripts you reviewed?
A. Well, so Hopkins, I remember reviewing that, Belfi. You know, there are a lot of names. I'm kind of trying to remember who -- Chargois, I looked at that one.
MS. LUKEY: If it helps, I believe we provided what's cited in the facts, and you will find the facts should carry over among all experts. We prepared the submission and gave it to each of them. I don't know if any of them made any modifications, but that's what we did.

THE WITNESS: No, I didn't modify the facts.
Q. Who decided what documents you would receive?
A. It was kind of interactive. They sent me things, and then I said I would like to see this, and they sent me some more things. We went back and forth.
Q. With respect to the transcripts you referred to, did you receive entire transcripts or just excerpts?
A. Entire transcripts.
Q. And did you read the entire transcripts or just portions that were pointed out to you?
A. They weren't pointed out to me. I searched them. I, you know, used a word search and looked through them that way. I kind of skimmed them all, and then looked more carefully at specific portions of them.

Page 17

Q. And with respect to your opinions in Exhibit 2, begin on page 11 and go to page 22, and page 11, who wrote those opinions?
A. I wrote them.
Q. Did you have any assistance in writing those?
A. No. They looked at them and made a couple suggestions and comments, but I drafted this.
Q. All right. Did any other attorneys, outside of yourself, engage in an interactive process on the opinions?
A. We talked about them a little bit, but there was really very little back and forth. We talked about what my opinion would be, and then once I drafted it, I sent it to them for comments, but it was mostly my work.
Q. And when you say "for comments," did you receive any comments?
A. I did. I received a few suggestions.
Q. All right. Do you remember what those suggestions were?
A. Just editorial things, really.

Page 18

Nothing changing the substance of the opinion.
Q. And with respect to the research that went into your opinion, did you conduct that?
A. I did, yes.
Q. Did you receive any assistance in that?
A. No.
Q. All right. So you did all of that by yourself and none of it was done by counsel?
A. That's correct.
Q. All right. Let me ask you some questions with respect to your opinions contained in Exhibit 2.
So let me ask you this, Professor. You discuss in your report ATRS -- and if I could refer to them as Arkansas for short?
A. Sure.
Q. Written consent to the fee-sharing agreement and Labaton firm's compliance with Rule 1.5(e). You write about the compliance with the pre-2011 rule which provides that a division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable, correct, sir?

A. That's correct.
Q. And upon what disclosures do you base your opinion that Arkansas was informed that a division of fees would be made and that it consented to joint participation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. By "disclosures," do you mean what material provided to him or documents? Just wondering about the word "disclosures."
MR. SINNOTT: Yeah.
Q. The documents that were provided to you.
A. So I may not have exactly all of the chronology memorized, but as I reviewed the documents, it appeared that there was quite a bit of discussion back and forth between partners from the Labaton firm and representatives of Arkansas Teachers, Christa Clark, Paul Doane, and then subsequently the new executive director, George Hopkins.

There was a lot of discussion about the structure of that engagement, who would be providing legal services and what they would be doing, and whether they would be associating with local counsel.
Now, I understand local counsel is a term that -- is a term of art, maybe. I don't mean it to be a term of art. I just mean it to be there's a local law firm that will be doing something, leaving open for now what that is, but Labaton lawyers talked to Arkansas Teachers' representatives and told them that they may be working with a local law firm and may be dividing their fees with that firm.
Q. All right. And you referenced Christa Clark.
What were the documents from Christa Clark that you reviewed in formulating your opinion?
A. Well, again, I don't remember whether that was an e-mail or a letter or someone testifying to this, but I think it was an e-mail, actually. I think she e-mailed back to someone at Labaton saying I understand that you may be working with the local law firm, and that's fine.

There was also some -- some communication pertaining to the, I would call it an RFP, but I guess they call it an RFQ process of getting Labaton approved to be a provider of services to the state, and Labaton said to her, we may be working with a local law firm, can we both be on this RFQ. And she said, well, no, just because of the way the state procurement system works, we need only one law firm being the principal law firm, and then beyond that, if you want to share your fees with somebody else, that's fine. We just need one law firm to be the principal law firm and we would like that to be you.
Q. And have you reviewed the RFQ?
A. The document itself, no, I have not.
Q. Then how did you receive information on that RFQ?
A. Well, again, there was e-mail back and forth. I have a bunch of e-mails. They are all listed by Bates numbers, so I don't really remember which one is which, but there was an e-mail from Christa Clark to Labaton lawyers discussing this process.

Q. All right. And in addition to the RFQ and the Christa Clark exchange, which you're not sure whether it was an e-mail or other correspondence, what other documents did you review with respect to Labaton's compliance with 1.5(e)?
A. Well, there were a number of e-mails back and forth between Labaton lawyers and Hopkins ultimately culminating in a written engagement agreement which went through a couple of drafts. And both drafts of that engagement letter mention the possibility of fee division with another law firm.
And then ultimately -- ultimately, Hopkins agreed with that, and there were some e-mails back and forth where Hopkins said, you know, yes, I understand this, and that's fine with -- with us, fine with Arkansas Teachers.
Q. All right. So when did these e-mails take place?
A. They took place before the engagement. I think the time was something like February 2011, I don't recall exactly, February or March, but it was before the work started up on this State Street matter.

Q. And when was the retention agreement that you referred to executed?
A. I don't know exactly, February or March, I believe.
Q. And you read that retention agreement?
A. I did.
Q. And that retention agreement states, does it not, that Arkansas agrees that Labaton may allocate fees to local or liaison counsel as referral fees or for other services performed in connection with the litigation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. If you're purporting to quote the document, you did not quote it accurately. If you're not purporting to quote it, please tell the witness that what you're reading from is not the document.
MR. SINNOTT: Well, let me provide the document itself.
MS. LUKEY: Please.

(Linda Hylenski joins on the telephone at this time.)
(Wendel Exhibit 3, Letter from Labaton Sucharow, dated February 8, 2011, Bates Stamped LBS011060 through 11062, marked for identification.)
MR. HEIMANN: Since you are not circulating copies of these documents, would you be very precise what it is so we know what you're talking about?
MR. SINNOTT: I have some additional copies, Richard.
MR. HEIMANN: Thank you.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Looking at Exhibit 3, Professor, let me direct your attention to the top of page 2. And let me read it verbatim.
"Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel as referral fees or for other services performed in connection with the litigation."

Page 25

Is that an accurate statement?
A. Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: And give me a moment. Judge?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, let me, just for clarification, the sentence that Bill Sinnott was just referring to, how do you read that? Do you read -- in this sense, do you read that as -- the clause "as referral fees" set off by commas as modifying the previous local or liaison counsel as referral fees or do you read it as a self-standing permission for referral fees?
THE WITNESS: Well, I read that sentence as providing notice to the client that other attorneys may serve as local or liaison counsel or they may receive referral fees or they may provide other services. That's how I read that sentence.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So three separate clauses there; serving as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services.

THE WITNESS: That's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you don't read "or for other services" as modifying the previous "who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees."
THE WITNESS: I read those as alternatives. They are not exclusive alternatives. They could be referral fees or other services or both, but they are alternatives to an entitlement to compensation for these other attorneys.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So you don't read, "as referral fees" as simply modifying the previous clause "who serve as local or liaison counsel"?
THE WITNESS: No. I see them as alternatives.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. All right, sir. And with respect to your report on page 14, actually beginning on page 13, you talk about the Saggese case, correct?

Page 27

A. Yes.
Q. And is it fair to say that you believe that Saggese is distinguishable from this case because the fee-sharing arrangement between Saggese and the Kelleys arose after the Kelleys had already started representing Doe; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Let me ask you this, isn't it true that the Saggese courts -- the Saggese court referred to the fact that the Kelleys acquiesced in a referral fee to Saggese on the Doe matter two months into their representation? And you recall that, don't you, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. But didn't the court make that reference only to make the point that this was the time Doe's consent could have been obtained because it's the first time that the division of fee agreement was reached?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, there are -- there are a lot of things going on in Saggese. I don't think the only important fact is the midstream modification. I think that is an important fact. And I cited that ABA opinion in my report just to highlight that. That's something that I spend time on in class to make sure that students understand that once you have an ongoing matter and there's already been a fee arrangement agreed to, modifications are viewed somewhat skeptically and there has to be disclosure and, basically, a reason for the changed arrangement after the matter has commenced.

That's an important fact. That's not the only fact driving Saggese. The court clearly wanted to announce a new rule prospectively and require written consent. And so it did that. So the lack of writing is also a fact, but there's not only one factor that underlies the result in Saggese.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask, you do, in your report, call out the difference between an agreement made at the inception which continues on, and what you characterize as a midstream change.

And you say that midstream changes are looked at with more skepticism.
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You also, in your report, I think, rely upon, in finding consent, the original RFQ process which took place some time up to October of 2008, and you indicate that that informs the relationship between Arkansas and ATRS as it relates to Mr. Chargois, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then you focus on the agreement that was reached on February 8 of 2011 in the retention agreement and say that that constitutes consent to a referral fee.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I believe it's your view, and correct me, that these two, taken together, and the conversations that Ms. Clark had with Mr. Belfi, although I think you would acknowledge you personally don't have any idea what took place in those conversations, as creating the relationship which provides the context for the consent given February 8 of 2011; is that right?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I would be a little careful here. And you see this in places in the rules. There are times when an attorney's duties are viewed in the context of a relationship, an ongoing client relationship. And then there are times when the duties depend upon particular matters. There are kind of matter-by-matter rules.

So one of the fee rules, 1.5(b), I think, says that the attorney, at the outset of a matter, has an obligation to explain the basis of a fee. So there are matter-by-matter duties, and then there are relationship-wide duties.

The midstream modification stuff from the ABA opinion really talks about an ongoing matter. So the question is, during the pendency of a matter is an attorney trying to change the fee arrangement. And there, there will be some skepticism if the attorney is trying to change things around.

That's different from saying what information does the client need to understand, what does an attorney have to communicate to a client. That takes place in the context of an ongoing relationship. So some of the things that happened earlier can inform the client's decision at a later point in time.

So I would just be careful in distinguishing between kind of relationship duties and matter-by-matter duties.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: A fair point. Let's look at the e-mail from Christa Clark, who was Arkansas' chief counsel, in October of 2008, back to Mr. Belfi, and what it contemplated, okay? Because I think your answer to my question about whether this informed the relationship was yes. Yes?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I'm not going to read the whole thing. You can maybe call it out for him, but I will read the --

MS. LUKEY: Well, I don't have it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's the October 13, 2008.

MS. LUKEY: I know what it is. I did not bring the boxes of documents.

THE WITNESS: You are testing my memory here.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's in page 6 of the facts in your report.

So, looking at paragraph 2, she says, "If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the case, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm," meaning Chargois & Herron, because she refers to that back in the first paragraph.

MS. LUKEY: I'm going to place it in front of -- the full document which Elizabeth just handed me.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: This is the October 13, 2008 e-mail, LBS017456.

(Wendel Exhibit 4, E-Mail Chain, Bates Stamped LBS017455 through 17456, marked for identification.)

THE SPECIAL MASTER: "Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors. If you deem," it says "is appropriate," but it could be -- should be probably if, "if you deem it appropriate," or "if you deem it is appropriate, on a case-by-case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of the case," correct?

THE WITNESS: That's what it says.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So given the background and at other parts in your report, you indicate that the relationship between Labaton and Chargois started off initially with the contemplation that Mr. Chargois and his firm was going to be serving as local or liaison counsel.

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then, at some point later, when that didn't work out, this arrangement or agreement that we have all been referring to in which Mr. Chargois and his firm would receive 20 percent of any fees in which Labaton served as lead or co-lead counsel and Arkansas was lead or co-lead plaintiff, right?
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So that relationship changed. He was no longer going to be serving as a local or liaison role. He was simply going to be getting a fee as a percentage of every case in which Labaton was lead counsel and Arkansas was lead plaintiff, right? So that changed, didn't it?
THE WITNESS: Which he was entitled to under the agreement, yes. The relationship changed in that Hopkins said, I don't need to work through local counsel.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We will get to Mr. Hopkins.
THE WITNESS: But that's the nature of the change, is that he said I don't need to work through some local counsel. I can work directly with Labaton. That's what changed about the relationship.
What didn't change is the underlying agreement, the contract, that Labaton and Chargois had to pay a referral fee.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We will get to that.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: The relationship changed from a situation in which, at the time of the application as monitoring counsel, Chargois & Herron were on the application, and were going to serve as joint monitoring counsel, and the contemplation was that there would be local -- that Chargois would serve in a capacity as local or liaison counsel, right?

THE WITNESS: You said a couple things. You said that they would serve as joint monitoring counsel. I don't think that was ever contemplated, but they would serve as local or liaison counsel at the outset.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, you're right. Let me break it down.
The application was an application for monitoring counsel, and it was made jointly between Labaton and Chargois & Herron, right?
THE WITNESS: Before Clark bounced it back.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Yes, yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And, at the time, at the very least as between Labaton and Chargois, it was their contemplation that Mr. Chargois and his firm would serve in a capacity as local or liaison counsel at the time.

Page 37

THE WITNESS: That was one of the things they were being compensated for, yes, at the time.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And then later on, February 8 of 2011, when the retention agreement was signed, and reading it the way you read it, there is a permissive payment of referral fees separate and independent from local or liaison counsel, right?
THE WITNESS: Right. So the language in the retention agreement permits the payment of fees for service either as local or liaison counsel or for referral fees.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. By this time, the relationship between Labaton and the Chargois & Herron firm had changed.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And, by this time, the relationship was that there would be a fee for the original introduction of the Labaton firm to ATRS without any requirement that it be -- that he be local counsel or liaison counsel, right?

THE WITNESS: Well, the fee was for whatever it was for. So there was an agreement between Labaton and the Chargois firm to provide introductions to serve as liaison counsel and also to receive referral fees. And so there was this ongoing entitlement to a fee that Chargois had which continued through to the 2011 engagement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So nothing in that relationship changed to the extent that Arkansas should have been more fully informed as to what was then, on February 8 of 2011, the nature of the relationship as opposed to local or liaison counsel, nothing changed.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, you said we will get to Hopkins later, so maybe we can hold this until we talk about Hopkins, but the engagement letter has to be read in the context of what Hopkins knew and the negotiations back and forth. And he basically said, yes, I know you have this relationship with the local firm. I don't want to get into the details. That's between you. I'm fine with that.

And then the language of this engagement agreement was drafted with that understanding in mind.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So this was not any kind of a midstream change, the fact that the original contemplation, and we can go back and look at the permissive language in Christa Clark's e-mail, and then the broader language as referral fees, because he was certainly not acting as local or liaison counsel by this time.
THE WITNESS: Right. The midstream thing, I want to be careful with this, because now we are back on matter by matter. And that ABA opinion talks about changes in fee arrangements within a particular matter. So we don't have the matter in question starting yet.
This engagement agreement pertains to the new matter, the State Street matter, and there's negotiation back and forth between the parties about what should the fee arrangement be. That's established. Here it is in the engagement agreement. Now we have a matter.

From here, going forward, any modification is midstream as that ABA opinion understands that term.
But the midstream idea doesn't pertain to an attorney/client relationship. It pertains to matter-by-matter fee arrangements for a particular matter.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the Christa Clark e-mail you can consider in the context of creating the entire relationship, but then when a letter comes three years later, almost three years later -- well, two and a half years later -- two and a half years later in which the relationship between Labaton and Chargois and the basis upon which Chargois is being paid has changed fairly significantly.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that does not have to be disclosed in further detail to the client, to Arkansas, in this case.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: There has to be a communication between the lawyer and client sufficient to inform the client as much as the client needs to know to make a decision about whether the client will accept that fee arrangement.
So a lot of these rules you have to kind of read altogether. So I think about the discussions around the fees as also informed by the reasonable communication rule, Rule 1.4. And Rule 1.4 requires reasonable communication.
The Christa Clark e-mail goes toward understanding whether the law firm had communicated in a reasonable manner with the client. This is information that the client needed to know.
Subsequent communications back and forth between Arkansas Teachers' agents and the law firm also goes to the duty of communication, and it goes to whether the client's decision was adequately informed to constitute consent.

And here you have, in 2011, communication back and forth between a representative of Arkansas Teachers and Labaton, where the Arkansas Teachers' representative said, look, I don't want to be involved in how you allocate fees as long as the total fee is reasonable.

This is somebody who's experienced in hiring these sorts of outside counsel. He knows the kinds of disputes and issues that might arise and he said, that's not my concern.

So that goes to show that the client knows what it needs to know in order to protect its interests and in order to negotiate with the law firm about what the fee arrangement should be.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think, on page 13 of your opinion, you imply, at least, if not state directly, that the consent that's given must be informed consent.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

THE WITNESS: I do not say that. I don't mean to imply that. Informed consent is a defined term in the rules. The drafters of the rules know how to use that language when they want to use it, and it does not appear in the fee rule.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So under 1.5(e), is it your testimony that the consent given by the client does not have to be informed consent as used in the rules?

THE WITNESS: That is correct. It does not have to be informed consent as that term is defined in Rule 1.5, yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What public policy would that serve if a client does not have to be given sufficient information to make a decision about a relationship or payments that are going to be made?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, there actually is a difference between places in the rules where informed consent is used and the fee rules. And I talk about this when we do fees.

An interesting aspect of attorneys' fees is the lawyer and client start out in kind of an arm's length relationship, and they are beginning as any parties would to a contract. They are negotiating back and forth. They can drive hard bargains. That's okay.

Once the matter is started, once there is a fiduciary relationship, then things change a little bit, and fiduciary duties may sometimes require specific disclosure in order to predicate consent. So conflicts, for example, that's the classic place where informed consent is the language.

Once you have a fiduciary relationship, the conflict rules recognize that, and place the onus on the lawyer to provide certain consent and, basically, put the lawyer on notice that if subsequently there's a question about adequacy of disclosure, it's the burden on the lawyer to provide the full disclosure.

That recognizes the transition from a kind of arm's length market transaction into a fiduciary relationship. And it's subtle, because there can be fiduciary aspects to fee arrangements, that's the point of the ABA opinion on the midstream modifications, but at the outset, particularly with sophisticated parties, commercial parties, this is an arm's length negotiation, and the rules permit that. And elsewhere in the restatement, for example, it talks about contract law basically governing fee contracts.

They are contracts in that sense. And they are importantly different from places where lawyers have fiduciary obligations to clients.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in a

contract, a party to the contract may withhold, as part of the relationship, material information from the other party in negotiating that contract.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, not withhold, but suppose there's a negotiation where one party says, I have a supplier and we have a contract and the terms go like this, and the other party to the contract says, I don't want to get into that, how much are you going to sell me the widgets for. I don't really care about your supplier relationship. Just tell me, what's the price of the widgets, what's the quality of the widgets, what do I have to pay for it.

That's fine, as a matter of contract law. And that's the sort of negotiation that the parties are permitted to engage in.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if I understand your testimony, there is no contract relationship specifically as to

Page 47

Mr. Chargois arising out of the e-mail from Christa Clark.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't have an opinion about whether there was a contract between Arkansas Teachers and Chargois.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: No, no. Maybe I misstated it.

There is nothing that is part of the contract relationship in the Arkansas/State Street case in the e-mail from Christa Clark that is part of the contractual relationship as to the State Street case.

THE WITNESS: Well, it goes into the parties' knowledge, and it goes into the context of the bargaining. So the State Street matter was negotiated, not out of the blue, but in the context of an ongoing attorney/client relationship where both parties knew something about the other.

So this informs the subsequent deal, subsequent bargaining, but it does not, itself -- it's not conclusive of the terms of that arrangement. It's background information.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And then, when they get to the actual relationship itself in the State Street case, the retention letter that was executed February 8 of 2011 creates the actual contractual relationship and nothing else?

THE WITNESS: So I would call that "the matter." Again, I want to distinguish between the attorney/client relationship, which may be ongoing across a number of matters, and the terms of the financial relationship -- sorry -- that's the wrong word -- the terms of the financial arrangement with respect to that matter.

So you can have matter-by-matter renegotiation of terms in a kind of arm's length posture. And, again, the rules contemplate that. So you have an ongoing attorney/client relationship. There are some duties owed. There are ongoing duties of confidentiality. There are conflicts duties. There are things like that.

But can the fee terms be renegotiated matter by matter without invoking the whole apparatus of that ABA opinion? Yes.

So the terms of the financial arrangement are particular to the State Street representation, and they were negotiated in 2011.

Again, against the background of what the parties know about each other.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And when that changes or when that relationship begins, the informed consent in the document that formalizes the agreement as to the matter does not require informed consent?

THE WITNESS: Right. I want to be, again, very careful with terms that are used in the rules as terms of art, and informed consent is one.

And it's not in the fee rules, again, I think, for the policy reasons we have been talking about, to recognize that the negotiation of a fee arrangement is not fundamentally within the context of fiduciary obligations.

And, again, the drafters of the rules know how to use that language when they want to and they drop it in where needed. It's quite interesting that it's not in the fee rules. And there's a reason for that. And that is because this is an arm's length bargaining situation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Even though there was a pre-existing relationship?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And, in fact, they had, by this point, a number of cases in which Arkansas had been represented by Labaton and Mr. Chargois had paid a fee -- had been paid a fee.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: It's interesting, right? The attorney/client relationship is a blend of fiduciary duties and contract duties. That's just fundamental to that relationship.

And it makes it important to be careful about which context you're in because those are two different kinds of legal regimes of rules and they apply in different ways at different times to the representation of clients.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So let me ask you this question. If informed consent was required as to the nature of the relationship between Labaton and Chargois in February of 2011, I want you to assume that it was required, would the consent given in this case comply with the consent requirement that was in effect at the time, the notice and consent requirement that was in effect at the time, February of 2011?

MS. LUKEY: Objection. I'm going to note for the record just that hypotheticals are supposed to be based either upon facts in evidence or to be in evidence. So I object.

THE WITNESS: That's a very interesting question, actually. And the paradigm of informed consent is where you have a bunch of information spelled out for the client about the risks and benefits and available alternatives and all that good stuff, and the client signs.

When you have a client that already knows that stuff and says, yeah, yeah, I got that, I don't need you to explain this to me, I'm willing to consent, does that constitute informed consent? I would argue yes, but I would also, if I were a general counsel to a law firm, say you want to make sure you get this in writing just so that subsequently, if this is litigated, you have a record of what was disclosed to the client.

But, in principle, if the client knows the information the client needs to know or has said, I'm not interested in finding that out, I think that that does constitute informed consent. However, that's dangerous as a matter of practice.

And so it's best practices to get written consent, to get the predicate for consent in the document and have that in your files.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I'm trying to understand your answer.

If Arkansas did not know that the relationship had changed between Labaton and Chargois and that Chargois was going to be getting 20 percent on every single case in which Arkansas was lead counsel for doing no work, and Arkansas was never told this at any time, that would, nevertheless, be informed consent?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, let me give you another -- a counterhypothetical --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I would like you to just answer the question, please, and then give me a counterhypothetical.

MS. LUKEY: If you can answer, go ahead and answer, please.

THE WITNESS: Okay. I was going to do that with reference to a situation in which informed consent was clearly required, which is a conflict situation.

Page 54

And one could imagine a case in which the client, who has to give informed consent to the conflict, already knows or says I have a feeling I know what's going on here, and I really don't want to get into it, so you don't have to tell me, I'm willing to waive the conflict.
That's close to the situation that you posit, and I think that's close, but could be informed consent.
So to answer your question and, again, informed consent is not the standard, I just want to be clear that we are working with hypotheticals here, informed consent is not the standard.
I think this is a close and extremely interesting case it would be fun to write about, but it's on the right side of the line here, and it can constitute informed consent.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would you say that, in procuring the consent from the client, it was not material that the client know that Mr. Chargois was not only in the picture, but in the picture in a different way? He would not be performing local counsel responsibilities or liaison counsel responsibilities. He would only be getting a fee. Is that a material fact or not --

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- to informing the client of a division of fees?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Two-part answer. This is where I think we differ in our assumption about what's going on in the facts.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm just asking --
MS. LUKEY: He's answering, Your Honor, with all due respect.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Excuse me, Joan.
MS. LUKEY: He is answering the question. Would you please let him answer?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He's changing the question.

MS. LUKEY: He is not. You have repeatedly, when you didn't like the way the answer was coming out, interrupted witnesses. Please let this expert answer.
He said he was going to respond in two different ways to your question. Please allow him to do that, sir.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I still want an answer to my question. Is it a material fact? Then you can answer however you want.
THE WITNESS: Okay. The answer is I believe that Arkansas Teachers was aware of that fact. I believe, from reading the testimony of Hopkins, that he is well aware that the national counsel he deals with as monitoring counsel have referral relationships with local counsel. So I believe he was aware of that.
In addition, it is a material fact that there is another local counsel relationship, but given the permissible fee divisions contemplated by Rule 1.5(e),

I think all the client needs to know is there is local counsel.
Now, the client may ask, what are they doing? And the lawyer then must answer truthfully, but the existence of local counsel, liaison counsel, referral counsel, whatever you want to call it, is required to be disclosed to the client. The client needs to know that. We know that.
What exactly that local counsel is doing is the sort of thing that the client can ask about, but, in this case, the client was uninterested in finding out the details. So in that sense, it is material, but it was well within the knowledge of the parties that there was this relationship with this law firm in Texas and Arkansas.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You've kind of conflated a number of different things and I want to drill down.
I think you said that Mr. Hopkins was aware of this fact. I want to make sure we are focusing on the same fact.

The fact I'm asking you to focus on is that Mr. Chargois and his firm would no longer be acting in a local counsel or liaison counsel capacity despite February of 2011, but, rather, he would simply be being paid an ongoing fee in every matter of 20 percent of Labaton's total fee. That's the fact that I'm asking you is material.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Right. And so Hopkins clearly knew the first thing, because he said, I don't want to deal with Chargois. So he knew --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: The first thing being?
THE WITNESS: You said two things. You said, here is the material fact, this is, I think, what you asked, was Hopkins aware that Chargois & Herron would no longer be serving as local counsel and that they were entitled to a referral fee. So that's two pieces of this.

Page 59

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
THE WITNESS: He is clearly aware of the first piece of this, because he said, I don't want to deal with them anymore.
As to the second, is he aware that they have a contractual entitlement to a referral fee, I don't know. But he is a sophisticated guy who understands how the plaintiff's class action bar works, and I'm certain that he must have known that, and certainly could have asked and followed up.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Known? By that you mean?
THE WITNESS: Sorry. The second piece of this, which is that there may be a referral agreement between Chargois & Herron and Labaton. Now, I may be misremembering the testimony. There may be some point where he said, yeah, I knew about the referral fee.
But I don't remember whether he knew about that or not. I do know that he said, I don't really want to know about the financial relationship between your two law firms. That's not my concern.

My concern is that Labaton receive a reasonable fee and perform quality services for us, and that's all I want to know about.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the fact that Mr. Chargois was going to receive 20 percent in every case, including State Street, for doing no work, just that piece of it, is that a material fact that should have been disclosed to the client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Under the rules, there is no requirement that that be made explicit. And that's the difference between what I think you're driving at and trying to kind of put into the idea of informed consent and what the rules actually require.
So the short answer to your question is no.
Now, it's hard to give a short answer because materiality isn't really the idea. It's a question of informed consent versus consent. It's a question of disclosure and reasonable communication. These are all words and concepts that are used in the Rules of Professional Conduct.

But to the extent my opinion is about the Rules of Professional Conduct and not contract law or something outside of that, the word "materiality" isn't in there anywhere. That idea isn't doing any work.
So I want to keep coming back to this informed consent versus consent, you know, written, whatever. I want to make sure that we stay in the four corners of the rules.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So let me just -- as I understand your answers, taken at large, on this issue of the relationship having changed between Labaton and Chargois from one that was contemplated to be local counsel, liaison counsel, vis-a-vis, Arkansas, to one in which he was receiving only a fee, in that context, correct me -- I'm going to go through to make sure I understand your testimony, each piece of it, okay?

One, what I'll refer to as the 20 percent piece.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which means 20 percent --
THE WITNESS: Entitlement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- entitlement. I will refer to that as the 20 percent piece.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That is not a material piece of information to informing the client and obtaining the client's consent under 1.5(e).
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, I want to be careful because I was specifically asked to talk about the Rules of Professional Conduct. Materiality is not part of that analysis. There are other places in the rules where materiality is a word, but it's not used here.

The rules I'm looking at and thinking about in forming this opinion are Rule 1.4, reasonable communication, 1.5 on fees.
The word "material" doesn't appear anywhere in there. I'm not trying to be difficult, but I want to be precise. And there's a difference between consent and informed consent. So I want to be careful with those words, too.
I don't want the word "material" to be in this analysis. It's not in my opinion, and it doesn't do any work in the rules that we're talking about here.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is part of your answer to my question on informed consent, which is the larger question that you identified, is part of your answer that the change of the relationship to what became the 20 percent relationship is not material to obtaining consent under the rule?

Page 64

MS. LUKEY: Objection. Your Honor, he has twice told you the materiality and informed consent are not the proper terms. And, yet, you continue to ask it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right, Joan. I had to instruct you the other day on Rule 30(c). I don't want to have to instruct you again.
You will not suggest answers in your questions.
MS. LUKEY: I am not suggesting anything, Your Honor. And may I remind you that this is supposed to be an investigative proceeding, not a prosecution?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm trying to get an answer.
MS. LUKEY: Well, he can't answer you. You built into the preface of your last question that he had said on the issue of informed consent, and you went on from there. He has told you informed consent is not in these rules. Materiality is not in the rules.

Page 65

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I now consider you in violation of Rule 30(c).
All right. Next. Do you understand my question?
THE WITNESS: I do. And I'm not trying to be difficult.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you.
THE WITNESS: But a couple things. I don't think informed consent is the right analytical framework.
Number two, even if it were -- so I'm going to accept the premise of your question, even if it were, which I don't think it is the right analytical framework, and, again, I'm not trying to be difficult, materiality is the not language. The definition of informed consent is full disclosure of risks and benefits and available alternatives.
And, look, I'm sorry to be picky about this. But, you know, this is the way the rules work. They are drafted like a statute. And so you really take the language seriously.

So I want to keep the word "materiality" out. I'm happy to talk about, in a hypothetical sense, informed consent, but if we are going to talk about informed consent, then the language is full disclosure of risks and benefits and available alternatives.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I understand that.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: But what I'm trying to do is to understand each piece of your opinion that the consent that was obtained under Rule 1.5(e) was appropriate to the rule or in compliance with the rule. One piece of that is whether or not the disclosure that the relationship had changed was, I'm using the word "material," you can use the word "important to receiving the consent," my question remains the same, was it important in obtaining the consent for Arkansas to know that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay. So now I understand that we are back on my opinion. So the train had gone off on a side track here, talking about informed consent. And that was a hypothetical, and that was fine. I'm happy to talk about hypotheticals.

But now if we are back to my opinion, what my opinion is in reliance on the language of Rule 1.5(e) is, based on the idea of consent in Rule 1.5(e) and reasonable communication in Rule 1.4. So I know you don't like this idea of there's already been information conveyed to the client and the client knows that, and the fee agreement was negotiated in the context of that information that had already been conveyed, but the information about the presence of Chargois and what the contractual relationship was between Chargois and Labaton had been conveyed to Arkansas Teachers' representatives and they knew enough to either, if they chose, follow up and ask for more details and drill down farther into the relationship, or say, we know enough, this is fine, I'll sign here.

That's a combination of the consent requirement in 1.5(e), which was modified by Saggese to become written consent, and 1.4 on reasonable communication. That's my opinion.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So as to this change in the relationship, and given the context that you have identified, the burden was on the client to ask further questions about the nature of the relationship between Chargois & Herron and Labaton.

THE WITNESS: I know that sounds kind of strange. But, yes. You know, that's this interesting mix of contractual and fiduciary, market and fiduciary norms that is part of the negotiation of a fee arrangement.

It is, in fact, between sophisticated parties, on the client to say, okay, you've told me you have this relationship with this other law firm, can you tell me more about it.

Now, if the client had asked that, the law firm would have to answer truthfully. But if the client said, I don't care, that's okay. There's no further duty on the lawyer at that point to provide additional information. That's what it means to be in an arm's length bargaining situation and not in a fiduciary negotiation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And I think part of your answer was, if informed consent as defined in the rules was read into 1.5(e), nevertheless, there would be informed consent here; is that right?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. So let me just get away even from the word "informed" or "materiality" and ask you a couple questions.

So in order to comply with the consent requirement of 1.5(e), it's your testimony that it was not necessary that Belfi inform Hopkins about the 20 percent. Is that your testimony?

A. Yes.
Q. All right. But it would be necessary for consent under 1.5(e) that Belfi inform Hopkins about Chargois' existence or the fact that Chargois had a relationship with the firm; is that correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, that there may be local counsel or co-counsel or some other law firm with whom we will be dividing fees. There has to be some information about the possibility of a fee division with another law firm. That's in the language of the rule, but not the details of the relationship between Labaton and Chargois.
Q. But, in this particular case, I believe you testified that, according to Belfi, Hopkins said to him, I'm aware of that relationship with local counsel, but not interested, correct?
A. Right.

Page 71

Q. You would agree that that level, basic as it is, is necessary in order for there to be consent under 1.5(e), correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, again, this is a hypothetical, but I don't know that it's necessary to identify the law firm. I would be willing to say that the consent required under Rule 1.5(e) would be satisfied by a disclosure that we may engage local counsel. We may engage another law firm to provide services and we may divide our fee with that firm.
Q. So it's your testimony that, in order to satisfy the consent requirement of 1.5(e), a specific relationship does not have to be referenced?
A. Right. This is -- the rules -- here's the thing with the rules. The rules are a floor. They don't purport to exhaust all of what a lawyer should do in the relationship with a client.
And so outside the context of a client that already knows about the relationship with this law firm, Chargois, if a lawyer said what I said a second ago, we may retain co-counsel, of course, the client is going to say, who, for what purpose? And that's part of the negotiation and part of the communication.

So the rule doesn't purport to say all of the things that a lawyer ought to do. It merely sets a floor. It says, at a minimum, you got to do this. And other things that a lawyer may have to do, which is part of best practices or things your liability insurer tells you to do, the rules don't purport to recognize all of those principles and duties.
So is it in compliance with the rule to say we may retain co-counsel, we may associate with co-counsel, we may have a local counsel, that satisfies the rule. But, of course, in any attorney/client relationship, there's going to be communication back and forth and negotiation back and forth beyond what the rule requires as a floor.
Q. So just to take that a step further. So that requirement of consent can be to any -- any law firm in the world. Is that what you're saying?

A. Sure. In fact, there are ethics opinions on using law firms in the world. You have a law firm in India that does your document review for you or something. That's part of it.
Q. And, in your opinion, it's sufficient for consent that there be a reference to -- that there not be a reference to a specific firm, correct?
A. For consent as required by the rules, yes.
Q. Now, 1.5(e) says, "A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable."
MS. LUKEY: Could I just establish you're reading from the rule that was in effect at the time?
MR. SINNOTT: The earlier rule, yes.
MS. LUKEY: Thank you.
Q. That's your understanding of the rule, correct?

Page 74

A. That's the rule.
Q. Yeah. And would you agree that the clause "after informing the client that a division of fees will be made" is a, in time terms, temporal terms, a very specific statement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, it's interesting in temporal terms, especially when you read that rule in the context of Saggese and the timing requirement there. The rule kind of contemplates different stages.
So, at the outset, the client is informed that we may associate with another law firm. Then, subsequently, the client needs to know this is, you know, this is the fee that we are paying to the other law firm based on whatever contractual arrangement there is or whatever grounds the entitlement of the other law firm to a fee.
But so there's kind of a going forward, like an ex ante information requirement, and then, subsequently, further information may need to be provided, again, as a matter of reasonable communication.

Q. So you don't believe that the statement that "a division of fees will be made" is specific as to a particular division of fees?
A. Well, no.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. In some ways, it can't be, in some cases where the other law firm's entitlement to fees isn't established until latter. The rule just requires that, at the outset, the client be informed about the possibility of dividing fees with another firm.
Q. So it could be, once again, any other firm, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. But that wasn't the case here based on your understanding of the facts, was it?
A. Right. So, again, the background to this engagement agreement is the understanding that the Chargois is the other firm in the scenario.
Q. What was, in your understanding,

Page 76

Hopkins told by Belfi?
A. I could go back and look at the facts. If you are asking what do I recall sitting here now, I believe that Hopkins was told by Belfi something to the effect that, and I'm not trying to quote anybody's testimony, you know we have this relationship with this Chargois firm in Texas and Arkansas, right, and Hopkins said, yeah.
So there was a reference to the firm that Arkansas Teachers had already dealt with, and Hopkins knew that they were still around.
Q. And what do you base that recollection of the facts on?
A. Again, this is what I recall as I sit here now. I read the deposition of Belfi, the deposition of Hopkins, the e-mail traffic back and forth. It's just kind of based on all of that reading.
Q. But you testified, in questioning by Judge Rosen, that this is a close case, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Let me, again, be careful. What is a close case is if, contrary to the way the rules work, if the idea of informed consent, as that concept is used elsewhere in the model rules, if that were to apply to this situation, that would be a close case. I actually think kind of interesting, might be a fun law school exam question to write.

But that's in the counterfactual world in which informed consent provides the standard.
If that were the standard, this would be a close and interesting case, but it's not the standard.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I just interject here?
You're aware that the retention agreement contemplated a class action, and that Arkansas would be the class representative?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that change your opinion at all as to the nature of consent that is required?
THE WITNESS: No.

Page 78

THE SPECIAL MASTER: By being class representative, there would be duties to the class and to adequately represent the class, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the fact that Arkansas is now undertaking this case and Labaton to represent Arkansas on behalf of a class does not change the nature of the consent required in understanding, the client understanding who's going to be paid what?
THE WITNESS: No. Because the duly authorized agent of the class representative, Arkansas Teachers, is Hopkins. You can only communicate with an entity through natural person agents, and the client representative here is Hopkins.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So Arkansas' responsibilities are no greater as a class representative than it would be if Labaton was representing it only independently and not as a class representative.

Page 79

MS. LUKEY: Objection. Your Honor, I'm not objecting to your questioning. I just want to point out he's not proffered as a class expert.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand.
THE WITNESS: I don't know if you meant to say this, but you said Arkansas Teachers' responsibility and Labaton. I don't know if you meant to use separate parties.
Labaton's responsibilities to its client are the same in this case. Arkansas Teachers, the client, as the class representative, this is outside my area of expertise. I'm not a civil procedures person at all. They may have duties to the class as a matter of Rule 23. I don't know that stuff. So I'm not going to go there, but Labaton's duties are to its client. That's to whom the duties are owed.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the fact that its client is now going to be or contemplated to be performing class representative -- in a class representative role, responsible for class representative obligations to a class or a putative class, that's -- that doesn't play into your opinion?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No, because the basic agency structure of the attorney/client relationship is the same. You have the principal here, Arkansas Teachers, which is responsible for making decisions about protecting itself and presumably carrying out other duties that it owes to others, and it communicates through its authorized representative with the law firm about how the law firm should carry out its obligations. And that works the same in a ordinary one-off single client representation and a class. The agency structure is the same.
Now, I'm not opining about what duties arise out of Rule 23 or anything else. That's not my area of expertise.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So just to summarize. As to your opinion as to compliance with Rule 1.5(e), it is not relevant to your opinion that Arkansas would have duties to a putative class or a later certified class?

THE WITNESS: That's correct.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me just take it back, if I might, Professor, to 1.5(e) in effect at the time.
So after saying that -- after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable, what does the phrase "joint participation" mean to you?
A. Did you read the Mass. rule or the model rule?
Q. The Mass. rule in effect pre-2011.
A. Pre-Saggese.
MS. LUKEY: Not pre-Saggese. Pre-amendment to the rule.
A. Well, joint participation just means that they are entitled to participate in the division of fee. I know that sounds circular, but that goes back to the interesting question that divides Massachusetts and other states which is what may a law firm receive fees for. And, in Massachusetts, the answer is referrals in addition to providing other sorts of legal services.

So the joint participation is just a shorthand way of saying "for whatever they are entitled to receive fees for."

Q. And, in your opinion, that would include for nothing?

A. In Massachusetts, it could also be for a referral. It could be for a referral from one firm to another of a client.

Q. Would you agree that Massachusetts is a bit of an outlier in that respect?

A. Well, that's a minority position. I actually -- I don't know the 50-state count, but there are other states that permit bare referral fees.

Q. Does California permit it?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Does Texas permit it?

Page 83

A. I'm pretty sure Texas does not. I think I remember doing some work in Texas a while ago, and I'm pretty sure they do not.

Q. Does Virginia permit it?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know if Labaton informed any of the other jurisdictions, in which there were Arkansas cases, of Damon Chargois?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I have no idea.

Q. If those cases were required notification beyond just this general referral, a division of fees may take place with some lawyers in the future, is that your understanding -- let me rephrase that.

In these other states, that would not be sufficient, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection. He has not been tendered for other states. I really consider this to be quite an inappropriate questioning, Bill. That's not within the scope of what the special master is directed to investigate.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you.

Page 84

A. Are you asking me whether Chargois had to comply with different states' rules because he was a Texas lawyer or Arkansas lawyer?

Q. No. I'm asking you if Labaton had to comply.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. No. Because Massachusetts law governs this.

Q. Do you know if Labaton revealed its relationship with Damon Chargois in any of the other Arkansas cases?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I don't know.

Q. But, in this case, in any event, I believe you testified that, according to Belfi, Hopkins had told him I'm aware of that relationship with local counsel, but not interested, in so many words, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that I don't want to deal with Chargois, I believe you said as well, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I don't recall him saying I don't want to deal with Chargois. I -- and you summarized it well at first, which is I'm just not interested in getting into the details of the relationship you have with local counsel.

Q. All right. And when did these conversations take place?

A. I don't recall exactly the timing. They were prior to the engagement letter. So I assume in 2010, late 2010, early 2011. I don't have the exact dates.

Q. All right. What's the significance of those statements to your opinion?

A. The significance is that the communications back and forth between Belfi and Hopkins go to both the duty of reasonable communication and the duty of obtaining consent to the division of fees with the Chargois firm.

Q. And how do they go to the issue of consent?

A. Well, in order for the client to consent, the client has to have the opportunity to participate meaningfully in a conversation about the matter under discussion, and it is the client's option to ask for more information and to say I want to see the contract that you have with Chargois. Hopkins could have done that.

It's also the client's option to say, whatever. That's for you all to worry about, not my concern.

That's the meaningful conversation and communication that has to occur in order for the client to consent to the fee arrangement.

Q. And you would agree that those statements to Hopkins, those statements by Hopkins to Belfi indicated that he was communicating and he was consenting, correct?

A. Sure.

Q. And they were prerequisite to 1.5(e), correct?

A. Well, something like that. So it doesn't have to be exactly that communication, but there has to be some kind of meaningful communication, meaningful participation by the client in the decision-making process.

Q. All right. And you believe that Mr. Hopkins was given that opportunity?

Page 87

A. Clearly.

Q. All right. And he needed to be given that opportunity, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Otherwise, this would not satisfy 1.5(e)'s consent requirement?

A. Just one small footnote. Hopkins or another authorized class representative. It doesn't have to be Hopkins. But it's someone authorized to speak and act on behalf of the client.

Q. And, in this case, the representative was Hopkins, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And he was speaking on behalf of the class, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Now we're getting into civil procedure, which I don't know. He's speaking on behalf of Arkansas Teachers.

Q. All right. Thank you.

Just to get back quickly to the -- (Discussion off the record.)

Q. You may recall that I was asking you about the Saggese case earlier, and I believe I asked you that -- whether it was true that the Saggese court referred to the fact that the Kelleys acquiesced in a referral fee to Saggese on that Doe matter two months into their representation, only to make the point that this was the time Doe's consent could have been obtained because it's the first time that the division of fee agreement was reached, correct?

Page 88

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. So, again, this is back to that two-part timing issue in Rule 1.5(e). I think, and I can't quote Saggese chapter and verse, but -- but what should have happened is that the lawyer should have said, I have a relationship with another law firm and I may share the fee, and then later there would be a more particularized basis for making the division of the fee, and then you inform the client of that.

But the reason it becomes, again, to use the term "midstream modification," is that this kind of gets sprung on the client after the relationship had commenced, after there had already been an arrangement about the attorney's entitlement to compensation.

Q. But isn't it true that, in Saggese, that fee-sharing agreement wasn't reached until two months into the Kelleys work on behalf of Doe?

A. Well, and that's the problem. And so it's not that midstream modifications can't happen, it's just that they have to be accompanied by a lot of conversation and disclosure.

And so if you could imagine the lawyer saying, okay -- the other thing is there should be some change of circumstances to justify a change in the middle of a matter. Well, you know, why all of a sudden is this new law firm coming around? The client needs to know about that.

And so one could imagine this case coming out differently if the lawyer had said, hey, it's become necessary to associate another law firm. Who knows why. Maybe there are issues that are outside our area of expertise. Maybe we need specialized representation on something. It's not going to drive up your total fee, but we need to share now with expert outside counsel in something related that just came up in the case, is that okay. And the client says, yeah, thanks for letting us know. Sure, it's fine, as long as it doesn't increase our total fee. That could have happened.

So I don't want you to misunderstand my reliance on that ABA opinion. It's not saying you can never change fee arrangements in the middle of a matter. It's just that there has to be communication with the client about the reasons for it.

Q. But you would agree that, because the fee-sharing agreement wasn't reached until two months into the case, until the Kelleys work for Doe, they couldn't have informed Doe earlier, could they?

A. Well, in that case, if there wasn't an agreement until later, then, no, they couldn't inform them until there was an agreement. But, at that point, there has to be conversation and information about the relationship with the other law firm.

Q. Sure. But you agree that they could not have informed them of a fee-sharing agreement that hadn't taken place yet, correct?

A. Well, sure. If it doesn't exist, then you can't inform the client about it.

Q. So there was no midstream in that case, was there?

A. It's still midstream modification. So the clients and the lawyer have a fee arrangement, and then the matter is moving forward. Now, the law firm wants to associate other counsel for whatever reason. That is a midstream modification.

Q. So you consider it a midstream modification even if there was no way that they could have notified them later on?

A. Sure. And, again, the ABA opinion doesn't say you can't do. It just says you have to then inform the client and have a conversation about the basis for the modification.

Q. So the failure to inform Doe earlier didn't affect the court's holding in that case, did it?

Page 92

A. Boy, you're asking me about a case that I don't live with and teach and know intimately. But I think that sounds right.

Q. All right. So that case would have been decided the same way, even if the division of fee agreement had predated the time that the Kelleys accepted Doe as a client?

A. No. That, I don't think is right. Then it may be the case that the court would say you failed in your duty of reasonable communication. And, again, I want to make sure you are reading 1.4 and 1.5 together.

If that arrangement had existed and predated the two months in or whatever that was, then the lawyer could be said to have done something improper. You knew about this and didn't inform the client. Why did you do that?

That's different from the relationship is cooking along and the matter is moving forward, and then it becomes necessary to associate outside counsel. There is no failure of communication up to that point because there was no relationship with outside counsel.

So it would be different if there had been a relationship with outside counsel that would have been relevant to negotiating the original fee arrangement that the law firm didn't mention to the client.

Q. So you'd agree that, unlike Saggese, the Chargois arrangement, by a long time, predated the agreement in State Street, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So would you agree that what you referred in your report as the court's concern in Saggese would have required Labaton to comply with 1.5(e) at or before ATRS retained it for the State Street matter?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Yes. And they did. So they were required to inform Arkansas Teachers of the possibility of sharing fees with local counsel. They did. And because that relationship predated their retention in the State Street matter, that's part of what reasonable communication would have required.

Q. So when did that reasonable communication take place?

A. Well, again, I don't know the exact dates.
And, also, to repeat what I said earlier, this negotiation happened in the context of a background of a lot of information that the parties already had. So the reasonable communication included the Christa Clark exchange. It included the Belfi Hopkins exchange. It included what the parties knew about the relationship Labaton had with Chargois. That's all part of the background.
The specific negotiation about State Street happened in the late 2010, early 2011 time frame. But, again, that wasn't in a vacuum. That was in the context of what the parties already knew about each other.
Q. And what specifically did Arkansas need to know about the Chargois relationship?
A. What they wanted to know, and I mean that -- you know, they had the opportunity to participate meaningfully in the conversation. Hopkins, the executive director of Arkansas Teachers, had a chance to ask whatever questions he wanted.

The law firm wasn't hiding anything. They weren't refusing to disclose something. They simply said, Mr. Hopkins, do you want to know about this? And he said, no. He said, I've been in this business a long time. I know how the class action bar works. I don't want to deal with this. It's a mess. It's complicated. I'm satisfied if you provide the services you're going to provide and the total fee be reasonable.
So he was given the opportunity to find out whatever he wanted to know.
Q. All right. And is there any significance, in your opinion, to events that happened prior to Hopkins' tenure as executive director?
A. Any significance? Well, so the relationship between client and counsel is an ongoing thing. And, you know, organizational clients are legal persons. They are legal fictions. Agents come and go.
So you had Doane replaced by Hopkins. There was a relationship between

Doane and Labaton, but that's a relationship between Arkansas Teachers and Labaton. So that information is kind of corporate knowledge. It's part of the organizational client's background and knowledge.
And it would be relevant to what the client knew about its law firm's relationship with Chargois.
Q. So that background would not be dispositive to any agreement. Is that your testimony?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, no one thing is dispositive. This is all part of the knowledge that the parties have about each other.
Q. What did Doane know about the Chargois arrangement?
A. I don't recall specifically what he knew. He dealt with Chargois. I don't know what details he knew about the relationship Chargois had with Labaton.
Q. What did, if you know, Christa Clark know about the relationship between Chargois and Labaton?

Page 97

A. All I know about Christa Clark is what was in that e-mail exchange. And, you know, she said there's another law firm, they are doing other work, we'd just as soon you be the sole firm on our state procurement system, and you can work out the division of fees among yourselves. That's what Christa Clark knew about them.
Q. All right. And what about the RFQ, what did that say with respect to the relationship between Chargois and Labaton?
A. I don't recall specifically, and I'm sorry, I sort of blanked on that.
I do remember looking at it, and there was some language in there about, you know, what we are going to do. I just don't have, as we sit here now, a clear recollection of what exactly that language was.
Q. Would you agree that that RFQ was specifically about service of these firms or of Labaton ultimately selected as monitoring counsel, correct?
MS. LUKEY: So, Bill, you are referring to the response to the RFQ? You are talking about the response as opposed to --

MR. SINNOTT: I'm sorry. Let me clarify that.
A. You mean the documents submitted in response to the RFQ?
Q. That's right.
A. So that was the firm bidding. You know, state procurement law is not my expertise at all. But my understanding is the firm was bidding to be, I don't know what you call it, panel counsel or something like that, available to do work for the state. And so they were requesting to be on a state registry of law firms that would do work along these lines, securities class action stuff, monitoring, that kind of work.
Q. And would you agree that the State Street case was not referenced in that application?
A. I don't recall. Given the timing of these two things, it seems odd that it would be. So I'm guessing that, no, it wasn't referenced, but I don't recall specifically.

Page 99

Q. And would you agree that that application did not contemplate a referral arrangement?
A. I don't recall.
Q. But you've seen that application, correct?
A. I did in the process of working through my report. I just, right now, sorry, I'm blanking on it. There's a lot of documents in this case.
Q. Let me just show you a copy of it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I just want to, while he is looking for the document, I want to clarify one thing.
Is it your belief that Mr. Hopkins himself knew about Mr. Chargois in any capacity or Chargois and Herron or the law firm of Chargois & Herron? And I'm referring here only to the state of Mr. Hopkins' knowledge.
THE WITNESS: It is my belief, and I don't know that I could give you documentary proof of this, but it is my belief that Hopkins knew exactly what was going on. He has been around Arkansas a long time. He knows the players. He knows exactly what's going on.

He is familiar with the practices of the securities class action bar. You know, he knows who's who. He gets it. It's my belief that he is actually quite well informed about what he needs to know.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You said what he needs to know. Does that include -- do you believe that Mr. Hopkins knew specifically about Mr. Chargois and the Chargois Herron firm?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I believe, and this is now just all speculation, but I do believe, and as I was reading this, I was forming my own narrative about what must be going on, I believe that Hopkins knows exactly how referral arrangements work in a plaintiff's bar, and he gets it.
And he understands that there are local firms that originate clients and they have relationships with clients, and they refer it out to national counsel and they get paid for it.

Clearly, he understands how this all works. And that's why he didn't want to get into it. Because he said, it's all a mess. I don't want to be part of this. I don't want to be inundated with local law firms who are trying to suck up to me and broker these Arkansas cases out to national firms. I got to beat them off with a stick, and I'd just as soon avoid the whole thing.
He has been around and he knows the players. So it's my belief that he understands exactly how this works.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's different from whether or not he knew about Chargois and Chargois & Herron.
THE WITNESS: Well, he knew that Chargois had had a relationship with Labaton, and he knew who Chargois was. They had an Arkansas office.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What do you base that on?

Page 102

THE WITNESS: You're asking me to speculate. I'm kind of filling in the details for myself, thinking who this guy is and what he must know, and what his experience is in his position. Arkansas is a small state. Little Rock is a small town. He knows the players.

I'm just -- again, this is -- I couldn't, you know, cite this in a deposition, because I'm just kind of filling this all in, but, of course, when you read documents, you think, what must be going on here.

You're asking me, what's my belief. That's my belief.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Hopkins testified that he didn't know Mr. Chargois, didn't know anything about the relationship until this -- until this matter, until the special master's investigation.

THE WITNESS: He did, but he also said -- it was a funny bit in his deposition, where he said, I'm just inundated by these guys. And I think he probably saw Chargois as just one of these many, many local lawyers who were just constantly pestering him for work.

That was a very striking part of his deposition testimony. So, to me, it feels like he was saying, geez, these guys are all the same. There's just hundreds of them buzzing around Little Rock. That was the impression that I got from his testimony.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume this. I'm not indicating here that I have found this, but I want you to assume this.

If, as part of Arkansas' responsibility as class representative, it was required to have knowledge of the relationship here, what we have referred to as the 20 percent relationship, would it have been important for Labaton to have informed Arkansas of the Chargois 20 percent relationship in obtaining consent under Rule 1.5(e)?

Page 104

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay. So I'm happy to grant that assumption.

My reaction to that assumption is if that's truly the duty of the class representative, then Hopkins failed. Then Hopkins fell down on the job.

You know, he didn't do the due diligence that he was required to do. And, you know, if, that's really, in fact, his duty, then bad on him as executive director of Arkansas Teachers.

I don't know if Rule 23, in fact, imposes that requirement -- yeah, yeah, yeah. But if that is, in fact, his requirement, then Hopkins should be -- you know, hang his head in shame for not doing due diligence in this case.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And should Labaton have informed, as class counsel or counsel for the putative class, should Labaton have informed Hopkins of this relationship, the 20 percent relationship?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 105

THE WITNESS: No, because nothing in the rules purports to speak to whatever the client's due diligence requirements are.

The rules require reasonable communication. The rules require consent. The rules aren't trying to anticipate what every client may need to know or may want to know.

So if that is, in fact, a due diligence requirement of Arkansas Teachers here, that's for Arkansas Teachers. The rules only speak to one side of that relationship. They speak to what lawyers have to do.

And the rules don't purport to speak to what clients have to do as part of their own obligations to whomever they owe obligations to.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So even if it is a responsibility of the class representative to be informed on these kinds of fee relationships, and particularly here, a fee for which a lawyer is going to be performing no work, the lawyer has no responsibility, under Rule 1.5(e), to inform the client of this relationship in obtaining the consent?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That is correct, particularly when the client has said, I'm not going there. I don't want to know about it.
The rules are based on a division of responsibility between lawyer and client, and when the client says, I'm satisfied, the lawyer has no obligation to say anything more beyond that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in that sense, the failure would be the client's not to ask and not the lawyer's not to inform?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Exactly.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you ready for a break?
MR. SINNOTT: On the phone, we are going to take a 15-minute break. So we will be back here at 10:45.

(Recess taken.)
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, I want to pick up on a couple of things just before the break that were discussed in your testimony, and specifically something that was discussed both with myself and with Judge Rosen.
Is it your testimony that, once Hopkins said to Belfi, I don't want to know about the division of fees with Chargois, that Labaton's duty to Arkansas was satisfied?
A. Yes.
Q. So your testimony is that Labaton was not obliged to counsel Hopkins on the potential risks or implications to its members?
A. That's right.
Q. No obligation at all?
A. That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if, by taking this position, Mr. Hopkins' position, I don't want to know, I don't want to know anything about referral fees, I don't want to know anything about division of fees, I don't want to know anything about local counsel or liaison counsel, I don't want to know anything about any of these things, Arkansas, in its role as class representative, was going to be at risk for not being able to perform its duties to the class.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's my testimony in the context of this case with this representative, Hopkins, his knowledge, his experience and the course of dealing between the parties and what he knew.
I'm not making this as a general proposition. I'm just stating that, given what Hopkins knew and his experience working with Labaton, specifically, and monitoring counsel, generally, he reasonably could have decided not to involve himself in the details of the fee-sharing arrangement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And if, by doing that in this case, in which Arkansas was going to be class representative, if by doing that, Arkansas was putting itself at risk of violating duties to the class, Labaton would have no responsibility to inform Hopkins of the nature of the Chargois relationship in order to seek its consent under Rule 1.5(e)?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, that's kind of a way-out hypothetical, because I think this is a long, long way from the cases in which a lawyer with an ongoing professional relationship with a client may have an obligation to counsel the client about something that it may be doing that may cause it to incur liability.
I understand those cases are out there, and there aren't too many of them, actually. I teach a few of them, and they are kind of increasingly older and outliary cases, but there are cases in which a lawyer would have a duty to a client to basically protect the client from incurring legal liability to someone else. That is true.

I just think this is so far from one of those cases that I don't even really know how to answer that question. It's just a completely different universe, but there are cases in which a lawyer's duty might potentially be to inform a client that, by the way, you have this duty.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the agreement that we're talking about, the retention agreement, is at a relatively early stage in this case, in fact.
THE WITNESS: You mean the 2011?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: The 2011, right.
THE WITNESS: Uh-huh.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's a contemplation, I think you would agree, that Arkansas would be class counsel -- I'm sorry -- class representative, and that Labaton would be class counsel, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yes.

Page 111

THE SPECIAL MASTER: There was a contemplation that Arkansas would be class representative, yes?
THE WITNESS: I think so. I don't know, but I think so.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And a contemplation that Labaton would be class counsel, yes.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think so.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which would then trigger the obligation to Mr. Chargois, under this larger agreement, what we have called the 20 percent obligation.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, the obligation to Chargois was there anyway. So there was an agreement to pay 20 percent of fees that arose out of the relationship between the two law firms. That's not contingent upon anything -- well, sorry.
It's just a general obligation to share fees with Chargois.

Page 112

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. But with respect to this specific case, the retention of Labaton by Arkansas in its role as a potential class representative, would trigger the obligation to Chargois in this case.
THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Now, that's in an early stage, yes? Because they -- at this point, the case hasn't been filed, right?
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the nature of Arkansas' obligations change at the point at which the class is certified, and it becomes definite that there is now a certified class, does the nature of Labaton's obligations to inform Arkansas change to more fully tell Arkansas, which is now the class representative, of the nature of this relationship?
THE WITNESS: I don't have enough information, really, to answer that. I'm not trying to be evasive. I just don't consider myself a civil procedure expert.

And one of the things that I always emphasize when I teach professional responsibility is that these obligations kind of sit on top of other duties. And so what duties the lawyer owes to the client are provided by some substantive area of law, and then there are professional responsibility obligations on top of that.
So in order for me to have an opinion in any meaningful way about what the lawyer's duties would be, I would have to know more than I do about the obligations created under the Rules of Civil Procedure that would be obligations of Arkansas Teachers to the class.
I have had this experience, you know, getting burned by not knowing the underlying law of X, and I'm teaching this stuff in class, and there's some smart person in the back who sticks up their hand and says, no, you're totally out to lunch about this.

So I just don't want to get into speculating about something that I don't know enough about.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I would like you to assume, for purposes of asking that question, and, again, I quickly add, I have not formed an opinion on this, but I would like you to assume that, at the point at which the class is certified and Arkansas is class representative for that class, that, at that point, Arkansas has obligations to the class to be informed on the nature of the fee relationships, including the Chargois relationship, who was being paid in this case 20 percent of Labaton's fees for doing no work.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Again, not trying to be difficult, but is that obligation something that a reasonable lawyer doing securities class action work would have reason to know about or is it an obligation specific to that case somehow that the lawyers wouldn't have been able to anticipate? The reason I ask that question is that lawyer's reasonable care obligations, which include all sorts of things, including disclosure and counseling clients, really depend on what a reasonable lawyer should know.

This sounds to me like something that is kind of unusual and different in class action practice. So if something kind of comes up that's new and different, I wouldn't expect the lawyers to necessarily be able to anticipate that.

On the other hand, if it were something that is just normal and routine and part of class action practice, then the lawyers should probably be able to anticipate it and would have addressed it earlier. So I'm just not quite sure what the nature of that duty is.

And these cases about advising clients to protect them from the client getting into trouble generally rely upon it being knowable to a reasonable lawyer that the client is going to find itself in a situation of legal liability.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I'm asking you to assume that, at least at the point -- or just for purposes of answering, at least at the point when the class is certified, that Arkansas would have an obligation to be informed of the Chargois relationship, would Labaton, at this point at least, at that point the class is certified, have a concomitant obligation to inform Arkansas of the nature of the Chargois relationship?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Can you just tell me, sorry, is that obligation something that they should have known was going to be Arkansas Teachers' obligation?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: If it was important to the obligation of a class representative to know this as part of its responsibilities as class representative, would Labaton have had an obligation then to inform Arkansas of the Chargois relationship?

Page 117

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: And there's case law establishing this duty?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm just asking you to assume it.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay. But let's craft the hypothetical together.

Is there case law, is it clear to the lawyer at the outset that the class representative will have this obligation?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Whether it was clear or should be clear, if it was an important obligation of a class representative to know about this relationship in its role as representative of a class --

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- should the law firm then know or should the law firm then inform the class representative of the relationship?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Here's the

answer that I'm going to give, which will pick up your hypothetical, but I can't modify it beyond this.

If and to the extent that it is established that the class representative will have this obligation, then, yes, the law firm may, I'm not saying must, but may have a duty to go back and have a further communication with the client. That's my answer.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: About the Chargois relationship?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Let me follow up on that, Professor.

You talked about Mr. Hopkins being a sophisticated class representative, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What have you assumed that George Hopkins knew about the responsibilities of the named class plaintiff to the class?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, I'm assuming that, as someone who has worked with outside counsel in securities class actions cases in the past, he understands the nature of those obligations. What exactly those are is something that I don't know, I don't do, but I assume that he's familiar with what is required as being class representative in a securities class action case.

Q. So you're making an assumption based on a general category of what an individual placed as he is would know were his obligations?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Yes.

Q. You are not basing it on anything specific in the record, correct?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. That's correct.

Q. Let me pick up on that. Page 14 and 15, you talk about the ratification by Hopkins.

Do you recall discussing that?

A. Yes.

Q. So it's fair to say that Mr. Hopkins purported to ratify the Chargois arrangement in that affidavit, correct?

Page 120

A. Yes.

Q. Now, some of this is going to sound a little familiar, but it's a little bit different in this context.

Assume, for the purposes of my question, that, at the time George Hopkins signed that affidavit that Arkansas continued as a class representative for the plaintiff class, okay?

A. Okay.

Q. Does a class representative have a fiduciary duty to the class?

A. I believe, based on what I know about class action procedure, the answer is yes, but I'm not an expert in that area.

Q. All right. What are the elements of fiduciary duty?

MS. LUKEY: Objection, only because it's outside his report, not to the form of the question.

A. That's also a big and complicated question and something that a bunch of people in the field are actively researching right now.

Page 121

The short answer is it varies quite a bit by context. So fiduciary duty is a broad umbrella term. It includes duties of corporate officers and directors, trustees, lawyers to clients. There are all sorts of fiduciary duties.

So the precise scope of the duties and their specifications varies by what context we are talking about.

Q. So in the context of a class representative and his class, what are the elements of the fiduciary duty?

A. I don't know.

Q. Before it asked Mr. Hopkins to file his affidavit, do you believe that Labaton, as counsel to Arkansas, had a duty to inform him of the requirements imposed by his organization's fiduciary duty to the class and of any risk to Arkansas in ratifying a $4.1 million payment to Chargois?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. In this case, given his experience, given his position, given that he is a lawyer, no.

Page 122

Q. They had no obligation?
A. In this case, under those assumptions.
Q. Do you know if Labaton gave any advice in this regard?
A. I don't.
Q. If they had, would that have affected your opinion?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. It would depend on what the advice was, what they were called upon to advise him on. I don't know.
Q. But you're saying that even if they didn't, doesn't matter, because they weren't obliged to, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes.
Q. Let's assume that Judge Wolf has the power to redirect the money that was paid to Chargois to the class which Arkansas represented as a fiduciary, and you would agree that Arkansas represented that class as a fiduciary, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 123

A. Again, based on what I know about class action procedure, yes.
Q. With that in mind, do you have a view on whether Hopkins acted properly as a fiduciary to the class in ratifying the Chargois arrangement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No. That's outside my area of expertise.
Q. We know what the benefit would be to the class if that $4.1 million that had been paid to Chargois went to the class, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes.
Q. What benefit was there to the class in Hopkins ratifying the payment to Chargois?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. This is part of the way a lot of different plaintiff-side representations are structured. Mass tort cases work this way. Securities class action cases work this way.
It's often necessary to combine the functions of finding clients, financing representation, providing legal services. This is all part of what plaintiffs' lawyers do.

And it's often divided up among different law firms. And it's easy, after the fact, to say a referring law firm got a windfall. But, ex ante, it may make sense for a national law firm to have relationships with referring law firms around the country because they don't have access to the local networks where they would find clients.
They don't have the ability to develop clients on their own. They need to partner with other law firms.
This is actually very common in personal injury and mass tort cases and class action representations.
Q. So based on the record in this case, what was the benefit to the class in Hopkins signing the ratification?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Hopkins signing the ratification simply acknowledged an obligation that the law firm already had.
The benefit to the class has to be viewed ex ante. And I'm not trying to be all academic on this, but it is true that sometimes things look like a windfall in hindsight, which made sense at the outset.

This is a classic problem of contingency fees. Suppose a lawyer is able to settle a case early on, with less work than a lawyer had anticipated. It might look like a windfall. It might look like, wow, the lawyer got paid an effective hourly rate of some big number.
But, at the outset, it might have been a reasonable decision to make about the risks that the parties were accepting.
Here, you have a referral arrangement entered into with Chargois that I would assume, these are competent lawyers who entered into this agreement, I would assume made sense at the time. And things changed. Later, there is what seems to be a windfall, but my understanding and what I take Hopkins to be doing is simply saying, look, a deal is a deal. They had a contract, I'm going to abide by that.
That's what I understand him to be doing, and there actually is a benefit to the class if you see it from the point of view of what the parties contemplated at the outset.

Q. So who decides what the benefit is to the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The lawyers negotiate among themselves about how to divvy up the provision of legal services, and then the law firm negotiates with the client about how the law firm will be compensated, and the law firm and the client representative make a decision about what fee arrangement appears to them to be fair and reasonable.
Q. And you've discussed something that sounds like a process, a discussion. Is that a fair statement?
A. Yes.
Q. And did that discussion take place in this case?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Absolutely.
Q. Tell me how it took place.
A. Well, we have talked about this earlier, but it's the series of communications between representatives of Arkansas Teachers and Labaton lawyers about the nature of the services to be provided, whether there would be other law firms involved and whether there would be fee sharing.

That, I assume, is only one part of a much larger discussion about setting the fee amount, negotiating about all sorts of other things that I assume were negotiated. They are not part of this issue, so I didn't look at it, but I assume that there were a lot of issues that were discussed between Labaton and Arkansas Teachers.
Q. And it's your testimony that the direct benefit to a class of $4.1 million was outweighed by other benefits?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No. My testimony is that you can't meaningfully evaluate reasonableness in hindsight. You have to look at what risks and responsibilities are allocated among all of the parties at the outset, and these are big, complicated cases, and it can be difficult to forecast how everything exactly will shake out in the end.

But there are reasonable fees that may be agreed to at the outset which may later, in hindsight, turn out to look like somebody got a windfall, but that's just what happens with contracts. You allocate risks and benefits and sometimes one party does better than the other. That's just the way contracts are. But they have to be evaluated for reasonableness when -- at the time they were entered into.
Q. All right. Let me just ask you to assume that Judge Wolf concludes that Hopkins, and this is a hypothetical, that Hopkins can no longer adequately represent the class at the time he signed this affidavit. So there was no ratification.
Assuming that, do any of your opinions change?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm sorry. Not to be picky, but do you mean that he decides that Arkansas Teachers can no longer represent the class? Because I take it that's the class representative. Or is he making a decision kind of within corporate law about Hopkins' compliance with his duties to his client?

Q. The latter.
A. How does he have the authority to do that?
Q. He has the authority to accept or reject the -- the allocation, and this would be part of that power.
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Bill, I want to be clear on the record that we are not contending the ratification by George was for the class. We are only -- it was submitted as ratification for Arkansas, not for the class, in case there was any question about that. I think I said that at the last deposition, but just to be clear.
MR. SINNOTT: Yep.
A. Do you want me to keep going? I assume --
Q. Does that change your opinion? That's the question that's outstanding.

Page 130

A. Given what Joan just said, no.
Q. All right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask, on this issue of client, once the class is certified, does the class become a client of Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No, the client remains Arkansas Teachers. The representation of Arkansas Teachers and the duties that are owed to that client are in light of that client's role as representative of the class, but the class does not become a client of the law firm.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Who is, then, the lawyers for the class, if not Labaton? You understand Labaton was lead counsel here.
THE WITNESS: I do. And that's the interesting thing about class action procedure. Again, what I know about it is that, because of exactly that problem that you identify, there are a lot of procedural protections for the class to make sure that the class is treated fairly.

There are duties on the part of the class representative. The district court makes findings about the adequacy of representation. And there's a supervisory power in the court that is not present in non-class litigation.
So there are procedural protections to deal with exactly that problem, which is who is the lawyer for the class. And the answer is it's dealt with procedurally. The lawyer's client is the class representative.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So there would be no obligation, then, of Arkansas to be -- I'm sorry. Let me rephrase it.
There would be no obligation of Labaton to inform the members of the class of these kinds of fee arrangements so that the class could make determinations as to whether or not this fee arrangement was in the class' interest?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 132

THE WITNESS: Unless there is something about class action procedure that I don't know, there is nothing as a matter of the Rules of Professional Conduct that would create that obligation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Who's representing the interests of the class, then, before the court?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, now we are outside my area of expertise again. But this is exactly why the whole process is designed in the way that it is, to require a lot of review by the court of the adequacy of the class representation to represent the interests of class. Rule 23 has these requirements of the representative, of adequacy and all that.
That's meant to take that concern into account. This is dealt with procedurally by the rules. It's not -- and this is true in a lot of context, actually, in legal ethics, there may be a responsibility someplace out there in the system, but that doesn't mean that it all falls on the lawyer to personally satisfy all sorts of other obligations that other actors owe. So it's dealt with by Rule 23.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So for purposes of the Chargois relationship, the 20 percent relationship that we have called it, at the time the class is certified, Labaton has no broader responsibilities of providing information to the class than it had before the class was certified.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No. And here I am relying on people who know more about class action procedure than I do, but I believe this is actually completely routine, that arrangements like this exist all the time in class action procedure, and they are never disclosed to the court. They are never inquired into.
They are just allowed to be part of the fee arrangement that the class representative has with its counsel and it's customary to do it this way.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the class, then, after it's certified, is not Labaton's client.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that right?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that your understanding?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, let me show you --
MR. SINNOTT: And before I ask, have it marked, the document that begins LBS017738, the RFQ, if you will, dated July 30, 2008.
(Wendel Exhibit 5, Joint Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP and Chargois & Herron, LLP, dated July 30, 2008, Bates Stamped LBS017738 through 17755, marked for identification.)
Q. And my question is going to reference page 13, but look at the document for as long as you need to, to familiarize yourself with it.

Have you seen this document before?
A. I have, yes. (Perusing.)
Q. All right. Professor, I would like you to look at page 13, and section 5.10. And just for the record, you've seen RFQs in the past and RFPs in the past, correct?
A. Yes. Although, in my own practice, we didn't deal with government entities. And so I'm not very familiar with government procurement procedures.
Q. Would it be a fair statement, even based on that limited knowledge of procedures, to say that the documents themselves typically contain a series of questions for the applicant to fill in about their firm and their background and their capacity to perform the contract? Would that be a fair statement?
A. Yes.
MS. LUKEY: Objection, just because it's outside the scope of the report and his expertise.
Q. So looking at 5.10, and indulge me while I read this.

"Please describe proposed billing arrangements, including contingency fees, for securities litigation. If other than contingency fees are contemplated, please state the range of hourly billing rates, by timekeeper status (paralegal, first or third-year associate, et cetera, staff attorney, shareholder or partner, of counsel, et cetera) of all attorneys and paralegals proposed for assignment to ATRS matters. State what discount, if any, to these rates the firm proposes to provide to ATRS.
"While this RFQ primarily seeks the services of one lead attorney, the involvement of other firm attorneys may be required from time to time, depending on the matter."
So do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And would you agree with me that there is a response of Labaton that goes on to the next page, page 14?
A. Yes.
Q. And then there's a response by

Chargois & Herron that goes onto the next page, and then ends at the bottom of the next page, page 15?
A. Yes.
Q. So looking at those responses, where do you see a referral relationship referenced by either Labaton or Chargois & Herron?
A. It's not in this document. This is just an explanation of the fees that they may charge if engaged by Arkansas Teachers directly. This doesn't speak to what ended up being the relationship, which is the retention of Labaton. And then it kind of -- I know Christa Clark used the term "subcontractor." That's not exactly right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Independent contractor.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, something like that.
A. So the relationship that was eventually formed isn't really addressed by this. This is just what a direct retention of these two firms would -- would look like.
Q. All right. So would you agree with me that this document, at least with respect to that question, 5.10, on LBS017751, and the responses of Labaton and Chargois on the following pages, does not satisfy 1.5(e)'s requirement that the client be informed that a division of fees will be made?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, by itself, no. But it certainly is part of the conversation that would happen between the client and the law firms.
Suppose that they were both retained and, you know, there was a sharing -- one firm billed the client for some amount and shared it with the other, that would be discussed, but this document by itself does not spell out that relationship.
Q. Well, in what conversation did Labaton and Hopkins discuss this RFQ?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yeah. No, this is, sorry, getting outside my area of expertise. But I understand that the RFQ merely qualified the law firm to be available to the state entities, including

Arkansas Teachers, as counsel. It got it on a panel, basically, of lawyers, and it was not really contemplated as a retention agreement. It was just basically getting it in the system, so to speak.
So once it's in the system, there has to be a further conversation about a particular retention in a particular matter. That's what I'm kind of piecing together based on what I know about this, this process, which isn't that much.
Q. All right. But my question is, you said that this was part of the conversation.
Was it part of the conversation with Hopkins?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, it's part of the conversation with Arkansas Teachers. So Hopkins and Clark and Doane and others are representatives of the client. You know, organizational clients are funny. They have legal personhood, but they only act through human person agents.
And so there's knowledge imputed to the corporation, the entity here, and how does it get that knowledge? Through human representatives.

So this is part of what Arkansas Teachers knows. It's information that is relevant to the ultimate retention of the firm, but it's not itself a retention agreement.
Q. And you agree it does not refer to referrals or fee arrangements, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes.
Q. And when you talk about that conversation, it's your testimony that that conversation need not be with the individual that's making the decision on whether to approve a referral arrangement?
A. Well, it ordinarily would be someone who is responsible for that sort of thing.
One could imagine, again, this is all hypothetical, that this is dealt with by somebody in the procurement office or something, and they get the firm qualified as panel counsel, and then, at some point, a representative, let's say an in-house lawyer or the managing director or someone like that, comes back to the law firm and says, we want to retain you.

Now, I would assume that person would then go back and look at this, and would go back and look through the files they have on this law firm, and they would learn what the organization has to know. I would assume that's part of the contracting process, but that's on the client side.
The law firm deals with the client representative and assumes that person speaks on behalf of the client and within the scope of their authority.
Q. So you're not claiming that Hopkins was ever made aware of this document by Labaton, are you?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm assuming that Hopkins looked at it, but I don't know one way or the other. I would assume that's just part of what he does in retaining a law firm, but I don't know.
Q. You're just making that assumption based on, once again, the position of George Hopkins in Arkansas, correct?

Page 142

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes, and what one would normally do in a situation like this.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter, if I could have this document marked as an exhibit. And this is an excerpt from the deposition of George Hopkins, dated September 5, 2017, as Exhibit 6.
(Wendel Exhibit 6, Excerpt of Deposition of George Hopkins, dated September 5, 2017, marked for identification.)
Q. And, sir, looking at Exhibit 6, if you could direct your attention to page 59, and you will see that, beginning on line 5, I ask Mr. Hopkins a question, "To your knowledge, George, did anyone -- and I'm not looking for anyone who mentioned a name -- but did anyone ever tell you about a referring attorney -- Eric or Christopher tell you about an attorney having referred you -- referred them to Arkansas Teachers?"
And Hopkins responds, "No," correct?
A. Yes.

Page 143

Q. And then I ask, "And is it fair to say that it's just within the last several weeks that you became aware of a referring attorney?"
And Mr. Hopkins responds, "Yes. But can I speak to that a little bit?"
And I said, "Of course."
And he says, "In a small state like Arkansas, you've already heard some of the background that I've given that, you know, that it's -- you know, if you're not careful, you end up over there, you know, in somebody's senate office or house office, and people crowding around you, you know, asking you a bunch of questions and trying to persuade you, pressure you to do all those kinds of things."
And I believe you referenced Hopkins' concern about people trying to get contracts through him, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Just for the record, that wasn't the end of his answer.
MR. SINNOTT: No. Okay.
MS. LUKEY: It's a long answer. I understand that.

Page 144

A. I did reference this several-page explanation by Hopkins. I did mention that earlier, yes.
Q. All right. Would you agree with me that, as to the question of whether anyone told him about a referring attorney, that his answer was no?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. He says that.
Q. I want to go back to something you said earlier in response to my question about -- one of my questions about 1.5(e), and I believe you said that 1.5(e) is satisfied even if the referring law firm is not identified in the request for consent, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Let me ask you this, and excluding matters in -- where a fee is paid to -- cases in which the fee is paid to a referring attorney, passed on as an expense, can you cite any authority to support that opinion, that 1.5(e) is satisfied even if the law firm is not identified in the request for consent?
A. I don't have a case name, but the practice in the plaintiffs' personal injury bar, mass tort cases and things like that, is to make reference to outside counsel. They may or may not be identified. A law firm may contemplate that it's going to need to retain separate outside counsel for a matter. It may leave that open ended, because it hasn't yet found the firm that it wants to retain, but it wants to get the client's consent at the outset to the retention of outside counsel.

It's just a very common practice to say -- I've seen many, many, many engagement agreements between law firms and their clients, and they will say things like, we may, from time to time, need to retain outside counsel and, you know, we will do so for the purposes of providing specialized expertise or something like that. That's fairly common.
Q. All right. Aside from the fact of whether it's common, can you cite a case that's upheld that as being sufficient for 1.5(e) to be satisfied?
A. Well, let's put it this way. I can't think of a case in which it's held that it's not. So I can't recall doing research on -- and I have done this work in -- not just in this case, but advising clients in other cases -- when I have looked through the Lawyers' Manual on Professional Conduct or the ABA Annotated Model Rules or something like that, I can't recall seeing a case that said because you didn't name the other law firm, the disclosure is not sufficient.

Q. All right. But the answer to my question, I guess, is no, that you can't cite a case that says that that's sufficient?

A. I can't think of one off the top of my head, no.

Q. All right. On page 21 of your report, you discuss Massachusetts Rule of Professional Conduct 3.3.

And would you agree with me that, in comment 3 to Rule 3.3, it's forbidden -- I'm sorry, 3.3, comment 3 forbids a true statement that's intended to mislead through omission?

A. I think that's a reasonable interpretation of that comment. And, you know, I picked up on a suggestion in Professor

Gillers' report with a citation to Bronston, which kind of stands for that proposition in the field, that the comment should be interpreted to regulate kind of literally true, but misleading statements.

Q. Well, in fact, in Bronston, that was a non-responsive statement, wasn't it?

A. Well, Bronston is funny. The court held that that was not a sufficient basis for a perjury conviction. It's sort of non-responsive, but it's sort of a cute evasion also. I love teaching this case, because the students kind of split on whether it was non-responsive or evasive or a lie. It's kind of dancing around the truth.

Q. But, ultimately, he was cleared of that charge, correct?

A. As a matter of federal perjury law, yes.

Q. And I think you were just referencing this. In his report, Professor Gillers cited two state bar opinions on the application of 3.3. And in one opinion, these were called half truths.

Page 148

Did you read those opinions?

A. I did not read those opinions. I know the law of half truths, and I certainly teach this stuff. I don't recall which ones he cited.

Q. Do you agree with this statement, "A representation stating the truth, so far as it goes, but which the maker knows or believes to be materially misleading because of its failure to state additional or qualifying matter, is a fraudulent misrepresentation"?

Do you agree with that statement?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I would never venture an opinion on that proposition in the abstract. And I'm not trying to be evasive here.

What all of these cases reveal, and I know Judge Rosen's case, the DeZarn case, I have taught that case, too, what all of these cases about fraud and Rule 3.3 and perjury and all of this reveal is you have to be extremely attentive to the context.

And what the question was and what the answer was, and what was known, I would never venture an opinion about something at that level of generality.

Q. So you are not prepared to agree or disagree with that statement?

A. Not at that level of generality, no.

Q. Would you agree that a statement that is a fraudulent misrepresentation through omission, in Massachusetts, also violates Rule 3.3(a)?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, Rule 3.3 is only about duties to the court. Older case law used to talk, and older rules, I think, talk about fraud on the tribunal. And the rules have moved away from that phraseology and they now talk about false statements of law or fact.

So the rule on statements to the tribunal is 3.3(a), and that's the language that I want to use.

I don't want to talk about fraud. Now, there is a rule on fraud on the tribunal, and that encompasses things like witness tampering or obstruction of justice. So there is an incorporation of that, but the false statements rule doesn't really use the word "fraud."

So I want to talk in terms of false statement of law or fact.
Q. All right. Would you agree that, with respect to a tribunal, that a fraudulent misrepresentation, or however you want to characterize it, is also a violation of 3.3(a)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. So Rule 3.3(a) says a lawyer may not make a false statement of law or fact. That's what 3.3 says.
Q. As you may know, but I want you to assume, the notice of pendency to the class informed recipients that, in September, the lawyer's fee petitions would be placed on the website for the State Street FX class action.
Assume that this happened, and the petition listed the Lodestar of numerous firms, including customer class counsel.
My question is, would it be rational for a class member to conclude, from the fee petition, that only lawyers listed on it would receive a payment from the class recovery?

Page 151

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm sorry, but I have no opinion at all about what a member of the class might take that to mean. I honestly have no idea.
Q. All right. I want you to assume, hypothetically, once again, assume hypothetically that there was no e-mail from Christa Clark and no reference to other counsel in the retention agreement.
Is it still your opinion that Labaton would have complied, however imperfectly, with Rule 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. So if the only facts you're changing are no Christa Clark e-mail and no reference in the engagement agreement, we still have the back and forth with Hopkins. Is that part of the facts I can work with?
Q. Sure. Tell me, would that be sufficient?
A. In that case, it's sufficient, yes.
Q. So you would have to have that back and forth with Hopkins?
A. You would have to have some informing Hopkins of the possibility of a fee sharing, yes, or someone like Hopkins in his position.

Q. I want you to assume, hypothetically, that the court were to conclude that when the Chargois arrangement was entered into, Labaton lawyers never viewed it as a division of fee agreement within the meaning of the applicable division of fee rules in each of the jurisdictions in which Labaton represented Arkansas, and that they never intended to inform Arkansas about the Chargois arrangement.
On those assumptions, would Labaton have violated 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Again, I don't think it's proper to be inquiring about other jurisdictions. And I object to the form as well, and the assumptions.
A. So let me make sure I have the facts right, and taking Joan's restriction to Massachusetts, because that is what I'm testifying about, are you asking whether the communications back and forth with Hopkins would have been sufficient if -- I'm sorry.

Page 153

This is where I'm not quite sure I understand your question.
Are you just varying the subjective beliefs of the Labaton lawyers or the objective facts of this transaction? And I'm not trying to be academic and difficult. I honestly don't quite know what the question is.
Q. No. I will read it again, because it's a long question, but I think those points are clear.
Assume hypothetically that the court were to conclude that, when the Chargois arrangement was entered, Labaton lawyers never viewed it as a division of fee agreement within the meaning of the applicable division of fee rules in each of the jurisdictions in which Labaton represented Arkansas, first off. And that they never intended to inform Arkansas about the Chargois arrangement.
Assuming those two hypothetical factors, would Labaton have violated 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Again, I must object to the reference to other jurisdictions. That is not within the purview of this investigation.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you.
A. Okay. I know you say that's clear, but I'm having a hard time.
So on the assumption that Labaton believed that it did not have an obligation to disclose this to the client because it didn't fall within Rule 1.5(e), the reason I'm making that assumption is that you said Labaton did not believe it to be a fee division agreement, so if they didn't believe it to be a fee division agreement, they must think it's something else.
So if they think it's something else, it must be something like an outside contractor that provides, I don't know, e-discovery service or something like that, let's just say.
So if they thought it was something like that, that was not required to be disclosed to the client under Rule 1.5(e), then they didn't disclose it to the client under Rule 1.5(e), they wouldn't have violated the rule.

Now, I'm not basing that on their subjective belief that it doesn't violate the rule. I'm just saying that they presumably believed that because it was the sort of thing that wouldn't have to be disclosed.
Now, if you are asking me if they just made a mistake, maybe they might have, they might not have, but the record doesn't show that they did.
If you are asking if they are mistaken in failing to provide some information, then, yeah, that might happen, but that's not what happened here.
Q. Right. But I'm asking you to assume that it wasn't a mistake, that Labaton never viewed this as a division of fee agreement, and that they never intended to inform Arkansas about the arrangement. They never intended to inform Arkansas of the arrangement, hypothetical.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. On those assumptions, would there have been a violation of 1.5(e)?
A. Could I take a look at 1.5(e) quickly?

Page 156

Q. Absolutely.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: As it existed in February 2011.
A. (Perusing.) Okay. So I take it what you're getting at is the lawyer's mental state, and I'm kind of a hawk on that when I teach this stuff.
And there's a very interesting, kind of undiscussed issue in the Rules of Professional Conduct where there's no express mens rea term. Some rules talk about a lawyer shall not knowingly, a lawyer reasonably should know, or whatever, but there are rules where the mens rea term is silent. And there's a question whether that's strict liability rule or something else.
And my colleague, Nancy Moore, has a really, really interesting article on that. And she says, look, it's not necessarily the case that it's a strict liability rule. You have to use techniques of statutory interpretation to figure out what the mens rea should be.

So, here, I don't know. I honestly haven't thought about it, and I would have to go back and look hard at this to figure out whether this rule means to be a strict liability rule. Meaning if the fee arrangement has to be disclosed and they didn't disclose it, then they are subject to discipline. That's a strict liability rule.
If, on the other hand, the rule should be if they should have known that it was required to be disclosed and they didn't disclose it, that's a negligence rule, and it could be a knowledge rule, too.
I honestly don't know what mens rea term should be filled in there. I haven't thought about it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So picking up on Bill's point, assuming that when Labaton did this retention agreement in February of 2011 with Arkansas, 1.5(e) was never even in its contemplation, they never considered it, and it was not attempting to comply with Rule 1.5(e) or with Saggese, it was simply a retention agreement, would your answer still be the same, that there was no obligation to inform the client of the Chargois relationship and the nature of the Chargois relationship?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: What I would say to that is the subjective motivations of the lawyer at the time are irrelevant.
So I look at engagement agreements all the time. And there are things in there that I know the law firm's general counsel has put in there because their insurer banged on them about it, or they read a case or something like that, and I bet you nine out of ten partners in that law firm would have no idea why that provision is in the agreement. It's in there because it has to be, and the law firm is protecting itself, and the lawyers don't subjectively have any view, one way or the other, about what that provision is doing in there.
These are objective tests in the sense that the client is entitled to a certain amount of disclosure and a certain amount of information. The client either got it or didn't.

And the standard is not what the lawyers meant a particular communication to be. It is, is there information exchanged back and forth from a kind of objective point of view.
I don't mean to impugn lawyers, but the law of lawyering can sometimes be technical, and I don't necessarily think that every engagement partner necessarily understands what every single line of an engagement agreement is meant to do from the point of view of loss prevention or liability or compliance with the rules.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So it's an objective test?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did the lawyers comply with 1.5(e) or didn't they?
THE WITNESS: That's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And their

Page 160

intent to comply at the time is not relevant to the inquiry.
THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if, and I will qualify this in just a moment, if Labaton, in fact, had other agreements, retention agreements with Arkansas in other cases in which those jurisdictions did require something more than was required at the time in the Massachusetts rule, and those did not comply with those jurisdictions, and circumstantially that might indicate that Labaton was not looking to comply with 1.5(e) at all, that it was oblivious to it or simply didn't -- wasn't concerned with compliance, that would not change your answer because it's an objective test. They either complied in Massachusetts or they didn't.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Would your analysis be the same for

Page 161

7.2(b)?
MS. LUKEY: Sorry. What analysis?
MR. SINNOTT: His reluctance to make that finding.
MS. LUKEY: I'm sorry. I don't understand the question, Bill. Would you state the whole thing?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. You have to state the whole thing for the witness with the preface that you want.
MR. SINNOTT: I will come back to that in a moment.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. I want you to assume that Attorney Smith tells Attorney Jones, I'm going to give you 10 percent of any fee I get from a client you recommend. Nothing in writing. Client is never told -- no client is ever told about the arrangement.
Jones then recommends that the client -- that clients retain Smith. Smith gives Jones 10 percent of all the fees he gets from those matters.
Has Smith violated 7.2(b)?

Page 162

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No.
Q. When Arkansas retained Labaton in the State Street matter, the retainer agreement anticipated that it would be a class action with Arkansas as the named plaintiff, correct?
A. (Perusing.)
Q. I believe you answered this one when Judge Rosen asked earlier, but maybe it's slightly different.
A. Well, I get tangled up sometimes in where I have gone with these hypotheticals. I don't remember whether I said that it assumed that it would be class counsel. The letter says what it says.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think I used the word "contemplated."
THE WITNESS: Okay. Contemplated, I can live with.
Q. Okay. What do you understand to be the obligations of a class representative to a putative class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't know.

Page 163

Q. You don't know. Okay.
What do you understand the obligations of a class representative to a certified settlement class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not a civil procedure expert. I don't know.
Q. Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I pick up on that?
And if you don't know this, then, just say it. In terms of the procedural posture of this case, do you understand that there were three cases that were consolidated for pre-trial purposes?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you understand that two of those cases involved claims of violation of ERISA -- of provisions of the ERISA statute?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In one of those cases, you had an institutional class representative called Andover.

Page 164

Do you understand that?
THE WITNESS: I did not follow the details of the ERISA litigation, so I don't know. I'm willing to assume that that's the case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And in the other, what we will call the ERISA case, there were four individuals who were members of -- I will use a word that's going to cause you to pop up here and say it's not a word, but ERISA-fied plans.
Do you know what I mean?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. SINNOTT: It's a good word.
THE WITNESS: I know nothing about ERISA. I'm willing to assume that there is such a thing as ERISA-fied plans.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Plans covered by ERISA, and these were four individuals.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: These three cases were all consolidated for pre-trial purposes.
THE WITNESS: Yes.

Page 165

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. The class was then certified at a preliminary hearing after settlement was reached.
Do you understand that?
THE WITNESS: Okay. Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And as part of that certified class, there were members of the class that included the named class representatives in the other two classes, Andover and these four individuals.
MS. LUKEY: You mean the other two cases?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. Yes, the other two cases.
Do you understand that?
THE WITNESS: I'm willing to accept it. I don't have that at my fingertips from having read the background materials, but I'm willing to agree with that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And that, in fact, the application for preliminary approval was triple captioned with these three cases.
THE WITNESS: Okay.

Page 166

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you know that?
THE WITNESS: I'm willing to accept it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it your testimony, then, that -- one other fact. Sorry.
Labaton was appointed lead counsel for the certified class.
THE WITNESS: Which of the three certified classes?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There were not three certified classes. There was just one settlement class certified.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That included the named representatives of the other two classes, as well as all the members --
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- of those what we call the ERISA plans.
THE WITNESS: Got it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And now you can assume that Labaton was appointed lead counsel of that settlement class. If you want, I can read you the definition of the class.

THE WITNESS: I'm fine with that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Is it your testimony that Labaton owed no duty of disclosure, first, to the class representatives of those two ERISA classes, to disclose the Chargois agreement to them?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
MS. LUKEY: This is outside his area.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want to understand what he knows.
THE WITNESS: I will tell you exactly what would happen if someone called me and asked me that question. I would walk right next door to my colleague, who is a civil procedure expert, and I would say, hey, Zack, I have a question for you. I have no idea.
One thing that I've learned from teaching since 1999 is I stay within the lines. I know what I know, and what I don't know, I ask for help.

I have no idea, and I wouldn't venture an opinion on that if someone asked me.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Would your answer, then, be the same as to whether or not, first, the class, as a whole, was a client of Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: The certified class.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So I don't want to reopen stuff we talked about before, but I do think that it's important to be careful about what is owed and who the client is.
The client is who the client is. What the lawyer's duties are may vary by underlying substantive law that I am not expressing an opinion about.
So to the extent any of your questions are asking for opinions about what Rule 23 or other aspects of class procedure require, I don't know. I am giving an opinion about what the Rules of Professional Conduct require as between Labaton and Arkansas Teachers.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: But not Arkansas Teachers in its role as class representative and its obligations to the class?
THE WITNESS: That's right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Would your answer, then, be the same as to whether or not Labaton, as class lead counsel, owed any duty of disclosure under 1.5(e) to the ERISA class representatives?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. Let me rephrase it.
To the named ERISA class representatives in the other two cases.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, not only do they owe no duty, but those parties are separately represented. And so Labaton had better not be talking to them, actually.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would Labaton owe a duty of disclosure to the lawyers for those class representatives in the other two cases --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- such that the lawyers could disclose to the ERISA class representatives in those other two cases?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would Labaton owe a duty of full disclosure, and here I'm changing a little bit, and by full disclosure I'm talking about the entire scope of the relationship to its co-counsel for what we have called the customer class, and here I'm specifically referring to the Lieff Cabraser firm and to the Thornton law firm.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No.

Page 171

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if the Lieff Cabraser firm and the Thornton firm undertook to share the Chargois fee in equal parts, would Labaton owe a duty of disclosure to those two firms to disclose the full nature of the relationship in the sense of Chargois not performing any work but receiving, as part of an earlier agreement, the 20 percent share?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No. And keep in mind that the rule here protects the client, and it's about the communication with the client, not co-counsel.
Co-counsel have communications back and forth. They make whatever agreements they do, but those aren't governed by this rule, which is about the attorney's relationship with the attorney's client.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So there's nothing -- you're only opining, I gather, on the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Responsibility, right?
THE WITNESS: That's correct.

Page 172

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So there is nothing in the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Responsibility that would require Labaton to fully disclose the nature of its relationship with Chargois and specifically the fact that Chargois was doing no work on this case to Lieff and Thornton, despite the fact that they had agreed, or they were agreeing, to share in the fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is it within your area of expertise to opine on legal obligations between lawyers outside the Rules of Professional Conduct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. Do you mean like contract obligations?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or other legal obligations.
We are trying to conduct a deposition here. You are not on mute, Linda.
MR. SINNOTT: Linda, could you put it on mute, please?

Page 173

MS. HYLENSKI: It's not me.
(Discussion off the record.)
THE WITNESS: No, in answer to your question. I would not consider myself an expert on contract law or, for example, there are people who write about intra firm duties that, you know, associates owe the firm or whatever. I don't consider myself an expert on that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you're not here to testify upon the obligations that Labaton, as lead counsel, would have had to its co-counsel and what we've referred to as the customer class, or to the lawyers in the ERISA, representing the ERISA members in the other two cases?
THE WITNESS: That's right.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me ask some similar sounding questions, but unrelated to duties of communication to disclosure or contract law.
Are conflicts of interest within your area of expertise?

Page 174

A. Yes.
Q. All right. Let's assume that Judge Wolf, had he been informed of the Chargois arrangement, could have disallowed the payment to Chargois and ordered that the money, instead, be awarded to the class.
Assume that he had that authority.
What interest, if any, did the members of the settlement class have in preferring that Chargois & Herron get the money instead?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't see that as a conflict of interest issue. It's a question about whether a lawyer could reasonably conclude, on behalf of a client, that there was something potentially beneficial to the representation of affected institutions in having a network of referral relationships with local law firms.
That's not a conflict. That's really a question of is it worth it to have these referral relationships, and that's just a question of the lawyer's judgment in entering into these referral arrangements.
It doesn't -- it doesn't really hang on the conflict of interest rules in any way.

Q. Let me ask another question. Assume further that the customer class counsel represented the class before Judge Wolf after certification of the settlement class. In other words, I want you to assume, as a matter of law, that the class was the client of Labaton, Lieff and Thornton.
On that assumption, did these firms have any responsibilities to try to secure the Chargois payment for the benefit of their client, the class?
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
Q. Rather than for Chargois?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Are you asking whether they should have tried to get out of a contractual obligation that they had entered into with the Chargois & Herron firm?
Q. Well, I'm asking you whether they had a responsibility to do that.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Boy, I would never want to say that a law firm has an obligation to try to get out of a contract it had. It might choose to do so, but that's certainly not an obligation that the firm has.

Q. So is it your testimony that agreements between lawyers supersede responsibilities to a class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Or to a client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No. My testimony is a deal is a deal. I don't want law firms believing they're duty bound to try to break contracts. That's a really terrible thing to think that law firms ought to do.
I'm not saying it's a super session issue. It's just that they have this deal and it's a deal. They stand by it.
It seems kind of perverse to say, oh, the rules of legal ethics require me to try to break contracts. I would never conclude that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I interject a question here? You may have answered this, but I want to give you another opportunity, okay?

Assume that the class members, after certification of the class, were Labaton's clients. I want you to assume that, okay?
Would Labaton have had an obligation, then, to inform the class, as its clients, of the Chargois relationship?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So this is something that comes a lot when you teach the rule on organizational relationships and client's Rule 1.13. And, you know, for a while there, there was an idea that you may have an obligation to a group or to an agglomeration of individuals somehow. And it's still sometimes the case that, with small, informal organizations, a lawyer may have an obligation to the group. That's an extremely scary and dangerous situation to be in and wise lawyers avoid it if at all possible.
But with respect to just about any other kind of organization you can imagine, there is a law constituting that organization and setting out lines of authority. And the obligation under Rule 1.13(a) is you follow the lines of authority.

And I teach this from day one when we do corporate representation. You know, don't start trying to take into account the interests of all the members of some organization. Go by chain of command. And that's to prevent lawyers from getting stuck between, you know, conflicting obligations.

So now is where I have to go next door to my colleague and ask what class action procedure establishes as the chain of command. I would find out what that requires, and I would say to the law firm to go through chain of command.

Don't see yourself as having an obligation to something called the group or the class. That's really dangerous.

So -- and, you know, again, how that procedure works, I don't know for sure.

Page 179

I'm more comfortable thinking that through in the corporate context, because I have read those cases and taught them a lot, but the basic principle is the same. There's a line of authority established. Work through it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're making my question a little more complex than it needs to be.

I'm asking you to assume that the class members were Labaton's clients. We can go through the record. There are portions -- parts in the record in which both Labaton lawyers and other lawyers make statements that they recognize the ERISA people as their clients, maybe not solely their clients, maybe clients of others as well, but as their clients.

But what I want you to assume, just for purposes of this question, is that once the class was certified, the class was -- the class members were Labaton's clients.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 180

THE WITNESS: I don't think I'm trying to overcomplicate this. It's like saying, imagine that Citibank shareholders are your clients.

You know, in a manner of speaking, that may be true, and I think lawyers who represent corporate clients sometimes think all these shareholders are our clients. And that may be true as a manner of speaking, but in terms of operationalizing duties that are owed, you have to look at who is empowered to speak and act on behalf of this group, Citibank shareholders or the class.

I'm really trying to simplify, not complicate this, actually. Because if you have duties to the class in this general sense, then you could conceivably have duties to all kinds of different people or entities, and they might conflict. And the same is true of Citibank shareholders, which is why there are procedures for figuring out who's authorized to act on behalf of that group.

If a law firm ever were in a situation where it laterally had duties to a hundred different people, I would say withdraw immediately. It's dangerous.

But that's why it's only a manner of speaking to say the duty is to the class. That's just kind of a way of thinking about who ultimately has the legal entitlements that the law firm is representing.

But that's only a manner of speaking. It's not the way that duties actually ever get worked out under the Rules of Professional Conduct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Assume that Labaton viewed, in this case, the ERISA class members as their clients. Assume that.

Did they, then, have an obligation to disclose the Chargois relationship to the ERISA class members? Or at least to their lawyers so that their lawyers could then inform them?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So, again, I think this has got to be only understood as a manner of speaking. And I don't think a literal lawyer/client relationship gets established by the certification of that settlement class to include the ERISA class members such that all sorts of other obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct attach to that class.

Now, if someone, who is an expert in class action law can tell me, oh, yes, they become actually literally clients of the law firm for conflicts purposes, for confidentiality, all that kind of stuff, then I think class action procedure would have to be remade in a lot of ways.

I think it would be very, very complicated to work out how the Rules of Professional Conduct intersect with that.

So if that were the case, then I think a whole lot of things would be different. I really just don't know how to think about it in that case.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if there's no obligation of Labaton to the class as the client or to the ERISA members of the class and their lawyers to inform them, and the ERISA members of the class interests diverge from the class representative, Arkansas, how does the class get protected?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, that's an issue that I only know a little bit about from having taught cases involving classes with subclasses and things like that. And that starts to get very complicated and law firms find themselves in tricky situations sometimes.

The answer may be that the court supervision is adequate to deal with that. The answer may be that you might need to appoint separate counsel for subclasses. Again, this is more of a class action procedure issue than I'm comfortable talking about.

I do know enough that, when I get into this area, I slow down and talk to people who know something about this and collaborate. I would talk to people who know something more about class action procedure than I do to answer that question.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you're simply not able to answer the question.

THE WITNESS: That's correct.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's not within your area of expertise.

THE WITNESS: Well, you know, look, my area of expertise is what it is, but I also believe in collaborating with people who know more than I do about other things, and I don't want to go off, you know, half cocked on a class procedure when I wouldn't do it if I were advising a client.

You know, I would associate with somebody who's an expert in this area.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm just trying to understand what your view is on who protects class members where the specific class members may have divergent interests from the class representative and from lead counsel, and those class members are not given information about something that they might object to. Who protects them?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So my view about that is it is probably dealt with in all of the litigation that goes into and all of the hearings and all of the submissions that go into selecting class counsel and identifying class representatives for representativeness and all of that.

I am confident that there is an answer in Rule 23 someplace. I just don't know what it is.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the court is told, we can represent everybody in this class?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, I'm pretty sure that's not how it works. I assume there's more than just a kind of bare assertion.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Assume there is an assertion at several points that these are our clients, we can represent everybody.

Page 186

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: My point is there's more than an assertion. There's a record. There's a lot of submission. And I assume that the court has enough to go on to make that decision.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, on page 10 of your report, footnote 8, you write that, "Although it became apparent that Chargois' total contribution would be limited to the initial assistance in introducing Labaton to ARTRS, Chargois maintained that he was entitled to 20 percent of any fee earned by Labaton," and there's some Bates and transcript references.
The footnote then goes on to say, "Chargois intimated that he would seek legal redress to vindicate his perceived contractual rights if necessary." And there are more cites.
And then it says, "Labaton was concerned by the possibility of litigation in Texas state court."

Page 187

Did I accurately read that outside of the references --
A. Yes.
Q. -- the citations?
Did Labaton have a conflict of interest between the interest of the certified class on the one hand and its own interest in wishing to avoid a lawsuit in Texas state court by Chargois?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I don't want to talk about duties to a certified class. I'm not accepting that formulation of what their obligations are. They have duties to Labaton as their client.
On that assumption, however, there's no conflict between the duties they owe to Labaton and the concern for --
Q. Do you mean to Arkansas?
A. Sorry, sorry, sorry. Arkansas, yes.
There is no conflict between duties they owe to Arkansas Teachers and their own interests because they are not trying to protect a purely personal interest. They are acting pursuant to a contractual obligation that they have to Chargois.

They are simply saying the contract requires this. We owe this obligation under the contract.
Q. So you're saying there is no conflict with respect to Arkansas, and you can't give an opinion as to whether there was a conflict with the certified class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's right.
MS. LUKEY: Slow down.
Q. Can a finding that a class counsel -- strike that.
Can a finding that class counsel labored under a conflict between the interest of the class and their own interest support a financial sanction in the exercise of a district judge's discretion?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The sanctions that are available for conflict of interest are generally limited to whatever is necessary to rectify the impact of that conflict on the trial process.

Page 189

So there actually are tons of inherent power cases involving the trial court's authority to disqualify counsel for a conflict of interest.
It's well established that that is about ensuring the integrity of the trial process. It's not really a disciplinary process. It's not really about enforcing duties that the law firm has to a client. It's really just about maintaining the integrity of the process.
So the district court would not have authority in this case to order financial penalties for a conflict of interest.
Q. Do you agree with the statement "A competent lawyer representing a class representative in a putative or certified class action should advise the client on his obligations, including his fiduciary obligations to the putative or settlement class"?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. At that level of generality, that's just kind of a truism. A lawyer has an obligation to effectively represent the client. And if the client seeks advice on some matter, the lawyer should provide effective advice.

If the lawyer reasonably should know that the client needs protection, the lawyer should provide it, but that's just saying that a lawyer has an obligation of reasonable care. And so, yes, I agree with that.
Q. All right. And I believe this was part of what you just stated on your own, but you agree that, in that situation, the lawyer must protect the client against claims that the client violated his fiduciary or other duties to the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No, that's not what I said.
Q. All right. Could you clarify?
A. What I said is that the lawyer has an obligation to provide reasonably competent assistance.
Now, as a subset of that, there may be a case in which the lawyer knows that the client is about to incur liability, let's just say to some third party or something, and the client doesn't realize that the client is going to incur liability, and this activity is within the scope of representation, there may be, although this is a little bit tricky, there may be situations in which a lawyer has to provide advice to prevent the client from incurring legal liability.

But, again, I don't want to do this at a very high level of generality. It's kind of meaningless.
Q. But I believe you used the expression previously, and I didn't hear it in your clarification that the lawyer must protect the client, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. The reason you didn't hear it in my clarification is because I think, stated at that high level of abstraction, it's not really a meaningful principle.
It's -- yeah, it's true in the sense that, you know, a lawyer has got to be a good lawyer, but what's interesting is what does that actually mean? What specific duties does that entail? And that's going to depend on the facts.

Q. So under the facts, assuming that the facts were that Mr. Hopkins might be considered to have a violated his fiduciary or other duties to Arkansas, is it your testimony that that's too abstract to opine on whether the law firm advising Hopkins had a duty to advise him as to that risk?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes, it is too abstract. You would need to specify in what respect is he allegedly violating his duties, to whom, why, what does the law firm know about this, what should the law firm know about this, is there a duty of inquiry, is there a duty of taking responsibility for this aspect of Hopkins' duties to his employer. Those are all things that would have to be specified before I could say anything meaningful about that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask you, you referred earlier in our colloquy to the lawyer's obligation of explanation in procuring a client's consent. And I think you said that it was necessary to explain to the client or to make the client aware sufficiently to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation; is that right?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I want to be very careful here, because we went off on a whole bunch of tangents about informed consent.
So if we're talking about a decision that is governed by the informed consent requirement, so let's just take an example like conflicts of interest, which clearly are governed by the requirement of informed consent, then the burden is on the lawyer to ensure that the client has adequate knowledge of the risks, benefits and alternatives, if we are in an informed consent context.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And is it your testimony that 1.5(e) is not an informed consent context?
THE WITNESS: That is correct.

Page 194

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So under 1.5(e), there is no obligation to explain a matter to the client, Arkansas, to the extent reasonably necessary to permit Arkansas to make informed decisions regarding representation; is that right?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So I'm going to fall back on the language of Rule 1.5(e), which says the client has to consent to the joint participation.
So that really could be just a matter of the client knows that there's a joint participation. It's all the rule requires. It's considerably less than informed consent.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You are familiar with Rule 1.4?
THE WITNESS: Sure.
MS. LUKEY: Your Honor, if I may, respectfully --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Massachusetts Rule 1.4.
MS. LUKEY: It appeared that the questions were being provided by Professor Gillers, and, for the record, we object to the use of, presumably, an independent expert for that purpose.

Page 195

THE WITNESS: Did you ask if I'm familiar with Massachusetts Rule 1.4?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So is it your testimony, then, that Massachusetts Rule 1.4(b), which requires that a lawyer explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation, is it your testimony that that does not apply to Rule 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: No. It does apply to the lawyer/client relationship generally, but it doesn't get you all the way to the level of informed consent.
So Rule 1.4 is a tailored contextual rule. It says reasonable, as reasonably necessary. That may vary quite a lot, depending on what the client already knows, the client's level of sophistication, the client's preferences regarding involvement in the decision making.

So one of the things that I teach when I teach the communication rule is one of the benefits clients get from hiring lawyers is they don't have to be involved in all these decisions. They can offload that to the lawyer and say, here, you deal with it. That's your problem.
And that's reasonable. So reasonable communication has to be understood in that context.
And so reasonable communication here means just that, reasonable under the circumstances. It doesn't shift the burden. It just means that the lawyer has to provide whatever communication is reasonable under the circumstances.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I want to understand. Is Rule 1.4(b) read into Rule 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: I wouldn't say --

Page 197

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I wouldn't say it's read into. I would say they both state duties that apply in connection with forming a lawyer/client relationship and negotiating a fee agreement.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in this particular retention agreement that we are talking about between Labaton and Arkansas, does 1.4(b) apply?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I take it from your previous answers, and now this answer, that you believe that Labaton sufficiently explained the Chargois relationship to the extent it was reasonably necessary to permit Arkansas to make informed decisions regarding the representation?
THE WITNESS: Yes. Although I think you put the word "informed" in there.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's because it's in the rule.
THE WITNESS: So to make fully

Page 198

informed decisions. I just want to make sure that we don't --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's in the rule.
MS. LUKEY: It's in 1.4.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: 1.4(b).
MS. LUKEY: Not in 1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.
THE WITNESS: Right. And the question you just asked me, the answer is yes. I just want to make sure we are clear that we are not up to the informed consent level, which is a different animal.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not sure, with all that back and forth, we got the clear answer. So let me restate the question and the answer.
The question was, you believe that the information that Arkansas had at the time that it signed the retention agreement, that Labaton had sufficiently explained the matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit Arkansas to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Now, I want to go back to my earlier question about the class as clients.
I want you to assume that the class was a client of Labaton. I want you to assume that. Did Labaton satisfy its obligation to the class to explain the Chargois relationship to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client, the class members, to make informed decisions regarding the representation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection as well.
THE WITNESS: Okay. My answer is going to be based on the assumption that there is procedure and there's chain of command. And that Arkansas Teachers is the class representative.
If that turns out not to be right as a matter of class action law, you can disregard this opinion but on the assumption that that is the procedure for communicating with the class, then my answer is yes.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: That Arkansas had sufficient information, as class representation, to be informed of the matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client, the class, to make informed decisions regarding the representation in this case, Labaton's representation as lead counsel of the class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Again, I want you to assume that the class and its members, including the ERISA plans and the ERISA individuals as well as all other members of the plans were clients.
MR. HEIMANN: Your Honor, can we have a continuing objection to any question that includes the notion that the class members were clients of these law firms?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sure.
MR. HEIMANN: Thank you.
MS. LUKEY: I may assert it, anyway, but fine.
MR. KELLY: Same for us as well, for Thornton.
MS. LUKEY: Your Honor, just respectfully, a reminder, with the time constraints, that the next witness is here, Professor Joy. He has e-mailed that he is sitting outside.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We are at 18 minutes to one.
MS. LUKEY: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: When the class was certified under 1.4(a), did Labaton have an obligation to promptly inform the client, by this I am talking about the class representatives here or including the ERISA -- including the ERISA members of the class, of the circumstance of the Chargois relationship?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 202

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Under 1.4(a).
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm going to answer I don't know, because your question depends on assumptions about things that I just don't know whether they even happen. So I'm just going to say I don't know.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. And let me just follow up.
You agreed with Judge Rosen that Labaton reasonably explained its relationship with Damon Chargois to George Hopkins, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes.
Q. In the course of your review of -- strike that.
And I believe earlier you testified that you inferred from Hopkins' experience that he was a sophisticated player, if you will; is that correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. In the course of reviewing this matter for purposes of writing your report, were you shown a series of e-mails in which Eric Belfi blind copied Damon Chargois on his communications with -- certain communications with George Hopkins?

Page 203

A. I don't specifically remember that.
Q. For example, on May 10, 2010, LBS018439, Chargois & Herron were blind copied on an e-mail from Belfi to Hopkins concerning a blue ribbon report for Goldman Sachs litigation.
Does that refresh your memory at all?
A. Unfortunately, it doesn't. I reviewed a lot of e-mails. I don't specifically recall that e-mail now sitting here.
Q. And do you recall an e-mail on May 6 of 2010, LBS017505 -- and, by the way, these are cited on page 39 of Professor Gillers' report, and in that one, Tim Herron was blind copied on an e-mail from Belfi to Hopkins updating him on the status of the Hartford securities litigation.

Page 204

Do you remember seeing that one?
A. I don't. I'm sorry.
Q. And LBS018437 to 438, a May 15 and 16, 2010 e-mail chain from Hopkins to Belfi concerning the potential joint filing of a case with Nix Patterson, which was forwarded by Belfi to Chargois without any copy to Hopkins.
Do you remember seeing that?
A. I don't. Sorry. The e-mails all were among the first things I reviewed, and then I read a bunch of deposition transcripts. And I'm sorry, I'm just blanking on it right now.
Q. Well, rather than read the other several bullets, did you read these particular e-mails, a series of e-mails in which Belfi blind copied Chargois or Chargois & Herron on communications with client, George Hopkins?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I believe I did, but could you explain the significance of that for my opinion? I would be happy to answer a question if you kind of fill in the facts what this is driving at.

Page 205

Q. Let me just lay the foundation first by asking if you --
A. Yes, I did.
Q. You did read those.
And it's fair to say that there were seven, I believe, in the record conversations in 2010 and 2013 in which communications with Hopkins were either forwarded without Hopkins being cc'd on the forwarding or in which Chargois or Chargois & Herron were blind copied? Do you recall seeing those?
MS. LUKEY: Objection. He said he recalled generally. You're asking if he specifically recalled seven in those two years?
Q. Approximately seven?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That sounds right. And I think I see what you're driving at. He's blind copied, and you're saying he should be face copied so that Hopkins can see that Chargois is out there someplace?
Q. Is that what you believe?
A. No, I don't believe that. Because

Page 206

Hopkins has said, I don't want to know about your relationships with local counsel. And I think it was appropriate to blind copy or forward and not pester Hopkins with this after Hopkins has said, I don't want communications about your relationship with Chargois or any other local counsel.
Q. Assume that Hopkins never told Belfi, I don't want to know about your local counsel.
Would it be reasonable to infer that these blind copies and forwarding of messages would indicate an attempt to keep information away from George Hopkins?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No. I think it's an attempt to honor his expectation that his e-mail box not be cluttered. The reasonable communication rule very clearly doesn't require that you communicate every little thing to your client. You would drive your client to despair if you did that.
So the reasonable communication rule requires only communication of what the client needs to know in order to participate intelligently in the representation. And cc'ing the client on every piece of e-mail back and forth would be wrong, in fact. Not a violation of the rules, but it would be annoying.

And it's certainly not the sort of thing that the rules require.
Q. But I don't know if you listened to my question carefully.
Assume that Hopkins never told Belfi, I don't want to know about your local counsel.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. So, in other words, Hopkins is in the dark about this referral relationship.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Assuming that, do these e-mails indicate to you an attempt to circumvent George Hopkins?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I was assuming that Hopkins had said, I don't want to know the details about local counsel in which case it would be appropriate not to share the details.

If Hopkins had no idea that there was local counsel, then we are back to square one with Rule 1.5(e). There wouldn't be consent to the division of fees.
Q. Right. But my question --
MR. KELLY: I object to asking him to assume things that are not only not in the record, but are contradicted by the record. And then asking him to speculate about such things.
MS. LUKEY: That's an objection I made previously, Bill, but the hypothetical rule is what it is.
MR. SINNOTT: I understand the objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. So your testimony is that that would not be in compliance with 1.5(e)?
A. Yes.
Q. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: For everyone's purposes, we are wrapping up.

Page 209

Q. On page 16 of your report, Professor, you indicate that Rule 7.2(b) prohibits only payments to non-lawyers.
Is that a fair statement?
A. Yes.
Q. Where in the rule do you read that 7.2(b) applies to referrals with non-lawyers?
A. It's the only way to make sense of the relationship between 7.2(b) and 1.5(e). There are different rules in the Rules of Professional Conduct dealing with different situations. And as a basic matter of statutory interpretation, you interpret one provision to harmonize and make sense with the other.
And so you have a rule on sharing fees with lawyers, which, in Massachusetts permits referral fees. And then you have a rule that says no payments for referrals. That has to mean from non-lawyers. Otherwise, it wouldn't make sense. It would be a non-super fluidy or whatever. There's some principle of statutory interpretation that says you read two provisions together to make sense.
Q. All right. So you're making a statutory interpretation. You're not suggesting that it's contained within 7.2(b) itself?

A. Well, it's the only sensible way to read Rule 7.2(b).
Q. All right. Let me ask you this. I want you to assume that Attorney Smith recommends that a personal injury client retains Attorney Jones. Smith and Jones have a written fee-sharing agreement, but the client is not told about it.
Jones settles the case for $300,000. Jones then gives Smith 20 percent of the settlement pursuant to his agreement with Smith.
Later on, the client is told about the agreement for the first time, and asked to ratify it. The client refuses to ratify it.
Has Jones violated 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I got a bit lost in the facts, but I think you said that the client never knew of the fee-sharing agreement.
Q. That's correct.

Page 211

A. So then that would be a violation of the rule, yes.
Q. All right. Thank you.
Do you agree with this statement, "Legal ethics experts should not offer an opinion, even if defensible, unless they would adopt that opinion if they were the judge in the case"?
A. I don't agree with that. I know Professor Gillers has said that. And he and I, I think, come out a little bit differently on this.
I would be willing to, and have, offered an opinion that is defensible. I don't like to offer opinions that are aggressive or out there. I like to stay well within my comfort zone. But that's different from saying what I would do if I were a judge.
Now, it happens in this case that all of my opinions are what I would do if I were a judge, but I actually don't think his statement about the ethics of experts is exactly right. It's close, but it's not exactly right.

Q. Let's say you were called to testify in court on the issue of why the $4.1 million payment should not be given to the class, what would you say in support of upholding the payment?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I would say what I said here. You know, here's my heuristic for expert work. I think sometimes these reports get disclosed. They are available on Westlaw. They get searched. They get read. People write about them. I gave an opinion in a case that became the basis of a Law Review article. So I have to give opinions that I'm comfortable with. And I do.
And, in this case, what I would say is what I said before. The folk morality of this is a deal is a deal. And there's a contract with Chargois, and it makes sense. It's the sort of thing that goes on in the plaintiffs' bar.
It's the way client development happens in this area of practice. It's common. And there is a benefit to the class. This is how you get classes constructed and certified.

You find clients. And that often occurs through referral arrangements. And so the $4.1 million fee is just the value that that 20 percent interest happened to have, given the settlement that was reached in the attorneys' fees portion of the settlement. So I would be very comfortable testifying in court and for that opinion to be disclosed.
I would defend it publicly, to say that the law firm entered into what, ex ante, seemed like a reasonable referral arrangement with another law firm and this is the result.
Q. All right. Thank you, sir.
MR. SINNOTT: That's all I have. Joan?
MS. LUKEY: I have no questions for the witness.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Richard?
MR. HEIMANN: No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: Brian?
MR. KELLY: No assumptions. No hypotheticals. No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: On the line, David, on behalf of Keller Rohrback, any questions?

MR. COPLEY: No questions. Thank you.

MR. SINNOTT: Okay. And seeing how there are no further questions, this deposition is concluded. So we can go off the record.

MICHAEL CANTY, Labaton Sucharow
MICHAEL THORNTON, Thornton Law Firm
LINDA HYLENSKI, ESQ., JAMS (Via telephone)
PROFESSOR STEPHEN GILLERS

B R U C E G R E E N, called as a witness, having been duly sworn by a Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. SINNOTT: My name is William Sinnott, S-I-N-O-T-T-T. I'm with the firm of Barrett & Singal. I'm counsel to the special master. The special master is the Honorable Gerald T. Rosen, retired, formerly of the United States District Court in Detroit, Michigan.

Judge Rosen has been appointed as special master by the Honorable Mark L. Wolf. And this is a special investigation related to Arkansas Teacher Retirement System versus State Street Bank, Number 11-cv-10230-MLW.

Also on the special master's team to my left is Attorney Elizabeth McEvoy, also of the firm of Barrett & Singal. And Professor Stephen Gillers is to her left of New York University Law School.

On the telephone line for the special master's team is Attorney Linda Hylenski.

And, at this time, I'd ask that the participants that are in the room identify themselves, beginning with our witness. Bruce, if you could identify yourself for the record.

THE WITNESS: Bruce Green.

MS. LUKEY: Joan Lukey from Choate Hall for Labaton Sucharow. And while I'm speaking, let me note my objection to Professor Gillers' presence.

MR. CANTY: Michael Canty for Labaton.

MR. GLASS: Stuart Glass, Choate Hall, for Labaton.

MR. HEIMANN: Richard Heimann from Lieff Cabraser.

MR. LIEFF: Robert Lieff, Lieff Cabraser.

MR. THORNTON: Michael Thornton, Thornton Law Firm.

MR. KELLY: Brian Kelly from Nixon Peabody on behalf of Thornton Law Firm, and we join in Labaton's objection to Professor Gillers' presence here.

MR. SINNOTT: Thank you.

And on the telephone, I would ask that each party introduce themselves, beginning with Josh.

MR. SHARP: This is Joshua Sharp of Nixon Peabody for the Thornton Law Firm.

MR. SINNOTT: David?

MR. COPLEY: David Copley, Keller Rohrback, on behalf of the ERISA plaintiffs.

MR. SINNOTT: And other than Linda Hylenski on the phone, whom I have already identified, has anyone joined the telephone conversation?

Okay. Hearing no response. As usual, if those of you that are on the telephone have difficulty hearing any of the questioning or answers, please let us know at the soon as possible point so that we don't have to repeat or call on the court reporter to read the examination back.

Page 10

And, by the same token, I'd ask that everyone that is in the room, should you ask a question or give a response, please try to keep your voices up so that those on the phone can hear it as well.
All right. Good morning, everyone. This is the examination of Professor Bruce Green.
And Madam Court Reporter, at this time, I'm going to hand you Professor Green's CV and ask that that be marked as an exhibit.
(Green Exhibit 1, Curriculum Vitae of Bruce A. Green, marked for identification.)
EXAMINATION BY
MR. SINNOTT:
Q. And, Professor Green, I'm showing you Exhibit 1.
Is that the CV that you attached to your expert report?
A. I assume it is. It's my CV.
Q. All right. Looking at that now, is that the most recent copy of your CV?

Page 11

A. (Perusing.) No. This was as of the time I signed my expert report, but my current CV would have some additional programs in which I've spoken.
Q. Okay. Could you just briefly tell us what those would be, without getting into specifics?
A. I don't know if I remember them all, but I spoke recently at an NYU program based around an article that a Cardoza professor named Jessica Roth wrote. And since -- I see that the last program here is March 2. So I think there were other programs in March at which I spoke.
Q. Okay. And in addition to those programs, any other changes or additions that you can recall?
A. There are some -- there's at least one additional writing. Maybe more. But the one that comes to mind is an article online in The Hill on the question of whether the president can direct the Department of Justice in criminal cases.
Q. Okay. I'm sure that's one we would all like to go and read after this examination.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Try telling him he can't, or anything else he can't do.
Q. Beyond those programs --
MR. SHARP: Bill, I can hear you and the judge perfectly. I'm having a little bit of difficulty hearing the witness.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's push this a little closer. We need one of those yellow construction site banners over those wires.
MR. SINNOTT: Josh, we will do our best, but please let us know if anyone on the phone is having a similar problem.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Okay. Professor, other than those programs and articles that you've mentioned, are there any other relevant experiences that inform the opinion that you submitted in this case?
A. I don't know that those were relevant to my opinion in this case either, but nothing in the past month.
Q. Okay. And are you being compensated for your time here today?

Page 13

A. Yes.
Q. And what's your rate of compensation?
A. $950 an hour.
Q. And approximately how many hours have you spent on this case so far?
A. Maybe around 60.
Q. And did you prepare for your testimony today?
A. I did.
Q. And how did you do that?
A. I reread my report. I read the deposition transcripts I was given and looked at the documents I was given.
I met on Friday with Ms. Lukey and spoke with her. I read, again, Professor Gillers' report. I thought about the case.
Q. Okay.
A. And I met for several minutes this morning with Ms. Lukey.
Q. All right. Thank you, sir.
Now, you drafted a rebuttal report in this case, correct?

Page 14

A. Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: And Madam Court Reporter, if I could ask that this be marked as Exhibit 2.
(Green Exhibit 2, Report of Bruce A. Green, dated March 25, 2018, marked for identification.)
Q. Sir, would you look at that and tell me, is that the rebuttal report that you drafted in this case?
A. Yes.
Q. And I direct your attention to the factual statement that appears on page 3 to 12 of your report, which is now marked as Exhibit 2.
Who drafted that factual statement?
A. I don't know which lawyer drafted it. It was drafted by -- it was provided to me by counsel for Labaton.
Q. What, if any, involvement did you have in the process of drafting it?
A. Of drafting the facts?
Q. Yes.
A. I didn't physically draft this at all, but throughout the process of preparing my report I had conversations with counsel for Labaton which may have or may not have informed how they drafted it.

Q. Did the factual statement change at all during the course of your participation in the process?
A. From the time I was retained, you mean?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I was provided prior drafts that differed from the one that's in my report.
Q. And did you do -- in the course of your examination of the facts in that report, did you suggest additional facts were needed at any time?
A. I may have, yes.
Q. Did the facts that were presented to you remain static through the completion of your report or did that factual statement change at some point in time?
A. Well, as I said, I was given an earlier draft that was different from the one that's ultimately included in my report.

Page 16

Q. Okay. So the one that was ultimately included involved changes from that earlier draft?
A. Right.
Q. And did you review the underlying documents cited in your report?
A. I have reviewed them.
Q. Okay. And which ones did you review?
A. I reviewed probably all of them. I reviewed the deposition transcripts that are cited here. I reviewed the documents that are cited here. As I understand, I was provided them all and I read what I was provided.
Q. For the deposition transcripts, did you read the entire transcript or did you just read specific portions that you were directed to?
A. Neither one, really. I read the transcripts, but I skimmed the parts that appeared to have no relevance to my opinion.
Q. All right, sir. Thank you.
And, sir, directing your attention to pages 12 to 25 of your report, who wrote those opinions?

Page 17

A. I did.
Q. And did you have any assistance?
A. Well, I wrote prior drafts that were reviewed by Labaton's counsel. So I guess, to that extent, I had assistance or input, but I don't rely on, for example, student research assistants.
Q. Okay. And the review by Labaton's counsel, did that result in any changes to your opinion?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Tell us about that.
A. About the process?
Q. Yes.
A. I prepared a draft. It was reviewed by Labaton's counsel. They sent me suggestions. I had further conversations with them. I incorporated some of the suggestions. I did another draft. We did that, I think, more than once.
And then, ultimately, I was done and signed the report.
Q. And do you remember what it was that the counsel suggested to you with respect to your opinions?

Page 18

A. I don't.
Q. But is it fair to say that your drafting of these opinions was an interactive process with counsel for Labaton?
A. I'm not sure what you mean by interactive. It was essentially the process that I described. I had the primary responsibility for it. I did the first draft and I had ultimate responsibility for the opinions starting on page 12, but I did get input.
Q. All right. And you say that you did not use student researchers.
Did you personally perform all of the research that's summarized in your opinion?
A. Yes and no. I'm not sure what you mean by the research summarized in my opinion.
There was certainly cases that were provided to me early on or that were reflected in Professor Gillers' report. And so to that extent, I guess I wasn't doing the research because the research had already been done, but to the extent that that's not the case, I did the research.

Q. Did Labaton or counsel for Labaton do any of the research for you?
A. Again, I'm not sure what you mean. They did, for example, early in preparing this, provide either cites to material or copies to material, and some of the material in here was provided to me by them either at the outset or while I was drafting this. So to that extent, I received material from them.
I also, as I said, you know, reviewed Professor Gillers' report and looked at the material that derived from Professor Gillers' research, but other than that, this reflects my own research.
Q. All right. Thank you.
And let me just ask you this. I think it's implicit in your question, but were there any occasions when you expressed to counsel for Labaton, we need to look into the following areas?
A. No.
Q. All right.

Page 20

A. Not that I recall.
Q. All right, sir. Thank you.
Now, sir, looking at your report and specifically the section that begins on page 14 that Rule 7.2(b) is inapplicable, is it fair to say that the crux of this statement is that it's inapplicable because Chargois, Damon Chargois was not compensated for recommending a client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No, that's not fair to say.
Q. All right. But you do say that he did not recommend a client, correct?
A. No, I don't say that.
Q. Well, do you say he simply facilitated an introduction?
A. Where are you reading? The second line from the bottom of page 14 --
Q. Yes.
A. -- of the report says, "Chargois simply facilitated an introduction." That's a direct quote.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And if I could direct you to the paragraph on top of that, just above the subsection A. You say, "7.2(b) does not apply here for two independent reasons. One, Labaton did not compensate Chargois for recommending its services."

THE WITNESS: I did say that, but that's not the question I was asked.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So is one of your independent bases that -- for finding 7.2(b) does not apply, that Mr. Chargois was not compensated for recommending his services?
THE WITNESS: Labaton was not compensated -- did not compensate Chargois for recommending Labaton's services. I think that -- when the question was asked to me, the question was about recommending a client.
The point is here that Chargois did not recommend Labaton to the Arkansas Teacher.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Thank you for that clarification.

Page 22

Would it be fair to say that, operating from the facts that were given to you, you don't know what Chargois or Herron might have said to Executive Director Doane or Senator Faris, do you?

A. Obviously, I wasn't there, but I would say, based on the facts I was given and also the depositions, including responses to the questions that were asked to Damon Chargois and to Labaton's counsel, there was no -- nothing in the deposition transcripts, as I read them, to suggest that a recommendation was made as defined by the comment to 7.2.

So I think there's -- it's not just based on the facts, the assumed facts that I was given. It's also based on the -- the evidence that's underlying the assumed facts.

Q. What was it about the facts, as you were familiar with them, and as were presented to you by counsel for Labaton, that took this out of the ambit of a recommendation?

A. Okay. So the comment defines a recommendation, essentially, as an endorsement or vouching for the lawyer's credentials, abilities, competences, character or other professional qualities.

There was no evidence that I saw that anyone from the Chargois firm endorsed or vouched for the Labaton firm's credentials, abilities, competence, character or other professional qualities in communications with representatives of Arkansas Teachers.

When the interaction was described by Chargois, it was described as an introduction to Senator Faris. And I think he even may have recalled a phone call, but there was nothing in the phone call that, as described by him that I recall, that reflected a recommendation.

Also, in the testimony of the Labaton representatives, when they testified about what they understood Chargois did or what they were compensating Chargois for, they never reflected in their testimony and they were examined by -- by you, they never reflected in their testimony that they had made a recommendation.

And I actually recall, in one of the deposition transcripts, where the special master described in a question, I think, the interaction as door opening, perhaps, or something, but I never saw anything in the special master's characterization of the interaction as a recommendation or a vouching.

So my clear impression, based on everything I've read as well as the assumed facts is that there is no evidence in the record that a recommendation was made.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Can I ask you -- you used the word, I think, on page 15, rather than a recommendation that he facilitated the opening.

Is the facilitation and recommendation, if there was a recommendation, mutually exclusive? Is it possible to facilitate and recommend?

THE WITNESS: Sure.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: It's possible to make a recommendation and to facilitate a relationship.

In this case, I didn't see any evidence in the deposition transcripts, and I would say I understand that, at the time of the depositions, that there was a theory that there might have been a recommendation under 7.2 and, to me, the deposition examinations were pretty rigorous, and there were times when I thought the witnesses' recollections were probed pretty vigorously.

And so one would have expected, I would have expected, reading this, that if there were recommendations made, that would have been explored and elicited through the questions. And so I drew the inference that, since the people who would know were questioned and weren't -- you know, didn't testify about any recommendations, that there's no -- were no recommendations or at least there's no evidence of recommendations.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would you agree that the difference between a facilitation and a recommendation that there would be -- there can be a gray area?

Page 26

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not exactly sure what the question means.
Facilitation is not a word used in the rules. It's my own characterization of what I think occurred. The recommendation is the word used in 7.2.
I think there can be areas where there's a clear recommendation and areas where it's ambiguous whether recommendations were made.
So, in that sense, I think there is certainly room for grayness. I didn't see any grayness here because there was no suggestion in the evidence that I saw, at least in my reading of it, that there was a recommendation made by anyone from the Chargois firm.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if Mr. Chargois calls Mr. Doane cold, as he testified he did, and says I've been working with a law firm from New York that specializes in securities litigation and helping institutional investors. I've worked with them extensively, and they are really terrific, and we would like to have an opportunity to come in and meet with you and talk to you about the services.

Is that a recommendation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think saying they are really terrific is endorsing or vouching for their abilities.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And if they say, I'm working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors, there's a difference there?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, there's certainly a difference because you don't have the explicit vouching for their abilities that you would have when you say they are terrific.
If the question is could somebody view that as a recommendation, leaving aside the other half of my opinion, I think if a non-lawyer in a situation said a law firm, you know, specializes in whatever, to me, that's a statement of fact. It's not endorsement or vouching for their abilities, credentials, whatever, but I could see saying, in that situation, that's gray.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Is there a difference, for purposes of 7.2(b), between a recommendation under the rule and solicitation under the rule?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could you tell us what that difference is?
THE WITNESS: Okay. I don't have the Massachusetts rule in front of me, but I will tell you what I think solicitation generally means. And I say generally because, for example, in my state of New York, words like advertising and solicitation are given defined meanings that are not necessarily the meanings they have in other places.
But, in general, solicitation means, for purposes of the rules, means in-person communication by a lawyer with a prospective client in order to secure the client's engagement of the lawyer or a telephonic or something like equivalent communication initiated by the lawyer for the purposes of trying to undertake an engagement.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So under the New York rule that you're referring to would what happened here between Mr. Chargois and Paul Doane, would that be a solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So what I was giving was my understanding of the general definition of solicitation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. I thought you were --
THE WITNESS: No. So New York has a complicated advertising and solicitation rule, which I can't even begin to remember.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In your understanding, just -- is what Mr. Chargois did here in this set of facts, is that solicitation as opposed to recommendation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, you're asking me, based on your description of Mr. Chargois' testimony of what he did?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's actually based on his testimony. I can read his testimony.
MS. LUKEY: It's your memory of his testimony.
THE WITNESS: I don't remember his testimony that well, and I know issues were contested, but if Chargois cold called a non-lawyer, who was a prospective client, then I suppose that's potentially a solicitation. I would need to know how it's defined in whatever jurisdiction defines solicitation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't want to try to play games or mislead you. So let me read his testimony. There's certainly other parts, but this is the operative part of the content.

Page 31

This is Mr. Chargois' testimony on page 33, starting on -- I'm trying not to read too much. We are all familiar with this, but you're not. And I do want to give you some context, in fairness.
To get the full relationship, you have to read page 31 and 32, but I think I can summarize it. I'm sure Joan will object.
But, basically, Mr. Chargois says that he was asked if he could introduce Mr. Belfi and others from Labaton to institutional investors.
Mr. Chargois indicated -- I'm trying to find the line, but he indicated -- somebody can help me here -- but he did indicate he really didn't even know what an intuitional investor was.
MR. HEIMANN: I don't think that's correct, Your Honor. I don't think he ever said that.
MS. LUKEY: It's not in the part we had yesterday.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I know it's not. It's in another part. Let me read the language, please. It's in the same deposition.

"When you say they asked you to make introductions, what type of persons did they want to meet?
"ANSWER: Eric explained to me that he -- part of his job at Labaton was networking and client development or cultivation -- I don't remember the word, but something along those lines, and that they did not have a presence in Little Rock and that we did and that if we could help introduce them to institutional investors or folks that could help them get introductions to institutional investors.
"And what was the basis of your knowledge of institutional investors?
"ANSWER: I had none."
I can keep reading if you want.
"Again, if you could just give us a timeframe.
"Around the same timeframe, early 2007.

"Same timeframe as the HCC case?" And he goes on.
Then he says, "Why do you think Labaton asked" -- "QUESTION: Why do you think Labaton asked you to help them meet institutional investors when you didn't have any history in that world?
"ANSWER: When Eric Belfi came down -- this is prior to Little Rock. He came down to Houston, I believe it was a hearing in the HCC matter. We got to know each other in talking what do you do, what do you do, what else do you do, and I told him we had a Little Rock law firm."
So, at best, Mr. Chargois had little history or knowledge of what an institutional investor was.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
MR. SINNOTT: Madam Court Reporter, could we mark that as Exhibit 3, please?
(Green Exhibit 3, Excerpt of

Deposition Transcript of Damon Chargois, dated October 2, 2017, marked for identification.)

THE SPECIAL MASTER: At any rate, after this, there is a phone conversation or a meeting with a Senator Faris, who was the senator chairing the state senate committee with oversight responsibilities for state pensions. And the testimony is that Senator Faris suggested to Mr. Herron that they contact Mr. Doane, who was then the executive director of Arkansas, and the relationship went on.

At some point, I mean, there's six or seven pages of testimony here, and I'm trying to encapsulate it for you, but at some point he says that he, Mr. Chargois, called Mr. Doane, that it was a cold call.

And question to -- the question is, "Tell us about that.

"Tim was friends with Senator Faris -- Steve Faris, and asked him do you know anyone or point us to anyone we might be able to talk to, and he told Tim that recently a gentleman named Paul Doane had taken over Arkansas Teachers, and you might want to give him a try. Good luck.

"Did he facilitate that introduction in any way?

"ANSWER: No, sir. Tim just told me about it and I looked up Paul Doane and called him.

"THE SPECIAL MASTER: Cold?

"THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

"QUESTION: And what was Mr. Doane's response when you called him?

"ANSWER: The gist of it was who are you and why are you calling me, but I told him who I was and who our firm was. We're local not far from your office and how I got his name and why I was calling.

"QUESTION: Okay. And did he offer to help you?

"ANSWER: I don't understand.

"QUESTION: Did he ask you to come in for a meeting? Or did he --

"WITNESS: No, sir.

"QUESTION: -- extend -- you know,

Page 36

try to arrange for you to talk again with him?

"ANSWER: No, sir.

"QUESTION: All right. What did he say?

"ANSWER: He listened to what I had to say, and I asked him if I could meet with him. And then I told him that, you know, I was working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors.

"QUESTION: Okay. So how did you leave it after that conversation?

"ANSWER: Let me know if you're willing to give us some time.

"QUESTION: Okay. And what happened next?

"ANSWER: He -- I don't know if it was a follow-up call by me or if it was that call, but he ultimately agreed to meet.

"QUESTION: Okay. And did you meet with him by yourself or were you accompanied by someone else?

Page 37

"ANSWER: The Labaton -- I believe it was Eric Belfi and Chris Keller, but I can't swear to that. I know Eric Belfi was there. I don't know if Chris Keller was there."

And it goes on.

Just in the context of what I've now read to you, would you characterize that as a solicitation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So I guess I would say a couple of things. And one is I don't have the Arkansas rule, which I think would govern, so -- and I'm not an Arkansas ethicist. I think, given how solicitation is generally understood, that cold calling a potential client who's not a lawyer is generally regarded as a solicitation.

I would say that cold calling a corporate executive, or the equivalent in this case, I have never seen somebody disciplined for something like this. So if it's a solicitation under Arkansas ethics rules, I would think it's a pretty de minimis one.

And just to put it into context of this case and the rest of the part that you read, I didn't see anything that suggested that the Labaton firm was asking Mr. Chargois to solicit or to cold call.
I think my recollection is they understood that Chargois had a relationship with Arkansas Teachers, but in any event, the part that you read me suggested that they were looking for an introduction, not a solicitation in violation of solicitation rules.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What is the difference, please?
THE WITNESS: Between an introduction and solicitation?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: When it's a cold call, the person doing the calling.
THE WITNESS: Well, they could have arranged -- well, they could have done either of two things, Chargois. One is if they had a relationship already, which I think the Labaton firm assumed they did, with Arkansas Teachers, then the phone call would not have been a solicitation.

And, second of all, they could have initiated the contact with Mr. Doane by e-mail or, you know, letter or by other means that are not conventionally regarded as solicitation under the rules, and those also would have facilitated.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: There may be a factual difference between what Labaton testifies it believed was any pre-existing relationship between Arkansas and Mr. Chargois and Mr. Chargois' belief. Put that aside.
Separately, based on Mr. Chargois' testimony, is that a solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So you're asking me if -- if Chargois, in fact, cold called a non-lawyer representative of Arkansas Teachers, and I'm assuming that Doane isn't a lawyer, would that technically be solicitation under Arkansas Rules of Professional Conduct. And my answer is I don't know the Arkansas Rules of Professional Conduct. I don't know how they're interpreted, so I can't really answer that question.

I think that if it were regarded as a solicitation, it would be about the most de minimis solicitation one could imagine, and I would highly doubt that it would be disciplined anywhere in the country.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you familiar with any of the Massachusetts rules that govern solicitation?
THE WITNESS: I have not studied them in connection with my testimony. That wasn't one of the subjects of my testimony.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you are not prepared to offer an opinion as to whether this would be solicitation under the Massachusetts rule?
THE WITNESS: Well, I think it's plainly not solicitation under the Massachusetts rule, because the Massachusetts rule would not have applied in 2008 to whatever communications Mr. Chargois had with Arkansas Teachers.

Page 41

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the rule that would have applied to solicitation would be the Arkansas rule?
THE WITNESS: I believe, if Mr. Chargois is a Little Rock, Arkansas, lawyer communicating with a prospective Arkansas client in Arkansas, that the Arkansas rules would apply.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If it was a solicitation on behalf of a New York firm, would the New York rules have anything to say about it or have any application?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So you're asking me what I believe is a choice of law question in New York?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Right.
THE WITNESS: Whether New York disciplinary authorities, if they were bringing a disciplinary action against the Labaton firm for causing someone to solicit in Arkansas, whether they would apply the Arkansas rules or the New York rules.

One point I would make here is, from the testimony I've seen, Labaton didn't cause Chargois to cold call somebody who Chargois didn't, in fact, have a relationship with. And so I don't see how the Labaton firm could be the subject of a New York disciplinary action here based on having caused Chargois to solicit, but I suppose if you change the facts here and ask the question, I think that's a really interesting question.

I'm not sure I a hundred percent know the answer. It would seem to me the answer would be that if the solicitation is permissible under Arkansas law, then Labaton hasn't caused Chargois to do anything improper and, therefore, I don't see the New York rule as being applied in a New York disciplinary action.

But, of course, the whole thing is hypothetical in the extreme because it's almost inconceivable that a New York disciplinary authority would proceed after a firm in Labaton's position based on facts like these.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We got into this through the doorway of my question, what the difference was between solicitation and a recommendation.

Would you agree, at least from -- based on Mr. Chargois' testimony of the cold call and he says he's working with a New York firm, I'm quoting now from page 34, I will quote it directly, line 19, "He listened to what I had to say and I asked him if I could meet him. And then I told him that, you know, I was working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors."

Is there, in that, an implicit recommendation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So I don't think -- well, I don't think there's a recommendation for purposes of 7.2(b). I don't know that 7.2(b) applies, in general, to implicit recommendations. I don't think -- now you're asking me to parse his recollection, I'm not sure how many years later, almost a decade later, of a conversation that he had or that he thinks he had with Mr. Doane.

It's not a verbatim account. I doubt very much that it's a verbatim recollection. And so I'm a little leery -- wary of sort of parsing his reconstructed recollection of a nine-year-old conversation and saying that that's an implied recommendation.

I was an English major, so I did spend a lot of time parsing, you know, language and reading things into it, but I certainly don't think, based on this testimony, you can make a finding fairly that there was a recommendation under 7.2(b).

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me try it again.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Page 45

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not asking you to try to peel back the skin of Mr. Chargois' memory. I'm not asking you to parse through his memory.

I'm asking you only on the face of what he testified to, lines 19 through 23, whether that testimony, assuming it's right or accurate, would constitute an implicit recommendation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So my opinion is if Chargois said to Doane, "I am working with a New York law firm that specializes in institutional investors," that would not be a recommendation for purposes of 7.2(b).

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Explicit or implicit?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't know that an implicit recommendation of this kind would come within 7.2(b).

My opinion is if you want to characterize it as an implicit recommendation, it doesn't come under 7.2(b). I don't know, myself, what's implicitly being said here about the qualifications of the Labaton firm.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Beyond that they specialize --
THE WITNESS: Well, that's explicit.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah. And that's not -- the fact that they said -- that Mr. Chargois said a New York firm that specializes does not carry a recommendation connotation to it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: To me, that's a description of the work that the Labaton firm does. If they did personal injury work, it would not be -- this would not be a relevant introduction.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Bill.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Are you familiar with what Mr. Chargois -- how Mr. Chargois viewed his role with Arkansas?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 47

Q. Well, let me phrase it this way.
What's your understanding with respect to the issue of solicitation as to how Damon Chargois viewed his role in bringing Arkansas to Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I guess I don't understand your question.
Q. Sure. Let me be a little bit more specific.
Among the materials that you were shown, do you recall if you were shown an e-mail thread dated October 18, 2014, and I'm referring to LBS017593 and 594, from Damon Chargois to Eric Belfi, and specifically --
MR. SINNOTT: What exhibit number was that yesterday?
MS. LUKEY: Exhibit 3.
MR. SINNOTT: Mark this as Exhibit 4 for today's deposition.
(Green Exhibit 4, E-Mail Chain, Bates Stamped LBS017593 through 17594, marked for identification.)
Q. So, Professor, I'd ask that you look at that document and you're welcome to look at the entire document, but my question will deal with the final, what appears to be the final e-mail on that thread, which begins at the bottom of that first page where it says, "Original message from Damon Chargois," and goes onto the next page.

Page 48

A. Is there a particular paragraph you want me to look at?
Q. Yes. I want you to look at the second paragraph of that message, but if you need to look at the first --
A. Can you just tell me how it begins?
Q. Sure. "I am very concerned."
A. Sure. I see it. (Perusing.)
Q. All right. So you have had a chance to look at that?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen this before?
A. Yes.
Q. Having seen this before, what do you understand the context of that particular e-mail to be? What prompted that e-mail?
A. My understanding is that there was a question about whether the Chargois firm would receive any money upon the successful conclusion of the State Street Bank case, and that this was a -- Mr. Chargois' communication with Eric Belfi of Labaton on why the Chargois firm ought to be receiving money.

Q. All right. And specifically with respect to that paragraph that I asked you to look at, for the record, it says, and this is Mr. Chargois to Mr. Belfi, "I am very concerned that you guys are attempting to significantly, substantially and materially alter our agreement. Our deal with Labaton is straightforward. We got you ATRS as a client, (after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas) and Labaton would use ATRS to seek lead counsel appointments in institutional investor fraud and misrepresentation cases."
Now, is it fair to say that, in that paragraph, in that sentence that I just read, Mr. Chargois describes the activities that were undertaken in obtaining Arkansas as a client for Labaton?

Page 50

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Are you asking me based on personal knowledge, based on my having read the rest of the evidence or something else?
Q. No. I'm saying, based on that sentence that I just read, does Mr. Chargois not say here that -- let me break it down.
"We got you ATRS as a client," correct?
A. Are you asking me if that's what it says here?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, you correctly read it.
Q. And then, in parentheses, he describes, does he not, the steps that Chargois took in getting ATRS as a client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Again, I would say, are you asking me based on personal knowledge? I don't have any knowledge.
Q. No, I'm not asking your personal knowledge.
A. You asked me, are these the steps that he took. I don't know whether these are the steps that he took.

Q. I'm asking you if that's what it says, that he's describing the steps that he took.
A. That isn't what you asked.
MS. LUKEY: We will stipulate to the writing, if you want, that that's what is written there, as you read it correctly, that's fine.
A. He's describing steps he claims he took, but I don't know whether he is describing steps that he, in fact, took. In the material that Judge Rosen read to me before, it makes it pretty plain that Mr. Chargois didn't take these steps.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In fairness, I only read you the snippet of the deposition dealing with the opening of the relationship.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
A. Well, either he took these steps or he didn't. I have no basis of knowledge.
Q. All right. But, of course, you don't have personal knowledge.

Page 52

A. Right. I do not have personal knowledge.
Q. But what I'm asking is --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just as you don't have personal knowledges of any of the conversations that Mr. Belfi had that he testified to about what the relationship was, right?
THE WITNESS: I have no personal knowledge of any of the facts in this case.
Q. Is it clear to you, in that sentence that I referred you to, that Damon Chargois is claiming to have expended considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas in getting ATRS as a client for Labaton?
A. That's how I read that.
Q. Thank you. Is that solicitation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Assume that it's true. For purposes of the question, assume that it's true.

Page 53

A. I have no idea. It doesn't say here whose favors or what political activity or how the money was spent or how he dedicated his time. If he dedicated his time to solicitation, he solicited. If he dedicated his time to something else, it wasn't solicitation.
Q. But the fact is you don't have any knowledge, either personal knowledge or based on the facts that were presented to you by counsel for Labaton, as to what Chargois or Herron actually said to Mr. Doane or to Senator Faris about Labaton, correct?
A. That was -- I lost track of the question.
I certainly have no personal knowledge. The only knowledge I have is based on my having read the transcripts that I was provided.
Q. All right. Does it follow from your opinion, Professor, that if Chargois & Herron did not recommend Labaton within the meaning of 7.2(b), then Labaton did not need to comply with 1.5(e) to avoid violating 7.2(b)?

Page 54

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I truly don't understand what you just said, but I think I could respond.
Q. Please do.
A. Okay. It's my opinion that if Labaton did not pay Chargois to recommend Labaton's services to Arkansas Teachers, then Labaton did not violate Rule 7.2(b), period.
It may be, and it would require a separate analysis, that Labaton violated Rule 1.5(e). That would be a separate question. That is independent of the question under Rule 7.2(b).
Q. All right. So let me see if I can follow up on that.
Is it your view, under this part of your report, that Labaton paid Chargois for an introduction only, and that, therefore, it was not dividing a fee with Chargois & Herron?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Are you asking, is that the opinion I'm expressing at page 14?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. No, I'm not expressing that opinion at page 14.

Q. Let me ask you if you are expressing that view anywhere. Is it your view that Labaton paid Chargois for an introduction only, and that as a result, it was not dividing a fee with Chargois & Herron?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. No, that's not my opinion. My opinion is, one, Labaton did not violate Rule 7.2(b).
And, two, and separately, for separate reasons expressed later in my report, Labaton did not violate Rule 1.5(e).
Q. Well, did Labaton need to comply with 1.5(e) at all if Chargois & Herron merely facilitated an introduction?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Labaton needed to comply with Rule 1.5(e) if Rule 1.5(e) was applicable, if there was an agreement to share fees with Chargois. That is an independent question from the question of whether Rule 7.2(b) applies based on your theory or a theory that Labaton paid Chargois for recommending Labaton's services.

Page 56

Those are two separate questions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Your testimony here raises an interesting question that I would like your opinion on.
7.2(b), on its face, says that a lawyer may not give anything of value. I don't have it in front of me, but --
THE WITNESS: (Handing.)
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Good.
A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending a lawyer's services.
There is a subsection in (b)(5) that excepts out a division of fees under 1.5(e).
Do you view 1.5(e) as a safe harbor from the general prohibition in 7.2(b)?
THE WITNESS: So I address this beginning at page 15 of my report. I'm not sure I would describe it as a safe harbor.
What I would say is that fee-sharing arrangements between lawyers are not regarded as recommendations for purposes of one point -- for purposes of 7.2(b).

And do you want me to elaborate?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah. I was going to ask you what the distinction you're drawing is.
THE WITNESS: Between -- I'm not sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Between safe harbor, at least as I understand what a safe harbor is, and what you say it is.
I think you said that subsection 5 says it doesn't apply to fee-sharing agreements under Rule 1.5(e).
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So what I'm asking you is, isn't that a safe harbor from the larger prohibition?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So I guess partly turns on what you mean by safe harbor. It's not a phrase that I'm using.
And so what I think -- well, I don't want to guess on what you mean. So there is that problem.

Page 58

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't want you to guess on what I mean by safe harbor.
Is it an exception to the general proscription under 7.2(b)?
THE WITNESS: Okay. No, I don't read it that way. And so Massachusetts has this provision 7.2(b). It's not in the ABA model rules.
And the model rule states, I think it's generally understood, that fee-sharing arrangements that may involve a recommendation are not what 7.2(b) covers. Here, the Massachusetts rule makes it crystal clear by having this provision.
I think what it means is to emphasize that fee-sharing arrangements are okay in Massachusetts. Massachusetts, by the way, has a more liberal fee-sharing rule than other states. And that fee sharing that's generally covered by 1.5(e) is not the sort of thing that 7.2(b) is meant to cover.

I don't know that I would call it an exception. I think it -- because even absent this provision, fee sharing wouldn't be covered under 7.2(b).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does the rule not characterize Rule 7.2(b)(5) as an exception?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But you don't believe it's an exception.
THE WITNESS: Well, I guess the question is, in what sense you mean.
I think that fee sharing, generally, is excluded from the rule. I think this provision is designed to make that crystal clear.
I think, absent this provision, that would still be the case, as it is in Model Rule 6.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Then why put (b)(5) in?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If that's true, why put (b)(5) in? Would that not be surplusage?

Page 60

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Actually, I think this is surplusage. And I think the reason is what we know about the Massachusetts fee-sharing provision. Massachusetts is more open to fee sharing than most, if not all, other states.
In other states that have the model rule provision, it's restricted to arrangements where there's joint responsibility between the two lawyers who are sharing fees or where the fee sharing is based on the amount of work each does.
In Massachusetts, based on what I've read, including the Saggese case, they are more open to fee sharing. I think it's fair in the context of the history and in the context of 1.5(e) to read this as, indeed, surplusage, but making it crystal clear, as I say, that fee sharing is not prohibited by 7.2(b).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So even if subsection 5 were not in the rule, a lawyer who fails to comply with 1.5(e) and blatantly gives something of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services is not subject to 7.2(b), is that your understanding? Absent the exception.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: You asked the question as if it follows from what I said, but just to parse the question, first of all, you said "who gives something of value to someone." Well, clearly, none of this relates to giving something of value to non-lawyers.
So I assume you mean who gives something of value to a lawyer, but I don't want to make that assumption because you asked the question --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Then let me read it as you've defined it, rather than my question.
"A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a lawyer for recommending the lawyer's services."
And you can read it without the exception in subsection 5.

Page 62

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That would not -- that would not implicate Rule 7.2(b).
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, if it's -- a lawyer gives something of value to a lawyer to recommend the first lawyer's services, and it's not in the context of a fee-sharing provision, then I guess it could be taken back to 7.2, and that would be true in Massachusetts or in a model rule state, but that's not the question you asked me before.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So your testimony, then, would be 7.2(b) has nothing to say about a lawyer who gives something of value to another lawyer for recommending the lawyer's services.
THE WITNESS: Are you asking if that was my testimony?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that your understanding of the rule?

Page 63

THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: What is your understanding of the rule?
THE WITNESS: My understanding of the rule is, as relevant here, that giving something of value -- I mean, it's easier if I give the lawyer's names, but if Labaton gave something of value to Chargois to recommend Labaton's services, and it wasn't in the context of a fee-sharing agreement, then it might well be taken back to 7.2(b), and that would be true in the model rules or in Massachusetts.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you. And is that why you believe that subsection 5, the exception, is surplusage?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think it's surplusage because, even without that language, in all of the states that don't have that language, it's understood that fee-sharing arrangements are not violations of 7.2(b), even if, in the context of the fee-sharing arrangement, a recommendation is made.

And so I believe that the Massachusetts rule is, even without that language, it would come out the same.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, let me direct your attention to page 16 of your report, specifically to footnote 13. And footnote 13 reads, "I am unaware of any drafting history suggesting that the Massachusetts drafters intended Rule 7.2(b) to apply where lawyers enter into fee-division agreements that are generally permitted by Rule 1.5(e), but that do not fully satisfy Rule 1.5(e)'s procedural requirement."
Could you explain that analysis? What do you mean by that?
A. By that sentence?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. Okay. 1.5(e) has both a substantive and a procedural requirement. The substantive requirement is that the total fee has to be reasonable, and that's, I think, the main point of the rule.

And so if you look at the Saggese decision, it says that the purpose of the rule is to make sure that, in the context of a fee-sharing arrangement, the total fee is not excessive, but there's also a procedural requirement.
The current rule, the procedural requirement, includes both notice and written consent. In the rule, as it existed at the time, it didn't require the writing, but I -- it required notice of a fee-sharing arrangement and consent.
In the Saggese case, they use the term, I think, "imperfect fee splitting arrangement" to express a situation where you have a fee-sharing arrangement that would be permissible, generally, under 1.5(e) or under the prior code provision, but that the procedural aspect of this was not fully complied with.
What I -- and that is my understanding of the potential argument that may be made here about what happened here. I don't think anybody is arguing, as I understand, that the total fee was unreasonable, but I think there's a suggestion in some of what I've read, and in the questions that have been asked, that the procedural requirement was not perfectly complied with.

So what I wanted to know was, in that kind of situation, if there is a recommendation that's made in the context of an imperfect fee-sharing arrangement, might 7.2(b) apply to that recommendation.

And so one of the questions I wanted to know was whether, from what I could tell of the drafting history, and I only saw, you know, what was published, obviously, I have no insight in the conversations that took place, was there anything in the drafting history of 7.2(b) and 1.5(e) to suggest that an imperfect -- a procedurally imperfect fee-sharing arrangement that involved a recommendation might violate 7.2(b) because there was compensation for recommendation of the lawyer's services.

And what I'm saying here is I'm not aware of anything in the drafting history that suggests that the Massachusetts drafters meant 7.2(b) to apply to that situation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask you this? Is your view that 7.2(b) does not -- is not implicated by what you call an imperfect fee-sharing arrangement, is that something that would go to the nature of any sanction or discipline under 7.2(b) or is that your view simply as a matter of law, that if 1.5(e) is not complied with then 7.2(b) even if it is not complied with, does not apply?

THE WITNESS: I would say the latter. My opinion is that 7.2(b), where a recommendation is made in the context of an imperfect fee-sharing arrangement does not apply. 1.5(e), obviously, would apply. And so if you have a fee-sharing arrangement that's generally subject to 1.5(e), and you don't have, under today's rule, for example, if you don't have a writing, you have consent, but it's oral, you have notice, you have, you know, an imperfect fee-sharing arrangement because the procedural aspect isn't complied with, even though the total fee is reasonable, I think that would be a violation of 1.5(e). Whether it's sanctioned or not is a different question, but I don't think it would be a violation of 7.2(b) for reasons I express in my report, which I would be happy to explain.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. So your view is that, if it's an imperfect attempt to comply with 1.5(e), 7.2(b) simply has nothing to say about discipline or sanction or anything else? It's simply not a violation at all of 7.2(b)?

THE WITNESS: Well, first of all, you need a recommendation. Otherwise, 7.2(b) doesn't even kick in. But if there is a recommendation made in the context of the procedurally imperfect fee-sharing arrangement, I do not believe 7.2(b) applies, period.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Suppose there's no attempt at all, I'm not saying that happened here, but just suppose there's no attempt at all to comply with 1.5(e), no notice to the client of division of fees, no consent by the client, just a bare recommendation and a payment for that. Would 7.2(b) then be implicated?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think it could be. If it's not a fee-sharing arrangement, but it's a pure payment for a recommendation, I think 7.2(b) could apply.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So your distinction there as to the inapplicability of 7.2(b) rests on imperfect compliance?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: In this case, it rests on two things. One is there's not a recommendation, but leaving that aside, where there is a recommendation, yes, I think there's a difference between imperfect compliance because you still have a fee-sharing arrangement that's generally subject to 1.5(e) and something that's not a fee-sharing arrangement that's not subject to 1.5(e).

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is another way of saying this, if a lawyer attempts to comply with 1.5(e), but falls short, gives notice to the client that a referral fee may be paid, but falls short of the specific requirements, at that point, 7.2(b) falls away and has nothing to say about the lawyer's conduct.

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't describe it that way. I would say that 1.5(e) governs fee-sharing arrangements, and 7.2(b) does not govern fee-sharing arrangements, and so if you have a fee-sharing arrangement that doesn't adequately comply with the requirements of 1.5(e), then you have a violation of 1.5(e). That's what the rule is there to do, to govern fee-sharing arrangements.

7.2(b) is there to govern payments to others for recommending the lawyer's services. In general, the history of it wasn't about payments to lawyers. It was about, you know, ambulance chasers or things like that.

I think that conceivably can apply to payments of lawyers if lawyers are acting as ambulance chasers. The fact that they have a law license doesn't make them privileged to chase ambulances, but a 1.5(e) fee-sharing arrangement is not ambulance chasing.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Let me see if we can agree on this, then, because I think I do understand you now.

For disciplinary purposes, when a lawyer has a fee-sharing agreement, imperfect or not -- let's take yours, imperfect. A lawyer has an imperfect fee-sharing agreement with another lawyer that fails to comply with 1.5(e). 7.2(b) is not implicated at all for purposes of discipline. It falls only under 1.5(e); is that correct?

THE WITNESS: That's fair.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Thank you.

Page 72

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Let me just circle back to --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I just want to close the loop.

A complete failure to even attempt to comply, no notice, no consent by the client, no notice to the client, no consent by the client, just a bare recommendation, that implicates 7.2(b), yes?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So the question, to me, would be are you paying for the recommendation, period. Or do you have a fee-sharing arrangement?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm asking you to assume -- I'm asking you to assume that all there is is a recommendation and no attempt to comply with 1.5(e), no notice to the client, no consent by the client.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, again, if it's a pure payment, for example, I'll give you

Page 73

$10,000 for making a recommendation. I think that's within 7.2.

If it's I'll pay you $10,000 if I snag the client, if you make a recommendation, I think that's within 7.2.

If you have a fee-sharing arrangement and the fee, total fee is reasonable, but you didn't do the procedural stuff that you're supposed to do, I think that's a 1.5(e) problem.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in that latter situation, you've called out 1.5(e) occupies the field totally, and 7.2(b) has nothing to say about it?

THE WITNESS: Right. I think, if it's a fee-sharing arrangement, that's generally governed by 1.5(e), it's governed by 1.5(e).

I think the disciplinary authorities in Massachusetts have the full range of discipline available to them based on how serious they think the Rule 1.5 violation is.

So whether or not it's 1.5(e) or 7.2

doesn't limit their disciplinary authority, but I think that the authorities would look to 1.5(e) as the basis for discipline.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You've read Professor Gillers' report?
THE WITNESS: I did.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So perhaps this is where you part company with him?
THE WITNESS: We definitely see it differently here.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the point at which you part company with him is what happens if a lawyer fails to comply with 1.5(e). I believe Professor Gillers would say, if the lawyer does not comply with 1.5(e), then you are into 7.2(b).
Your view is that so long as there is an attempt to comply with 1.5(e), 7.2(b) is not implicated at all; is that right?
THE WITNESS: I wouldn't put it that way. I'd say if you have a fee-sharing arrangement, that's generally governed by

Page 75

1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: How is that different than what I said, please?
THE WITNESS: Could you read back what the judge said?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm truly trying to understand where you and Professor Gillers part company.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: So I'm not sure what you mean by "an attempt to comply." So if by attempt to comply you mean there's a fee-sharing arrangement, but you don't adequately give notice or adequate consent or adequate writing, then I would agree with that. But since I didn't know exactly what you meant --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I will accept it. That's what I meant.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me just follow up on that, Professor.
Does a client's refusal to consent to an agreement to divide fees take it out of 1.5(e) so that 7.2(b) applies?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm sorry. Could you ask that again?
Q. Sure. Let's say the client refuses to consent to an agreement to divide fees. That takes it out of 1.5(e), correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't understand the question. Where is the recommendation here? So far, in your question, there's not a recommendation.
Q. And then there's a recommendation, but the precedent to that or the follow-up to that, I should say, is the client then says I'm not going to consent to that agreement.
A. Was there a payment for the recommendation?
Q. Yes.
A. So can you just tell me the sequence of events?
Q. So there is an agreement between counsel for recommendation to divide fees.

Page 77

There is a payment for that, and then the client says, I didn't agree to that.
Under your analysis, what does that mean?
A. So, again -- so lawyer A says to lawyer B, please recommend my services to the client, and pays lawyer B, at that point, to make the recommendation?
Q. Yes.
A. That doesn't sound like fee splitting to me. It sounds like payment for recommendation.
Q. Okay. Let me just back up a little bit. And this is an assumption I want you to make, a hypothetical assumption.
A prospective client consults with Attorney Jones, who says I don't handle that kind of work, but let me introduce you to Attorney Smith.
Now, my question is, would it be rational for the client to conclude that Attorney Jones is recommending Attorney Smith?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I would say it would not be irrational.

Page 78

Q. It would not be irrational?
A. Right.
Q. So it would be rational?
A. Yeah.
Q. And, in this particular case, would it not be irrational for Executive Director Doane to conclude, in light of the fact that Chargois has contacted a state senator who's made an introduction to Mr. Doane, that Mr. Doane has agreed to sit down with Chargois and Labaton Attorney Eric Belfi, and Chargois and Belfi, in fact, do go and meet with Mr. Doane, would it not be irrational for Mr. Doane to conclude that Chargois is recommending Eric Belfi and Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Do you want me to view that as a pure hypothetical or do you want me to view it in the context of what I know or something else?
Q. I want you to assume those facts are true, and tell me if, based on those facts, just as you did for the previous hypothetical, you can conclude that it would not be irrational or it would be rational, to put it another way, for Doane to conclude that Chargois is recommending Eric Belfi?

Page 79

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. So, again, it's hard for me to -- if assuming I could remember what you said, it would be hard for me to separate it from what I know in this case and view it as the equivalent of Smith and Jones.
In the context of this case, where Doane apparently doesn't know Chargois from a hole in the wall, so that Chargois' recommendation, even if there were one, that was explicit, these guys are terrific lawyers, wouldn't mean anything to Doane; where Chargois doesn't do this kind of work, and so doesn't even have a basis for forming a judgment about whether Labaton is terrific; where, in order to get Arkansas Teachers as a client, you have to basically go through an RFQ process; where, in fact, Labaton basically pitches its own qualifications, I don't think that, in the context of this case, there's an implied or express or meaningful recommendation.

I don't know what Doane would think, and whatever Doane thinks, I doubt he's irrational. So I'm sure whatever he, in fact, thought was rational.
But, to me, there's a sort of angels dancing on the head of a pin quality to your question because you have to think about the purpose of the rule, right?
The purpose of the rule is to make sure that clients aren't -- or prospective clients aren't misled to think that somebody is making a disinterested recommendation that would influence the client because they are trusted by the client when, in fact, it's not disinterested, it's paid for.
Nobody in Doane's situation, if there is a recommendation made, is going to give it any weight. Nobody is going to think that Chargois is disinterested since, you know, Chargois presumably wants to collaborate with Labaton. Nobody is going to be -- the purposes of the rule are not implicated at all.
And so to parse the meaning of the word "recommendation" and then to parse what Chargois thinks he remembers having said or what one imagines having been said or what the implications are of the meeting seems, I don't want to say ridiculous, because I think that would be sort of unfairly derogatory, but I just don't think it gets at what Rule 7.2(b) is trying to accomplish, and I don't think that a disciplinary authority or a court exercising disciplinary authority would think that the rule was violated here.

Q. But that's not what I asked you.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I don't know what you're asking me, then. I thought it was a responsive answer.
Q. All of those things that you cited that made this a non-recommendation, including the RFQ, including what you claim Doane knew about Chargois' familiarity with Labaton, what could Chargois have done or said that would have made it a recommendation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, I think if Chargois said, I'm familiar with Labaton's qualifications and the nature of the work that they do, and they do excellent work as -- on behalf of institutional investors in class actions, I would think that's a recommendation.

I would also think it's meaningless and not the sort of thing that a disciplinary authority would care about, but I think it would be, technically, on the language of the rules, defined in the comment that would be a recommendation.

Q. But didn't you say earlier that even if Chargois had said to Doane, I recommend these people, that Doane would have discounted it?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Well, based on what I understand in this case, Chargois' recommendation would not be significant the way it would be if a client's general counsel or trusted lawyer friend made a recommendation of a lawyer to represent that individual, because, A, there's a whole process, the RFQ process that you have to go through here; B, Doane is a pretty sophisticated person acting on behalf of a fairly sophisticated client.

So I don't think the problems that the rule is directed at would be implicated even if there were a recommendation, but, of course, Chargois could have made a recommendation.

Q. By your view, an attorney can say to another attorney, I highly recommend this person, this attorney, and you're not prepared to accept, on face value, that in every case that would constitute a recommendation?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. Are you asking if that's what I said or if that's what I think?

Q. If that's what you think.

A. No. I think, if a lawyer recommends or, rather, if someone recommends a lawyer's services, I recommend this lawyer, that's a recommendation under the rule.

Is it something that the disciplinary authorities would regard as a violation of 7.2(b), that they would pursue in disciplinary cases? It depends on the context.

Here, I think the context makes any recommendation by Chargois, if one was made, trivial, and not something that implicates the purposes of the rule.

It doesn't create the harms against which the rule was designed to protect. It's not something that a serious disciplinary authority would care about and may not be something that they would even think violates the rule, because the rules, in the end of the day, are supposed to be rules of reason, and where the purposes of the rules are not implicated, oftentimes, they are not thought to be violated.

But, of course, a recommendation is a recommendation.

Q. Thank you. And, again, would it be rational for Doane to conclude, in light of the services that Chargois claimed had happened, if they were true, that Chargois was recommending Labaton?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I don't know what Doane thought, but if Doane thought that Chargois was implicitly vouching for the quality of Labaton's work, based on the very little knowledge that Chargois had, I don't think it would implicate -- violate 7.2(b), but whatever he thought, he would have thought. He wasn't an irrational person.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: This raises an interesting question of your view of the interpretation of 7.2(b).

Is it viewed from an objective standard or from a subjective standard? Do you understand what I'm getting at? In other words, do you view it objectively, what an objective, disinterested person would look at the rule, or subjectively by virtue of the intent of the "recommender" and the recipient of the recommendation?

THE WITNESS: So I think the rule has a subjective quality to it, but most of the rules, and this one included, are also objective.

So the rule says a lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services. So there is a subjective aspect to this in that the question is, what did Labaton think it was giving money to Chargois for.

So if Labaton thought they were buying a car -- if Labaton thought they were buying a car from Chargois, and that's what they thought they were giving the money for, and they don't get a car, they get a recommendation, then I don't think Labaton violated the rule. So to that extent, it's subjective, but what is a recommendation? That, I think, is an objective standard.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you believe, based on the facts that you know here, that Labaton did not think that Mr. Chargois was making a recommendation of Labaton to Mr. Doane?
THE WITNESS: I haven't seen anything, and I read deposition transcripts of three Labaton lawyers, I didn't see anything there that indicated they thought they were buying recommendations.

Page 87

They thought they were -- that Chargois was making, as I understand it, was making introductions, and that was the word that I saw over and over again.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or as you put it, a facilitation of the relationship?
THE WITNESS: That's my description. I think the word that was used in the testimony was introduction.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you don't think that Labaton, in asking, from Labaton's perspective, in asking Mr. Doane for a meeting to hear about Labaton's services, that there was an implicit recommendation, that they expected from Mr. Chargois an implicit recommendation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: From what I've read, not only in the transcripts but also in some of the documents, Labaton was pitching its own services. This wasn't the kind of situation that 7.2(b) is concerned about, where a client has a relationship with lawyer A, who it trusts or actually, if you're talking about 7.2(b), with person A, who the prospective client trusts, and person A recommends a lawyer and the prospective client relies on that recommendation.

I think, here, Labaton pitched its services when Doane went up to New York to visit Labaton. They pitched their services when they made the response to the RFQ. I think that -- from what we now know if, in fact, Chargois had no relationship with Arkansas Teachers, but cold called Doane, any, quote/unquote, recommendation would have been trivial, de minimus, meaningless for purposes of 7.2.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you think Labaton engaged Chargois to make this introduction with no expectation whatsoever that Mr. Chargois would say something positive about Labaton?
THE WITNESS: I don't know what Labaton's expectation was, but my understanding, from what I read of what they were paying for, was not recommendations, but door-opening introductions.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And following up on that, implicit in the kind of door opening that they were asking Mr. Chargois to do, is not a recommendation of services.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: In my reading of the transcripts, I didn't see it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why on earth would somebody ask somebody to make a recommendation of services for purposes of an introduction if they didn't think it was going to be a positive recommendation?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me rephrase that to be fair.
Why on earth would somebody ask somebody to make an introduction, who is familiar with that lawyer's services and ability to serve a client, and not believe that the person who is making the introduction would say something positive about the law firm?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: You are asking the abstract or in the context of this case?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can take it any way you want. I'm asking you to -- I'm asking you to impose a little common sense and understanding of human nature. That's all I'm asking you to do.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So in the context of this case, Labaton wanted to get a face-to-face meeting with Doane. It wanted to get its foot in the door.
What it cared about was an opportunity to pitch its services. It wasn't looking to Chargois to pitch its services. It was going to pitch its own services. It was going to explain its own qualifications.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that exclusive? Because it's going to pitch its own services, is that exclusive of believing that Mr. Chargois would also put his seal of approval on their services?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: No, they are not exclusive. But, you know, I can only testify based on the facts I'm given, which include depositions, which -- where I think really able and vigorous lawyers had the opportunity to question three Labaton lawyers about what they thought. And I didn't see in there, and maybe I missed it, but I didn't see in their testimony where they said they thought that they were paying Chargois for a recommendation for something that comes within 7.2(b), and as I read it, it was clear that that's not what they wanted, because they were capable of explaining their own value, explaining their own qualifications, explaining their own experience, explaining why they should be hired to monitor the Arkansas Teachers', you know, stock holdings.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So, in your view, all Mr. Chargois was doing was making a cold call and opening the door.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that right?
THE WITNESS: I'm not -- A, I wasn't there, so I have no personal view. B, I'm not the fact finder here. But C, based on what I've read, I didn't see any evidence of a recommendation. I just didn't see it. And the language in which everybody has talked about this, that I noticed in the transcripts, was introduction, not recommendation.
So I didn't see that that's what Labaton thought it was paying for. I didn't see that's what Chargois actually did. I just didn't see it. And if I missed it, then I missed it.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. But you've testified that even if there was the language of a recommendation, that that would not necessarily be dispositive for you that there was a recommendation in this case, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. If there's a recommendation, there's a recommendation. Is it something that I think, in the context of this case, would violate 7.2(b)? Well, first of all, I don't because there was a fee-sharing arrangement, but leaving that aside, I think that, in the context of this case, it's so trivial or de minimus or meaningless, it does not implicate the purposes of the rule or create the harms that the rules is designed to protect against.
So I think there's a pretty good argument that the rule itself is not violated, even if you want to call this a recommendation.
Q. When was the fee-sharing agreement perfected in this case?
A. I don't know what you mean by "perfected."
Q. Well, when was it --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Executed?
Q. -- executed or drafted?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, in my recollection of the testimony, is that there wasn't a signed agreement, or at least nobody found one. That there were writings that memorialized an understanding, and that the understanding was reached around 2008 or 2009. I think 2008.

Q. When were those e-mails, as far as you recall?
A. I don't recall the date.
Q. Assuming that those e-mails took place long after this introduction or recommendation or however we want to characterize the Doane meeting, what would you point to as constituting a division of fees agreement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. What would I point to? My understanding is that there was an oral understanding or arrangement, certainly, Chargois thought there was, that was reached before Arkansas Teachers formally retained Labaton as monitoring counsel, and that that then gets reflected in a draft agreement that nobody can find a signed copy of, and that may not have been signed.
It gets reflected in e-mail communications. It gets reflected in conversations.

Q. But prior to the Doane meeting, what can you point to as indicative of a fee-sharing agreement?
A. Prior to the Doane meeting?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I don't know the timing of the conversation that the Labaton and Chargois firms had concerning what -- their understanding about a fee-sharing arrangement, I don't know the timing.
Q. When did the clients, in this case, Arkansas, consent to the joint participation of Labaton?
MS. LUKEY: I'm sorry. In what manner? In what context? Are you talking about this case, State Street?
MR. SINNOTT: Yes, of course.
MS. LUKEY: In the context of State Street.
A. What do you mean by "the joint participation of Labaton"?
Q. I know you're familiar with 1.5 and 1.5(e). A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that the division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable.

You are very familiar with that, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. When was the client's consent effected with respect to Damon Chargois and Labaton in this matter?
A. Are you asking me, when did they give consent under -- that complied with 1.5(e) or are you asking something else?
Q. Yes, under 1.5(e).
A. I think, on the date that Arkansas Teachers signed the retention letter in the State Street Bank case, they gave consent that satisfied 1.5(e). I can't remember the date, but if I can look through the facts, I can --
Q. February of 2011, would that refresh your memory?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: February 8, does that refresh your recollection?

Page 97

MS. LUKEY: I will stipulate that's the date on the engagement letter.
A. Yeah. I am looking now at page 9 of my report.
Q. Before we discuss 1.5 at length, let me just ask you a couple of questions.
Do Massachusetts rules restrict the amount of money that a law firm can pay for an introduction?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. To pay them for an introduction? You're sort of putting this in the context of 1.5(e), in the context of a fee-sharing arrangement?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. So I think 1.5(e) requires that the total fee be reasonable. So that if a lawyer has a fee agreement with a client for the lawyer to receive an hourly rate or a percentage -- percentage fee basis or something else, the total fee has to be reasonable. I don't believe that 1.5(e) regulates how that total fee gets divided as between the lawyers who are in a fee-sharing arrangement under

Page 98

1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is that to say that there is no limit?
THE WITNESS: Well, it's limited by the total amount -- I'm sorry. I interrupted you.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If the total amount is reasonable, is that to say there is no limit on the amount that can be paid for an introduction pursuant to a fee-sharing agreement?
THE WITNESS: Well, assuming the fees are shared between two lawyers, one of whom makes an introduction, that's what they are being paid for?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And only that.
THE WITNESS: No, I don't think it regulates. Obviously, it's capped by the total fee and the total fee has to be reasonable, but it does not limit the amount that's paid out of the total share to the lawyer who made the introduction.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if, just hypothetically, it's not what we have here, before everybody objects, but if, just hypothetically, because I'm trying to understand your view, the division of fee provided 50 percent to the introducing lawyer, and the total fee was reasonable, there is no -- that's not a problem under Massachusetts rule?

THE WITNESS: That doesn't violate 1.5(e) or 1.5(a).
So, for example, let's suppose I'm a very wealthy lawyer, and I have made all the money I need to make, but I love trying cases and I'm looking for a client who I can represent in a constitutional challenge to, I don't want to complete the sentence because, you know, it will offend somebody, constitutional challenge to something that I don't like, and I say to a lawyer, if you can find me a client who has standing, I don't need the money, I'll give you half my fee to do this constitutional civil rights action, where I'm going to be entitled to fees, because the money means nothing to me. I want the challenge, the glory, you know, or take, for example, you know, David Boies and Ted Olsen, who did, you know -- you know, to them, I don't think the money meant anything. I thought making the point, arguing in the Supreme Court, there's a lot of it that gave them joy and was of great value to them.

I don't think, assuming they received a fee, that it would have been about the fee.
I don't think Rule 1.5(e) and 1.5(a) would have precluded Ted Olsen and David Boies from giving away their fee to anybody, including the person who introduced them to clients, who had standing, who were willing to stay the course, who were willing to be deposed, who were willing to be out in public, who were willing to be the face of the case.
I think that would have been perfectly fine under the Massachusetts rule.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: In such a case, do you think the client should be told the amount, where there is more than a relatively small share of the total fee, where the share is very large, do you think the client should be told that there is going to be a fee paid?

Page 101

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: That -- for the introduction that is very large?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So I guess you could take the question a number of different ways. I don't know -- if you're asking, is it required under 1.5(e) or under the Massachusetts rules? Generally, I'd say no.
If you're asking, is it best practices? I don't know. It kind of depends on whether and why it would be significant to the client. So I think it's contextual.
MR. SINNOTT: Can I suggest a break?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Fine.
MR. SINNOTT: We are going to take a

Page 102

15-minute break. So we will be back here at five minutes -- six minutes before 11. Let's call it five minutes before 11.
(Recess taken.)
MR. SINNOTT: We are back on the record. It's 11:00, and just to take the roll call of phone participants. Josh, are you there?
MR. SHARP: Yes.
MR. SINNOTT: And David? David Copley?
Okay. Linda? Linda, are you there?
MS. HYLENSKI: I'm here.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Thanks, Linda.
David, have you joined us?
Okay. So we have Josh and Linda on the phone line. Has anyone else joined us? Okay. Thank you.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, I wanted to just kind of close out my questioning on 7.2(b) before the break, but let me start with that and then we will move on.
On page 16 or 17 of your report, you say that -- I believe it's the bottom of page 16, that you are aware of no judicial decision.

A. Unaware.
MS. LUKEY: He said you are aware of none.
Q. I will read it, rather than paraphrasing it.
"I am unaware of any judicial decision arising in the disciplinary setting or any other context or any secondary authority holding that compensating a lawyer for a referral in the context of an imperfect fee-sharing arrangement violates Rule 7.2(b)."
Does the fact that courts or regulatory bodies have not discussed Rule 7.2(b) and 1.5(e) in a single opinion render those rules ineffective as written?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I think the rules are both effective as written if by effective you mean by effective in the law.
Q. So the rules are effective?
A. Both rules are effective.
Q. All right. And are you familiar with a New York ethics opinion and, obviously, I'll show you this because I can't imagine the numbers would resonate with you, New York Ethics Opinion 1128, New York State Bar Association Committee on Professional Ethics. Topic, referral fees, division of fees with the state and with other attorneys, Opinion Number 1128.

Page 104

MR. SINNOTT: And, Madam Court Reporter, if we can have that marked as an exhibit.
(Green Exhibit 5, New York Ethics Opinion 1128, New York State Bar Association Committee on Professional Ethics, marked for identification.)
A. (Perusing.)
Q. Have you seen this before, Professor?
A. I should have because I'm on the committee.
Q. Okay.
A. I wasn't involved in the drafting of it. I don't remember it, but I certainly had the opportunity to.

Page 105

Q. And would it be fair to state, based on your familiarity with New York and Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, that where there is a reference to 1.5(g) in this opinion, it's the equivalent of Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Except for bare referrals?
A. Are you asking if they are the same? They both deal with fee sharing among lawyers. Obviously, they are drafted differently.
Q. Okay. And that 7.2(a), as referred to here, is the equivalent of 7.2(b) in Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct?
A. It's the counterpart. They both deal with payments to somebody for a recommendation of a lawyer's services, but they are also drafted differently, I believe.
Q. All right. Thank you.
Now, obviously, this, as most opinions, are fact specific, but in looking at this opinion, would you agree with me that 7.2(b) or the New York equivalent, and 1.5(e) or the New York equivalent, are, in fact, discussed in a single opinion as applying to fee sharing between lawyers?

Page 106

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Are you asking whether this opinion refers to both rules? Yes.
Q. And it's an opinion relative to fee sharing between lawyers, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Among other things.
Q. Among other things. But you had not referred to this or reviewed this when you wrote your report, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. All right, sir. Let me talk about Labaton's compliance with 1.5(e) and, obviously, we touched on it during our discussion of 7.2(b), but because the language is important, let me just read it again.
"A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable."

Now, how did Labaton -- I want to you ask how Labaton met the requirements of 1.5(e). And we are going to refer to 1.5(e) here in the context of how it was written prior to February of -- as of February 2011, when the retention agreement was signed.
So what I want to ask you is this, Professor. Upon what information in the factual statement provided to you did you assume that Arkansas, and I'll use ATRS and Arkansas interchangeably, that Arkansas knew that Labaton would divide fees with lawyers who are not in the same firm?
A. Well, I relied, in part, on the draft retention letter from September 24, 2010 and the signed final retention letter of February 8, 2011, and on Mr. Hopkins -- well, I think -- I don't know if this was explicit in the facts I was given, but it's pretty clear that Mr. Hopkins understood that if this became a class action, there would be other lawyers involved in the class action who would be splitting the fees that were awarded by the court if it was a successful class action.

Q. I'm sorry. With respect to Mr. Hopkins, that last part, what was the information you relied on?
A. I don't remember if it was explicit in the facts given to me, but I think -- I assumed, and I think I made it clear in my report, that Mr. Hopkins understood that if the class action became a class action and was successful, that there would be other lawyers involved that would be receiving whatever fee the court ultimately awarded.
Q. And what do you base that assumption on, what facts?
A. Well, I now base it on the fact that he was a lawyer, he was a very attentive representative of the class representative, which had been a class representative in other class actions, that it's typical in class actions for there to be multiple lawyers involved, that, in general, in class actions, the court, if it's successful, the court awards the attorney's fee, that the multiple lawyers involved in class actions conventionally share the fee that's awarded by the court.

Page 109

I think, as a lawyer, he would have known that.
Q. So you infer knowledge on the part of Mr. Hopkins based on the fact that he's a lawyer, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. He's a lawyer. He's a lawyer for an entity that goes out of its way to become a class representative, that's been a class representative in other class actions, who, as I understand it, was regarded as being a pretty attentive, involved representative of the class representative in the lawsuit.
So I think it's a -- and when I drew that inference, the lawyers who retained me as an expert didn't contradict it. So I assume that it was something that they are prepared to prove.
Q. Aside from the fact that you had an experienced, highly-placed lawyer in Mr. Hopkins, what was Mr. Hopkins told about division of fees?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Are you asking my recollection of his testimony?

Page 110

Q. I'm asking you --
A. I have no personal knowledge of what he was told.
Q. Of course you don't have any knowledge, but as far as the facts that were presented to you, did you strictly rely on the fact that he was an experienced, well-placed lawyer, or were there other facts that led you to conclude that Hopkins was aware that Labaton would be working with Chargois & Herron moving forward?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. That's a different question from what you asked me before. Before, you were asking me about fee sharing generally. And my understanding is, and I can't imagine that it's disputed here, that Hopkins would have known, in general terms, that there would be fee sharing, that there would be more than one lawyer beyond the Labaton firm working on the matter, and that the ultimate fee awarded by the court, if there was one, would be shared among the lawyers.

Page 111

Now you're asking me about Chargois. So I just want to be clear that I wasn't testifying about Chargois.
Q. No, I understand.
But getting back to the fee sharing in general, is it your testimony that a client does not need to be informed of fee sharing?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Well, if there is fee sharing, then I think 1.5(e) required the lawyer to be informed that division of fees will be made.
Q. Okay. And how was Hopkins informed that a division of fees would be made?
A. Well, again, I think it's clear from the circumstances both that, in the draft retention letter and the February 8, 2011, retention letter, that Arkansas Teacher agreed that fees could be shared.
And I think it's a very, very strong assumption that Mr. Hopkins understood that there would, in fact, be fee sharing in this case, because that's conventionally how class actions worked, and he was familiar with how class actions worked.

Q. All right. So if you've got a experienced, savvy or well-placed lawyer --
A. If I -- and I apologize for interrupting -- certainly, as the case progressed, he knew that there were multiple lawyers involved in the case, because Labaton was not the only lawyer who appeared as counsel in this case, the Lieff Cabraser firm and the Thornton firm as well, and I -- though I don't recall whether it's specifically in the facts I was asked to assume, but it's certainly reflected in, I think, his testimony that, you know, that he was engaged. So he would have known that there were at least those three firms involved.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did you see in the record that, in fact, Labaton specifically advised Mr. Hopkins that Lieff and Thornton would be involved in the case on behalf of Arkansas?
THE WITNESS: I don't recall that, but if he did, then that's a better answer to the question I was giving than the ones I have been giving so far, because then he did specifically have notice that there would be fee sharing.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Fee sharing between those firms.
THE WITNESS: That's correct.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Was Hopkins aware that Labaton would be fee sharing specifically with Damon Chargois or his firm?
A. I don't believe so.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Not -- not until this -- the post -- whatever you call these proceedings.
Q. The investigation?
A. Yeah, if you -- yes.
Q. Did he need to be informed that Chargois & Herron would be part of a fee-sharing agreement?
A. Not under Rule 1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I follow up, please?
THE WITNESS: Sure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Under Rule 1.5(e), what is the extent of information required to be given to the client about a division of fees?

THE WITNESS: Well, the rule says, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, which, to me, means that a division of fees will be made. It doesn't say with whom or in what amount.
There are other Professional Conduct Rules that are explicit about what's required and/or are interpreted to require more, but I don't think this one did at the time.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So as long as the lawyer says to the client, we are going to divide fees with other lawyers, that complies with 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: As 1.5(e) existed in Massachusetts at the time, I believe so.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Putting aside Saggese, which did require a writing, putting aside Saggese.
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So no further explanation, no further information need to be -- need be given in order to fall under the protections of 1.5(e).

THE WITNESS: Well, if the client asks, then I think you give more information. So it's an invitation for a conversation, but I don't think the rule itself required you to give more information to a client who wasn't interested in hearing more or didn't express interest.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do we have the retention letter? I might be jumping ahead of you a little bit.
MR. SINNOTT: That's fine.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you have that?
MS. LUKEY: I have it.
MR. SINNOTT: It was introduced to both witnesses yesterday.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's mark this as a separate exhibit.
(Green Exhibit 6, Letter from Labaton Sucharow, dated February 8, 2011, marked for identification.)

Page 116

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So it's not a lengthy document, but there are several pages to it, a page and a half to two pages here.
Could I ask you to just look at that and indicate which part of that letter provides the information to the client that there would be a division of fees?
THE WITNESS: I think the paragraph at the top of page 2 provides the client's consent to a fee division, and I think the notice of the fee, that there would be a fee division.
This obviously provides notice that there could be a fee division, but that there would be, would be a combination of what you described before, that Arkansas Teacher was told that Lieff Cabraser and the Thornton firm would, in fact, be participating.
And I think Hopkins' general knowledge of the way these things work would have, combined with this, provided information that the client -- excuse me -- that a fee division would, in fact, be made.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you don't have to tell the client anything more than, under the Massachusetts rule and under Saggese, in effect, at the time -- I want to put aside the writing requirement, but you don't have to tell the client anything more than we are going to divide fees in this case.
THE WITNESS: As I read the rule, no, at that time. If the client asked, obviously, you would answer the client's questions. Here, the client didn't want to know and affirmatively indicated that, but the rule itself does not require more, as I read the rule.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. As regards Mr. Chargois now, and the agreement that Labaton had with Mr. Chargois, which portion of that paragraph that you've pointed to does Mr. Chargois fall under?
THE WITNESS: When you say "which portion does he fall under," are you meaning which portion provides consent to dividing fee --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Provides notice. And as to Mr. Chargois, which portion provides notice that Mr. Chargois, not him specifically, but that somebody who was involved in the case, as he was, was going to be involved.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So if you're asking what provides notice for -- that's required by the rule?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Uh-huh.

THE WITNESS: I think the rule requires informing the client that a division of fees will be made, and that the client was informed that a division of fees will be made.

It didn't require informing the client specifically with whom, all of the lawyers with whom fees would be divided. It didn't require specifically how the fee division will be made. It didn't require those things.

So I think that this is adequate consent. I think the notice is provided by this, together with other things, but I don't think that this specifically refers to Chargois. I think it permits the fee sharing with Chargois.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. But this paragraph does call out fee sharing for specific purposes, right?

THE WITNESS: It allows -- it authorizes Labaton to share fees with attorneys who serve as local counsel, serve as liaison counsel, who -- to provide fees as referral fees or to provide fees for other services performed in connection with the litigation.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's been a lot of discussion. You were an English major, apparently.

THE WITNESS: I was.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's been a lot of discussion about how to deconstruct that sentence. And I think there are a number of different ways. I don't know if you and I had similar grammar teachers who approached it similar, but I don't want to get into that.

Under which part of these permissive roles does Mr. Chargois fall in the context of the State Street case?

THE WITNESS: Right. I would say that, as I understand the facts, you could view the payment as a referral fee. You could view it as a payment for their availability to serve as liaison counsel, although, in fact, they didn't serve in that role, but I would say referral fee would probably be the more descriptive one.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. As you may or may not know, there has been a lot of discussion in this investigation about exactly what it was that Mr. Chargois was doing for his fee, and some disagreement, including by Mr. Chargois, who said he was not receiving a referral fee.

To him, he said -- his testimony was, we can get it out, this was not a referral fee. I asked him if he was local counsel in this case. No. Was he liaison counsel? No. Was this a referral fee? No. He said it was just an agreement. But put that aside.

Do you believe that what Mr. Chargois did in this case was a referral for purposes of being paid a referral fee?

MS. LUKEY: Objection to the first part.

THE WITNESS: So, as an English major, I would say, to parse your question, do you mean was this a referral fee within the meaning of 1.5(e), which specifically refers to referral fees? Was this a referral fee for purposes of Labaton's agreement with Arkansas Teacher? Or do you mean, is this a referral fee in some other sense?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's take it one by one.

Was, as you understand it within the meaning of the Rules of Professional Conduct, including the Massachusetts rule here, was this a referral fee?

THE WITNESS: So I would say that this was a payment that was permitted by 1.5(e). Whether you call it a referral fee or not, I don't think anything turns on that, because 1.5(e) itself doesn't limit the reasons for which you're sharing a fee with another lawyer.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Except for one thing, right? The contract here, the retention agreement, calls out the specific purposes for which payments may be divided, fees may be divided.
THE WITNESS: Well, you asked me to take it one at a time. So I was starting with 1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Oh, I see. I'm sorry.
THE WITNESS: So, again, whether it's a referral fee under 1.5(e) or not, I don't think anything turns on it. I tend to think it's a referral fee under 1.5(e), but you wouldn't need to -- you know, you wouldn't get interpretive opinions because whether it is or it isn't, the fee sharing is permitted.

Whether it is under the contract or not is a contract interpretation question, I guess. Since the contract was drafted by Labaton, you'd kind of construe it in light of what Arkansas Teachers understood because, generally, you construe ambiguities, if there is one here, against the lawyer drafter.
I don't know what Hopkins thought, but from what I gather, Hopkins thinks that this fee-sharing arrangement is fine.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Ex post facto?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: If you discredit his testimony, then there's no evidence about what he thought at all. So I don't know that you can draw the contrary conclusion.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's take it one at a time.
The contract permits, as you said,

Page 124

Labaton to allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as, and I'm going to read it the way you want to read it, not the other way that it could be read, but I will read it the way you want to read it, who serve as local counsel, right?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is there any possibility that, in this case to which this agreement applied, that Mr. Chargois' role could be construed as local counsel?
THE WITNESS: Well, from what I read, there was a lot of back and forth about what local counsel means as well. If, by local counsel, you mean a lawyer who's admitted to the local bar who appears before the court as local counsel, then, obviously, he's not local counsel.
If you mean somebody who's counsel in the location where the client is, I think he was willing to serve as local counsel, or at least Labaton thought he was here, which may be the same as liaison counsel.

Page 125

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. We are talking about at the time the contract was executed.
THE WITNESS: Right. My understanding is that Labaton -- and all I'm doing, by the way, I have no firsthand knowledge. I'm just drawing on my recollection of the testimony.
My understanding is Labaton thought that -- oh, I guess, by the time of the contract, they probably didn't expect Chargois to act as local counsel or as liaison counsel. They did at the time of the fee-sharing arrangement, I think.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's skip over referral fees for now, okay, and go to "or for other services performed in connection with the litigation," capital L, meaning the case, right?
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would you agree that he performed, he, Chargois, performed no other services in connection with the litigation?

Page 126

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So let's go back to referral fees.
Was this, what he was paid here, a referral fee for this litigation?
THE WITNESS: I guess I would need to know what you mean by referral fee for this litigation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You are the expert. I want to know what you think.
MS. LUKEY: You added another phrase.
THE WITNESS: You asked the question, is this a referral fee for this litigation.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm reading -- I am reading directly from the permissive use, according to the construction that he wants.
MS. LUKEY: But you added the phrase "for this litigation."
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
MS. LUKEY: It says "referral fee."
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. I'm sorry. In connection with the litigation, in connection with the litigation. That's what it says.

Page 127

MS. LUKEY: Objection. It's a question of which phrase is modifying on the end portion as well, and I'm not -- that's up to him.
THE WITNESS: Well, I was going to make a similar point.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sure you were. That's the problem. But go ahead. We have had this discussion.
MS. LUKEY: I really respectfully object.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I know, Joan.
MS. LUKEY: And this is something you and I need to discuss.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: We are going to have a direct discussion about this. I promise you.
MS. LUKEY: We are going to have a very direct discussion, because it's very troubling to me, the things you have said.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And me, Joan.

Page 128

I have been doing this for 27 years, and I have been teaching evidence for 27 years. I know exactly what a speaking objection is and I know exactly what Rule 30(c) permits. We will have a discussion about it later, okay.
MS. LUKEY: I hope that we will, because this has been troubling me deeply, and I think I have been maligned unfairly. I just want that to be on the record.
And I respectfully request that you refrain from making the comments, such as "I'm sure you did" to this witness. That was unnecessary, sir.
So let's go ahead, and let's you and I have a talk, because this is a serious matter.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It is serious, Joan.
MS. LUKEY: More so to me than to you, I suspect. And we should discuss it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
MR. HEIMANN: I missed the question.

Page 129

I'm sorry. Is there a question pending?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Good point, Richard. Let me re-ask the question.
We have gone through the other permitted roles and services that were permitted by the agreement.
"Who serve as local counsel or liaison counsel," I think you said that Mr. Chargois, in connection with this case, did not serve as either local or liaison counsel, correct?
THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I think we have also agreed that he provided no other services in this litigation, correct?
THE WITNESS: Correct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So that gets us to referral fees.
My question to you is, in this litigation, was this a referral fee?
THE WITNESS: Okay. I think it's fairly construed as a referral fee, and I gather, after the fact, Mr. Hopkins thinks so as well.

Page 130

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Which begs the question, what is a referral fee?
THE WITNESS: I don't think it's a defined term in the Massachusetts rule, so I think it generally refers to a fee given to another lawyer for referring a client, which could be any number of things.
It could be a lawyer who has an established lawyer/client relationship with the client who recommends the lawyer's services. It could be a lead. It could be something that leads to the creation of a lawyer/client relationship. I don't think it has any specific meaning.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's just a phrase without meaning?
THE WITNESS: No, it's not without meaning. I think it's not a specifically defined term. I think some of the terms in Rules of Professional Conduct are defined. There's a definition, section 1.0, that gives you definitions. I don't think this is defined, at least as far as I recall, in the Massachusetts rules.

Page 131

If you're talking about what it means in here, in the contract, it's not specifically defined either. So I can't speak to what Arkansas Teachers and Labaton understood at the time. All I can tell you is what I think it means, and I did.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So on page 17 of your opinion, if you could turn to that, please.
At the bottom, you cite Massachusetts Legal Ethics, Substance and Practice, at page 185.
Do you see that?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And it says, explaining that "unlike most every other jurisdiction in the nation, Massachusetts permits an attorney's fee to be divided with a lawyer who does not practice in the firm of the primary lawyer (i.e., a referral fee) even if the referring lawyer does nothing more than refer the matter."
I should complete the sentence, which is "quintessentially a Massachusetts practice and tradition."

Page 132

Is there not an implication there that referral fee refers to referring the matter, being the case at hand?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Are you asking my reading of the -- the secondary authority, the Massachusetts Legal Ethics, Substance and Practice?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Which you cited.
THE WITNESS: Yeah. I think that in the context of this quote, that the author of that secondary authority is referring to referring matters, not referring clients. I think that's the normal -- not normal. I think that's the -- ordinarily what happens. It's probably rarer to refer a client who has multiple matters in sequence than it is to refer somebody who has just one matter.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You earlier characterized the relationship that

Page 133

Mr. Chargois, as between Labaton and Arkansas, as being an introduction.
THE WITNESS: I think that's how the witnesses characterized it.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You characterized it in your report as a facilitation.
THE WITNESS: Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Either one. Take either one.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you agree that it was not an introduction or a facilitation for this matter, the State Street matter?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't think the State Street matter was specifically contemplated at the time, but it was certainly contemplated that it was an introduction for purposes of Labaton eventually representing Arkansas in fee-generating class action cases, not simply to represent them as an unpaid monitor of their stock portfolio.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that is sufficient, in your view, to be a referral fee within the contemplation of the February 8 letter?
THE WITNESS: You know --
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Again, I would say I'm not here as a contract expert. I don't know what Mr. Hopkins and Labaton understood this to mean.
I do understand that Mr. Hopkins has no objection to this. So, presumably, thinks it's contemplated by the letter.
I don't see why it wouldn't be a referral fee within the contemplation of the agreement, but I certainly think it's a referral fee within my understanding of the term.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So a lawyer who makes an initial introduction, three years before, for a general monitoring relationship which may lead to cases or not, but may lead to cases, thereby has a referral fee for every individual case in which that client is involved? Yes? Is that your view?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: So I'm not sure I understand the question.
Are you asking me if, assuming there is such an arrangement --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: -- to receive a fee growing out of future cases, whether that's fairly described as a referral fee?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: For the introduction.
THE WITNESS: I think, if the introduction leads to future cases for that client and there's an agreement that the lawyer receiving the referral will divide fees in those future cases, then that's fairly described as a referral fee, and I will just give you -- I will give you an example.
I chaired for three years the committee that oversees the New York City

Bar's referral service. And they believe that what they were doing was referring lawyers to prospective clients. And their rules provided for a fee. And it was a fee based on a percentage of the fee that was generated, growing out of the referral.
And I know, at one time, we had the conversation, what if we refer a client and multiple matters develop in sequence, not just the matter that we made the referral for, can we seek a fee for those?
Now, I don't remember whether, in the end, they decided to receive the fee -- seek the fee or not. That was a question of what the local rules of the referral service were, but I think, if they -- their rules provided for a fee in sequential matters, that would be, in an equivalent situation with a lawyer, not a referral service, it would be a referral fee.
I don't know why the fee for the first matter would be a referral fee, which I assume everyone agrees it would be, and for successive matters would be called something else. I'm not sure what else you would call it.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Successive unrelated matters with different parties, different roles?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, the same client.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Same client.
THE WITNESS: Right. So if you make an arrangement that I will receive a referral fee for this particular matter, and future matters, I won't receive a fee, that's fine. But if you make an arrangement, I will receive a fee for the first class action and any other class actions in which Arkansas is a class representative, I don't know what else you would call that fee other than a referral fee. It seems to be fairly characterized as a referral fee.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: How about a finder's fee?

Page 138

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Doesn't that sound like a finder's fee?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I have never seen the term "finder's fee" used in connection with lawyers referring clients.
I suppose you could -- you know, I don't know what the finder's fee conventionally means, but I've never seen it used in this context.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So a fee that is paid across the board for all cases arising out of the introduction of the client is a referral fee within the division of fee rule, the Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: Well, I guess I would say again, nothing turns on that, because 1.5(e) doesn't limit the purposes for which you are sharing the fee with a lawyer, but I do think it's fairly characterized as a referral fee under 1.5(e) of Massachusetts.

Page 139

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So do you not agree, then, with the characterization in the secondary source you cited on page 17, even if the referring lawyer does nothing more than refer the matter?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Well, I agree with the source, and I quoted the source.
I don't think it goes on to say, however, if the referring lawyer did not refer this specific matter, but merely referred the client or referred a previous matter involving the client, then that's not a referral fee under the rule. It doesn't say that.
So I don't read into this an implied exclusion of the referral fee in this case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does the fact that the client was not referred in this matter say anything about the level of information that should be given to the client or the nature of the consent that should be given by the client?

Page 140

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: When you say "should," I'm assuming you mean required under Rule 1.5(e)?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
THE WITNESS: No.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So there is no obligation in this case for Labaton to have said anything more than we are going to -- under the rule, anything more than we are going to be allocating fees to other lawyers in this case?
THE WITNESS: And get consent.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And get consent to that.
THE WITNESS: Yes. I think that's what the rule required.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does the rule require informed consent?
THE WITNESS: Not by its terms.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So we would not read into the rule any level of information beyond that which you've said need be given -- need be given to the client?

THE WITNESS: Right. I don't think you could discipline a lawyer -- well, I mean, the rule is not in effect now, but at the time, I don't think a lawyer in Massachusetts would be disciplined for failing to give additional information beyond what the rule itself, on its face, requires, unless asked, of course.
In that case, I think you have to be candid with the client and answer the questions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So simply saying there is going to be a division of a fee is sufficient?
THE WITNESS: Yes. I think if you say I'm going to be bringing in other lawyers outside the Labaton firm, we are going to divide fees, and the client says, I don't want to know about the fee-sharing arrangement, I don't care, that's fine with me, I don't think you have to shove more information down the client's throat.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is there an implication in what you've just said, and we can have the court reporter read it back, that bringing in other lawyers in this case means that those lawyers are going to provide some value to the case, some service in the case?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Well, you know, I made up a quote. It wasn't, I think, the only way in which you could satisfy the rule.

I think if you say to the client, which the client already knows, I'm going to be dividing fees with other lawyers outside my firm, and the client has no interest in knowing more and affirmatively tells you that, I think you have satisfied the rules that the client gives consent.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Suppose the rule is required to -- is read, rather, to require something more. And at the time the agreement is made, nothing more is told other than what we have talked about, that there will be a division of a fee, but later the client learns that, in fact, the division of the fee is going to go to a lawyer who did no work in the case, didn't appear in the case, didn't appear on the Lodestar petitions, is it appropriate for the client later to ratify the fee?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So I'm not sure exactly what you're asking. I don't think there's anything inappropriate about a client ratifying. I mean, that goes to, I suppose, how the client construes its own interests.

Clients can do what they want to. I'm assuming what you really mean is, is the ratification effective in some way to --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: So I guess the question -- one question, I wonder, I'm trying to wind back, your original question is, when you say assuming the rule required more, more disclosure than was given.

Page 144

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.

THE WITNESS: Whether you mean the rule itself or do you mean the Saggese case or do you mean something else?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's broaden it, and say existing law at the time required something more than just a bare statement that there would be a division of fees.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's say that -- let's assume it's read that way. And the client knows nothing more until much later and says, oh, it's okay, I ratify it retroactively.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that ratification effective?

THE WITNESS: Apparently, in Massachusetts, under Saggese, it's effective. I didn't write the opinion.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: What if the client refuses, then what?

MS. LUKEY: To ratify?

Page 145

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah. What if the client says, hey, wait a minute. I didn't know that you were going to be giving a very large fee to somebody who added no value to this case, did nothing in this case, never appeared in the case, was not disclosed to the court, I'm not going to approve that, I'm not going to agree to it, then what?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Then what for -- with regard to the lawyer's obligation to the other lawyer, the lawyer's contractual obligation to the client, for discipline or something else?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: The lawyer's obligation to the client.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I think that if the client refused to pay the fee, and I'm taking it out of this case now, so let's suppose a conventional case where a lawyer and client have a conventional fee arrangement, for whatever, $15 an hour or a percentage or whatever.

And then, when it came time at the end -- okay. When it came time to pay the fee, the client said, you violated 1.5(e) because you didn't give me adequate notice when I agreed to the fee-sharing arrangement, I suppose you could have a contract dispute between the lawyer and the client regarding whether and to what extent the fee agreement is enforceable and, if not, you know, whether there's quantum meruit or something else, and I can say I have not studied the issue of how it would play out in Massachusetts at the time, but I think that, you know, a court would have to figure out whether this is a substantial breach of the fee agreement and whether it's meaningful for purposes of enforcing the fee.
I would think a court would say, where you have a fee-sharing agreement that was consented to, but there was another piece of information that wasn't disclosed, you would probably want to know whether that was really meaningful information or not, and whether it would have made a difference. And if it would have made a difference to the client, then how does that factor into a contract action.

That's all beyond what I've looked at in this case.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: If a court were to find that it was, in your word, meaningful information that the client should have had, would that take it out of 1.5(e)?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I'm not sure what you mean. I was talking about a contract.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me rephrase the question.
I want you to assume that a court were to find that there was insufficient information given to the client to procure the client's consent under 1.5(e), and the client says, I'm not agreeing to it, you never told me about this, this or this, and I'm not agreeing to this division of fee, would that take the division of fee out of 1.5(e)?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't know what you mean by "out of 1.5(e)." Do you mean would it violate 1.5(e)?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can put it that way.
THE WITNESS: Okay. So if you have a rule different from the Massachusetts rule that requires specific information to be given and the specific information isn't given, then I guess, by definition, that violates 1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So another way of saying this might be that, as we read 1.5(e) at the time, where it says "may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fee will be made," construction would turn on the phrase "informing the client" and what that means; is that right?

Page 149

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think that the conversation we are having is about the meaning of informing the client.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. And your view, and if I'm misstating your view, please tell me, that it is sufficient to comply with 1.5(e) to simply tell the client that a division of fee will be made; is that right?
THE WITNESS: That's exactly what the rule says.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No further information need be given?
THE WITNESS: The rule doesn't provide for it, unlike the rules of some other jurisdictions.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: All of that calls into question who the client is in a class action in which the contemplated case is a class action, and it is contemplated that the client will be the class representative. Then the question is who the client is, right?

Page 150

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I don't agree with you.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It says "the client," right?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It does say "the client." Are you asking me my reason?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I will.
THE WITNESS: The rule does say "the client."
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you agree that the retention agreement here contemplates Labaton serving as a class representative in a class action.
MR. HEIMANN: I think you misspoke.
MS. LUKEY: You said Labaton.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. Arkansas. Thank you.
THE WITNESS: The agreement contemplates the possibility that Arkansas Teacher will be class representative in a class action.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So, at the point at which a class is certified, does a class become a client?

Page 151

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think the class probably becomes a client, the nascent class before the class is certified.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Is there then an obligation, and I do want you to assume that Arkansas, I almost said Labaton again, I do want you to assume that Arkansas is the class representative for the class.
Is the class a client for purposes of this retention agreement?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Not in my reading of this, no.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume further that, at the time the class is certified, Labaton is named lead counsel for the class, and that that's contemplated in the agreement.
Is the class a client of Labaton?
THE WITNESS: The class is a client of Labaton when Labaton becomes class counsel, for sure.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: At that point, is there an obligation to go to the class and provide information about the fee-sharing agreement and that there would be a division of fee to the entire class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Are you asking is there an obligation under 1.5(e) or is there an obligation?
In my view the kinds of notice you give to a class is governed by Rule 23 and case law that develops under Rule 23. I'm not a civil procedure expert or a Rule 23 expert. I haven't studied the case law as it applies in this case.
I don't think that the rules, in general, were meant to deal with what kinds of notice you give to classes after a class is certified.
MS. LUKEY: I'm sorry. Can we just clarify which rules he meant in his answer?

Page 153

THE WITNESS: The Rules of Professional Conduct.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Putting it another way, once the class is certified and becomes a client of Labaton, is there any -- under Rule 1.5(e), is there any obligation to give any kind of further notice to the class about a division of a fee.
THE WITNESS: Not under Rule 1.5(e).
THE SPECIAL MASTER: So the notice that was given to Labaton -- to Arkansas by Labaton in the February 8 agreement is sufficient for the class?
THE WITNESS: I didn't say that. I think, if there's another obligation, the source of the obligation is not the Rules of Professional Conduct. It's the case law that has developed over the years under rule -- under Rule 23 of the Rules of Civil Procedure.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. I assume you are not here to opine on those rules.
THE WITNESS: I am not.

Page 154

BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Let me just back up a little bit, Professor, and ask you a couple more questions about the engagement and the surrounding circumstances.
I believe you testified that Hopkins was informed by Labaton that Lieff Cabraser and Thornton law firm would be participating in the case, correct?
A. I'm almost tempted to say I thought Judge Rosen testified to that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I did. I said that. I wasn't testifying. I was assuming it as a fact in evidence.
Q. Is that your understanding?
A. It is now.
Q. All right. At the time that you wrote your opinion, were you aware that Labaton had informed Hopkins that Lieff and Thornton would participate?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. All right. Would that have been significant to you?
A. I think it would have further bolstered the opinions that I had already reached.

Page 155

Q. Well, let's say that Labaton and Lieff's presence in the case had been discussed with Mr. Hopkins.
Would it have been covered in this February 8, 2011, engagement letter?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Would it have been appropriate, under Rule 1.5(e), in this -- based on this engagement letter?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I think that fee sharing of the total fee awarded by Judge Wolf with Lieff Cabraser and the Thornton firm was both permissible under 1.5(e) and permitted by the February 8, 2011, contract.
Q. And what, in the February 8, 2011, contract permitted it?
A. I believe this would be covered by the sentence, "Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation."

And if it's not specifically covered by that, I think that it's fairly implicit in the agreement because, surely, Arkansas would have understood that if a fee is awarded by the court, it will be shared among the lawyers who work on the matter.
Q. So let's assume that Hopkins was informed that Lieff Cabraser and Thornton Law Firm would be participating in the case, okay?
Would it be reasonable for Hopkins, at a later point in time, such as in September of 2017, after the settlement of the case, to say, look, you told me specifically about the participation of those two firms. You never told me about this guy, I don't consent to it?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
Q. Would that have been reasonable?
MS. LUKEY: Sorry. Objection.
A. Well, so you're sort of not asking a question about Rules of Professional Conduct, which is where I do my work.
You are asking me about what would be reasonable for a representative of the lead plaintiff.

I don't really have a basis to judge the reasonableness of that, but viewed in the context of the evidence, my opinion, not really as an expert on how lead plaintiffs are supposed to conduct themselves, I would say it would seem pretty unreasonable, given that Hopkins had previously said he doesn't want to know details about how the fees are being divided, and he said that at the outset to Labaton. It would be kind of unreasonable for him to say, but I wish you'd told me this particular detail.
Q. Let me direct your attention to page 20 of your report. And three lines up from the bottom you say, "There is nothing to suggest that ATRS wanted or needed more information about how class counsel's court-awarded fees would be divided."
Do you see that, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. When you say "there was nothing to suggest," are you stating that there is an absence in the record that was presented to you, the factual record, of information on that or are you saying that you drew inferences from the information that was presented to you?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I'm not exactly sure how to answer that, but Hopkins, as I understand it, made it plain to Labaton that he didn't want information about the fee division. So I think that that, which is a fact, that both I was asked to assume and that is reflected in the deposition transcript, supports that observation of mine at the bottom of page 20.
Q. All right. And just above that, Professor, you say, "In this case, ATRS knew, in general, that multiple counsel would be involved in the class action and would divide fees, and its consent was memorialized in writing, which in any event, was not required by the text of Rule 1.5(e) at the time."
What, if anything, do you assume that George Hopkins knew about the existence or role of a referring attorney in the State Street case?

Page 159

MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I don't assume he knew anything about the existence of a referring attorney. I think he authorized fee sharing with a referring attorney if there was any.
So he knew that there was a possibility of a referring attorney, but I don't think he had specific knowledge that Chargois had made a referral.
Q. Do you have any legal authority to support your opinion that Hopkins' knowledge of the possibility of a fee-sharing arrangement was sufficient to satisfy 1.5(e)?
A. I don't think that alone would be sufficient to satisfy Rule 1.5(e).
I think what you need is information that there will be a division of fees among lawyers, and you need consent to that division.
Q. And is it your opinion that that consent can be to the possibility of a future fee-sharing agreement?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, I want to direct your attention to page 21 to 23, where you opine that

Page 160

Labaton's imperfect fee-sharing arrangement does not warrant sanction.
MS. LUKEY: Objection. I think he said "if," but I won't say anything more.
MR. SINNOTT: Did I read that improperly, Labaton's imperfect?
MS. LUKEY: I don't think I'm supposed to say anything, so I'm not going to say anything.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think you were intending to read the subsection on page 21, "Labaton's imperfect fee-sharing agreement does not warrant sanction."
MR. SINNOTT: Did I not read that correctly?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: No. I think you did, but the record will be what it is.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. So you talk about the Daynard decision.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And is it fair to say that it's your conclusion that nothing in Daynard suggests that a law firm should forfeit fees for failing to comply with 1.5(e)? Is that a correct assessment?

A. I would say nothing in Daynard suggests there should be fee forfeiture for imperfect fee sharing of the kind that is -- is argued occurred here, and as arguably occurred in Daynard.
Q. Did Daynard address the impact that fee disclosure would have on the class in a class action matter?
A. No.
Q. And on page 24 to 25 of your opinion, following the heading "Labaton's Fee Sharing with Chargois Did Not Violate Rule 1.5(a)."
THE SPECIAL MASTER: On page 24.
MR. SINNOTT: 24, yeah.
Q. I'm going on to page 25. Is it fair to say that you take issue with Professor Gillers' interpretation that 1.5(a) applies to individual referral fees paid under a Rule 1.5(e) fee-sharing arrangement?
A. If that's Professor Gillers' opinion, that the fee to Chargois here is governed by 1.5(a), then I disagree with that.

Q. In fact, you opine that no separate analysis is appropriate under Rule 1.5(a) in circumstances where a fee division relates to a referral fee, correct?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. Where are you reading?
Q. On 24.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. So that's a correct statement of your opinion, correct?
A. That is a quote from my opinion in the context of the four paragraphs I devote to this issue, yes.
Q. Well, what's your legal authority for that opinion?
A. When you say "legal authority," are you asking, is there a case that I'm citing? I'm obviously not citing a case.
Are you asking, what's my reason for the opinion?

Page 163

Q. Well, let me start with the cases or other legal authority. Is there any?
A. I think that what significance is an absence of authority for Professor Gillers' view. So there are many, many, many cases in Massachusetts and throughout the country in which lawyers participate in fee-sharing agreements that are governed by 1.5(e).
In some of them, the division of fees is in proportion of the work done by the lawyers, but in many, many cases, it's not.
In jurisdictions governed by the Model Rules of Professional Conduct, you can share a fee with a lawyer who does absolutely no work on the case, as long as the lawyer shares -- has joint responsibility, which, in many jurisdictions, just means that you're on the hook for a malpractice judgment.
In those jurisdictions, and including in Massachusetts, where you don't even need joint authority, as far as I know, there is not a single case where the court has said or disciplinary authority has said or anybody else with authority has said you view both portions of the referral fee under 1.5(a) and Professor Gillers hasn't cited a case either, as far as I know.

(Emily Harlan attends telephonically at this time.)
A. And so what I think is most important here, or particularly important, is the absence of authority for a proposition that would obviously be relevant in many, many, many cases if that proposition were true, which I don't believe it is.
Q. And would you agree that there is an absence of authority for your opinion as well?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. I think it has never occurred to anybody who writes on this that the portion, the individual portions of a shared fee would be each subject to 1.5(a) analysis. And so, yes, there's no opinion that I'm aware of, even considering that proposition.
Q. Would 1.5(a) ever apply to a referral fee -- a referral fee payment to another lawyer?
A. I guess I'm not really sure what you mean. You mean in the context of a fee-sharing arrangement or something else?

Q. Yes, yes.
A. Well, if it's a fee-sharing arrangement governed by 1.5(e), the requirement is that the total fee be reasonable. It doesn't require that each portion, in itself, be reasonable or not excessive.
Q. So there are reasonableness limitations on such a fee, correct?
A. The total fee must be reasonable, which I assume Judge Wolf thought it was, because he authorized the fee.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: He didn't know about the Chargois agreement and the proposed payment at the time to Chargois, though.
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: That I understand? Is that a question?
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes. You

Page 166

understand that, question mark.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: While he's looking, are you here to offer any opinions on whether there was an obligation by lead counsel to inform the court of the payment to be paid to Mr. Chargois?
THE WITNESS: No, I'm not here to give an opinion on that, just to be clear, by no means.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just to close the loop on this. I'm not here talking about under 1.5(e).
Assume that other counsel in the case were not told about the Chargois agreement, specifically the lawyers that were representing the ERISA plaintiffs in the other two cases that were tri-captioned, are you here to offer an opinion about whether there was an obligation to tell those lawyers about the Chargois agreement in their capacity as representing the ERISA members of the class?

THE WITNESS: I'm not here to offer an opinion on that.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Assume there is testimony from co-counsel for the customer class that, although they were told about the Chargois agreement, they were not told that he did no work and that they were not told that he would -- that he would be contributing no value to the case, and that they were not told that the obligation to Mr. Chargois went back to an agreement that preexisted the case.
Do you have any opinion on whether there was an obligation to inform co-counsel for the customer class?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I wasn't asked to give an opinion on that. I didn't focus on the facts relevant to that. I don't have an opinion on that.
BY MR. SINNOTT:
Q. Professor, at page 24, the last paragraph, you talk about the fairness of division among lawyers, and just to put it in context, the paragraph begins, "When one lawyer shares a legal fee with another, Rule 1.5(e) expressly provides that the total fee must be reasonable, but the rule does not say or intimate that if the fee is then shared with others, no share may be excessive.

"And the rules provide no benchmarks for calculating whether a lawyer who makes a referral or who, in a state adopting the ABA model rule formulation, assumes joint responsibility, is receiving a clearly excessive portion of an otherwise reasonable fee.
"This goes to the fairness of the division among lawyers, not to the fairness of the client's fee, and is a matter for the lawyers to work out among themselves.
"The Professional Conduct Rules are meant to protect clients and the public, not to protect lawyers from overreaching by their colleagues."
Do the Mass. Rules of Professional Conduct govern the fairness of division among lawyers?

A. I think not. That's the point I'm making, that Rule 1.5 is meant to protect clients from excessive fees, and 1.5(e), in particular, according to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, is meant to protect clients from excessive fees.
So I don't think the rule is designed to make sure that, as between two lawyers who are sharing a reasonable fee, that the fee division is fair as between them. They can take care of themselves. They don't need 1.5(e) to protect them.
Q. Well, other than Rule 1.5(e), are you aware of any other rules or principles that apply to the fairness of the division of fees among lawyers?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
A. In a fee-sharing context?
Q. Yes.
A. I suppose, if the lawyers are partners in a law firm, the partnership agreement might govern. If the lawyers are in an employment relationship, the contract governing the relationship may govern the fairness of the allocation.

If they are in a fee-sharing arrangement, as you allegedly have here, I think you have here, then that arrangement would govern the allocation.

I don't know which other principles, but I don't think that the Rules of Professional Conduct would govern.

Q. Let me ask you --

MS. LUKEY: Can I just respectfully point out we've got seven minutes, just because I'm concerned about his --

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask you this? I want to test your hypothesis that Rule 1.5(a) has nothing to say about the referral fee here.

What if the referral fee, I'm not implying that it was, but what if the referral fee in question to the lawyer who did no work on the case, contributed no value, was 90 percent of the total fee in the case, but the total fee was reasonable, are you saying that Rule

1.5(e) has nothing to say? It's not implicated at all in the court's determination?

THE WITNESS: Sure. That's exactly what I'm saying.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.

BY MR. SINNOTT:

Q. Tell me if you agree with this statement, Professor.

"Legal ethics experts should not offer an opinion, even if defensible, unless they would adopt that opinion if they were the judge in the case."

Do you agree with that?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I would need to know the context in which it was written. I think there's a lot of situations where ethics experts give opinion where there is no judge, and won't be a judge, and I think it's fine to give opinions in those cases as well.

So I'd really need to know more about the context. I think people who are ethics experts should give opinions that they believe.

Q. All right. And are you prepared to testify in court before Judge Wolf that he should rule as you've opined today?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

A. I wouldn't presume to tell a judge how to rule. I would tell the judge what I believe to be true about the rules and their application. If the judge asked me, I suppose I would answer whatever question the judge asked, but I wouldn't, going in, expect to give that testimony.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So if the judge said -- if you were testifying and if the judge said, do you expect me to rely on your opinion, what would you say?

THE WITNESS: I'm not sure what -- when the spirit moves me in that event, but I think that courts give varying degrees of weight to expert testimony. I don't know whether courts always need expert testimony on the meaning of Rules of Professional Conduct, which are domestic law.

Page 173

I think, to the extent that the judge is looking to experts and cares about their testimony, the court should really give my testimony whatever weight he thinks it deserves based on how persuasive my reasoning is and anything else that the court thinks is relevant.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just one or two final questions. We have got five minutes.

Do you think Rule 1.5(e), as you construe it, the Massachusetts rule, provides adequate protection to clients?

MS. LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: So now you're asking me if I were a rule drafter in Massachusetts, is this the rule that I would draft?

THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can phrase it that way.

THE WITNESS: I'm trying to understand.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: I want you to assume that the rule is as you've construed it.

Page 174

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh. Right.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: It doesn't mean I'm going to construe it that way, but assuming that the rule is as you've construed it, do you think it provides adequate protection to clients to make decisions about fee allocations and divisions of fees?
THE WITNESS: So part of the reason I find that hard is because Massachusetts itself is trying to achieve a more limited purpose than the rules of other jurisdictions.
As I understand the Massachusetts court, it sees the principal function or the one that it expresses in Saggese as -- or Saggese -- as preventing an excessive fee.
I think that the rule --
THE SPECIAL MASTER: And protecting clients. There's language in Saggese that talks about protecting -- the purpose of the rule is protecting clients.

Page 175

THE WITNESS: Right. I think, in the context of this case, the client was protected by the rule as I interpret it.
Whether it ought to be more demanding for the benefit of different clients in different cases, I haven't given any thought to, really. I don't think, if I were a rule drafter in New York, I guess, in a sense I am, because I'm on the committee on standards of attorney conduct, that, you know, proposes rules to the state bar, that then proposes them to the courts, I don't think I would run out and say, let's replace our version of 1.5(e) with the Massachusetts version, as I construe the Massachusetts version.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But your view of the Massachusetts rule is that, to comply with Rule 1.5(e), putting aside the writing requirement, that to comply with 1.5(e), all the client has to be told is that there will be a division of fee, correct?
THE WITNESS: That's what the rule says.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: No further information needs to be given about who's going to get the fee, who's going to get how much, the purposes for which the fee can be given or anything else. Just that there is going to be just the bare statement, that there will be a division of a fee.
So my question to you is, construing it that way, do you think the rule provides adequate protection to the client?
MS. LUKEY: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Bearing in mind that if the client asks, you have to answer the questions, and bearing in mind the limited purpose for which Massachusetts has its rule, and given -- well, you know, I guess, you know, it's hard to put myself in the shoes of a Massachusetts rule maker.
I think it would be fair to draft a more demanding rule or to interpret the current rule in a more demanding way. In general, there's no harm done if more information is provided.

So if I were the rule drafter, I would probably require more, with the caveat that I wouldn't run around disciplining lawyers who didn't perfectly comply with the more demanding rule.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: Should there be a separate rule where the client is going to be a class representative and may well represent a class with more diverse interests that may not be totally aligned, should there be a more demanding rule requiring more information to be given to that client?
THE WITNESS: To me, that is a question about Rule 23 and the case law, what do classes or their representatives need to know.
It's not -- I would say the answer is you shouldn't put it in Rule 1.5(e) because that develops -- first of all, the rule drafters don't have that much expertise.

Second of all, they don't draft rules at that level of particularity.
And third of all, you have judicial supervision of class actions. So the place to do it would be in either the Rules of Civil Procedure or in courts' local rules, or however else courts in class actions express their requirements about what lawyers for classes are supposed to tell their clients. And more than that, I don't have a view on, because I'm not a class action specialist.
THE SPECIAL MASTER: But not by reading more information, a requirement of more information to the client into Rule 1.5(e)?
THE WITNESS: I don't think that's the job that Rule 1.5(e) was meant to do. And you hit lawyers by surprise unfairly if you interpret the rule to do the work that judges are supposed to do in class actions under Rule 23.
MS. LUKEY: Your Honor, it's a little after 12:30.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: It is 12:32.
Do you have anything else, Bill?
MR. SINNOTT: Nothing further.
Joan, do you have anything?
MS. LUKEY: In light of the time, no.
MR. SINNOTT: Richard?
MR. HEIMANN: No questions.
MR. SINNOTT: Brian?
MR. KELLY: No questions. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: David, on behalf of Keller Rohrback?
MR. COPLEY: No questions. Thank you.
MR. SINNOTT: Okay. Hearing no questions, this examination is concluded. Thank you, Professor.
MS. LUKEY: Thank you both for finishing in the time allowed.

Rule 7.2. Advertising

(a) Subject to the requirements of Rule 7.1, a lawyer may advertise services through public media, such as a telephone directory, legal directory including an electronic or computer-accessed directory, newspaper or other periodical, outdoor advertising, radio or television, or through written, electronic, computer-accessed or similar types of communication not involving solicitation prohibited in Rule 7.3.

(b) A copy or recording of an advertisement or written communication of services offered for a fee shall be kept for two years after its last dissemination along with a record of when and where it was used.

(c) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that a lawyer may:

(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;

(2) pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit lawyer referral service or legal service organization;

(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17;

(4) pay referral fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e); and

(5) share a statutory fee award or court-approved settlement in lieu thereof with a qualified legal assistance organization in accordance with Rule 5.4(a)(4).

(d) Any communication made pursuant to this rule shall include the name of the lawyer, group of lawyers, or firm responsible for its content.

COMMENT

2006 Main Volume

[1] To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising.
[2] [Reserved]
[3] Questions of effectiveness and taste in advertising are matters of speculation and subjective judgment. Television and other electronic media, including computer-accessed communications, are now among the most powerful media for getting information to the public. Prohibiting such advertising, therefore, would impede the flow of information about legal services to many sectors of the public. Limiting the information that may be advertised has a similar effect and assumes that the bar can accurately forecast the kind of information that the public would regard as relevant.

[3A] The advertising and solicitation rules can generally be applied to computer-accessed or other similar types of communications by analogizing the communication to its hard-copy form. Thus, because it is not a communication directed to a specific recipient, a web site or home page would generally be considered advertising subject to this rule, rather than solicitation subject to Rule 7.3. For example, when a targeted e-mail solicitation of a person known to be in need of legal services contains a hot-link to a home page, the e-mail message is subject to Rule 7.3 but the home page itself need not be because the recipient must make an affirmative decision to go to the sender's home page. Depending upon the circumstances, posting of comments to a newsgroup, bulletin board or chat group may constitute targeted or direct contact with prospective clients known to be in need of legal services and may therefore be subject to Rule 7.3. Depending upon the topic or purpose of the newsgroup, bulletin board, or chat group, the posting might also constitute an association of the lawyer or law firm's name with a particular service, field, or area of law amounting to a claim of specialization under Rule 7.4 and would therefore be subject to the restrictions of that rule. In addition, if the lawyer or law firm uses an interactive forum such as a chat group to solicit for a fee professional employment that the prospective client has not requested, this conduct may constitute prohibited personal solicitation under Rule 7.3(d).

[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.

Record of Advertising

[5] Paragraph (b) requires that a record of the content and use of advertising be kept in order to facilitate enforcement of this Rule. It does not require that advertising be subject to review prior to dissemination. Such a requirement would be burdensome and expensive relative to its possible benefits, and may be of doubtful constitutionality.

Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer

[6] A lawyer is allowed to pay for advertising permitted by this Rule and for the purchase of a law practice in accordance with the provisions of Rule 1.17, but otherwise is not permitted to pay another person for channeling professional work. However, a legal aid agency or prepaid legal services plan may pay to advertise legal services provided under its auspices. Likewise, a lawyer may participate in not-for-profit lawyer referral programs and pay the usual fees charged by such programs. Paragraph (c) does not prohibit paying regular compensation to an assistant, such as a secretary, to prepare communications permitted by this Rule. Paragraph (c) also excepts from its prohibition the referral fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e).

Corresponding ABA Model Rule. Substantially similar to Model Rule 7.2, except minor differences in (a) and (b), subclauses (4) and (5) were added to paragraph (c), and paragraph (d) was modified.

Corresponding Former Massachusetts Rule. DR 2-101 (B); see DR 2-103.

I. INTRODUCTION TO OPINION

Special Master Gerald Rosen has retained me to answer certain questions regarding the professional conduct of lawyers in the captioned case. I briefly state my qualifications to offer my opinions. A current resume is attached to this Report. [EX. 49]. I agreed to an hourly rate of $900 for my work in this matter.

I am Elihu Root Professor of Law at New York University School of Law, where I have taught since 1978. My major area of research and teaching are the ethical rules and laws governing American lawyers. I am the author of Regulation of Lawyers: Problems of Law and Ethics, a widely used law school casebook first published by Little, Brown (now Aspen) in 1985 with an 11th edition in 2018. With Roy Simon (and Andrew Perlman as of 2008), I have edited Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards, published annually by Little, Brown, then Aspen, since 1989. From 2000-2002, I was a member of the ABA's Multijurisdictional Practice Commission, which proposed rule changes (all of them accepted by the ABA House) to recognize the cross-border nature of legal practice. I was a member of the ABA 20/20 Commission (2010-2013), which studied the effects of technology and globalization on the regulation of lawyers and recommended Model Rules amendments, all of which were accepted by the ABA House. In 2011, I received the Michael Franck Award from the ABA's Center for Professional Responsibility. I received The American Bar Foundation's Outstanding Scholar Award in 2015.

In the last four years, I have testified at a deposition in Ruby v. Allen Matkins, a JAMS arbitration in Los Angeles. I was retained by counsel for Ruby, Dale Kinsella of Kinsella Weitzman (Santa Monica, CA).

I assume familiarity with the following statement of facts, which was prepared by counsel for the Special Master and which I assume is true for purposes of my opinion.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. THE STATE STREET LITIGATION

i. ORIGINS

This case had its genesis in a California qui tam action filed under seal on April 14, 2008 by "Associates Against FX Insider Trading" -- relators represented by the Thornton Law Firm ("TLF") and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff") -- on behalf of California public pension funds. See 9/15/16 Declaration of Lawrence Sucharow of Labaton Sucharow LLP in Support of Motion for Final Approval of Class Settlement, MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 104, ¶ 24; see also Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 35:22 – 36:14. The qui tam lawsuit was unsealed and became public on October 20, 2009, when the California Attorney General filed a Complaint-in-Intervention charging State Street with misappropriating more than $56 million from California's two largest public pension funds: the California Public Employees' Retirement System ("CalPERS") and the California State Teachers' Retirement System ("CalSTRS"). See People of the State of California, ex rel. Edmund G. Brown, Jr. v. State Street Corporation, et al., Cal. Super. Ct. No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS; see also Sucharow Decl., ¶ 25; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 40:1-9. The Complaint-in-Intervention was the first public indication of State Street's allegedly unfair and deceptive practices concerning indirect FX and the first largescale action concerning FX practices. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 25; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 41:11-17.

ii. FILING OF THE ATRS "CUSTOMER CLASS" COMPLAINT

After the allegations against State Street became public, George Hopkins, Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ATRS"), became interested in the issue since State Street was ATRS's custodial bank. Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 37:11 – 38:15. ATRS then retained Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton"), which was serving as one of its "monitoring counsel,"[1] to investigate potential class and individual claims that could be brought against State Street on behalf of ATRS and its members. This was Labaton's first foray into FX litigation. Therefore, with ATRS's approval, Labaton teamed with TLF and Lieff, as those firms had gained knowledge of the area from their representation of the relators in the California qui tam action, and began an investigation. Id. See also George Hopkins Declaration, Dkt. No. 104-1, ¶ 8; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 43:13 – 44:4.

After investigating and researching the matter, on February 10, 2011, a class action complaint was filed on behalf of ATRS (superseded by an Amended Complaint on April 15, 2011) alleging violations of the Massachusetts Consumer Protections Act and several common law claims. See Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. Nos. 1, 10 [EX. 1].[2] As Lead Plaintiff in the action, ATRS purported to represent a class encompassing > all institutional investors in foreign securities, including but not limited to public and private pension funds, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on a "standing-instruction" or "non-negotiated" basis between January 2, 1998 and December 31, 2009, inclusive (the "Class Period"), and which suffered damages as a result of the deceptive acts and practices and other misconduct alleged herein.

Customer Class Amended Compl., Dkt. No. 10, ¶ 22. [3]

[1] "Monitoring counsel" refers to lawyers who review the performance of institutional investors to ensure the investments are handled appropriately and are not the subject of fraud or other illegal activity. See Eisenberg, Jonathan, Litigating Securities Class Actions, § 1.02(1)(d), "Portfolio Monitoring" (Lexis/Nexis 2017).

[2] The complaints also originally named State Street Corporation ("SSC"), State Street's parent corporation, and the separate subsidiary State Street Global Markets LLC ("SSGM LLC") as party-defendants. On May 8, 2012, the Court entered an Order dismissing all claims asserted against SSC and SSGM LLC.

[3] The ATRS complaint is referred to by the parties in this action as the "Customer Class Complaint."

Thereafter, on January 12, 2012, Labaton was appointed "Interim Lead Counsel" for the proposed Customer Class; the Thornton Law Firm was designated as liaison counsel, and Lieff Cabraser was designated as additional counsel for the proposed class. See Dkt. Nos. 7-8; 28.[4] In making this tri-partite appointment, the Court reasoned that "[e]ach of the firms, including Labaton Sucharow, have extensive experience with complex commercial litigation and class action lawsuits involving financial and securities fraud," and "are knowledgeable [in] the applicable areas of law." 1/12/12 Memorandum and Order, p. 4, Dkt. No. 28. [5]

iii. THE ERISA COMPLAINTS

On the heels of the filing of the Customer Class Complaint, two separate complaints alleging ERISA violations were filed.[6] The two sets of plaintiffs in these actions represented

[4] "Plaintiff's Assented to Motion for the Appointment of Interim Lead Counsel for the Proposed Class" and supporting brief were filed on April 7, 2011 [Dkt. Nos. 7 and 8] but not ruled upon by the Court until January 12, 2012 [Dkt. No. 28].

[5] No similar appointment was made with respect to ERISA Counsel. However, Labaton, Lieff and Thornton also viewed the ERISA plaintiffs as their clients and Labaton as lead counsel for all class members, including ERISA class members. See Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep. pp. 93:24 – 94:2 ("We had a responsibility as class counsel to the class. And that included ERISA plans."); 97:3- 10 ("I felt that customer class counsel had a responsibility to the entire customer class with no distinctions. We didn't discriminate in our class definition. We didn't see the need to when we filed our case.") Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., pp. 42:11-14 ("[W] did not assert an ERISA claim in our complaint, but we did allege a class which was broad enough to encompass ERISA governed assets."); 61:11-14 (How much of the settlement would go to ERISA clients "was something that [DOL] were focused on. Of course, we were focused on it as well because they were our clients.") See also colloquy at 11/15/12 Lobby Conference:

> MICHAEL THORNTON: I just want to clarify one thing of Mr. Rudman's [State Street's attorney's] excellent summary that we might differ on. There are two clear ERISA cases, Henriquez and Andover, and in the third case, Arkansas, um, the ERISA claims are included in the class definition. So we also have a claim.

> ROBERT LIEFF: . . . There is an overlap, that's all we're trying to say. We represent the same people.

[6] "ERISA" refers to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 1001, et seq.

institutional private ERISA plans whose accounts were invested by State Street (the "ERISA Class").[7] See Henriquez, et al. v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., MAD No. 11-12049, Dkt. Nos. 1, 24 (the "Henriquez complaint") [EX. 2],[8] and The Andover Companies Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, et al. v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., MAD No. 12-11698, Dkt. Nos. 1, 9 (the "Andover complaint") [EX. 3].

The named plaintiffs in the Henriquez complaint were Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, and Richard A. Sutherland, all participants in different ERISA plans: Henriquez was a participant in the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan; Cohn was a participant in the Citigroup 401(k) Plan; Taylor and Sutherland were participants in the Johnson & Johnson Pension Plan (Sutherland also was a participant in the J&J 401(k) plan). All of these individually named plaintiffs purported to "bring[] this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of [their respective retirement plans] and [their] participants and beneficiaries...as a class action on behalf of a class of similarly-situated ERISA retirement plans (collectively, the "Plans") and their participants and beneficiaries...." [Henriquez Amended Compl., ¶ 1] [EX. 2]. Two plaintiffs are named in the Andover Complaint -- one an institutional plaintiff, The Andover Companies Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and the other an individual, James Pehoushek-Stangeland. The complaint alleges that as "a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary

[7] The ERISA Class was represented by Keller Rohrback L.L.P., Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, McTigue Law LLP, and Beins Axelrod LLP (collectively, "ERISA Counsel"). However, none of these firms was ever appointed "lead counsel" or other official capacity by the Court. (Although, later, Brian McTigue of McTigue Law, attempted, albeit unsuccessfully, to secure appointment as lead counsel for the ERISA class members. See TLF-SST-052975 – 052980 [EX. 4]; TLF-SST-054020 – 54022 [EX. 5]; Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 97:12-21; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 93:17-23.)

[8] The Henriquez complaint was originally filed in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland, see Henriquez v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., et. al., MDD No. 11-cv-02920, Dkt. No. 1. The Maryland complaint, however, was voluntarily dismissed shortly after it was filed, see id., Dkt. Nos. 7-8; it was later re-filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts as a "related case" to the ATRS case.

Investment Plan ("the Boeing Plan") ..., Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland has standing to bring suit on behalf of the Boeing Plan for losses to the Plan due to breaches of fiduciary duty pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2)." [Andover Amended Compl., ¶ 22] [EX. 3].

Like the Customer Class Complaint, each ERISA complaint alleged that State Street, as the custodian to individual institutional investors and pension fund accounts, engaged in unfair and deceptive practices in conducting "indirect" or "standing instruction" foreign currency exchange ("FX") transactions on behalf of its clients, without disclosure to its clients that these trades generated mark-ups that inured to the benefit of State Street. See Customer Class Amended Compl., ¶¶ 8, 62-63 [EX. 1]; Henriquez Amended Compl., ¶¶ 80-82 [EX. 2]; Andover Amended Compl., ¶¶ 10, 63-64 [EX. 3].

iv. THE BONY MELLON MDL

While the State Street action proceeded in the District Court for the District of Massachusetts, a multi-district FX case brought against another custodian bank, the Bank of New York Mellon, was being litigated in the Southern District of New York. In re The Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp. Forex Transactions Litig., SDNY No. 12-MD-2335 ("BONY Mellon").[9] Lieff Cabraser was co-lead counsel for the nation-wide consumer class in the case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 23:25 – 24:4; 25:12-22. TLF, as well as McTigue Law and Keller Rohrback, ERISA counsel here, also were involved in the case. Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., 85:18-21; McTigue 7/7/17 Dep., 9:23 – 10:11; 12:22 – 13:4.

BONY Mellon was vigorously litigated for three years, during which intense discovery took place: more than 120 depositions were taken and more than 20 million documents were produced and reviewed. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 29:23 – 30:15. To assist in the document review, Lieff Cabraser enlisted the help of the firm's staff attorneys ("SAs"),[10] thirteen of whom later worked on the State Street case. The case finally settled for $335 million in recovery to the class of custodial clients in September 2015. See 9/24/15 Order and Final Judgment, SDNY No. 12-MD-2335, Dkt. No. 638; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 29:23 – 30:15.[11] The attorneys' experience in BONY Mellon allowed counsel to develop a baseline of familiarity and expertise that they brought to the State Street case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 27:11-17. BONY Mellon also provided Lieff's SAs hands-on experience in reviewing and analyzing complex, FX-related documents. See Lieff Cabraser's Responses to First Set of Interrogatories Due on June 1, 2017, Response No. 3.

v. CONSOLIDATION OF THE STATE STREET CASES

During most of 2011-2012, the State Street action principally involved motion practice, and, in particular, briefing and argument of Rule 12(b)(1) and Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss filed by State Street in the ATRS and the Henriquez cases. State Street's motion to dismiss the ATRS complaint was fully briefed by both parties and the Court heard arguments on the motion on May 8, 2012. At the conclusion of the May 8 hearing, the Court entered an Order dismissing ATRS's claims against State Street Corporation ("SSC"), the parent corporation, and the separate State Street subsidiary, State Street Global Market, LLC ("SSGM LLC"), but denied Defendant's motion in all other respects. See 5/8/12 Order, Dkt. No. 33. The Court further

[10] "Staff attorneys" here were licensed attorneys with relevant experience hired specifically to perform large-scale document review.

[11] Of the $335 million settlement, the attorneys in BONY Mellon were awarded $83,750,000 in fees and $2,901,734.19 in total expenses. SDNY No. 12-MD-2335, Dkt. No. 638.

directed counsel to meet to discuss the possibility of settlement and whether they wished to pursue mediation, either privately or before a magistrate judge. Id.

In the meantime, on August 8, 2012, State Street also moved to dismiss the Henriquez Amended Class Action Complaint. However, no substantive decision was ever rendered on that motion. Instead, on November 15, 2012, shortly after the Andover complaint was filed, at the request of counsel, the Court conducted a Lobby Conference to discuss further proceedings. See 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., Dkt. No. 64. Counsel proposed, and the Court agreed, that the three cases -- ATRS, Henriquez and Andover -- proceed in tandem in a "hybrid" mediation during which the parties and counsel could continue to pursue a mediated global settlement, while at the same time delaying a decision on pending motions and engaging in a simultaneous track of "informal" document discovery. 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., pp. 10:15-18; 15:6-7, 19-25, 22:2-10. The Court granted the parties' joint motion to stay the case and ordered that the three actions be consolidated for pre-trial purposes.[12] Id., Tr. at pp. 10, 22, 24; Order to Stay, Dkt. No. 62; Electronic Order Consolidating Cases, Dkt. No. 63.

vi. HYBRID MEDIATION-DISCOVERY PROCESS

Prior to the Court's endorsement of the hybrid mediation, the parties had selected a mediator, Jonathan Marks, and participated in a few preliminary mediation sessions, developing the framework for exchanging discovery. Sucharow Decl., ¶¶ 89-92; Marks Decl., ¶ 14; 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., Dkt. No. 87, p. 22. In the approximately eighteen months following the November 12, 2012 Lobby Conference, between January 2013 and June 2015, the parties participated in 14 additional in-person mediation sessions with Mediator Marks in Boston, New [12] The Court set an initial deadline of December 1, 2013, at which time the parties would update the Court on the status of the mediation. See Dkt. No. 62. At the request of the parties, the Court extended this deadline on several occasions. See Dkt. Nos. 66, 71, 75.

York City, and Washington, D.C., each of which involved extensive exchanges of legal theories and damages calculations by both sides. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 94; see also Marks Decl., ¶¶ 23-24.

The mediation sessions were informed by substantial discovery exchanged by the parties. Notably, State Street produced more than nine million pages of documents at the request of the ERISA and Customer classes. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 96. All parties agree that document review was essential to the mediation process. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 116:15 – 117:6; Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 84:15-23, 85:24 – 86:5; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 80:4-7, 82:7-13.

vii. ERISA FEE ALLOCATION

While the hybrid mediation-discovery process was ongoing, in mid-2013, Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel negotiated amongst themselves an agreement for the allocation of attorneys' fees. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep. p. 57:18-23. That agreement -- to allocate 9% of the total fee awarded (if successful) to ERISA Counsel -- was based largely on ERISA Counsel's understanding that the total ERISA case volume comprised five to nine percent of the total FX trading volume. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 26:15-16; 59:14-22; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 50:10-16.

As the case progressed -- and particularly toward the end of the case -- ERISA Counsel did not view 9% as commensurate with the ERISA trading volume, which was later learned to actually be about 12-15% of the total trading volume, or the value they added to the State Street case. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 64:3-11; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 54:7-11. Nonetheless, rather than create friction with Customer Class Counsel over fees,[13] Lynn Sarko, principal counsel for the

[13] From the beginning of the mediation, there was already fair degree of tension between and among Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel. As ERISA Counsel Carl Kravitz testified, "There was definitely a faction on the consumer side that said 'we represent these people, what are you doing in the case?'" Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 28:21-24. Kravitz explained, "Consumer people did not want us coming in and taking a chunk of their case." See id., pp. 32:16-17; 45:6-17. "Every extra dollar that went to ERISA came out of the Consumer side." Id., at p. 51:18-20. The tension between the Customer Class and the ERISA Class further was manifested during the discovery process: ERISA Counsel were not provided with access to documents State Street had provided to the ERISA Class, advocated for, and all other ERISA Counsel ultimately agreed to make, a "practical decision" to accept 9% of the fee total. See Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:18-25. The decision was made, in part, to promote cooperation between counsel, "make the pie bigger" for the class members, and ensure that counsel worked together on the same "team." Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:18-25; see also Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 61:18-24.

From August to December 2013, Customer Class and ERISA Counsel exchanged drafts in an attempt to memorialize their agreement to respectively share the fee award 91/9 percent. See KR00000006 – 09 (8/30/13 Sarko email to Lieff (proposing draft agreement to capture the 91/9% split)) [EX. 6]; KR00000010 – 18 (9/11/13 Chiplock email to Sarko and Gerber (circulating redlined edits to proposed agreement)) [EX. 7]. While there were several iterations of the agreement, each draft described the ATRS complaint filed by Customer Class Counsel as brought on behalf of "all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank" (emphasis added). See KR00000003 – 05 (8/29/13 Draft, Agreement Between Counsel for Consumer and ERISA Plaintiffs Regarding Division of Attorneys' Fees (the "Fee Allocation Agreement") [EX. 8]. Early drafts of the fee allocation agreement included a provision nullifying the 91/9 allocation if either the ATRS, Andover or Henriquez cases resulted in no recovery; that provision was later struck. See KR00000024 – 28 (8/30/13 Draft, Fee Allocation Agreement). [EX. 9]. Also removed was a proposed provision that counsels' division of fees was "consistent with the relative volume of FX trading by ERISA and non-ERISA plans as reflected in the data produced Customer Class. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 44:2-25. Nor were ERISA Counsel allowed access to the Customer Class's database. Id., at 45:1-23. Compounding the tension was the fact that there was never an order appointing leadership in the ERISA cases. Id., p. 42:24 – 43:3.

by State Street and the prospects of recovery on the various claims alleged, and is therefore reasonable and appropriate." Id.

On December 11, 2013, Counsel finally memorialized this agreement in writing. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 60:4-14; s*ee also* KR00000045 – 50 (Final Fee Allocation Agreement) [EX. 10], Settlement Agreement, Dkt. No. 89, ¶ 21; McTigue, 7/7/17 Dep., pp. 44:23 – 46:18; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 57:12-16. As part of that written agreement, ERISA and Customer Class Counsel represented that they had "disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein." See Fee Allocation Agreement at ¶ 5 [EX. 10].

The percentage allocated to ERISA Counsel later was increased to 10%, at the suggestion of Customer Class Counsel. Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 57:17 – 58:1; Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 60:15-17, 60:24-61:12; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:17-19. While counsel did not amend the original agreement, the 10% increase was memorialized in an email circulated by Nicole Zeiss, Settlement Counsel for Labaton, itemizing the allocation of fees and expenses to the ERISA and Customer Class attorneys. See ZS000027 – 28 (11/23/16 Sarko email to Kravitz ("I spoke with Labaton folks yesterday. They didn't want to put it in the formal letter but agreed to send us an email putting the numbers in and confirming the 10 percent.")). [EX. 11]. ERISA Counsel welcomed the increase in percentage. See ZS000029 – 30 (11/23/16 Kravitz email to McTigue). [EX. 12].

viii. STAFF ATTORNEY COST-SHARING AGREEMENT

Staff attorney-based document review performed throughout the course of the hybrid mediation-discovery process ramped up significantly in January 2015. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 87:22 – 88:24. While the BONY Mellon case was being actively litigated in 2013-2014, Lieff assigned at most five SAs to review documents produced by State Street. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 107:15 – 108:12. During that time, Labaton also allocated no more than five SAs to review and analyze documents for the State Street case. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 57:7-10. [14] As the hybrid mediation progressed, State Street produced discovery related to the Hill case,[15] a significant production consisting of approximately 10 million pages. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 68:25 – 69:11; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 88:2-21. The Hill production added considerably to the total volume of unreviewed documents.

By January 2015, the Customer Class began to view discovery with greater urgency, informed in part by the favorable resolution in the BONY Mellon case and also by the fact that the parties had been mediating for over two years without reaching an agreement to resolve the case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 111:8-13; Dugar 6/16/17 Dep., p. 85:9-16. As a result, Labaton and Lieff, which had recently freed up thirteen SAs as fact discovery in the BONY Mellon case came to a close, expanded their respective document review teams by adding additional SAs to review and analyze the database of unreviewed material accumulated during the State Street case. See Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 109:16 – 110:2; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 69:8-14; 74:11-13. Between January and March 2015, Labaton bolstered their document review team, maintaining more than fifteen to twenty different SAs on the State Street case at any given time. Lieff did the same, assigning fifteen SAs (thirteen of whom transitioned directly from the BONY Mellon review) and two "contract" attorneys to complete the review.[16] Kussin 6/5/17 Dep., p.

[14] Michael Rogers recalls that, in 2013, Labaton assigned Todd Kussin, the SA "team leader" in the State Street case, and four SAs to perform document review during 2013 and 2014. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 57:7-10.

[15] Hill v. State Street Corp., et. al., MAD No.1:09-cv-12146-GAO.

[16] In March 2015, Lieff Cabraser hired two additional attorneys, employed by an outside staffing agency rather than the firm. See Lieff Cabraser Response to Interrogatory No. 19.

All SAs reviewing documents in the State Street case received a binder of documents providing an overview of the case; the binder contained the complaint and related pleadings, an outline of the case theory, and a list of key terms, search criteria, topics and categories to guide the SA review. Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp.77:23 – 78:8; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 63:3-7; Lesser 6/19/17 Dep., p. 40:12-13. Michael Lesser also drafted emails outlining important information for the SAs to consider during their review. Lesser 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 40:10 – 41:4.

The Labaton and Lieff SAs were well-qualified and equipped to analyze the documents, which related to complex FX trading patterns and other financial issues raised in the case. See Rogers 6/16/17 Dep, pp. 58:12 – 59:7 (SAs hired by Labaton had experience in "complex litigation, [the] financial industry, . . . banking, mutual funds, certainly currency trading, or experience legally on what I would call a financial industry case.") Several of the Lieff SAs had, in the words of Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser, "been through war in Bank of New York Mellon, and [] [we]re extremely well-versed in the issues." Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 109:20-25; 117:16-25. These SAs not only performed sophisticated document review; they also prepared substantive subject matter memoranda and deposition notebooks. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep. p. 32:12-20; Zaul 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 24:4 – 25:5; Alper 6/5/17 Dep., p. 17:14-16; Oh 6/6/17 Dep., p. 21:20-25; see also TLF-SST-005245 – 5270 (Memorandum authored by SA Maritza Bolano) [EX. 13].

Because TLF did not have SAs, or non-permanent attorneys, of its own, or the facilities to hire and house new attorneys solely to work on the State Street document review, Labaton, Lieff and TLF entered into an agreement to "allocate" certain SAs employed by and working at Labaton and Lieff's offices to TLF. At times, this was referred to as the "10/10/10 agreement[17] -- designating an equal number of SAs to each firm. The purpose of the cost-sharing agreement was to share the cost and risk burdens of the litigation among the three Customer Class law firms. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 127:23 – 128:5; 131:23 – 133:15; Belfi 6/14/17 Dep, pp. 51:8 – 53:12. [18] While the exact number of SAs fluctuated over the course of the agreement, TLF, in essence, agreed to pay Labaton and Lieff each for five SAs. G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 43:10-13. TLF did not meet, interview, select, house or supervise the SAs allocated by Labaton or Lieff. See Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 62:21, 63:7-17, 64:6-9, 65:3-6; see also Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 134:17 – 135:19. And, it did not matter to TLF which SAs it paid for. See G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 43:10-13. Pursuant to this cost-sharing arrangement, Labaton and Lieff designated certain SAs as "TLF," and then billed TLF periodically for the actual costs of the SAs and, in Lieff's case, for the contract attorneys "allocated" to TLF. Id.; see also Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., p. 63:2-7.

TLF's collection of SA hours was conducted piecemeal and largely through administrative staff rather than directly between the attorneys privy to the SA cost-sharing agreement. Evan Hoffman, the most junior member of TLF's litigation team, was tasked with collecting the names and hours of the Lieff SAs allocated to TLF. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., p. 57:

[17] The concept of the "10/10/10 agreement" was introduced at the beginning of the Special Master's discovery, and while not all Class Counsel were familiar with that exact terminology, they affirmed that the purpose of the cost-sharing agreements between Labaton and TLF, and between Lieff and TLF, was to allocate costs and risks equally among all firms by Labaton and Lieff each assigning approximately five SAs to TLF, so that each firm ending up bearing the cost of ten SAs. See G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 42:5-13; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 133:12-15.

[18] Allocating the SAs was not only a means of equalizing the costs and burdens, but also as Garrett Bradley of TLF admitted, it was "the best way to jack up the load star [sic]…the best way for us [TLF] to increase our load star [sic] and make it comparable to the other two firms…. I was absolutely concerned about Thornton's load star [sic] vis-a-vis the other two firms." G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep. p. 67:4-13; TLF-011124 – 11126 (2/6/15 G. Bradley Email to Thornton cc'd Lesser) [EX. 14].

11–18. The staffing agency employing the agency attorneys working at Lieff invoiced TLF directly for the hours performed by those individuals. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., p. 62: 6-9. Michael Bradley, the brother of TLF partner Garrett Bradley, neither worked for a firm or a staffing agency, and reported his hours to Hoffman by email on a weekly or biweekly basis. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 107: 24-108:7.

For those SAs employed by Lieff, Lieff's accounting department prepared and forwarded invoices to Hoffman on a regular basis. LCHB Response to Interrogatory No. 38; Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 61: 21-62:5. Similarly, Labaton's accounting office prepared and forwarded invoices reporting the hours performed by Labaton SAs to Garrett Bradley's attention, copying TLF administrators, on a monthly basis. Labaton Response to Interrogatory No. 37; see LBS – 003775-3776 (4/9/15 Ng Email to G. Bradley attaching April 2015 Invoice) [EX. 15].

At the time Labaton and Lieff agreed to this arrangement, both firms were concerned primarily with spreading the risks -- and costs -- of the litigation; neither firm focused on what information would be reported in a potential fee petition. Belfi 6/14/17 Dep., p. 53:10-12. TLF later claimed all of the SAs allocated to TLF on its lodestar fee petition, accounting for 71.5% of all TLF hours reported. See Dkt. No. 104-16.[19] In its fee petition, TLF billed all SA time at an hourly rate of $425 (a rate approved by the Court for Lieff SAs in BONY Mellon). Except for three SAs, the $425 per hour rate charged by TLF was greater than the rates requested by Lieff or Labaton for the same individuals in their lodestar petitions.[20] Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., p. 59:5-12. No explicit or implicit agreement to allow TLF to claim the Labaton and Lieff SAs on TLF's lodestar has been disclosed during the Special Master's investigation.

[19] TLF also claimed 406.4 hours of SA time for Michael Bradley, a Massachusetts-licensed attorney and the brother of TLF Managing Partner, Garrett Bradley, who was not affiliated with the firm but performed document review on a contingent basis during the State Street case. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 28:20-23; 70:13-15. Bradley worked from his own office and did his document review in his free time; he was not supervised by Labaton or Lieff lawyers. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 49:7-16; 52:3-18, 54:15 – 55:3. Unlike the Labaton and Lieff SAs, Bradley did not prepare any memoranda or deposition notebooks. Id, at p. 46:21-23. And, the record reveals no written work product created by Michael Bradley.

Bradley worked on a contingent basis; he would only be paid if the class recovered a settlement entitling counsel to fees. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 70:13-15. After the Court approved the request for attorneys' fees, Bradley received a payment of $203,200, equal to the numbers reported at $500 per hour. Id., p. 70:18-23.

ix. SETTLEMENT AND NOTICE TO CLASS MEMBERS

a. Involvement of Government Agencies

The hybrid mediation spanned a period of two and a half years. During this time, while discovery continued, settlement discussions were ongoing. In addition to State Street and plaintiffs' counsel, three government agencies -- the Department of Labor ("DOL"), the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), and the Department of Justice ("DOJ") -- were involved in the negotiations. Each agency independently investigated State Street's alleged misconduct, and each agency reached its own settlement with State Street in furtherance of their respective enforcement goals. See Dkt. No. 104, ¶¶ 8, 38; see also Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 41:9-14; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 56:25 – 57:4. The DOL -- charged with overseeing administration of the ERISA statute -- paid particular attention to the settlement of the claims of the ERISA plan participants, ensuring that the settlement recovery amount was adequate and commensurate with the agency's own evaluation of the case. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 79:6-15. Keller Rohrback's Lynn Sarko was the lawyer principally responsible for negotiating with the DOL. State Street, in turn, made it clear that a global settlement with all private class members and all government agencies was a necessary condition to its willingness to reach a settlement. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 36:24 – 37:11; see also 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., p. 17:8-23.

[20] Rachael Wintterle, a contract attorney housed at Lieff's office, was billed by Lieff at $515 per hour. See Dkt. No. 104-17, Exhibit A. David Alper and Dorothy Hong were billed by Labaton at the same rate as TLF, $425 per hour. See Dkt. No. 104-15, Exhibit A. Alper had a background in FX training and was a resource for SAs during the State Street case. Alper 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 20: 8-11; 22: 3-8.

b. Preparation and Filing of Settlement Documents

After two and a half years of mediation and negotiation, on June 30, 2015, the parties reached an agreement-in-principle to settle the consolidated class actions for $300,000,000.00. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 101. The terms of a final Term Sheet were negotiated and signed on September 11, 2015. Id. at ¶ 104. See also, Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., p. 13:10-22.

Over the ensuing 10 ½ months, Labaton, as Lead Settlement Counsel, undertook the preparation of the formal settlement documentation. Nicole Zeiss, Labaton's Settlement Counsel, had primary responsibility for drafting the settlement agreement and the exhibits for the settlement agreement, including the preliminary approval motion, brief and order, the plan of allocation, the judgment, the long-form Notice of Pendency of Class Actions and the Summary Notice ("Notice"). Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 13:10-22; 15:5-6.[21] Draft versions of the Notice were circulating among, and reviewed by, Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel.[22]

Zeiss also had the responsibility of preparing the Omnibus Declaration and Brief in support of Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees and expenses, and for payment of service awards. Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., p. 16:2-6. This included reviewing and assembling the exhibits to the brief which consisted of the individual firms' fee declarations and lodestar reports. Id., p.

[21] Rather than have a litigation team member handle settlement, Labaton has compartmentalized its practice, and in that compartmentalization, it created a separate "settlement counsel" position who negotiates and documents all settlements. Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 10:24 – 11:12. With respect to the State Street case, this compartmentalization contributed to some of the problems giving rise to the Special Master's investigation, in particular, the failure to discover the "double-counting" of SAs allocated to TLF and the failure to disclose to the Court Labaton's fee arrangement with Texas attorney Damon Chargois. These matters are discussed infra.

[22] In March 2017, at the request of the Special Master, the Customer Class and ERISA firms each produced a complete record of time entries performed in the State Street matter. These time records indicate that Class Counsel reviewed the Notice and other settlement documents circulated by Zeiss.

16:10-14. Zeiss drafted the template for the individual fee declarations, circulated it to the other firms, and worked with them on completing their declarations and exhibits. Id., pp. 16:14-16, 20:18-19.

The Settlement and Fee Petition documents made clear that Labaton was representing both the Customer Class and the ERISA Class with respect to the settlement of the case. The "Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Class Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation and Any Motion for Attorneys' Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards," which Labaton drafted, bears the case names and numbers of all three class actions, including the ERISA actions, and provides notice to members of the "Settlement Class" that a Class Settlement of $300,000,000 has been entered into "by and among (i) plaintiffs Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, Richard A. Sutherland, The Andover Companies Employees Savings and Profit Sharing Plan and James Pehoushek-Stangeland (collectively "Plaintiffs"), on behalf of themselves and each Settlement Class Member, by and through their counsel, and (ii) State Street Bank and Trust Company (the "Settling Defendant" or "SSBT")." See Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 95-3, filed on August 10, 2016. The Notice further defines the "Settlement Class" as

> All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT's records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2l 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive.

The Notice was widely circulated.

x. FEE PETITION REQUESTING ATTORNEYS' FEES

a. Fee Negotiations Among Customer Class Counsel

Around the time the parties reached an agreement-in-principle, Customer Class Counsel engaged in discussions about how to allocate the anticipated fee award among themselves. It is apparent from these discussions that with regard to balancing fees, Lieff and TLF considered their respective roles in the BONY Mellon litigation, a fact wholly unrelated to the value added in this case. Dan Chiplock conceded at deposition, as did Garrett Bradley, that the State Street and BONY Mellon fee discussions became intertwined. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 22:7 – 23:13; Garrett Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 114:23 – 125:16. Contemporaneous emails also reflect the intertwining of the fee negotiations in the two cases. See discussion, infra.

At the inception of the case, Customer Class Counsel had agreed to a fee sharing arrangement when Labaton teamed with Lieff and TLF, pursuant to which Labaton, Lieff and TLF understood each firm would be entitled to a minimum of 20% of the fee award, with the remaining 40% to be distributed at the end of the litigation, commensurate with each firm's respective contributions to the case. See TLF-SST-033911 – 33913 (5/4/11 letter agreement, p. 2) [EX. 16]; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., pp. 414:14 – 420:10. See also, TLF-SST-040631 (8/28/15 email exchange among Larry Sucharow, Dan Chiplock, Garrett Bradley, M. Thornton, and Bob Lieff regarding the 20-20-20/40 agreement) [EX. 17].

In August 2015, Dan Chiplock expressed an interest in determining the appropriate allocation of the remaining 40%. Id. Garrett Bradley of TLF resisted, opining that the final distribution should wait until the Court made a total fee award. Id. What became apparent to Chiplock was that TLF viewed any allocation of State Street fees as tied to the then yet undecided BONY Mellon fee award. Id.[23] ("Not to be difficult but [this is a] very different situation, in other words, from BNYM, (which I know doesn't involve you Larry, but seems to be coloring this discussion.") *See also*TLF-SST-053087 (8/28/15 email from Sucharow to Chiplock ("I believe there are other cases and other agreements which are influencing people's desire to either reach agreement now or later.")) [EX. 18].

Garrett Bradley pressed for an agreement that Lieff share some portion of its allotment in BONY Mellon with TLF in recognition of the fact that Thornton had developed the initial FX concept, and refused to settle on an allocation in State Street until he saw that TLF was treated "fairly" in BONY Mellon. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep. pp. 22:8 – 23:13; TLF-SST-031166 - 31173 (G. Bradley 8/28/15 email to Bob Lieff ("…I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter…) [EX. 19]; see also Bradley to Chiplock email of the same date, id. ("What I am pointing out is the inequities of our different positions…. In Mellon … we had created the fx case all we got was some work that resulted in $1.5 million in time. Now contrast that the State Street where you had no client and no concept…. Once we have an idea of what our Mellon numbers look like, we can discuss how to approach the balance of the 40% with Labaton.") [EX. 19].

Dan Chiplock, the lead attorney in BONY Mellon, took exception with the implication that Lieff was not treating TLF fairly in that case. He pushed back, reminding Bradley in an email two days later that Lieff's role in creating the result in BONY Mellon "doubled the value of State Street." Id. (8/30/15 email from Chiplock to Bradley). He further reminded Bradley, "I also gave your firm more assignments than others at the outset in BNYM until it became clear that the work simply wasn't getting done." Id. Bradley asked what Chiplock meant when he said TLF did not "get the work done." Id. "That has never been specified and really should be to be deemed credible." Id. Chiplock agreed to provide Bradley with emails showing the assignments given to TLF. Id.

The discussion turned to lodestar reporting in State Street with Chiplock warning Bradley not to include unwarranted hours in TLF's fee petition:

> In the meantime, while we're on the subject of credibility, I want to point out that we need to be consistent and credible with our lodestar reporting in State Street. We are gathering final lodestar reports now, but I heard third-hand that Mike [Thornton]recently said on a call (that I wasn't on) that Thornton Law Firm was showing $14 million. That number does not comport with the hours Mike Lesser told me for Thornton as of June 29 (around 12,750), which makes more sense given what we know about the work that was done. I am hopeful that Mike T simply misspoke or was guessing when he said $14 million and that we are not going to suddenly see an additional 12,000 hours mysteriously appear on Thornton Law Firm's behalf…Also recognize that your [document] reviewers were all housed outside your firm ad their respective overhead and facilities expenses were paid for by others, which we were happy to do as a courtesy. Thanks.

b. Submission of the Fee Petition

Customer Class Counsel's discussions about fee sharing were put on hold as State Street settlement negotiations wrapped up, and in advance of the hearing on final approval of the settlement, Plaintiffs' Counsel submitted to the Court a joint Fee Petition in support of their request for attorneys' fees in the amount of $74,541,250.00. See Dkt. No. 104. The Fee Petition consisted of the Omnibus Declaration[24] signed by Lawrence Sucharow of Labaton, and nine individual declarations submitted by each law firm that had filed an appearance in the case. The individual declarations described the work performed by each firm and the basis for its fee request. Attached to each declaration was a chart ("Exhibit A") summarizing each firm's respective lodestar through August 30, 2016. See Exhibit A to Dkt. Nos. 104-15, 104-16, 104-17, 104-18, 104-19, 104-20, 104-21, 104-22, 104-23. The narrative descriptions and chart outlines were taken verbatim from the template provided by Labaton. See Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 16:10-16; 21-24.

[24] "Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow In Support of (A) Plaintiffs' Assented-To Motion For Final Approval of Proposed Class Settlement and Plan of Allocation and Final Certification of Settlement Class and (B) Lead Counsel's Motion For An Award of Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs." Dkt. No. 104.

c. The Labaton Template and Inaccuracies in Declaration Language

The Labaton template included several paragraphs describing the source of the lodestar calculations and billing rates. In particular, it included a generic description of the basis for the hourly rates listed in the lodestar calculation. With the exception of three ERISA firms -- McTigue Law,[25] Zuckerman Spaeder,[26] and Beins Axelrod[27] -- the Customer Class Counsel and the other ERISA Class Counsel adopted the template language in its entirety. Specifically, Labaton provided counsel with the following language:

[25] The McTigue Law Firm's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my Firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my Firm's regular rates otherwise charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions my firm has been involved in." Dkt. No. 104-18, ¶ 20.

[26] Zuckerman Spaeder's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions and are charged to clients paying us currently by the hour." Dkt. No. 104-20, ¶ 4.

[27] Beins Axelrod's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates charged by the Timekeepers are the Firm's regular rates for contingent cases and those generally charged to clients for their services in non-contingent/hourly matters. Based on my knowledge and experience, these rates are also within the range of rates normally and customarily charged in Washington, D.C. by attorneys of similar qualifications and experience in cases similar to this litigation, and have been approved in connection with other class action settlements. The Firm has charged, and received, an hourly rate of $525.00 in litigation involving fiduciary breach by a former trustee and service providers. The Firm does charge a lower rate to longstanding Fund clients in non-contingency matters and to its Union clients. To serve the public interest, the Firm has also charged reduced rates to individual employees with employment discrimination claims. Dkt. No. 104-22, ¶ 8.

- "The schedule attached hereto as Exhibit A is a summary indicating the amount of time spent by each attorney and professional support staff-member of my firm who was involved in the prosecution of the Class Actions, and the lodestar calculation based on my firm's current billing rates. For personnel who are no longer employed by my firm, the lodestar calculation is based upon the billing rates for such personnel in his or her final year of employment by my firm. The schedule was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm, which are available at the request of the Court. Time expended in preparing this application for fees and payment of expenses has not been included in this request." (Dkt. Nos. 104-15, ¶ 6; 104-16, ¶ 3; 104-17, ¶ 4; 104-18, ¶ 3; 104-21, ¶ 3; 104-23, ¶ 3).

- The hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm [] are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their service, which have been accepted in other complex class actions." Dkt. Nos. 104-15, ¶ 7; 104-16, ¶ 4; 104-17, ¶ 5; 104-18, ¶ 4; 104-21, ¶ 4; 104-23, ¶ 4).

TLF adopted the preceding paragraphs verbatim in Garrett Bradley's Declaration, summarizing the basis for TLF's fee request. See Dkt. No.104-16. Several representations contained within these paragraphs are inaccurate:

- Exhibit A is a summary of time spent by attorneys and professional support staff members "of my firm." None of the SAs were employed by TLF. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:8-10; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 82:12-21; 83:4-7.

- The billing rates for the SAs are "based on my firm's current billing rates." TLF did not maintain "current billing rates" for SAs listed on its lodestar calculation in Exhibit A. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:14-19; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 48:24 – 49:4; see also Exhibit A to Dkt. No. 104-16.

- For personnel "who are no longer employed," the lodestar is based on their rates for the "final year of employment." Again, none of the SAs were employed by TLF. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:8-10.

- The schedule was prepared from "contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm." TLF did not prepare or maintain daily time records of the hours worked by the SAs listed on its lodestar. Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 63:2-7; 69:19-25; 70:12-16; 79:19-23; Kussin 6/5/17 Dep., p. 69:4-17. Nor did TLF maintain contemporaneous time records for the other lawyers working on the State Street case. TLF-SST-011246 – 11249 (5/21/14 email from Hoffman to Lesser)("All of the hours are taken from LCHB's chart where there were mentions of discussions with either 'co-counsel' 'team' or, of course, Mike Lesser and/or MPT, GJB." [EX. 20].[28]

- The hourly rates "are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services." TLF did not maintain "regular rates" for the SAs listed on its lodestar report. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 88:2-5.

- These rates "have been accepted in other complex class actions." With the exception of 4 SAs, the $425 rate charged for the remaining SAs listed on the lodestar, including Michael Bradley, had not been accepted in other complex class actions. G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 54:1-7.

Garrett Bradley acknowledged -- both in deposition and during the March 7, 2017 hearing before Judge Wolf -- that TLF's declaration was inaccurate and "should have been clearer." 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 91:4-6; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 82:12-21. At the March 7 hearing, Bradley conceded that the language described above "should have been clarified by me at that time," but was not. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 88:18-19. There is ample evidence in the record that Garrett Bradley actually knew the Declaration contained inaccurate information but signed it anyway. See, e.g., 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:13-14; 88:2-9, 14-18; 91:5-7; 92:3-8.

d. Staff Attorney Time

Customer Class Counsel's individual fee petitions also included requests for fees for the SAs. On the lodestar summary charts (Exhibit A to the declarations), Labaton listed 25 SAs ("SAs"); Lieff listed 20 SAs; TLF listed 24 SAs. See Sucharow Decl., Dkt. No. 104-15, Ex. A; Chiplock Decl., Dkt. No. 104-17, Ex. A; G. Bradley Decl., Dkt. No. 104-16, Ex. A. In total, Customer Class Counsel reported 59,129.4 hours performed by SAs during the State Street case, accounting for nearly 70% of the Customer Class Counsel's total lodestar. See Labaton's, Lieff's and TLF's Lodestar Reports, Dkt. Nos. 104-15, Ex. A; 104-16, Ex. A; and 104-17, Ex. A;

[28] Garrett Bradley and Michael Thornton were asked for contemporaneous records, but never provided any. TLF provided a spreadsheet containing time entries recreated after the fact based on records received from other firms, mainly Lieff, working on the State Street case.

see also Master Chart of Lodestars & Expenses, Dkt. No. 104-24. As the chart below reflects, of TLF's total of 14,731 claimed hours, 10,537.9 hours (71.5%) were hours worked by "loaned" Labaton and Lieff SAs. Specifically, the Customer Class firms' lodestar Reports reflected the hours and lodestar of partners, associates and SAs in the following amounts:

FIRM	PARTNERS & ASSOCIATES	STAFF ATTORNEYS
LABATON	5,783.6 hours	31,526.4 hours
	$4,784,915.50	$11,684,111.00
LIEFF	2,025.1 hours	17,065.1 hours
	$1,391,346.50	$7,474,896.50
TLF	4,193.1 hours	10,537.9 hours
	$2,831,287.00	$4,508,837.00

xi. COURT APPROVAL OF THE SETTLEMENT AND FEE AWARD

a. Preliminary Approval

On August 8, 2016, the Court conducted a Preliminary Class Settlement Hearing, after which it granted preliminary approval of the class settlement,[29] provisionally certified the Settlement Class (as defined in the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions), approved the long-form Notice of Pendency of Class Action and Summary Notice, and appointed Labaton Sucharow LLP as Lead Counsel for the Settlement Class. See MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 97.

[29] As explained by Goldsmith during the August 8 hearing, "the reason why [class certification is] preliminary and not final is because class members do have a constitutional right to object to class certification if they see fit to do so." 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., p. 6:11-15.

David Goldsmith of Labaton appeared on behalf of the Settlement Class at the hearing. 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., pp. 4-6. Michael Thornton of TLF and Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser, as well as attorneys from the three ERISA firms, also attended the hearing. Id., pp. 2-4. On behalf of all counsel, Goldsmith addressed plaintiffs' request for preliminary class certification for settlement purposes, which involved meeting a two-prong test to show that class representatives and class counsel adequately represent the class members. 8/8/16 Hearing Tran., pp. 7:24-8:7. In response to the Court's inquiry whether Labaton could adequately represent both the ERISA and Customer classes, Goldsmith responded that Labaton was "adequate"; he argued that the Court had "no reason to depart" from its initial adequacy findings in the January 12, 2012 Memorandum and Order appointing Labaton as interim class counsel. Id., p. 8:18-22. The Court acknowledged, and Goldsmith agreed, that a class member may opt out of the settlement if he or she "feels that its [sic] interests justify a different path." Id., p. 11:6-13.

The Court further asked Goldsmith to explain why the $300 million private settlement was reasonable, and specifically addressed the role of the DOJ, SEC, and DOL in the settlement process. Id., p. 13:2-7. The Court showed a genuine interest in ensuring that the global settlement was fair to all participants: "if what I'm being asked to approve is going to affect something you've negotiated at arm's length with the [DOJ] and something you've negotiated with the SEC and something you've negotiated with the [DOL], I think that goes into both the reasonableness of the settlement and the fairness of the settlement." Id., p. 18:13-22. Goldsmith affirmed that the reasonableness of the settlement is evidenced, in part, by the fact that DOL signed off on it. Id., p. 18:2-6.

b. Final Approval

On November 2, 2016, a hearing was held on Plaintiffs' Assented to Motion for Final Approval of Settlement and Lead Counsel's Motion for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and for Payment of Service Awards. Goldsmith, accompanied in the courtroom by Zeiss, again represented the "plaintiffs and settlement class." 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., pp. 3:7-9, 10-11. Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser and Carl Kravitz of Zuckerman Spaeder also attended the hearing. See id., pp. 2-3.[30] During the hearing, the Court approved the settlement, explaining that its approval was based, in part, on its finding that counsel on both sides "vigorously represented their clients' interest." 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., p. 21:1-5. The Court also found the proposed Plan of Allocation to be fair. See id., p. 22:16-21. The Court further noted the importance of the parties having reached a global settlement, including settlement with the federal regulators, in particular the DOL and SEC. Id. at pp. 17:8-23, 38:12-20.

In considering the reasonableness of the attorneys' fees requested, the Court inquired whether the plaintiffs' fee agreement was disclosed to the class members "at the outset" of the case, to which Goldsmith responded only that the fee agreement was "consistent with the fee [plaintiffs were] seeking here." Id. p. 26:12-13. In a colloquy with the Court, Goldsmith argued, "[W]e produced a $300 million settlement…. So I think … a fee of some substance would be in order, frankly." Id., p. 28:16-20. The Court acknowledged that the $74 million in fees requested by counsel "is of some substance," id, p. 28:21-25, but noted that none of the class representatives had objected to that fee request. Id., p. 34-8-9.

[30] There is nothing in the record evidence indicating that any other attorneys from Labaton, Lieff, TLF, or any of the ERISA firms were in attendance at the final approval hearing.

At the conclusion of the hearing, stating that he was "relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today," Judge Wolf approved a 25% award of attorneys' fees in the amount of $74,541,250.00, plus expenses in the amount of $1,257,699.94. See id. p. 35:4-8. The Court also approved service awards totaling $85,000 -- $25,000 for ATRS and $10,000 for each of the six ERISA plaintiffs. Id. at pp. 33:4-6, 35:9-12. Judgment was entered accordingly. See Order and Final Judgment, Dkt. No. 110. The Judgment became final on December 2, 2016.

xii. DISTRIBUTION OF SETTLEMENT AND ATTORNEYS' FEES

As provided in the Plan of Allocation approved by the Court at the Final Settlement Hearing, $60 million of the $300 million gross settlement was allocated to the ERISA class plaintiffs, providing ERISA plan participants with a recovery ratio of roughly $2 to every $1 of loss to the class. See Sucharow Decl., Dkt. No. 104, ¶ 134. The Plan of Allocation further provided that a maximum of $10.9 million of the approximately $75 million in total attorneys' fees could be paid out of the ERISA Class' recovery for attorneys' fees.[31] This allocation was negotiated and agreed to by Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel after the parties reached the agreement-in-principle on the $300 million settlement, See Sucharow Decl., ¶ 139; see also Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 54:25 – 55:1; 59:11-12; Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 48:19; McTigue 7/7/17 Dep., p. 43:10-11. In accordance with the Plan of Allocation and the ERISA fee allocation previously agreed upon among the Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel, ERISA Counsel collectively received 10% of the total fee award -- a sum of $7.5 million -- with the remaining $3.4 million under the agreed-upon $10.9 million ERISA fee cap being paid back to Customer Class Counsel instead of to ERISA Counsel. See Sucharow Decl., ¶¶ 134-139.

[31] The $10.9 million cap in attorneys' fees from the ERISA class recovery was negotiated by DOL. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 66:1-8; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., p. 66:8-23; see also TLF-SST-052694 – 52696 (8/21/15 email correspondence between Customer Class counsel and ERISA counsel related to negotiations with DOL regarding fees) [EX. 21]; TLF-SST-052697 – 52698 (8/26/15 email from Lynn Sarko to Customer Class counsel and ERISA counsel regarding negotiated deal with DOL) [EX. 22].

a. Payment of Fees and Expenses

On September 2, 2016, State Street paid the gross settlement sum of $300 million into a Class Settlement Fund Escrow Account -- an escrow account maintained by Labaton, as Lead Settlement Counsel, with Citibank -- where the funds remained pending entry of Judgment. See Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement, Dkt. No. 89; Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 122:15, 124:9-11, 130:21-23; see also LBS041692 (Citibank Escrow Account Statement). Under the terms of the Stipulation, Labaton agreed that, once Judgment became final it would "in good faith promptly distribute any award of attorneys' fees and/or payments of litigation expenses among plaintiffs' counsel." Dkt. No. 89 ¶ 21 (emphasis added).

After the Court issued its Order awarding fees, the total sum of the fee award was transferred by Labaton into a Lead Counsel Escrow Fund, also held by Citibank. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 124:16-23; 125: 3-4. On December 8, 2016, after Judgment became final, Labaton instructed the bank to disburse the fees, expenses, and service awards approved by the Court. Id., p. 125:13-21. The fees and expenses were disbursed by the bank directly to Lieff, TLF, McTigue, Keller Rohrback and Zuckerman Spaeder. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 125:13-21. Labaton also instructed the bank to transfer approximately $34 million to its firm's IOLA account, out of which Labaton paid the service awards, obligations to "of counsel" attorneys,[32] and approximately $4.1 million to Texas attorney, Damon Chargois, that same date. Id., pp. 140:21 – 141; 143:4-8.[33]

The $4.1 million payment to Chargois was the fourth largest payment made from the total fee award, and more money than was paid to any ERISA firm. See Master Chart of Lodestars, Litigation Expenses and Plaintiffs' Service awards, Dkt. No. 104-24. In coordinating the payment to Chargois, Zeiss instructed Labaton's accounting department to remit payment from the firm's IOLA if "it will be a rush" to pay Chargois. 12/7/16 Zeiss Email to Ng, LBS 032881 – 32883 [EX. 50]. Unlike payments from settlement escrow funds -- governed by escrow agreements -- payments made from Labaton's IOLA account did not require two additional signatures for disbursement. See Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 120:9-23. Chargois testified that it did not matter to him when, or from which account, the payment was made. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep. pp. 304:9-10; 305:3-10.

The $4.1 million payment to Chargois was uncovered during the course of the Special Master's investigation.[34] Chargois never filed an appearance in the State Street case, nor did he, or his firm, Chargois & Herron, submit any declaration or lodestar report as part of the State Street Fee Petition. See Dkt. Nos. 104, 104-15, 104-16, 104-17, 104-19.

All parties concede Chargois performed no work on the case.

[33] Labaton has not yet distributed money to the class members. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 133: 2-5, 9-12. As of July 2017, the Class Settlement Account contained $224,978,733.34. Id., p. 132:6-10.

[34] This payment of fees to Chargois first came to light in a batch of emails produced by TLF on August 8, 2017 and gave rise to several additional months of depositions and written discovery. Neither Labaton nor Lieff produced any emails related to Chargois in response to the Special Master's initial requests for production of documents. See, e.g., Special Master's First Set of Interrogatories to LCHB (Revised) Nos. 5, 10, 62, 74; Special Master's First Set of Interrogatories to LBS (Revised) Nos. 4, 9, 60, 72; Special Master's First Set of RFPs to LCHB (Revised) 3, 16, 40. After the Chargois relationship was disclosed by the TLF-produced emails in response to the Special Master's initial document requests, both Labaton and Lieff produced a significant number of emails and documents pertaining to the Chargois relationship and payment in response to subsequent document requests by the Special Master specifically related to Chargois.

The names Chargois and/or Chargois & Herron appear nowhere in the Fee Petition or any of its exhibits. See id. All parties concede that the Court was never informed about Chargois or the payment of $4.1 million to his firm. See Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 87:24-88:11; 89:1-17; 90:7-12; 122:23-123:5; Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., p. 112:10-14; G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 152:19-153:16.

B. INVOLVEMENT OF LABATON AND CHARGOIS IN THE STATE STREET CASE

i. LABATON'S INTRODUCTION TO ATRS

Labaton represented ATRS throughout the State Street case, serving as Lead Counsel throughout the litigation. ATRS was headed by Executive Director George Hopkins. Hopkins had succeeded Paul Doane, the previous Executive Director, on December 29, 2008. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep. p. 14:10-22. [35]

Labaton's relationship with ATRS began in or about 2007. Around that time, Labaton was looking to expand its securities monitoring practice and form new relationships with potential pension fund clients. Keller 10/13/17 Dep., p. 21:1-22; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep. pp. 15:3-16:19; Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 32:3-22. In an effort to "mak[e] inroads" in the Arkansas community, Labaton sought the assistance of Damon Chargois, a lawyer admitted to practice law in Arkansas and Texas (and who in 2007 maintained law firms under the name Chargois & Herron in each state.)[36] Labaton had previously retained Chargois to serve as its local counsel in [35] After Paul Doane resigned, for a brief period of time ("three or four months") ATRS was headed by an interim director, Gail Bolden, Doane's deputy director. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep., p. 14:14-22. Hopkins succeeded Gail Bolden. Id., p. 14:18-20.

[36] Chargois & Herron's Arkansas office was closed in late 2009 or early 2010. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 31:15-17.

HCC Holdings,[37] a securities fraud class action case filed in federal court in Houston.[38] In September 2007, Chargois introduced Labaton partners Eric Belfi and Christopher Keller to Paul Doane, Executive Director of ATRS, at that time. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 33:24-35:22.

Chargois recalled Belfi asking him in 2007 to introduce him and his partner Chris Keller to institutional investors in Arkansas, as Labaton was interested in creating client relationships with institutional investors in that region. Id., p. 20:4-17. Chargois readily admitted that at the time he had no knowledge of any "institutional investors." Id. at p. 20:20. Chargois' then partner, Tim Herron, did not have any relationships with institutional investors, either. Id., p. 27:16-19. However, Herron was friends with an Arkansas state senator, Steve Farris, and Farris suggested to Herron that they might want to try to contact Paul Doane who had then just recently taken over as Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System. Id., p. 33:16-21. Herron told Chargois, and Chargois called Doane. Id., p. 33:24-34:1.

Chargois explained to Doane that he was working with a New York law firm that specialized in institutional investors and asked if Doane would meet with him, Belfi and Keller, and Doane agreed. Id., p. 34:1-35:3. Within a week or so, a meeting took place in Little Rock. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 35:8-16. At that initial meeting, "Eric Belfi presented all the services that Labaton has available and what their -- what they could do and presented as a courtesy that they could do this monitoring of the portfolio." Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 36:13-16. Doane later came to New York for another meeting with Belfi and Keller at Labaton's offices; Chargois was not present. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 38:2-6. At this meeting, Labaton did a presentation for Doane [37] In re HCC Insurance Holdings, Inc. Securities Litig., SDTX No. 07-00801.

[38] In contrast to this case, in HCC Holdings, Chargois filed an Affidavit in support of the Application for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and Reimbursement of Expenses, which included a lodestar report of his firm, Chargois & Herron LLP. See In re HCC Insurance Holdings, Inc., SDTX No. 07-00801, Dkt. No. 71-3.

as to what services the firm could provide. According to Belfi, "[O]nce we did the presentation, we were kind of put on their radar. So, at some point later when they did the RFQ [of prospective monitoring counsel], they sent an RFQ for us to respond to." Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 37:17-22.

ii. THE CHARGOIS "ARRANGEMENT"

As consideration for Chargois' efforts, Belfi and Keller agreed to pay Chargois' firm, Chargois & Herron, a maximum 20% of any attorney's fees received by Labaton in any litigation involving an institutional investor for whom Chargois had facilitated the introduction, including ATRS (hereinafter "the Chargois Arrangement"). Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 50:18-25; 53:10-17; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., pp. 315:21-24, 316:11-14.[39] Both Chargois and Belfi understood that it was the mere introduction by Chargois to potential institutional investors or potential antitrust clients that was the basis of the agreement to pay Chargois 20% of any legal fee Labaton earned on any cases in which Labaton was lead counsel or co-lead counsel and the client was lead or co-lead plaintiff.[40] Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 50:18-24; Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 19:6-21:21. Under [39] Labaton had a similar 20% arrangement with TLF (and in particular, TLF partner, Garrett Bradley). As Christopher Keller of Labaton explained:

> [W]e had a very, sort of, good, productive relationship with the Thornton Law Firm and -- where, you know, we would -- we would jointly get retained by, you know, funds in the Northeast area, which was their sort of area of -- they had lots of relationships within the area. And we, you know, had an understanding they would get, sort of, let's say, up to 20 percent. And the understanding was that, it was going to be somewhat of a, I call it, a turnkey, but I'm using a -- what I mean is we didn't have to do any heavy lifting up in the -- up in the area, because there's a lot -- I mean, we're a national firm. Think about this, so we have over 200 pension fund clients, we may have one within driving distance of our office okay. So we maintain a national practice and -- but without offices all over the nation. So it's very important, any time that we can leverage others who -- who are ready and willing and able to do the heavy lifting locally, we're happy to sort of let that happen, and, of course, pension funds feel much more comfortable with people they know or people who are close by or were introduced through someone they know, so we made that a -- a -- this is how Labaton was going to build more business.

Keller 10/13/17 Dep., pp. 43:3-44:19

[40] While Chargois understood that he would receive 20%, as Keller testified, Labaton believed that it was only obligated to pay Chargois a percentage of fees proportional to ATRS's share of the contributory losses incurred by all lead plaintiffs. By way of example, if ATRS was named co-lead counsel with another plaintiff in a successful this arrangement, Chargois was not expected to file an appearance or assume a substantive role in any of the resulting litigation, or even interface with the client. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 56:19-24; 57:1-6; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 323:2-4.

While Chargois and Keller attempted on numerous occasions over the years to reduce this agreement to writing, and exchanged several drafts to which they both agreed in large measure, no formal agreement was ever put together; it was wholly "an email relationship." Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 59:8-10 ("Only e-mails. There's no four-corner document that -- in ceremony and signed or anything. It's just an e-mail relationship." Id.) Chargois was very clear that his understanding was that this was not a "referral fee" arrangement, nor was he "local counsel"; it was just an "agreement":

> THE SPECIAL MASTER: What is your understanding of the relationship? And if it evolved from something to something else --
>
> THE WITNESS [Mr. Chargois]: Right.
>
> THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- we'd be very interested in that.
>
> THE WITNESS: At the very beginning I thought I would be local counsel. I was not.
> . . . .
> When Eric informed me that [the joint RFQ] had been kicked back, I needed to withdraw, ever since then I've only referred to this as an agreement. I don't have a client so...
>
> THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just an agreement?
>
> THE WITNESS: Just an agreement.
>
> THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not a referral fee arrangement?
>
> THE WITNESS: No, sir.
>
> THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not a local counsel arrangement?

litigation, Chargois' payment would not be 20% of Labaton's fee, but would reflect ATRS's pro rata portion of the total loss amount, offsetting the full 20% figure

THE WITNESS: No, sir.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not a forwarding fee arrangement?

THE WITNESS: I'm not sure what forwarding fee means.

MR. SINNOTT: Neither are we.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: We weren't either. I was going to follow up on that and ask you if you've ever heard the term.

THE WITNESS: I have not.

THE SPECIAL MASTER: So just a fee arrangement or just an arrangement?

THE WITNESS: I've always referred to it as our agreement.

Chargois 10/2/17 Dep. pp. 62:10-64:5.

While Labaton's relationship with Chargois began with Chargois & Herron serving as "local counsel" in the HCC Holdings Texas class action, it is clear that the relationship evolved over time. See Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 17:19-21; 38:23-24, 39:1; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 81:16-20. As a result, the terminology used to describe the Chargois Arrangement varies greatly between individuals. Counsel has labeled Chargois as "local counsel," or "the local," while on other occasions describing the Chargois Arrangement as based in "referral" or a "referral obligation." See, e.g., LBS027776 (4/24/13 Bradley email to others) [EX. 23]; M. Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., p. 38:13-15; Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 68:4-7, 102:3-8; Keller 10/13/17 Dep., pp. 45:11-16; 71:24-72: 4; 96:16-18; 212:5-12. In yet other instances, the Chargois Arrangement is characterized as a "forwarding obligation." Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 59:13-19; 86:8-12. Finally, Sucharow testified that he considered Chargois a "joint venturer" working with Labaton to find pension clients. Sucharow. 9/1/17 Dep., p. 16:1-3. Regardless of the title used, it is undisputed that Chargois' sole contribution to -- and only role in -- the State Street case was facilitating an introduction between Labaton and ATRS -- years before the State Street case was even contemplated. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 82:7-10.

iii. THE ATRS REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATIONS (RFQ)

Chargois' efforts got Labaton the "foot in the door" it wanted and needed with ATRS. In mid-2008, ATRS issued a Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") to Labaton, among other firms. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 37:19-22. On July 30, 2008, Labaton responded by submitting a "joint proposal" on behalf of Labaton and Chargois & Herron. LBS017738 – 17755 (7/30/08 Joint Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP & Chargois & Herron, LLP) [EX. 24]; see also Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 37:20-23. Labaton, through Belfi, received ATRS's response to the RFQ on October 13, 2008 by email from ATRS Chief Counsel, Christa Clark. See LBS 017455 - 17456 (10/13/08 email from C. Clark) [EX. 25]. Clark advised Belfi that Labaton had been selected as an additional monitoring counsel for ATRS, but that Chargois & Herron was not approved as part of the proposal. Id. Clark indicated that while there was no requirement to use Chargois & Herron, Labaton could use Chargois & Herron on a "case by case basis," if they were "a necessary and appropriate expense." Id. Specifically, Clark's email to Belfi stated in relevant part:

> I am pleased to inform you that subject to final approval of the Attorney General's ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system.
>
> I would like to speak to you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.
>
> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Chargois understood that his firm was not accepted as part of the RFQ process. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 48:15-49:1.

At no point after receiving Clark's email did Labaton inform Ms. Clark, Mr. Doane (or his successor, George Hopkins) of the pre-existing Chargois Arrangement generally, or that it was obligated to pay Chargois a portion of any fees that might be awarded in its representation of ATRS in the State Street matter. Belfi, 9/5/17 Dep. pp., 23:5-16; 115:17-21; 118:16-19; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 297:14-16.

iv. ATRS' LACK OF KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Beginning in 2008, Labaton went on to serve as monitoring counsel for ATRS.[41] Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 18:6-7. Shortly thereafter, George Hopkins replaced Paul Doane as Executive Director of ATRS. Id., at 27:16-18. Belfi explained that Hopkins was a much more direct person, who only wanted to deal with Belfi. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 27:18-28:7, 56:22-57:10. Hence, the relationship between Chargois and ATRS shifted with Hopkins' appointment. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., p. 57:11-24. Labaton no longer needed Chargois to facilitate communications with ATRS. Nevertheless, Labaton continued to remit payments to Chargois under their previous arrangement to avoid litigation by Chargois that would likely be filed in Chargois' home state, Texas. Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., 58:1-7, 10-15.

[41] Labaton continues to serve as one of five firms "on retainer" to ATRS, responsible for monitoring ATRS' investment portfolio and alerting ATRS to potential misappropriation or unexpected monetary loss. Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 29:9-22; 30:3-5.

George Hopkins worked closely with Labaton in deciding to file the State Street lawsuit, and he remained very involved in the case, including in the mediation process, spending "hundreds of hours" working on the case during its five-year history. Hopkins 6/14/17, p. 102:35.

Labaton sought Hopkins' approval before partnering with Lieff and TLF in the class action litigation. However, Labaton did not seek Hopkins' approval to share information with or remit payment to Chargois. Hopkins, in fact, was never informed of the existence of Damon Chargois nor of any agreement between Labaton and Chargois, much less one that entitled Chargois to 20 percent of any attorney fee recovered by Labaton on behalf of ATRS. See Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 21:5-10, 64:4-67:11; Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 18:9-20:17; 24:6-20. [42]

It is apparent from Labaton's email correspondence with George Hopkins that Labaton took pains at every turn not to reveal Damon Chargois, Chargois & Herron, or their 20% interest in ATRS cases to Hopkins. Rather than include Chargois as a co-addressee or cc him on email correspondence concerning ATRS cases in which Chargois & Herron had an interest, Eric Belfi [42] Hopkins testified that he "had no idea" that Chargois had introduced Belfi and Keller to ATRS before his tenure. In fact, Hopkins had never even heard of Damon Chargois or Chargois & Herron prior to their disclosure during the Special Master's investigation in August 2017. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep, pp. 20:22-21:10; 64:4-65:24.

Hopkins testified regarding his knowledge of Chargois:

Q. Were you aware that members of a law firm with a Little Rock office had introduced individuals that you would later come to know as Eric Belfi and Chris Keller to influential Arkansas officials in an effort to secure legal work with the state?
A. I had no idea.
Q. Are you familiar with the firm name Chargois & Herron?
A. As of about two weeks, ten days ago.
Q. But you never encountered them to the best of your recollection years ago?
A. I had never heard of that firm before.

Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep, pp. 20:22-21:10.

of Labaton either blind-copied Chargois or Herron, or separately forwarded the emails to them, the effect of both being the same -- to not reveal Chargois & Herron to Hopkins See, e.g.,

Nor did the Retainer Agreement in State Street signed by Hopkins disclose the Chargois Arrangement. The Retainer Agreement provided, in relevant part, that ATRS agrees that Labaton "may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation." LBS019948 – 19950 (9/24/10 Retainer Agreement, p. 2) [EX. 33]; see also LBS005362 – 5364 (2/8/11 Engagement Letter from Eric Belfi to George Hopkins).[43] [EX. 34]. It further provided that "[t]he division of attorneys' fees [43] Specifically, the Retainer Agreement provides:

with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation." Id. The Retainer Agreement did not name any individual attorney nor specify which, if any, of these "services" it would seek as part of the litigation. See id. It contains only a vague reference to "referral fees," but it does not name Chargois, or Chargois & Herron, and makes no reference to the obligation to Chargois the ATRS lawsuit would trigger or how the payment would be made. Chargois acknowledged he played no role whatsoever in ATRS's State Street lawsuit, and only met George Hopkins once, when he happened to be in San Francisco visiting his sister and attended an unrelated court hearing. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 54:18-23, 74:21-75:3.

a. Agreement Among Labaton, Lieff and Thornton to Share in the Payment of Labaton's Obligation to Chargois

Labaton's obligation to pay Chargois 20% of any fee it might be awarded in State Street was disclosed to Lieff and TLF in or about April 2013. The subject was first raised at a meeting during a Global Justice Network conference, an event organized by Bob Lieff and attended by Michael Thornton, Garrett Bradley, and Lynn Sarko.[44] Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 63:10-22. In an April 26, 2013 email from Garrett Bradley to Robert Lieff, Michael Thornton, Eric Belfi, Christopher Keller and Dan Chiplock, and copied to Chargois (referred to by the parties as the > Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

LBS 011060 – 11062 (9/24/10 Retainer Agreement) (emphasis added). [EX. 35].

[44] Bob Lieff testified that he does not have a specific recollection of a conversation with Bradley and Michael Thornton regarding Chargois. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 66:2-5. Although Lynn Sarko attended the Global Justice Network meeting, there is no evidence that he was party to any discussion with Bob Lieff, Michael Thornton or Garrett Bradley concerning Chargois and Sarko testified that he did not learn about the Chargois arrangement until it was disclosed in the Special Master's investigation in August 2017.

"Dublin email"), Chargois was referred to as "the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving Arkansas Teachers Retirement System." LBS 025771. In that email, Garrett Bradley memorialized an agreement reached earlier among the three Customer Class law firms to share in the payment of Labaton's 20% obligation to Chargois.[45] In relevant part, Bradley's email stated as follows:

> Bob, as you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this e-mail regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois, copied on this e-mail, of 20 percent of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX cases before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount will be 4 percent because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20 percent guaranteed, each with the balance to be decided on at a later date. Obviously, this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20 percent. We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be, 4 or 5, will be paid off the top with the balance fee split between Lieff, Labaton, Thornton pursuant to our agreement. The local asks that I copy him on this e-mail so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him, he was agreeable to this as well. Garrett.

LBS 025771 (4/25/13 G.Bradley email to R. Lieff, M. Thornton, E. Belfi, C.Keller and D. Chiplock, copied to Chargois)). [EX. 37].

Discussions concerning the specific percentage to be paid Chargois were ongoing while the parties continued with their hybrid mediation in 2013 and 2014. Later, in late 2015, after the settlement had initially been agreed to by the parties, Customer Class Counsel all agreed to allocate 5.5% of their collective fee award to Chargois. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 106:18-107:1. Labaton, Lieff, and TLF contributed equally to satisfy this obligation. Labaton Sucharow's 8/11/16 Responses to Special Master's Supplemental Interrogatories, Response No. 1(b).

[45] During the State Street litigation, Garrett Bradley had substantial contact with Belfi and Keller of Labaton, and Chargois. Bradley attended annual marketing conferences hosted by Labaton and attended by Keller, Belfi, and Chargois. Then, effective January 1, 2015, through late 2016, Garrett Bradley held a dual role as partner at TLF and "of counsel" to Labaton. See LBS007086 – 7090 (Bradley's Of Counsel Agreement). [EX. 36]. In this role, Bradley agreed to "assist Labaton partners in identifying and seeking retention by clients for securities." Id.

v. LIEFF'S AND THORNTON'S LIMITED KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Lieff and TLF were not privy to the origins of the Chargois Arrangement or the details of Labaton's obligation to pay Chargois in all cases in which ATRS is a co-lead counsel. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 92:2-12; Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 19-21, 35:12-24.[46] The original cost-sharing agreement circulated -- but never executed -- among Customer Class Counsel in 2011 shortly after the ATRS complaint was filed, referenced only that the firms acknowledged that "[t]here is an 'off the top' obligation to referring counsel of 6% of the fees awarded," without any specifics. See TLF-SST-033911 – 33913 (5/4/11 letter agreement).[47] [EX. 16]. However, Garrett Bradley of TLF testified that he had never heard anyone other than Damon Chargois referred to as "referring counsel" by Labaton in connection with the State Street litigation, G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., p. 43:1-20, and his deposition testimony indicates that he was aware that Labaton had an obligation to pay Chargois a percentage of the fees as early as "around the time the complaint was filed or shortly." Id., p. 44:7-12.[48] Bradley testified, however, that he did not know that Chargois would not have to do any work for a share of the fees, nor did he know the details of the arrangement. ("I thought his role was similar to ours; that he did substantive work,

[46] Because TLF had received financial compensation from Labaton in connection with its role as non-substantive local counsel in other cases (see supra, n. 37), TLF, through Garrett Bradley, was familiar that Labaton had arrangements of this sort.

[47] Christopher Keller, who drafted the letter agreement, testified that the "off the top" percentage to referring counsel -- 6% -- reflected 20% of Labaton's 1/3 share of the fees: "20 percent of a third is 6 point something so we probably just went with 6 percent." Keller 10/25/17 Dep., p. 419:8-9.

[48] Bradley testified:

> I believe as early as -- just prior to or right around the time of filing in 2011, I raised with Chris [Keller] how are we going to deal with your obligation to Damon 'cause I was very concerned that he would try to apply for 20 percent of this entire case.
>
> And I asked them to deal with it.

G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep. p. 44:7-13.

corresponded with the client, dealt with the client, got authority. That's what I thought his role was." Id., at p. 45:10-13; see also p. 47:7-8).

As indicated supra, the arrangement was addressed amongst the three Customer Class firms in the April 24, 2013, "Dublin" email in which Garrett Bradley described a financial obligation owed to Chargois. Bradley characterized Chargois as "local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System." LBS 025771 [EX. 37]. The Labaton attorneys addressed on the email, Chris Keller and Eric Belfi, did not offer any additional explanation. Nor did either attorney inform their co-counsel that Chargois was not performing any work in the matter. Bob Lieff responded to the email on April 23, 2013, stating "I am in full agreement." LBS030997 – 30998, (4/24/13 Lieff Email to G. Bradley, et al.). [EX. 38]. Eric Belfi responded to the email on May 6, 2013, stating "[w]e are in full agreement." Id.

Attorneys from the firms exchanged emails related to the Arrangement again in 2015. On August 28, 2015, Dan Chiplock corresponded with Larry Sucharow, Garrett Bradley and Michael Thornton regarding memorialization of the fee allocation agreement amongst the firms; Chiplock referred to payments to ERISA counsel and "local Arkansas counsel" in relation to the distribution of Customer Class Counsel fees. TLF-SST-053117-53126 (8/28/15 Chiplock Email to Sucharow, G. Bradley, Thornton, and Lieff) [EX. 39]. Garrett Bradley, referencing the prior emails in 2013, replied that there was already "a written agreement between all the parties that the Arkansas component would come off the top" and stated that the "ERISA piece" should be handled the same way. Id. As Chris Keller and Eric Belfi were not included on this email exchange, and Larry Sucharow was at that point unaware that Chargois was not performing any work as the local Arkansas counsel, the 2013 characterization of the Chargois role remained uncorrected.

The Chargois Arrangement was again raised in email correspondence between the three firms on July 8, 2016. Garrett Bradley wrote to Mike Thornton, Larry Sucharow, Dan Chiplock, Chris Keller, Eric Belfi and Damon Chargois:

> Gentlemen,
>
> As we discuss how to distribute the fee between ourselves and, of course the ERISA attorneys, I have had discussion with Damon Chargois, the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role. Damon and his firm are willing to accept 5.5% of the total fee awarded by the Court in the State Street class case now pending before Judge Wolf. As you know, we had a prior deal with him that his fee would be "off the top". He understands that ERISA counsel is now in the same pool of money. He has agreed to come down to this number with a guarantee that it will be off the court awarded fee number. Please reply all if you agree. Given that it is off the total number their [sic] is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.

LBS039936 – 39937 (7/8/16 G. Bradley Email to Lieff, Thornton, Sucharow, Chiplock, Keller, Belfi, and Chargois). [EX. 40]. None of the Labaton attorneys followed up on this email in writing. Nor does the record contain any evidence that any of the Labaton attorneys informed their co-counsel, either before or after this email, that Chargois had played no role in the State Street case, nor did the Labaton attorneys attempt to explain what "important role" Chargois played. Bob Lieff and Mike Thornton replied to Bradley's July 8 email expressing their firms' respective agreement to these terms. Id.; LBS031152 – 31153 (7/8/16 Thornton Email to G. Bradley & 7/8/16 Lieff Email to G. Bradley, et al.) [EX. 41]. Separately, Chris Keller wrote to Garrett Bradley, "great work getting this done." LBS039936 [EX. 40].

Bob Lieff testified that he thought Chargois was local counsel for Labaton. See Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 67:9-13 ("I thought he was local counsel for Labaton in this particular case I assumed dealing with the Arkansas fund because that's what local counsel will do. That was my understanding.") He further testified that had he known that Chargois had done no work on the case, he would not have agreed to the allocation of part of his firm's fee award to Chargois.

Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 97:13-16. Michael Thornton, who was intricately involved in the preliminary discussions between ATRS and Customer Class Counsel encouraging ATRS to file suit, understood only that Chargois was involved in the State Street case on a "referral basis" as "local/referring counsel." Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., p. 20:12-17. While members of the Lieff and TLF firms were generally aware of Labaton's obligation -- to be shared by Customer Class Counsel -- to pay Chargois a percentage of Labaton's total fee in the State Street case, the exact percentage or details of that arrangement were not discussed until settlement discussions were well underway years into the litigation. Thornton 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 36:16-17, 22-24; 37:1-7.

Even among Labaton attorneys, full knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement was limited to Belfi and Keller. See Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 17:10-13 ("I'm not sure I ever knew in the sense that I didn't hear 'til later on that there was an obligation to [Chargois].") For example, Larry Sucharow, who described himself as the "lead negotiator and lead strategist" for plaintiffs in the State Street case, only learned of Labaton's financial obligation to Chargois in 2015. Id., pp. 18:20-23; 87:1.[49] Similarly, David Goldsmith, the lead Labaton litigator who appeared on behalf of the purported Settlement Class in the Preliminary and Final Settlement approval hearings before Judge Wolf, did not learn of the Chargois Arrangement until November 21, 2016, several weeks after the Final Approval Hearing. Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., pp. 108:20-109:2.[50] Even those who were aware of the Arrangement, were unfamiliar with Chargois' full name. Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., pp. 7-9; 35:17-24.

[49] Though he testified that he learned of his firm's obligation to Chargois in 2015, Sucharow signed the Omnibus Declaration, which was filed with the Court in September 2016; the Declaration did not disclose the Chargois Arrangement or reference the intended payment to Chargois.

[50] Sucharow and Goldsmith's ignorance of the Chargois is another result of Labaton's compartmentalization. See note 21, supra. Only the client relationship partner, Eric Belfi, and Christopher Keller knew the details of the Chargois Arrangement.

Outside of Labaton attorneys, the terms "forwarding fee" and "referral fee" have no significance in a class action context. 9/11/17 Lieff Dep., p. 79:20-22. Robert Lieff testified that the term local counsel is also not descriptive of Chargois' role, as it is a term of art used to describe an attorney who works for a client on a case-by-case basis and submits a fee petition for services performed in a particular case, an understanding shared by Chargois himself. Lieff 9/11/17 Dep., p. 80:9-17. Although they now seek to cast Chargois in the role of "referring" counsel, Labaton attorneys never used the phrase "referring counsel" in discussions with Chargois. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 64:15-19. And when asked, Chargois did not view his role as either a "referring counsel," "liaison counsel" or "local counsel" in the State Street case or any case involving ATRS. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 55: 8-13, 20-24; 63:11 – 64:6; this was just "an agreement." Id., p. 63:5-21.

vi. ERISA COUNSEL'S LACK KNOWLEDGE OF CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Neither Labaton nor any other Customer Class Counsel ever informed ERISA Counsel of Labaton's obligation to Chargois, or Chargois' role in connection with this case. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 56:18 – 57:9, 71:14-23; Kravtiz 9/11/17 Dep. p. 70:8-10; McTigue, 9/8/17 Dep., p. 17:14-21. Like Hopkins, ERISA Counsel only learned of the Chargois Arrangement as a result of the Special Master's investigation in or about August 2017. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., 71:14-23; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep. 70:8-10; McTigue 9/8/17 Dep., p. 17:14-21. One effect of the Customer Class Counsel's failure to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to ERISA Counsel was the non-disclosure to the ERISA class representatives and members themselves.

As with Hopkins, Labaton was at pains to keep ERISA Counsel from learning about Chargois or the Chargois Arrangement. See e.g., Sucharow response to G. Bradley email regarding proposed Claw Back letter addressed only to Customer Class Counsel advising "no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split." TLF-SST-012272 – 12274 (11/22/16 Sucharow Email to Goldsmith, G. Bradley, Keller, Belfi) [EX. 42]; LBS039936 – 39937 ("Given that it is off the total number their [sic] is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.") [EX. 40]; TLF-SST-053117-53126 [EX. 39].

ERISA Counsel testified that had they known of the Chargois Arrangement during the State Street case, they would have proceeded differently in several material respects. Lynn Sarko testified that had he known of the Chargois Arrangement, he "absolutely" would have felt an obligation to disclose [the Arrangement] to the ERISA class representatives and get their informed consent. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 91:4-15. Moreover, had he become aware that an attorney who did no work on the case would receive in excess of $4 million prior to signing the ERISA Fee Allocation in 2013, Sarko would not have agreed to the award of only 9% (which became 10%) of the total fee award to ERISA Counsel. Id. pp.75:2-22, 78:19-79:4. The other ERISA counsel, Brian McTigue and Carl Kravitz of Zuckerman Spaeder, testified that they would not have agreed to it, either. See McTigue 9/8/17 Dep. p. 21:15-24; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., pp. 83:3-84:22. In fact, the purported purpose of the Fee Allocation was to align interest "on the same team" and develop a level of trust between the ERISA lawyers and Customer Class lawyers. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 82:8-15.

Sarko testified further that he would not have agreed to file a joint fee petition with the Court had he known of the intended payment to Chargois, which, in his opinion, should have disclosed. Sarko 9 /8/17 Dep., pp. 75:2-7, 78:24-79:3. Nor would he have signed the Claw Back Agreement (see Section III, infra) agreeing to reimburse Labaton for any reduction in the fee award imposed by the Court as a result of the November 10, 2016 letter to the Court admitting the overstatement of the State Street lodestar (discussed infra). Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 75:2-22, 78:19 – 79:4.

Sarko also was the chief liaison with the DOL during the mediation, and he testified he would have been obligated to tell the DOL about Chargois and his arrangement with Labaton for a cut of the fees. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep. p. 76:14-22. In Sarko's opinion, if the DOL had the information about Chargois, the Department would have had questions, and the settlement would have "blown up" because State Street was insisting on a global settlement which could not be achieved without the DOL's approval. Id., p. 84:3-5.

vii. PAYMENTS TO CHARGOIS PURSUANT TO THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT

Since the Chargois Arrangement began in 2008, Labaton has represented ATRS in at least nine cases for which it has paid Chargois a percentage of the Labaton's total fee award:

- In re A10 Networks, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, No. 2015-1-CV-276207 (Cal. Super. Ct. Jan 29, 2015)

Labaton Response to Special Master's Supplemental Interrogatory, 1(a); Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 54:2-3; 65:1-71:13.[52] In each of these cases, Labaton paid Chargois a percentage -- more often amounting to 10 - 15% than the originally agreed-upon 20% -- of Labaton's total fee award. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 60:17-20.[53] Neither Chargois nor any Chargois & Herron attorneys entered an appearance or did any work in any of these actions.

C. SCRUTINY OF THE STATE STREET SETTLEMENT AND SPECIAL MASTER'S APPOINTMENT

i. THE BOSTON GLOBE INQUIRY

By all accounts, the $300 million settlement reflected an excellent result for the class members and was the product of the highly professional and skilled work of the class's law firms. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 109:22-23; Kravtiz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 105:23-106:7; Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., p. 100:1-10. However, on November 8, 2016 -- less than a week after the Court had [51] Chargois testified that In re Capacitors was not an ATRS case, and, hence, not covered by the agreement. See Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p.65:4-7.

[52] While not identified in response to discovery, media reports also identify Labaton filing on behalf of ATRS, and being named co-lead counsel in a multi-trillion-dollar action alleging that many of the country's leading banks harmed both the United States government and private investors by rigging the management of 13 trillion dollars in securities sold by the U.S. Department of Treasury in In Re: Treasury Securities Auction Antitrust Litigation, (S.D.N.Y. 2017). Potentially, the Chargois Arrangement would cover this case, as well

[53] Chargois was not happy with the frequent reductions in the amounts Labaton paid his firm. He expressed his frustration in an October 18, 2014 email to Labaton:

> "…I am very concerned that you guys are attempting to significantly, substantially and materially alter our agreement. Our deal with Labaton is straightforward. We got you ATRS as a client after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas, and Labaton would use ATRS to seek lead counsel appointments in institutional investor fraud and misrepresentation cases. Where Labaton is successful in getting appointed lead counsel and obtains a settlement or judgment award, we split Labaton's attorney fee award 80/20 period. As I said in my text to you regarding HP and your allocation, I understand the circumstances in this case and am okay with the fee split in this instance. We are not changing our fee split agreement for all the other pension fund cases. You promised me that you would give me advanced notice of when you guys would seek a modification or accommodation on a given settlement, and I want you to keep that going forward."

LBS017593 - 17594 (10/18/14 Chargois email to Belfi) [EX. 43]; see also Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 253:2-255:4.

approved the Settlement and entered Judgment -- the Boston Globe contacted counsel for TLF to inquire about the apparent duplication of certain SA names listed on the individual firm lodestar reports of Customer Class Counsel submitted as part of the Joint Fee Petition. Garrett Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 85:23-86:11; David Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 132:16-24. Following this inquiry, attorneys from Labaton, Lieff, and TLF immediately conducted internal reviews to determine what, if any, information in their fee petitions may have been incorrect. See Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 137:11-19; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 86:15 – 87:12.

After conducting their internal reviews, Labaton, Lieff and TLF unanimously conceded that the State Street Fee Petition overstated hours worked by Customer Class Counsel by 9,322.9 hours due to the double-counting of certain lawyers' hours, resulting in a lodestar overstatement of $4,058,654.50.[54] Specifically, the Fee Petition attributed hours of staff (and contract) attorneys allocated by Lieff and Labaton to TLF for purposes of cost-sharing not only to the lodestar petitions of Lieff and Labaton -- the SA host firms -- but also to TLF's lodestar. This dramatically inflated the lodestar of TLF. See 11/10/16 Letter from David J. Goldsmith to Hon. Mark L. Wolf, Dkt. No. 116. [EX. 44].

ii. NOVEMBER 10, 2016 LETTER TO THE COURT

After Labaton, TLF, and Lieff confirmed that the double-counting alleged by the Globe had, in fact, occurred, David Goldsmith of Labaton took the lead in writing a letter to the Court to explain what had happened. See 11/10/16 Letter from David J. Goldsmith ("Goldsmith Letter"), Dkt. No.116 [EX. 44]; G. Bradley 6/1917 Dep., p. 87:15-17; Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 143:25-144:5. Various iterations of the letter were circulated among Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel, and ultimately approved by all, before the letter was filed with the Court.

[54] The ERISA Counsel's lodestar reports were unaffected by the double-counting.

Id., p. 144:5-9. The Goldsmith Letter explained that due to "inadvertent errors," Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined time and lodestar were incorrect. Of the reported 86,113.7 hours, 9,322.9 hours were overstated. Of the reported lodestar of $ 41,323,895.75, $ 4,058,654.5 was overstated. 11/10/16 Goldsmith Letter, p. 2. [EX. 44]. The internal review revealed that 17 SAs had been listed on both the TLF and Labaton lodestar reports, and for these SAs, the billing rates on the TLF report were in most instances higher. Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., p. 142:12-19. Lieff also confirmed that six SAs on TLF's lodestar report also appeared on Lieff's report. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 164:9-17; see also Goldsmith 11/10/16 Letter to the Court, Dkt. No. 116. [EX. 44].

Shortly thereafter, the Boston Globe published a report detailing the "double-counting" issue addressed by the Goldsmith Letter and raising additional questions about the accuracy and reliability of the attorneys' fees, including questions concerning the billing rates charged for the SAs and contract attorneys, and for the work in the case done by the Garrett Bradley's brother, Michael Bradley -- who was not employed by TLF -- including the $500 per hour rate at which Michael Bradley's work was included in Thornton's lodestar.[55]

The Goldsmith Letter did not attempt to explain how or why the double-counting occurred. Nor did Labaton take this opportunity to disclose the Chargois Arrangement. (Of course, Goldsmith, himself, did not know about Chargois at the time he wrote the letter to the Court.)[56]

[EX. 45].

[56] This is another instance of problems created at Labaton as a result of its compartmentalization of its practice. See notes 21 and 49, supra.

iii. THE "CLAW BACK" LETTER

After the November 10, 2016 letter was delivered, Plaintiffs' Counsel awaited a response from the Court. Recognizing that the Court might respond adversely and ultimately decide to reduce the fee award, on November 21, 2016, at the direction of Labaton's Chairman, Lawrence Sucharow, David Goldsmith drafted a letter which Sucharow then sent to all counsel -- including ERISA Counsel -- for their signature, asking all counsel to agree to refund to Labaton, for re-deposit into the State Street escrow account, their respective pro-rata share of any court-ordered reduction of fees, expenses and/or service awards ("Claw Back Letter"). See Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 152:17-155:13; see also TLF-SST-012264 – 12266 (11/21/16 Sucharow Draft Letter to Counsel) [EX. 46].

Bob Lieff and Sarko agreed, pending a breakdown of the fees to be paid out on December 8. The issue of whether to send a similar letter to Chargois was raised in an email addressed only to Customer Class Counsel by Garrett Bradley, to which Sucharow responded:

> Need two letters with breakdown, ERISA just gets sent to ERISA counsel with 10 percent off the top and then a third each. Class co-counsel get one with ERISA 10 percent off the top, Damon's percentage also off the top, and each of class co-counsel split with the percentages agreed to. In short, no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split. They only need to see their 10 percent and then split three ways. By the way, I want to asterisk the 10 percent to ERISA with a footnote saying although our fee agreement with ERISA counsel only provides for a 9 percent allocation, co-class counsel have determined to increase that to 10 percent in light of the excellent work and contribution of ERISA counsel.

TLF-SST-012272 – 12274 (11/22/16 Sucharow Email to Goldsmith, G. Bradley, Keller, Belfi) (emphasis added). [EX. 42].

Larry Sucharow then also directed Goldsmith to send a separate claw-back letter to Damon Chargois for his signature, as well. Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., p. 171:14-23. Accordingly, Goldsmith drafted a letter for Eric Belfi, the "ATRS relationship partner" with Labaton to send to Chargois. Id, p. 172:10-15. See also Belfi 9/5/17 Dep. p. 93:13-16.

iv. APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL MASTER

With questions having been raised as to the accuracy and reliability of the lodestar reports which had been submitted by Plaintiffs' counsel and relied upon by the Court in awarding fees, the Court proposed the appointment of a Special Master to investigate these issues and prepare a Report and Recommendation concerning them. See 2/6/17 Memorandum and Order, Dkt. No. 117. [EX. 47]. The Court thereafter held a hearing on March 7, 2017 to discuss, among other issues, the appointment of Hon. Gerald E. Rosen (Ret.) as the Special Master.[57] The following day, on March 8, 2017, the Court appointed Hon. Gerald E. Rosen, ret., as Special Master to investigate and prepare a Report and Recommendation as to:

> (1) the accuracy and reliability of counsels' fee petitions; (2) the accuracy and reliability of representations made in David Goldsmith November 10, 2016 letter to the Court; (3) the accuracy and reliability of representations made by parties requesting service awards; (4) the reasonableness of attorneys' fees, expenses, service awards previously ordered and whether any of them should be reduced; and (5) whether any misconduct occurred in connection with the award of attorneys' fees, and if so, whether such misconduct should be sanctioned.

3/8/17 Memorandum and Order, Dkt. No. 173 (footnotes omitted). [EX. 48].

The Special Master retained William F. Sinnott, Esq. of the law firm Donoghue, Barrett & Singal, P.C. (now "Barrett & Singal, P.C.") to assist in the investigation. The Special Master also retained John Toothman as a technical adviser, and later, Professor Stephen Gillers as an expert on the ethical and professional conduct issues raised in this case.

[57] Prior to the hearing, all of the law firms agreed to the appointment of Judge Rosen, except McTigue Law. McTigue initially filed a written objection to the appointment of Judge Rosen, see McTigue Law's Response to 2/6/17 Order, Dkt. No. 138, but on the record at the hearing, withdrew that objection. See 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., Dkt. No. 176, p. 55:3-4.

III. QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The facts set forth above raise at least the following ethical issues:

I. Whose professional conduct rules governed the obligations of class counsel in the State Street matter?

   a. Answer: The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. Federal law also informs the answers to several of the issues raised here.

II. Was the arrangement with Chargois ("the Chargois Arrangement") a valid division of fee agreement under Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e)?

   a. Answer: No. It was an improper payment for recommending a client.

III. Did class counsel have a duty to inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement, whether or not the Chargois Arrangement was a valid division of fee agreement?

   a. Answer: Yes. Federal case law and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct both required class counsel to inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement.

IV. Did class counsel have a duty to inform the certified settlement class of the Chargois Arrangement whether or not it was a valid division of fee agreement?

   a. Answer: Yes. Their fiduciary duty and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct required class counsel to inform the certified settlement class of the Chargois Arrangement.

V. Did Garrett Bradley's lodestar declaration comply with the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct and Fed. R. Civ. P. 11?

   a. Answer: No. The Declaration violated Rule 3.3(a) because, as I have been asked to assume, Bradley knew that it contained false statements when he filed it. Separately, the Declaration violated Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 because Bradley filed it without conducting "an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances" to establish that there was "evidentiary support" for the facts in it.

IV. OPINION

A. WHERE THE COURT IS CALLED ON TO APPLY A RULE OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, IT SHOULD APPLY THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT RATHER THAN THE RULES OF ANOTHER JURISDICTION. FEDERAL COMMON LAW ALSO GOVERNS ISSUES BEFORE THE COURT

i. APPLICATION OF MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Counsel's duties in this case are governed by two bodies of authority: the rules of professional conduct and federal law. The determination of whose professional conduct rules govern counsel's conduct is straightforward. The United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, the jurisdiction in which the State Street case was pending, expressly adopts the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. See L.R., D. Mass. 83.6.1 (incorporating rules promulgated by the Supreme Judicial Court). The Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct themselves -- in particular Rule 8.5(b)(1) -- reaffirm that Massachusetts ethical rules govern all conduct in matters pending before a "governmental tribunal [i.e. a court] …unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise." See Rule 8.5(b)(1); see also Rule 1.0(p). This includes applying Massachusetts' choice of law analytical framework in addition to Massachusetts substantive rules. Rule 8.5, cmt. [4].

Counsel's pro hac vice admission applications to the District Court in Massachusetts in the State Street case expressly acknowledged that the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct would govern their behavior. To gain admission pro hac vice in this Court, each attorney was required to certify, under oath, that he or she "has read and agrees to comply with the Local Rules of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts." Local Rule 83.5.1(b)(1)(C).[58] The Local Rules, in turn, incorporate the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct.

Massachusetts Rule 8.5 cmt. [4] provides that a Court's "choice of law rule" might lead to application of another jurisdiction's rule. But that would not be so on the facts before the Special Master. The District Court addressed the choice of law issue in Daynard v. Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, P.A., 188 F.Supp.2d 115 (D. Mass. 2002), where "a law professor" who was "putatively an expert on tobacco litigation," sought to enforce an oral fee-splitting arrangement with the law firm for whom he consulted. In weighing several different factors, the Court relied heavily on one factor in particular: place of performance, deeming bar admissions not dispositive of the inquiry. See id. at 119, 121, 122-123. Thus, the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct governed the dispute between the expert -- admitted to practice only in New York -- and the defendant, a South Carolina law firm, where the expert had performed the bulk of his legal work in Massachusetts. Id. at 123. Application of Massachusetts law would not, however, prevent other states with an interest in the litigation from disciplining attorneys over whom it had authority. Id.

Applying the Daynard Court's analysis to the conduct of counsel in the State Street case, Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct should, again, apply. The ethical issues here predominantly arise out of counsel's conduct before the Court as well as written submissions to the Court and duties to disclose information to the class representatives and class members whom counsel represented in the litigation. Unlike Daynard, himself, counsel here actually appeared before the Court on more than one occasion.

[58] The previous version of this rule in effect in 2011, L.R., D. Mass 83.5.1(a)(1) (amended Jan. 1, 2015), required that attorneys seeking admission to the District Court "(ii) ha[ve] satisfied the examination requirements as defined by the District Committee on Admissions relating to familiarity with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Federal Rules of Evidence, principles of federal jurisdiction and venue, and rules relating to professional responsibility; and (iii) ha[ve] filed a certificate …. attesting to familiarity with the local rules of this district."

ii. ADDITIONAL REASONS TO APPLY THE MASSACHUSETTS PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT RULES IN THIS CASE

For three other reasons the Court should apply the Massachusetts professional conduct rules. First, applying to each lawyer the rules of the particular jurisdiction in which that lawyer is admitted could subject different lawyers to different rules and possibly different outcomes for their work in the same litigation. Second, among the rules relevant here are rules that describe duties to the Court itself. The Court has a strong interest in assuring that the behavior of lawyers practicing before it is governed by its own rules, not the rules elsewhere. Third, the relevant rules also describe duties to members of the certified class who reside in many jurisdictions and whose rules may vary. As in Daynard, other jurisdictions in which these questions may arise can apply their own rules.[59] See id. at 123.

iii. FEDERAL LAW GOVERNS OTHER ISSUES BEFORE THE COURT

As stated, federal law also governs the issues discussed herein and, in particular, the obligation of class counsel to disclose to the Court their intention to give Damon Chargois -- an unaffiliated lawyer who did not appear in, work on, or accept responsibility for the litigation -- millions of dollars from the fee that counsel requested from the Court. See Section C (ii), infra.

[59] Application of Massachusetts law will not, moreover, prevent courts or disciplinary authorities in other states from enforcing their respective rules of professional responsibility, if implicated by the conduct of any attorney in this matter. Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 123. Similarly, application of Massachusetts law will not prevent courts in other jurisdictions from analyzing and applying the relevant principles of contract enforcement or public policy considerations recognized in other states, if called upon to do so.

B. THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT IS AN UNETHICAL PAYMENT FOR THE RECOMMENDATION OF A CLIENT, NOT A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT

i. RULE 7.2(b)

The Arrangement between Labaton and Chargois violates the prohibition in Rule 7.2(b), which forbids a lawyer to "give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services."[60] Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b) (current through Feb. 1, 2018). This was the language of Rule 7.2(b) in February 2011, when ATRS retained Labaton in this case, and it still is. See Mass. R. Prof. C. 7.2(b) (amended March 26, 2015). As explained below, "person" includes Chargois, who was paid for recommending Labaton to ATRS. In 2011 and today, an exception in Rule 7.2(b) provides that a lawyer "may pay fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e)." Until March 2011, Rule 1.5(e) provided:

> A division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if, after informing the client that a division of fees will be made, the client consents to the joint participation and the total fee is reasonable.
>
> Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) (amended Dec. 22, 2010, eff. March 15, 2011).

In 2007, the Supreme Judicial Court remedied three defects with Rule 1.5(e). Saggese v. Kelley, 445 Mass. 434, 442-443 (2007). The rule did not have a writing requirement, it did not say who should obtain client consent, and it did not say precisely when the client must be notified of the fee division. Id. The Court's opinion corrected these defects by declaring how the rule "will be construed" thereafter. Id. at 443.

> These problems are avoidable in fee-sharing situations if the referring lawyer, who usually is in the best position to secure compliance with rule 1.5(e), is required to disclose the fee-sharing agreement to the client before the referral is made and secures the client's consent in writing. The rule will be construed to require this in fee-sharing agreements that are formed after the issuance of the rescript in this decision. Although the primary responsibility for compliance will fall on referring lawyers, lawyers to whom > referrals are made are not absolved of all responsibility, and should confirm, before undertaking such representations, that there has been compliance with Rule 1.5(e).

Id. at 443 (emphasis in original). [61]

ii. LABATON DID NOT COMPLY WITH RULE 1.5(e). IT PAID CHARGOIS FOR RECOMMENDING A CLIENT IN VIOLATION OF RULE 7.2(b)

Labaton did not "confirm…compliance with Rule 1.5(e)" when ATRS retained it in this matter. It did not tell ATRS about Chargois and get its written (or any) consent. Labaton admits as much, but in partial mitigation cites an email from Christa Clark, ATRS's chief counsel, and language in its February 2011 retainer agreement with ATRS. Neither the 2008 Clark email, nor the language in the retainer agreement, satisfies the requirements of Rule 1.5(e) as construed in February 2011.

The Clark email, informing Labaton that the Chargois firm would not be "additional monitoring counsel," added this paragraph:

> If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or use them as independent contractors, if you deem is [sic] appropriate on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conducive to a joint proposal.

Labaton's retainer agreement with ATRS in this case provides:

> Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other [61] Effective March 15, 2011, the Saggese Court's writing requirement was added to Rule 1.5(e). Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) (current through Feb. 1, 2018). Rule 1.5(e) currently reads:

> A division of a fee (including a referral fee) between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if the client is notified before or at the time the client enters into a fee agreement for the matter that a division of fees will be made and consents to the joint participation in writing and the total fee is reasonable. This limitation does not prohibit payment to a former partner or associate pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement. Id.

> counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

For the following reasons, this generic language is inadequate to comply with Rule 1.5 as revised by the Supreme Judicial Court in Saggese: (a) ATRS was not notified "before the referral [was] made" that Labaton's fee would be divided with Chargois; and (b) ATRS never consented to the fee division "in writing." See Saggese, 445 Mass. at 442-443. Nor did the Clark email and the retainer agreement satisfy Rule 1.5(e) as it then read even without regard to Saggese. In February 2011, the rule permitted a fee division "only" after notice to the client "that a division of fees will be made" and the client consents, neither of which occurred here. Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) (amended Dec. 22, 2010, eff. March 15, 2011). Indeed, the facts reflect that Labaton attorneys took pains to ensure that George Hopkins, ATRS's Executive Director, would not become aware of the Chargois Arrangement. See supra, p. 38.

Labaton's failure denied ATRS the protection of Rule 1.5(e). If Hopkins had been told about Chargois, he could have asked for details of the financial arrangement. Labaton would have been required to tell him.[62] He could have asked what Chargois' contributions to the case were expected to be. He could have asked to know more about Chargois' qualifications and to [62] The comment to the rule at the time expanded the disclosure obligation in the text of the rule itself. Whereas the black letter rule required notice to the client that "a division of fees will be made," the comment required that lawyers go further, if the client asks, and disclose "the share of each lawyer." (Emphasis added.) The difference is between saying "we are dividing the fee," which the black letter rule required, and saying if asked, "I am going to get 70 percent and he is going to get 30 percent." More specifically, the comment in February 2011 provided: "The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(e) cmt. [4A] (amended Dec. 22, 2010, eff. March 15, 2011.) Today, the same obligation to provide the greater detail on request appears in cmt. [7A] of Massachusetts Rule 1.5, which states: "Unlike ABA Model Rule 1.5(e), Paragraph (e) does not require that the division of fees be in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or require the lawyer to assume joint responsibility for the representation in order to be entitled to a share of the fee. The Massachusetts rule does not require disclosure of the fee division that the lawyers have agreed to, but if the client requests information on the division of fees, the lawyer is required to disclose the share of each lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. Cond. 1.5, cmt. [7A].

meet him. He could have negotiated to have money slated for Chargois instead to go to the class. He could have consulted counsel on whether to "consen[t] to the joint participation."

Because the secret Chargois Arrangement did not satisfy the requirements of Rule 1.5(e) in February 2011, it does not fall within the exception to the prohibition against giving "anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services," and therefore violates Rule 7.2(b). The Daynard Court recognized that non-compliance with the division of fee rule means that a payment will violate the rule against paying for client recommendations: "Daynard is nothing like the plaintiffs in many cases who are denied enforcement of their 'fee-splitting' contracts, which are in reality fee-referral contracts." Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 131, citing Holstein v. Grossman, 616 N.E.2d 1224, 1229 (1993) (holding that a "fee-sharing agreement which is primarily based on a client referral is unenforceable as a matter of public policy where the undisputed facts show that the referred client never consented in writing to the attorneys' arrangement").

iii. LABATON'S OWN CONDUCT, OBJECTIVELY VIEWED, IS INCONSISTENT WITH THE CLAIM THAT THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT WAS A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT

Whether a division of fee agreement complies with a jurisdiction's rule is an objective inquiry. It asks: Were the rule's requirements satisfied?[63] Objectively viewed, Labaton's own conduct is, in the following ways, inconsistent with its current claim that it had a valid division of fee agreement with Chargois.

Although Labaton asked ATRS's permission to add Lieff and Thornton as counsel for ATRS, it did not inform Hopkins about Chargois. In fact, it did the opposite. It acted to conceal [63] Both Saggese and Daynard determined whether the purported agreement satisfied the conditions in Rule 1.5(e), the fee division rule. See Saggese, 445 Mass. at 441; Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 123.

the existence of the Chargois Arrangement from ATRS. It did this by blind copying Chargois on emails that included George Hopkins and by forwarding to Chargois, alone, email exchanges with Hopkins.

Labaton also concealed the Chargois Arrangement from customer and ERISA class members even after being appointed "Lead Counsel for the Settlement Class" in August 2016. Its NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTIONS did not disclose the Chargois Arrangement. The ERISA representatives and class members were its clients, as Labaton lawyers have indicated on numerous occasions. See Section D (i), infra.

Labaton did not disclose to the Thornton and Lieff Cabraser law firms, which were contributing to the payments to Chargois, the true nature of those payments when it became apparent that those firms may have misunderstood Chargois' role. In an April 26, 2013, email on which Keller and Belfi of Labaton were copied, Garrett Bradley referred to Chargois as "the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving" ATRS. In a July 8, 2016, email from Garrett Bradley, on which Keller, Belfi, and Sucharow were copied, Chargois is referred to as "the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role." Each characterization of Chargois is false or misleading. Chargois was getting paid for a client recommendation only. The Labaton lawyers who were recipients of the emails had knowledge of the Chargois Arrangement but did not correct Bradley's characterizations, as would have been expected if they believed that the Chargois Arrangement was a valid division of fee agreement. See, e.g., pp. 42-44, supra.

Labaton never informed the Court of the Chargois Arrangement, despite a legal obligation to do so. See Section C, infra.

If Labaton considered the Chargois Arrangement a true division of fee agreement, one would have expected it to finalize the agreement and adjust it to comply with the division of fee rules in each jurisdiction in which it represented ATRS. For example, both before and after it filed this action, Labaton represented ATRS in three matters in courts in California, whose rule is set out below.[64] Labaton did not comply with that rule's provisions, which, among other things, require the client's written consent after "a full disclosure has been made in writing that a division of fees will be made and the terms of such division." Cal. R. Prof. C. 2-200(A)(1) (current through Jan. 1, 2018).

By early 2009, after George Hopkins replaced Paul Doane as ATRS Executive Director, Labaton knew that it would not get the substantial help from Chargois that it had apparently anticipated. Chargois had no relationship with Hopkins. As a result of this "unexpected turn of events," Labaton "believed that the fee sharing agreement had been based upon a condition that was not being satisfied." (Response by Labaton Sucharow LLP to Special Master's September 7, 2017 Request for Supplemental Submission, at 2.) But Labaton continued to pay Chargois anyway, "fearing that [Chargois] would otherwise sue the Firm in state court in Texas, an event that could have an extremely adverse impact on a firm that works extensively with public pension and retirement plans." Id.[65] That motive may have served the firm's own interests at the [64] California Rule of Professional Conduct 2-200 provides:

> (A) A member shall not divide a fee for legal services with a lawyer who is not a partner of, associate of, or shareholder with the member unless:
>
> (1) The client has consented in writing thereto after a full disclosure has been made in writing that a division of fees will be made and the terms of such division; and
>
> (2) The total fee charged by all lawyers is not increased solely by reason of the provision for division of fees and is not unconscionable as that term is defined in rule 4-200.
>
> (B) Except as permitted in paragraph (A) of this rule or rule 2-300, a member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any lawyer for the purpose of recommending or securing employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client….

[65] The Labaton Response further states at page 10: "Labaton Sucharow was justifiably concerned that litigation over a fee dispute would be harmful to its reputation and to its relationship with ATRS, and also concerned that, as Chargois threatened, a Texas state court would rule in Chargois & Herron's favor."

time, as it appears to have viewed them, but it is inconsistent with a claim that the Chargois Arrangement was a valid division of fee agreement in the various states in which the firm represented ATRS. Labaton's interests, furthermore, would be contrary to the interests of its clients because Chargois would get paid out of settlement funds the Court might award even though Labaton believed "a condition" of the agreement "was not being satisfied."

Labaton's explanation for concealing the Chargois Arrangement from the Court and the certified class is legally and factually wrong. Labaton contends that because the Chargois payment would be paid from customer counsel's award of counsel fees, no one other than ATRS, Thornton, and Lieff had any right to know about it. Yet, as Labaton itself recognized, counsel had no fees to divide with Chargois unless and until the Court awarded counsel fees to class counsel. The Court needed to know, and class counsel were required to inform it, about the Chargois Arrangement in deciding whether to award fees, to whom, and in what amount. See Section C, infra.

iv. COURT OPINIONS IN DISPUTES BETWEEN LAWYERS DO NOT RENDER THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT

On occasion, a lawyer will seek to deny another lawyer his or her promised fee, citing a failure to tell the client about the agreement or to put it in writing (or both), as a jurisdiction's rule required. On one hand, the agreement does not comply with the rule. On the other hand, refusing to enforce it would let one lawyer keep the entire fee even where he or she was equally culpable of the violation.

Saggese v. Kelley, supra, enforced an oral agreement between a referring and referred lawyers where the client, who was not a fiduciary, later ratified the agreement. 434 Mass at 442. The Court wrote that the referred lawyers could not rely on the failure to comply with the rule "to absolve them of their contractual obligation." Id. at 441. But the Court "emphasize[d] that although failure to comply with the rule may not necessarily render a contract unenforceable between lawyers, it may subject both lawyers to disciplinary action upon division of a fee." Id. at 443 (emphasis added).

In a division of fee case in federal court in Massachusetts, a law firm of record refused to pay a lawyer for work it had allegedly retained him to do in exchange for an oral promise of five percent of any recovery. Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d at 117. The firm in that case argued noncompliance with the Rule 1.5(e) governing division of fees excused it from performing under the contract. Id. at 118. The court held that the oral promise was enforceable, citing the lawyer's "valuable" work across more than a decade, the fact that his work appeared "proportional to the alleged contract amount," and the fact that the lawyer's work on the matter was not concealed. Id. at 131. In other words, the agreement "was not a 'secret' fee-splitting agreement." Id. at 130.

These two cases respond to the equities between lawyers when a division of fee rule is violated and one of the lawyers wants to keep the entire fee. In Saggese, an individual client (not a class representative) ratified the agreement and was not harmed. See 434 Mass. at 444. In Daynard, the clients were states acting through their attorneys general, some of whom did know of Daynard's work and did not object. 188 F. Supp. 2d at 129. Furthermore, Daynard worked on the matters over the course of a decade. Id. at 131. There was no "taking advantage of uninformed clients." Id. at 131. The Court said that refusal to enforce the agreement would "smack of injustice." Id. at 132.

The equities here are different. The question here does not arise in a fee dispute between Chargois and Labaton. This is not a case where a referred lawyer, equally to blame, cites the rule in order to keep the entire fee for himself. This is not a case where a law firm, which benefitted for a decade from the work of an unaffiliated lawyer, now seeks to renege on its promise. Labaton's duties were owed to ATRS, the class ATRS purported to represent, and the Court. It did not inform the ATRS Executive Director, the customer and ERISA class members, or the Court itself of the Chargois Arrangement. Unlike in Daynard, Chargois did no work at all and the Chargois Arrangement was "secret." See id. at 130.

v. CONCLUSION

Massachusetts forbids a lawyer to "give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services." Rule 7.2(b). A lawyer is a "person" within the meaning of the rule. There is an exception for fees permitted by Rule 1.5(e), which is the Massachusetts division of fee rule. In February 2011, for a fee to fall within Rule 1.5(e), the client must be informed of the fee division before the referral is made and consent in writing.

Because Labaton did not comply with the writing or notification requirements of Rule 1.5(e), the exception in Rule 7.2(b) is not available to Labaton.

The harm here is greater than it would be for an individual client. Hopkins was a fiduciary for ATRS and ATRS purported to represent a class. Uninformed, Hopkins could not seek legal advice on how best to protect the putative class.

C. EVEN IF THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT COULD BE DEEMED A VALID DIVISION OF FEE AGREEMENT, AND NOT AN IMPROPER PAYMENT FOR RECOMMENDING A CLIENT, LABATON, THORNTON, AND LIEFF WERE OBLIGATED TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE COURT.

i. DISCLOSURE TO THE COURT IS REQUIRED UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT AND FEDERAL LAW

The obligation of customer counsel to have informed the Court of the Chargois Arrangement arises under federal case law as well as the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Disner, 688 F.3d 645, 654 (9th Cir. 2012) ("Although the application of the common fund doctrine is a matter of federal courts' equitable powers, we have frequently looked to state law for guidance in determining when an ethical violation affects an attorney's entitlement to fees.") (citation omitted). Here, both federal and state sources apply. Labaton and its expert rely on Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1) and 54(d)(2) to support their contention that, unless the Court asked, there was no duty to inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement. (Labaton Memo at 19-23; Sarrouf Decl. at 10.) Labaton attorney Chris Keller stated during the negotiations that, whatever the fee allocation amongst Customer Class Counsel might be, the court need not be informed. TLF-SST-052209 (8/28/15 email correspondence between Bradley and Keller, 'cc Sucharow) ("We should talk this through. The court absolutely need not understand what the allocation of fees is amongst counsel so that should not be included in any document to be filed with the court…") [EX. 51].

While there may not have been a duty under Rules 23 and 54 to disclose the division of fees among those lawyers whom the Court knew about, and so could inquire, the Court could not be expected to ask counsel about a division of fees with Chargois, a lawyer who had not appeared in the case and whom it did not know about. Labaton's construction of its obligation under Rule 54(d)(2), endorsed by its expert, would impose on the Court the affirmative responsibility to ask: "Is anyone else getting any portion of the attorney's fees you are asking me to award and whose existence you have not revealed?" As discussed below, the Court had no such responsibility.

The Court itself dispelled any uncertainty about what it expected. Just before approving Lead Counsel's fee request in full, the Court said: "I'm relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today." 11/2/16 Hearing. Tr., p. 35:4-5. Nicole Zeiss of Labaton and Daniel Chiplock of Lieff were in the courtroom when the Court made this statement. Both knew about the intention to pay Chargois. Neither spoke up. David Goldsmith of Labaton, who was also in the courtroom, learned of the Chargois Arrangement within weeks and did not disclose it although he had quickly disclosed to the Court the double-counting of SA time.

Earlier in the proceeding, the Court specifically asked to be reminded "of the terms of allocation." Mr. Goldsmith said, "I didn't want there to be something that was left that Your Honor wanted to hear." He then described the allocation to the class followed by a description of the basis for the fee request. Id. at 21 et seq. Chargois was not mentioned.

ii. FEDERAL CASE LAW CONTRADICTS LABATON'S NARROW VIEW OF ITS DISCLOSURE OBLIGATIONS TO THE COURT

Case law, including cases from the District of Massachusetts, amply supports recognition of the Court's fiduciary responsibility to protect the class and the Court's reliance on counsel to be forthcoming with the information the Court needs in order to do so. Private agreements among counsel do not bind the Court, which can ignore them if they reward those who did little or nothing to serve the class. Nor is the Court bound to honor the retainer agreement between counsel and the named class members. The cases that follow reflect the expansive language that District and Circuit Courts use to describe class counsel's duties to the Court and the Court's duties to the class.

In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation, 89 F.Supp.3d 155, 183 (D. Mass. 2015):

> While fee sharing agreements among counsel may be respected or treated as presumptively reasonable in a district court's allocation of attorneys' fees, persuasive authority convinces this Court that it is not bound blindly to follow such private arrangements. See, e.g., In re FPI/Agretech Sec. Litig., 105 F.3d 469, 473 (9th Cir.1997) ("[A] court may reject a fee allocation agreement where it finds that the agreement rewards an attorney in disproportion to the benefits that attorney conferred upon the class—even if the allocation in fact has no impact on the class."); In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 216, 223 (2d Cir.1987) (rejecting authority that "allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement"). Cf. In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 282–83 (3rd Cir.2001) (holding that although retainer agreements in class actions enjoy a presumption of reasonableness at the fee award stage, the presumption may "be abrogated entirely were the court to find that the assumptions underlying the original retainer agreement had been materially altered by" unforeseeable developments). More important than the terms of a private agreement are the actual contributions each firm made to the prosecution of this case and the interests of the plaintiff class.

In re Relafen Antitrust Litigation, 231 F.R.D. 52, 71 (D. Mass. 2005):

As this Court recently noted, "[b]oth the United States Supreme Court and the Courts of Appeals have repeatedly emphasized the important duties and responsibilities that devolve upon a district court pursuant to Rule 23(e) prior to final adjudication and settlement of a class action suit." In re Relafen Antitrust Litig., 360 F.Supp.2d 166, 192 (D.Mass.2005) (citations omitted). Although settlement is often a more favorable result than litigation, "the court has a fiduciary duty to absent members of the class in light of the potential for conflicts of interest among class representatives and class counsel and the absent members." In re Lupron, 228 F.R.D. at 94 (citing *In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Prods.,*55 F.3d 768, 805 (3d Cir.1995) ("Rule 23(e) imposes on the trial judge the duty of protecting absentees, which is executed by the court's assuring the settlement represents adequate compensation for the release of the class claims.")).… Reynolds v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank, 288 F.3d 277, 279–80 (7th Cir.2002) (Posner, J.) (noting the concern that a lawyer's self interest may trump the interests of the class members "requires district judges to exercise the highest degree of vigilance in scrutinizing proposed settlements of class actions. We and other courts have gone so far as to term the district judge in the settlement phase of a class action suit a fiduciary of the class, who is subject therefore to the high duty of care that the law requires of fiduciaries.")

In re "Agent Orange" Product Liability Litigation, 818 F.2d 216, 223 (2nd Cir. 1987):

There is authority for a court, under certain circumstances, to award a lump sum fee to class counsel in an equitable fund action under the lodestar approach and then to permit counsel to divide this lodestar-based fee among themselves under the terms of a private fee sharing agreement. … We reject this authority, however, to the extent it allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement. Such a division overlooks the district court's role as protector of class interests under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e) and its role of assuring reasonableness in the awarding of fees in equitable fund cases. … cf. Jones v. Amalgamated Warbasse Houses, Inc., 721 F.2d 881, 884 (2d Cir.1983) ("if the court finds good reason to do so, it may reject an agreement as to attorneys' fees just as it may reject an agreement as to the substantive claims"), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 944, 104 S. Ct. 1929, 80 L.Ed.2d 474 (1984). In addition, this approach overlooks the class attorneys'

In re FPI Agretech Securities Litigation, 105 F.3d 469, 474 (9th Cir. 1997):[66]

> We reject Chuck's [counsel's] proposed rule that a district court may decline to approve a fee allocation only if it is contrary to the interests of the class or in violation of rules of professional conduct. Instead, we hold that the relative efforts of, and benefits conferred upon the class by, co-counsel are proper bases for refusing to approve a fee allocation proposal….
>
> Chuck next argues that the district court should have treated the fee allocation proposal as an enforceable contract. However, the cases on which Chuck relies are inapposite. Neither case involved attorneys' fees in a class action, and such fees derive from principles of equity, not contract. More importantly, both cases involved formal fee agreements, whereas here the parties merely submitted orally a fee allocation proposal, arrived at, figuratively speaking, "on the courthouse steps," for the court's approval. We decline to curb the district courts' broad discretion in exercising their equitable power to award attorneys' fees in common fund class actions by requiring that fee allocation proposal be treated as enforceable contracts. [Internal citations omitted.]

Lewis v. Teleprompter Corp., 88 F.R.D. 11, 18 (S.D.N.Y. 1980):

> Wolf Popper has argued that it should be a matter of indifference to the court how the pie is sliced, if the fee requested is on its face a reasonable one, and if the results accomplished warrant its award. It suggests that it is routine for the court simply to fix the amount of the fee, and then to leave it to the various plaintiffs' attorneys involved to decide for themselves how the fee is to be allocated that, in fact, it is a service to the court not to burden it with the nuts and bolts of determining distribution. While I appreciate Wolf Popper's solicitude, I reject its argument. Wolf Popper has overlooked two important obligations which are part and parcel of its role as plaintiffs' counsel: the duty of its members and associates as officers of the court to be sure that the court, in passing on its fee application, has all the facts; and its fiduciary duty to the shareholder class not to overreach.

Federal case law also recognizes the special danger of conflicts between a lawyer and her client at the fee-determination stage in common fund cases. The economic interests of the two are then directly adverse because the greater the fee to the lawyer, the less will be the recovery to the class. See, e.g., In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation, 396 F.3d 294, 307 (3rd Cir. 2005):

[66] Lieff was co-lead counsel in this case and participated in the dispute over allocation of legal fees.

> The determination of attorneys' fees in class action settlements is fraught with the potential for a conflict of interest between the class and class counsel. See [In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 254-255 (3rd Cir. 2001] (explaining that because clients seek to maximize recovery and lawyers seek to maximize fees, "there is often a conflict between the economic interests of clients and their lawyers, and this fact creates reason to fear that class counsel will be highly imperfect agents for the class"); [In re Cendant PRIDE, 243 F.3d 722, 730 (3d Cir. 2001) (discussing "the danger inherent in the relationship among the class, class counsel, and defendants" and recognizing "an especially acute need for close judicial scrutiny of fee arrangements in class action settlements") (internal quotations omitted); Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h), 2003 Advisory Committee Notes ("Active judicial involvement in measuring fee awards is singularly important to the proper operation of the class-action process.").

iii. THE MASSACHUSETTS RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT ALSO REJECT LABATON'S VIEW THAT IT HAD NO DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE COURT UNLESS THE COURT ASKED

Apart from federal law, the omission of the Chargois payment from the fee application violated Rules 3.3(a) and Rule 8.4(c) even if the balance of the application was literally true. Rule 3.3(a)(1) provides: "A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a)(1) (current through February 1, 2018). Rule 3.3(a)(3) provides in part that a lawyer "shall not knowingly offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false." Rule 8.4(c) provides: "It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." Mass. R. Prof. C. 8.4(c) (current through February 1, 2018).

A true statement can violate these rules through omission. Rule 3.3, cmt. [3] ("There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation."); In re O'Toole, 2015 WL 9309021, at *5 (Mass. St. Bar. Disp. Bd. 2015) ("'[H]alf-truths may be as actionable as whole lies.'… Statements that are 'technically accurate' or 'literally true,' but that nevertheless are 'clearly intended to mislead' or 'beg[ ] [a] false inference' amount, in appropriate cases, to false statements within the meaning of" Rules 3.3(a)(1) and 4.1(a)); In the Matter of An Attorney, 2007 WL 4284758, at *4 (Mass. St. Bar Disp. Bd. 2007) ("It is not a defense to these charges that the individual statements made in the letter could be read as literally true. Literal truth may be a defense to a criminal charge of perjury.") Compare Bronston v. United States, 409 U.S. 353 (1973) with United States v. DeZarn, 157 F.3d 1042 (6th Cir. 1998). But Rule 8.4(c) 'prohibits more than outright perjury. Attorneys may not engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation....'").

In-courtroom statements and submissions to the Court, class counsel offered information about the fees they would request and the identities of the law firms who would share in those fees. They also identified $1.257 million in expenses and $85,000 in service awards. The Court could assume that the lawyers who were going to participate in the fee it was asked to award were the lawyers who appeared before it because no other lawyer was identified. But here, that assumption would be wrong. In order for class counsel's statements and submissions to the Court not to mislead the Court through omission, Rule 3.3 required them to disclose to the Court the Chargois Arrangement and their intention to pay Chargois more than $4 million from the class recovery.

iv. LABATON'S CLAIM THAT IT HAD NO DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE COURT OR TO CLASS MEMBERS BECAUSE IT WAS PAYING CHARGOIS FROM ITS OWN FEE AWARD IS INCORRECT AS A MATTER OF FACT AND LAW

It is not true, as Labaton claims, that the Court, the named plaintiffs, and the members of the certified settlement class, had no interest in the Chargois payment on the theory that Customer Class Counsel were paying it out of their own fee award. This argument is both legally and factually wrong. Labaton's fee did not, and would not, exist unless and until the Court awarded it. Labaton itself recognized as much in the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions (discussed further below) among other places. The Notice states: "Lead Counsel…will apply to the Court for an order awarding attorneys' fees…." (Page 4.) See also page 9, stating the question in the conditional tense ("If the Court awards fees" at a particular rate…) (emphasis added).

In deciding the amount of fee to award to class counsel, and to whom to award it, the Court, as a fiduciary for the class including unnamed class members, needed first to know – and class counsel had a duty to tell it – who would be participating in any fee the Court in its discretion might award from the class recovery and the basis for the claim. Labaton's contrary argument would keep the Court in the dark and deny it the very information it needed in order to decide how much of the undifferentiated settlement funds should go to counsel, and which counsel, and how much should go to the class. Quite simply, until the Court made that decision, there was no fee to divide. The Court was empowered, for example, as an exercise of its equitable power and fiduciary duty to the class, to deny any part of the recovery to Chargois, who never appeared and who did no work, and instead to direct that the money intended for him should instead go to the class.[67]

v. A LAWYER'S MISCONDUCT MAY AFFECT A COURT'S DETERMINATION OF THE AMOUNT OF FEES TO AWARD

In the First Circuit and elsewhere, lawyer misconduct may influence fee decisions. Travers v. Flight Services & Systems, Inc., 808 F.3d 525, 542 (1st Cir. 2015):

> "'It is well settled in this circuit that the district court has the duty and responsibility to supervise the conduct of attorneys who appear before it, and that ... [d]enial of attorneys' fees may be a proper sanction' for attorney misconduct. Culebras Enters. Corp. v. Rivera–Rios, 846 F.2d 94, 97 (1st Cir. 1988); see also Wong v. Luu, 472 Mass. 208, 218 (2015) (holding that '[t]he inherent powers necessary to preserve the court's authority to > accomplish justice include the power to sanction an attorney' for misconduct by assessing fees")."

[67] As stated, the Daynard Court cited Daynard's "valuable" contribution to the success of the litigation in upholding his claim. Daynard, 188 F. Supp. 2d. at 131.

Rodriguez v. Disner, supra, applied this doctrine in a class action. Analyzed objectively (and nearly all conflicts issues are analyzed objectively), Labaton may have wished to conceal the Chargois payments because anyone who learned of them could claim – successfully in my view -- that they were unethical payments for the recommendation of a client and seek appropriate remedies. Such a finding could be harmful not only in this case, but also in the other ATRS cases in which the firm concealed the Arrangement or did not comply with a jurisdiction's division of fee rule. We would then have a conflict between the firm's disclosure duties to the Court and its clients and its own interest in concealing the existence of the Chargois Arrangement.

Both that conflict and the separate failure of class counsel to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to the Court -- and to class members (who are discussed infra) -- as required by federal law and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, could properly influence the Court's determination of the amount of fees to award and to whom.

vi. CONCLUSION

Their duty to the Court required Labaton, Thornton, and Lieff to disclose the Chargois Arrangement (and intended payment) to the Court before it awarded fees from which Chargois would be (and was) paid. This is true whether or not the Chargois Arrangement complies with Rule 1.5(e).

D. LABATON, THORNTON, AND LIEFF CABRASER EACH HAD A DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS PAYMENTS IN THE "NOTICE OF PENDENCY" SENT TO MEMBERS OF THE CUSTOMER AND ERISA CLASS

The unnamed members of the certified class were entitled to know about the Chargois Arrangement before they were called upon to decide, with legal advice if desired, whether to opt out, or object, to the settlement, and later, the fee request made by Customer Class Counsel. Both decisions would precede the Court's decision on any fee award and, thus, called upon the class members to make an informed decision before there was a fee award to share with Chargois.

On August 8, 2016, David Goldsmith of Labaton appeared before Judge Wolf for the "plaintiffs and the settlement class." Michael Thornton of Thornton and Daniel Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser appeared for the same clients. "We are here," the Court said, "with regard to the motion for preliminary certification of class action and preliminary approval of the proposed class settlement." 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., p. 4. The Court concluded that it was "appropriate to certify a class for settlement purposes." It then certified "the proposed class for settlement purposes only." Id. at 4, 11. Previously, in January 2012, the Court had appointed Labaton as "interim lead counsel to act on behalf of all plaintiffs and the proposed class." It had appointed Thornton as "liaison counsel for plaintiff and the proposed class" and Lieff Cabraser to "serve as additional attorney for the plaintiff and the proposed class." See 1/12/12 Memorandum and Order, p. 5, Dkt. No. 28. When the Court certified the settlement class in August 2016, the firms continued to hold these positions.

i. CLASS COUNSEL HAD A FIDUCIARY AND ETHICAL DUTY TO DISCLOSE THE CHARGOIS ARRANGEMENT TO THE CLASS MEMBERS AND DID NOT

At least as of August 8, 2016, Labaton, Lieff, and Thornton had attorney-client relationships with the certified settlement class and its members. In that role, they had responsibility for the "Notice of Pendency of Class Actions" (the "Notice of Pendency") dated August 22, 2016, which Labaton prepared, which Nicole Zeiss circulated to Lieff and Thornton, and which was then sent to the customer and ERISA class members. The Notice of Pendency's caption identifies ATRS, Henriquez, and the Andover Companies as named plaintiffs. It refers to the "class action lawsuits (collectively, the 'Class Actions')." It defines the "Settlement Class" as follows:

> All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT's records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive. Id. at 3.

Labaton Sucharow and Lawrence Sucharow are identified as "Lead Counsel." Id. at 2, 14. No other law firm or lawyer is identified. Recipients were told "Lead Counsel, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, will apply to the Court for an order awarding attorneys' fees in an amount not to exceed $74,541,250.00." Id. at 4, 13. Recipients are also told that attorneys' fees for ERISA counsel will not exceed $10,900,000.00 and they are told how fees for the other counsel will be computed "if the Court awards the total amount of fees that Lead Counsel intend to request." Id. at 9. Labaton's phone number, website, and email address are given as a source of "[a]dditional information." Id. at 2. Recipients are told their right to opt out and to object and how to do so. Id. at 2.

Recipients of the Notice were not told about the Chargois Arrangement although this information – that a lawyer who did no work to produce the class recovery and who accepted no legal responsibility for the work of others stood to receive more than $4 million from the class recovery – was relevant to "The Allocation of Settlement Proceeds," including the completeness of the "attorneys' fees" disclosures in the Notice. That information could reasonably have influenced members of the class in deciding whether to exercise the right to object to the disclosure regarding attorneys' fees. As important, it may have affected the advice that ERISA counsel would have given their clients.[68] At the August 8, 2016 hearing, the Court specifically recognized that class members could object to the requested fee. It said: "As I understand it, counsel will seek up to 25 percent, roughly $76 million, of the common fund. The class members will have an opportunity to be heard on the propriety of that." 8/8/16 Hrg. Tr., pp. 22:23 – 23:1.

At least as of August 8, Labaton, Thornton, and Lieff also had fiduciary duties to the unnamed members of the certified settlement class. Piambino v. Bailey, 757 F.2d 1112, 1139 (11th Cir. 1985)("The lawyers who bring these [Rule 23] cases have a heavy fiduciary responsibility to their clients -- especially those who are absent and those in the minority whose interests are at odds with the named plaintiffs and their group -- to the trial judge and to the people, who provide the forums and governmental resources for these suits."); Singer v. AT&T Corp, 185 F.R.D. 681, 690 (S.D. Fla. 1998)("The class attorney has a fiduciary duty to the court as well as to each member of the class.").[69]

Beyond this, the fact that the ERISA lawyers received only approximately $7.5 million of the $10.9 million allocated for fee awards out of the ERISA class's share of the funds, with the $3.4 million balance going back to the Customer Class Counsel, would (they testified) have informed the ERISA lawyers' conduct of the case and agreement to accept only a $7.5 million share of the fees; several of the ERISA lawyers testified to this. See, e.g., Sarko 9/8/2017 Dep., pp. 28:10-49:18; 74:23-82:24; 90:13-92:18; McTigue 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 21:15-30:9; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., 68:20-71:22; 82:6-85:17; 101:16-102:23; 113:22-115:3

Greenberg*, 834 F.2d 1105 (1st Cir. 1987)("As part and parcel of [the duty to a client], a lawyer must keep his client seasonably apprised of relevant developments, including opportunities for settlement.").[72] This is the very decision the Notice of Pendency presented to the recipients in the Notice -- i.e., whether to settle on the terms in the Notice or to object.

ii. CONCLUSION

As fiduciaries and lawyers, Labaton, Thornton, and Lieff had a duty to provide the unnamed customer and ERISA members of the class whom they represented after the Court certified the class for settlement purposes on August 8, 2016, of the existence of the Chargois Arrangement and its terms when, in the Notice of Pendency, they purported to inform class members of the terms of the settlement, including anticipated counsel fee requests, and explained their options to object or opt out.

[71] Rule 1.2(a) provides in part: "A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to accept an offer of settlement of a matter." Rule 1.4(a)(1) provides: "A lawyer shall promptly inform the client of any decision or circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(f) is required by these Rules." Rule 1.4(b) provides: "A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation." Rule 1.0(f) provides: "'Informed consent' denotes the agreement by a person to a proposed course of conduct after the lawyer has communicated adequate information and explanation about the material risks of and reasonably available alternatives to the proposed course of conduct." See also Restatement (Third) of Law Governing Lawyers (2000), §§ 20(3) and 22(1).

[72] A lawyer is an agent and the law of agency separately creates a duty to inform. Gagnon v. Coombs, 39 Mass. App. Ct. 144, 156 (1995) ("An agent's duty to make full disclosure to the principal of all material facts relevant to the agency is a necessary corollary to the fundamental agency obligations of undivided loyalty and utmost good faith.")

E. GARRETT BRADLEY'S DECLARATION CONTAINS FALSE STATEMENTS OF FACT AND FALSE "EVIDENCE," IN VIOLATION OF RULES 3.3(a)(1) AND 3.3(a)(3) BECAUSE THE FALSE STATEMENTS WERE MADE KNOWINGLY. THE DECLARATION ALSO VIOLATED RULE 8.4(c)'S PROHIBITION OF MISREPRESENTATIONS AND DECEIT. SEPARATELY, GARRETT BRADLEY'S DECLARATION VIOLATED FED. R. CIV. P. 11 BECAUSE BRADLEY FAILED TO CONDUCT "AN INQUIRY REASONABLE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES" TO ESTABLISH THAT HIS FACTUAL CONTENTIONS HAVE "EVIDENTIARY SUPPORT"

i. FILING OF THE FEE PETITION

The Court's task when class counsel requests attorney fees is to identify what the market would have recognized as a reasonable rate for counsel's service to the class. To aid the court in fulfilling its fiduciary duty to the class, counsel will provide information to persuade the Court that the requested fee is reasonable. When lawyers seek attorneys' fees, their interests and the interests of the client they represent are economically adverse, which heightens the need for the Court to be especially vigilant. In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litigation, 396 F. 3d at 307. As discussed, supra, in Section C (ii), the Court is not bound by a fee agreement between counsel and class representatives or among themselves.

Naturally, a court may first look to the evidence counsel submits in support of a fee request, which was the purpose of the Bradley Declaration. But courts must also independently evaluate the requested fee against reasonable market rates for the particular lawyer. "While fee sharing agreements among counsel may be respected or treated as presumptively reasonable in a district court's allocation of attorneys' fees, persuasive authority convinces this Court that it is not bound blindly to follow such private arrangements." In re Volkswagen and Audi Warranty Extension Litigation, 89 F. Supp. at 183. In In re Citigroup Inc. Securities Litigation, 965 F.Supp.2d 369, 393-394 (S.D.N.Y. 2013), the Court awarded $200 hourly for contract lawyers, writing that:

> The lodestar figure should be based on market rates in line with those [rates] prevailing in the community for similar services by lawyers of reasonably comparable skill, experience, and reputation. The Court must determine the rate a paying client would be willing to pay.… In other words, if the class were a reasonable, paying client free to choose its counsel and negotiate rates, what hourly rate would it accept for the attorneys and other professional staff employed here? (internal quotations and citations omitted)

Labaton submitted the Bradley Declaration dated September 14, 2016, as part of the materials in support of the fee applications of the several law firms. It is evidence upon which the Court was invited to base its fee award.[73]

The Bradley Declaration states under oath in paragraphs 3 and 4:

> 3. The schedule attached hereto as Exhibit A is a summary indicating the amount of time spent by each attorney and professional support staff-member of my firm who was involved in the prosecution of the Class Actions, and the lodestar calculation is based on my firm's current billing rates. For personnel who are no longer employed by my firm, the lodestar calculation is based upon the billing rates for such personnel in his or her final year of employment by my firm. The schedule was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm, which are available at the request of the Court. Time expended in preparing this application for fees and payment of expenses has not been included in this request.
> 4. The hourly rate for attorneys and professional support staff in my firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions.

Paragraphs 5 and 6 implicitly incorporate some of these statements.[74]

These paragraphs were taken verbatim from a template prepared by Labaton and shared with Thornton and Lieff.

---

[73] I understand that a separate issue addressed by the Special Master is that SAs on Exhibit A of the Bradley Declaration were also identified by Labaton or Lieff in their request for fees – i.e. some were double- counted.

[74] These paragraphs state:

> 5. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm during the Time Period is 15,302.5 hours. The total lodestar for my firm for those hours is $7,460,139.
>
> 6. My firm's lodestar figures are based upon the firm's billing rates, which rates do not include charges for expenses items. Expense items are bill separately and such charges are not duplicated in my firm's billing rates.

ii. GARRETT BRADLEY VIOLATED RULE 3.3(a) BECAUSE HE KNEW THAT HIS DECLARATION CONTAINED FALSE STATEMENTS

Exhibit A to the Garrett Bradley Declaration uses the designation "SA" to identify 24 "staff attorneys." Total compensation requested for the SAs is $4,508,837 at an hourly rate of $425 for each, except that one "SA," Michael Bradley, is billed at $500. Additional compensation requested for four Thornton partners and one associate totals $2,831,287. The Declaration contains numerous false statements. I am asked to assume that Garrett Bradley knew these statements were false when he submitted his Declaration. See, e.g., pp. 23-24.

- The Declaration states: Exhibit A contains professional support staff members "of my firm." None of the SAs are support staff members of the Thornton law firm.

- The Declaration states: The billing rates for the SAs are "based on my firm's current billing rates." The firm did not have "current billing rates" for these lawyers.

- The Declaration states: For personnel "who are no longer employed," the lodestar is based on their rates for the "final year of employment." None of the SAs were ever "employed" at Thornton.

- The Declaration states: The schedule was prepared from "contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm." The SAs worked at Labaton or Lieff, which prepared their time records and is where those records were maintained. Or they were prepared and maintained by an agency. Other TLF attorneys also did not keep contemporaneous time records.[75]

- The Declaration states: The hourly rates "are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services." Thornton had no "regular rates" for the SAs.

- The Declaration states: These rates "have been accepted in other complex class actions." This is true for four of the SAs but it is not true for the other 20, including Michael Bradley.

[75] See supra, n. 28.

Although Goldsmith of Labaton informed the Court in the November 10, 2016 letter that SA time was double-counted in the lodestars of Customer Class Counsel, and although attorneys listed in the Thornton lodestar were among those who were double- counted (except Michael Bradley), Thornton did not inform the Court of the false statements in its lodestar.

The characterization of Michael Bradley, Garrett Bradley's brother, is especially serious. Contrary to the Garrett Bradley Declaration, Michael Bradley's $500 hourly rate had never been accepted by a Court in a complex class action. Michael Bradley had not been a staff member of the Thornton law firm. The Thornton law firm did not have a current billing rate for him or prepare and maintain his time records. It did not supervise him. There appears to be no physical evidence of the work for which he was paid $203,200. I am asked to assume that "[u]nlike the Labaton and Lieff SAs, Michael Bradley did not prepare any memoranda or deposition notebooks. And, the record reveals no written work product created by Michael Bradley."

iii. APPLICATION OF RULE 3.3 AND FEDERAL JURISPRUDENCE TO THE BRADLEY DECLARATION

To exercise its fiduciary duty to protect the class when responding to a law firm's fee request, the Court required accurate and complete information about the contributions of the firm seeking counsel fees. That information would inform the hourly rate the Court would approve for SAs and contract (or agency) attorneys. For example, the Court could consider not merely the fact that a law firm assumed financial responsibility for the expense of a staff lawyer, but also whether it assigned legal work to those lawyers, supervised their work, and provided them with a place to work and research support. The Court might also consider as relevant to its decision the fact that the rate requested for these lawyers was nearly nine times their cost to the law firm. The question is not what the Court would or would not do based on such information but the relevance of the information to the Court's exercise of its judgment as a fiduciary for the class.

While the Court was informed of the hourly rate claimed for the SAs, other statements in the Bradley Declaration, which could reasonably affect the Court's decision whether to approve that rate, are false.

Analysis of the Bradley Declaration is rooted in the rule governing a lawyer's duty of candor to the Court and federal case law. As noted in Section C (iii), supra, Rule 3.3(a)(1) provides: "(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." A lawyer who unknowingly offers false "evidence" to a tribunal and comes to know of its falsity must take reasonable remedial measures if the evidence is material. Rule 3.3(a)(3). Here, that would have required correction of the falsity. Rule 1.0(g) defines "knowingly." "'Knowingly,' 'known,' or 'knows' denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances." Rule 8.4(c) forbids "conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation."

The Court was not bound by how the several law firms chose to allocate fees or SA time among themselves. "More important than the terms of a private agreement are the actual contributions each firm made to the prosecution of this case and the interests of the plaintiff class." In re Volkswagen, 89 F. Supp. 3d at 183; In re FPI/Agretech Sec. Litig., 105 F.3d 469, 473 (9th Cir.1997) ("[A] court may reject a fee allocation agreement where it finds that the agreement rewards an attorney in disproportion to the benefits that attorney conferred upon the class—even if the allocation in fact has no impact on the class"); *In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Liti*g., 818 F.2d at 223 (rejecting authority that "allows counsel to divide the award among themselves in any manner they deem satisfactory under a private fee sharing agreement"). In making a fee award, the Court would of course be cognizant of the fact that the money paid to the law firms would necessarily come from the class recovery.

iv. APPLICATION OF FED. R. CIV. P. 11 TO THE BRADLEY DECLARATION

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11(b)(3) required Bradley to conduct "an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances" to ascertain that the facts he was asserting in his Declaration had "evidentiary support," which Bradley did not do because, as I am asked to assume, he knew that statements in the Declaration were false.[76]

v. CONCLUSION

Garrett Bradley prepared the "evidence" -- in his sworn Declaration -- from a template Labaton circulated. This is "evidence" in the sense that it is information declared to be true and upon which the Court was invited to issue a ruling. He is governed by Rules 3.3 and 8.4. Rule 3.3 prohibits knowing false statements to a tribunal. Rule 8.4(c) forbids "conduct involving dishonesty [and] deceit." Bradley knew the statements in his Declaration were false. Federal law separately required reasonable care to ensure that the information provided to the Court for the exercise of its discretion be true. A reasonable inquiry would quickly have identified these statements as false if Bradley did not already know it.

[76] The cited provision of the Rule continues: "or, if specifically so identified, will likely have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery."

Exhibit "X" attached hereto is not authorized for distribution to the trade or consumers within the United States.

2. Plaintiff alleges, that the Defendants, have knowingly and willfully imported into the United States, and are distributing and selling in interstate commerce, counterfeit and infringing products bearing the Plaintiff's trademarks, which are substantially indistinguishable from the genuine products authorized by Plaintiff for distribution and sale in the United States. In addition, Defendants have deceptively marketed their counterfeit and infringing products to the general purchasing public as being genuine products made by Plaintiff, and have sold their counterfeit and infringing products to consumers throughout the United States, including within the Southern District of Florida, through various internet websites and e-commerce stores operating under the Defendant Internet Stores.

3. Plaintiff filed this action against Defendants, inter alia, for trademark infringement and counterfeiting in violation of the Lanham Act. Plaintiff has been damaged by Defendants' sale of counterfeit and infringing products bearing Plaintiff's trademarks within the Southern District of Florida during the relevant time period, which is the 12 or 24 hour period, and Defendants' offering to sell counterfeit and infringing products within the Southern District of Florida during the relevant time period. However, the Defendants that have not reported sales in the United States may be concealing their counterfeiting activities and the existence and volume of additional sales of counterfeit and infringing products within the Southern District of Florida.

4. Plaintiff filed this action against Defendants for using counterfeit and infringing versions of Plaintiff's trademarks in connection with the sale of at least 500 identical counterfeit and infringing products in violation of United States trademark laws. Defendants have registered, established or purchased, and maintained their Internet Stores. Upon information and belief, Defendants regularly create new Internet Stores and aliases on various Internet platforms.

5. To bring this action against Defendants without unduly burdening the Court with an unnecessarily large number of parties, Plaintiff has filed this action against Defendants in a collective manner, alleging that Defendants are jointly and severally liable for the infringing activities described herein, or in the alternative, that Defendants' infringing activities arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences.

20. This Court is vested with exclusive jurisdiction over all controversies involving disputed questions pertaining to the operation of any Qualified Settlement Fund established by, or in connection with, any Settlement Agreement approved by any court of competent jurisdiction in the United States. Section 1.468B-1(c)(1) of the Treasury Regulations promulgated under Section 468B of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), provides that a Qualified Settlement Fund must be established pursuant to an order of, or be administered subject to the continuing jurisdiction of, a governmental authority. It is brought pursuant to Section 1.468B-1(c)(1) of the Treasury Regulations and Section 7476(b)(3) of the Code.

21. Defendant is the Settlement Trustee of the Settlement Trust, and is citizen of the State of Florida. The Settlement Trustee, or her predecessor, is responsible, in her capacity as Settlement Trustee, for preparing and filing the Settlement Trust's tax returns.

22. The amount in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

23. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Defendant because Defendant:

(a) did conduct business in this District by soliciting and advising Plaintiffs regarding the Settlement Trust with Dow Corning and by directing communications to the Plaintiffs in this District with the expectation that they would be received and acted upon by the Plaintiffs in this District;

(b) did conduct business with the Plaintiffs through their Settlement Trust Counsel in connection with Dow Corning Bankruptcy, and purposefully availed herself of the benefits and protections of the laws of this District in connection with the Settlement Trust; and

(c) did provide advice to the Plaintiffs in this District regarding the Dow Corning Bankruptcy and the Settlement Trust;

37. Either Party for the limited purpose of enforcing the Final Judgment as to the other Party hereto may apply to the Court for a writ of execution or similar process and may move the Court for contempt sanctions against the other Party hereto in the event that such Party violates the provisions of the Final Judgment. Prior to the filing of, or contemporaneously with, making any such application, the Party intending to file such application shall provide written notice to the Party against whom such application is intended to be made, unless prior notice is not feasible under the circumstances. In the event that such application is made orally without notice to the Party against whom it is made, the Party making such application shall provide written notice of the application and of any order entered thereon promptly after the entry thereof. The Parties may also agree in writing to other means of providing notice of any such application.

38. Any failure by any Party to insist upon the strict performance by the other Party of any of the provisions of the Final Judgment shall not be deemed a waiver of any of the provisions of the Final Judgment.

39. Upon application as provided by this Stipulation, the Court may enforce the Final Judgment and this Stipulation. For the purpose of any application to the Court for enforcement of the Final Judgment, a proposed Amended Final Judgment reflecting any such requested change to the Final Judgment shall be attached to the moving papers. Any proposed Amended Final Judgment must clearly disclose the requested changes, and must be dated and signed by the Party making the request.

40. Nothing contained in this Stipulation shall be construed as a waiver by any Party hereto of any right that may be available to such Party under the Final Judgment or this Stipulation, including without limitation, the right to seek from the Court any modification of the Final Judgment or this Stipulation.

41. Nothing contained in the Final Judgment or this Stipulation, nor any modification thereof, shall be deemed to constitute a waiver by any Party hereto of any right such Party may have under the Securities Act, the Exchange Act, or the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder by the Commission, or any other provision of law.

42. Because title to the disputed XRP and the proceeds from the sale thereof is in dispute, Bittrex has deposited the proceeds from the sale of the disputed XRP into an interest bearing account pending resolution of the dispute between the parties.

43. Because Bittrex is in privity with the defendants and is holding the disputed XRP proceeds for the benefit of the defendants, and not for its own benefit, Bittrex is not a necessary party to this action.

44. Bittrex has reported that the disputed XRP proceeds have been held in an interest bearing account since the date of the sale of the disputed XRP. Bittrex has indicated that it will continue to hold the disputed XRP proceeds in this account pending resolution of the dispute between the parties.

45. Bittrex has agreed to hold the disputed XRP proceeds in an interest bearing account, to be distributed by Bittrex pursuant to the Court's order, and to pay the interest earned on the disputed XRP proceeds to the prevailing party. The prevailing party will be the party to whom the Court orders the disputed XRP proceeds be distributed. The Magistrate Judge's Report and Recommendations will not be binding on the Court.

46. Upon the transfer of the disputed XRP proceeds, Bittrex will have no further interest in the disputed XRP proceeds, except for its fees, and the XRP will be the property of the prevailing party. The transfer will be effected by Bittrex sending the disputed XRP proceeds to the wallet address designated by the prevailing party. If the prevailing party did not have a wallet address, Bittrex will assist the prevailing party in establishing a wallet address, and the wallet address will be provided to the Court.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Violation of the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, M.G.L. c. 93A

70. Plaintiff repeats and realleges the foregoing paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.

71. At all relevant times, the Director has been engaged in trade or commerce.

72. The Director's attempts to collect the Debt, as described in this Complaint, constitute unfair and deceptive acts or practices in violation of the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, M.G.L. ch. 93A, §§ 2, 11, including, without limitation:

(a) The Director's attempts to collect the Debt from Plaintiff are unfair because they are prohibited by the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act;

(b) The Director's attempts to collect the Debt from Plaintiff are unfair because they are false, misleading, and deceptive;

(c) The Director's attempts to collect the Debt provide Plaintiff with the false impression that the Debt is owed to the Director rather than the true creditor;

(d) The Director's attempts to collect the Debt are unfair because the Director knows that the Debt is not owed to the Director, but rather to the Trust, as described in the Declaration of Trust;

(e) The Director's actions violate 940 CMR 3.16(1)(2).

73. The Director's practices and conduct violate sections 2 and 11 of the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, M.G.L. ch. 93A.

74. As a result of the Director's attempts to collect the Debt, Plaintiff has suffered damages, including but not limited to loss of time, aggravation, and emotional distress caused by the Director's and conduct by brokers and dealers that control the execution of FX trades on behalf of their customers, but that are not reported to the FX rates that are used to calculate the prices at which their customers' FX trades are executed.

6. The Investment Management Agreement expressly provided that all FX trades would be executed by Citi as principal at prices that Citi determined in its sole discretion. The Investment Management Agreement did not require Citi to disclose additional information about its FX trading practices to the Plans. Indeed, while the Investment Management Agreement required Citi to comply with all applicable laws in connection with its FX trading, it did not require Citi to disclose additional information about its FX practices.

7. In addition, Citi's Investment Management Agreement with the Plans provided that Citi would execute all FX trades for the Plans "as principal," stating that the prices at which Citi executed FX trades would be "based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." Thus, the agreement required that Citi execute FX trades at prices, including the spread, that were consistent with the prices charged by Citi to its other customers for comparable FX trades.

8. Despite the express provisions in the Investment Management Agreement that required Citi to execute all FX trades, including additional trades that Citi characterized as agency trades, at prices that were consistent with the prices charged to its other customers for comparable FX trades, Citi systematically executed FX trades for the Plans at prices that were inconsistent with the prices charged to its other customers for comparable FX trades. In fact, Citi systematically charged the Plans prices that were substantially higher than the prices charged to Citi's other customers for comparable FX trades. In short, Citi breached the express terms of the Investment Management Agreement.

initiation of X ray treatment to the correct body part that treatment was supposed to be provided in addition to X ray.

9. The other omissions described herein were material and the Relator believes that the Defendants knowingly concealed the true nature of the services provided to its patients in order to receive payment for unnecessary and improper X ray treatments.

10. The Relator brings this action for injunctive relief, penalties and damages for violations of the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. §§ 3729 et seq. (the "FCA"), as amended, and other causes of action. This action is not prohibited by the FCA because the Relator has direct and independent knowledge of the information on which the allegations are based and has voluntarily provided this information to the United States before filing this action.

11. The Relator brings this action on behalf of himself and the United States of America to recover all damages, civil penalties and other monetary relief allowed by law. In addition, the Relator brings this action on behalf of the private plaintiff qui tam plaintiffs that have been damaged by the Defendants' fraudulent conduct described herein, including but not limited to the private plaintiffs that have paid for unnecessary and improper X ray treatments.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

12. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action pursuant to the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3732(a), which specifically confers jurisdiction on this Court for actions brought pursuant to 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq., and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, a law of the United States. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a), because the matter in controversy exceeds the sum of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is between citizens of different states. This Court has supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims asserted herein pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).

13. This is a civil action of which this district court has original jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(1) and (2). A substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims occurred within this district. Defendant Putnam Investments has its principal place of business in Massachusetts, and regularly conducts business within this district.

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiff ARTRS

14. ARTRS, based in Amsterdam, Netherlands, is a pension fund that provides retirement benefits to participants who have worked in the Dutch pharmaceutical industry. ARTRS was established in 1947 as a foundation under the laws of the Netherlands. As of December 30, 2009, ARTRS invested in 343 participations on behalf of approximately 115,000 members, and had assets under management of approximately $8.8 billion.

15. In addition to its investments in securities, ARTRS, through its investment advisors, engages in foreign currency transactions to hedge against fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates. ARTRS entered into foreign currency transactions with its custodian bank, State Street Bank and Trust Company ("State Street"). During the period from September 30, 2009, through December 30, 2009, ARTRS engaged in approximately 33 foreign currency transactions, totaling approximately $3.2 billion. The transactions were executed through the end of 2010.

16. ARTRS has been a State Street custody client since 1998. During the period from September 30, 2009, through December 30, 2009, ARTRS paid State Street $851,412.83 for custody services and received approximately $1,000,000 in dividends and interest payments from its investments. ARTRS did not instruct State Street to trade in the securities held in its custody account.

[illegible] to breach their duties, misrepresented material facts, in violation of [illegible], but not limited to, the duties to truthfully and accurately disclose the [illegible] to the market and to refrain from misrepresenting the [illegible] to the market. [illegible], misrepresented the [illegible] to the market. [illegible] to the [illegible] to be determined at trial.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Negligent Misrepresentation
(Asserted Against All Defendants on Behalf of Plaintiff ARTRS and the Class)

114. [illegible] repeated and realleged, as if fully set forth herein, each and every allegation contained in the above paragraphs, as if fully set forth herein.

115. [illegible] to [illegible] in the course of their employment, in connection with the [illegible] to disseminate false and misleading statements and to omit material facts necessary to make the statements not misleading.

116. In [illegible] with, [illegible] to [illegible] with providing false and misleading information to the market, including the [illegible], regarding the [illegible] to make the statements not misleading as the truth was concealed. The [illegible] to [illegible] in their business [illegible].

117. The report and trust agreements provided to certificateholders in connection with each offering of Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, including the Offering Documents, represented that the mortgage loans were being sold by the depositor, or transferred by the trustee, to the trust, and that each such mortgage loan was duly assigned to the trustee, or its nominee, for the benefit of all holders of the Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates. The trust agreements typically required that the trustee or another party, such as a custodian, maintain possession of certain documents relating to each mortgage loan, including the mortgage note endorsed to the trustee or in blank, and the mortgage assigned to the trustee or in blank, in trust for the benefit of all holders of the Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates.

118. Because the trust agreements typically required prompt execution and delivery of assignments of mortgage in recordable form, and because recordation is normally necessary to perfect the trust's interest against the claims of subsequent purchasers or mortgagees, the Offering Documents represented that the trustee would receive assignments of the mortgage loans in the trust shortly after the closing date. The trust agreements typically required that any mortgage loan as to which the required documents were not delivered or defects were not timely cured could be rejected by the trustee, and returned to the seller.

119. Certificateholders relied on these representations made by Defendants in deciding whether to purchase or retain Certificates.

120. Defendants failed to disclose to Plaintiffs that the mortgage loans were frequently not properly assigned to the trustee, or its nominee, for the benefit of all holders of the Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates.

121. Defendants failed to disclose that as a result of improper practices in the origination and securitization process, the mortgage loans frequently were not properly assigned to the trustee.

122. Moreover, Defendants failed to disclose that they routinely failed to obtain and maintain adequate documentation to establish the trust's ownership of the mortgage loans.

Boston, Massachusetts. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company provides directly, or indirectly through one or more subsidiaries, participant recordkeeping and administrative services to the Plan and maintains custody of the Plan's investments. SSBT is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, a publicly traded financial holding company headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts.

11. Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM"). Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, is incorporated in Delaware and has its principal place of business in Boston, Massachusetts. SSGM describes itself on its website as a leading research and trading firm for institutional investors. It provides participants in institutional research and trading services, including execution, clearing, fixed income, and derivatives to EBI and its affiliates.

12. Defendants Does 1-20. Does 1-20 are individuals who the Secretary has not yet identified but who may be subject to relief because of their participation in the breaches described herein.

IV. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Plans.

13. Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan. The Plan is an employee pension benefit plan within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2). Participants in ERISA, the principal investment alternatives for the Plan's assets.

14. Other Similarly Situated Plans. Defendants provide services to other employee benefit plans, either directly or indirectly, which hold investments in which the Plan invests.

22. A "custodian" is an institution that holds securities on behalf of an investor. The responsibilities entrusted to a custodian include the recording and safekeeping of securities, delivering or accepting traded securities, and collecting principal, interest, and dividend payments on held securities. Custodians also may perform additional services for their clients. Custodians are typically used by institutional investors who do not wish to keep securities on deposit with their broker/dealer or investment manager. The use of a custodian by an institution is intended to reduce the risk of misconduct by separating the custodial and asset management duties. An independent custodian ensures that the investor has unencumbered ownership of the securities (other assets or property that have been purchased on its behalf).

23. SSBT served as custodian for ERISA-covered defined benefit plans.

24. SSBT operated commingled investment funds invested in foreign securities in which ERISA-covered defined contribution plans invested during the Class Period. SSBT served as custodian for these commingled investment funds. Commingled investment funds that invest in foreign securities, such as the SSBT-sponsored International Equity funds offered in the plans, must engage in FX transactions in order to buy and sell securities, to repatriate dividends or interest payments, and to engage in other transactions.

rt. Indeed, the district court ordered extraordinary injunctive relief which the parties had not requested, and did so without notice to the extraordinary harm that the injunction would cause to Broadcom. Broadcom was prejudiced by the court's ruling because it was not given the opportunity to present evidence and argument in opposition to the injunction, and the district court's failure to hear from Broadcom before issuing the injunction was an abuse of discretion.

33. Moreover, the injunction, which prohibited Broadcom from transferring its shares in the Singapore domiciled entity, was improper because it effectively prevented Broadcom from redomiciling to the United States.

34. However, this Court need not reach the merits of the injunction. The injunction should be vacated as moot because Broadcom has redomiciled to the United States. Broadcom's redomiciliation has eliminated the risk that Broadcom will engage in a transaction that would be prohibited by the injunction. Broadcom's redomiciliation has also eliminated the risk that Broadcom will engage in a transaction that would be subject to review by CFIUS, which was the basis for the district court's injunction. Moreover, because Broadcom has redomiciled to the United States, it is no longer subject to the jurisdiction of the Singapore courts.

35. Undeterred by the foregoing, the district court entered an order requiring Broadcom to file a declaration describing any transaction that Broadcom was considering, and to notify CFIUS of any transaction that CFIUS had requested Broadcom to notify. This requirement was unnecessary because Broadcom had already redomiciled to the United States. Moreover, the district court lacked jurisdiction to enforce the CFIUS process, which is governed by federal statutes and regulations.

36. The district court's "best estimate" requirement that Broadcom provide CFIUS with its estimate of the likelihood that Broadcom would redomicile to the United States was improper because it required Broadcom to provide CFIUS with information that Broadcom did not have. At the exchange transaction that occurred during that day. Applying that rate to the dollar amount of the EBT transaction it had conducted that day.

42. Plaintiffs and Class members, at the relevant time, this price, the price charged for EX transactions for both retail dispensing and EBT transactions, is unknown.

43. With each EX trade price in this manner, defendants did not incur the costs and the bid-ask spread profit available each trade, based upon the relevant EX rate at the price the trade was executed.

44. Because defendants knew the price the trade at the relevant time at or which they were able to profit without risk to BT.

45. Plaintiffs and Class members, by price trading in this manner at their retail dispensing transactions, suffered harm to the extent defendants profited at the expense of the retail dispensing transactions. That is, defendants profited principally at the trade prices charged to the Class members, or the bid-ask spread between the EX transaction.

46. Plaintiffs and Class members, defendants price trading in this manner had the effect of artificially depressing the EX price, which was relevant at the time of the transaction.

V. CLASS ALLEGATIONS

54. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of a class pursuant to Rules 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of themselves and all participants in or beneficiaries of the Fidelity ESOP who held and/or purchased shares of Fidelity Stock at any time during the Class Period, as defined below:

> All persons who held ESOP Fidelity Stock through participation in or beneficiaries of the Fidelity Stock Fund, which was invested in Fidelity Stock, at any time during the Class Period, including, but not limited to, any participants in or beneficiaries of the ESOP whose accounts were transferred to, or otherwise held, Fidelity Stock during the Class Period, from January 1, 2001 through October 19, 2009 (the "Class Period").

Excluded from the Class are Defendants and their immediate family members, any subsidiary or affiliate of Fidelity, and any person who is a fiduciary of the ESOP during the Class Period.

55. Numerosity. The exact number of the members of the Class is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time. However, the ESOP's Form 5500 filed with the Department of Labor for the Plan Year ended December 31, 2008 indicates that as of December 31, 2008, there were approximately 5.2 million participants in the ESOP. The Class is believed to be large and its members are expected to number in the thousands. The exact number of the Class will be determined through discovery of Fidelity's records. For example, the Plan's Form 5500 filed for Plan Year 2009 indicates that as of December 31, 2009, there were approximately 389 million shares of Fidelity Stock held in the Fidelity Stock Fund. Fidelity's Form 10-K filed with the SEC on February 26, 2010, indicates that as of December 31, 2009, Fidelity had approximately 5500, as of December 31, 2008.

56. Commonality. The questions of law and fact common to the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, including, without limitation, whether Defendants engaged in the conduct alleged herein; whether Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Class by causing the Company to enter into the Exchange Transaction; whether Defendants breached their duties of loyalty and good faith; whether Defendants breached their duties of candor; whether the Class has been damaged, and if so, what is the proper measure of damages; and whether the Exchange Transaction should be enjoined, rescinded, or modified, including, but not limited to:

a. whether Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Class by causing the Company to enter into the Exchange Transaction for inadequate consideration, or by otherwise failing to maximize stockholder value in connection with the Exchange Transaction;

b. whether Defendants breached their duties of loyalty and good faith by entering into the prohibited Exchange Transaction for their own personal benefit;

c. whether Defendants breached their duties of candor by misrepresenting or omitting material information in connection with the Exchange Transaction;

d. whether Defendants breached their duties in connection with the Exchange Transaction.

57. Typicality. Plaintiff's claims are typical of the claims of the other members of the Class, and Plaintiff does not have any interests adverse to the Class. Plaintiff is a current shareholder of the Company and will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Class. Plaintiff's claims are typical of the claims of the other members of the Class and Plaintiff does not have any interests adverse to the Class.

58. Adequacy. Plaintiff is an adequate representative of the Class because Plaintiff has retained counsel that is experienced and competent in the prosecution of class action and derivative litigation. Plaintiff has the ability and intends to vigorously prosecute this action on behalf of the Class. Plaintiff has no interests that are antagonistic to or in conflict with those of the Class.

59. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Class action status is warranted under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A) because prosecution of separate actions by individual members of the Class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the Class. Class action status is also warranted under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) because prosecution of separate actions by individual members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class which would as a practical matter be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications or substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

VI. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

COUNT I

Engaging in Self-Interested Prohibited Transactions
(Violation of § 406 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106 by Defendants)

62. [illegible]

63. [illegible] ERISA § 3(21)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A), [illegible]

64. [illegible] FX [illegible]

65. [illegible] FX [illegible]

66. Through their PTE transactions and prior to them, Defendants dealt with assets of the Plan in their own interest or for their own account. This is a violation of ERISA § 406(b)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b)(1).

67. As direct and proximate result of the prohibited transactions, the Plan, directly or indirectly, paid commissions and other compensation that were prohibited by ERISA and constituted commissions.

68. Pursuant to ERISA § 409, Defendants are liable to restore to the Plan the amounts paid for the PTE transactions, restitution of which should be ordered by the Court as to the prohibited transactions, and all profits realized by the fiduciaries as to the amounts paid by the Plan to Defendants.

COUNT II

Breach of Duties of Prudence and Loyalty
(Violation of § 404 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104 by Defendants)

69. All preceding paragraphs are re-alleged herein.

70. Defendants breached their ERISA fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty, in that they:

a. Failed to act solely for the benefit of the Plan participants;

b. Charged the Plan for the commissions on which the Plan participants were charged for PTE transactions that were not necessary to the Plan and

c. Failed to disclose to the Plan participants, their fiduciaries, or participants to the PTE transactions, that the Plan was charged for PTE transactions, and that the fiduciaries were receiving compensation for the transactions.

71. The Plan suffered damages when the Plan was charged for commissions that were not necessary to the Plan and provided benefits to the Defendants under ERISA and Defendants did not act in their fiduciary responsibility under the Plan. § 404(a)(1)(B), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(B).

72. Defendants breached their duties to prudently monitor the performance of Plan investments during the Class Period, including the Plan's investment in Plan Stock.

73. Defendants' failure to monitor their appointees, the breaches of fiduciary duties by their appointees, and their failure to remedy those breaches, as described above, were breaches of Defendants' own fiduciary responsibilities under ERISA.

74. Pursuant to ERISA § 409(a), Defendants are liable to restore to the Plan all losses caused by their breaches of fiduciary responsibilities, and subject to other equitable relief as appropriate.

COUNT III

Liability for Breach of Co-fiduciary
(Violation of § 405 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1105)

75. Plaintiff repeats and realleges the preceding paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.

76. Each Defendant, 29 U.S.C. § 1105(a)(1), is liable for a breach of fiduciary duty by another fiduciary of BT with respect to the Plan. It did so through the following actions and omissions that participated in and enabled the breaches of fiduciary responsibility by the Committee Defendants with respect to the Plan and Plan Stock.

77. Each Defendant, 29 U.S.C. § 1105(a)(3), is liable because it knew that BT had breached its fiduciary duties in connection with Plan Stock, but failed to remedy those breaches and participated in the breaches.

78. By reason of the Management Defendants' participation in the breaches, each Defendant is liable for the breaches of its co-fiduciaries, BT.

79. Pursuant to ERISA § 409(a), the losses suffered by the Plan.

VII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays for relief as follows:

80. [illegible] that the [illegible] limited to having illegal EIN [illegible] prohibited transactions provisions

81. [illegible] that the [illegible] breached their fiduciary duties under ERISA

82. Injunctive and other appropriate equitable relief to redress the prohibited transactions in which the [illegible]

83. Injunctive and other appropriate equitable relief to restore the [illegible]

84. Injunctive and other appropriate equitable relief to disgorge profits made through use of assets, including [illegible]

85. Such other and further relief as may be appropriate, including attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to [illegible]

86. And such other and further equitable relief as may be appropriate, including the appointment of an independent fiduciary to oversee the [illegible] with respect to the [illegible]

87. That this action be certified as a class action pursuant to [illegible] that the [illegible] be distributed to the [illegible] or distributed to the extent feasible to the [illegible]

88. Enjoining the [illegible], and each of their successors, from [illegible] their EIN fiduciary responsibilities, obligations, and duties

89. And such other relief as the Court deems proper pursuant to ERISA § 502(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a), and/or the common fund doctrine

90. And such other and further relief as this Court deems just and proper.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

ARNOLD HENRIQUEZ, MICHAEL T. COHN, WILLIAM R. TAYLOR, RICHARD A. SUTHERLAND, AND THOSE SIMILARLY SITUATED, Plaintiffs, v. STATE STREET BANK AND TRUST COMPANY and STATE STREET GLOBAL MARKETS LLC AND DOES 1-20, Defendants.	CIVIL ACTION No. 11-cv-12049-MLW

AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

1. Plaintiffs Arnold Henriquez (bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan ("WM Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries), Michael Cohn (bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Citigroup 401(k) Plan ("Citi Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries), and William Taylor and Richard Sutherland (both bringing this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson ("J&J Plan") and its participants and beneficiaries) (collectively, "Plaintiffs") bring this action as a class action on behalf of a class of similarly-situated ERISA retirement plans (collectively, the "Plans") and their participants and beneficiaries against State Street Bank and Trust Company ("SSBT") and State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM") (collectively, "Defendants"). The allegations below are based on the investigative efforts of private whistleblower firms, the State of California, the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), and an investigation by counsel, which included reviewing: Internal Revenue Service Forms 5500 ("Forms 5500") filed with the United States Department of Labor ("DOL"); filings with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, including Annual Reports on Forms 10-K; documents filed in other litigation; and other publicly available documents related to this action.

I. NATURE OF THE ACTION

2. This is a civil enforcement action brought pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001, et seq., and in particular under ERISA §§ 502(a)(2) and (a)(3), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1132(a)(2) and (a)(3), to recover losses and obtain equitable relief on behalf of the WM Plan, the Citi Plan, and the J&J Plan (the "Named Plaintiffs' Plans"), and pursuant to applicable law as a class action to obtain relief for all other similarly situated ERISA plans.

3. SSBT and SSGM were required to act prudently and solely in the interest of the Plans' participants and beneficiaries in their capacity as ERISA fiduciaries. On information and belief, rather than fulfilling their fiduciary duties under ERISA (the "highest known to the law"),[1] the Defendants charged, or allowed to be charged, improper, undisclosed markups on transactions in foreign currency ("FX transactions" or "FX trading") and engaged in prohibited transactions in connection with such FX transactions.

4. The Named Plaintiffs' Plans and the similarly situated Plans are established and sponsored by private entities in accordance with ERISA.

[1] Donovan v.Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 272 n.8 (2d Cir. 1982).

5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants violated ERISA by causing the Plans, or collective funds (the "Collective Investment Funds") operated by SSBT in which the Plans were invested, to purchase foreign securities through the use of FX transactions at rates favorable to Defendants. These transactions were prohibited transactions under ERISA § 406, 29 U.S.C. § 1106.

6. Plaintiffs also allege that Defendants failed to act solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries of the Plans and breached their fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty with respect to the Plans. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants, as fiduciaries of the Plans, violated their fiduciary duties under ERISA § 404, 29 U.S.C. § 1104, by causing the Plans or the Collective Investment Funds operated by Defendants in which the Plans were invested to engage in transactions that were not to the exclusive benefit of the Plans or their participants and beneficiaries.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

7. ERISA provides for exclusive federal jurisdiction over these claims. The Plans are "employee benefit plans" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(3), and Plaintiffs are participants in the Named Plaintiffs' Plans within the meaning of ERISA § 3(7), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(7), who are authorized pursuant to ERISA § 502(a)(2) and (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) and (3), to bring the present action on behalf of those plans and their participants and beneficiaries to obtain appropriate relief.

8. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal question) and ERISA § 502(e)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(1).

9. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) and ERISA § 502(e)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(2), because some or all of the fiduciary breaches for which relief is sought occurred in this district and the Defendants reside and may be found in this district.

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiffs

10. Plaintiff Arnold Henriquez is a participant in the WM Plan, an ERISA-covered plan. At all material times from the second quarter of 2005 through the second quarter of 2009, Mr. Henriquez invested in the "International Equity Fund" [2] sponsored by SSBT and offered by the Plan. Mr. Henriquez also invested in other funds sponsored by SSBT and offered by the WM Plan during the Class Period, including the Large Cap Equity Fund, the Small Cap Equity Fund, the Conservative Asset Allocation Fund, the Moderate Asset Allocation Fund, the Aggressive Allocation Fund, the Bond Market, and the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund. Mr. Henriquez resides in Frederick, Maryland.

11. Plaintiff Michael T. Cohn is a participant in the Citi Plan, an ERISA-covered plan. At all material times from his initial enrollment in the Citi Plan in January 2005 through

[2] The "International Equity Fund" is the fund name used by SSBT on disclosures to participants in the WM Plan. The International Equity Fund's name, according to the International Equity Fund's Forms 5500 for 2009 and 2010, filed by SSBT with DOL, is the "Active Intl Stock Selection SL SF CL I (CM8J [sic]." From 2006 through 2008, the International Equity Fund's name, according to the International Equity Fund's Forms 5500 filed by SSBT with DOL was the "International Alpha Select SL Series Fund – [sic]." From 1999 to 2005, the WM Plan offered the SSgA International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A Non-Lending as the "International Equity Fund." The foregoing fund names may refer to the International Equity Fund at a particular point in time, as well as to one or more of several classes of interests offered in the International Equity Fund.

August 2007 Mr. Cohn was invested in the "Aggressive Focus Fund" offered by the Citigroup 401(k) Plan. According to the Citigroup 401(k) Plan Aggressive Focus Fund Fact Sheet for the second quarter of 2004, this fund had the objective of "seek[ing] as high a total return over time as is consistent with a primary emphasis on equity securities and a secondary emphasis on fixed-income and money market securities." The Aggressive Focus Fund was a "fund of funds" managed by SSBT that included two funds focused on international equities: (a) the Daily EAFE Index Securities Lending Series – Class T; and (b) the Daily Emerging Markets Index Non Lending Series Fund. These two funds accounted for 24% of the Aggressive Focus Fund's total holdings in 2004. In September 2007, the Citigroup 401(k) Plan changed its investment options, and Mr. Cohn invested in the newly offered "Emerging Market Equity" collective investment fund. He is still invested in that fund as of the date of this complaint. This Emerging Market Equity fund has used SSBT as an investment manager since it was first offered to the Citigroup 401(k) Plan in 2007. Mr. Cohn resides in Highland Park, Illinois.

12. Plaintiff William R. Taylor is a participant in the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson, an ERISA-covered plan. Mr. Taylor began working at Johnson and Johnson and accruing service towards his pension benefit on September 21, 1998. At all relevant times to this complaint, SSBT served as the trustee and custodian of both the J&J Plan and the Johnson and Johnson Pension and Savings Plan Master Trust in which the J&J Plan was wholly invested. Mr. Taylor resides in Aston, Pennsylvania. The J&J plan holds foreign investments in both international securities that cannot be purchased on a domestic exchange and foreign currency. Each of these types of holdings requires FX transactions.

13. Plaintiff Richard A. Sutherland is a participant in the Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson, an ERISA-covered plan. Mr. Taylor began working at Johnson and Johnson and accruing service towards his pension benefit on January 1, 1999. At all relevant times to this complaint, SSBT served as the trustee and custodian of both the J&J Plan and Johnson and Johnson Pension and Savings Plan Master Trust in which the defined benefit plan was wholly invested. Mr. Sutherland resides in Albuquerque, New Mexico. The J&J plan holds foreign investments in both international securities that cannot be purchased on a domestic exchange and foreign currency. Each of these types of holdings requires FX transactions.

B. Defendants

14. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company ("SSBT") is incorporated in Massachusetts and is headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company directly, or indirectly through one or more subsidiaries, operates as a custodial bank for ERISA-covered benefit plans and for the Collective Investment Funds offered by ERISA-covered plans. SSBT is a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, a financial holding company headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. SSBT describes itself as a leading specialist in meeting the needs of institutional investors. In its Class Period filings with the SEC, State Street Corporation repeatedly stated that its customer relationships were predicated upon our reputation as a fiduciary and a service provider that adheres to the highest standards of ethics, service quality and regulatory compliance. One of the services provided by SSBT to its custodial clients was the execution of FX transactions, which allowed clients to purchase and sell foreign securities or to engage in foreign currency trades for other purposes. Another of the services provided by SSBT to its custodial clients is investment management of custodial client assets through the use of "collective investment funds," which are described more fully below.

15. Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC ("SSGM"), a subsidiary of State Street Corporation, is incorporated in Delaware and is headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts. SSGM is a broker/dealer registered with the SEC, the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, ten self-regulatory authorities, and fifty-three U. S. states and territories. SSGM is the only State Street Corporation subsidiary registered as a brokerage firm. SSGM is the corporate successor of State Street Brokerage Services, Inc. and State Street Capital Markets, LLC. On or about June 1, 1999, State Street Capital Markets, LLC assumed all of the assets and liabilities of State Street Brokerage Services. Inc. State Street Brokerage Services, Inc. was dissolved, but "State Street Brokerage Services," not followed by "Inc.," continued to exist as a division of State Street Capital Markets, LLC. On or about March 1, 2002, SSGM assumed all of the assets and liabilities of State Street Capital Markets, LLC. SSGM describes itself as "the investment research and trading arm of State Street Corporation." SSGM provides specialized investment research and trading in foreign exchange, equities, fixed income, and derivatives to ERISA covered benefit plans. Confusingly, in their answer to the complaint-in-intervention of the California Attorney General described below,[3] SSBT and SSGM assert that SSBT executed FX transactions for its clients through a division of SSBT called "State Street Global Markets," which was a separate entity from Defendant State Street Global Markets, LLC. In marketing documents for its "Foreign Exchange Global Strategy,"[4] State Street Corporation has described

[3] People of the State of Calif. v. State Street Corp., Case No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS. (Cal. Super. Ct., Sacramento County, April 12, 2010.).

[4] State Street Corporation added further confusion through its marketing materials, which state that "[p]roducts and services outlined in this document are offered to professional investors through State Street Global Markets LLC, which is a member of FINRA and SIPC, and State Street Bank and Trust Company, State Street Global Markets International Limited and State Street Bank Europe Limited, all of which are authorized and regulated by the Financial Services Authority in the United Kingdom, and their affiliates." State Street Global Markets, Foreign Exchange Global Strategy, www.statestreetglobalmarkets.com, 09-SGM08041209 (2010).

"State Street Global Markets" as "the marketing name and a registered trademark of State Street Corporation, used for its financial markets business and that of its affiliates."[5] Any action taken by the "State Street Global Markets" division of SSBT was an action of SSBT.

16. State Street Corporation, SSBT, and SSGM are under common control within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-21(e)(1)(i). Further, State Street Corporation, SSBT, and SSGM are "affiliates" within the meaning of (a) Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, § IV.(d), (e), 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02, 8026 (Feb. 17, 1994) and (b) Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54 §IV. (e), (l), 63 Fed. Reg. 63503, 63510, because they directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, control, are controlled by, or are under common control with each other.

17. Defendants Does 1-20 are fiduciaries of the Plans relevant to this lawsuit whose exact identities will be ascertained through discovery.

IV. THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE SCHEME

A. SSBT's General FX Trading Practices for Non-ERISA Clients

18. According to its September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide, SSBT purported to offer two generic types of foreign exchange transactions to third party investment managers for SSBT's custody clients. It offered "direct deals" whereby investment managers "deal[t] foreign exchange directly with [SSBT] Treasury trading desks." SSBT also offered "indirect deals" whereby "requests to execute a foreign exchange transaction [could be] sent to the processing site with the related securities instruction or as a separate instruction." As set forth below, indirect deals were also sometimes described as "standing instruction" trades.

[5] Id.

19. According to a class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court on July 29, 2010 (Hill v. State Street Corp., Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG), for more than 75% of SSBT's large custodial clients, Defendants would conduct "indirect" or "standing instruction" foreign exchange trades, as described in SSBT's September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide. Under the terms of SSBT's custodial arrangements, SSBT was obligated to provide its clients the same exchange rate that Defendants actually used to make the trade. This arrangement was supposed to be beneficial to Defendants' clients because, among other things, they would not have to incur the expense and time of identifying and choosing the most competitive exchange rate.

20. On October 20, 2009, based upon an investigation undertaken after the sealed filing of a qui tam complaint by "Associates Against FX Insider Trading" on the personal knowledge of Associates' partners, the California Attorney General ("California AG") filed a complaint alleging that SSBT, SSGM, and a third entity, State Street California Inc., had systematically overcharged two of California's largest public pension funds by tens of millions of dollars for foreign exchange trades conducted over a period of at least eight years. People of the State of Calif. v. State Street Corp., Case No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS. (Cal. Super. Ct., Sacramento County Oct. 20, 2009.).

21. The California AG's action was based on an extensive eighteen-month investigation, which included interviewing witnesses and reviewing hundreds of thousands of internal State Street documents.

22. On information and belief, and according to the qui tam relators and the California AG, Defendants herein, starting in 2001, added an undisclosed and substantial "mark-up" to the exchange rate they used when making foreign exchange trades for its clients.

23. The California AG's allegations of undisclosed "mark-ups" were based in part on the sworn testimony of a former SSBT employee who worked on the same trading floor as the SSBT or SSGM foreign exchange traders and who overheard how SSBT or SSGM foreign exchange traders were marking up FX trade prices. This trader, in sworn testimony, described the practices of SSBT's FX traders as a "totally unethical thing to do" and said that the FX Traders practices were not within the "industry standard." People of the State of Calif. v. State Street, Declaration of Kenny V. Nguyen, Case No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS (January 31, 2012).

24. The California AG went on to explain that Defendants had agreements with their large custodial clients that obligated Defendants to charge their clients the same exchange rate as the one that Defendants actually used to execute FX trades requested by the client. Rather than doing so, however, SSBT or SSGM would execute the trade at one exchange rate, and then monitor fluctuations in the rate throughout the day. Then, before the end of the day, SSBT or SSGM would pick a rate that was more beneficial to Defendants, and tell its clients that the trade had occurred at this other, false rate.

25. The California qui tam relators explained that, for instance, if the transaction was a purchase of a foreign security, SSGM or SSBT would execute the transaction, but would charge the client a higher foreign exchange rate that occurred later in the day, thus causing the client to pay more for the security in U.S. Dollars than the U.S. Dollar value at the time SSBT or SSGM executed the transaction. If the transaction was a sale of a foreign security, SSBT or SSGM would execute the transaction, but would credit the client at a lower foreign exchange rate, thus paying the client less in U.S. Dollars than the U.S. Dollar value of what SSBT or SSGM actually received at the time SSBT or SSGM executed the transaction. In either event, Defendants would take for themselves the difference between the amount for which the trade was actually executed by SSBT or SSGM and the amount that SSBT or SSGM charged its custody clients for the transaction.

26. According to the California AG complaint-in-intervention and a subsequent amended class action complaint filed in the District of Massachusetts,[6] Defendants' clients did not discover the truth because the records, including statements of account and transaction records provided by SSBT in the ordinary course to their clients, showed only that the trade had been executed within the range of rates occurring during that day, notwithstanding that the rate reported was not the actual rate for the transaction. Defendants' clients were not informed of the actual rates at which FX transactions were made. Defendants' providing such incomplete statements and transaction records to their clients was a course of conduct designed to conceal evidence of their breaches of fiduciary duty and prohibited transactions set forth herein.

B. How SSBT's Foreign Exchange Trading Scheme Worked

27. As detailed by the California relators, clients or their investment managers would initiate a foreign exchange transaction by sending a request, often electronically, to the Securities Processing Unit of SSBT, which was located on the "custody side" of the Company. This request was then sent electronically to the State Street foreign exchange trading desk in SSGM, where it would appear on the Market Order Management System ("MOMS") software used by Defendants' traders.

28. According to the Arkansas State Teacher Retirement System amended class action complaint, SSBT or SSGM's FX traders were informed of SSBT's aggregated standing instruction trade requirements during the course of the day. The FX traders would, that day, trade on the interbank FX market in order to satisfy SSBT's standing instruction positions.

[6] Arkansas State Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., No. 11-CV-10230 (MLW) (April 15, 2011).

29. According to a class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court ("Hill"),[7] upon receipt of the request, SSBT or SSGM's foreign exchange traders checked the exchange rate, set a price, and executed the transaction, which typically occurred early in the day because SSBT or SSGM traders were at their desks by 7 a.m. Eastern Standard Time. All of those transactions were then entered by the trader into a separate software system called Wall Street Systems ("WSS"), which memorialized the transaction and charged the cost (for purchases) or remitted the payment (for sales) directly to Defendants. The WSS recorded time stamps for the actual, real time transaction.

30. According to the Hill class action securities fraud complaint, although the transaction was now completed and the price locked in, Defendants did not inform the client. Instead, on information and belief, SSBT or SSGM observed market fluctuations until sometime around 3 p.m. and then assigned either a higher exchange rate (for purchases) or a lower exchange rate (for sales) to the foreign exchange transactions that occurred during that day. SSGM then applied that rate to all of the "standing instruction" foreign exchange transactions it had conducted that day.

31. On information and belief, at all relevant times to this Complaint, this pricing scheme was used for FX transactions for both custodial clients, including custodial ERISA plan clients, and for transactions involving the Collective Investment Funds.

[7] Hill v. State Street Corporation, Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG. (July 29, 2010).

32. On information and belief, with each FX trade priced in this manner, Defendants did not simply profit; they made excessive profits on each trade, based upon the range-of-the-day's FX rates at the point the trade was priced for the Plan.

33. On information and belief, because Defendants' scheme always priced the trades at or near the very lowest or very highest rates of the day, Defendants were able to make a profit with minimal risk to SSBT.

34. According to the California AG complaint-in-intervention, Defendants' practice of pricing trades in this manner and taking the largest possible mark-up or mark-down was not disclosed to custodial clients over the period of time relevant to that Complaint.

35. On information and belief, Defendants' practice of pricing trades in this manner and taking an excessive mark-up or excessive mark-down was not disclosed to investors in the Collective Investment Funds over the period of time relevant to this Complaint.

C. SSBT Made Exceptions for Certain Clients, Offering Them Special Pricing

36. According to the class action securities fraud complaint filed in this Court on July 29, 2010 (Hill v. State Street Corporation, Document No. 51, Master Docket No. 09-cv-12146-NG), over time, SSBT developed a special class of custodial clients that did not receive the excessively high or excessively low range-of-the-day pricing suffered by other custodial clients, including ERISA plans. Those clients who conducted "direct trades" would be quoted an exchange rate by SSBT or SSGM before executing the transaction. These clients – often large hedge funds – typically had easy access to an alternate price source, such as Bloomberg or Reuters, to double-check the truthfulness of SSBT or SSGM's rate quotes. Accordingly, Defendants could not overcharge these clients, and thus referred to them internally as "smart" clients or "smart money."

37. According to the class action securities fraud complaint, instead of including FX trades for these custodial clients with other clients' trades, and subject to the excessive range-of-the-day mark-ups and mark-downs, these clients were allowed to deal directly with Defendants and were given the chance to directly negotiate prices for their FX requirements for that day, despite their trades coming to SSBT as standing instruction trades.

38. As a result, according to the class action securities fraud complaint, the "smart money" custodial clients received better pricing than their fellow custodial clients who are still subject to SSBT's excessive pricing schemes.

V. FACTUAL BACKGROUND OF ERISA PLAN CLAIMS

A. The Plans.

39. Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan. The WM Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

40. Citigroup 401(k) Plan. The Citi Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

41. Retirement Plan of Johnson and Johnson. The J&J Plan is an "employee pension benefit plan" within the meaning of ERISA § 3(2)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2)(A).

42. Other Similarly Situated ERISA Plans. Defendants provide services similar to those provided to the Waste, Citi, and J&J Plans to other, similarly situated Plans, either directly as plan custodian or indirectly as custodian of funds in which the Plans invest.

B. Retirement Plan Investments in Foreign Securities

43. There are two types of ERISA-covered pension plans — defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans. Both types of retirement plans have, especially over the last decade, found it necessary and prudent to expand their investments to include exposure to foreign markets. Accordingly, defined benefit plans have expanded international holdings, and defined contribution plans frequently include at least one, if not several, international investment options.

44. ERISA-covered plans regularly purchase and sell foreign securities in order to increase diversification and take advantage of opportunities for higher returns. Retirement plans that invest in foreign securities receive principal, dividends, and interest that are paid in foreign currencies, or participate in other investments that require the exchange of foreign currency into and from US Dollars ("USD"), either directly or through participation in collective investment funds. As a result, the purchase and sale of currencies incidental to a foreign securities transaction is vital to a plan's participation in the international securities markets and to the acquisition, holding, and disposition of foreign securities.

45. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the WM Plan. Beginning in 1999, the WM Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain Collective Investment Funds, the SSgA International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A Non-Lending. For purposes of communications with the WM Plan and its participants, this fund was named the "International Equity Fund." The International Equity Fund is described more fully below. Another example is the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund offered to WM Plan participants. In 2008, the SSgA Target Retirement 2030 Fund invested in another SSBT Collective Investment Fund, the SSgA MSCI ACWI EX-US Index Fund, a collective investment fund that held foreign securities and would have been, directly or indirectly, party to FX transactions executed by SSBT or its affiliate SSGM. Neither of these Collective Investment Funds could have been operated without FX transactions, whether or not those transactions were executed at the fund level or at the brokerage level. SSBT, as the operator and manager of these funds, was ultimately responsible for the funds' FX transactions.

46. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the Citi Plan. Similarly, the Citi Plan in 2008 offered four international Collective Investment Funds (either directly or as part of an underlying investment of the fund) operated and managed by SSBT: the SSgA EAFE Fund; the SSgA International Small Cap Fund; the SSgA MSCI EAFE Fund; and the SSgA MSCI Emerging Markets Free [sic]. None of these funds could have been operated without FX transactions, whether those transactions were executed at the Collective Investment Fund level or brokerage level. SSBT, as the operator and manager of these funds, was ultimately responsible for those FX transactions.

47. SSBT served as trustee and custodian to the J&J Plan. The J&J Plan did not invest in the Collective Investment Funds. Rather, the J&J Plan directly held foreign assets, including currency, such as Euros, and foreign securities that could not have been purchased on a domestic exchange. An example of one such security is Elpida Memory Inc, a Japanese stock available only on a Japanese exchange. The J&J Plan could not have made use of foreign currencies or purchased foreign securities which are not traded on U.S. securities exchanges without FX transactions. On information and belief, SSBT, as trustee and custodian of the J&J Plan, executed some or all of the J&J Plan's foreign currency transactions in the relevant period.

C. Defendants' Fiduciary Status

48. Every plan governed by ERISA must have fiduciaries to administer and manage the plan. ERISA treats as fiduciaries not only persons explicitly named as fiduciaries under ERISA §402(a)(1), but also any other person who in fact performs fiduciary functions. ERISA §3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. §1002(21)(A)(i) (a person is a fiduciary "to the extent … he exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets…") (emphasis added).

49. An ERISA fiduciary is required to "discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and … for the exclusive purpose of … providing benefits to participants and beneficiaries and … defraying the reasonable expenses of administering the plan …." ERISA § 404(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii).

50. Moreover, ERISA prohibits certain transactions. Specifically, unless exempted pursuant to ERISA § 408, 29 U.S.C. 1108:

> A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not--
>
> > (1) deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,
> >
> > (2) in his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, or
> >
> > (3) receive any consideration for his own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan.

ERISA §406(b), 29 U.S.C. 1106(b). As described below, Defendants functioned as fiduciaries to the Named Plans both by acting as trustee and custodian for the Plans and by exercising authority and control over Plan assets.

1. SSBT as Custodian

51. An ERISA-covered Plan's custodial bank is an ERISA fiduciary. A "custodian" is an institution that holds securities on behalf of investors. The responsibilities entrusted to a custodian include the guarding and safekeeping of securities, delivering or accepting traded securities, and collecting principal, interest, and dividend payments on held securities. Custodians may also perform ancillary services for their clients. Custodians are typically used by institutional investors who do not wish to leave securities on deposit with their broker-dealers or investment managers. The use of a custodial bank is intended to reduce the risk of misconduct by separating the custodial and asset management duties. An independent custodian ensures that the investor has unencumbered ownership of the securities other agents represent to have purchased on its behalf.

52. SSBT served as the custodian for many ERISA-covered pension plans. Specifically, SSBT served as custodian for the Named Plans' assets. As custodian, SSBT was a fiduciary under ERISA and owed fiduciary duties to the Named Plans. SSGM also exercised authority and control over the Plans' assets in its role as SSBT's affiliate responsible for setting the exchange rates on FX transactions and executing those transactions. As discussed above, this process created the excessive spread between the marked-up FX exchange rates charged to custodial ERISA plan clients and the marked-down FX exchange rates used to process repatriation of principal, dividends, and interest paid in foreign currencies, and other FX transactions.

2. SSBT as Investment Manager of Collective Investment Funds for ERISA Plans

53. SSBT sponsored and operated the Collective Investment Funds and offered them to the ERISA plans, including the Plans and the Similarly Situated ERISA Plans. SSBT served as custodian and trustee for the Collective Investment Funds. The Collective Investment Funds were under the exclusive management and control of SSBT.

54. On information and belief, all of the Collective Investment Funds which invested in foreign securities suffered from the same inaccurate FX pricing described in the California qui tam complaint, the California AG complaint-in-intervention, and the Hill securities fraud class action complaint. See ¶¶ 18-38, supra.

55. Investments in collective investment funds are equity interests in a separate legal entity, but are not publicly-offered securities or securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, i.e., mutual funds. Under ERISA, unlike mutual funds and other publicly-offered securities, investments in collective investment funds are subject to a unique "look-through" rule, pursuant to which, the "plan assets" of an ERISA-covered plan include both its undivided "equity interest [in the entity] and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity …". 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a)(2); see also ERISA § 3(42), 29 C.F.R. § 1002(42) (authority of Secretary of Labor to define term "plan assets" by regulation) (emphasis added). Specifically, when a Plan acquires or holds an interest in a common or collective trust fund, that is, a Collective Investment Fund, "its assets include its investment and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity." Id. § 2510.3-101(h)(1) (emphasis added).

56. "[A]ny person who exercises authority or control respecting the management or disposition of such underlying assets, and any person who provides investment advice with respect to such assets for a fee (direct or indirect) is a fiduciary of the investing plan." Id. § 2510.3-101(a).

57. As the sponsor and operator of the Collective Investment Funds, SSBT exercised authority or control with respect to the management or disposition of plan assets. Accordingly, SSBT was a fiduciary of each and every ERISA Plan which invested in the Collective Investment Funds, including the Named Plaintiffs' Plans and the Plans, with respect to the underlying assets of each and every SSBT Collective Investment Fund.

58. In addition, according to SSBT documents provided by the WM Plan in April 2002 to a participant in the WM Plan in response to the participant's request for plan documents pursuant to ERISA § 104(b)(4), 29 U.S.C. § 1024(b)(4), on or about January 1, 1999, the Investment Committee of the WM Plan appointed SSBT to act as Investment Manager of the WM Plan "as such term is defined in Section 3(38) of [ERISA]" with respect to designated assets of the WM Plan. The designated assets included five of the Collective Investment Funds, one of which was the "International Growth Opportunities Fund Series A," that is, the International Equity Fund. Accordingly, SSBT also had authority and control over plan assets in its capacity as Investment Manager, including assets invested in the Collective Investment Funds, and specifically including assets invested in the International Equity Fund. This arrangement continued throughout the WM Plan's association with SSBT, regardless of the specific international equity fund being offered to participants at any given time.

3. Foreign Exchange Transactions Under ERISA

59. Certain of the Collective Investment Funds SSBT operated and offered to ERISA-covered plans during the Class Period invested in foreign securities. SSBT served as custodian and trustee for these Collective Investment Funds. Collective investment funds that invest in foreign securities, or a person acting on their behalf, must engage in FX transactions in order to buy and sell securities, to repatriate dividends or interest payments, and to engage in other transactions. As the trustee of the Collective Investment Funds, SSBT was authorized to convert any monies into any currency through foreign exchange transactions and responsible for ensuring that these transactions were within the bounds of SSBT's fiduciary responsibilities and the limitations of ERISA.

60. For example, according to SSBT documents provided by the WM Plan in April 2002 to a participant in the WM Plan in response to the participant's request for plan documents pursuant to ERISA § 104(b)(4), 29 U.S.C. § 1024(b)(4), the stated investment objective of the International Equity Fund in the Waste Management Plan was "to provide long-term capital appreciation through equity investments in markets outside the United States." (Emphasis added).

61. The WM Plan's Investment Policy Statement noted that "[t]he goal of the International Equity Fund is to invest in a portfolio of common stocks that will provide a vehicle for investing in a broad cross section of non-U.S. equities." The International Equity Fund was also permitted to invest in equity-based derivatives of foreign securities and fixed income securities issued by governments and corporations located in those countries. The "investable universe" of the International Equity Fund was "the equities of all developed market countries, excluding the U.S., including American Depositary Receipts." The International Equity Fund's benchmark was the "MSCI-EAFE Index, an index of more than 1,100 stocks in 21 countries outside of North and South America …."

4. SSGM as a Functional Fiduciary of ERISA Plan Assets

62. As noted above, many of the securities purchased, held, or sold in the Collective Investment Funds were foreign securities that could not be purchased or sold except on foreign securities exchanges in transactions denominated in foreign currencies.

63. As described more fully below, as a practical matter, unless a Collective Investment Fund invested solely in American Depositary Receipts or derivatives issued in the jurisdiction of the United States, the Investment Manager of the Collective Investment Fund, i.e., SSBT, or some person acting on its behalf, such as a broker, was required to engage in foreign currency transactions in order to acquire equity securities "in markets outside the United States." Any funds used to acquire such securities at any level within SSBT, or through any affiliate thereof, would constitute "plan assets" under 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101.

64. On information and belief, SSGM provided brokerage services, that is, the purchase and sale of foreign securities, to the Collective Investment Funds. To the extent that the Collective Investment Funds settled such purchases and sales in U.S. Dollars, the Collective Investment Funds did not engage directly in FX trading in connection with the purchase or sale of foreign securities. Rather, they engaged in FX trading indirectly through SSGM, in that SSGM would have executed a purchase or sale of a foreign security in foreign currency and then converted the transaction to a U.S. Dollar-denominated transaction for purposes of settlement with the Collective Investment Funds.

65. On information and belief, SSGM also served as the conduit for the repatriation of dividend, principal, and interest payments by issuers of foreign securities and for receipt of proceeds of sales of foreign securities, and engaged in FX transactions in order to remit such payments to the Collective Investment Funds in U.S. Dollars.

66. SSGM's conversion of foreign currency to U.S. dollars constituted the exercise of authority or control respecting the management or disposition of the underlying assets of the Collective Investment Funds and, therefore, of assets of the ERISA Plans, within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(1), and 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a). Accordingly, SSGM was a fiduciary of the ERISA Plans.

5. Defendants' Prohibited Transactions

67. According to its September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide, SSBT purported to comply with a special procedure when effecting foreign exchange transactions for ERISA trust and custody clients. Until at least September 26, 2006, the so-called "FX Procedure" purported to be "designed to satisfy the conditions of Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20 ("PTE 94-20"). A prohibited transaction exemption permit[ted] certain 'directed' FX transactions between [SSBT] and its ERISA clients." Under the ERISA "FX Procedure," SSBT "agree[d] to post to its website on a daily basis, a specific buy rate and sell rate for each currency. Each ERISA plan manager [could] direct [SSBT] to effect the plan's FX transactions, including income repatriation and buy/sell related transactions at the posted rates or at rates more favorable if market conditions warrant."

68. The September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide did not, however, address foreign exchange transactions conducted in connection with assets managed directly by SSBT, as in the Collective Investment Funds. Under the terms of PTE 94-20, FX transactions generated by SSBT as investment manager of the Collective Investment Funds and executed by SSBT or SSGM could not be conducted under this so-called "FX Procedure," because, among other things, SSBT as investment manager would be dealing with itself, regardless of whether the FX transactions were conducted internally at SSBT or through its affiliate, SSGM, without the benefit of an independent fiduciary.

69. Nor was there any other applicable prohibited transaction exemption. As set forth above, the terms of FX transactions conducted on behalf of the Collective Investment Funds were conducted on terms less favorable than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length FX transactions between unrelated parties and on terms less favorable than the terms generally afforded by the bank in comparable arm's length FX transactions between unrelated parties. Accordingly, the Defendants could not engage in FX transactions in connection with plan assets in the Collective Investment Funds without engaging in a prohibited transaction.

VI. CLASS ALLEGATIONS

70. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action as a class action pursuant to Rules 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of the Plan and its participants and beneficiaries and the following class of similarly-situated persons (the "Class"):

> All qualified ERISA Plans (including the participants and beneficiaries thereof) for which State Street Bank and Trust Company or State Street Global Markets, LLC served as investment manager (including serving as the manager of a collective trust in which such a Plan invested) or trustee or custodian of assets and for which State Street Bank and Trust Company or State Street Global Markets, LLC provided foreign currency exchange transactional services (including foreign currency transactional services provided to entities such as collective trusts that held such ERISA Plans' assets), at any time between January 1, 2001 and the present (the "Class Period").

Class treatment is appropriate in this case because it would promote judicial economy by adjudicating the Plaintiffs' ERISA fiduciary breach and prohibited transaction claims with respect to all of the Plans and participants and beneficiaries in the class.

71. Numerosity. The members of the Class are so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. While the exact number of Class members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, and can only be ascertained through appropriate discovery, Plaintiffs believe that hundreds of ERISA Plans throughout the country invested in the Collective Investment Funds during the Class Period, and sustained losses as a result of the Defendants' imprudent FX trading activities. Defendants have more than $5.2 trillion of pension assets under custody. These assets could all be exposed to Defendants' improper pricing scheme. Plaintiffs believe that hundreds of ERISA plans are also exposed to the Collective Investment Funds with investments in foreign securities.

72. Commonality. The claims of Plaintiffs and all Class members originate from the same misconduct, breaches of duties and violations of ERISA perpetrated by Defendants with regard to management of its FX trading program. The questions of law and fact common to the Class include, but are not limited to:

a. Whether Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Plans by using an FX trading scheme to overcharge the Plans, or the Collective Investment Funds in which the Plans invested, for FX trading;

b. Whether Defendants' self-interested FX transactions constituted transactions prohibited under ERISA's statutory restrictions;

c. Whether Defendants' fiduciary breaches caused losses to the Plans; and

d. Whether Defendants' prohibited transactions caused losses to the Plans.

73. Typicality. Plaintiffs' claims on behalf of their Plans are not only typical of, but the same as, claims that would be brought with respect to other Plans. If cases were brought and prosecuted individually, each of the members of the Class would be required to prove the same claims based upon the same conduct of the Defendants, using the same legal arguments to prove Defendants' liability, and would be seeking the same relief.

74. Adequacy. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the members of the Class and have retained counsel that are competent and experienced in class action and ERISA litigation. Plaintiffs have no interests antagonistic to, or in conflict with those of the Class. Plaintiffs have undertaken to protect vigorously the interests of the absent members of the Class.

75. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Class action status is warranted under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A), because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of establishing incompatible standards of conduct for Defendants. Class action status is also warranted under Rule 23(b)(1)(B), because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class that, as a practical matter, would be dispositive of the interests of other members not parties to this action, or that would substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

76. Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements. Certification under Rule 23(b)(2) is warranted because Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive, declaratory, or other equitable relief with respect to the Class as a whole. No plan-by-plan inquiry would be required to determine whether Defendants' breached their fiduciary duties.

77. Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements. In the alternative, certification under Rule 23(b)(3) is appropriate because questions of law or fact common to Class members predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and class action treatment is superior to the other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy.

VII. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

COUNT I

Engaging in Self-Interested Prohibited Transactions
(Violation of § 406 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106 by Defendants)

78. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

79. At all relevant times, the Defendants acted as fiduciaries within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A), by exercising authority and control over ERISA plan assets.

80. The Defendants, by their actions throughout the Class Period, caused the Plans to engage in unfairly and unreasonably priced FX transactions.

81. During the Class Period, Defendants engaged in FX transactions using plan assets that were not for the exclusive benefit of the Plans' or their participants.

82. Through their FX transactions and pricing scheme, Defendants dealt with assets of the Plans for their own financial benefit and for their own account. This is a violation of ERISA § 406(b)(1) & (3), 29 U.S.C. 1106(b)(1) & (3).

83. As a direct and proximate result of these prohibited transaction violations, the Plans, directly or indirectly, paid millions of dollars in transaction fees that were prohibited by ERISA and suffered millions of dollars in losses.

84. Pursuant to ERISA, Defendants are liable to disgorge all fees paid them for the Plans' FX transactions, to restore all losses suffered by the Plans as a result of the prohibited transactions, and to disgorge all profits earned on the fees paid by the Plans to Defendants.

COUNT II

Breach of Duties of Prudence and Loyalty
(Violation of § 404 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104 by Defendants)

85. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

86. Defendants breached their ERISA fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty by, inter alia:

a. Using plan assets for the own benefit, causing losses to the Plans and the participants;

b. Charging the Plans (or the Collective Investment Funds in which the Plans invested) fees for FX trading that were unreasonable and in excess of what Defendants had agreed to charge;

c. Failing to disclose to the Plans, their fiduciaries, or participants the amount of fees being charged for FX trading, that those fees were in excess of what Defendants had agreed to charge, and that other clients were charged less for the same services;

87. These actions during the Class Period were breaches of Defendants' fiduciary duties of loyalty and prudence to the Plans under ERISA, and Defendants did not execute their fiduciary responsibilities for the exclusive benefit of the Plans. § 404(a)(1)(A), (B), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1104(a)(1)(A), (B).

88. Defendants committed these breaches during each FX transaction involving assets of the Plans.

89. As a direct and proximate result of these breaches of duty, the Plans, and indirectly Plaintiffs and the Plans' other participants and beneficiaries, realized losses.

90. Pursuant to ERISA, the Defendants are liable to restore all losses suffered by the Plans caused by the Defendants' breaches of fiduciary duty.

COUNT III

Liability for Breach of Co-fiduciary (Violation of § 405 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1105)

91. All previous averments are incorporated herein.

92. SSGM violated ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §1105(a)(1), by knowingly undertaking to conceal SSBT's fiduciary breaches. It did so through the actions and omissions of its employees and agents by concealing and failing to provide complete and accurate information to the Plans regarding the cost of FX transactions.

93. SSGM violated ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §1105(a)(3), because it knew that SSBT had breached its fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty, but failed to take reasonable steps under the circumstances to remedy the breach.

94. On account of SSGM's violations of these provisions, SSGM is liable for the breach of its co-fiduciary, SSBT.

95. As a result of SSGM's actions, the Plans suffered losses.

VIII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for relief as follows:

a. Declare that the Defendants have violated ERISA's prohibited transactions provisions;

b. Declare that the Defendants breached their fiduciary duties under ERISA;

c. Issue an order compelling a proper accounting of the foreign exchange transactions in which the Plans have engaged;

d. Issue an order compelling Defendants to restore all losses caused to the Plans (or that will be caused to the Plans after the filing of this Complaint);

e. Issue an order compelling the Defendants to disgorge all fees paid and incurred to Defendants (or that will be paid or incurred by the Plans after the filing of this Complaint), including any profits thereon;

f. Order equitable restitution and other appropriate equitable monetary relief against the Defendants;

g. Award such other equitable or remedial relief as may be appropriate, including the permanent removal of the Defendants from any positions of trust with respect to the Plans and the appointment of independent fiduciaries to serve as custodian to the Plans;

h. That this action be certified as a class action and that each Class be designated to receive the amounts restored to the Plans by Defendants and a constructive trust be established for distribution to the extent required by law;

i. Enjoin Defendants collectively, and each of them individually, from any further violations of their ERISA fiduciary responsibilities, obligations, and duties;

j. Award Plaintiffs their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to ERISA § 502(g), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g) and/or the Common Fund doctrine; and

k. Award such other and further relief as the Court deems equitable and just.

7. In 2011, the trust had approximately 22.8 trillion in outstanding debt and debt instruments, which it owed to thousands of investors around the world.[1] The trust had no employees, instead relying on third-party service providers to administer its affairs.

8. Support for the trust's operations came from the trust's settlors. The trust was established by Mexico's federal government to help finance the construction of new highways. Mexico's federal government, in turn, relied on private companies to perform the construction work. Because the trust was established to help finance the construction of highways, it was important to the trust's settlors that the trust's assets be used to pay for the construction of highways.

9. Mr. Cabrera and Mr. Chapa Saldaña were employed by the Mexican government and were responsible for overseeing the trust. The trust's assets were held in accounts at Mexican banks. Cabrera and Chapa, on behalf of the trust, entered into agreements with Mexican banks pursuant to which the banks would hold the trust's assets in accounts and provide other services to the trust. Cabrera and Chapa also entered into agreements with Mexican banks pursuant to which the banks would provide loans to the trust. Because the trust's assets were held in accounts at Mexican banks, the trust's ability to borrow money from Mexican banks was limited by the amount of assets that the trust held in accounts at those banks.

10. Despite the trust's substantial borrowing, the trust had difficulty paying its debts in January 1998, when the Asian debt crisis caused the value of Mexican currency to decline sharply against the dollar. The trust's assets were denominated in Mexican currency, but the trust had substantial debts that it owed to investors around the world that were denominated in dollars. The trust's assets were worth significantly less in dollars than they had been worth before the Asian debt crisis began, but the trust still owed the same amount of money to its investors around the world.

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiff Alan Kober

16. Plaintiff Alan Kober is a beneficiary of the Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Theodore Kober dated December 10, 2003 (the "Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust"). The Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust was established on December 1, 1989. In this capacity, Mr. Kober is entitled to receive distributions from the Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust, and has standing to bring claims against the Defendants pursuant to G.L. c. 203E, § 409 and § 502(a)(2).

17. Plaintiff Merrill Lynch Mortgage Investors Inc. is a beneficiary of the Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Theodore Kober dated December 10, 2003 (the "Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust"). The Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust is entitled to receive distributions from the Bank of America Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-B (the "Bank of America Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-B"), which, together with Merrill Lynch Mortgage Investors Inc., established the Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust. The Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust is an Eligible Certificateholder Institutional Investor which has the right to direct the Bank of America Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-B.

18. As trustee of the Theodore Kober 2003 Irrevocable Trust, pursuant to Section 4.1 of the Master Trust Agreement, the Master Trust Agreement, dated as of December 1, 2006 between Bank of America Funding Corporation as depositor and the Trustee, as trustee, pursuant to which it has been appointed to exercise certain rights and powers as the Certificateholder of the Issuing Entity. The Issuing Entity holds certain Mortgage Loans. This Issuing Entity holds the property of the trust in which it has been granted a beneficial interest. The Master Trust Agreement further provides that this is the primary vehicle through which the Issuing Entity holds the Mortgage Loans, including the Mortgage Loans which are the subject of this prohibited transaction.

19. Pursuant to the Issuing Entity Agreement, Plaintiff Merrill Lynch Mortgage Investors Inc. established the Bank of America Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-B on April 1, 2001, the Bank of America Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, Series 2006-B interest that the other members of the proposed Class have, or will be subject to, and prevent the risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class that would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the Defendants.

39. Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements. Certification is also appropriate under Rule 23(b)(2) because Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the Class as a whole.

40. Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements. In the alternative, certification is also appropriate under Rule 23(b)(3) because questions of law or fact common to Class members predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy. The Interbank Foreign Exchange Market is a decentralized, global over-the-counter financial market for the trading of currencies. Financial centers around the world function as anchors of trading between a wide range of different types of buyers and sellers around the clock, with the exception of weekends.

42. Interbank foreign exchange transactions are conducted principally electronically over two interdealer electronic communications networks (the "FX Interdealer Brokers") and through bilateral transactions over the telephone or electronic systems such as Bloomberg and Reuters. The FX Interdealer Brokers were founded by and are owned by a consortium of the largest dealer banks in the foreign exchange interbank market.

43. For example, Defendant A.G. is a member of both of the FX Interdealer Brokers and has access to the proprietary trading systems operated by the FX Interdealer Brokers. Furthermore, Defendant A.G. did not pay for the cost of the FX Interdealer Brokers. To participate in the FX Interdealer Brokers, Defendant A.G. was required to

79. The Plaintiff Securities Litigation Class Representatives and their respective damages experts have analyzed the Exchange Traded Products' trading data and have identified dark pool trades that occurred outside the forward-adjusted range of the day. The Class Representatives' analysis identified 4,216 dark pool trades in Exchange Traded Products, 2,217, or 53%, fell entirely outside the forward-adjusted range of the day. The 2,217 Exchange Traded Products trades, with dark pool executions ranging from 200 basis points, added trading costs 64.4 basis points higher than the day's volume weighted average price. For example, one purchase of 10 million shares, executed at 64.4 basis points higher than 64,400 prices at which shares traded on the day in question.

80. Dark pool investors benefit when they buy shares at prices lower than the day's volume weighted average price, and the dark pool operator benefits when it charges investors hidden fees for trades executed in the dark pool. Dark pool operators do not disclose the prices at which trades occur in dark pools. But when dark pool trades occur outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, it becomes apparent that the dark pool operator, rather than dark pool investors, is benefiting from the dark pool trades.

81. The Class Representatives, however, have sufficient information to identify Exchange Traded Products trades, or individual Exchange Traded Products trades, that occurred outside the forward-adjusted range of the day and to calculate the amount by which dark pool operators overcharged investors for those trades. The Class Representatives' analysis of dark pool trades outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, purchase transactions, and damages calculations for dark pool trades in Exchange Traded Products. In short, the analysis focuses on trades that occurred outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, which should not have occurred if dark pool operators were executing trades at prices that were fair and reasonable.

90. In its initial complaint that it filed in March 2011, the Trustee admitted that "[s]ince December 2009, the Trustee has provided to Plaintiffs and its counsel documents and information regarding the principal and interest payments, the dates of the transfers, and the amounts of the withdrawals from the Plaintiffs' accounts that are the subject of this litigation." Emphasis added. The Trustee admitted that these documents and information showed the amount of principal and interest that was withdrawn from the Plaintiffs' accounts, the dates on which the withdrawals were made, and the amounts withdrawn.

91. The Trustee has alleged that State Street's FX trading desk executed FX transactions for the Plaintiffs' accounts at prices that were disadvantageous to the Plaintiffs. The Trustee has also alleged that State Street's FX trading desk executed FX transactions for the Plaintiffs' accounts at prices that were not the best prices available to the Plaintiffs' accounts.

92. The Trustee has asserted these claims on behalf of the Plaintiffs' accounts in this qui tam action. The Trustee has alleged that State Street's FX transactions, the prices of which were disadvantageous to the Plaintiffs' accounts, have resulted in losses of 63%. The Trustee has alleged 498,940 FX spot and forward trades, 196,280 of which were transactions executed 302,660 times at prices that were disadvantageous to the Plaintiffs' accounts between 2000 2010, and has alleged that these losses were hidden from the Plaintiffs' accounts, in violation of the Trustee's duty to refrain from executing FX transactions for the Plaintiffs' accounts in 2010 and to refrain from drawing down the Plaintiffs' accounts to pay for these losses between 2000 2009.

(15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(38), 29 U.S.C. 1002(38)).

101. Here, Plaintiffs were required to be provided with the Investment Advisory Agreement, which was not provided, despite demand, and which, upon information and belief, has been destroyed by Defendants. In this regard, Plaintiffs are informed and believe that Defendants failed to maintain the Investment Advisory Agreement as required by the Investment Advisers Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

102. Plaintiffs expressly rejected and disaffirmed any alleged waiver of the Investment Advisory Agreement and the duties owed thereunder, including, without limitation, during the period between December 31, 2006 and June 30, 2007 when they were not represented by counsel.

103. Upon information and belief, Plaintiffs have suffered damages as a result of Defendants' failure to provide the Investment Advisory Agreement and other required disclosures under the Investment Advisers Act.

110. Upon information and belief, Mr. Madoff brought Ruth into the fold, that is, the purported investment advisory business. To the extent Ruth was aware that Madoff was not trading securities, she did not actively direct investments in X trading positions with the purported investment advisory business, but she did actively direct investments in X trading positions with Mr. Madoff's investment advisory business. Ruth directed her family members and friends to invest with Madoff.

111. Mr. Madoff provided Ruth and her corporate entities, principally, and their investment portfolios with fictitious account statements reflecting fictitious investment advisory trades. Ruth directed investments in X trading positions with the purported investment advisory business.

112. Mr. Madoff, in furtherance of his fraudulent investment advisory business, told Ruth he was trading in the stock market, and that is what Ruth believed. However, Ruth knew that Madoff was not trading securities, and instead, he was engaging in X trading. Ruth knew that Madoff was not trading securities, but did not have any knowledge of the details of Madoff's X trading. Ruth knew that Madoff's X trading was highly profitable, and that Madoff was using the profits from his X trading to pay the redemptions requested by Ruth and her corporate entities, principally, and their investment portfolios with fictitious account statements.

113. Mr. Madoff's investment advisory business was a fraud. Ruth directed investments in the purported investment advisory business with the knowledge that Madoff was not trading securities, therefore, Ruth knew that the investments with the purported investment advisory business were not eligible for the DRD under I.R.C. § 243(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(i), and 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a). Accordingly, the Trustee and Madoff Recovery Initiatives have the right to recover the

E. State Street's FX trades were prohibited transactions under ERISA and corresponding federal regulations.

114. ERISA § 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), prohibits transactions between a plan and a party in interest unless the transaction is specifically exempted by statute or regulation. Fiduciaries to employee benefit plans are also prohibited from dealing with plan assets in their own interest or for their own account. Fiduciaries are also prohibited from receiving consideration for their own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02 (February 17, 1994). Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20 ("PTE 94-20") required that each transaction be disclosed to an independent plan fiduciary, or the plan sponsor. PTE 98-54 modified this requirement to require that each transaction be disclosed prior to the purchase of securities, including foreign exchange transactions, by an independent plan fiduciary. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54, 63 Fed. Reg. 63503-63510 (November 13, 1998). The requirement is that the trustee, bank, broker-dealer, or investment manager engaging in the transaction disclose to the independent plan fiduciary or plan sponsor in advance of the transaction, in writing, the circumstances under which the transaction may take place. Effective October 17, 2006.

115. State Street Bank and Trust Company is a fiduciary within the meaning of the Prohibited Transaction Exemption and the corresponding federal regulations, through direct or indirect control, through its own actions, or through the actions of its agents.

116. State Street did not disclose to its clients, in writing, the circumstances under which State Street did not comply with the requirements of the Prohibited Transaction Exemption, by failing to disclose to the independent plan fiduciary that State Street did not negotiate foreign exchange transactions executed as principal with plan assets in accordance with the parameters or limitations described in writing by the plan fiduciary, except as specifically authorized by the plan fiduciary's written guidelines or instructions.

136. ERISA Section 406(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D), provides that a fiduciary shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction if he knows or should know that the transaction constitutes a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of a party in interest, of plan assets.

137. As discussed above, Citibank is a fiduciary with respect to the Plans.

138. Mizuho is a party in interest with respect to the Plans within the meaning of ERISA Section 3(14), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14), because it provided banking services to the Plans in connection with the Plans' investments in Mizuho Bank Stock, and it is a party in interest with respect to the Plans within the meaning of ERISA Section 406(a)(1)(B), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(B). Furthermore, because Mizuho owned more than 10% of the outstanding shares of Mizuho Bank Stock, Mizuho was a party in interest with respect to the Plans within the meaning of ERISA Section 406(a)(1)(E), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(E).

139. By causing the Plans to purchase Mizuho Bank Stock for the purpose of providing liquidity for Mizuho Bank's Tokyo Stock Exchange trading, which benefited Mizuho, Citibank caused the Plans to engage in transactions that it knew or should have known constituted a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest, which included Mizuho. Citibank caused the Plans to engage in transactions that it knew or should have known constituted a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest, which included Mizuho, in violation of ERISA Section 406(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D).

140. Although ERISA Section 408(b)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(2), provides an exception for the prohibition of ERISA Section 406, 29 U.S.C. § 1106, for transactions between a plan and a party in interest, inter alia, for the provision of services to the plan, that exception is inapplicable to Citibank because Citibank knew or should have known that the transactions were prohibited by ERISA Section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), and Citibank did not qualify for the exception.

141. Although there is also an exception for the prohibition of ERISA Section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), for the provision of banking services by a bank supervised by a State or the United States, that exception is inapplicable because Citibank knew or should have known that the transactions were prohibited by ERISA Section 406(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D), and Citibank did not qualify for the exception.

142. Pursuant to ERISA § 502(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2), and § 409, 29 U.S.C. § 1109, State Street Bank and SSGM are liable to restore to the Plan any losses caused by their breaches of fiduciary duties, and to provide other appropriate equitable relief.

COUNT IV

(Co-Fiduciary Liability, against SSGM and State Street Bank)

143. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the preceding paragraphs.

144. As described above, SSGM and State Street Bank provided investment advice to ERISA Plans within the meaning of ERISA § 3(21), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21). Thus, they were bound by the duties of loyalty and prudence.

145. ERISA § 405, 29 U.S.C. § 1105, provides that, in addition to any liability which a fiduciary may have under any other provision, a fiduciary with respect to a plan shall be liable for a breach of fiduciary responsibility of another fiduciary with respect to the same plan in the following circumstances: (1) if he participates knowingly in, or knowingly undertakes to conceal, an act or omission of such other fiduciary, knowing such act or omission is a breach; (2) if, by his failure to comply with section 404(a)(1) in the administration of his specific responsibilities which give rise to his status as a fiduciary, he has enabled such other fiduciary to commit a breach; or (3) if he has knowledge of a breach by such other fiduciary, unless he makes reasonable efforts under the circumstances to remedy the breach.

146. State Street Bank and SSGM knew the breaches of the other parties' responsibilities, participated knowingly in, and undertook to conceal, their acts and omissions, and knew that SSGM was providing investment advice to the Plans.

147. Neither State Street Bank nor SSGM made reasonable efforts under the circumstances to remedy the breaches by the other fiduciaries, or to prevent the breaches.

148. State Street Bank and SSGM participated in the breaches of the other parties' responsibilities, enabled the breaches to occur, knowingly undertook to conceal their acts and omissions, and knew of the breaches by the other fiduciaries, and failed to remedy the breaches, as described above. Each is liable for the losses caused by the breaches, as described herein.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

The Andover Companies Employee Savings and Profit Sharing Plan on behalf of itself, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, and all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs, vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company, Defendant.	)	No. 1: 12-cv-11698 MLW DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

PLAINTIFFS' AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

Table of Contents

This is a classic case of self-dealing. The ERISA-qualified retirement plans of Plaintiffs suffered losses because Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company did not prudently safeguard their assets, instead permitting its currency traders to pilfer plan assets by improperly marking up and marking down foreign currency trades. This self-dealing occurred whenever State Street needed to exchange currency on behalf of the plans. Rather than seek the best price for the plans' foreign currency exchange transactions—or even the actual market rate—State Street used one of its divisions, State Street Global Markets, to execute the foreign currency exchange trades to benefit its own accounts. In executing these trades, Global Markets did not charge the plans what the transaction cost. Nor did Global Markets charge a rate based on the cost of the transaction. Instead, Global Markets systematically priced the trades based on the worst price of the trading day, and pocketed profits at the plans' expense. State Street manipulated the currency transactions to the plans' detriment despite its duty as a fiduciary under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 1001, et seq. ("ERISA") to protect the plans' assets. Because this practice was widespread and uniform, it forms the basis for claims on behalf of a class of ERISA Plans ("the Plans"). This lawsuit seeks to recover the losses the Plans suffered as a result of State Street's self-dealing.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Plaintiffs' allegations are based on personal knowledge as to themselves and their own acts, and on information and belief and the investigation of counsel as to all other matters.[1]

2. Plaintiffs are Alan Kober, a trustee and fiduciary for The Andover Companies Employees' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan. Plaintiffs trusted State Street Bank with their retirement savings and suffered losses as a result of State Street's self-dealing FX trading scheme.

3. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company's ("State Street Bank" or "State Street") undertook self-dealing and imprudent management of Plaintiffs' ERISA-covered funds in two ways. Some of the Plans offered their participants investment options that included State Street Bank-sponsored commingled funds—that is, pools of assets created and aggregated by State Street Bank for a number of different investors and plans—that required foreign currency ("FX") trades, while other defined benefit Plans hired State Street to serve as custodian to undertake FX trades of plan assets. In either circumstance, the self-dealing and imprudent management by State Street violates ERISA.

4. For both defined contribution and defined benefit Plans, State Street was an ERISA fiduciary. State Street was an ERISA fiduciary because it served as the trustee and investment manager to the Plans and commingled funds through its State Street Global Advisors ("SSgA") division, and as the investment manager it exercised discretionary control over Plan assets. One example of State Street's discretionary control is that as investment manager for the commingled funds SSgA negotiated or contracted with State Street Global Markets ("Global Markets") to execute FX transactions to facilitate purchases or sales of foreign securities for the funds, or to repatriate profits made abroad.

5. State Street was also an ERISA fiduciary in its provision of trustee and custodian services. In serving as trustee and custodian to the defined benefit and defined contribution Plans, State Street acted as more than a "plain vanilla" custodian of assets—that is, it did more than perform administrative and ministerial duties. Instead, Global Markets took control of Plan assets and exercised discretion when it entered into FX transactions on behalf of the Plans. Rather than simply executing FX transactions according to market rates at the time requests were received, Global Markets utilized its control over Plan assets and the FX process to impose unauthorized, undisclosed mark-ups or mark-downs on the rates for the FX transactions and pocketed the difference. In so doing, it was a functional ERISA fiduciary.

6. As a custodial bank, State Street Bank holds securities on behalf of investors. Clients hire custodians to do several things, including: safeguard and record movement of assets; arrange settlement of all purchases and sales; and maintain and manage all cash transactions, including FX transactions. Custodians are typically used by investors who do not wish to leave securities on deposit with their broker-dealers or investment managers. By separating the duties of investment manager and custodian, an investor—at least in theory—reduces the risk of fraud or other misconduct.

7. As of September 2012, State Street held approximately $23.44 trillion in assets under custody and administration, making it one of the largest providers of custodial services in the world. In fact, as of December 31, 2011, State Street's SSgA division was the largest manager of institutional assets worldwide, the largest manager of assets for tax-exempt organizations (primarily pension and retirement plans) in the U.S., and the third largest investment manager in the world. State Street charged Plaintiffs and the Plans in the putative class hundreds of millions of dollars a year in fees for custodial and investment management services. A significant amount of State Street's revenue, however, was comprised of ill-gotten gains from self-dealing FX transactions.

8. Under ERISA, Plaintiffs may recover losses and obtain equitable relief on behalf of the Plans and all others similarly situated. ERISA demands that State Street act prudently and solely in the interest of those who, like Plaintiffs, have invested money in accounts covered by ERISA. This duty to act prudently and solely in the interest of Plaintiffs and others is a fiduciary duty, and fiduciary duties are among the strongest in the law.

9. ERISA also creates strict liability for certain types of prohibited transactions, such as State Street's self-dealing in charging unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs to the Plans on the FX trades through its Global Market division, and then pocketing the difference. The undisclosed mark-ups and mark-downs were not for the exclusive benefit of the Plans or their participants and beneficiaries, but rather benefitted State Street Bank.

10. Despite its legal obligations to Plaintiffs, State Street has undertaken an unfair and deceptive practice from at least 1998-2009 (hereinafter, "Class Period"). Namely, State Street Bank has overseen and been responsible for the FX transaction practices described herein. These transactions were undertaken behind a veil of secrecy that allowed State Street to make exorbitant and undisclosed profits at the direct expense of the Plans. State Street charged the Plans marked-up FX rates when buying foreign currency on their behalf, and marked-down FX rates when selling foreign currency for the Plans, and in both cases pocketed the difference. State Street charged the Plans and the Proposed Class fictitious FX rates unrelated to the market-based rates State Street was actually paying.

11. The Plaintiffs, the Plans, and other Class members could not have detected State Street's deception. For the commingled funds, the transaction was conducted between two internal State Street divisions (SSgA and Global Markets) and was not reported on the fund fact sheets or otherwise reported to Plan sponsors. While State Street's custodial clients may have received a report of the rates that they were charged, without receiving a corollary report showing the range of actual trades for the currency pairs at issue, they could not detect that they were being charged hidden and unauthorized mark-ups (or mark-downs) on their FX trades.

12. State Street's unfair and deceptive FX trading practices generated hundreds of millions of dollars in profits annually for State Street—money that should have gone to Plaintiffs and the Proposed Class.

13. Plaintiffs bring this class action on behalf of all similarly affected ERISA clients of State Street during the Class Period, to recover the proceeds State Street reaped from Class members through its unfair and deceptive FX trading practices.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

14. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. section 1331 and 29 U.S.C. section 1132(e)(1). Plaintiffs' claims are brought as a class action under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

15. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 29 U.S.C. section 1132(e)(2).

III. PARTIES

A. Plaintiff Alan Kober

16. Plaintiff Alan Kober is an Individual Trustee of The Andover Companies Employees' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan (the "Andover Plan"). In this capacity, Mr. Kober is a Plan fiduciary with standing to bring claims for breach of fiduciary duty on behalf of the Plan pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2).

17. Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance Company ("Merrimack Mutual") is the designated Plan Administrator for the Andover Plan. The Andover Plan is an ERISA-qualified defined contribution plan established for the benefit of the employees of Merrimack Mutual and its sister companies, Cambridge Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and Bay State Insurance Company, which, together with Merrimack Mutual, comprise the Andover Companies ("Andover Companies").

18. During the Class Period, the Andover Plan offered participants investments in several SSgA-sponsored commingled funds, including international equity funds such as State Street's International Growth Opportunities Securities Lending Class A Fund, and the SSgA Daily International Alpha Select fund.

19. By contract, State Street Bank served as both the Trustee for the Andover Plan and as an ERISA fiduciary and Investment Manager for the Andover Companies Plan investments from 2001 through approximately 2009.

20. As trustee for the Andover Plan, State Street Bank was required to exercise power and authority over the investment accounts for which it had express investment management discretion, or upon the direction of the Investment Manager. Pursuant to section 4.1(o) of the Master Trust Agreement, the investment power of the trustee included the power to "purchase and sell foreign exchange and contracts for foreign exchange, including transactions entered into with State Street Bank and Trust Company, its agents or its subcustodians."

21. By separate contract, State Street Bank served as investment manager for the Andover Plan's assets invested in State Street's proprietary commingled funds. Pursuant to section 1 of the Investment Manager Agreement, State Street was both a discretionary investment manager and a designated ERISA fiduciary pursuant to section 3(38) of ERISA with respect to all cash, securities, or other property designated by the Andover Plan.

B. Plaintiff James Pehoushek-Stangeland

22. Plaintiff James Pehoushek-Stangeland is a resident of Seattle, Washington. He is an employee of the Boeing Company and is a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan ("the Boeing Plan"). Accordingly, Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland has standing to bring suit on behalf of the Boeing Plan for losses to the Plan due to breaches of fiduciary duty pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2).

23. The Boeing Plan is an ERISA-qualified defined contribution plan established for the benefit of the employees of the Boeing Company, a multinational aerospace and defense corporation headquartered in Chicago, Illinois.

24. By contract, State Street Bank served as Trustee for The Boeing Company Employee Savings Plans Master Trust ("Boeing Master Trust").

25. During the Class Period, the Boeing Plan offered its participants investment options in several SSgA-sponsored commingled funds. Among the international equity funds offered were the SSgA Global All Cap Equity ex-US Index Non-Lending Series Fund Class A ("SSgA Global Non-Lending Fund"), which Boeing designated as the "International Index Fund."

26. As of December 31, 2010, the Boeing Plan held approximately $1.98 billion in Plan assets in the International Index Fund. As of December 31, 2011, the Boeing Plan held approximately $1.863 billion in the fund. These investments constituted approximately 6% of the Boeing Plan investments.

27. The International Index Fund invests in an index comprised of global developed and emerging country stocks from outside the U.S. Its international investments require exchange of participants' U.S. dollars into various foreign currencies, and SSgA utilizes Global Markets for the FX transactions.

28. Due to the "fund of funds" structure of many offerings in the Boeing Plan, the International Index Fund appears in multiple placed in the Boeing Plan portfolio: not only as a stand-alone investment option, but also as part of the Balanced Index Fund and each of the nine Lifecycle Funds, which are the target retirement options for Boeing Plan participants.

29. During the class period, Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland invested in SSgA's International Index Fund, directly as well as indirectly through the Lifecycle 2040 Fund and the Balanced Index Fund.

30. Plaintiffs use the term "International Equity Funds" to collectively denote the SSgA-sponsored commingled international equity funds that required purchases and repatriation of foreign currency by Global Markets, and that were investment offerings in the Boeing and Andover Plans, as well as for other members of the Proposed Class.

C. Defendant State Street Bank and Trust Company

31. Defendant State Street Bank is a registered financial holding company with its principal place of business in Boston, Massachusetts.

32. State Street Bank's business activities are organized into three segments or divisions: investment management provided by SSgA, custodial services provided by Global Markets, and institutional services provided by State Street Investor Services.

33. SSgA is a division of Defendant State Street Bank responsible for investment management. The SSgA division of State Street Bank provides asset management, and is billed as the "Fiduciary Heritage of State Street Corporation."

34. Global Markets is also a division of Defendant State Street Bank. Global Markets provides custodial services to clients, including processing the FX transactions at issue herein. Global Markets processes these FX transactions at the direction of SSgA on behalf of the International Equity Funds and the Plans.

35. State Street Bank is also the Trustee for the State Street Bank and Trust Company Investment Funds for Tax Exempt Retirement Plans (also referred to as the "commingled funds"). This was the trust pursuant to which State Street created, offered, and maintained the various commingled funds—the funds that were offered to the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan for their retirement plans.

36. The terms of the relevant Amended and Restated Declaration of Trust establish that State Street Bank and Trust Company was the trustee for the commingled funds, and that the funds were under the exclusive management and control of State Street Bank. Pursuant to the Declaration of Trust, State Street Bank had the power to hold, manage, and control all property held in the trust, or power to delegate responsibility for management of the assets to ERISA-qualified investment managers. State Street Bank also had the power to convert any monies into any currency through foreign exchange transactions to the extent permitted under ERISA. Accordingly, investment management for the commingled ERISA funds was conducted through State Street Bank's SSgA division, and FX trading through the Global Markets division.

IV. SUBSTANTIVE ALLEGATIONS

A. Foreign Exchange Trading is Essential to Plaintiffs' Ability to Meet Their Retirement Plan Investment Needs

1. The Necessity of FX Trading in a Global Investment Portfolio

37. Investors such as the Plans have found it increasingly necessary to enter the overseas securities markets and expand the global scope of their investment portfolios. These investments may offer increased diversification and greater returns than domestic investments alone.

38. Institutional investors that buy and sell foreign securities, such as Global Markets on behalf of the Plans, must trade currency because purchases, sales, dividends, and interest payments are all transacted in the currency of the nation in which the relevant securities exchange sits. Just as you need euros, yuan, or yen to buy coffee in Berlin, Beijing, or Tokyo, you need those same currencies to buy securities in Germany, China or Japan.

39. A U.S. investor must use euros to buy shares that trade on a German securities exchange. To get those euros, you must sell U.S. dollars and purchase euros. Similarly, dividends or interest earned in Germany will be paid in euros, and turning those gains into dollars requires exchanging euros for dollars.

40. For a U.S. investor to receive proceeds from the sale of foreign securities, the foreign currency received from the sale must be converted into the currency of one's own country. This process is called repatriation. The rate of exchange matters because it impacts the proceeds of any investment made in foreign currency.

2. How FX Trading Works

41. The values of different currencies "float" against each other. That is, they vary based on factors ranging from supply and demand to political and economic trends. While the price of coffee at a Berlin café might be € 2 all week long, it might cost $ 2.50 on Monday morning and $2.72 by Friday.

42. FX trading occurs on a nearly 24-hour cycle, five-and-a half days a week. The official FX trading day begins at 7:00 a.m. New Zealand time and ends at 5:00 p.m. New York City time.

43. For each currency bought and sold during the course of the FX trading day, there will necessarily be a high trade and a low trade. This information is tracked by proprietary services such as Electronic Brokerage System ("EBS") and Reuters.

44. The difference between the low trade and the high trade is called the "range of the day." The "spot range of the day" refers to FX rates as of a specific and prompt settlement date, usually two business days after the trade date. To more accurately measure the trade cost for FX transactions that settle prior to or later than the date for spot trades, traders in the FX market also look to the "forward-adjusted range of the day." Because FX trades do not always settle two days after the trade, the forward-adjusted range of the day is a more conservative and accurate measurement because it takes into account the interest rate differential between the trade date and settlement date for the underlying currencies.

45. If, during one trading day, the lowest trade was $1.25 to buy €1.00, and the highest rate trade was $1.35 to buy €1.00, the range of the day would be $1.25-$1.35.

46. Another useful measure for analyzing FX trades is the daily "mid-rate," which is simply the sum of the forward-adjusted daily high and forward-adjusted daily low, divided by two. This rate reflects the "average" FX rate in a given currency pair on a given day.

47. The daily mid-rate is significant to this case because Plaintiffs cannot discover the precise time of day when FX trades occurred (in contrast to stock trading, for example). By looking at the daily mid-rate over a significant period of time, one can reasonably estimate the average FX trade cost on any given day. Over time, FX trades will regress to the mid-rate.

3. Negotiated vs. Non-Negotiated FX Trades

48. In a "negotiated," or "active," FX trade, an investor communicates directly with a FX trader. The FX trader quotes a rate for a proposed transaction, which is accepted, rejected or countered—in other words, actively negotiated. If a deal is reached, the trader executes the FX trade at the agreed-upon price. Negotiated trades can potentially achieve better rates for an investor, but the process requires greater resources.

49. In a "non-negotiated," "standing-instruction," or "indirect" trade there is no arm's-length negotiation of the price between the investor and the trader. Instead, clients simply report the desired currency transaction to the bank, trusting and relying on the bank to execute the trade on the client's behalf using "best execution" practices. Plaintiffs' allegations herein complain solely of State Street Bank's practices with regard to non-negotiated trades.

B. State Street's Provision of FX Trades to its Custodial Clients

50. Institutional investors, such as pension plans like the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teachers"), typically requested that State Street handle the smaller FX transactions, mostly the repatriation of dividend and interest payments, through non-negotiated trades because the amount of each trade rarely justified the time and effort required for a negotiated trade.

51. State Street's clients reasonably expected that non-negotiated FX trades would have no mark-ups or mark-downs, for at least three reasons: (1) custodial clients already paid State Street hefty annual fees to serve as custodian over their assets; (2) the Custodian Contracts and associated fee schedules indicated no extra fees or mark ups, and did not authorize any such fees or mark-ups; and (c) State Street's Investment Manager Guides assured custodial clients and investment managers that the price of FX trades was "based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added).

1. State Street's Clients Relied Upon State Street's Expertise and Loyalty

52. Custodial clients placed a high degree of trust in State Street to execute non-negotiated FX transactions. In conducting these transactions, State Street occupied a superior position to its custodial clients due to its control over all aspects of the FX trade, including the information that its traders had about the FX market, the timing of the trades, and most importantly, the prices at which the trades were executed.

53. Custodial clients depended on Global Markets not only to execute the FX trades, but also to accurately and honestly report the FX rate to them, and to carry out the trades in accordance with their custodial contracts, associated fee schedules, and guidelines as set forth in the Investment Manager Guides.

54. Consistent with the custodial contracts and Investment Manager Guides, State Street's clients also had a reasonable expectation that the FX rates that State Street charged (or credited) on non-negotiated FX trades would accurately reflect the true market-rates of those FX trades. And there is no reason a custodial client would expect its custodian bank—to which it was paying substantial annual fees for custodial services—to charge non-negotiated FX trades at something other than the actual rate for the FX trade.

2. State Street's Custodial Contracts and Investment Manager Guidelines Were Predicated on No-Cost FX Trading

55. For State Street's custodial clients, such as the Arkansas Teachers, the contracts provided that State Street "shall be entitled to compensation for its services and expenses as Custodian" pursuant to "a written Fee Schedule between the parties." Custodial clients and State Street agreed to and executed a series of fee schedules covering the class period.

56. The fee schedules either provided estimated annual fees or annual flat fees for State Street's services as a custodian.

57. State Street's custodial contracts (a) expressly provided that non-negotiated FX trades would be executed free of charge; or (b) did not list FX transactions among the services for which it was permitted to charge an additional fee or any other cost above the annual flat fee.

58. The fee schedules did set forth certain categories of ancillary services for which State Street was permitted to charge additional fees, including Wire Fees, Reporting Fees, Delivery Fees and Subcustody Fees. None of these ancillary service categories relate to FX trading for non-negotiated trades.

59. The Custodian Contracts did not state that State Street would impose any fees in connection with FX trading.

60. State Street consistently stated that "Foreign Exchange Transactions . . . are priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added). This promise was made in Investment Manager Guides for custodial clients and investment managers. These Guides contained comprehensive information about State Street's custody practices and services, including procedural requirements, costs, and information on "State Street Foreign Exchange Transactions."

61. During the Class Period, State Street issued at least 15 Investment Manager Guides, including those dated July 9, 2003; August 9, 2005; September 26, 2006; October 17, 2006; November 20, 2006; December 15, 2006; January 25, 2007; October 30, 2007; November 21, 2007; December 19, 2007; January 28, 2008; May 1, 2008; October 31, 2008; December 30, 2008; January 23, 2009, November 20, 2009 and December 1, 2009.

62. State Street represented in each of these Investment Manager Guides that "State Street Foreign Exchange Transactions . . . are priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed." (Emphasis added.)

3. State Street's Deceptive Scheme Overcharged Clients for Non-Negotiated FX Trades

63. Despite State Street's representations that FX transactions were priced based on market rates at the time the trades were executed, State Street's FX practices diverged from what the Custodial Contracts authorized and what the Investment Manager Guides represented. Instead, State Street reported and charged its custodial clients FX rates on non-negotiated trades far above what State Street actually paid for foreign currency (or far below what State Street actually received for sales of foreign currency)—oftentimes, at rates that actually fell outside of the range of the day.

64. However, unbeknownst to its custodial clients, when State Street reported FX rates on non-negotiated trades to its clients, those statements did not reflect the actual cost or proceeds of the FX transactions, and instead reflected rates that Global Markets selected at its discretion. Put simply, State Street invented the FX rates it reported and charged (or credited) to its custodial clients. State Street paid or received one rate for FX during the trading day, yet reported to its custodial clients another rate that was either higher (in the case of a purchase) or a lower (in the case of a sale), and pocketed the difference.

65. For example, when custodial clients or their agents requested that State Street execute an FX transaction, the request was routed electronically via State Street's Market Order Management System (MOMS) to a group of "risk traders" working at Global Market's FX trading desk. A Global Markets FX trader would execute the transaction at whatever the current exchange rate was (the "actual rate") using the Wall Street System ("WSS"). The rate reported by Global Markets for the transaction, however, was not the rate State Street charged clients. The trader would instead charge the client a rate selected at his discretion at the end of the day, after seeing the day's range of FX transaction rates for the relevant currencies. This manipulation allowed Global Markets to mark up or mark down rates, charge rates that were most favorable to itself rather than in the best interest of the Plans, and pocket the difference between the actual rate and the rate entered by its traders—which could amount to tens of thousands of dollars from a single FX transaction.[2]

66. To illustrate the breach of fiduciary duty and failure to disclose, assume again the example set forth above—trades on a given day that ranged from $1.25 to $1.35 (the "range of the day") to purchase €1.00, with a day's mid-rate of $1.30. On any, and all, non-negotiated euro-for-dollar trades on behalf of its custodian clients, State Street would have paid a rate between $1.25 and $1.35, but reported to its clients that it paid at least $1.35, and sometimes more than that. State Street also kept the difference.

67. This conclusion is supported by the analysis from non-ERISA custodial client Arkansas Teachers of ten years of FX transactions executed by State Street on behalf of and reported to Arkansas Teachers. The Teachers reviewed almost 11,000 foreign currency trades between 2000 and 2010. About 4,216, or 39%, were non-negotiated trades.

68. The Arkansas Teachers compared its FX trades to other FX trades for the same currency pairs in a comprehensive database of more than 2 million trades, which allowed it to estimate the trading cost of the Teachers' non-negotiated FX trades. The trading cost is the difference between the day's mid-rate and the rate that State Street charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers for non-negotiated FX trades.

69. State Street did not report the actual time of execution of any FX trade, so using the day's mid-rate was the best method to see whether State Street charged (or credited) the actual market rate at the time of execution, as State Street had promised to do.

70. The Arkansas Teachers determined that State Street overcharged for FX trading. State Street charged fictitious FX rates by adding (on purchases) or subtracting (on sales) "basis

[2] For example, the Wall Street Journal examined one trade of 8.1 million euros for dollars made by Bank of New York Mellon on behalf of a large pension fund. There the trader reported to the pension fund that the trade was $1.3610. On that day, however, euro/dollar trades occurred between $1.3704 and $1.3604. Had the trade settled at the higher end of the range of the day, which was $1.3704, the pension fund would have gotten an extra $76,012. The Wall Street Journal analyzed over 9,400 trades processed over a decade and found that 58% of the currency trades were within the 10% of the day's range least favorable to the client. Carrick Mollenkamp & Tom McGinty, Inside a Battle Over Forex, Wall St. J., May 23, 2011.

points" or "pips" from the actual FX rate. (A basis point is 1/100th of a percentage point. For example, the smallest move the euro/dollar currency pair generally makes is 1/100th of a penny, or one basis point.) State Street would add or subtract as much as it could get away with, by selecting a rate close to either the high or low extreme of the range of the day. During periods of increased market volatility, when currency prices fluctuated more and the currency trading ranges of the day were wider, allowed State Street to skim more off the top of each non-negotiated FX trade.

71. From January 3, 2000, through December 31, 2010, the FX rates that State Street reported and charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers on non-negotiated FX trades were, on average, 17.8 basis points above or below the day's mid-rate. In other words, every foreign exchange transaction cost the Arkansas Teachers 17.8 basis points higher than the average FX rate (or the day's mid-rate).

72. If State Street actually paid $1.31551 to purchase €1.00, it charged the Teachers $1.31729, or 17.8 basis points extra. For a purchase of €10 million, the undisclosed profit to State Street on that single trade—and the concomitant unknown loss to the Teachers—was $17,800. During the years the Arkansas Teachers examined, State Street executed over $1.2 billion in standing order FX trades, meaning that State Street kept about $2 million dollars of the Arkansas Teachers' money.

73. State Street routinely reported and charged (or credited) fictitious prices for its FX trades. For instance, 53% of the standing-order (non-negotiated) trades analyzed by the Arkansas Teachers actually fell entirely outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, see supra at ¶44. These trades alone, over $200 million worth, actually added trading costs of 64.4 basis points over the day's mid-rate—an enormous hidden and unauthorized mark-up. For example, on a purchase of €10 million, an undisclosed fee of 64.4 basis points means a $64,400 profit to State Street.

74. Rates consistently above (or below) the daily mid-rate alone demonstrate that Global Markets was charging a hidden mark-up that diverted assets of its clients and the Plans to State Street, thereby breaching its fiduciary duties.. These actions also violated the terms of the custodial contracts and the representations in the Investment Manager Guides. When more than half of non-negotiated trades fall outside the forward-adjusted range of the day, it is plausible that those reported FX rates were not actual, market-based FX rates, but were instead fictitious and designed solely to gouge State Street's clients and, in turn, their beneficiaries.

75. There is no rational, honest basis for a professional FX market participant like Global Markets to charge a rate outside the forward-adjusted range of the day without disclosing it. The basis for this practice was rather, self-interested profit for State Street, to the significant detriment of its clients. State Street Corporation's revenue from FX trading services grew dramatically during the Class Period, due in significant part to its manipulation of the FX rates charged to clients for non-negotiated FX trades.

State Street Corporation's FX Trading Revenue 2004-2008

Year-End	FX Revenue	% increase from prior year
2004	$420 million	N/A
2005	$468 million	11%
2006	$661 million	41%
2007	$802 million	21%
2008	$1.08 billion	34%

76. State Street Corporation publicly acknowledged how market conditions provided profit-making opportunities for its FX business when it stated the following during an earnings call[3] held on October 16, 2007:

> [W]hile market conditions in the third quarter presented challenges ... it also created more opportunities in foreign exchange and in securities finance than we usually expect in the third quarter.... Revenue from foreign exchange increased 98% from the year ago quarter, and 29% from the second quarter.

77. Tellingly, from 2000 to 2010, the FX rates that State Street reported and charged (or credited) to the Arkansas Teachers on more than 6,500 negotiated FX trades added, on average, only 3.6 basis points to the day's mid-rate. In other words, State Street padded its profits, at Plaintiffs' expense, by about 14 basis points per trade for non-negotiated trades.

[3] Earnings calls are teleconferences in which public companies discusses the financial results of a reporting period.

4. State Street's Deceptive Acts and Practices Could Not Reasonably Be Detected

78. Sophisticated custodial clients such as the Arkansas Teachers were not able to discover the manner in which State Street deceptively marked-up and marked-down FX transactions during the Class Period. The periodic reports State Street sent to clients showed only the rate that State Street charged for its FX trades. The reports did not include the range of the day, the daily mid-rate, or any indication of the time of the day that the trade was executed (known as "timestamps"). Accordingly, clients could not reasonably determine, or even suspect, that State Street was secretly charging more than it actually paid for FX or was paying clients less than it actually received for FX.

79. Custodial clients also reasonably presumed that State Street's reports accurately represented the true cost of the FX trades. Pursuant to the custodial contracts, State Street made monthly reports of monies received or paid on behalf of the client. Accordingly, State Street had an affirmative obligation to report accurately the amount it was paying or receiving for FX trades.

80. Furthermore, based on the Investment Manager Guides' assurance that FX rates would be "priced based on the market rates at the time the trade is executed," no custodial client had any reason to suspect that they were being charged (or credited) anything other the rate that State Street itself had paid or received on those standing-instruction FX transactions.

81. Because sophisticated custodial clients such as Arkansas Teachers could not uncover State Street's deceptive FX trading practices—even when they had directly negotiated FX trades as a reference—less sophisticated clients had no chance at all.

C. Events After October 2009 Begin to Shed Light on State Street's Deceptive FX Trading Practices

82. On October 20, 2009, the Attorney General of California intervened in a whistleblower lawsuit that was filed in California state court. The suit alleged State Street misappropriated more than $56 million from California's two largest pension plans using the same unfair and deceptive FX practices alleged here. People of the State of Cal. ex rel. Brown v. State St. Corp., No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS (Cal. Super. Ct. Sacramento Cnty. Oct. 20, 2009).

83. The California Attorney General alleged that State Street reported inflated FX rates when buying foreign securities, reported deflated FX rates when selling foreign securities, and pocketed the difference. The Attorney General further alleged that State Street hid its wrongful conduct by entering incorrect FX rates into State Street's electronic FX trading systems and providing false records to clients.

84. The California Attorney General has represented that its allegations of undisclosed "mark-ups" are supported in part by the sworn testimony of a former State Street Bank employee, William Strazzullo, who worked on the same trading floor as the State Street Bank and Global Markets FX traders. He overheard how State Street Bank or Global Markets FX traders were marking up FX trade prices. This trader described the practices of State Street Bank's FX traders as a "totally unethical thing to do" and said that the FX traders' practices were not within the "industry standard." Declaration of Kenny V. Nguyen in Support of Plaintiff's Memorandum and Points and Authorities in Response to Defendants' Motion for Protective Order, Exhibit U at 4 (Plaintiffs' Oct. 6, 2011 letter to Defendants), People of Cal., v. State St. Corp., No. 08-8457 (Cal. Super. Ct. Sacramento Cnty. Jan. 24, 2012).

85. After the California Attorney General filed suit, State Street dramatically changed its FX trading policies and disclosures and so informed its clients. Under these new policies, State Street admitted for the first time that it had systematically imposed additional charges for FX trading. These policy differences are made clear by comparing State Street's Investment Manager Guides published in 2006 and 2009.

86. The 2006 Investment Manager Guide said little about FX transactions. What it did say would have misled clients into thinking that State Street was protecting, rather than pocketing, clients' assets. The 2006 Guide assures clients that State Street has taken steps "to ensure compliance with certain ERISA requirements" by "effect[ing] foreign exchange transactions for its ERISA trust and custody clients under a special 'FX procedure.'" September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37.

87. In contrast, in the 2009 Investment Manager Guide, State Street dramatically increased its disclosures, and admitted that it was adding undisclosed charges to every foreign exchange transaction. In contrast to earlier disclosures, the 2009 Investment Manager Guide clearly states that foreign exchange transactions are not included in custodial services: "all foreign exchange services . . . are separate and independent of any services provided to custody clients." November 20, 2009, Investment Manager Guide at 36. In divulging this practice for the first time, State Street told customers that the FX charges would be "adjusted from time to time" but posted each business day on a website. Id. 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 37.

88. These new revelations stood in sharp contrast to State Street's previous communications. The 2006 Investment Manager Guide stated that standing-order (non-negotiated) foreign exchange transactions were "provided as part of each account opening" for ERISA clients. September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37. Rather than explaining the charges it was imposing, in 2006 State Street hid that information and posted only the "buy rate and sell rate for each currency." September 26, 2006 Investment Manager Guide at 37. Indeed, the 2006 Guide assured clients that foreign exchange transactions would be done at these posted rates "or rates more favorable if market conditions warrant." Id.

89. Contrary to its 2006 promise to improve on posted rates, State Street's 2009 Investment Manager Guide stated that the "pricing of any transaction . . . is not determined by reference to any actual cost." November 20, 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 35. That is, in 2009 State Street admitted that the prices it had disclosed to custodial clients and others were not market prices, or prices State Street paid, but "prices" that increased its profits by padding fees on FX transactions.

90. Also in 2009, State Street Bank disclosed that a non-negotiated FX request "is unlikely, in most circumstances, to be completed at the same or as favorable an execution rate as it would be" if the trade were negotiated directly. 2009 Investment Manager Guide at 38. This simple disclosure, not made in previous Investment Manager Guides, finally discloses what State Street Bank had been hiding for years: FX trades contained hidden fees that disadvantaged Plaintiffs and the Proposed Class at State Street's benefit.

91. In a similar message sent to custodial clients such as the Arkansas Teachers, State Street admitted that "[s]ince December 2009, State Street has provided to all of its custody clients and their investment managers via our dedicated client portal, my.statestreet.com, comprehensive disclosure of the pricing and execution methodology (including the maximum mark-up or mark-down that may be applied) for each of its Indirect [non-negotiated] FX Services." (Emphasis added.) State Street added that "on the day after a trade is executed, State Street provides for each currency pair the reference interbank rates and the times at which they are obtained, the actual rates, the daily high/low range at the time of pricing (where applicable) and the actual mark-up or markdown that was applied."

92. State Street thus altered its practices only after its deceptive acts and practices were publicly revealed. State Street's late disclosure that it charged mark-ups and mark-downs on non-negotiated FX trades contradicts its previous repeated assurances in contracts and the Investment Manager Guides that FX rates would be based on market rates at the time the trade is executed.

93. According to a study conducted by an independent FX analyst, after State Street altered its FX policies, the cost of non-negotiated FX trades dropped by a remarkable 63%. The study analyzed 498,940 FX spot and forward trades (196,280 non-negotiated trades and 302,660 negotiated trades) executed during 2000-2010, and found that investors who had their custodial banks, including State Street, execute FX trades on a standing-instruction or non-negotiated basis during 2010 saw an overall 63% drop in trading costs from their average trading costs for the years 2000-2009.

94. Correspondingly, State Street's FX trading revenue decreased 56% from the fourth quarter of 2008 ($330 million) to the fourth quarter of 2009 ($144 million).

95. While State Street attributed this revenue decrease to lower "customer volumes" and a decrease in "currency volatility," State Street Corporation's 2009 Form 10-K filing stated that customer volumes declined by only 16% from 2008 to 2009, and currency volatility decreased by only 4%. State Street Corp. Annual Report (Form 10-K) (Feb. 22, 2012) ("2009 Form 10-K") at 41. A substantial portion of the 56% decline was the direct result of the California Attorney General's intervention, which forced State Street to stop its profitable self-dealing.

96. In fact, State Street Corporation conceded in its 2009 Form 10-K filing that disclosing its FX transaction profits on non-negotiated trades for its custodial clients would likely continue to affect its revenues and profits from these transactions:

> In light of the action commenced by the California Attorney General, we are providing customers with greater transparency into the pricing of this product and other alternatives offered by us for addressing their foreign exchange requirements. Although we believe such disclosures will address customer interests for increased transparency, over time such action may result in pressure on our pricing of this product or result in clients electing other foreign exchange execution options, which would have an adverse impact on the revenue from, and profitability of, this product for us.

2009 Form 10-K at 12-13.

97. The State Street whistleblower—whose allegations formed the basis of the California Attorney General lawsuit—alleged that State Street had generated $400 million in improperly obtained FX trading revenue annually, constituting one-third of Defendant's trading revenue.

98. Without discovery of State Street's internal documents it is impossible to determine how much State Street overcharged the Plans and other members of the Proposed Class. However, in Hill v. State Street Corp., No. 09-12146, 2011 WL 3420439 at *32 n.25 (D. Mass. Aug. 3, 2011), Judge Gertner found that participants in State Street's own ERISA defined contribution plan offered a "logical rationale for calculating that about 30% of State Street's reported FX revenue in the years before October 2009" was attributable to the improper self-dealing on non-negotiated trades, based on the 56% FX revenue decline in the quarter immediately following the Attorney General's suit. Assuming that 30% of State Street's revenue for FX trading during the relevant period was attributable to self-dealing, State Street's clients, including Plaintiffs' Plans, and the Plans of the Proposed Class, have overpaid State Street for its services by hundreds of millions of dollars.

D. Facts Bearing on Fiduciary Breach for State Street's ERISA Clients

99. ERISA-covered defined contribution plans like the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan invested in foreign securities (and hence foreign currency) through their State Street Bank-sponsored commingled funds. The commingled funds received principal, dividends, and interest that were paid in foreign currencies, or participated in other investments that required the exchange of foreign currency into and from US Dollars. The Andover Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain State Street-sponsored commingled International Equity Funds, including the International Growth Opportunities Securities Lending Class A Fund, and the SSgA Daily International Alpha Select Fund. Likewise, the Boeing Plan offered participants the option to invest in certain State Street-sponsored commingled International Equity Funds, including the International Index Fund held by Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland.

100. These International Equity Funds invest in a wide variety of international equity securities issued throughout the world. To purchase or sell the foreign securities in these funds, and then repatriate the funds to clients, FX transactions were required. As investment manager for the commingled funds, SSgA negotiated or contracted with its affiliate, Global Markets, for the FX transactions. State Street Bank, in its various roles as the trustee, investment manager, and custodian for the commingled funds, was a fiduciary with discretion and control over the funds' FX transactions ordered by SSgA and undertaken by Global Markets.

101. As investment manager for the commingled funds, SSgA had discretion as to the type and nature of instructions it gave Global Markets when undertaking FX trades. Upon information and belief, rather than negotiating each FX trade for the funds, SSgA placed non-negotiated trade orders with Global Markets. Provision of standing instructions by SSgA was insufficient from a fiduciary duty standpoint because in so doing, State Street failed to appropriately limit the designated price range and time period for the requested FX transactions. This fiduciary breach was compounded by SSgA's apparent failure to monitor, detect, and rectify Global Markets' mark-ups and mark-downs of the trades for its ERISA clients. As a result, State Street Bank engaged in a multi-year, self-dealing FX trade scheme—that is, it allowed SSgA and Global Markets to breach their fiduciary duties and act against Plaintiffs' interests in FX transactions year after year, and knew that SSgA and Global Markets would in fact act against Plaintiffs' interests.

102. SSgA, as the internal investment manager, would initiate FX transactions required for the investment management of the commingled funds through the MOMS system. See supra at ¶65. To do so, SSgA would submit a request to the Securities Processing Unit of State Street through MOMS, which would then pass the order on to the Global Markets FX trading desk. Placing non-negotiated trades allowed Global Markets to mark-up or mark-down rates and charge rates that were most favorable to itself, rather than in the best interest of the Plans. SSgA and Global Markets thereby both exercised discretion over Plan assets.

103. Because Plan fiduciaries whose Plans invested in the commingled funds entrusted all aspects of the investment management to State Street, including the FX transactions required for international purchases and sales, State Street had control over all aspects of the FX transactions. Neither the time stamp nor the rate of the actual FX transaction was disclosed to the Plans, their fiduciaries, or participants, by SSgA.

104. Over time, and with SSgA requesting and Global Markets executing thousands of FX transactions annually as part of the management of the Funds, Global Market's discretionary pilfering of Plan assets added up to large losses to participants and beneficiaries. State Street thus took advantage of its already-profitable relationship as trustee, investment manager, and custodian for the funds (and Plans) to rake in additional unauthorized profits.

105. Defendant State Street Bank, through its investment management division, SSgA, and its trading arm, Global Markets, provided FX trading services similar to those provided to the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan to other Plans in the class, in its roles as trustee, custodian, and investment manager. With no direction from the Plans, State Street commingled assets of the Plans, controlled where the Plans' assets were deposited and how and when they were invested and disbursed, and controlled all aspects of the FX transactions for the Plans, including Global Market's unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for non-negotiated trades on behalf of the funds, which amounted to State Street's self-dealing and taking of Plan assets for its own use and benefit.

106. State Street Bank also served as an ERISA fiduciary to defined benefit plans in the putative class. On information and belief, State Street provided custodial services and commingled fund investment options to the defined benefit plans and utilized non-negotiated FX transactions in a like manner to the transactions executed on behalf of its public fund clients and the defined contribution commingled fund clients. See supra at ¶¶50-81.

E. Defendant's Fiduciary Status under ERISA

1. The Nature of Fiduciary Status

107. There are two types of fiduciaries under ERISA: "named fiduciaries" and "de facto fiduciaries."

108. Named Fiduciaries. Every ERISA plan must have one or more "named fiduciaries." ERISA § 402(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(1). The "administrator" in the plan instrument is automatically a named fiduciary, and in the absence of such a designation, the sponsor is the administrator. ERISA § 3(16)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16)(A).

109. Investment managers are also ERISA fiduciaries. Under ERISA:

> (38) The term "investment manager" means any fiduciary (other than a trustee or named fiduciary, as defined in section 1102 (a)(2) of this title)—
>
> (A) who has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of any asset of a plan;
>
> (B) who
>
> (i) is registered as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80b–1 et seq.];
>
> (ii) is not registered as an investment adviser under such Act by reason of paragraph (1) of section 203A(a) of such Act [15 U.S.C. 80b–3a (a)], is > registered as an investment adviser under the laws of the State (referred to in such paragraph (1)) in which it maintains its principal office and place of business, and, at the time the fiduciary last filed the registration form most recently filed by the fiduciary with such State in order to maintain the fiduciary's registration under the laws of such State, also filed a copy of such form with the Secretary;

>
> (iii) is a bank, as defined in that Act; or
>
> (iv) is an insurance company qualified to perform services described in subparagraph (A) under the laws of more than one State; and
>
> (C) has acknowledged in writing that he is a fiduciary with respect to the plan.

ERISA § 3(38), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(38).

110. De Facto* Fiduciaries. ERISA treats as fiduciaries not only persons explicitly named as fiduciaries under section 402(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. section 1102(a)(1), but also any other persons who in fact perform fiduciary functions. Thus a person is a fiduciary to the extent

> (i) he exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets,
>
> (ii) he renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or
>
> (iii) he has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan.

ERISA § 3(21)(A), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A).

2. Defendant State Street's Fiduciary Status

111. In the relevant Amended and Restated Declaration of Trust, State Street acknowledged its fiduciary status as Trustee with exclusive management and control of the commingled funds for all the ERISA-covered plans that offered the International Equity Funds as an investment option for participants' retirement savings.

112. As a trustee for the commingled funds with exclusive management and control State Street Bank authorized its investment management division to manage the commingled funds, and authorized Global Markets to convert any monies needed for the funds' operation into the required currency through FX transactions of Plan assets. State Street Bank also served as a trustee and investment manager to the Plans pursuant to separate contracts. At all times, State Street Bank had the duty to prudently and loyally manage Plan assets, discretion to select appropriate service providers and custodians, and the duty to monitor its various divisions to ensure that these transactions were within the bounds of its fiduciary responsibilities and the limitations of ERISA.

113. State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, served as the Investment Manager for the International Equity Funds in Plaintiffs' Plans and, upon information and belief, numerous other plans. In this capacity, SSgA was responsible for prudently and loyally managing Plan assets, and authorizing, reviewing and controlling the conduct of any other State Street division or representative engaged in activities affecting the value or performance of the Funds for which State Street served as Investment Manager.

114. Under ERISA, investments in commingled Funds are subject to a "look-through" rule, pursuant to which, the "plan assets" of an ERISA-covered plan include both its undivided "equity interest [in the entity] and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity …". 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(a)(2); see also ERISA § 3(42), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(42) (authority of Secretary of Labor to define term "plan assets" by regulation). Specifically, when a Plan acquires or holds an interest in a commingled Fund, "its assets include its investment and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity." 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-101(h)(1).

115. "[A]ny person who exercises authority or control respecting the management or disposition of such underlying assets, and any person who provides investment advice with respect to such assets for a fee (direct or indirect) is a fiduciary of the investing plan." Id. § 2510.3-101(a).

116. As investment manager for the commingled funds, State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, exercised authority and control with respect to the management or disposition of the Plans' assets. Accordingly, State Street Bank was a fiduciary of each and every ERISA Plan which invested in the International Equity Funds, including the Plaintiffs' Plans and the Plans of the Proposed Class members with respect to the underlying assets of each and every State Street Bank-sponsored commingled fund.

117. State Street Bank, through its Global Markets division, also functioned as a fiduciary to the Plans and the Class by acting as trustee and custodian for the commingled funds, and by exercising authority and control over the Plans' assets when undertaking FX transactions for the International Equity Funds as to the price and timing for these transactions involving Plan assets.

118. Global Market's conversion of U.S. dollars to foreign currency, and foreign currency to U.S. dollars constituted the exercise of authority or control respecting the management or disposition of the underlying assets of the commingled investment funds and, therefore, of assets of the ERISA Plans, within the meaning of ERISA section 3(21)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A)(1), and 29 C.F.R. section 2510.3-101(a). This is particularly so because Global Markets exercised discretion in choosing when and how to execute the trades, and whether to mark up or mark down the FX transactions over the market rates that Global Markets had received for the transactions, and then profited and engaged in self-dealing by pocketing the difference for itself. Accordingly, Global Markets was also a functional fiduciary of the ERISA Plans.

F. The Relevant Law

1. Fiduciary Duties under ERISA

119. ERISA sections 404(a)(1)(A) and (B), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1104(a)(1)(A) & (B), provide, in pertinent part, that a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries, for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries, and with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims.

120. These fiduciary duties under ERISA sections 404(a)(1)(A) and (B) are referred to as the duties of loyalty, exclusive purpose and prudence and are the "highest known to the law." Donovan v. Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 272 n.8 (2d Cir. 1982). They entail, among other things:

> (a) The duty to conduct an independent and thorough investigation into, and to continually monitor, the merits of all the investment alternatives for a plan;
>
> (b) The duty to avoid conflicts of interest and to resolve them promptly when they occur. A fiduciary must always administer a plan with an "eye single" to the interests of the participants and beneficiaries, regardless of the interests of the fiduciaries themselves or the plan sponsor; and
>
> (c) The duty to disclose and inform, which encompasses: (1) a negative duty not to misinform; (2) an affirmative duty to inform when the fiduciary knows or should know that silence might be harmful; and (3) a duty to convey complete and accurate information material to the circumstances of participants and beneficiaries.

2. Prohibited Transactions under ERISA

121. In addition to ERISA's extensive fiduciary duty provisions, the statute categorically bars certain transactions deemed likely to injure a plan. See Harris Trust & Sav. Bank v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 530 U.S. 238, 241 (2000).

a. ERISA § 406(b) is an absolute bar against self-dealing

122. ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b), prohibits certain transactions between fiduciaries and a plan. The statute sets forth an "absolute bar against self dealing" by a fiduciary. See Brock v. Hendershott, 840 F.2d 339, 341 (6th Cir. 1988). ERISA section 406(b) provides the following:

> A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not—
>
> (1) deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,
>
> (2) in his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, or

> (3) receive any consideration for his own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan.

b. ERISA § 406(a) prohibits party-in-interest transactions

123. ERISA section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. §1106(a), prohibits transactions between a plan and a party in interest. A "party in interest" is defined broadly with respect to an ERISA-qualified plan and includes, among others, any fiduciary, counsel, or employee of such employee benefit plan, as well as any person providing services to such plan. ERISA § 3(14), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14). Section 406(a)(1) provides the following:

> (1) A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction, if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect—
>
> (A) sale or exchange, or leasing, of any property between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (B) lending of money or other extension of credit between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (C) furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between the plan and a party in interest;
>
> (D) transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of a party in interest, of any assets of the plan; or
>
> (E) acquisition, on behalf of the plan, of any employer security or employer real property in violation of section 1107 (a) of this title.

c. Foreign currency exchange exemptions

124. Section 406(a)'s prohibitions against transactions with a party in interest are subject to numerous exemptions to allow the normal course of business with regard to investment management. See ERISA § 408, 29 U.S.C. § 1108. Foreign currency exchanges between an employee benefit plan and a bank or a broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is a party in interest with respect to such plans are exempted from the prohibition provided they meet certain conditions.

> (18) Foreign exchange transactions.— Any foreign exchange transactions, between a bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either), and a plan (as > defined in section 1002(3) of this title) with respect to which such bank or broker-dealer (or affiliate) is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary, or other party in interest, if—

>
> (A) the transaction is in connection with the purchase, holding, or sale of securities or other investment assets (other than a foreign exchange transaction unrelated to any other investment in securities or other investment assets),
>
> (B) at the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions between unrelated parties, or the terms afforded by the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions involving unrelated parties,
>
> (C) the exchange rate used by such bank or broker-dealer (or affiliate) for a particular foreign exchange transaction does not deviate by more than 3 percent from the interbank bid and asked rates for transactions of comparable size and maturity at the time of the transaction as displayed on an independent service that reports rates of exchange in the foreign currency market for such currency, and
>
> (D) the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) does not have investment discretion, or provide investment advice, with respect to the transaction.

ERISA § 408(b)(18), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18) (emphasis added).

125. This section existed first as a Department of Labor ("DOL") regulation, Prohibited Transaction Exemption 94-20, 59 Fed. Reg. 8022-02 (Feb. 17, 1994), and was later codified as 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18) (effective Aug.17, 2006). Prohibited Transaction Exemption (PTE) 94-20 required that foreign exchange transactions be "directed" by a plan fiduciary independent of the bank, broker dealer, or affiliate. Four years later the DOL promulgated another regulation, to allow non-negotiated trades within carefully circumscribed conditions. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 98-54, 63 Fed. Reg. 63503-63510 (Nov. 13, 1998). PTE 98-54 exempts FX transactions "performed under a written authorization [i.e., standing instructions]…by a fiduciary of the plan…independent of the bank or broker-dealer engaging in the covered transaction." Section III(e), 63 Fed. Reg. at 63508.

126. Although PTE 94-20 and PTE 98-54 carve out a limited space for execution of FX transactions within the ERISA regulatory scheme, these exemptions do not relieve State Street of fiduciary responsibility. As the DOL explained,

The Department wishes to point out that ERISA's general standards of fiduciary conduct would apply to the standing instruction arrangements permitted by this class exemption. Section 404 of ERISA requires, among other things, that a fiduciary discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the plan's participants and beneficiaries and in a prudent fashion.63 Fed. Reg. at 63505.

3. Civil Remedies under ERISA

127. ERISA section 502(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2), provides, in pertinent part, that a civil action may be brought by a participant or a fiduciary for relief under ERISA section 409, 29 U.S.C. § 1109.

128. ERISA section 409(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), "Liability for Breach of Fiduciary Duty," provides, in pertinent part:

> any person who is a fiduciary with respect to a plan who breaches any of the responsibilities, obligations, or duties imposed upon fiduciaries by this subchapter shall be personally liable to make good to such plan any losses to the plan resulting from each such breach, and to restore to such plan any profits of such fiduciary which have been made through use of assets of the plan by the fiduciary, and shall be subject to such other equitable or remedial relief as the court may deem appropriate, including removal of such fiduciary.

129. ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3), authorizes individual participants and fiduciaries to seek equitable relief from Defendant, including, without limitation, injunctive relief and, as available under applicable law, constructive trust, restitution, and other monetary relief.

130. Plaintiffs therefore bring this action under the authority of ERISA section 502(a)(2) for relief under ERISA section 409(a) to recover losses sustained by the Plans arising out of the breaches of fiduciary duties by the Defendant for violations under ERISA sections 404(a)(1) and 406, as well as pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3) for equitable relief from Defendant as fiduciary , including, without limitation, injunctive relief and, as available under applicable law, constructive trust, restitution, and other monetary relief.

V. CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

131. Class Definition. Plaintiffs bring this action as a class action pursuant to Rules 23(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and, in the alternative, (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of the Andover Plan and the Boeing Plan, and the following class of persons similarly situated (the "Class"):

> All qualified ERISA plans, and the participants, beneficiaries, and named fiduciaries of those plans, that invested directly or indirectly in the State Street Bank commingled Funds, which includes the "International Equity Funds" identified in this complaint; or for which State Street Bank provided investment management or custodial services, that utilized State Street Global Market's indirect FX trading services, and suffered damages as a result of the deceptive acts and practices and other misconduct alleged herein, at any time between January 2, 1998 and December 31, 2009. Excluded from the Class are Defendant, any entity in which Defendant has a controlling interest, and the officer, directors, affiliates, legal representatives, heirs, successors, subsidiaries, and/or assigns of any such entity.

132. Plaintiffs reserve the right to modify the class definition before moving for class certification, including a reservation of right to seek to certify subclasses of State Street's clients, or extension of the class period, if information gained during this litigation, through discovery or otherwise, reveals that modifying the class definition or seeking subclasses would be appropriate.

133. Numerosity. The members of the Class are so numerous that joinder of all members individually, in one action or otherwise, is impracticable. While the exact number of Class members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, and can only be ascertained through appropriate discovery, Plaintiffs believe that numerous ERISA-covered benefit plans throughout the country offered the commingled International Equity Funds and that these plans collectively have tens of thousands of participants and beneficiaries.

134. Commonality. The claims of Plaintiffs and the members of the Class have a common origin and share a common basis. The claims of all Class members originate from the same misconduct, breaches of duties, and violations of ERISA, perpetrated by Defendant.

Proceeding as a class is particularly appropriate here the claim goes to the same type of currency trade instruction, indirect trades, conducted by Global Markets on behalf of the funds, and also on behalf of custodial clients, and therefore, State Street's deceptive acts and practices and misconduct regarding its FX trading practices affected all Plans were uniform and widespread.

135. There are questions of law and fact common to the Class, including:

(a) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by selecting its internal division to conduct the FX transactions for the Funds;

(b) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by failing to prudently and loyally manage Plan assets when it permitted its affiliate to conduct FX transactions;

(c) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by marking-up or marking-down the FX transactions for the Funds at issue and passing a lower NAV to the Plaintiffs' Plans or the funds;;

(d) Whether Defendant pocketed the difference between the actual, market-based FX rates it received when entering into the FX transactions, and the FX rates that were reported and charged to the commingled funds, and the Plans;

(e) Whether Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA by pocketing the difference between the actual, market-based FX rates and the mark-ups and mark-downs, and maximized profit to State Street at the expense of Plan assets;

(f) Whether Defendant's self-interested FX transactions constituted prohibited transactions under ERISA; and,

(g) Whether Defendant's acts proximately caused losses to the Plans, and if so, the appropriate relief to which Plaintiffs, on behalf of the Plans and the Class are entitled.

136. Typicality. Plaintiffs are willing and prepared to serve the Court and the proposed Class in a representative capacity with all of the obligations and duties material thereto. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Class and have no interests adverse to or which directly and irrevocably conflict with the interests of other members of the class.

137. Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the claims of the members of the Class. Plaintiffs are members of the Class described herein.

138. The questions of law and fact common to the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members of the Class.

139. A class action is superior to other available methods for the adjudication of this controversy. Individual litigation by all Class members would increase the delay and expense to the parties and the Court given the complex legal and factual issues of the case, and judicial determination of the common legal and factual issues essential to this case would be more fair, efficient and economical as a class action maintained in this forum than in piecemeal individual determinations.

140. Adequacy. The interests of the Plaintiffs are co-extensive with, and not antagonistic to, those of the absent Class members. Plaintiffs will undertake to represent and protect the interests of absent Class members. The undersigned counsel for Plaintiffs and the Class are experienced in class action, complex, and ERISA litigation, will adequately prosecute this action, and will assert and protect the rights of and otherwise represent Plaintiffs and absent Class members.

141. Plaintiffs know of no difficulty that will be encountered in the management of this litigation that would preclude its maintenance as a class action. Compared to individual actions by each Class member, the class action device presents far fewer management difficulties, and provides the benefits of single adjudication, economy of scale, and comprehensive supervision by a single court.

142. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) & (B) Requirements. Class action status in this ERISA action is warranted under Federal Rule 23(b)(1)(A) because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of establishing incompatible standards of conduct for Defendant. Class action status also is warranted under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) because prosecution of separate actions by the members of the Class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the Class which would, as a practical matter, be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the actions, or substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

143. Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements. Certification under 23(b)(2) is warranted because Defendant have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive, declaratory, or other appropriate equitable relief with respect to the Class as a whole.

144. Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements. In the alternative, certification under Rule 23(b)(3) is appropriate because questions of law or fact common to members of the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members and a class action is superior to the other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy.

VI. CAUSES OF ACTION

COUNT I

ERISA Prohibited Transactions

(Violations of § 406(b)(1) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b)(1))

145. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

146. Defendant State Street Bank is a fiduciary based on its discretionary control over Plan assets for the purposes of FX transactions.

147. ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b), prohibits transactions between a plan and a fiduciary that amount to self-dealing. Plaintiffs allege that State Street's FX trading practices amounted to self-dealing because State Street Bank, through its Global Markets division, consistently used its discretionary control over Plan assets to select for itself the most favorable FX rate based on the range of the day, regardless of the actual rate at the time the transaction occurred, and pocketed the difference between the two rates, causing its fiduciary clients, the Plaintiffs' Plans, and other members of the Proposed Class to suffer losses.

148. State Street's practice of FX transaction rate manipulation was nothing less than a fiduciary dealing with the assets of a plan for its own account. Fiduciary self-dealing is categorically prohibited by ERISA section 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b).

149. Pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(2) and (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) & (3), State Street Bank is liable to restore the losses to the Plans and provide other appropriate equitable relief.

COUNT II

Breach of Duties of Prudence and Loyalty

(Violation of § 404 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104)

150. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

151. Defendant State Street Bank, through its SSgA division, is an "investment manager" within the meaning of ERISA section 3(38), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(38), because it (i) has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of plan assets placed in its custody; (ii) is a bank within the meaning of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940; and (iii) has acknowledged in writing that it is a fiduciary with respect to the Plans.

152. As a fiduciary under ERISA, State Street Bank is bound by the duties of prudence and loyalty laid out in ERISA section 404(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1). These duties mean that as an investment manager for the Plaintiffs' Plans, State Street Bank is bound to act in the customer's interest when transacting business for the account, and thus bound, for example, to disclose fully to the Plans all the details of the relevant FX trading transactions it was undertaking, or negotiating on behalf of the funds, including the mark-ups or mark-downs that the funds were receiving for the FX trades.

153. As a fiduciary, State Street also had a duty to monitor its internal Global Markets division. Through its Global Markets division, State Street Bank knew that it was charging unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for the non-negotiated trades rather than the actual transaction rates and pocketing the difference.

154. State Street Bank has breached its ERISA fiduciary duties of prudence and loyalty because it knew that its Global Markets division was charging the Plans (or the commingled funds in which the Plans invested) unauthorized mark-ups and mark-downs for FX trading that were unfavorable or unreasonable, above the transactional rates, and/or in excess of what Global Markets had agreed to charge, but did not ensure, by negotiation or otherwise, that Global Market's rates were in the best interest of the Plans.

155. State Street, through its Global Markets division, has breached the duties of prudence and loyalty by charging the Plans (or the commingled Funds in which the Plans invested) unauthorized mark-ups or mark-downs over the actual FX trade rates that were unfavorable or unreasonable, above the market rates, and/or in excess of what it had agreed to charge.

156. These breaches of fiduciary duty involved assets of the Plans on which fees were levied by State Street Bank. .

157. Section 409(a) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), imposes liability on State Street Bank for these breaches and requires State Street Bank to make good to the Plans the losses resulting from its breaches.

158. To enforce the relief available under ERISA section 409(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), Plaintiffs assert this claim against State Street Bank under ERISA section 502(a)(2), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2).

159. Further, pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3), State Street Bank must provide other appropriate equitable relief to redress its breaches of duty and enforce its fiduciary duties.

COUNT III

ERISA Prohibited Transactions

(Violations of § 406(a)(1)(C) & (D) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C) & (D))

160. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each of the allegations set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

161. ERISA section 406(a)(1)(C), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C), provides that a fiduciary shall not cause a plan to engage in a transaction if the fiduciary knows or should know that the transaction constitutes a direct or indirect furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between the plan and a party in interest.

162. ERISA section 406(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(D), provides that a fiduciary shall not cause a plan to engage in a transaction if the fiduciary knows or should know that the transaction constitutes a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of a party in interest, of any assets of the plan.

163. As noted above, State Street Bank is a fiduciary with respect to the Plans.

164. State Street Bank, State Street Global Advisors, and State Street Global Markets are "affiliates" within the meaning of the Prohibited Transaction Exemption and they directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, control, are controlled by, or are under common control with each other.

165. Global Markets, as an affiliate of State Street Bank, is a "party in interest" within the meaning of ERISA section 3(14), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(14), for at least two independently sufficient reasons: it is a functional fiduciary with respect to the Plans, and it is a person providing services to the Plans.

166. By allowing Global Markets to manipulate FX transaction prices to the detriment of the plan and pocket the difference between the actual transaction rate and the rate selected by Global Markets, State Street Bank violated ERISA section 406(a)(1)(C) & (D), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1)(C) & (D). State Street Bank caused the Plans to engage in transactions while knowing that such transactions constituted a direct or indirect transfer of assets of the Plans to a party in interest, Global Markets.

167. While ERISA section 408(b)(18), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(18), provides an exemption from the prohibitions of ERISA section 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), for foreign currency exchanges between an employee benefit plan and a bank or a broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is a party in interest with respect to a plan, the exemption only applies if, at the time the FX transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions, and if the bank or broker-dealer (or any affiliate of either) does not have investment discretion, or provide investment advice, with respect to the transaction. The exemption does not apply here for two independently sufficient reasons: (1) the terms of the FX transactions, by which Global Markets essentially ensured that its clients would always get the worst exchange rate of the day, were indeed less favorable to the Plans than comparable arm's-length transactions, and (2) State Street, SSgA, and Global Markets had investment discretion (and SSgA provided investment advice) with respect to the investment of plan assets when it entered into the transactions. Thus, State Street's FX trades do not fall under the narrow exemption of section 408(b)(18).

168. Pursuant to ERISA section 502(a)(2) & (3), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) & (3), State Street Bank is liable to restore the losses to the Plans and provide other appropriate equitable relief.

VII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray for relief as follows:

1. Declare that the Defendant has violated ERISA's prohibited transactions provisions;

2. Declare that the Defendant breached its fiduciary duties under ERISA;

3. Issue an order compelling a proper accounting of the FX transactions in which the Plans and other members of the Proposed Class have engaged;

4. Issue an order compelling Defendant to restore all losses caused to the Plans (or that will be caused to the Plans after the filing of this Complaint);

5. Issue an order compelling the Defendant to disgorge all fees paid and incurred to Defendant or its affiliates (or that will be paid or incurred by the Plans after the filing of this Complaint), including any profits thereon;

6. Order equitable restitution and other appropriate equitable monetary relief against the Defendant;

7. Award such other equitable, injunctive, or remedial relief as may be appropriate, including the permanent removal of the Defendant from any positions of trust with respect to the Plans and the appointment of independent fiduciaries to serve as FX custodian to the Plans;

8. That this action be certified as a class action and that the Class be designated to receive the amounts restored to the Plans by Defendant and a constructive trust be established for distribution to the extent required by law;

9. Enjoin Defendant collectively, and each affiliate individually, from any further violations of their ERISA fiduciary responsibilities, obligations, and duties;

10. Award Plaintiffs their attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to ERISA section 502(g), 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g) and/or the Common Fund doctrine; and

11. Award such other and further relief as the Court deems equitable and just.

JURY DEMAND

Plaintiffs hereby demand a jury on all issues so triable.

I didn't get the email from Brian. So I don't intend to respond.
Others who receive the email Caroline should respond. I am only seeking the same powers but all of the lead counsel in all other cases I've been in received.

Of course I intend to honor all commitments, contracts, obligations, agreements, understandings buy what ever name or title. But especially those that are in writing like Brian's.

Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

My gut tells me they will press for a fee agreement deal or withhold signature at some point in the process. They may threaten their own fee app. State street may want us all on the dotted line but I wanted to raise it and have you think about it. It may be too late.

Robert

I have signoff from the ERISA counsel on the fee division between the ERISA and Consumer counsel that we discussed this morning. Attached is a draft agreement that reflects the 91%/9% split.

I have received approval from the other ERISA counsel.

Regards,

Lynn

AGREEMENT BETWEEN COUNSEL FOR CONSUMER AND ERISA PLAINTIFFS
REGARDING DIVISION OF ATTORNEYS' FEES

This Agreement Between Counsel For Consumer And ERISA Plaintiffs Regarding Division Of Attorneys' Fees (the "Agreement") is made and entered into by and between: Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton & Naumes, LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP (collectively, "Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs"), on the one hand, and McTigue Law LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, Beins, Axelrod, P.C., Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, and Keller Rohrback L.L.P. (collectively, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs), on the other hand (the "Parties"). This Agreement shall be effective as of _____, 2013.

RECITALS

WHEREAS, Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs have filed the lawsuit captioned Arkansas Teacher Retirement System vs. State Street Corporation, et. al., No. 11-cv-10230 MLW ("ARTRS"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), and a putative class of all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis alleging state law claims against State Street Corporation, State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but no claims under ERISA.

1. WHEREAS, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs have filed two lawsuits captioned Arnold Henriquez, et. al., vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company,, et. al., No. 11-cv-12049 MLW ("Henriquez"), and Andover Companies, et. al., vs. State Street Bank and Trust Company, No. 12-cv-11698 MLW ("Andover"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their clients, Arnold Henriquez (as a participant and beneficiary of the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan), Michael T. Cohn (as a participant and beneficiary of the Citigroup 401(k) Plan), William R. Taylor and Richard A. Sutherland (each as participants and beneficiaries of the Retirement Plan of Johnson & Johnson), Alan Kober as a Trustee of The Andover Companies' Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland, as a participant and beneficiary of The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan), and putative classes of private (ERISA) pension plans for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis, alleging breaches of federal ERISA law against State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others, but none of the other state law claims alleged by ARTRS.

WHEREAS, the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases are all pending before the same judge and are being mediated and litigated together and the Parties believe that it is in the best interests of their respective clients and the putative classes that they are seeking to represent that, where appropriate and consistent with their obligations to advocate for their respective clients, they work cooperatively in the litigation against State Street Corporation and the other defendants, and further, that agreeing to a division of attorneys' fees, as set forth below, is in the best interests of their respective clients.

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises contained herein, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parties agree that any attorneys' fee agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court in connection with the ARTRS, Andover or Henriquez cases, whether the product of settlement or litigated resolution of the cases, shall be divided 91 % to Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs and 9 % to Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs (the "Division of Fees").

2. The Parties agree that the Division of Fees shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise.
3. The Parties agree that they will each remain responsible for representing the interests of their respective clients and that nothing herein limits in any way their obligations to represent and exercise independent judgment on behalf of their respective clients.
4. The Parties agree that the terms of this Agreement may be disclosed to the Court, if any of them believes it appropriate to do so.
5. The Parties represent that they have disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein.
6. This Agreement does not impact or change the Parties' rights and ability to seek the reimbursement of litigation expenses; nor does it contain any agreement on the sharing of expenses.
7. This Agreement is governed by the substantive law of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

RECITALS

WHEREAS, Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs have filed the lawsuit captioned Arkansas Teacher Retirement System vs. State Street Corporation, et. al., No. 11-cv-10230 MLW ("ARTRS"), in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, alleging on behalf of their client, the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), and a putative class of all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on an "indirect," "standing-instruction," or "non-negotiated" basis alleging public and private (ERISA) pension plans federal and state law claims against State Street Corporation, State Street Bank and Trust Company, and others and others, but no claims under ERISA.

1. WHEREAS, Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs have filed two lawsuits captioned Arnold Henriquez, et. al. vs. State Street Bank and Trust, et. al., No. 11-cv-12049 MLW

WHEREAS, the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases are all pending before the same judge and are being mediated and litigated together and the Parties believe that it is in the best interests of their respective clients and the putative classes that they are seeking to represent that, where appropriate and consistent with their obligations to advocate for their respective clients, they work cooperatively in the litigation against State Street Corporation and the other defendants, and further, that agreeing to a division of attorneys' fees, as set forth below, is in the best interests of their respective clients.

~~WHEREAS, State Street Corporation and the other defendants have produced data, on a confidential basis, in the mediation of the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases regarding volume of FX trading by public and ERISA pension plans.~~

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises contained herein, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parties agree that any attorneys' fee agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court in connection with the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases, whether the product of settlement or litigated resolution of the cases, shall be divided __ % to Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs and __ % to Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs (the "Division of Fees").

~~2.~~ The Parties agree that the Division of Fees shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise.

Formatted: Bullets and Numbering

2.

~~3. Notwithstanding Paragraphs 1 and 2 above, the Division of Fees does not apply in the event that there is no recovery in the ARTRS case or if there is no recovery in both the Andover Company and Henriquez cases. [CSK Comment: this is a difficult issue. If ARTRS loses, we win, and the division applies, then ARTRS counsel gets virtually the entire fee. On the other hand, if it went the other way, then we get shut out. On balance, I think we want this provision, but it is definitely not perfect either way.]~~

~~4. The Parties agree that the Division of Fees is consistent with the relative volume of FX trading by ERISA and non-ERISA plans as reflected in the data produced by State Street and the prospects of recovery on the various claims alleged, and is therefore reasonable and appropriate.~~

~~5.~~ The Parties agree that they will each remain responsible for representing the interests of their respective clients and that nothing herein limits in any way their obligations to represent and exercise independent judgment on behalf of their respective clients.

3.

~~6.~~ The Parties agree that the terms of this Agreement may be disclosed to the Court, if any of them believes it appropriate to do so.

4.

~~7.~~ The Parties represent that they have disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein.

5.

~~8.~~ This Agreement does not impact or change the Parties' rights and ability to seek the reimbursement of litigation expenses; nor does it contain any agreement on the sharing of expenses.

WHEREAS, the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases are all pending before the same judge and are being mediated and litigated together and the Parties believe that it is in the best interests of their respective clients and the putative classes that they are seeking to represent that, where appropriate and consistent with their obligations to advocate for their respective clients, they work cooperatively in the litigation against State Street Corporation and the other defendants, and further, that agreeing to a division of attorneys' fees, as set forth below, is in the best interests of their respective clients.

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises contained herein, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parties agree that any attorneys' fee agreed to, awarded and/or approved by the Court in connection with any collective or joint resolution of the ARTRS, Andover and Henriquez cases shall be divided 91 % to Counsel for Consumer Plaintiffs and 9% to Counsel for ERISA Plaintiffs (the "Division of Fees").

2. The Parties agree that the Division of Fees shall apply whether the attorneys' fees agreed, awarded and/or approved by the Court is a single sum for all claims and cases or otherwise.
3. The Parties agree that they will each remain responsible for representing the interests of their respective clients and that nothing herein limits in any way their obligations to represent and exercise independent judgment on behalf of their respective clients.
4. The Parties agree that the terms of this Agreement may be disclosed to the Court, if any of them believes it appropriate to do so.

First month bill. I have not heard a thing from Chiplock on how he is doing....He has not been playing nice in the sand box lately. I emailed him yesterday asking for a call with Belfi to discuss this. No response.

This is the best way to jack up the loadstar though.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corporation
Civil Action No. 11-cv-10230-MLW (D. Mass.)

Dear Counsel:

I am pleased we were able to come to terms and will be working together in this matter. I have outlined below the terms of the agreement we have reached.

Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher") will be represented in the action by Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow") as Lead Counsel, and Thornton & Naumes LLP ("Thornton & Naumes") and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff Cabraser") will serve as additional counsel for Arkansas Teacher in this action.

Arkansas Teacher has made an application to the Court for appointment of its selection of Labaton Sucharow as Interim Lead Counsel. In the event that the Court appoints Labaton Sucharow as interim Lead Counsel and subsequently as Lead Counsel, we agree as follows:

We agree that our firms will act in good faith to divide the work so that each of the firms performs at least 20% of the work and each will receive at least 20% of the fees awarded in this matter. The remaining 40% of the fees awarded shall be allocated in good faith at the conclusion of the case based on each firms' actual time spent on this matter..

There is an "off the top" obligation to referring counsel of 6% of the fees awarded. In addition, we agree to exchange on a quarterly basis our then current lodestar reports showing quarterly and aggregate billings in this matter.

We also agree that any dispute arising under this agreement or in this case may not be litigated in court and that all such disputes or claims shall be resolved, upon election of any party, through binding arbitration conducted pursuant to the applicable rules of the American Arbitration Association in any jurisdiction in which any of the firms reside.

Please sign below indicating your agreement to these terms.

Very truly yours,

Christopher Keller, Esq.

Accepted and agreed by:

Thornton & Naumes LLP

Not to be difficult, but I don't see how that matters. It would seem that the respective lodestars, contributions, etc. are not terribly divergent. And not a skeptical judge, as far as we can tell. A very different situation, in other words, from BNYM (which I know doesn't involve you, Larry, but seems to be coloring this discussion).

Dan, agreement among our three firms it's that after payment of all of the council I was three firms show each receive 20% with the 40% balance to be determined at a later date. If this is the understanding you are referring to but I can't confirm it. Please advise.

I don't know why you left the Thornton firm off this email since they are party to any understanding we have and are therefore he sensual to any memorialization of that understanding. If you more willing to resend your email and include them,we can see if there is any disagreement as to what our understanding is/was.

Dear all,

We've had some additional exchanges about the term sheet and, specifically, para 8(n). I believe the attached draft resolves those issues and that there is consensus that the attached accurately reflects the basic DOL fee deal. If you disagree, please let us know asap.

When someone wants to send this to Paine, or the DOL, I will need a run a different redline for them.

Thanks

David
Thanks for sending this. Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.

Two things:

1. I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down. So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?

What do you think??

Lynn

Subject: SST--Proposed Revision to Term Sheet for DOL Deal

All: The below reflects our proposed revisions to the Term Sheet (in red boldface) to reflect the imminent deal with the DOL on fees and expenses as certain of us discussed this morning (DOL has advised that they want the deal memorialized in the Term Sheet). Please comment. Thanks.

8(n). Plan of Allocation. . . . The amount allocated to the ERISA Plans and Investment Companies and other Settlement Class Members shall be increased or decreased by their proportional share (with respect to the Class Settlement Amount) of any interest, costs (including costs of notice and administration), expenses (including taxes), and fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' Counsel obtained or paid pursuant to permission of the Court. However, notice and administration expenses attributable solely to the claims of Class Members categorized as Group Trusts shall be paid solely out of the ERISA allocation, and the cost of any ERISA Independent Fiduciary shall be borne solely by SSBT and shall not be paid out of the Class Settlement Amount.

12. Plaintiffs' Counsel's Attorneys' Fees and Expenses. Plaintiffs' Counsel's attorneys' fees and expenses, as awarded by the Court, shall be paid from the Class Escrow Account immediately upon award by the Court into an escrow account governed by an escrow agreement between Interim Lead Counsel, SSBT and a bank or other institution agreed upon by SSBT and Interim Lead Counsel (the "Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account"), notwithstanding any appeals of the Settlement or the fee and expense award. Plaintiffs' Counsel shall may apply for their fees and expenses and any service awards for Plaintiffs against the entire Class Settlement Amount, but in no event shall more than Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00) in fees be paid out of the $60 million portion of the Class Settlement Amount allocated to ERISA Plans, as referenced in Paragraph 8(n) above. In the event that the Effective Date does not occur or SSBT promptly provides written notice representing in good faith that the Effective Date has not and cannot occur due to developments with the DOJ Settlement, DOL Settlement, and/or SEC Settlement and explaining the grounds for the notice, Plaintiffs' Counsel severally shall be obliged to pay to SSBT all amounts paid to them from the Interim Lead Counsel Escrow Account within fourteen (14) business days. The prevailing party in any action to collect any amount due under this paragraph shall be entitled to recover interest and all of its costs of collection, including attorneys' fees. Should the fee and expense award be reduced by the Court or on appeal, all such fees and expenses received by Plaintiffs' Counsel in excess of those that are ultimately approved shall be repaid to the Class Escrow Account, along with interest at the Class Escrow Account rate of interest.

Also, I believe that there are other cases and other agreements which are influencing people's desire to either reach agreement now or later.

I don't have a dog in the hunt and don't want to be drawn into it.

I apologize for any mistakes but I am not in a place where I can edit my emails so I'm just dictating them I'm hoping that spell correct doesn't fuck me up too much.&

Thanks for sending this.& Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.
&
Two things:
&
1.& I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word “fees”—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won’t be going up or down.& & So—question—can we get rid of the word “fees” in this paragraph—does it still work?
&
What do you think??

Thank you for the tip Dan. I did say something like that on the call, but preceded it by saying it was a guess and that I would have to ask Mike Lesser for the actual figure at that point which of course is not complete as with the other firms. I appreciate your concern and I guess I can only assure you that it generally our policy to truthful and accurate hour claims.

No problem. It may be tomorrow since I have to go back to archives.

In the meantime, while we're on the subject of credibility, I want to point out that we need to be consistent and credible with our lodestar reporting in State Street. We are gathering final lodestar reports now, but I heard third-hand that Mike recently said on a call (that I wasn't on) that Thornton Law Firm was showing $14 million. That number does not comport with the hours Mike Lesser told me for Thornton as of June 29 (around 12,750), which make more sense given what we know about the work that was done. I am hopeful Mike T. simply misspoke or was guessing when he said $14 million and that we are not going to suddenly see an additional 12,000 hours mysteriously appear on Thornton Law Firm's behalf. I would expect that you would object if LCHB or Labaton tried something like that, and ERISA counsel certainly will (and tie up this process as long as possible) if they suspect anything remotely amiss on that front. Let's not make problems for ourselves that we don't need. Also recognize that your reviewers were all housed outside of your firm and their respective overhead and facilities expenses were paid for by others, which we were happy to do as a courtesy. Thanks.

Garrett,

Thanks for your email and I actually think it's useful so that Mike and Bob can participate in this.

This idea of "protection" in BNYM is where I think we keep talking past each other. The bottom line is that LCHB is the least protected of all in that case. This is the fact that has kept me up at night for 2.5 years while we've continued pouring lodestar into that case (because we had to). We invested the most in order to try to get a class certified there and to sufficiently man 110 depositions, defend counterclaims, etc., but if Judge Kaplan takes a negative view of the value of document review/analysis (our arguments to the contrary notwithstanding), then LCHB will get hit the hardest. You are totally shielded from this because you didn't invest in document review. In other words, LCHB has a real risk of actually losing money in BNYM. You have virtually no risk of that. If Thornton is not treated "fairly" in BNYM by the Court it will be because nobody (least of all LCHB) was treated "fairly." It's not clear to me what it is you expect in that circumstance.

The $10 million in State Street that you mention below also does not make up for LCHB's investment in that case. And we've certainly contributed our share to the result in State Street, having litigated BNYM (thus substantially increasing the value of State Street) and developed the ch. 93A theory (the most readily certifiable claim in State Street, and by far the most valuable).

Dan,

I tried to call you but you are out. I think these things are best discussed rather than emailed so please call my cell when you can 6174134892 as I do not have yours.

However a few points. I do not dismiss your efforts in Mellon but your guaranteed percentage was established years prior to a Mellon result. What I am pointing out is the inequities of our different positions. In Mellon, when we had created that case by developing the fx case all that we got was some work that resulted in $1.5 million in time. Also please elaborate on your statement that "the work was not getting done".

Now contrast that to state street where you had no client and no concept (and Mellon was years from setting) and Mike Thornton demands that you get a floor of 20% which is probably worth about $10 million.

You must agree you are in a much better position in state street than we are in Mellon. As I have said to Bob, we are only looking for a fair outcome in these matters. I think you would agree we have protected you better in state street than we are protected in Mellon. Once we have an idea of what our Mellon number looks like then we can discuss how to approach the balance of the 40% with Labaton .

Garrett,

I know you didn't really mean to diminish LCHB's role in creating the result in BNY Mellon, at extraordinary risk to itself, which in turn doubled the value of State Street. You need to know that we advocated for you guys too, getting you a role in the BNYM class case (and pushing back against several co-counsel in the process) when you weren't actually owed one. I also gave your firm more assignments than others at the outset in BNYM, until it became clear that the work simply wasn't getting done. In other words, we've each tried to look out for the other in the past. This has been far from a one-way street.

As you know, Judge Kaplan controls everyone's fate in BNYM and LCHB has the most risk before him, having invested the most. We asked for a multiplier for your firm that is much larger than anyone else's, and I really, truly hope that he grants that request.

Thanks,

Dan

Bob,

I am driving but took a quick look at your email and pulled over to type this. I think you are misunderstood. I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter. As I have said before, because of Mike Thornton's advocacy, you are guaranteed at least 20% of the State Street case in which you have no client and did not develop the concept. Yet, we have no corresponding protection in the Mellon matter. Happy to discuss further at any time.

Garrett,

I called and suggested that we have a meeting together with the Labaton people to talk about putting in writing an understanding of the fee division in this case.

You, Mike and I have discussed the State Street fee division and have focused on the existing verbal understanding that was reached on November 9, 2010, with Chris Keller. We agreed that among the three firms we will each have a 20% interest in the fee with the balance to be divided later. Of course, we also have to factor in the 9% that ERISA counsel get pursuant to written agreement and a provision for Arkansas local counsel.

You and I have agreed that it would be equitable to divide the balance of the fee with Labaton getting 50% and each of our firms 25%. This would result in a fee division as follows:

Labaton 33.0 (20 + 13)

Thornton 26.5 (20 + 6.5)

Lieff Cabraser 26.5 (20 + 6.5)

ERISA 9.0

Arkansas Local 5.0

100.0%

If we put the above into an agreement among the three firms, that would certainly provide protection for everyone.

Bob

Subject: Hours for STT AR

Here is what you need to know about the chart:

- All of the hours are taken from LCHB's chart where there were mentions of discussions with either "co-counsel" "team" or, of course, Mike Lesser and/orMPT, GJB. . .EXCEPT those hours that have annotations next to them (mediation; memo etc...).
- Those hours are not from the LCHB chart and are based on the information I could gather from my own emails and/or files. They include historical records I took during the preparation of the complaint and the opp to MTD, as well as recent hours relating to the ppt presentations. I am sure these are not complete. I will continue to dig through my files and emails for more.

- I have added hours for MPT and/or GBJ where it was either indicated on the LCHB chart, or I have other documentary evidence of them being included. Obviously, there is going to be more hours for them; we need to determine how to estimate these.

- What YOU need to do:
  - Go back through all of your emails and/or word documents, excel sheets, presentations (look for the 'date created' meta data), doc review, etc. . . and add your time on the appropriate date.
  - If you see a date where I have already included hours for you, it is from the LCHB information. I would check your email or document against that date—and the LCHB chart and description—and make sure it is not duplicative.
  - If it is not, add the date into the excel chart; your hours; mine (if you think applicable); and a note of what you did (like I already have for mine) so we can have a basis to construct a larger and more complete timesheet later.

- Then, we can simply combine the total hours from this new chart with the doc review hours and give a total figure.

Thanks for the report. Not surprised that they have dug their heels in, but maybe DOL will compromise a little more. No harm in hoping.

I am uncertain as to whether we advised all of you of the results of our telephone call to Suzanne Riley. The call lasted one hour and Lynn and I did our best to convince a mid level government lawyer that compromise is the essence of negotiation without success. The problem is that she has no power to negotiate. We pushed for 290/10 split and she was at 280/20 with a willingness to agree to 282/18 , which was where we were when we began. She is going to speak to her superiors on Monday and we will talk to her one last time. Bob

I have no problem with you guys trying one additional time to secure a "better deal". I agree that consistency in the percentages is the best way forward and the only way of doing that is to give the DOL credit for a certain amount out of the 300 million and applying for an across the board percentage of 25% on the balance. This is what I thought we agreed to two conversations ago but I was taken aback in the recent conversation by the vehemence against the $18 million reduction which has been negotiated to to achieve the $10.5 million fee demand by DOL.
Obviously any number lower than 18 million is a benefit to us. In any event now that you set the call up you might as well take a crack at it (without fracturing the relationship).

In order to accomplish this we need to reduce our settlement to $282 M and to let the DOL take credit for 18M. If we are to make one more stab at it then it would be to try to make our settlement $290M and the DOL 10M. This would give us a fee request of 72.5 rather that 70.5. Is this worth the effort of one more call? I gather that you and Carl are saying "no" and Mike is saying "yes". The structure of the settlement would be the same as BNYM where we have 14M that the DOL got not being included for purposes of our fee request. Lynn and I have a call scheduled with the DOL at 11 PDT We can make a soft pitch for an extra 8M (from 282 to 290) This has been turned down by the DOL before. As lead counsel do you want us to proceed or not? The important thing to me is consistency of the fee request at 25% and not the extra 8M.

&
SUCCESS.
&
I am happy to report that we have a deal with the DOL on the amount of atty fees we can charge in the Class cases.
&
They have agreed that they are agreeable for us to charge the ERISA plans-& $10.9 million atty fees.& & To put it another way- that the settlement amount going to ERISA plans "net of fees" will be $49.1 million
&
They understand that we have not yet decided how we want to present the settlement—and they are agnostic on the structure.& & They would like to see how we are going to phrase it—to make sure that we are living up to this agreement---&
But they are fine with:
1.& We can ask the Court for whatever percentage fee we want- as long as the ERISA plans are only charged $10.9 million.
2.& We can phrase the settlement amount as whatever we want—although they are expecting us to say that the class settlement amount was $300 million.& However- if we want to say it is some lesser amount—or say that we are not seeking fees on the whole portion of the $60 million gross recovery- that is our business.
&
In other words—they & have given us a green light on how we describe it.& & & Based on this understanding they will not object to our fee application.
&
They also understand that "Litigation costs" will be charged pro rata on the whole $300 million.
&
Next step--- they would like to see how we are going to phrase this----- ie: by putting something in our term sheet- or them putting something in their term sheet- or some other writing, etc.
&
Now that we know the numbers—let's go back to a discussion of how we are going to present this in the papers.
&
One last thing—please caution everyone in your firms—that we should not start having separate discussion with the DOL on how to phrase the ERISA fee issue.& Once we come up with the language, I will volunteer to deal with the DOL.
&

But the bottom line—we have a deal for $10.9 million ERISA fees.& & & & Let's not discuss this on today's "plan of allocation call" at 2 pm Eastern.& & The DOL will be circulating a new dial in number for that call = as the current number doesn't work.

Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

5. Requested Information

5.2 If with a firm, provide a description of your law firm, including historical background, number and location of firm offices, number of attorneys, and major areas of practice.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow LLP was established in 1963 in New York City. At the firm's inception, the majority of the practice was commercial work and less than half the work was contingent litigation. Labaton Sucharow began providing securities litigation consulting services to public pension plans in 1995, the year of the passage of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA).

Currently, two-thirds of the firm's approximately 55 lawyers are dedicated to the prosecution of securities class actions, institutional investor "opt out" cases, and other shareholder actions. Labaton Sucharow has one office location where the services discussed herein would be performed. The firm is located at 140 Broadway, New York, NY 10005; Tel: (212) 907-0700. Labaton Sucharow currently has approximately 55 attorneys, 17 paralegals and 69 additional support staff. Class action securities litigation and related portfolio monitoring services represent Labaton Sucharow's principal practice area and source of revenue. The firm also maintains an active antitrust class action practice.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron, LLP was established in 2005 by Timothy P. Herron and Damon J. Chargois after working together and separately in commercial, class action, mass tort and insurance defense litigation for fourteen (14) plus years. Both attorneys, along with partner, Che Williamson are licensed in all federal and state courts in Arkansas and Texas. Chargois & Herron began providing securities litigation services in 2006 and have been pleased to achieve significant monetary results for public pension plans since that time.

Currently, we have offices in Little Rock, Arkansas and The Woodlands, Texas with six full-time practicing attorneys who have held law licenses as follows: (Timothy Herron – 28 years), (Che Williamson – 18 years), (Kamran Masheyekh – 18 years), (Damon Chargois – 14 years), (Carlos Fernandez – 5 years) and (Kirk Chargois – 2 years). Our primary address is 2201 Timberloch Place, Suite 110, The Woodlands, Texas 77380; (281) 444-0604.

5.3 State whether your response excludes any services contemplated by the RFQ set forth in the scope of services in section 3.2.

Labaton Sucharow's and Chargois & Herron's responses do not exclude any services contemplated by the RFQ set forth in the scope of services in section 3.2.

5.4 State whether your firm is able to conduct ongoing client portfolio monitoring (tracking portfolio trading and cross-referencing the trading against potential securities claims) by reviewing the System's portfolio losses on a regular basis, investigating potential claims, preparing detailed reports of findings; and presenting the findings to ATRS.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow is committed to high-level client service. A major component of the litigation and client services that we propose to the ATRS is our portfolio monitoring program, that utilizes a full compliment of professional analyses as well as out proprietary software system called LPAS©.

We believe that a strong analysis and quick determination of possible financial exposure can be the first line of defense when corporate misconduct and fraud result in investment losses.

Identification In its Case Evaluation Group, Labaton Sucharow has assembled several attorneys and other professionals with decades of combined experience distilling information in the marketplace in an effort to uncover and investigate instances of potential securities fraud on behalf of our clients. Labaton Sucharow subscribes to and monitors sophisticated financial research services, including Bloomberg and Thomson Reuters, the same tools used by analysts at major financial services firms. We use these information services to monitor news coverage and market activity throughout the day to identify potential securities law violations and analyze the impact of the claims on our clients' portfolios. Among the other sources we monitor are: (i) the Federal Securities Law Reports published by CCH; (ii) the Securities Class Action Services database maintained by the Riskmetrics Group; (iii) Stanford Law School's Securities Class Action Clearinghouse; and (iv) other legal journals and newspapers.

The Group includes five attorneys, led by Christopher Keller, who have many years of experience performing this specialized function. The Group also includes two Wall Street analysts, several damages analysts, and private investigators formerly with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This group has been pivotal to enhancing Labaton's institutional shareholder services by being able to marshall the critical facts necessary to prevail in complex securities class action litigation.

Analysis When a security suffers a significant decline in value or when litigation has been commenced against a company, we commence a multi-tiered analysis of the situation. The analysis includes early identification and assembly of facts, legal and factual analysis and ranking (using a proprietary grading system that allows us to objectively rate the facts), determination of the magnitude of the alleged fraud (in terms of class-wide damages), and investigation of non-public information and sources. This in-depth review yields a "grade" for the case that reflects our analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the claim. This grade is based upon a number of factors, including the size of the company, evidence of intentional or reckless wrongdoing, the types of issues involved (including any earnings restatements or other accounting issues), whether there is an ongoing governmental investigation, the potential liability of third-party defendants such as auditors or underwriters, the solvency of the defendant, and whether there was a significant stock price decline in reaction to the alleged wrongdoing. The findings are captured in a summary report. An example of such a review is attached as Exhibit A.

Review of losses If we discover that the ATRS invested in a company that has engaged in allegedly fraudulent behavior, we quickly can assess the losses incurred. This loss amount is an estimated loss as limited by the PSLRA, which is not the same as your legally compensable damages. To that end, LPAS (further discussed in Section 5.5, below), allows us to quickly quantify our clients' financial exposure to the security at issue so that we may advise our clients on the strength of their position to pursue litigation, either individually or as a lead plaintiff on behalf of a class of investors. This assessment can be made as soon as a situation has been identified, depending on the data that is available to us, and is an essential component of the advice we could provide to the ATRS on the likelihood of its success were the ATRS to move to be appointed Lead Plaintiffs. Whether our advice is to pursue litigation or not, it is based on our client's true financial interest in the litigation and the merits of the case.

Reporting Included in our analysis of the case, is an analysis of the options available to our clients. If a case meets certain criteria, we will inform the ATRS about the issues involved in the case, and we may request that the ATRS research their holdings so that we can provide an analysis of the ATRS's financial exposure. On a case-by-case basis, we will provide a comprehensive legal analysis for the client's review. An example of such a review is attached as Exhibit B. Additionally we provide reports each quarter that recite our findings for the cases we have reviewed in prior periods and the results of our research. Please refer to Exhibit C for an example of a Quarterly Report.

Many institutional clients expect and receive regular oral or written updates concerning matters of potential interest. Typically, we would first discuss the issues of a specific case that we are analyzing with the ATRS before a report is submitted. However, other reports – primarily our quarterly reports and any urgent/time-sensitive matter that we are bringing to the ATRS's attention – might be transmitted via e-mail to our contact at the ATRS without a formal discussion beforehand. The decision to commence an action and overall litigation strategy are always made after close consultation between Labaton Sucharow and our client, and at a client's request, Labaton Sucharow will circulate drafts of court filings well in advance of filing dates for review and comment. Monitoring services will be handled by partner, Christopher Keller, and the overall relationship would be managed by partner, Eric Belfi. Matters connected to litigation would be managed by Mr. Belfi and chairman, Mr. Lawrence Sucharow. Please see Exhibit D, to view the full resume of each attorney.

Recommendation We are protective of our institutional clients and therefore proceed carefully before recommending legal action. Quite often, the results of our analysis indicate that it is not advisable for the client to participate as a lead plaintiff, because the amount of the loss is not significant or participating as a lead plaintiff may not be in the client's best interests for other reasons. If we determine that claims lack merit or are weak, we will so advise. A law firm cannot guarantee success in securities litigation, but according to the annual securities class actions study published by Cornerstone Research, for the past three years Labaton Sucharow, on a percentage basis, recovers more than any other plaintiffs' class action firm.

In any case, our recommendation will be an informed one, suited to the needs of the client. Labaton Sucharow recognizes that clients desire varying levels of involvement with these processes, and the firm certainly can provide training to effectively supervise and assist in these activities.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has six attorneys and three paralegals with decades of combined experience in monitoring and researching corporations and the market in analyzing conduct with an eye toward discovering possible impropriety. Additionally, we work closely with counsel in New York, including Labaton Sucharow, and California in order to stay abreast of trends and activities in the market. We are free to utilize their resources and they ours – at any time in an effort to provide the best service to our institutional investor clients.

Chargois & Herron owns an Alabama company called 270 Discovery Solutions which provides document research, indexing and computer inputting of the millions of items of information contained in the documents that are routinely produced – usually under court order – in securities class action litigation. Uniquely, our company is staffed almost entirely by licensed attorneys, numbering in excess of 25 attorneys. This puts Chargois & Herron in a unique and special position to handle any securities litigation matter, regardless of size.

5.5 State whether your firm has the ability to monitor the ATRS portfolio in this regard through access to the ATRS custodial account, rather than requesting ATRS staff for information regarding securities holdings.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Yes, Labaton Sucharow has the ability to monitor the ATRS portfolio through access to the ATRS custodial account. We have relationships with all of the major custodial banks in the U.S. and have handled multiple systems when retrieving our clients' data. Therefore, the necessary information is gathered without intrusion into our clients' day-to-day business. At the outset, a minimal effort is required to set up the authorization and permissions for our access to the ATRS portfolio. Beyond that, our team handles the rest of the communications with the custodian and the retrieval of the ATRS portfolio records.

Labaton Sucharow has invested significant resources to develop and maintain an infrastructure and software program to accomplish this for our clients. Labaton Portfolio Analysis System (LPAS) is a unique and proprietary database management and software application that allows us to capture our clients' trading information and over time build a historical record of the transactions, housed in our internal, secure database. In particular, with access to our clients' historic trading records, LPAS allows us to monitor the data and identify eligible losses. When a new situation is identified, LPAS identifies matches between the securities owned by ATRS and will perform an analysis of their financial exposure, using court-approved evaluation models. Please see Exhibit E for a description of LPAS.

Additionally, Labaton Sucharow has access to comprehensive information with respect to securities class action settlements. The firm can provide this information to the ATRS's custodian bank at no charge and make all necessary forms available to the custodian.

Response of Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has the ability to monitor the ATRS through access to the ATRS custodial account, rather than requesting ATRS staff for information regarding securities holdings.

5.6 Subject to the consent of clients as required by applicable ethics rules, provide a listing of representative clients. Responses may, with the consent of the clients, include names and phone numbers of specific references. Subject to the clients' consent, identify specifically any pension plans or other major institutional investors, either private or public, to which you render or have rendered significant legal services concerning the relevant subject area(s) during the past year. If no clients consent, or if you elect not to request such consent, please so state and describe the representative clients in general terms to support your firm's qualification and experience to represent ATRS.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

[redacted]

[redacted]

Response of Chargois & Herron

Among others, Chargois & Herron has represented, along with co-counselors, Bristol County Retirement Systems, Inc., Plymouth County Retirement System and merchants in Class Action litigation against credit card companies based on hidden surcharges.

5.7 Provide a very brief summary resume describing the education, legal or investment experience, recent speaking engagements, and a list of significant, relevant publications of the attorney or attorneys proposed to work as lead attorney(s).

Response of Labaton Sucharow

The number and identity of the Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron attorneys and other legal professionals who would be assigned to a securities litigation matter on behalf of the ATRS would vary depending on the size, complexity and issues in any given case. Assuming that a particular case involved complex accounting issues, large numbers of documents, and dozens of fact and expert witnesses, the team likely would be comprised of the following attorneys from Labaton Sucharow: Eric J. Belfi, Lawrence A. Sucharow, Thomas A. Dubbs, Christopher J. Keller, Zachary M. Ratzman, Ann E. Gittleman, and Krista T. Rosen; and Damon J. Chargois, Timothy P. Herron, Kamran Mashayekh, and Che D. Williamson from Chargois & Herron. To view the full resume of each attorney, please see Exhibit D.

Eric J. Belfi, a partner with the firm, is an accomplished litigator in a broad range of commercial matters. He concentrates his practice in the investigation and initiation of securities and shareholder class actions, with an emphasis on the representation of major international and domestic pension funds and other institutional investors. Prior to entering private practice, Mr. Belfi served as an Assistant Attorney General for the State of New York and an Assistant District Attorney for the County of Westchester, New York. As a prosecutor, Mr. Belfi investigated and prosecuted numerous white-collar criminal cases, including securities law violations. In this capacity, he presented hundreds of cases to the grand jury and obtained numerous felony convictions after jury trials.

Mr. Belfi is a regular speaker and author on issues surrounding securities litigation, with a focus on international institutional investors. He was invited to speak at the prestigious Eurosharehoders Annual Conference, in Brussels, in February 2008. Most recently, he spoke regarding securities class actions at the William H. Bowen School of Law at the University of Arkansas in June of 2008. Mr. Belfi is the co-author of The Proportionate Trading Model: Real Science or Junk Science? 52 Cleveland St. L.

Rev. 391 (2004-05) and "International Strategic Partnerships to Prosecute Securities Class Actions, Investment & Pensions Europe," Investments & Pensions Europe, 2005.

He received a B.A. from Georgetown University in 1992 and a J.D. from St. John's University School of Law in 1995.

Lawrence A. Sucharow, a nationally and peer recognized leader of the class action bar, is the chairman of Labaton Sucharow. In his capacity as chairman, he participates in developing the litigation and settlement strategies for virtually all of the class action cases Labaton Sucharow prosecutes. For more than three decades, Mr. Sucharow has devoted his practice to counseling clients and prosecuting cases on complex issues involving securities, antitrust, business transaction, product liability, and other class actions.

Mr. Sucharow is the co-author of "Executive Compensation -- Despite Reforms, Pay Is Less Transparent and Shareholder-Friendly Than in the Past," New York Law Journal, March 20, 2008, and "FIFO vs LIFO, Different ways to calculate shareholder losses for purposes of appointing lead plaintiff lead to different results," Investment & Pensions Europe, May 2006.

Mr. Sucharow earned a B.B.A., cum laude, from the Baruch School of the City College of the City University of New York in 1971 and a J.D., cum laude, from Brooklyn Law School in 1975.

Thomas A. Dubbs, a senior partner with the firm, specializes in the representation of institutional investors including pension funds in securities fraud and other types of litigation. A recognized leader in the field, Mr. Dubbs represented the first major private institutional investor to become a lead plaintiff in a class action under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act. He was formerly Senior Vice President and Senior Litigation Counsel for Kidder, Peabody & Co. Incorporated ("Kidder") for seven years, where he represented Kidder in a variety of matters, including in many class actions. He is the only member of the plaintiffs' bar who has held a senior position at a major investment bank, and is, thus, uniquely able to advise on issues involving the underwriting process and due diligence requirements. Also, he is able to understand and anticipate the perspective and strategy of defense counsel in securities cases, a substantial tactical advantage in determining the proper approach to take in litigating, settling or trying a particular action.

Mr. Dubbs is the co-author of "US Focus: Time for Action," Legal Week, April 17, 2008. Mr. Dubbs frequently lectures to institutional investors and other groups such as the Government Finance Officers Association, the National Conference of Public Employee Retirement Systems and the Council of Institutional Investors. In March 2008, Mr. Dubbs participated in a roundtable discussion hosted by The Law Society in London regarding class actions lawsuits.

Mr. Dubbs received a B.A. and a J.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1969 and 1974, respectively. In 1971, he earned an M.A. from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy of Tufts University.

Christopher J. Keller, a partner with the firm, leads the firm's Case Evaluation Group and has been involved in investigating and initiating numerous securities class actions. He was a member of the trial team that successfully litigated the In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnership Litigation in the United States District Court for the Central District of California. The six-week jury trial resulted in a landmark $184 million plaintiffs' verdict, which is one of the largest jury verdicts since the passage of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Most recently, he was instrumental in securing a $117.5 million settlement in In re Mercury Interactive Securities Litigation, which is one of the largest settlements to date in a securities options backdating class action.

Mr. Keller is the co-author of "Tellabs': PSLRA Pleading Test Comparative, Not Absolute," New York Law Journal, October 3, 2007, and "FIFO vs LIFO, Different ways to calculate shareholder losses for purposes of appointing lead plaintiff lead to different results," Investment & Pensions Europe, May 2006. Mr. Keller is a regular speaker at institutional investor gatherings. In June 2008, he spoke at a Continuing Legal Education course on subprime and mortgage related claims.

Mr. Keller received a B.S. from Adelphi University in 1993 and a J.D. from St. John's University School of Law in 1997.

Zachary M. Ratzman, Of Counsel to the firm, has been practicing in the area of securities fraud litigation for five years. Since early 2005, he has litigated the case In re American International Group, Inc. Securities Litigation, on behalf of three Ohio pension funds and a class of defrauded investors, and has played key roles in other noteworthy actions, including In re Bristol-Myers Squibb Securities Litigation. Prior to joining Labaton Sucharow, Mr. Ratzman practiced white-collar criminal defense and complex commercial litigation as an associate in the New York offices of Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP and Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP.

Mr. Ratzman received a B.A. from Ohio University, where he graduated summa cum laude and with Phi Beta Kappa honors. He earned a J.D. from the University of Michigan Law School, where he graduated, magna cum laude, and as a member of the Order of the Coif.

Ann E. Gittleman, an associate with the firm, is a Certified Public Accountant. Before becoming an attorney, she worked for PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP for more than two years, where she performed audits and interacted with governmental organizations, such as the SEC, IRS and Attorney General Office, in coordinating and facilitating investigations. As such, she is uniquely qualified to analyze complex fact patterns and utilize various principles of the accounting and auditing profession in actions involving accounting fraud.

Ms. Gittleman earned a B.S. and a B.A., both magna cum laude, from Bryant University in 1999, and received her J.D. from Brooklyn Law School in 2004, where she was a member of both the Moot Court Honor Society and the Securities Law Association.

Krista T. Rosen, an associate with the firm, focuses her practice in the area of securities class action litigation. She is a member of the team litigating the federal securities fraud class action against AIG, representing as Lead Plaintiff several Ohio pension funds.

Ms. Rosen earned a J.D. from the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law in 2006. During law school, she was selected to participate in the Securities Arbitration Clinic, where she represented investors in arbitration actions against securities brokers. Additionally, she served as the Articles Editor of the Cardozo Law Review. In March 2006, she was awarded third place in the 2005-2006 national writing competition sponsored by the Association of Securities and Exchange Commission Alumni (ASECA) for her Note entitled, Staying in Court While Staying Discovery: Finding Exceptions for Government-Produced Documents Under the PSLRA.

Damon J. Chargois was born on December 26, 1966. He was admitted to the Texas Bar on November 4, 1994, and the Arkansas Bar in 2006. Mr. Chargois received his undergraduate degree in English Literature in 1991 and received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from the University of Houston Law Center in May 1994. Mr. Chargois is licensed to practice in all Texas and Arkansas Courts, as well as Federal District Courts and the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. Additionally, he has successfully tried a federal case to unanimous positive verdict that was subsequently affirmed by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals and, then, had writ of certiorari denied by the U.S. Supreme Court, resulting in a final ruling affirming Mr. Chargois' verdict.

Mr. Chargois has handled a variety of class action and mass tort litigation cases, including a commercial, occupational, mass torts, including business transactions, products liability, pharmaceutical, class action, asbestos and benzene chemical exposures.

Upon graduating as class captain from his law school, Mr. Chargois worked as a corporate and insurance defense attorney in Dallas, Texas, with the law firm Cowles & Thompson, P.C., while also serving as criminal prosecutor for the townships of Rockwall, Rowlette, and Heath, Texas. In 1996, he became a mass tort plaintiff's trial lawyer, ultimately rising to Head of Litigation for national law firm Foster & Sear, L.L.P.

In 2004, the law firm Chargois & Herron was founded with Damon Chargois and Timothy P. Herron. In 2006, Chargois, Mashayekh & Herron was formed to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits, and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interests. Mr. Chargois' practice is multi jurisdictional and he oversees litigation in several states on the federal and state level. He is a member of the State Bar of Texas Litigation Section, the American Association for Justice, and Texas Trial Lawyers Association. Chargois, Mashayekh & Herron has offices in the Woodlands, Texas; Little Rock, Arkansas; and New York, New York.

Mr. Chargois is a member of the Board of Directors for the University of Houston Law Alumni Foundation. Additionally, he is a member of the Advisory Board of Directors for Houston Achievement Place, a charity specializing in caring for the needs of at risk foster children. He has also served as a guest lecturer on a number of legal topics, including mass tort litigation and bankruptcy to the University of Arkansas—Little Rock Law School.

Timothy P. Herron was born in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on October 18, 1952. He was admitted to the Texas Bar in 1980. Mr. Herron did his undergraduate and graduate education at Texas Christian University receiving a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Speech and Communication in 1974 and a Master of Science in Speech and Communication in 1975. He taught as a professor at Samford University before being awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to attend Baylor Law School in Waco, Texas where he obtained his Juris Doctor Degree in 1980 (cum laude).

In law school, he was voted the most outstanding trial advocate in the nation and was on Baylor's national winning mock trial team. Mr. Herron began as an attorney with Baker & Botts in Houston in the employment litigation section. He left Baker Botts, to become a partner in the firm of Hope & Mays and later Crews & Herron in Conroe, Texas. In 1990, along with Don Wetzel, he formed the law firm of Wetzel & Herron which specialized in insurance defense and commercial litigation.

After representing mainly defense and commercial clients for eighteen years, Mr. Herron changed his practice to handle only plaintiffs' mass torts. In 1998, he started the law firm of Hissey Kientz &

Herron with Rob Kientz, and Mike Hissey, which since that time continues to handle mass tort litigation. Their cases include a wide range of occupational and mass torts, including asbestos and pharmaceutical litigation.

In 2004, the law firm Chargois & Herron was founded with Damon Chargois and Timothy P. Herron. In 2006, the firm expanded to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits, and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interests. Mr. Herron's practice is multi jurisdictional and he oversees litigation in several states on the federal and state level. He is licensed in Texas and Arkansas. He is board certified in Civil Trial Litigation since 1989, is licensed to practice in the Federal Courts of Texas, and is a member of the State Bar of Texas in the Litigation Section and the AAJ and TTLA. In addition, he is chairman of the Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee of the State Bar of Texas, Region 5A. Chargois & Herron has offices in the Woodlands, Texas; Little Rock, Arkansas; and New York, New York.

Mr. Herron has expanded his business interests to include commercial banking and real estate. He was also involved in the founding of Post Oak Bank in Houston in 2003. He has been involved in the development and funding of commercial property development for the past four years in Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama.

Tim Herron has resided in Montgomery County, Texas for the past 26 years and has six children and one grandchild.

Kamran Mashayekh was admitted to the Texas State Bar on November 11, 1990. Mr. Mashayekh received his undergraduate degree in Political Science from Rice University in 1987 and received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from South Texas College of Law in August 1989.

In 2006, Kamran Mashayekh joined the law firm of Chargois & Herron to specialize in commercial and class action lawsuits and expand the firm's commercial and financial business interest. Mr. Mashayekh is fluent in English, Arabic, French and Spanish.

Che D. Williamson was born on November 25, 1964. She is married to Tim Herron and has 2 children and one grandchild. Ms. Williamson earned her Juris Doctor degree from South Texas College of Law in 1989. She has practiced law with her husband, Tim Herron since 1989. Ms. Williamson teaches mass torts at the William H. Bowen Law School at the University of Arkansas. She is also board certified in Civil Trial Litigation and holds a Ph.D. degree in criminal justice from Sam Houston State University and an L.L.M. in environmental law and policy from the University Houston Law School.

5.8 Provide a very brief summary general description of your firm's practice in the subject matter areas covered by this RFQ, including the size and scope of the practice and any other resources of your firm which are relevant to your practice in those areas.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow has developed its expertise in prosecuting securities class actions over decades, and litigation on behalf of injured institutional and individual investors represents the firm's principal practice area. Since passage of the PSLRA, the firm has been appointed lead counsel on numerous occasions, including cases involving the largest investor losses and most egregious frauds, such as the current Countrywide, American International Group and HealthSouth litigations.

As noted above in response to question 5.4, Labaton Sucharow has a dedicated Case Evaluation Group comprised of attorneys and non-attorney professionals, who identify and evaluate cases of possible fraud, and who have developed proprietary criteria to rate such cases.

Labaton Sucharow has cultivated a specific expertise in enforcing accountability on the part of underwriters and accounting firms – entities that play an important role in the financial markets and, we believe, have special responsibility to ensure its proper functioning. One partner of the firm, who practiced for many years in the financial services sector, has made litigation against underwriters a principal focus of his practice with the firm. Two attorneys at Labaton Sucharow are certified public accountants, both with significant auditing experience. Their expertise in both law and accounting provides the firm a special capacity to identify and analyze accounting-related fraud, coordinate expert testimony, and effectively depose financial personnel.

The firm also highly values its non-attorney professionals, and believes that the close integration of their financial and investigative expertise with the firm's legal work provides Labaton Sucharow an unusual ability to build well-developed, thoroughly researched, and analytically rigorous cases and present them effectively to judges and juries.

Distinctively, the firm has a demonstrated willingness to go to trial when necessary. Since 2000, partners of the firm have served as lead or co-lead counsel in several major securities trials including, In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnerships Litigation, No. 98-7035 (C.D. Cal.) and Koppel v. 4987 Corp., 167 F.3d 125 (2d Cir. 1999). In the Real Estate Associates litigation, Lawrence Sucharow co-led a month-long jury trial that resulted in a $92 million compensatory award and a $92 million punitive damages award (later reduced to the maximum allowed under California law). In Koppel, the firm established a significant corporate governance precedent. We see our record of taking cases to trial as critical to our ability to negotiate credibly and forcefully on behalf of the institutions and classes we represent.

Finally, Labaton Sucharow strongly believes that shareholder litigation provides important public benefits by insuring fair and efficient public markets, regulating corporate governance, and controlling other deceptive conduct by public companies. The firm's senior partner, Edward Labaton, is a recognized authority on corporate governance issues, and is a member of the Advisory Committee of the University of Delaware's Weinberg Center for Corporate Governance and the New York City Bar Association's Task Force on the Role of Lawyers in Corporate Governance. He has also been President of the Institute for Law and Economic Policy since its founding.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has offices in Little Rock, Arkansas and The Woodlands, Texas, in addition to counsel affiliations with Labaton Sucharow in New York, Friedman Law Group in New York and Markun, Zussman & Compton in Los Angeles, California for the primary purpose of investigating and pursuing class action securities, commercial and consumer litigation which includes cases involving large investor losses and egregious fraud. Chargois & Herron has an attorney who dedicates a major portion of his work week watching the market, scouring financials and personally speaking with clients, financial experts and business leaders in our continuing effort to discover and root out fraud and misrepresentations by corporate wrongdoers.

5.9 Provide a very brief summary description of not more than ten (10) significant transactions or cases in which your firm has provided extensive legal services involving pension funds or other institutional clients relating to the subject matter areas covered by this RFQ.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

With respect to securities litigation, Labaton Sucharow has obtained substantial recoveries for institutional clients and associated classes in dozens of cases, and is recognized today as one of a small number of firms with the expertise and resources to prosecute the largest and most complex cases.

In one of the largest cases involving the recent subprime mortgage crisis, Labaton Sucharow serves as lead counsel representing Lead Plaintiffs the State of New York and the New York City Pension Funds (collectively, "the New York Funds") in In re Countrywide Securities Litigation, No. CV-07-5295 MRP (MANx) (C.D. Cal.), pending before U.S. District Judge Mariana R. Pfaelzer in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California. This case is a consolidated class action asserting claims under the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 against Countrywide Financial Corporation, certain of its current and former directors and officers, outside accountants, and underwriters of public offerings of Countrywide securities.

In In re American International Group Inc. Securities Litigation, Civ. No. 04-8141 (LTS) (S.D.N.Y.), Labaton Sucharow is lead counsel on behalf of Lead Plaintiffs the Ohio Public Employees Retirement System, and certain other Ohio state pension funds. Defendants include AIG, and its present and former senior executives, underwriters, auditor, and parties to various fraudulent transactions. In 2006, the court denied defendants' numerous motions to dismiss in substantially all respects. The document review will likely be one of the largest in the history of securities litigation; to date, we have reviewed more than 37 million pages of 40 million that defendants produced. Both fact depositions and class certification depositions have begun.

In In re Mercury Interactive Corp. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 05-3395, pending in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Labaton Sucharow is acting as co-lead counsel representing Lead Plaintiffs the Steamship Trade Association/International Longshoremen's Association Pension Fund, the City of Sterling Heights General Employees Retirement System, the City of Dearborn Heights Police and Fire Retirement System, and the Charter Township of Clinton Police & Fire Pension System. The allegations in Mercury concern backdated option grants used as unreported compensation to employees and officers of the Company. Mercury's former CEO, CFO, and General Counsel actively participated in and benefited from the options backdating scheme, which came at the expense of Mercury shareholders and the investing public. Labaton Sucharow and Hewlett-Packard's counsel reached an agreement in principle that will compensate injured plaintiffs in the total sum of $117.5 million, a figure representing the second largest known settlement or judgment in an options backdating suit to date. Labaton Sucharow and Hewlett-Packard's counsel executed a Stipulation of Settlement and the court granted preliminary approval of the settlement on June 2, 2008.

In In re Bristol-Myers Squibb Securities Litigation, Civ. No. 00-1990 (GEB) (D.N.J.), Labaton Sucharow, as sole lead counsel, prosecuted class claims on behalf of Lead Plaintiff, Longview Collective Fund of the Amalgamated Bank. The firm reviewed more than 5 million pages of documents, took 44 factual depositions and 18 expert depositions and defended 8 experts. The case settled in January 2006 for $185 million. The settlement also included the important public benefit of an agreement by Bristol-Myers Squibb to post results of its clinical trials, including all adverse events, for a period of ten years.

In In re HealthSouth Corp. Stockholder Litigation, No. CV-03-BE-1501-S (N.D. Ala.), Labaton Sucharow represents Lead Plaintiffs the New Mexico State Investment Council and the New Mexico Educational Retirement Board and serves as co-lead counsel. The litigation alleges a broad scheme by the company's former senior managers in the largest securities fraud in the healthcare industry. In January 2007, the court approved a settlement valued at $445 million with HealthSouth Corporation and several of the Company's former officers and directors. The partial settlement, comprised of cash and HealthSouth securities, is one of the largest in history. Lead Plaintiffs continue their prosecution of the litigation against HealthSouth's former CEO, Ernst & Young, and UBS.

In In re Waste Management, Inc. Securities Litigation, Civ. No. H-99-2183 (S.D. Tex.), Labaton Sucharow was retained by the Connecticut Retirement Plans and Trust Funds. The litigation resulted in a $457 million settlement, one of the largest securities class action recoveries ever obtained. On behalf of its client and the Class, Labaton Sucharow secured substantial corporate governance enhancements, including measures designed to strengthen the role and independence of the defendant's audit committee, declassify its board of directors, and encourage and safeguard whistleblowers among the company's employees.

In In re Real Estate Associates Limited Partnerships Litigation, No. 98-7035 (C.D. Cal.), Labaton Sucharow litigated and tried this case to a jury verdict in federal court in California in late 2002. The firm obtained a precedent setting award of $92 million in compensatory damages under various legal theories, including violations of Section 14(a) of the Exchange Act. The jury also awarded an additional $92 million for punitive damages on a breach of fiduciary duty claim (which was later reduced by the court on a motion for remittitur). The case was eventually settled for more than 100% of claimed damages.

Labaton Sucharow also represents institutional investors in a number of individual securities actions. For example, in In re Adelphia Communications Corp. Securities & Derivative Litigation, Civ. No. 03 MD 1529 (LMM) (S.D.N.Y.), the firm represents the New York City Employees' Retirement System (and certain other New York City pension funds) and the Division of Investment of the New Jersey Department of the Treasury in separate individual actions against Adelphia's officers, auditors, underwriters, and lawyers. To date, Labaton Sucharow has fully resolved certain of the claims brought by New Jersey and New York City for amounts that significantly exceed the percentage of damages recovered by the Class. New Jersey and New York City continue to prosecute their claims against the remaining defendants. In In re WorldCom Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 02 Civ. 3288 (DLC) (S.D.N.Y.), Labaton Sucharow secured a substantial settlement in an individual action brought by our clients SunTrust Bank and Trusco Capital Management, Inc. against the former underwriters, auditors, and directors of WorldCom, Inc. In In re Qwest Communications International Securities Litigation, 01-cv-01451 (D. Col.), after a class action settlement was announced in September 2006, Labaton Sucharow was engaged by CalPERS to pursue all appropriate opt-out securities claims in connection with CalPERS' securities holdings in Qwest Communications Int'l Inc. We drafted complaints for use in both federal and state courts, obtained and extension of pre-existing polling agreement (which made it unnecessary for us to file complaints), represented CalPERS at two mediation sessions with Qwest and related defendants, and negotiated the final settlement which was far greater than what CalPERS would have obtained in the class action and was proportional to the largest other opt-out settlement obtained against Qwest that we know of.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has represented a number of plaintiffs against corporations who have been proven to have acted fraudulently with respect to their shareholders or consumers.

In Bristol County Retirement System vs. HCC Insurance Holdings, Inc., we served as liaison counsel representing the Massachusetts Public Pension Funds against HCC Holdings, Inc. arising out of its fraudulent options backdating practices we alleged. After almost two years of litigation, we are finalizing a significant settlement for our clients.

In Holloway v. Countrywide, we have co-counseled with Markun, Zussman & Compton against Countrywide arising out of its fraudulent subprime mortgage practices. Recently, our case received class certification status for the State of California.

Chargois & Herron owns an Alabama company called 270 Discovery Solutions which provides document research, indexing and computer inputting of the millions of items of information contained in the documents that are routinely produced – usually under court order – in securities class action litigation. Uniquely, our company is staffed almost entirely by licensed attorneys, numbering in excess of 25 attorneys. This puts Chargois & Herron in a unique and special position to handle any securities litigation matter, regardless of size.

5.10 Please describe proposed billing arrangements, including contingency fees, for securities litigation. If other than contingency fees are contemplated, please state the range of hourly billing rates, by timekeeper status (paralegal, 1st to 3rd year associate, etc., staff attorney, shareholder or partner, of counsel, etc.), of all attorneys and paralegals proposed for assignment to ATRS matters. State what discount, if any, to these rates the firm proposes to provide to ATRS. While this RFQ primarily seeks the services of one lead attorney, the involvement of other firm attorneys may be required from time to time, depending on the matter.

Response of Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow confirms that monitoring and evaluating services provided under this Proposal would be carried out at no cost to the ATRS.

The range of contingency fees that Labaton Sucharow proposes with respect to securities class actions (and individual actions) that we successfully resolve as litigation counsel for the ATRS is dependent on several factors anticipated at the beginning of the case, including the likelihood of success, the likely size of any settlement or judgment from any or all defendants. For example, in a case involving a solvent company, hundreds of millions of dollars in damages, and a defendant company that has admitted wrongdoing and/or filed a restatement, the proposed contingency fee would be at the low end of the proposed range. In a case involving smaller damages, no admission, no restatement, and potential difficulties in funding a settlement or a judgment, the risks of litigation would be greater and therefore the proposed attorneys' fees would be at the higher end of the range.

On the basis described above, Labaton Sucharow proposes a range of fees generally conforming to the following:

AMOUNT OF RECOVERY	STAGE OF LITIGATION: Initiation of action to completed briefing of motion to dismiss (or, if no such motion, initiation of discovery)	Thereafter, to completed briefing of motion for summary judgment (or, if no such motion, to completion of discovery)	Thereafter, to trial and entry of judgment	Thereafter (including appellate proceedings), to ultimate resolution
Up to $150 million	5-7%	12-17%	18-22%	21-24%
Greater than $150 million, up to $250 million	4-6%	7-10%	10-12%	12-14%
Greater than $250 million	4-6%	6-8%	8-9%	10%

Labaton Sucharow would offer legal services to the ATRS outside the scope of the "evaluation counsel" and "litigation counsel" functions discussed in the RFQ at the discounted hourly rates set forth below. These rates represent a discount of 40%-60% of the Firms' standard billing rates for their attorneys.

5.11 State any inability to comply with terms of the engagement described in Section 3.3 of this RFQ. If any inability exists, be specific.

For both Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron, there are no inabilities to comply with the terms of the engagement described in Section 3.3 of this RFQ.

5.12 Identify any known relationship, either business or personal, which you or a member of your firm has with any ATRS Board member, investment consultant, investment manager, or key employee. If aware of none, state "None." (A list of ATRS Board members, investment consultants, investment managers, and key employees can be provided upon request. A formal conflicts check will be required prior to contracting.)

Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron are not aware of any known relationships.

5.13 Identify any relationship, either business or personal, which you or a member of your firm has with a person known to you to have substantial business dealings with ATRS or its real estate title-holding corporation.

To the best of our knowledge, Labaton Sucharow and Chargois & Herron do not have any relationships, either business or personal, with a person who has substantial dealings with the ATRS or its real estate title-holding corporation.

5.14 State whether you or any firm attorney proposed to provide services for this engagement has ever had a formal grievance or complaint lodged against him or her pursuant to the applicable disciplinary rules or has ever been sued for malpractice or any civil or criminal regulatory enforcement action in connection with any type of legal representation, and whether any such attorneys have been sued individually with respect to any type of personal investment or other personal or business involvement concerning an underwriter or issuer of securities, investment adviser, investment company, securities broker-dealer, insurer, real estate transaction, or a lending institution.

Response by Labaton Sucharow

Labaton Sucharow (and its predecessor firms) have been in business for more than 45 years. For much of that time, the firm had a substantial general billable corporate practice as well as its contingent class action litigation practice. Labaton Sucharow currently has a very small general billable corporate practice. Throughout its existence, from time to time, issues have arisen which required notification of our malpractice insurance carrier. At the present time, the firm has provided notice of the following matters to its malpractice insurance carrier. (None of the matters of which our carrier has been notified involves class action litigation).

Labaton Sucharow is a defendant in a legal malpractice case brought by a former client who asserts the firm and others committed malpractice in representing him in civil and criminal matters, and that the firm inappropriately failed to compensate him in connection with a qui tam proceeding. The claim is for an unspecified amount of damages.

In a separate action, on March 19, 2008, the preliminary executors of the estate of Jack Maurer commenced an action in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against Labaton Sucharow, charging that the firm had committed malpractice in connection with estate planning services rendered in 2001. The firm has moved to dismiss and the motion is currently pending before the court.

Labaton Sucharow's attorneys have never been sued individually with respect to any type of personal investment or other personal or business involvement concerning an underwriter or issuer of securities, investment adviser, investment company, securities broker-dealer, insurer, real estate transaction, or a lending institution.

Response by Chargois & Herron

Chargois & Herron has never been sued for malpractice, nor had a formal grievance or complaint lodged against it nor had any civil or criminal regulatory enforcement action brought against it; however, Damon J. Chargois, individually has had a grievance in the Dillard's discrimination litigation and a grievance in asbestos litigation brought against him, but both have been and were dismissed

I am pleased to inform you that subject to final approval of the Attorney General's office, ATRS has selected Labaton Sucharow as an additional monitoring counsel for our system.

I would like to speak with you regarding the additional firm on your submission Chargois & Herron. This is a little awkward, but since your firms are not legally affiliated, we are unable to process the state contract form with both firms listed.

If your firm is doing the monitoring and providing the financial backing for the cases, I think it is most appropriate that we add your firm independently to the list of approved firms. Your firm may affiliate that firm or utilize them as independent contractors, if you deem is appropriate, on a case by case basis. There would be no requirement that you use them if it was not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case. I don't know how to best handle this point but the state procurement process is not conducive to a joint proposal.

Upon approval of the Attorney General, ATRS will send you a request for a form W-9, Arkansas Professional Services contract form, and State grant/contract disclosure form for your completion.

Please call me if you have a minute to discuss.

Regards,

Law360, New York (July 23, 2013, 7:25 PM ET) -- A key government witness in the fraud trial against former Goldman Sachs Group Inc <http://www.law360.com/companies/goldman-sachs-group-inc> . trader Fabrice Tourre said Tuesday that she was misled about the allegedly built-to-fail Abacus transaction, though stopped short of saying that Tourre himself lied.

Laura Schwartz, a former senior managing director at ACA Management LLC, said she was not told that a hedge fund that helped structure the Abacus transaction, Paulson & Co., had actually bet against it. ACA was formally in charge of picking a bundle of residential mortgage-backed securities that formed Abacus 2007-AC1, a collateralized debt obligation.

Paulson, which allegedly had significant influence on what RMBS were put into Abacus, made about $1 billion when the CDO collapsed along with the housing market, according to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission <http://www.law360.com/agencies/securities-and-exchange-commission> . The commission claims Tourre, the alleged "deal captain" for the Abacus deal, defrauded investors by failing to disclose Paulson's intention to go short and also tricked ACA.

Schwartz, though, said she was not directly lied to and did not explicitly blame Tourre for her misperception.

"I believed Paulson would be the equity investor in that transaction," Schwartz said.

But when asked where she got that belief, Schwartz responded that her early knowledge of the structure of the deal came from a meeting with Gail Kreitman, a Goldman salesperson when the Abacus deal was being worked out.

Kreitman, another SEC witness, has already testified that she believed Paulson was long on Abacus. She said she did not know who in particular at Goldman gave her that impression.

Schwartz stressed under SEC questioning that, whatever the source of her belief about Paulson's role in the transaction, ACA was allowed to maintain its misperception. No one at Goldman corrected Schwartz after, in an email to Krietman, she referred to Paulson's "equity perspective" on Abacus, Schwartz testified.

She added that Paulson was referred to as "transaction sponsor" in an email from Tourre, though later conceded that term has no specific definition in the financial world.

Schwartz told jurors that Paulson was given the opportunity to put forward RMBS for inclusion in Abacus. ACA would not have gone forward with the deal had it known the fund was an intended short investor, Schwartz said.

"If somebody only wanted to go short that means it was designed to fail and that was not something we would have done," Schwartz said.

Schwartz's testimony on that point echoed <http://www.law360.com/articles/459149/short-on-goldman-deal-kept-quiet-tourre-jury-told> that of her former boss, ex-ACA CEO Alan Roseman, who said knowledge of Paulson's intention to short would have stopped the transaction in its place.

On cross-examination, Schwartz conceded that ACA had detailed standards for deciding what RMBS were worthy of inclusion in a portfolio and would not have changed those standards based on input from a prospective investor.

"What if Joe had recommended it," Tourre's lawyer John P. Coffey asked, referring to the courtroom deputy. "Would that have affected whether it met the standards of being on the approved list?"

"No," Schwartz said.

"What if it's a long investor," Coffey said.

"No," she said.

Schwartz testimony is scheduled to resume Wednesday morning. Tourre is slated to testify Wednesday afternoon, according to U.S. District Judge Katherine B. Forrest, who is presiding over the case.

Goldman in 2010 agreed to pay $550 million to settle an SEC suit related to Abacus.

Tourre's lawyers have argued that he was one of many Goldman employees who had a hand in Abacus and that disclosures to clients were looked over by Goldman professionals.

Tourre is represented by Pamela R. Chepiga and Andrew Rhys Davies of Allen <http://www.law360.com/firms/allen-overy> & Overy LLP and the Law Office of John P. Coffey.

The case is SEC v. Goldman Sachs & Co. et al., case number 1:10-cv-03229 <http://www.law360.com/cases/4d43f5345002d10782000062> , in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Re: State Street Corp.

Dear Mr. Hopkins:

We are pleased that Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher") has asked Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton") to represent it and pursue claims against its custodian, State Street Corporation ("State Street" or the "Company") in connection with State Street's foreign currency ("FX") pricing misconduct. This representation includes the commencement of litigation against the Company's board of directors for breach of fiduciary duties. We would like to confirm our arrangements with respect to this matter.

Labaton will be paid a fee of between 22.5% and 30% of any recovery or benefit conferred on the shareholder class, subject to court approval, plus expenses which will be advanced by Labaton. Expenses subject to reimbursement may include, among other things, expert witness fees, photocopying, computer research, long distance telephone charges, fax charges, court fees, travel expenses and delivery charges. Labaton will also advance costs of Arkansas Teacher relating directly to the litigation, such as for travel. Arkansas Teacher shall have no obligation to pay any fee or expense related to the action. Typically, such fees or reimbursement of expenses are paid by or on behalf of State Street. If nothing is recovered, Arkansas Teacher shall owe Labaton no fees or expense reimbursement.

Labaton
Sucharow

Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton may divide fees with other attorneys for serving as local counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting the prosecution of an action. The division of fees with other counsel is Labaton's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable upon a successful resolution of the litigation.

Labaton will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and decisions in the case. Labaton will provide periodic written reports on a regular basis and will notify Arkansas Teacher in advance regarding court appearances, depositions or other significant proceedings. Labaton will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, those decisions concerning settlement or fee proposals. Labaton agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to this matter and will provide significant pleadings to Arkansas Teacher in advance of submission to the court. Labaton agrees to meet with Arkansas Teacher, or its representatives, to discuss this matter, as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton with authority to execute documents and agreements relating directly to the litigation on its behalf and to collect and hold on its behalf monies paid to it by way of settlement. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with Labaton in its handling of the claims. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of Labaton and notify Labaton of any change of address.

It is hereby expressly recognized that Arkansas Teacher may at some future time choose to move to be lead plaintiff in an unrelated shareholder case and choose a firm other than Labaton as counsel. In such a case, Arkansas Teacher agrees that it is not a conflict if Labaton is retained by another investor also seeking to be lead plaintiff and hereby waives any possible conflict.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Your approval, please sign below and where indicated on the enclosed copy. Return one fully executed copy to us, keeping the second copy for your files.

Labaton Sucharow

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

Very truly yours,

Re: State Street Corporation

Dear Mr. Hopkins:

We are pleased that the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("Arkansas Teacher" or the "System") has agreed to retain Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton Sucharow" or the "Firm") in connection with the pursuit of claims against the System's custodian, State Street Corporation ("State Street"), as a result of State Street's misconduct as it relates to the pricing of foreign currency ("FX") transactions. The Firm's representation includes the commencement of class litigation against State Street and certain of its subsidiaries and/or officers or directors for, among other potential viable claims, breaches of fiduciary and other duties (the "Litigation"). The following confirms our arrangement with respect to the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will prosecute this Litigation on a wholly contingent fee basis. In addition, any fee request will be based upon customary and ordinary fees for class actions and our lodestar and submitted to the Court for its approval. Labaton Sucharow will be entitled to receive only such fees as the Court determines to award, plus expenses, which will be advanced by the Firm. Expenses will include, among other things, expert witness fees, photocopying, computer research, long distance telephone charges, fax charges, court fees, travel expenses, and delivery charges. Labaton Sucharow will also advance any Arkansas Teacher's out-of-pocket costs relating directly to the Litigation, e.g., travel costs.

Labaton Sucharow

Arkansas Teacher agrees that Labaton Sucharow may allocate fees to other attorneys who serve as local or liaison counsel, as referral fees, or for other services performed in connection with the Litigation. The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the Class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and, on a regular basis, will provide periodic written reports and will notify the System as to court appearances, depositions, and other significant proceedings in advance thereof. Labaton Sucharow will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, decisions concerning settlement and fee proposals. Labaton Sucharow agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to the Litigation and will provide the System with significant pleadings in advance of submission to the court. Labaton Sucharow agrees to meet with the representatives of Arkansas Teacher to discuss this matter, from time to time as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton Sucharow with authority to execute documents and agreements on its behalf relating directly to the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with the Firm in its handling of the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of the Firm, and will notify Labaton Sucharow of any change of address and other administration changes relevant to the Firm's representation.

In the event that the Court does not certify the class and the Litigation is prosecuted individually, on behalf of Arkansas Teacher, Labaton Sucharow's fee will be negotiated in good faith based upon customary and ordinary fees for individual actions and our lodestar (the "Negotiated Fee"). Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that the Negotiated Fee will be subject to approval by the Arkansas Teacher's Board.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Arkansas Teacher's approval, please sign below where indicated on the enclosed copy. Please return one fully executed copy to us, and retain the second copy for the System's files.

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

The division of attorneys' fees with other counsel may be determined upon a percentage basis or upon time spent in assisting with the prosecution of the Litigation. Any division of fees among counsel will be Labaton Sucharow's sole responsibility and will not increase the fees payable by Arkansas Teacher or the Class upon a successful resolution of the Litigation.

Labaton Sucharow will keep Arkansas Teacher timely apprised of significant developments and, on a regular basis, will provide periodic written reports and will notify the System as to court appearances, depositions, and other significant proceedings in advance thereof. Labaton Sucharow will consult with Arkansas Teacher to discuss legal issues and strategies and will seek prior approval regarding significant decisions; specifically, decisions concerning settlement and fee proposals. Labaton Sucharow agrees to provide Arkansas Teacher with copies of all pleadings pertaining to the Litigation and will provide the System with significant pleadings in advance of submission to the court. Labaton Sucharow agrees to meet with the representatives of Arkansas Teacher to discuss this matter, from time to time as required.

Arkansas Teacher hereby provides Labaton Sucharow with authority to execute documents and agreements on its behalf relating directly to the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher also agrees to cooperate fully with the Firm in its handling of the Litigation. Arkansas Teacher will make its representatives available for consultation and legal proceedings, promptly supply information and documents requested in a truthful and complete fashion, refrain from negotiating and settling the matter without the participation of the Firm, and will notify Labaton Sucharow of any change of address and other administration changes relevant to the Firm's representation.

In the event that the Court does not certify the class and the Litigation is prosecuted individually, on behalf of Arkansas Teacher, Labaton Sucharow's fee will be negotiated in good faith based upon customary and ordinary fees for individual actions and our lodestar (the "Negotiated Fee"). Labaton Sucharow acknowledges that the Negotiated Fee will be subject to approval by the Arkansas Teacher's Board.

If the terms of this engagement letter meet with Arkansas Teacher's approval, please sign below where indicated on the enclosed copy. Please return one fully executed copy to us, and retain the second copy for the System's files.

We are grateful for the opportunity to represent Arkansas Teacher in this matter, and look forward to the prospect of a favorable resolution.

Labaton Sucharow

Very truly yours,

Bob,

As you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this email regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be (4%, 5% etc.), will be paid off the top with the balance of the overall fee spilt between Lieff, Labaton and Thornton pursuant to our agreement.

The local asked that I copy him on this email so he will have confirmation of this agreement. When we spoke to him he was agreeable to this as well.

If the Arkansas and ERISA fees didn't come off the top, I guess the split would look like this:
&
Labaton& - 20%
LCHB – 20%
Thornton – 20%
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 26%
&
&
If the Arkansas and ERISA fees do come off the top, I guess the split looks like this:
&
ERISA – 9%
Arkansas – 5%
Labaton – 17.2%
LCHB – 17.2%
Thornton – 17.2%
Labaton/LCHB/Thornton – 34.4%
&
I'm not the math wizard, so please correct me if anyone comes up with different figures.

Just my own thinking on this but I think the deal with them would be that their percentage does come off the top (although what the top is is another question). I can't imagine how else it would be calculated since all the other fees are two customer counsel.

Dan sorry for that last email that I didn't spellcheck.&
Basically what I'm trying to say is I understand the basic agreement to be that after payment of all other counsel, our three firms shall each receive 20%, with the distribution of the balance of 40% to be determined later.
&
If that is the agreement you are referring to, I can confirm it. Let me know.&

Attached are my redlines to the preliminary approval order and final judgment.& These edits are consistent with the Court's January 2012 order concerning leadership structure.&
&
I'm emailing just you (and copying Bob) so as to try not to make a big thing over this, but I do think it's appropriate to memorialize what the fee allocation amongst customer class counsel is going to be (consistent with the understanding that the firms have been operating under for a couple years now) before we proceed much further.& & I think we'd be willing to support Lead Counsel having final authority over fee and expense allocations, etc., for purposes of the settlement stip, and thus present a united front against a perpetual troublemaker like McTigue—which should be in everyone's interest--provided we had some basic written comfort ourselves.& I don't think it's too early for that, given the interest in seeing the funds come in this year.

Thanks,
Dan

Thanks for sending this.& Sorry, I had misunderstood what you were saying on our call earlier today.
&
Two things:
&

1.& I do think the language you proposed for paragraph 12 works—but just change it to $10.9 million.
2. On paragraph 8(n)- the problem is the word "fees"—since the DOL has given us a hard number for ERISA fees—that won't be going up or down.& & So—question—can we get rid of the word "fees" in this paragraph—does it still work?
&
What do you think??

As we discuss how to distribute the fee between ourselves, and of course the ERISA attorneys, I have had discussion with Damon Chargois, the local attorney in this matter who has played an important role. Damon and his firm are willing to accept 5.5% of the total fee awarded by the Court in the State Street class case now pending before Judge Wolf. As you know, we had a prior deal with him that his fee would be "off the top". He understands that ERISA counsel is now in the same pool of money. He has agreed to come done to this number with a guarantee that it will be off the court awarded fee number. Please reply all if you agree. Given that it is off the total number their is no need to add the ERISA counsel to this email chain.

Thank you,

Garrett Bradley

We LCHB are in agreement with the 5.5 to Chargois. Now let's continue to resolve the split among us.

Need two letters with breakdown.
ERISA just gets sent to & ERISA counsel with 10% off top and then 1/3 each.
Class co-counsel gets one with:
ERISA 10% off top
Damon's percentage also off top
Then each of class co-counsel split with percentages agreed to.
&
In short, no reason for ERISA to see Damon's split.& They only need to see their 10% and then split 3 ways.
By the way I want to *Asterisk the 10% to ERISA with a footnote saying "Although our fee agreement with ERISA counsel only provides for a 9% allocation, & Class co-counsel have determined to increase that to 10% in light of the excellent work and contribution of ERISA counsel."

>> Eric, the call kept dropping, so I'm sending this email. In reviewing your text regarding HP, it appears that Labaton is trying to use the fee calculation done as a special consideration for Garrett's 20% additional interest in the Colonial Bank settlement (since both ATRS and clients via Garrett are in that case) as a precedent to change our fee agreement in ALL of the pension fund cases in which ATRS is a plaintiff. This is contrary to your express assurance to us that if we agreed to that accommodation in Colonial Bank, it would not be used as a precedent in cases where Garrett isn't involved. I acknowledge that we have discussed, in the past, treating certain cases where Labaton has multiple fee split obligations to referring firms differently on a case by case basis, but only after we both discuss and agree, with you giving me advanced notice of your intentions so that I can handle it with my partners on my end; not what you have done here in the HP case.

>>
>> I am very concerned that you guys are attempting to significantly, substantially and materially alter our agreement. Our deal with Labaton is straightforward-- we got you ATRS as a client (after considerable favors, political activity, money spent and time dedicated in Arkansas) and Labaton would use ATRS to seek lead counsel appointments in institutional investor fraud and misrepresentation cases. Where Labaton is successful in getting appointed lead counsel and obtains a settlement or judgment award, we split Labaton's attorney fee award 80/20. Period.

>>
>> As I said in my text to you regarding HP and your allocation, I understand the circumstances in this case and am ok with the fee split in this instance. We are not changing our fee split agreement for all of the other pension fund cases. You promised me that you would give me advanced notice of when you guys would seek a modification or accommodation on a given settlement and I want you to keep to that going forward.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Bank & Trust Co.,
No. 11-CV-10230 MLW

Dear Judge Wolf:

We are writing respectfully to advise the Court of inadvertent errors just discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees, which the Court granted following the fairness hearing held on November 2, 2016. See Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs ("Fee Order," ECF No. 111).

These mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media received after the hearing. The purpose of this letter is to disclose the error and provide a corrected lodestar and multiplier. We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the Court's ruling on attorneys' fees.

As the Court is aware, the submissions supporting Lead Counsel's fee application included individual declarations submitted on behalf of Labaton Sucharow, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser, reporting each firm's lodestar and number of hours billed. See ECF Nos. 104-15, at 7-9; 104-16, at 7-8; 104-17, at 8-9; see also ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

The professionals and paraprofessionals listed in these firms' respective lodestar reports include persons denoted as Staff Attorneys, or "SAs." SAs are bar-admitted, experienced attorneys hired on a temporary, though generally long-term, basis, and are paid by the hour. The SAs in this action were tasked principally with reviewing and analyzing the millions of pages of documents produced by State Street.

Seventeen (17) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.[1] Six (6) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[2] Both sets of overlap reflect the fact that as the litigation proceeded, efforts were made to share costs among counsel, such that financial responsibility for certain SAs located at Labaton Sucharow's and Lieff Cabraser's offices was borne by Thornton.

We have now determined that:

- The hours of the Alper SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly were also reported in the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.
- Certain hours reported by one of the Alper SAs (S. Dolben) in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly duplicated certain hours of another Alper SA (D. Fouchong).
- A portion of the hours of two of the Jordan SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report (C. Jordan and J. Zaul) mistakenly were also reported in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.
- The hours of two other Jordan SAs (A. Ten Eyck and R. Wintterle) mistakenly were included in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[3]

Because of these inadvertent errors, Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined lodestar of $41,323,895.75, and reported combined time of 86,113.7 hours, were overstated. See ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

---

[1] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are D. Alper, E. Bishop, N. Cameron, M. Daniels, S. Dolben, D. Fouchong, J. Grant, I. Herrick, D. Hong, C. Orji, D. Packman, A. Powell, A. Rosenbaum, J. Saad, B. Schulman, A. Vaidya, and R. Yamada (collectively, the "Alper SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7-8 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-15, at 7-8 (Labaton Sucharow lodestar report).

[2] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are C. Jordan, A. McClelland, A. Ten Eyck, V. Weiss, R. Wintterle, and J. Zaul (collectively, the "Jordan SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-17, at 8 (Lieff Cabraser lodestar report).

[3] The lodestar reports in the individual firm declarations submitted by ERISA counsel (ECF Nos. 104-18 to 104-23) are unaffected.

Labaton Sucharow

We have corrected these errors by removing the duplicative time. When a given SA had different hourly billing rates, we removed the time billed at the higher rate. Deducting the duplicative time from the $41.32 million reported combined lodestar results in a reduced combined lodestar of $37,265,241.25, and a reduced combined time of 76,790.8 hours.

Cross-checking the $37.27 million reduced combined lodestar against the $74,541,250 percentage-based fee awarded by the Court yields a lodestar multiplier of 2.00.[4] This is higher than the 1.8 multiplier we proffered in our submissions and during the hearing.

Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that a 2.00 multiplier remains reasonable and well-within the range of multipliers found reasonable for cross-check purposes in common fund cases within the First Circuit, and that such an enhancement of the reduced lodestar represented by the 24.85% fee awarded by the Court remains well-supported by the $300 million Settlement obtained and fees awarded in comparable cases. See Fee Brief, ECF No. 103-1, at 24-25.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that the Court should adhere to its ruling on attorneys' fees. See Fee Order ¶¶ 4, 6 (ECF No. 111)[5]; Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 36:1-2 (finding 1.8 multiplier "reasonable").

We sincerely apologize to the Court for the inadvertent errors in our written submissions and presentation during the hearing. We are available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

Respectfully submitted,

David J. Goldsmith

---

[4] The Court found it "appropriate in this case to use the percentage of the common fund approach in determining the amount of attorneys' fees that should be awarded." Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 22:25-23:2; see also id. at 35:12-13 ("I have used the percentage of common fund method. I've used the reasonable lodestar to check on that.").

[5] The Fee Order, at Paragraph 6(d), references the approximately 86,000 combined hours and $41.32 million combined lodestar reported in our written submissions.

SPOTLIGHT FOLLOW-UP

Critics hit law firms' bills after class-action lawsuits

By Andrea Estes | GLOBE STAFF DECEMBER 17, 2016

Attorneys at the Thornton Law Firm had just helped win a $300 million settlement from State Street Bank and Trust in a complicated lawsuit involving eight other law firms. Now, it was time to submit their legal fees to the judge so that they could get paid.

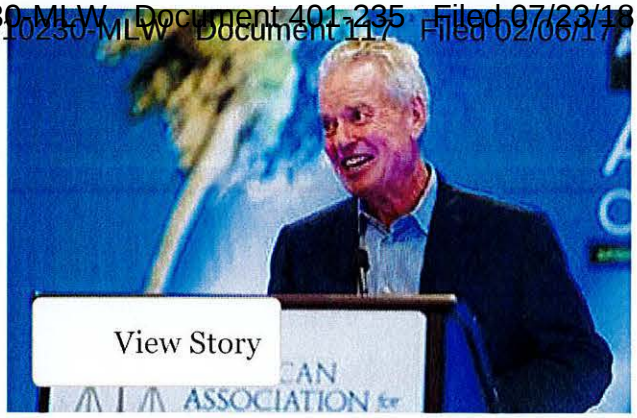
That's when the younger brother of Thornton managing partner Garrett Bradley emerged as a $500-an-hour "staff attorney" at the Boston firm.

Michael Bradley is a lawyer, but he normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court-appointed defender in Quincy District Court, records show. Yet, according to his older brother's sworn statement on Sept. 14, 2016, Michael Bradley's services were worth nearly 10 times that rate in the State Street case.

The elder Bradley said Michael worked 406.4 hours on the lawsuit, which centered on international currency trades, at a cost of $203,200.

Michael Bradley wasn't the only lawyerfor whose work Thornton claimed stratospheric — and questionable — legal costs in the filing to US District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf. Garrett Bradley listed 23 other staff attorneys, each with hourly rates of $425, who collectively accounted for $4 million in costs.

Comments



Law firm 'bonuses' tied to political donations

A small Boston law firm became a top funder of the national Democratic Party by paying lawyers "bonuses" for their political donations.

But one of the lawyers told the Globe he was actually paid just $30 an hour for his services — and not by Thornton. Like all the other staff attorneys on Garrett Bradley's list, except his brother, he worked for another firm in the case, which also counted his hours on its list of costs.

The sworn statement by Garrett Bradley — until recently an assistant House majority leader on Beacon Hill — raises troubling questions about the way Thornton and the other firms that brought the State Street lawsuit tallied legal costs to justify their enormous $75.8 million payday.

BRADLEY FOR SELECTMAN

Michael Bradley, Quincy attorney.

More than 60 percent of the costs that Thornton and two other law firms submitted to Judge Wolf came from the work of staff attorneys — all of them assigned hourly rates at least 10 times higher than the $25 to $40 an hour typical for these low-level positions — which involves document review.

A spokesman for the lead law firm in the case acknowledged that hourly rates the firms listed for staff attorneys were above the lawyers' actual wages, but argued that, essentially, everyone does it. Diana Pisciotta, spokeswoman for the Labaton Sucharow law firm in New York City, called it "commonly accepted practice throughout the legal community."

Critics of the way lawyers are paid in class-action lawsuits acknowledge that firms often dramatically mark up the rates of their lower-paid attorneys when seeking legal fees in court, but they say Thornton has pushed the practice to an extreme.

"This happens all the time," said Ted Frank, a lawyer at the Competitive Enterprise Institute in Washington and a leading national critic of legal fees in class-action lawsuits. "Lawyers pad their bills with overstated hourly work to make their fee request seem less of a windfall."

Lawyers in class-action lawsuits commonly receive a major share of any settlement because they are taking the risk that, if they lose, they will be paid nothing.

In fact, plaintiffs in the State Street case, many of them public pension funds, agreed in advance to set aside a quarter of any settlement for attorneys in their lawsuit alleging that the Boston-based bank routinely overcharged clients for their foreign currency exchanges, costing them more than $1 billion.

But, to actually collect the money, lawyers document their costs by filing affidavits under penalty of perjury.

The accounting must be based on actual time records, listing the names and hourly rates of the lawyers who worked on the case, and the total amount billed. The hourly rate is supposed to be what the lawyer would charge a paying client for similar work, including the lawyer's salary and a markup for office costs and other expenses.

That's where, critics of contingency fee lawsuits say, lawyers have a built-in opportunity to inflate their bills. And, for a variety of reasons, their bills often get little scrutiny.

"Imagine you're a lawyer and you're allowed to write your own check for your fee," explained Lester Brickman, a Yeshiva University law professor and author of "Lawyer Barons: What Their Contingency Fees Really Cost America."

"I could write $3,000, but I could add a zero and write $30,000 or add two zeroes and charge $300,000," Brickman said. "That's the honor system."

Thornton officials insist that they did nothing wrong and that the 23 staff attorneys who actually work for Labaton or a firm in San Francisco belonged on Thornton's list.

Under a cost-sharing agreement between the firms, Thornton paid part of their wages while they were reviewing millions of pages of documents in the State Street case. These lawyers just receive their usual salary and don't share in the proceeds from the settlement.

Garrett Bradley's brother, by contrast, will receive the $203,200 listed for him on the filing to Judge Wolf, according to Thornton spokesman Peter Mancusi, who noted that Michael Bradley, unlike the other staff attorneys, was not paid previously for his work.

Neither Michael Bradley nor a spokesman for Thornton would say what he did on the case, but the spokesman described him as an experienced prosecutor and fraud investigator.

Globe questions about the legal bills prompted the lead law firm in the State Street case to submit an extraordinary letter to Judge Wolf admitting that Thornton and

$4 million. The author, David Goldsmith of Labaton Sucharow, blamed the inflated bills on "inadvertent errors."

According to Goldsmith's Nov. 10 letter, Labaton and another firm, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, claimed the same staff attorneys that Thornton had listed on its legal expenses, double-counting the lawyers' cost. Goldsmith said the double-counted lawyers were employees of either Labaton or Lieff Cabraser, but their hours and costs should have been counted only once — by Thornton Law.

To resolve the issue, he said, the other firms dropped the lawyers and Thornton lowered the hourly rate it charged for numerous staff attorneys because it had assigned a higher rate than the other firms.

Despite the resulting drop in combined legal fees, Goldsmith urged Wolf not to reduce the lawyers' payment from the settlement. In class-action cases, lawyers commonly receive a payment that not only covers costs, but a financial reward for bringing a risky case that could have failed and paid nothing.

Goldsmith suggested that Wolf simply boost the reward to offset the reduced legal fees so that the firms still split the same $74 million, including $14 million for Thornton.

"We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the court's ruling on attorneys' fees," wrote Goldsmith, whose firm often joins forces with Thornton.

That may not be enough to satisfy Wolf, who has a reputation for closely questioning claims made in his court.

He called the legal fees "reasonable" at a Nov. 2 hearing and praised the plaintiffs' lawyers for taking on a "novel, risky case." But he approved the fees in part based on sworn statements that the lawyers now admit were in error. Wolf could reduce their payments, which were issued earlier this month, or hold a hearing to determine whether the lawyers knowingly submitted false information, a serious breach of professional ethics.

"The double-counting was likely the result of sloppiness, assuming that there would be no objectors' or court scrutiny of the fee request," said Frank, who has successfully challenged several settlements and fee requests in other cases, recouping more than $100 million for class members.

Frank said the problems with the legal fees go beyond the double-counting of attorneys. Other law firms contacted by the Globe said it's common to list an hourly rate for an attorney several times higher than the attorney's own pay, because the law firm has many other expenses aside from the lawyer him or herself. However, Thornton listed attorneys' rates at up to 14 times the lawyer's wages.

Frank said his analysis suggests that the $75.8 million award to the nine law firms was excessive — by at least $20 million and as much as $48.3 million — in part because the lawyers asked too much in the first place. He said that the lawyers' own documents show that, in similarly sized settlements, the legal fees average only 17.8 percent.

Thornton Law Firm, a personal injury firm that specializes in asbestos-related cases, is already the target of three investigations for its controversial campaign contribution program in which the law firm paid millions of dollars in "bonuses" to partners that offset their political contributions.

Federal prosecutors as well as two other agencies are investigating whether the bonuses were an illegal "straw donor" scheme to allow the firm to vastly exceed limits on campaign contributions. Thornton officials have insisted they did nothing wrong, because the bonuses were paid out of the lawyers' own equity in the firm.

Thornton's legal fees in the State Street case feed into a larger debate about how lawyers get paid in class-action lawsuits. Defenders of paying lawyers on contingency say the prospect of a high payoff encourages lawyers to take on exceptionally difficult cases, such as suing a wealthy bank like State Street.

However, Frank said there's little oversight of lawyers' fee claims. Defendants usually don't care what the plaintiffs' lawyers receive, because their costs don't change regardless of how much the plaintiffs' lawyers receive.

And individual plaintiffs typically get too little money to have a strong incentive to challenge legal fees. In the State Street case, the 1,300 plaintiffs would see increases in their individual payments of only about $20,000 apiece if the lawyers' fees were reduced by $20 million, Frank calculated. A plaintiff might have to spend that much or more to hire another lawyer to investigate.

None of the plaintiffs in the State Street case objected to their lawyers' request for legal fees. But neither the lawyers nor their clients apparently noticed that the exact same hours for nearly two dozen staff attorneys were claimed by more than one law firm.

"The mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media," explained Labaton partner Goldsmith, in his letter to Wolf.

Nor did they notice that Thornton consistently assigned a higher rate than the other firms for the same attorneys — often a difference of $90 an hour.

Labaton officials, in a prepared statement, said the affidavits supporting the fee request weren't as important as the percentage of the settlement fund the lawyers sought — just over 25 percent, once expenses are added.

"This fee award is reviewed by the Court for fairness . . . we believe the fees awarded are still fair," wrote Diana Pisciotta, a spokeswoman for Labaton.

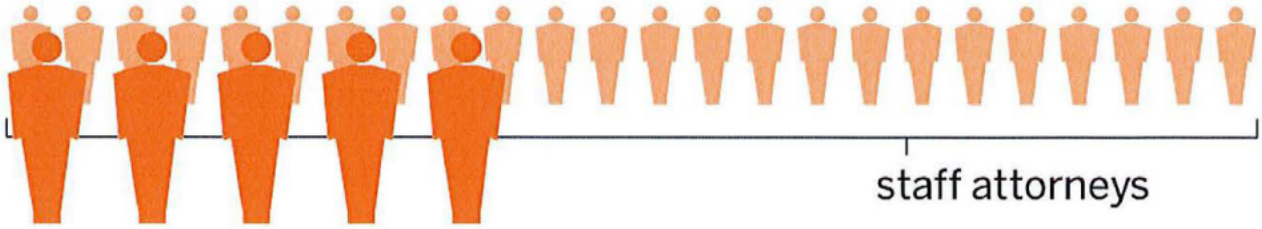
In addition to its fees from the State Street case, Thornton Law will receive a portion of the $20 million the Securities and Exchange Commission awarded a whistle-blower who alerted regulators to State Street's international currency practices.

How low-paid lawyers can rack up big legal bills

Law firms commonly hire junior-level "staff attorneys" to review documents for $25 to $40 an hour. Thornton Law Firm took advantage of these low-paid lawyers to make millions in its lawsuit against State Street Bank.

1 Thornton says it employed 24 staff attorneys in the State Street case.



2 In court documents, Thornton listed the hourly rates for the staff attorneys at $425 to $500, more than ten times their actual pay.

One attorney's actual pay	$30
Rate listed by Thornton	$425

3 Thornton said the staff attorneys worked more than 10,000 hours on the case at a total cost of $4.5 million, accounting for 60 percent of the total costs of the case.

4 A federal judge approved Thornton's bills, and gave them a bonus for taking on such a risky lawsuit.

5 But there was a problem: 23 of Thornton's 24 staff attorneys were also listed as lawyers for other law firms working on the same case. Thornton and the other law firms double-counted the work of the staff attorneys, inflating their combined bills by $4 million.

6 The lawyers admitted the "inadvertent errors" to the judge and asked him not to reduce their legal fees.

Dear Counsel:

As you are aware, on November 8, 2016, after Judge Wolf issued the Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs (the "Fee Order," ECF No. 111), counsel in the Arkansas action received an inquiry from the Boston Globe concerning certain of the individual firm lodestar reports supporting our motion for attorneys' fees.

In response, as you are also aware, we filed a detailed letter with the Court on November 10, 2016 ("Letter," ECF No. 116). The Letter disclosed certain inadvertent errors in these submissions, and provided a corrected combined time spent, corrected combined lodestar, and the resulting corrected multiplier. Because the fee was determined based on the percentage-of-fund method, and the overstatement of the lodestar resulted only in a modest increase in the multiplier cross-check, we argued that the fee was fully supportable under the Court's stated rationale and that no changes were required.

Further, the Letter offered our apology for the errors, and indicated that we were available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

The Fee Order and the Court's Order and Final Judgment (the "Judgment," ECF No. 110) become Final on December 2, 2016, and the Settlement will become Effective shortly thereafter, on December 7, 2016.[1] Because there were no objections to the Settlement or requested fees, no Class member has standing to appeal the Fee Order or Judgment.

As of today, the Court has not acted in response to the Letter. If the Court remains silent as of close of business on December 7, 2016, we will begin the process of withdrawing the approved fees, expenses, and service awards from the Lead Counsel Escrow Account for prompt distribution to your respective firms pursuant to our agreements.

It is possible, however, that the Court, on or after December 8, 2016, will respond adversely to the Letter and ultimately reduce the fee award. This could occur after the fees, expenses and service awards have been distributed to your respective firms (and to the other ERISA counsel).

Accordingly, before we distribute your share of the fees, expenses, and service awards, we will require an undertaking, evidenced by your signature below, confirming your agreement to refund to us within five (5) business days, for redeposit into the Lead Counsel Escrow Account, your pro rata share of any Court-ordered reduction of fees, expenses, and/or service awards.

Please sign below and return an executed copy to us. Thank you for your cooperation. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Very truly yours,

Lawrence A. Sucharow

[1] The time to appeal the Judgment and Fee Order expires on December 2, 2016 (a Friday), 30 days after entry. See Settlement Agmt. ¶ 1(z)(iii). After that, however, State Street has two (2) business days to make its formal settlement offer to the SEC before the Effective Date is reached. That brings the Effective Date to December 7.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

WOLF, D.J. February 6, 2017

I. SUMMARY

Questions have arisen with regard to the accuracy and reliability of information submitted by plaintiffs' counsel on which the court relied, among other things, in deciding that it was reasonable to award them almost $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees and more than $1,250,000 in expenses. The court now proposes to appoint former United States District Judge Gerald Rosen as a special master to investigate those issues and prepare a Report and Recommendation for the court concerning them. After providing plaintiffs' counsel an opportunity to object and be heard, the court would decide whether the original award of attorneys' fees remains reasonable, whether it should be reduced, and, if misconduct has been demonstrated, whether sanctions should be imposed.

The court is now, among other things, providing plaintiffs' counsel the opportunity to consent or to object to: the appointment of a special master generally; to the appointment of Judge Rosen particularly; and to the proposed terms of any appointment. A hearing to address the possible appointment of a special master will be held on March 7, 2017, at 10:00 a.m.

II. BACKGROUND

After a hearing on November 2, 2016, the court approved a $300,000,000 settlement in this class action in which it was alleged that defendant State Street Bank and Trust overcharged its customers in connection with certain foreign exchange transactions. It also employed the "common fund" method to determine the amount of attorneys' fees to award. See In re

Thirteen Appeals Arising Out of San Juan Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Litig., 56 F.3d 295, 305 (1st Cir. 1995). The court found to be reasonable an award to class counsel of $74,541,250 in attorneys' fees and $1,257,697.94 in expenses. That award represented about 25% of the common fund.

Like many judges, and consistent with this court's long practice, the court tested the reasonableness of the requested award, in part, by measuring it against what the nine law firms representing plaintiffs stated was their total "lodestar" of $41,323,895.75. See Nov. 2, 2016 Transcript ("Tr.") at 30-31, 34; see also Manual for Complex Litigation (Fourth) § 14.122 (2004) ("the lodestar is . . . useful as a cross-check on the percentage method" of determining reasonable attorneys' fees); Vizcaino v. Microsoft Corp., 290 F.3d 1043, 1050 (9th Cir. 2002) ("[T]he lodestar may provide a useful perspective on the reasonableness of a given percentage award."). Plaintiffs' counsel represented that the total requested award involved a multiplier of $1.8%, which they argued was reasonable in view of the risk they undertook in taking this case on a contingent fee. See Memorandum of Law in Support of Lead Counsel's Motion for an Award of Attorneys' Fees (Docket No. 103-1) at 24-25 ("Fees Award Memo").

A lodestar is properly calculated by multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation by a reasonable hourly rate. See Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 889 (1984). The Supreme Court has instructed that "[r]easonable fees . . . are to be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community." Id. at 895. "[T]he rate that private counsel actually charges for her services, while not conclusive, is a reliable indicum of market value." United States v. One Star Class Sloop Sailboat built in 1930 with hull no. 721, named "Flash II", 546 F.3d 26, 40 (1st Cir. 2008)(emphasis added).[1]

In their memorandum in support of the fee request, plaintiffs' counsel represented that to calculate the lodestar they had used "current rather than historical billing rates," for attorneys working on this case. Fees Award Memo. (Docket No. 103-1) at 24. Similarly, in the related affidavits filed on behalf of each law firm counsel stated that "the hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm . . . are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services . . . ." See, e.g., Declaration of Garett J. Bradley on behalf of Thornton Law Firm LLP ("Thornton") (Docket No. 104-16) at ¶4; Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow on behalf of Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton") (Docket No. 104-15) at ¶7. In view of the well-established jurisprudence and the representations of counsel, the court understood that in calculating the lodestar plaintiffs' law firms had used the rates they each customarily actually charged paying clients for the services of each attorney and were representing that those rates were comparable to those actually charged by other attorneys to their clients for similar services in their community.

On November 10, 2016, David J. Goldsmith of Labaton, on behalf of plaintiffs' counsel, filed the letter attached hereto as Exhibit A (Docket No. 116). Mr. Goldsmith noted that the court had used the lodestar calculated by counsel as a check concerning the reasonableness of the percentage of the common fund requested for attorneys' fees. Id. at 3, n.4. Counsel stated that as a result of an "inquiry from the media" "inadvertent errors [had] just been discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heiman & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees . . . ." Id. at 1. Counsel reported that the hours of certain staff attorneys, who were paid by the hour primarily to review documents, had been included in the lodestar reports of more than one firm. Id. at 1-2. He also stated that in some cases different billing rates had been attributed to particular staff attorneys by different firms. Id. at 3.

The double-counting resulted in inflating the number of hours worked by more than 9,300 and inflating the total lodestar by more than $4,000,000. Id. at 2-3. As a result, counsel stated a multiplier of 2, rather than 1.8, should have been used to test the reasonableness of the request for an award of $74,541,250 as attorneys' fees. Id. at 3. Counsel asserted that the award nevertheless remained reasonable and should not be reduced. Id. The letter did not indicate that the reported lodestar may not have been based on what plaintiffs' counsel, or others in their community, actually customarily charged paying clients for the type of work done by the staff attorneys in this case. Nor did the letter raise any question concerning the reliability of the representations concerning the number of hours each attorney reportedly worked on this case.

Such questions, among others, have now been raised by the December 17, 2016 Boston Globe article headlined "Critics hit law firms' bills after class action lawsuits" which is attached as Exhibit B. For example, the article reports that the staff attorneys involved in this case were typically paid $25-$40 an hour. In calculating the lodestar, it was represented to the court that the regular hourly billing rates for the staff attorneys were much higher -- for example, $425 for Thornton, see Docket No. 104-15 at 7-8 of 14, and $325-440 for Labaton, see Docket No. 104-15 at 7-8 of 52. A representative of Labaton reportedly confirmed the accuracy of the article in this respect. See Ex. B at 3.

The court now questions whether the hourly rates plaintiffs' counsel attributed to the staff attorneys in calculating the lodestar are, as represented, what these firms actually charged for their services or what other lawyers in their community charge paying clients for similar services. This concern is enhanced by the fact that different firms represented that they customarily charged clients for the same lawyer at different rates. In general, the court wonders whether paying clients customarily agreed to pay, and actually paid, an hourly rate for staff attorneys that is about ten times more than the hourly cost, before overhead, to the law firms representing plaintiffs.

In addition, the article raises questions concerning whether the hours reportedly worked by plaintiffs' attorneys were actually worked. Most prominently, the article accurately states that Michael Bradley, the brother of Thornton Managing Partner Garrett Bradley, was represented to the court as a staff attorney who worked 406.40 hours on this case. See Docket No. 104-15 at 7 of 14. Garrett Bradley also represented that the regular rate charged for his brother's services was $500 an hour. Id. However the article states, without reported contradiction, that "Michael Bradley . . . normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court appointed defendant in [the] Quincy [Massachusetts] District Court." Ex. B at 1. These apparent facts cause the court to be concerned about whether Michael Bradley actually worked more than 400 hours on this case and about whether Thornton actually regularly charged paying clients $500 an hour for his services.

The acknowledged double-counting of hours by staff attorneys and the matters discussed in the article raise broader questions about the accuracy and reliability of the representations plaintiffs' counsel made in their calculation of the lodestar generally. These questions -- which at this time are only questions -- also now cause the court to be concerned about whether the award of almost $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees was reasonable.

III. THE PROPOSED SPECIAL MASTER

In view of the foregoing, the court proposes to appoint a special master to investigate and report concerning the accuracy and reliability of the representations that were made in connection with the request for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, the reasonableness of the award of $74,541,250 in attorneys' fees and $1,257,697.94 in expenses, and any related issues that may emerge in the special master's investigation. In the final judgment entered on November 11, 2016, the court retained jurisdiction over, among other things, the determination of attorneys' fees and other matters related or ancillary to them. See Final Judgment (Docket No. 110) at 10. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(h)(4) states that in class actions "the court may refer issues related to the amount of the [attorneys' fee] award to a special master . . . as provided in Rule 54(d)(2)(D)." Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d)(2)(D) states that "the court may refer issues concerning the value of services to a special master under Rule 53 without regard to the limitations of Rule 53(a)(1)." As the 1993 Advisory Committee's Note explains, "the rule [] explicitly permits . . . the court to refer issues regarding the amount of a fee award in a particular case to a master under Rule 53. . . . This authorization eliminates any controversy as to whether such references are permitted . . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54 Advisory Committee's Note to 1993 Amendment.

The court proposes to exercise this authority to appoint Gerald Rosen, a recently retired United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan, to serve as special master; Judge Rosen's biography is attached as Exhibit C. The court proposes to authorize Judge Rosen to investigate all issues relating to the award of attorneys' fees in this case. If appointed, he would be empowered to, among other things, subpoena documents from plaintiffs' counsel and third parties, interview witnesses, and take testimony under oath. Judge Rosen would be authorized to communicate with the court ex parte on procedural matters, but encouraged to minimize ex parte communications, and to avoid them if possible. He would be expected to complete his duties within six-months of his appointment, if possible.

At the conclusion of his investigation, Judge Rosen would prepare for the court a Report and Recommendation concerning: (1) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made by plaintiffs' counsel in their request for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, including, but not limited to, whether counsel employed the correct legal standards and had proper factual bases for what they represented to be the lodestar for each firm and the total lodestar; (2) the reasonableness of the amount of attorneys' fees and expenses that were awarded, including whether they should be reduced; and (3) whether any misconduct occurred; and, if so, (4) whether it should be sanctioned, see, e.g., In re: Deepwater Horizon, 824 F.3d 571, 576-77 (5th Cir. 2016). The court would provide plaintiffs' counsel an opportunity to object to the Report and Recommendation and, if appropriate, conduct a hearing concerning any objections. See Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 53(f)(1). The special master's report would be reviewed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f)(3), (4) & (5).

Judge Rosen would be compensated at his regular hourly rate as a member of JAMS of $800 an hour or $11,000 a day.[2] Judge Rosen could be assisted by other attorneys and staff, who would be compensated at a reasonable rate approved in advance by the court. Judge Rosen and anyone assisting him would also be reimbursed for their reasonable expenses.

The fees and expenses of the Special Master would be paid, by the court, from the $74,541,250 awarded to plaintiffs' counsel.

[2] The court notes that plaintiffs' counsel reported billing rates of up to $1,000 an hour. See, e.g., Docket No. 104-17 at 8 of 135.

The court may order that up to $2,000,000 be returned to the Clerk of the District Court for this purpose.

As required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(b)(3)(A), Judge Rosen has submitted an affidavit disclosing whether there is any ground for his disqualification under 28 U.S.C. §455, which is attached as Exhibit D. The only matter disclosed relates to Elizabeth Cabraser, a partner in one of plaintiffs' law firms. Ms. Cabraser reportedly worked 29.50 hours on this case. Judge Rosen reports that about four years ago he asked Ms. Cabraser to become, with him and others, a co-author of the book Federal Employment Litigation. Since then they have had annually, independently submitted updates to different chapters of the book. They, and the other authors, share royalties from the book. In addition, Judge Rosen and Ms. Cabraser have participated together on panels on class actions. Although at least one lawyer from plaintiffs' law firms has appeared before Judge Rosen, Judge Rosen has had no other association with any of them.

Judge Rosen represents that he has no bias or prejudice concerning anyone involved in this matter, or any personal knowledge of potentially disputed facts concerning it. Therefore, it does not appear that his disqualification would be required by 28 U.S.C. §455(b)(1). It also appears to Judge Rosen and the court that his relationship with Ms. Cabraser could not cause a reasonable person to question his impartiality. Therefore, it appears that his recusal would not be justified pursuant to §455(a). See United States v. Sampson, 12 F. Supp. 3d 203, 205-08 (D. Mass. 2014) (Wolf, D.J.) (discussing standards for recusal under §455(a)).[3]

However, the court is providing plaintiffs' counsel the opportunity to consent to the appointment of Judge Rosen as special master on the terms discussed in this Memorandum, register any objections, and/or comment on the proposal. Among other things, plaintiffs' counsel may propose alternative eligible candidates for possible appointment. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(1).[4]

IV. ORDER

In view of the foregoing it is hereby ORDERED that:

1. Plaintiffs' counsel shall file by February 20, 2017, a memorandum addressing, among other things deemed relevant: whether they object to the appointment of a special master; whether they object to the selection of Judge Rosen if a special master is to

[3] Ideally, the court would propose a special master who presents no question of possible recusal. However, the court has found in exploring potential candidates to serve as special master that lawyers in larger law firms are unavailable because their firms have adversarial relationships with plaintiffs' counsel in other cases. Therefore, the court concluded that proposing a recently retired judge would be most feasible and appropriate.

[4] Any proposed alternative candidate must file an affidavit demonstrating that he or she does not have any conflict of interest and is not subject to disqualification pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455.

be appointed; whether they believe Judge Rosen's disqualification would be required under 28 U.S.C. § 455(a) or (b) and, in any event, whether they waive any such ground for disqualification; whether they object to any of the terms of the appointment and powers of a special master discussed in this Memorandum; and whether they propose the appointment of someone other than Judge Rosen as special master. Counsel shall provide an explanation, with supporting authority, for any objection or comment.

2. A hearing to address the proposed appointment of a special master generally, and Judge Rosen particularly, shall be held on March 7, 2017, at 10:00 a.m. Each of plaintiffs' counsel who submitted an affidavit in support of the request for an award of attorney's fees, see Docket Nos. 104-15 - 104-24, shall attend.[5] Michael Bradley shall also attend. In addition the representative of each lead plaintiff who supervised this litigation (not a lawyer) shall attend.[6]

[5] Such counsel are: Lawrence A. Sucharow of Labaton; Garrett J. Bradley of Thornton; Daniel P. Chiplock of Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein, LLP; Lynn Sarko of Keller Rohrback LLP; J. Brian McTigue of McTigue Law; Carl S. Kravtiz of Zuckerman Spaeder LLP; Catherine M. Campbell of Feinberg, Campbell & Zack, PC; Jonathan G. Axelrod of Beins, Axelrod, PC; and Kimberly Keevers Palmer of Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, LLC.

[6] Such individuals are: George Hopkins on behalf of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System; Arnold Henriquez; Michael T. Cohn; William R. Taylor; Richard A. Sutherland; James Pehoushek-

Judge Rosen shall also be present and may be questioned. Regardless of whether Judge Rosen is appointed special master, the court will order that he receive reasonable compensation for his time and expenses from the fee award previously made to plaintiffs' counsel.

Re: Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Bank & Trust Co.,
No. 11-CV-10230 MLW

Dear Judge Wolf:

We are writing respectfully to advise the Court of inadvertent errors just discovered in certain written submissions from Labaton Sucharow LLP, Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP supporting Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees, which the Court granted following the fairness hearing held on November 2, 2016. See Order Awarding Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs ("Fee Order," ECF No. 111).

These mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media received after the hearing. The purpose of this letter is to disclose the error and provide a corrected lodestar and multiplier. We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the Court's ruling on attorneys' fees.

As the Court is aware, the submissions supporting Lead Counsel's fee application included individual declarations submitted on behalf of Labaton Sucharow, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser, reporting each firm's lodestar and number of hours billed. See ECF Nos. 104-15, at 7-9; 104-16, at 7-8; 104-17, at 8-9; see also ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

The professionals and paraprofessionals listed in these firms' respective lodestar reports include persons denoted as Staff Attorneys, or "SAs." SAs are bar-admitted, experienced attorneys hired on a temporary, though generally long-term, basis, and are paid by the hour. The SAs in this action were tasked principally with reviewing and analyzing the millions of pages of documents produced by State Street.

Seventeen (17) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.[1] Six (6) of the SAs listed on the Thornton lodestar report are also listed as SAs on the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[2] Both sets of overlap reflect the fact that as the litigation proceeded, efforts were made to share costs among counsel, such that financial responsibility for certain SAs located at Labaton Sucharow's and Lieff Cabraser's offices was borne by Thornton.

We have now determined that:

- The hours of the Alper SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly were also reported in the Labaton Sucharow lodestar report.
- Certain hours reported by one of the Alper SAs (S. Dolben) in the Thornton lodestar report mistakenly duplicated certain hours of another Alper SA (D. Fouchong).
- A portion of the hours of two of the Jordan SAs reported in the Thornton lodestar report (C. Jordan and J. Zaul) mistakenly were also reported in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.
- The hours of two other Jordan SAs (A. Ten Eyck and R. Wintterle) mistakenly were included in the Lieff Cabraser lodestar report.[3]

Because of these inadvertent errors, Plaintiffs' Counsel's reported combined lodestar of $41,323,895.75, and reported combined time of 86,113.7 hours, were overstated. See ECF No. 104-24 (Master Chart).

---

[1] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are D. Alper, E. Bishop, N. Cameron, M. Daniels, S. Dolben, D. Fouchong, J. Grant, I. Herrick, D. Hong, C. Orji, D. Packman, A. Powell, A. Rosenbaum, J. Saad, B. Schulman, A. Vaidya, and R. Yamada (collectively, the "Alper SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7-8 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-15, at 7-8 (Labaton Sucharow lodestar report).

[2] These SAs, listed alphabetically, are C. Jordan, A. McClelland, A. Ten Eyck, V. Weiss, R. Wintterle, and J. Zaul (collectively, the "Jordan SAs"). Compare ECF No. 104-16, at 7 (Thornton lodestar report) with ECF No. 104-17, at 8 (Lieff Cabraser lodestar report).

[3] The lodestar reports in the individual firm declarations submitted by ERISA counsel (ECF Nos. 104-18 to 104-23) are unaffected.

Labaton Sucharow

We have corrected these errors by removing the duplicative time. When a given SA had different hourly billing rates, we removed the time billed at the higher rate. Deducting the duplicative time from the $41.32 million reported combined lodestar results in a reduced combined lodestar of $37,265,241.25, and a reduced combined time of 76,790.8 hours.

Cross-checking the $37.27 million reduced combined lodestar against the $74,541,250 percentage-based fee awarded by the Court yields a lodestar multiplier of 2.00.[4] This is higher than the 1.8 multiplier we proffered in our submissions and during the hearing.

Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that a 2.00 multiplier remains reasonable and well-within the range of multipliers found reasonable for cross-check purposes in common fund cases within the First Circuit, and that such an enhancement of the reduced lodestar represented by the 24.85% fee awarded by the Court remains well-supported by the $300 million Settlement obtained and fees awarded in comparable cases. See Fee Brief, ECF No. 103-1, at 24-25.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' counsel respectfully submits that the Court should adhere to its ruling on attorneys' fees. See Fee Order ¶¶ 4, 6 (ECF No. 111)[5]; Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 36:1-2 (finding 1.8 multiplier "reasonable").

We sincerely apologize to the Court for the inadvertent errors in our written submissions and presentation during the hearing. We are available to respond to any questions or concerns the Court may have.

Respectfully submitted,

David J. Goldsmith

[4] The Court found it "appropriate in this case to use the percentage of the common fund approach in determining the amount of attorneys' fees that should be awarded." Nov. 2, 2016 Hrg. Tr. at 22:25-23:2; see also id. at 35:12-13 ("I have used the percentage of common fund method. I've used the reasonable lodestar to check on that.").

[5] The Fee Order, at Paragraph 6(d), references the approximately 86,000 combined hours and $41.32 million combined lodestar reported in our written submissions.

SPOTLIGHT FOLLOW-UP

Critics hit law firms' bills after class-action lawsuits

By Andrea Estes | GLOBE STAFF DECEMBER 17, 2016

Attorneys at the Thornton Law Firm had just helped win a $300 million settlement from State Street Bank and Trust in a complicated lawsuit involving eight other law firms. Now, it was time to submit their legal fees to the judge so that they could get paid.

That's when the younger brother of Thornton managing partner Garrett Bradley emerged as a $500-an-hour "staff attorney" at the Boston firm.

Michael Bradley is a lawyer, but he normally works alone, often making $53 an hour as a court-appointed defender in Quincy District Court, records show. Yet, according to his older brother's sworn statement on Sept. 14, 2016, Michael Bradley's services were worth nearly 10 times that rate in the State Street case.

The elder Bradley said Michael worked 406.4 hours on the lawsuit, which centered on international currency trades, at a cost of $203,200.

Michael Bradley wasn't the only lawyerfor whose work Thornton claimed stratospheric — and questionable — legal costs in the filing to US District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf. Garrett Bradley listed 23 other staff attorneys, each with hourly rates of $425, who collectively accounted for $4 million in costs.

Comments

Law firm 'bonuses' tied to political donations

A small Boston law firm became a top funder of the national Democratic Party by paying lawyers "bonuses" for their political donations.

Candidates returning donations from Thornton Law Firm attorneys

But one of the lawyers told the Globe he was actually paid just $30 an hour for his services — and not by Thornton. Like all the other staff attorneys on Garrett Bradley's list, except his brother, he worked for another firm in the case, which also counted his hours on its list of costs.

The sworn statement by Garrett Bradley — until recently an assistant House majority leader on Beacon Hill — raises troubling questions about the way Thornton and the other firms that brought the State Street lawsuit tallied legal costs to justify their enormous $75.8 million payday.

BRADLEY FOR SELECTMAN

Michael Bradley, Quincy attorney.

More than 60 percent of the costs that Thornton and two other law firms submitted to Judge Wolf came from the work of staff attorneys — all of them assigned hourly rates at least 10 times higher than the $25 to $40 an hour typical for these low-level positions — which involves document review.

A spokesman for the lead law firm in the case acknowledged that hourly rates the firms listed for staff attorneys were above the lawyers' actual wages, but argued that, essentially, everyone does it. Diana Pisciotta, spokeswoman for the Labaton Sucharow law firm in New York City, called it "commonly accepted practice throughout the legal community."

Critics of the way lawyers are paid in class-action lawsuits acknowledge that firms often dramatically mark up the rates of their lower-paid attorneys when seeking legal fees in court, but they say Thornton has pushed the practice to an extreme.

"This happens all the time," said Ted Frank, a lawyer at the Competitive Enterprise Institute in Washington and a leading national critic of legal fees in class-action lawsuits. "Lawyers pad their bills with overstated hourly work to make their fee request seem less of a windfall."

Lawyers in class-action lawsuits commonly receive a major share of any settlement because they are taking the risk that, if they lose, they will be paid nothing.

In fact, plaintiffs in the State Street case, many of them public pension funds, agreed in advance to set aside a quarter of any settlement for attorneys in their lawsuit alleging that the Boston-based bank routinely overcharged clients for their foreign currency exchanges, costing them more than $1 billion.

But, to actually collect the money, lawyers document their costs by filing affidavits under penalty of perjury.

The accounting must be based on actual time records, listing the names and hourly rates of the lawyers who worked on the case, and the total amount billed. The hourly rate is supposed to be what the lawyer would charge a paying client for similar work, including the lawyer's salary and a markup for office costs and other expenses.

That's where, critics of contingency fee lawsuits say, lawyers have a built-in opportunity to inflate their bills. And, for a variety of reasons, their bills often get little scrutiny.

"Imagine you're a lawyer and you're allowed to write your own check for your fee," explained Lester Brickman, a Yeshiva University law professor and author of "Lawyer Barons: What Their Contingency Fees Really Cost America."

"I could write $3,000, but I could add a zero and write $30,000 or add two zeroes and charge $300,000," Brickman said. "That's the honor system."

Thornton officials insist that they did nothing wrong and that the 23 staff attorneys who actually work for Labaton or a firm in San Francisco belonged on Thornton's list.

Under a cost-sharing agreement between the firms, Thornton paid part of their wages while they were reviewing millions of pages of documents in the State Street case. These lawyers just receive their usual salary and don't share in the proceeds from the settlement.

Garrett Bradley's brother, by contrast, will receive the $203,200 listed for him on the filing to Judge Wolf, according to Thornton spokesman Peter Mancusi, who noted that Michael Bradley, unlike the other staff attorneys, was not paid previously for his work.

Neither Michael Bradley nor a spokesman for Thornton would say what he did on the case, but the spokesman described him as an experienced prosecutor and fraud investigator.

Globe questions about the legal bills prompted the lead law firm in the State Street case to submit an extraordinary letter to Judge Wolf admitting that Thornton and

$4 million. The author, David Goldsmith of Labaton Sucharow, blamed the inflated bills on “inadvertent errors.”

According to Goldsmith’s Nov. 10 letter, Labaton and another firm, Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, claimed the same staff attorneys that Thornton had listed on its legal expenses, double-counting the lawyers’ cost. Goldsmith said the double-counted lawyers were employees of either Labaton or Lieff Cabraser, but their hours and costs should have been counted only once — by Thornton Law.

To resolve the issue, he said, the other firms dropped the lawyers and Thornton lowered the hourly rate it charged for numerous staff attorneys because it had assigned a higher rate than the other firms.

Despite the resulting drop in combined legal fees, Goldsmith urged Wolf not to reduce the lawyers’ payment from the settlement. In class-action cases, lawyers commonly receive a payment that not only covers costs, but a financial reward for bringing a risky case that could have failed and paid nothing.

Goldsmith suggested that Wolf simply boost the reward to offset the reduced legal fees so that the firms still split the same $74 million, including $14 million for Thornton.

“We respectfully submit that the error should have no impact on the court’s ruling on attorneys’ fees,” wrote Goldsmith, whose firm often joins forces with Thornton.

That may not be enough to satisfy Wolf, who has a reputation for closely questioning claims made in his court.

He called the legal fees “reasonable” at a Nov. 2 hearing and praised the plaintiffs’ lawyers for taking on a “novel, risky case.” But he approved the fees in part based on sworn statements that the lawyers now admit were in error. Wolf could reduce their payments, which were issued earlier this month, or hold a hearing to determine whether the lawyers knowingly submitted false information, a serious breach of professional ethics.

Comments

“The double-counting was likely the result of sloppiness, assuming that there would be no objectors’ or court scrutiny of the fee request,” said Frank, who has successfully challenged several settlements and fee requests in other cases, recouping more than $100 million for class members.

Frank said the problems with the legal fees go beyond the double-counting of attorneys. Other law firms contacted by the Globe said it’s common to list an hourly rate for an attorney several times higher than the attorney’s own pay, because the law firm has many other expenses aside from the lawyer him or herself. However, Thornton listed attorneys’ rates at up to 14 times the lawyer’s wages.

Frank said his analysis suggests that the $75.8 million award to the nine law firms was excessive — by at least $20 million and as much as $48.3 million — in part because the lawyers asked too much in the first place. He said that the lawyers’ own documents show that, in similarly sized settlements, the legal fees average only 17.8 percent.

Thornton Law Firm, a personal injury firm that specializes in asbestos-related cases, is already the target of three investigations for its controversial campaign contribution program in which the law firm paid millions of dollars in “bonuses” to partners that offset their political contributions.

Federal prosecutors as well as two other agencies are investigating whether the bonuses were an illegal “straw donor” scheme to allow the firm to vastly exceed limits on campaign contributions. Thornton officials have insisted they did nothing wrong, because the bonuses were paid out of the lawyers’ own equity in the firm.

Thornton's legal fees in the State Street case feed into a larger debate about how lawyers get paid in class-action lawsuits. Defenders of paying lawyers on contingency say the prospect of a high payoff encourages lawyers to take on exceptionally difficult cases, such as suing a wealthy bank like State Street.

However, Frank said there's little oversight of lawyers' fee claims. Defendants usually don't care what the plaintiffs' lawyers receive, because their costs don't change regardless of how much the plaintiffs' lawyers receive.

And individual plaintiffs typically get too little money to have a strong incentive to challenge legal fees. In the State Street case, the 1,300 plaintiffs would see increases in their individual payments of only about $20,000 apiece if the lawyers' fees were reduced by $20 million, Frank calculated. A plaintiff might have to spend that much or more to hire another lawyer to investigate.

None of the plaintiffs in the State Street case objected to their lawyers' request for legal fees. But neither the lawyers nor their clients apparently noticed that the exact same hours for nearly two dozen staff attorneys were claimed by more than one law firm.

"The mistakes came to our attention during internal reviews that were conducted in response to an inquiry from the media," explained Labaton partner Goldsmith, in his letter to Wolf.

Nor did they notice that Thornton consistently assigned a higher rate than the other firms for the same attorneys — often a difference of $90 an hour.

Labaton officials, in a prepared statement, said the affidavits supporting the fee request weren't as important as the percentage of the settlement fund the lawyers sought — just over 25 percent, once expenses are added.

"This fee award is reviewed by the Court for fairness . . . we believe the fees awarded are still fair," wrote Diana Pisciotta, a spokeswoman for Labaton.

In addition to its fees from the State Street case, Thornton Law will receive a portion of the $20 million the Securities and Exchange Commission awarded a whistle-blower who alerted regulators to State Street's international currency practices.

How low-paid lawyers helped Thornton double legal bills

Law firms commonly hire junior-level "staff attorneys" to review documents for $25 to $40 an hour. Thornton Law Firm took advantage of these low-paid lawyers to make millions in its lawsuit against State Street Bank.

1 Thornton says it employed 24 staff attorneys in the State Street case.

2 In court documents, Thornton listed the hourly rates for the staff attorneys at $425 to $500, more than ten times their actual pay.

One attorney's actual pay	$30
Rate listed by Thornton	$425

3 Thornton said the staff attorneys worked more than 10,000 hours on the case at a total cost of $4.5 million, accounting for 60 percent of the total costs of the case.

4 A federal judge approved Thornton's bills, and gave them a bonus for taking on such a risky lawsuit.

5 But there was a problem: 23 of Thornton's 24 staff attorneys were also listed as lawyers for other law firms working on the same case. Thornton and the other law firms double-counted the work of the staff attorneys, inflating their combined bills by $4 million.

6 The lawyers admitted the "inadvertent errors" to the judge and asked him not to reduce their legal fees.

AFFIDAVIT OF GERALD E. ROSEN

Gerald E. Rosen, being duly sworn, deposes and says

1. That I make this affidavit based upon personal knowledge.
2. That I served as a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan from March 14, 1990 through January 31, 2017.
3. That I have been asked by United States District Judge Mark L. Wolf about my availability and ability to serve as the Special Master in a matter involving the application for attorney fees and costs to the Court in the case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System on behalf of itself and all others similarly situated v. State Street Bank and Trust Company, C.A. No. 11-10230 – MLW.
4. That the law firms submitting applications for fees and costs in this matter are: Labaton Sucharow LLP, The Thornton Law Firm LLP, Leiff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein LLP, Keller Rohrback LLP, McTigue Law LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, Richardson Patrick Westbrook & Brickman LLC, Beins Axelrod PC, and Feinberg Campbell & Zack PC.
5. That pursuant to FRCivP 53(b)(3)(A) and 28 USC §455, a potential Special Master must disclose any possible conflicts or other grounds for disqualification.
6. That I do not believe there are any grounds for my disqualification to serve as a Special Master under 28 USC §455(b) and that no reasonable person would have grounds to question my impartiality under 28 USC §455(a).
7. That although there are no grounds for disqualification, I do wish to disclose a relationship with one of the named partners of one of the involved law firms, Leiff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein.
8. That I have known Elizabeth Cabraser of that firm for approximately four years and first met her when she was recommended to me as a potential new co-author of a then-existing book on which I am a co-author, Federal Employment Litigation, published by The Rutter Group, a subsidiary of Thomson Reuters.
9. That after I met with Ms. Cabraser and discussed the book, I asked her to join as a co-author. She agreed, and joined the book in 2013. The other current co-authors include Judge Amy St. Eve (ND IL), Judge Marvin Aspen (ND IL), and attorney Thomas Schuck of the Taft Stettinius & Hollister law firm.
10. That each of the five co-authors share an approximate 16% royalty from the publisher, paid semi-annually. The royalty income of one co-author is independent of that of the other co-authors.
11. That the co-authors update the book annually and divide the update work by allocating chapters with each co-author updating two or three chapters. The updates are submitted independently to the publisher, who edits the updates for incorporation into the book.
12. That beyond this, over the past four years I have attended continuing legal education programs with Ms. Cabraser and have spoken with her on two or three panels unrelated to our book.
13. That I have no other relationship with Ms. Cabraser or any other member of her firm.

14. That I have no relationships with any of the other law firms or lawyers in the case. However, it bears mention that one firm, Keller Rohrback LLP, concluded by settlement an antitrust class action before me in 2015-2016, and one of the partners of that firm, Lynn Sarko, was one of the lead lawyers on that case. Other than this, lawyers from the other firms may have appeared before me in cases over my judicial career, but I have no specific recollection of such lawyers.
15. That this affidavit is made under pain and penalty of perjury.

Further affiant sayeth not.

WOLF, D.J. March 8, 2017

In a February 6, 2017 Order the court gave notice that it was considering appointing, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53, Retired United States District Judge Gerald Rosen as a Master to investigate and submit a Report and Recommendation concerning issues that have emerged concerning the court's award of more than $75,000,000 in attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards in this class action. The parties[1] responded to that Order. A hearing concerning this matter was held on March 7, 2017.

For the reasons described in detail at the March 7, 2017 hearing, it is hereby ORDERED that pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53:

1. Judge Rosen is appointed as Master (the "Master").[2] The Master may retain any firm, organization, or individual he deems necessary to assist him in the performance of his duties.

2. The Master shall investigate and prepare a Report and Recommendation concerning all issues relating to the attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards previously made in this case. The Report and Recommendation shall address, at least: (a) the

---

[1] In this Order, the nine law firms that served as class counsel and the named plaintiffs are collectively referred to as the "parties."

[2] After the disclosure required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(a)(2)&(b)(3) and discussion at the hearing, each of the law firms representing members of the class agreed that Judge Rosen's disqualification is not required by 28 U.S.C. §455(a) or (b). The McTigue Law firm withdrew its earlier objection under §455(a). Each firm also waived any possible objection under §455(a) as permitted by §455(e). The court also found that Judge Rosen's disqualification is not required by §455.

accuracy and reliability of the representations made by the parties in their requests for awards of attorneys' fees and expenses, including but not limited to whether counsel employed the correct legal standards and had a proper factual basis for what was represented to be the lodestar for each firm; (b) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made in the November 10, 2016 letter from David Goldsmith, Esq. of Labaton Sucharow, LLP to the court (Docket No. 116); (c) the accuracy and reliability of the representations made by the parties requesting service awards; (d) the reasonableness of the amounts of attorneys' fees, expenses, and service awards previously ordered, and whether any or all of them should be reduced; (e) whether any misconduct occurred in connection with such awards; and, if so, (f) whether it should be sanctioned, see e.g. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3)&(c); Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Rule of Professional Conduct 3.3(a)(1)&(3).

3. The Master shall proceed with all reasonable diligence, and either submit his Report and Recommendation by October 10, 2017 or request an extension of time to do so. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2).

4. The Master shall have the authority described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(c)(1) and (2). Therefore, among other things, the Master shall have the authority to compel, take, and record evidence. This includes the authority to: require the production of documents and other records from the parties and third-parties; require responses to interrogatories, and other requests for information and admissions; conduct depositions; and conduct hearings.

5. The Master may communicate ex parte with any party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

6. The Master may communicate ex parte with the court on administrative matters. The Master may also, ex parte, request permission to communicate with the court ex parte on particular substantive matters. Requests for ex parte communications with the court on substantive matters should be minimized.[3] See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(B).

[3] In the February 6, 2017 Memorandum and Order the court proposed to permit the Master to communicate ex parte with the court only concerning administrative matters. At the March 7, 2017 hearing the court stated it might allow the Master to request an opportunity for an ex parte communication on a substantive matter. The court subsequently reviewed several orders appointing masters which all authorize ex parte communications with the court on any matter. The court now finds that substantive communications should not be completely prohibited in this case because there may be some unforeseen need for them.

As the February 6, 2017 Order did not provide notice that the court may allow the Master to communicate with it ex parte regarding substantive matters, and the court did not state at the March 7, 2017 hearing that it would do so, the parties may, by March 16, 2017, object to the granting of this authority and explain the basis for their objection. If any objection is made, the court will consider this issue further.

7. The Master may also request that a submission to the court which is being served on one or more parties be made under seal.

8. Any order issued by the Master shall be filed for entry on the docket of this case and served on each party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(d). However, the Master may request that an order be filed under seal and/or not be served on any party or all parties.

9. Any objection to an order issued by the Master shall be filed within 10 days of service. Any responses shall be filed within 10 days of the service of such objection. Any such objection will be decided in the manner described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f).

10. The Master's Report and Recommendation shall be served promptly on each party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(e).

11. The Master shall make and preserve a complete record of the evidence concerning his recommended findings of fact and any conclusions of law. Such record shall be filed with the Master's Report and Recommendation. The Master may move to have the record filed under seal. If any such motion is made and granted, the court may require that a redacted version be filed for the public record. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(2)(C)&(D).

12. Action on the Master's Report and Recommendation will be taken in the manner described in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f).

13. Labaton Sucharow, LLP, shall, by March 14, 2017, pay to the Clerk of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts $2,000,000.[4] This payment shall be made only from the award of attorneys' fees and expenses distributed to Labaton Sucharow, LLP, the Thornton Law Firm LLP, and Lieff, Cabrasser, Heimann & Bernstein LLP. See Fed R. Civ. P. 53(g)(3). This payment is without prejudice to any right such firms may have to seek contribution from other firms which received some of the attorneys' fees awarded on November 2, 2016 if that award is reduced in the future. It is the court's intention, however, that this $2,000,000 come solely from the funds distributed to the foregoing three firms that generated the issue that prompted the appointment of the Master.

14. From the fund established pursuant to paragraph 13 hereinabove, the court will pay the reasonable fees and the expenses of the Master and any firm, organization, or individual he may retain to assist him. The court understands that the Master will charge $800 per hour for his services and finds that rate to be reasonable.

[4] If the expense of the Master's work exceeds $2,000,000, the court will order additional payments.

The Master shall submit monthly, ex parte and under seal, a request for payment with a description of the hours worked and the services rendered, as well as supporting documentation for any expenses to be reimbursed.

The court intends to disclose the cost of the Master at the conclusion of these proceedings.

15. As the Master will be exercising judicial authority and performing judicial functions, the Master and those assisting him shall have the immunities of judicial officers of the United States. See Nystedt v. Nigro, 700 F.3d 25, 30 (1st Cir. 2012).

16. This Order may be modified upon request of the Master or a party, or by the court sua sponte, after providing notice and an opportunity to be heard. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b)(4).

I spoke with David. Do you think we will have time to process his allocation once he wants it, or will it be a rush? If it will be a rush, then I want to tell accounting to bring the money into our IOLA. Otherwise, it can stay in the settlement fund, but it will take some hoops to get it out (Keller AND Larry signature).

I agree. They will threaten their own fee app which I say would invalidate the agreement we have.

That said, an agreement on allocation will not happen until the fees are actually in and need to be distributed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ETHICAL REPORT FOR SPECIAL MASTER GERALD E. ROSEN

Professor Stephen Gillers
Elihu Root Professor of Law
New York University School of Law
May 8, 2018

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

I. INTRODUCTION TO OPINION

Special Master Gerald Rosen has retained me to answer certain questions regarding the professional conduct of lawyers in the captioned case. I briefly state my qualifications to offer my opinions. A current resume is attached to this Report. [EX. 68]. I agreed to an hourly rate of $900 for my work in this matter.

I was initially retained to advise the Special Master and his counsel on the rules and laws governing lawyers. One or more customer class counsel asked to depose me. That changed my role. I submitted a Report on February 23, 2018 based on facts prepared by Judge Rosen and his counsel and which I was asked to assume were true for purposes of my Report. I was deposed on March 20, 2018. The three customer counsel firms then submitted Reports from a total of seven experts, all of whom testified after I did. An eighth customer counsel expert submitted a Report before I drafted my Report, which responds to it. He then testified after I did but I continued my testimony after he concluded.

I sat through or listened on the telephone to the testimony of all customer class experts with the exception of a few hours of Professor Joy's testimony due to my class schedule. I also attended the oral argument before Judge Rosen on April 13, 2018. I have read the memoranda submitted by customer counsel after the close of testimony. I have been asked to augment my Report to consider positions of the other experts.[1]

[1] For example, Professor Joy stated globally in his Declaration: "There Was Not an Ethical Duty or Legal Requirement for Labaton to Provide Notice to the Court of Its Fee Sharing Arrangement with Chargois & Herron in the Case of Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp." Declaration of Peter A. Joy, p. 31. But his declaration omits reference to Rule 3.3(d), Cmt. 14A to Rule 3.3, the duty of candor to the Court, and Rule 11, so he does not explain why those sources did not create an "ethical duty" or "requirement" to disclose the Chargois Arrangement to the Court. Asked about that at his deposition, Professor Joy denied that Rule 3.3(d), Cmt. 14A, and the duty of candor required disclosure of the Chargois Arrangement to the Court. See, e.g.:

> THE SPECIAL MASTER: So to put a cap on it, in those instances in which there's not a court rule and not a standing order, the lawyers has not obligation, the lawyer, here, lead counsel, has no obligation to inform the court whatsoever, either under any Rule of Civil Procedure or under the rules of

The facts that I am asked to assume for purposes of my opinion have now been revised in light of the testimony, oral argument, and the Special Master's Review and Recommendations. These facts were prepared by Judge Rosen and his counsel. The opinions that follow are based on them. I understand that I am the equivalent of a court appointed expert. FRE 706.

In response to Labaton's arguments about the opinions I am qualified to give, I take note that the District Court in Massachusetts has recognized legal ethics experts under FRE 702. Weber v. Sanborn, 526 F. Supp. 2d 135 (D. Mass. 2007), allowed the expert testimony Andrew Perlman, then a professor at Suffolk University Law School, now its dean. Dean Perlman was allowed to testify about the professional conduct rules in both Massachusetts and New Hampshire, although he was not a member of the New Hampshire bar. The Court permitted his testimony on the following topics:

> Based on his credentials, specifically his teaching experience, Perlman is qualified to offer an expert opinion about: (1) whether an attorney-client relationship existed between Weber and PL & P; (2) whether PL & P engaged in conduct that failed to conform with the governing Rules of Professional Conduct and fell below the standard of care of the average and ordinary qualified practitioner; and (3) whether this conduct proximately caused damages to Weber. Id. at 147.

candor to the court and, particularly in light comment 14A and the nature of a settlement brought to the court in a non-adversary context.

MS, LUKEY: Objection.

THE WITNESS: That's correct, no obligation.

Joy Deposition at 119. See also Joy Deposition at 154 ("The duty of candor to the Court did not require disclosure of the fee-sharing arrangement").

While Timothy Dacey, unlike Professor Joy, cited Rule 3.3(d) and Cmt. 14A in his Declaration, Expert Report of Timothy Dacey, p.12, the Declaration did not connect these authorities to the facts of this case. At his deposition, he did not take a firm position on either provision ("I haven't really completely thought through that issue" and "Let me put it this way: I have not thought through all the permutations of where this could come up" Dacey 4/9/18 Dep., pp. 27: 10-11, 33: 13-15), except that as regards Lieff Cabraser, he "concluded…that they did not know any material facts that would have required them to speak up without a specific request." Asked if a firm that did know those facts would have such a duty, he replied over an objection from Ms. Lukey: "That was my – I assume that for purposes of my opinion." Id., p. 33:24 -34:5.

The Court also allowed Dean Perlman, who had not before been an expert witness in the area, to testify to "principles of substantive law."

> PL & P argues that the Preamble to the Rules from both New Hampshire and Massachusetts state that legal rules or principles of substantive law external to the Rules determine whether a client-lawyer relationship exists. Though Perlman referred to the Rules, his conclusion was further supported by an American Bar Association Formal Opinion and the Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers….
> Perlman's use of the Rules was as a threshold affirmation that dual representation is ethically permissible. Rule 1.13(e) expressly states that a lawyer representing an entity "may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents." N.H. R. Prof. Conduct 1.13(e); Mass. R. Prof. Conduct 1.13(e). To explain when such dual representation exists, Perlman relied on principles of substantive law external to the Rules, namely, the ABA Formal Opinion and the Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers. Id. (emphasis added).[2]

Labaton has argued that I am (admittedly) not an expert on Rules 23 and 54 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Although those rules necessarily form part of the background for my opinions, none of my opinions relies on them.

My Qualifications

I am Elihu Root Professor of Law at New York University School of Law, where I have taught since 1978. My major area of research and teaching are the ethical rules and laws governing American lawyers. I am the author of Regulation of Lawyers: Problems of Law and Ethics, a widely used law school casebook first published by Little, Brown (now Aspen) in 1985 with an 11th edition in 2018. With Roy Simon (and Andrew Perlman as of 2008), I have edited Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards, published annually by Little, Brown, then

[2] See also Fishman v. Brooks, 396 Mass. 643, 650 (1986) (while "violation of a canon of ethics or a disciplinary rule…is not itself an actionable breach of duty to a client…if a plaintiff can demonstrate that a disciplinary rule was intended to protect one in his position, a violation of that rule may be some evidence of the attorney's negligence." The Court added: "Of course, an expert on the duty of care of an attorney properly could base his opinion on an attorney's failure to conform to a disciplinary rule." Id.

Aspen, since 1989. From 2000-2002, I was a member of the ABA's Multijurisdictional Practice Commission, which proposed rule changes (all of them accepted by the ABA House) to recognize the cross-border nature of legal practice. I was a member of the ABA 20/20 Commission (2010-2013), which studied the effects of technology and globalization on the regulation of lawyers and recommended Model Rules amendments, all of which were accepted by the ABA House. In 2011, I received the Michael Franck Award from the ABA's Center for Professional Responsibility. I received The American Bar Foundation's Outstanding Scholar Award in 2015.

I have testified as a legal ethics expert in court, by deposition, or by written submission many dozens of times in the last thirty years and in several states. I am admitted only in New York. In the last four years, I have testified at a deposition in Ruby v. Allen Matkins, a JAMS arbitration in Los Angeles. I was retained by Dale Kinsella of Kinsella Weitzman (Santa Monica, CA), counsel for Mr. Ruby.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. THE STATE STREET LITIGATION

i. ORIGINS

This case had its genesis in a California qui tam action filed under seal on April 14, 2008 by "Associates Against FX Insider Trading" -- relators represented by the Thornton Law Firm ("TLF") and Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP ("Lieff") -- on behalf of California public pension funds. See 9/15/16 Declaration of Lawrence Sucharow of Labaton Sucharow LLP in Support of Motion for Final Approval of Class Settlement, MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 104, ¶ 24; see also Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 35:22 – 36:14. The qui tam lawsuit was unsealed and became public on October 20, 2009, when the California Attorney General filed a Complaint-in-Intervention charging State Street with misappropriating more than $56 million from California's two largest public pension funds: the California Public Employees' Retirement System ("CalPERS") and the California State Teachers' Retirement System ("CalSTRS"). See People of the State of California, ex rel. Edmund G. Brown, Jr. v. State Street Corporation, et al., Cal. Super. Ct. No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS; see also Sucharow Decl., ¶ 25; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 40:1-9. The Complaint-in-Intervention was the first public indication of State Street's allegedly unfair and deceptive practices concerning indirect FX and the first largescale action concerning FX practices. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 25; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 41:11-17.

ii. FILING OF THE ATRS "CUSTOMER CLASS" COMPLAINT

After the allegations against State Street became public, George Hopkins, Executive Director of the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ATRS"), became interested in the issue since State Street was ATRS's custodial bank. Hopkins 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 37:11 – 38:15. ATRS then retained Labaton Sucharow LLP ("Labaton"), which was serving as one of its "monitoring counsel,"[3] to investigate potential class and individual claims that could be brought against State Street on behalf of ATRS and its members. This was Labaton's first foray into FX litigation. Therefore, with ATRS's approval, Labaton teamed with TLF and Lieff, as those firms had gained knowledge of the area from their representation of the relators in the California qui tam action, and began an investigation. Id. See also George Hopkins Declaration, Dkt. No. 104-1, ¶ 8; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 43:13 – 44:4.

[3] "Monitoring counsel" refers to lawyers who review the performance of institutional investors to ensure the investments are handled appropriately and are not the subject of fraud or other illegal activity. See Eisenberg, Jonathan, Litigating Securities Class Actions, § 1.02(1)(d), "Portfolio Monitoring" (Lexis/Nexis 2017).

After investigating and researching the matter, on February 10, 2011, a class action complaint was filed on behalf of ATRS (superseded by an Amended Complaint on April 15, 2011) alleging violations of the Massachusetts Consumer Protections Act and several common law claims. See Arkansas Teacher Retirement System v. State Street Corp., et al., MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. Nos. 1, 10 [EX. 1].[4] As Lead Plaintiff in the action, ATRS purported to represent a class encompassing > all institutional investors in foreign securities, including but not limited to public and private pension funds, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank and executed FX trades on a "standing-instruction" or "non-negotiated" basis between January 2, 1998 and December 31, 2009, inclusive (the "Class Period"), and which suffered damages as a result of the deceptive acts and practices and other misconduct alleged herein.

Customer Class Amended Compl., Dkt. No. 10, ¶ 22. [5]

Thereafter, on January 12, 2012, Labaton was appointed "Interim Lead Counsel" for the proposed Customer Class; the Thornton Law Firm was designated as liaison counsel, and Lieff Cabraser was designated as additional counsel for the proposed class. See Dkt. Nos. 7-8; 28.[6] In making this tri-partite appointment, the Court reasoned that "[e]ach of the firms, including Labaton Sucharow, have extensive experience with complex commercial litigation and class action lawsuits involving financial and securities fraud," and "are knowledgeable [in] the applicable areas of law." 1/12/12 Memorandum and Order, p. 4, Dkt. No. 28. [7]

[4] The complaints also originally named State Street Corporation ("SSC"), State Street's parent corporation, and the separate subsidiary State Street Global Markets LLC ("SSGM LLC") as party-defendants. On May 8, 2012, the Court entered an Order dismissing all claims asserted against SSC and SSGM LLC.

[5] The ATRS complaint is referred to by the parties in this action as the "Customer Class Complaint."

[6] "Plaintiff's Assented to Motion for the Appointment of Interim Lead Counsel for the Proposed Class" and supporting brief were filed on April 7, 2011 [Dkt. Nos. 7 and 8] but not ruled upon by the Court until January 12, 2012 [Dkt. No. 28].

iii. THE ERISA COMPLAINTS

On the heels of the filing of the Customer Class Complaint, two separate complaints alleging ERISA violations were filed.[8] The two sets of plaintiffs in these actions represented institutional private ERISA plans whose accounts were invested by State Street (the "ERISA Class").[9] See Henriquez, et al. v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., MAD No. 11-12049, Dkt. Nos. 1, 24 (the "Henriquez complaint") [EX. 2],[10] and The Andover Companies Savings and

[7] No similar appointment was made with respect to ERISA Counsel. However, Labaton, Lieff and Thornton also viewed the ERISA plaintiffs as their clients and Labaton as lead counsel for all class members, including ERISA class members. See Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep. pp. 93:24 – 94:2 ("We had a responsibility as class counsel to the class. And that included ERISA plans."); 97:3- 10 ("I felt that customer class counsel had a responsibility to the entire customer class with no distinctions. We didn't discriminate in our class definition. We didn't see the need to when we filed our case.") Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., pp. 42:11-14 ("[W] did not assert an ERISA claim in our complaint, but we did allege a class which was broad enough to encompass ERISA governed assets."); 61:11-14 (How much of the settlement would go to ERISA clients "was something that [DOL] were focused on. Of course, we were focused on it as well because they were our clients.") See also colloquy at 11/15/12 Lobby Conference:

> MICHAEL THORNTON: I just want to clarify one thing of Mr. Rudman's [State Street's attorney's] excellent summary that we might differ on. There are two clear ERISA cases, Henriquez and Andover, and in the third case, Arkansas, um, the ERISA claims are included in the class definition. So we also have a claim.

[11/15/12 Lobby Conf. Tr., Dkt. No. 87, pp. 16-17]

[8] "ERISA" refers to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 1001, et seq.

[9] The ERISA Class was represented by Keller Rohrback L.L.P., Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, McTigue Law LLP, and Beins Axelrod LLP (collectively, "ERISA Counsel"). However, none of these firms was ever appointed "lead counsel" or other official capacity by the Court. (Although, later, Brian McTigue of McTigue Law, attempted, albeit unsuccessfully, to secure appointment as lead counsel for the ERISA class members. See TLF-SST-052975 – 052980 [EX. 4]; TLF-SST-054020 – 54022 [EX. 5]; Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 97:12-21; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 93:17-23.)

[10] The Henriquez complaint was originally filed in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland, see Henriquez v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., et. al., MDD No. 11-cv-02920, Dkt. No. 1. The Maryland complaint, Profit Sharing Plan, et al. v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., MAD No. 12-11698, Dkt. Nos. 1, 9 (the "Andover complaint") [EX. 3].

The named plaintiffs in the Henriquez complaint were Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, and Richard A. Sutherland, all participants in different ERISA plans: Henriquez was a participant in the Waste Management Retirement Savings Plan; Cohn was a participant in the Citigroup 401(k) Plan; Taylor and Sutherland were participants in the Johnson & Johnson Pension Plan (Sutherland also was a participant in the J&J 401(k) plan). All of these individually named plaintiffs purported to "bring[] this action pursuant to ERISA on behalf of [their respective retirement plans] and [their] participants and beneficiaries...as a class action on behalf of a class of similarly-situated ERISA retirement plans (collectively, the "Plans") and their participants and beneficiaries...." [Henriquez Amended Compl., ¶ 1] [EX. 2]. Two plaintiffs are named in the Andover Complaint -- one an institutional plaintiff, The Andover Companies Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and the other an individual, James Pehoushek-Stangeland. The complaint alleges that as "a participant in The Boeing Company Voluntary Investment Plan ("the Boeing Plan") ..., Plaintiff Pehoushek-Stangeland has standing to bring suit on behalf of the Boeing Plan for losses to the Plan due to breaches of fiduciary duty pursuant to ERISA sections 409 and 502(a)(2)." [Andover Amended Compl., ¶ 22] [EX. 3].

Like the Customer Class Complaint, each ERISA complaint alleged that State Street, as the custodian to individual institutional investors and pension fund accounts, engaged in unfair and deceptive practices in conducting "indirect" or "standing instruction" foreign currency exchange ("FX") transactions on behalf of its clients, without disclosure to its clients that these trades generated mark-ups that inured to the benefit of State Street. See Customer Class however, was voluntarily dismissed shortly after it was filed, see id., Dkt. Nos. 7-8; it was later re-filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts as a "related case" to the ATRS case.

iv. THE BONY MELLON MDL

While the State Street action proceeded in the District Court for the District of Massachusetts, a multi-district FX case brought against another custodian bank, the Bank of New York Mellon, was being litigated in the Southern District of New York. In re The Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp. Forex Transactions Litig., SDNY No. 12-MD-2335 ("BONY Mellon").[11] Lieff Cabraser was co-lead counsel for the nation-wide consumer class in the case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 23:25 – 24:4; 25:12-22. TLF, as well as McTigue Law and Keller Rohrback, ERISA counsel here, also were involved in the case. Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., 85:18-21; McTigue 7/7/17 Dep., 9:23 – 10:11; 12:22 – 13:4.

BONY Mellon was vigorously litigated for three years, during which intense discovery took place: more than 120 depositions were taken and more than 20 million documents were produced and reviewed. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 29:23 – 30:15. To assist in the document review, Lieff Cabraser enlisted the help of the firm's staff attorneys ("SAs"),[12] thirteen of whom later worked on the State Street case. The case finally settled for $335 million in recovery to the class of custodial clients in September 2015. See 9/24/15 Order and Final Judgment, SDNY No. 12-MD-2335, Dkt. No. 638; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 29:23 – 30:15.[13] The attorneys' experience in BONY Mellon allowed counsel to develop a baseline of familiarity and expertise

[11] The first of the various underlying complaints comprising the BONY Mellon MDL was filed in 2011, shortly after the ATRS complaint was filed.

[12] "Staff attorneys" here were licensed attorneys with relevant experience hired specifically to perform large-scale document review.

[13] Of the $335 million settlement, the attorneys in BONY Mellon were awarded $83,750,000 in fees and $2,901,734.19 in total expenses. SDNY No. 12-MD-2335, Dkt. No. 638.

that they brought to the State Street case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 27:11-17. BONY Mellon also provided Lieff's SAs hands-on experience in reviewing and analyzing complex, FX-related documents. See Lieff Cabraser's Responses to First Set of Interrogatories Due on June 1, 2017, Response No. 3.

v. CONSOLIDATION OF THE STATE STREET CASES

During most of 2011-2012, the State Street action principally involved motion practice, and, in particular, briefing and argument of Rule 12(b)(1) and Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss filed by State Street in the ATRS and the Henriquez cases. State Street's motion to dismiss the ATRS complaint was fully briefed by both parties and the Court heard arguments on the motion on May 8, 2012. At the conclusion of the May 8 hearing, the Court entered an Order dismissing ATRS's claims against State Street Corporation ("SSC"), the parent corporation, and the separate State Street subsidiary, State Street Global Market, LLC ("SSGM LLC"), but denied Defendant's motion in all other respects. See 5/8/12 Order, Dkt. No. 33. The Court further directed counsel to meet to discuss the possibility of settlement and whether they wished to pursue mediation, either privately or before a magistrate judge. Id.

In the meantime, on August 8, 2012, State Street also moved to dismiss the Henriquez Amended Class Action Complaint. However, no substantive decision was ever rendered on that motion. Instead, on November 15, 2012, shortly after the Andover complaint was filed, at the request of counsel, the Court conducted a Lobby Conference to discuss further proceedings. See 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., Dkt. No. 64. Counsel proposed, and the Court agreed, that the three cases -- ATRS, Henriquez and Andover -- proceed in tandem in a "hybrid" mediation during which the parties and counsel could continue to pursue a mediated global settlement, while at the same time delaying a decision on pending motions and engaging in a simultaneous track of "informal" document discovery. 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., pp. 10:15-18; 15:6-7, 19-25, 22:2-10. The Court granted the parties' joint motion to stay the case and ordered that the three actions be consolidated for pre-trial purposes.[14] Id., Tr. at pp. 10, 22, 24; Order to Stay, Dkt. No. 62; Electronic Order Consolidating Cases, Dkt. No. 63.

vi. HYBRID MEDIATION-DISCOVERY PROCESS

Prior to the Court's endorsement of the hybrid mediation, the parties had selected a mediator, Jonathan Marks, and participated in a few preliminary mediation sessions, developing the framework for exchanging discovery. Sucharow Decl., ¶¶ 89-92; Marks Decl., ¶ 14; 11/15/12 Lobby Conference Tr., Dkt. No. 87, p. 22. In the approximately eighteen months following the November 12, 2012 Lobby Conference, between January 2013 and June 2015, the parties participated in 14 additional in-person mediation sessions with Mediator Marks in Boston, New York City, and Washington, D.C., each of which involved extensive exchanges of legal theories and damages calculations by both sides. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 94; see also Marks Decl., ¶¶ 23-24.

The mediation sessions were informed by substantial discovery exchanged by the parties. Notably, State Street produced more than nine million pages of documents at the request of the ERISA and Customer classes. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 96. All parties agree that document review was essential to the mediation process. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 116:15 – 117:6; Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp. 84:15-23, 85:24 – 86:5; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 80:4-7, 82:7-13.

vii. ERISA FEE ALLOCATION

While the hybrid mediation-discovery process was ongoing, in mid-2013, Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel negotiated amongst themselves an agreement for the allocation of attorneys' fees. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep. p. 57:18-23. That agreement -- to allocate 9%

[14] The Court set an initial deadline of December 1, 2013, at which time the parties would update the Court on the status of the mediation. See Dkt. No. 62. At the request of the parties, the Court extended this deadline on several occasions. See Dkt. Nos. 66, 71, 75.

of the total fee awarded (if successful) to ERISA Counsel -- was based largely on ERISA Counsel's understanding that the total ERISA case volume comprised five to nine percent of the total FX trading volume. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 26:15-16; 59:14-22; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 50:10-16.

As the case progressed -- and particularly toward the end of the case -- ERISA Counsel did not view 9% as commensurate with the ERISA trading volume, which was later learned to actually be about 12-15% of the total trading volume, or the value they added to the State Street case. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 64:3-11; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 54:7-11. Nonetheless, rather than create friction with Customer Class Counsel over fees,[15] Lynn Sarko, principal counsel for the ERISA Class, advocated for, and all other ERISA Counsel ultimately agreed to make, a "practical decision" to accept 9% of the fee total. See Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:18-25. The decision was made, in part, to promote cooperation between counsel, "make the pie bigger" for the class members, and ensure that counsel worked together on the same "team." Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:18-25; see also Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 61:18-24.

From August to December 2013, Customer Class and ERISA Counsel exchanged drafts in an attempt to memorialize their agreement to respectively share the fee award 91/9 percent. See KR00000006 – 09 (8/30/13 Sarko email to Lieff (proposing draft agreement to capture the 91/9% split)) [EX. 6]; KR00000010 – 18 (9/11/13 Chiplock email to Sarko and Gerber (circulating redlined edits to proposed agreement)) [EX. 7]. While there were several iterations

[15] From the beginning of the mediation, there was already fair degree of tension between and among Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel. As ERISA Counsel Carl Kravitz testified, "There was definitely a faction on the consumer side that said 'we represent these people, what are you doing in the case?'" Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 28:21-24. Kravitz explained, "Consumer people did not want us coming in and taking a chunk of their case." See id., pp. 32:16-17; 45:6-17. "Every extra dollar that went to ERISA came out of the Consumer side." Id., at p. 51:18-20. The tension between the Customer Class and the ERISA Class further was manifested during the discovery process: ERISA Counsel were not provided with access to documents State Street had provided to the Customer Class. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 44:2-25. Nor were ERISA Counsel allowed access to the Customer Class's database. Id., at 45:1-23. Compounding the tension was the fact that there was never an order appointing leadership in the ERISA cases. Id., p. 42:24 – 43:3.

of the agreement, each draft described the ATRS complaint filed by Customer Class Counsel as brought on behalf of "all institutional investors in foreign securities, including public and private pension funds, ERISA-qualified plans, mutual funds, endowment funds and investment manager funds, for which State Street served as the custodial bank" (emphasis added). See KR00000003 – 05 (8/29/13 Draft, Agreement Between Counsel for Consumer and ERISA Plaintiffs Regarding Division of Attorneys' Fees (the "Fee Allocation Agreement") [EX. 8]. Early drafts of the fee allocation agreement included a provision nullifying the 91/9 allocation if either the ATRS, Andover or Henriquez cases resulted in no recovery; that provision was later struck. See KR00000024 – 28 (8/30/13 Draft, Fee Allocation Agreement). [EX. 9]. Also removed was a proposed provision that counsels' division of fees was "consistent with the relative volume of FX trading by ERISA and non-ERISA plans as reflected in the data produced by State Street and the prospects of recovery on the various claims alleged, and is therefore reasonable and appropriate." Id.

On December 11, 2013, Counsel finally memorialized this agreement in writing. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 60:4-14; s*ee also* KR00000045 – 50 (Final Fee Allocation Agreement) [EX. 10], Settlement Agreement, Dkt. No. 89, ¶ 21; McTigue, 7/7/17 Dep., pp. 44:23 – 46:18; Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., p. 57:12-16. As part of that written agreement, ERISA and Customer Class Counsel represented that they had "disclosed and explained this Agreement to their respective clients and that their clients have consented to the Division of Fees and other terms herein." See Fee Allocation Agreement at ¶ 5 [EX. 10].

The percentage allocated to ERISA Counsel later was increased to 10%, at the suggestion of Customer Class Counsel. Thornton 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 57:17 – 58:1; Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 60:15-17, 60:24-61:12; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., p. 59:17-19. While counsel did not amend the original agreement, the 10% increase was memorialized in an email circulated by Nicole Zeiss, Settlement Counsel for Labaton, itemizing the allocation of fees and expenses to the ERISA and Customer Class attorneys. See ZS000027 – 28 (11/23/16 Sarko email to Kravitz ("I spoke with Labaton folks yesterday. They didn't want to put it in the formal letter but agreed to send us an email putting the numbers in and confirming the 10 percent.")). [EX. 11]. ERISA Counsel welcomed the increase in percentage. See ZS000029 – 30 (11/23/16 Kravitz email to McTigue). [EX. 12].

viii. STAFF ATTORNEY COST-SHARING AGREEMENT

Staff attorney-based document review performed throughout the course of the hybrid mediation-discovery process ramped up significantly in January 2015. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 87:22 – 88:24. While the BONY Mellon case was being actively litigated in 2013-2014, Lieff assigned at most five SAs to review documents produced by State Street. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 107:15 – 108:12. During that time, Labaton also allocated no more than five SAs to review and analyze documents for the State Street case. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 57:7-10. [16] As the hybrid mediation progressed, State Street produced discovery related to the Hill case,[17] a significant production consisting of approximately 10 million pages. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 68:25 – 69:11; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 88:2-21. The Hill production added considerably to the total volume of unreviewed documents.

By January 2015, the Customer Class began to view discovery with greater urgency, informed in part by the favorable resolution in the BONY Mellon case and also by the fact that the parties had been mediating for over two years without reaching an agreement to resolve the [16] Michael Rogers recalls that, in 2013, Labaton assigned Todd Kussin, the SA "team leader" in the State Street case, and four SAs to perform document review during 2013 and 2014. Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 57:7-10.

[17] Hill v. State Street Corp., et. al., MAD No.1:09-cv-12146-GAO.

case. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 111:8-13; Dugar 6/16/17 Dep., p. 85:9-16. As a result, Labaton and Lieff, which had recently freed up thirteen SAs as fact discovery in the BONY Mellon case came to a close, expanded their respective document review teams by adding additional SAs to review and analyze the database of unreviewed material accumulated during the State Street case. See Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 109:16 – 110:2; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 69:8-14; 74:11-13. Between January and March 2015, Labaton bolstered their document review team, maintaining more than fifteen to twenty different SAs on the State Street case at any given time. Lieff did the same, assigning fifteen SAs (thirteen of whom transitioned directly from the BONY Mellon review) and two "contract" attorneys to complete the review.[18] Kussin 6/5/17 Dep., p. 17:6-13, 70:8-9; Dugar 6/16/17 Dep., p. 87:16 – 88:11, 23-24; Lieff Cabraser Response to June 1 Interrogatories, No.19.

All SAs reviewing documents in the State Street case received a binder of documents providing an overview of the case; the binder contained the complaint and related pleadings, an outline of the case theory, and a list of key terms, search criteria, topics and categories to guide the SA review. Goldsmith 7/17/17 Dep., pp.77:23 – 78:8; Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., p. 63:3-7; Lesser 6/19/17 Dep., p. 40:12-13. Michael Lesser also drafted emails outlining important information for the SAs to consider during their review. Lesser 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 40:10 – 41:4.

The Labaton and Lieff SAs were well-qualified and equipped to analyze the documents, which related to complex FX trading patterns and other financial issues raised in the case. See Rogers 6/16/17 Dep, pp. 58:12 – 59:7 (SAs hired by Labaton had experience in "complex litigation, [the] financial industry, . . . banking, mutual funds, certainly currency trading, or experience legally on what I would call a financial industry case.") Several of the Lieff SAs had, in the words of Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser, "been through war in Bank of New York Mellon, and [] [we]re extremely well-versed in the issues." Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 109:20-25; 117:16-25. These SAs not only performed sophisticated document review; they also prepared substantive subject matter memoranda and deposition notebooks. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep. p. 32:12-20; Zaul 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 24:4 – 25:5; Alper 6/5/17 Dep., p. 17:14-16; Oh 6/6/17 Dep., p. 21:20-25; see also TLF-SST-005245 – 5270 (Memorandum authored by SA Maritza Bolano) [EX. 13].

Because TLF did not have SAs, or non-permanent attorneys, of its own, or the facilities to hire and house new attorneys solely to work on the State Street document review, Labaton, Lieff and TLF entered into an agreement to "allocate" certain SAs employed by and working at Labaton and Lieff's offices to TLF. At times, this was referred to as the "10/10/10 agreement[19] -- designating an equal number of SAs to each firm. The purpose of the cost-sharing agreement was to share the cost and risk burdens of the litigation among the three Customer Class law firms. Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 127:23 – 128:5; 131:23 – 133:15; Belfi 6/14/17 Dep, pp. 51:8 – 53:12. [20] While the exact number of SAs fluctuated over the course of the agreement, TLF, in essence, agreed to pay Labaton and Lieff each for five SAs. G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 43:10-13. TLF did not meet, interview, select, house or supervise the SAs allocated by Labaton or Lieff. See Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 62:21, 63:7-17, 64:6-9, 65:3-6; see also Chiplock 6/16/17

[19] The concept of the "10/10/10 agreement" was introduced at the beginning of the Special Master's discovery, and while not all Class Counsel were familiar with that exact terminology, they affirmed that the purpose of the cost-sharing agreements between Labaton and TLF, and between Lieff and TLF, was to allocate costs and risks equally among all firms by Labaton and Lieff each assigning approximately five SAs to TLF, so that each firm ending up bearing the cost of ten SAs. See G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 42:5-13; Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 133:12-15.

[20] Allocating the SAs was not only a means of equalizing the costs and burdens, but also as Garrett Bradley of TLF admitted, it was "the best way to jack up the load star [sic]…the best way for us [TLF] to increase our load star [sic] and make it comparable to the other two firms…. I was absolutely concerned about Thornton's load star [sic] vis-a-vis the other two firms." G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep. p. 67:4-13; TLF-011124 – 11126 (2/6/15 G. Bradley Email to Thornton cc'd Lesser) [EX. 14].

Dep., pp. 134:17 – 135:19. And, it did not matter to TLF which SAs it paid for. See G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 43:10-13. Pursuant to this cost-sharing arrangement, Labaton and Lieff designated certain SAs as "TLF," and then billed TLF periodically for the actual costs of the SAs and, in Lieff's case, for the contract attorneys "allocated" to TLF. Id.; see also Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., p. 63:2-7.

TLF's collection of SA hours was conducted piecemeal and largely through administrative staff rather than directly between the attorneys privy to the SA cost-sharing agreement. Evan Hoffman, the most junior member of TLF's litigation team, was tasked with collecting the names and hours of the Lieff SAs allocated to TLF. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., p. 57: 11–18. The staffing agency employing the agency attorneys working at Lieff invoiced TLF directly for the hours performed by those individuals. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., p. 62: 6-9. Michael Bradley, the brother of TLF partner Garrett Bradley, neither worked for a firm or a staffing agency, and reported his hours to Hoffman by email on a weekly or biweekly basis. Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 107: 24-108:7.

For those SAs employed by Lieff, Lieff's accounting department prepared and forwarded invoices to Hoffman on a regular basis. LCHB Response to Interrogatory No. 38; Hoffman 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 61: 21-62:5. Similarly, Labaton's accounting office prepared and forwarded invoices reporting the hours performed by Labaton SAs to Garrett Bradley's attention, copying TLF administrators, on a monthly basis. Labaton Response to Interrogatory No. 37; see LBS – 003775-3776 (4/9/15 Ng Email to G. Bradley attaching April 2015 Invoice) [EX. 15].

At the time Labaton and Lieff agreed to this arrangement, both firms were concerned primarily with spreading the risks -- and costs -- of the litigation; neither firm focused on what information would be reported in a potential fee petition. Belfi 6/14/17 Dep., p. 53:10-12. TLF later claimed all of the SAs allocated to TLF on its lodestar fee petition, accounting for 71.5% of all TLF hours reported. See Dkt. No. 104-16.[21] In its fee petition, TLF billed all SA time at an hourly rate of $425 (a rate approved by the Court for Lieff SAs in BONY Mellon). Except for three SAs, the $425 per hour rate charged by TLF was greater than the rates requested by Lieff or Labaton for the same individuals in their lodestar petitions.[22] Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., p. 59:5-12. No explicit agreement to allow TLF to claim the Labaton and Lieff SAs on TLF's lodestar has been disclosed during the Special Master's investigation.[23]

ix. SETTLEMENT AND NOTICE TO CLASS MEMBERS

a. Involvement of Government Agencies

The hybrid mediation spanned a period of two and a half years. During this time, while discovery continued, settlement discussions were ongoing. In addition to State Street and [21] TLF also claimed 406.4 hours of SA time for Michael Bradley, a Massachusetts-licensed attorney and the brother of TLF Managing Partner, Garrett Bradley, who was not affiliated with the firm but performed document review on a contingent basis during the State Street case. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 28:20-23; 70:13-15. Bradley worked from his own office and did his document review in his free time; he was not supervised by Labaton or Lieff lawyers. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 49:7-16; 52:3-18, 54:15 – 55:3. Unlike the Labaton and Lieff SAs, Bradley did not prepare any memoranda or deposition notebooks. Id, at p. 46:21-23. And, the record reveals no written work product created by Michael Bradley.

Bradley worked on a contingent basis; he would only be paid if the class recovered a settlement entitling counsel to fees. M. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 70:13-15. After the Court approved the request for attorneys' fees, Bradley received a payment of $203,200, equal to the numbers reported at $500 per hour. Id., p. 70:18-23.

[22] Rachael Wintterle, a contract attorney housed at Lieff's office, was billed by Lieff at $515 per hour. See Dkt. No. 104-17, Exhibit A. David Alper and Dorothy Hong were billed by Labaton at the same rate as TLF, $425 per hour. See Dkt. No. 104-15, Exhibit A. Alper had a background in FX training and was a resource for SAs during the State Street case. Alper 6/5/17 Dep., pp. 20: 8-11; 22: 3-8.

[23] Some of the attorneys from Labaton, Lieff and TLF, however, independently made assumptions based on the circumstances that TLF would claim the SA time on its lodestar. See e.g., G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 48:1-5 ("We just assumed -- I just assumed where the local counsel were on the papers, we're litigating the case, we're putting the fee up, why wouldn't we put the people up that we were paying for?"); Chiplock 6/16/17 Dep., p. 136:10-19 ("I would say it was completely understood by me when I talked with Garrett that that would be how it worked, because it was obvious to me that if you pay for the work that is being done, then, just as with any other employee when you're paying them, that you include their hours in your lodestar when you report it at the end of the day."); Rogers 6/16/17 Dep., pp. 91:18 – 92:16 ("I certainly assumed [TLF] would [claim the SA time on their fee petition]. . . . They were paying for it up-front, I assume they wanted to get paid on the back end."); Hoffman Dep., p. 58:12-16 ("My understanding was that for attorneys who Thornton was financially responsible for, they would be included on whatever the ultimate fee petition that Thornton would submit."); see also TLF-SST-011206 (6/29/15 email from Mike Lesser of TLF to Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser) [EX. 52].

plaintiffs' counsel, three government agencies -- the Department of Labor ("DOL"), the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), and the Department of Justice ("DOJ") -- were involved in the negotiations. Each agency independently investigated State Street's alleged misconduct, and each agency reached its own settlement with State Street in furtherance of their respective enforcement goals. See Dkt. No. 104, ¶¶ 8, 38; see also Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 41:9-14; Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 56:25 – 57:4. The DOL -- charged with overseeing administration of the ERISA statute -- paid particular attention to the settlement of the claims of the ERISA plan participants, ensuring that the settlement recovery amount was adequate and commensurate with the agency's own evaluation of the case. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 79:6-15. Keller Rohrback's Lynn Sarko was the lawyer principally responsible for negotiating with the DOL. State Street, in turn, made it clear that a global settlement with all private class members and all government agencies was a necessary condition to its willingness to reach a settlement. Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 36:24 – 37:11; see also 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., p. 17:8-23.

b. Preparation and Filing of Settlement Documents

After two and a half years of mediation and negotiation, on June 30, 2015, the parties reached an agreement-in-principle to settle the consolidated class actions for $300,000,000.00. Sucharow Decl., ¶ 101. The terms of a final Term Sheet were negotiated and signed on September 11, 2015. Id. at ¶ 104. See also, Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., p. 13:10-22.

Over the ensuing 10 ½ months, Labaton, as Lead Settlement Counsel, undertook the preparation of the formal settlement documentation. Nicole Zeiss, Labaton's Settlement Counsel, had primary responsibility for drafting the settlement agreement and the exhibits for the settlement agreement, including the preliminary approval motion, brief and order, the plan of allocation, the judgment, the long-form Notice of Pendency of Class Actions and the Summary

Notice ("Notice"). Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 13:10-22; 15:5-6.[24] Draft versions of the Notice were circulating among, and reviewed by, Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel.[25]

Zeiss also had the responsibility of preparing the Omnibus Declaration and Brief in support of Lead Counsel's motion for attorneys' fees and expenses, and for payment of service awards. Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., p. 16:2-6. This included reviewing and assembling the exhibits to the brief which consisted of the individual firms' fee declarations and lodestar reports. Id., p. 16:10-14. Zeiss drafted the template for the individual fee declarations, circulated it to the other firms, and worked with them on completing their declarations and exhibits. Id., pp. 16:14-16, 20:18-19.

The Settlement and Fee Petition documents made clear that Labaton was representing both the Customer Class and the ERISA Class with respect to the settlement of the case. The "Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Class Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation and Any Motion for Attorneys' Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards," which Labaton drafted, bears the case names and numbers of all three class actions, including the ERISA actions, and provides notice to members of the "Settlement Class" that a Class Settlement of $300,000,000 has been entered into "by and among (i) plaintiffs Arkansas Teacher Retirement System ("ARTRS"), Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, Richard A. Sutherland, The Andover Companies Employees Savings and Profit Sharing Plan and [24] Rather than have a litigation team member handle settlement, Labaton has compartmentalized its practice, and in that compartmentalization, it created a separate "settlement counsel" position who negotiates and documents all settlements. Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 10:24 – 11:12; Keller 10/13/17 Dep., p. 79:18-20. With respect to the State Street case, this compartmentalization contributed to some of the problems giving rise to the Special Master's investigation, in particular, the failure to discover the "double-counting" of SAs allocated to TLF and the failure to disclose to the Court Labaton's fee arrangement with Texas attorney Damon Chargois. These matters are discussed infra.

[25] In March 2017, at the request of the Special Master, the Customer Class and ERISA firms each produced a complete record of time entries performed in the State Street matter. These time records indicate that Class Counsel reviewed the Notice and other settlement documents circulated by Zeiss.

James Pehoushek-Stangeland (collectively "Plaintiffs"), on behalf of themselves and each Settlement Class Member, by and through their counsel, and (ii) State Street Bank and Trust Company (the "Settling Defendant" or "SSBT")." See Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 95-3, filed on August 10, 2016. The Notice further defines the "Settlement Class" as

> All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT's records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2l 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive. Id.

The Notice was widely circulated.

x. FEE PETITION REQUESTING ATTORNEYS' FEES

a. Fee Negotiations Among Customer Class Counsel

Around the time the parties reached an agreement-in-principle, Customer Class Counsel engaged in discussions about how to allocate the anticipated fee award among themselves. It is apparent from these discussions that with regard to balancing fees, Lieff and TLF considered their respective roles in the BONY Mellon litigation, a fact wholly unrelated to the value added in this case. Dan Chiplock conceded at deposition, as did Garrett Bradley, that the State Street and BONY Mellon fee discussions became intertwined. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep., pp. 22:7 – 23:13; Garrett Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 114:23 – 125:16. Contemporaneous emails also reflect the intertwining of the fee negotiations in the two cases. See discussion, infra.

At the inception of the case, Customer Class Counsel had agreed to a fee sharing arrangement when Labaton teamed with Lieff and TLF, pursuant to which Labaton, Lieff and TLF understood each firm would be entitled to a minimum of 20% of the fee award, with the remaining 40% to be distributed at the end of the litigation, commensurate with each firm's respective contributions to the case. See TLF-SST-033911 – 33913 (5/4/11 letter agreement, p. 2) [EX. 16]; Keller 10/25/17 Dep., pp. 414:14 – 420:10. See also, TLF-SST-040631 (8/28/15 email exchange among Larry Sucharow, Dan Chiplock, Garrett Bradley, M. Thornton, and Bob Lieff regarding the 20-20-20/40 agreement) [EX. 17].

In August 2015, Dan Chiplock expressed an interest in determining the appropriate allocation of the remaining 40%. Id. Garrett Bradley of TLF resisted, opining that the final distribution should wait until the Court made a total fee award. Id. What became apparent to Chiplock was that TLF viewed any allocation of State Street fees as tied to the then yet undecided BONY Mellon fee award. Id.[26] ("Not to be difficult but [this is a] very different situation, in other words, from BNYM, (which I know doesn't involve you Larry, but seems to be coloring this discussion.") *See also*TLF-SST-053087 (8/28/15 email from Sucharow to Chiplock ("I believe there are other cases and other agreements which are influencing people's desire to either reach agreement now or later.")) [EX. 18].

Garrett Bradley pressed for an agreement that Lieff share some portion of its allotment in BONY Mellon with TLF in recognition of the fact that Thornton had developed the initial FX concept, and refused to settle on an allocation in State Street until he saw that TLF was treated "fairly" in BONY Mellon. Chiplock 9/8/17 Dep. pp. 22:8 – 23:13; TLF-SST-031166 - 31173 (G. Bradley 8/28/15 email to Bob Lieff ("…I have not agreed that it would be equitable to split the balance of the forty percent the way you described below. What I have said is that may be a fair approach depending on the outcome of our fee in the Mellon matter. If we are treated fairly there, then we will do all we can to treat you fairly in the state street matter…) [EX. 19]; see also Bradley to Chiplock email of the same date, id. ("What I am pointing out is the inequities of our different positions…. In Mellon … we had created the fx case all we got was some work that resulted in $1.5 million in time. Now contrast that the State Street where you had no client and no concept…. Once we have an idea of what our Mellon numbers look like, we can discuss how to approach the balance of the 40% with Labaton.") [EX. 19].

Dan Chiplock, the lead attorney in BONY Mellon, took exception with the implication that Lieff was not treating TLF fairly in that case. He pushed back, reminding Bradley in an email two days later that Lieff's role in creating the result in BONY Mellon "doubled the value of State Street." Id. (8/30/15 email from Chiplock to Bradley). He further reminded Bradley, "I also gave your firm more assignments than others at the outset in BNYM until it became clear that the work simply wasn't getting done." Id. Bradley asked what Chiplock meant when he said TLF did not "get the work done." Id. "That has never been specified and really should be to be deemed credible." Id. Chiplock agreed to provide Bradley with emails showing the assignments given to TLF. Id.

The discussion turned to lodestar reporting in State Street with Chiplock warning Bradley not to include unwarranted hours in TLF's fee petition:

> In the meantime, while we're on the subject of credibility, I want to point out that we need to be consistent and credible with our lodestar reporting in State Street. We are gathering final lodestar reports now, but I heard third-hand that Mike [Thornton]recently said on a call (that I wasn't on) that Thornton Law Firm was showing $14 million. That number does not comport with the hours Mike Lesser told me for Thornton as of June 29 (around 12,750), which makes more sense given what we know about the work that was done. I am hopeful that Mike T simply misspoke or was guessing when he said $14 million and that we are not going to suddenly see an additional 12,000 hours mysteriously appear on Thornton Law Firm's behalf…Also recognize that your [document] reviewers were all housed outside your firm ad their respective overhead and facilities expenses were paid for by others, which we were happy to do as a courtesy. Thanks.

b. Submission of the Fee Petition

Customer Class Counsel's discussions about fee sharing were put on hold as State Street settlement negotiations wrapped up, and in advance of the hearing on final approval of the settlement, Plaintiffs' Counsel submitted to the Court a joint Fee Petition in support of their request for attorneys' fees in the amount of $74,541,250.00. See Dkt. No. 104. The Fee Petition consisted of the Omnibus Declaration[27] signed by Lawrence Sucharow of Labaton, and nine individual declarations submitted by each law firm that had filed an appearance in the case.[28] Labaton posted the Omnibus Declaration, complete with exhibits, to the settlement website making relevant case information available to the class members.[29] The individual declarations described the work performed by each firm and the basis for its fee request. Attached to each declaration was a chart ("Exhibit A") summarizing each firm's respective lodestar through August 30, 2016. See Exhibit A to Dkt. Nos. 104-15, 104-16, 104-17, 104-18, 104-19, 104-20, 104-21, 104-22, 104-23. The narrative descriptions and chart outlines were taken verbatim from the template provided by Labaton. See Zeiss 6/14/17 Dep., pp. 16:10-16; 21-24.

c. The Labaton Template and Inaccuracies in Declaration Language

The Labaton template included several paragraphs describing the source of the lodestar calculations and billing rates. In particular, it included a generic description of the basis for the [27] "Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow In Support of (A) Plaintiffs' Assented-To Motion For Final Approval of Proposed Class Settlement and Plan of Allocation and Final Certification of Settlement Class and (B) Lead Counsel's Motion For An Award of Attorneys' Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs." Dkt. No. 104.

[28] The Omnibus Fee Petition listed ten firms, each of which submitted a lodestar calculation identifying the names and rates of individual attorneys and staff at their respective firms. See Labaton Sucharow (Dkt. No. 104-15); the Thornton Law Firm (Dkt. No. 104-16); Lieff Cabraser Heimann and Bernstein (Dkt. No. 104-17); Keller Rohrback, LLC (Dkt. No. 104-18); Hutchings, Barsamiam Mandelcorn, LLP (Dkt. No. 104-18); the McTigue Law Firm (Dkt. No. 104-19); Zuckerman Spaeder, LLP (Dkt. No. 104-20); Feingberg, Campbell & Zack, P.C. (Dkt. No. 104-21); Beins, Axelrod, P.C. (Dkt. No. 104-22); and Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook, and Brickman, LLC (Dkt. No. 104-23).

hourly rates listed in the lodestar calculation. With the exception of three ERISA firms -- McTigue Law,[30] Zuckerman Spaeder,[31] and Beins Axelrod[32] -- the Customer Class Counsel and the other ERISA Class Counsel adopted the template language in its entirety. Specifically, Labaton provided counsel with the following language:

- "The schedule attached hereto as Exhibit A is a summary indicating the amount of time spent by each attorney and professional support staff-member of my firm who was involved in the prosecution of the Class Actions, and the lodestar calculation based on my firm's current billing rates. For personnel who are no longer employed by my firm, the lodestar calculation is based upon the billing rates for such personnel in his or her final year of employment by my firm. The schedule was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm, which are available at the request of the Court. Time expended in preparing this application for fees and payment of expenses has not been included in this request." (Dkt. Nos. 104-15, ¶ 6; 104-16, ¶ 3; 104-17, ¶ 4; 104-18, ¶ 3; 104-21, ¶ 3; 104-23, ¶ 3).

- The hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm [] are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their service, which have been accepted in other complex class actions." Dkt. Nos. 104-15, ¶ 7; 104-16, ¶ 4; 104-17, ¶ 5; 104-18, ¶ 4; 104-21, ¶ 4; 104-23, ¶ 4).

TLF adopted the preceding paragraphs verbatim in Garrett Bradley's Declaration, summarizing the basis for TLF's fee request. See Dkt. No.104-16. Several representations contained within these paragraphs are inaccurate:

[30] The McTigue Law Firm's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my Firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my Firm's regular rates otherwise charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions my firm has been involved in." Dkt. No. 104-18, ¶ 20.

[31] Zuckerman Spaeder's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates for the attorneys and professional support staff in my firm included in Exhibit A are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions and are charged to clients paying us currently by the hour." Dkt. No. 104-20, ¶ 4.

[32] Beins Axelrod's individual fee declaration states that "[t]he hourly rates charged by the Timekeepers are the Firm's regular rates for contingent cases and those generally charged to clients for their services in non-contingent/hourly matters. Based on my knowledge and experience, these rates are also within the range of rates normally and customarily charged in Washington, D.C. by attorneys of similar qualifications and experience in cases similar to this litigation, and have been approved in connection with other class action settlements. The Firm has charged, and received, an hourly rate of $525.00 in litigation involving fiduciary breach by a former trustee and service providers. The Firm does charge a lower rate to longstanding Fund clients in non-contingency matters and to its Union clients. To serve the public interest, the Firm has also charged reduced rates to individual employees with employment discrimination claims. Dkt. No. 104-22, ¶ 8.

- Exhibit A is a summary of time spent by attorneys and professional support staff members "of my firm." None of the SAs were employed by TLF. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:8-10; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 82:12-21; 83:4-7.

- The billing rates for the SAs are "based on my firm's current billing rates." TLF did not maintain "current billing rates" for SAs listed on its lodestar calculation in Exhibit A. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:14-19; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., pp. 48:24 – 49:4; see also Exhibit A to Dkt. No. 104-16.

- For personnel "who are no longer employed," the lodestar is based on their rates for the "final year of employment." Again, none of the SAs were employed by TLF. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:8-10.

- The schedule was prepared from "contemporaneous daily time records regularly prepared and maintained by my firm." TLF did not prepare or maintain daily time records of the hours worked by the SAs listed on its lodestar. Hoffman 6/6/17 Dep., pp. 63:2-7; 69:19-25; 70:12-16; 79:19-23; Kussin 6/5/17 Dep., p. 69:4-17. Nor did Garrett Bradley and Michael Thornton maintain sufficiently reliable contemporaneous daily time records. TLF-SST-011246 – 11249 (5/21/14 email from Hoffman to Lesser)("All of the hours are taken from LCHB's chart where there were mentions of discussions with either 'co-counsel' 'team' or, of course, Mike Lesser and/or MPT, GJB." [EX. 20].[33]

- The hourly rates "are the same as my firm's regular rates charged for their services." TLF did not maintain "regular rates" for the SAs listed on its lodestar report. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 88:2-5.

- These rates "have been accepted in other complex class actions." With the exception of 4 SAs, the $425 rate charged for the remaining SAs listed on the lodestar, including Michael Bradley, had not been accepted in other complex class actions. G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 54:1-7.

Garrett Bradley acknowledged -- both in deposition and during the March 7, 2017 hearing before Judge Wolf -- that TLF's declaration was inaccurate and "should have been clearer." 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 91:4-6; G. Bradley 6/19/17 Dep., p. 82:12-21. At the March 7 [33] Garrett Bradley and Michael Thornton were asked for contemporaneous records. TLF produced calendar entries as well as several documents bearing handwritten notations purporting to be Bradley's and Thornton's contemporaneous daily time records. TLF also, at the Special Master's request, provided an excel spreadsheet containing time entries recreated after the fact based on records received from other firms, mainly Lieff, working on the State Street case.

hearing, Bradley conceded that the language described above "should have been clarified by me at that time," but was not. 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 88:18-19. There is ample evidence in the record that Garrett Bradley actually knew the Declaration contained inaccurate information but signed it anyway. See, e.g., 3/7/17 Hearing Tr., p. 87:13-14; 88:2-9, 14-18; 91:5-7; 92:3-8.

d. Staff Attorney Time

Customer Class Counsel's individual fee petitions also included requests for fees for the SAs. On the lodestar summary charts (Exhibit A to the declarations), Labaton listed 25 SAs ("SAs"); Lieff listed 20 SAs; TLF listed 24 SAs. See Sucharow Decl., Dkt. No. 104-15, Ex. A; Chiplock Decl., Dkt. No. 104-17, Ex. A; G. Bradley Decl., Dkt. No. 104-16, Ex. A. In total, Customer Class Counsel reported 59,129.4 hours performed by SAs during the State Street case, accounting for nearly 70% of the Customer Class Counsel's total lodestar. See Labaton's, Lieff's and TLF's Lodestar Reports, Dkt. Nos. 104-15, Ex. A; 104-16, Ex. A; and 104-17, Ex. A; see also Master Chart of Lodestars & Expenses, Dkt. No. 104-24. As the chart below reflects, of TLF's total of 14,731 claimed hours, 10,537.9 hours (71.5%) were hours worked by "loaned" Labaton and Lieff SAs. Specifically, the Customer Class firms' lodestar Reports reflected the hours and lodestar of partners, associates and SAs in the following amounts:

FIRM	PARTNERS & ASSOCIATES	STAFF ATTORNEYS
LABATON	5,783.6 hours	31,526.4 hours
	$4,784,915.50	$11,684,111.00
LIEFF	2,025.1 hours	17,065.1 hours
	$1,391,346.50	$7,474,896.50
TLF	4,193.1 hours	10,537.9 hours

	$2,831,287.00	$4,508,837.00

xi. COURT APPROVAL OF THE SETTLEMENT AND FEE AWARD

a. Preliminary Approval

On August 8, 2016, the Court conducted a Preliminary Class Settlement Hearing, after which it granted preliminary approval of the class settlement,[34] provisionally certified the Settlement Class (as defined in the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions), approved the long-form Notice of Pendency of Class Action and Summary Notice, and appointed Labaton Sucharow LLP as Lead Counsel for the Settlement Class. See MAD No. 11-cv-10230, Dkt. No. 97.

David Goldsmith of Labaton appeared on behalf of the Settlement Class at the hearing. 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., pp. 4-6. Michael Thornton of TLF and Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser, as well as attorneys from the three ERISA firms, also attended the hearing. Id., pp. 2-4. On behalf of all counsel, Goldsmith addressed plaintiffs' request for preliminary class certification for settlement purposes, which involved meeting a two-prong test to show that class representatives and class counsel adequately represent the class members. 8/8/16 Hearing Tran., pp. 7:24-8:7. In response to the Court's inquiry whether Labaton could adequately represent both the ERISA and Customer classes, Goldsmith responded that Labaton was "adequate"; he argued that the Court had "no reason to depart" from its initial adequacy findings in the January 12, 2012 Memorandum and Order appointing Labaton as interim class counsel. Id., p. 8:18-22. The Court acknowledged, and Goldsmith agreed, that a class member may opt out of the settlement if he or she "feels that its [sic] interests justify a different path." Id., p. 11:6-13.

[34] As explained by Goldsmith during the August 8 hearing, "the reason why [class certification is] preliminary and not final is because class members do have a constitutional right to object to class certification if they see fit to do so." 8/8/16 Hearing Tr., p. 6:11-15.

The Court further asked Goldsmith to explain why the $300 million private settlement was reasonable, and specifically addressed the role of the DOJ, SEC, and DOL in the settlement process. Id., p. 13:2-7. The Court showed a genuine interest in ensuring that the global settlement was fair to all participants: "if what I'm being asked to approve is going to affect something you've negotiated at arm's length with the [DOJ] and something you've negotiated with the SEC and something you've negotiated with the [DOL], I think that goes into both the reasonableness of the settlement and the fairness of the settlement." Id., p. 18:13-22. Goldsmith affirmed that the reasonableness of the settlement is evidenced, in part, by the fact that DOL signed off on it. Id., p. 18:2-6.

b. Final Approval

On November 2, 2016, a hearing was held on Plaintiffs' Assented to Motion for Final Approval of Settlement and Lead Counsel's Motion for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and for Payment of Service Awards. Goldsmith, accompanied in the courtroom by Zeiss, again represented the "plaintiffs and settlement class." 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., pp. 3:7-9, 10-11. Dan Chiplock of Lieff Cabraser and Carl Kravitz of Zuckerman Spaeder also attended the hearing. See id., pp. 2-3. Garrett Bradley and Mike Thornton of TLF also were in attendance. See G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 152:19 – 153:11. [35] During the hearing, the Court approved the settlement, explaining that its approval was based, in part, on its finding that counsel on both sides "vigorously represented their clients' interest." 11/2/16 Hearing Tr., p. 21:1-5. The Court also found the proposed Plan of Allocation to be fair. See id., p. 22:16-21. The Court further noted the importance of the parties having reached a global settlement, including settlement with the federal regulators, in particular the DOL and SEC. Id. at pp. 17:8-23, 38:12-20.

[35] There is nothing in the record evidence indicating that any other attorneys from Labaton, Lieff, TLF, or any of the ERISA firms were in attendance at the final approval hearing.

In considering the reasonableness of the attorneys' fees requested, the Court inquired whether the plaintiffs' fee agreement was disclosed to the class members "at the outset" of the case, to which Goldsmith responded only that the fee agreement was "consistent with the fee [plaintiffs were] seeking here." Id. p. 26:12-13. In a colloquy with the Court, Goldsmith argued, "[W]e produced a $300 million settlement…. So I think … a fee of some substance would be in order, frankly." Id., p. 28:16-20. The Court acknowledged that the $74 million in fees requested by counsel "is of some substance," id, p. 28:21-25, but noted that none of the class representatives had objected to that fee request. Id., p. 34-8-9.

At the conclusion of the hearing, stating that he was "relying heavily on the submissions and what's been said today," Judge Wolf approved a 25% award of attorneys' fees in the amount of $74,541,250.00, plus expenses in the amount of $1,257,699.94. See id. p. 35:4-8. The Court also approved service awards totaling $85,000 -- $25,000 for ATRS and $10,000 for each of the six ERISA plaintiffs. Id. at pp. 33:4-6, 35:9-12. Judgment was entered accordingly. See Order and Final Judgment, Dkt. No. 110. The Judgment became final on December 2, 2016.

xii. DISTRIBUTION OF SETTLEMENT AND ATTORNEYS' FEES

As provided in the Plan of Allocation approved by the Court at the Final Settlement Hearing, $60 million of the $300 million gross settlement was allocated to the ERISA class plaintiffs, providing ERISA plan participants with a recovery ratio of roughly $2 to every $1 of loss to the class. See Sucharow Decl., Dkt. No. 104, ¶ 134. The Plan of Allocation further provided that a maximum of $10.9 million of the approximately $75 million in total attorneys' fees could be paid out of the ERISA Class' recovery for attorneys' fees.[36] This allocation was

[36] The $10.9 million cap in attorneys' fees from the ERISA class recovery was negotiated by DOL. Sarko 9/8/17 Dep., p. 66:1-8; Kravitz 9/11/17 Dep., p. 66:8-23; see also TLF-SST-052694 – 52696 (8/21/15 email correspondence between Customer Class counsel and ERISA counsel related to negotiations with DOL regarding negotiated and agreed to by Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel after the parties reached the agreement-in-principle on the $300 million settlement, See Sucharow Decl., ¶ 139; see also Kravitz 7/6/17 Dep., pp. 54:25 – 55:1; 59:11-12; Sarko 7/6/17 Dep., p. 48:19; McTigue 7/7/17 Dep., p. 43:10-11. In accordance with the Plan of Allocation and the ERISA fee allocation previously agreed upon among the Customer Class Counsel and ERISA Counsel, ERISA Counsel collectively received 10% of the total fee award -- a sum of $7.5 million -- with the remaining $3.4 million under the agreed-upon $10.9 million ERISA fee cap being paid back to Customer Class Counsel instead of to ERISA Counsel. See Sucharow Decl., ¶¶ 134-139.

a. Payment of Fees and Expenses

On September 2, 2016, State Street paid the gross settlement sum of $300 million into a Class Settlement Fund Escrow Account -- an escrow account maintained by Labaton, as Lead Settlement Counsel, with Citibank -- where the funds remained pending entry of Judgment. See Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement, Dkt. No. 89; Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 122:15, 124:9-11, 130:21-23; see also LBS041692 (Citibank Escrow Account Statement). Under the terms of the Stipulation, Labaton agreed that, once Judgment became final it would "in good faith promptly distribute any award of attorneys' fees and/or payments of litigation expenses among plaintiffs' counsel." Dkt. No. 89 ¶ 21 (emphasis added).

After the Court issued its Order awarding fees, the total sum of the fee award was transferred by Labaton into a Lead Counsel Escrow Fund, also held by Citibank. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 124:16-23; 125: 3-4. On December 8, 2016, after Judgment became final, Labaton instructed the bank to disburse the fees, expenses, and service awards approved by the Court. Id., p. 125:13-21. The fees and expenses were disbursed by the bank directly to Lieff, TLF, McTigue, Keller Rohrback and Zuckerman Spaeder. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 125:13-21. Labaton also instructed the bank to transfer approximately $34 million to its firm's IOLA account, out of which Labaton paid the service awards, obligations to "of counsel" attorneys,[37] and approximately $4.1 million to Texas attorney, Damon Chargois, that same date. Id., pp. 140:21 – 141; 143:4-8.[38]

The $4.1 million payment to Chargois was the fourth largest payment made from the total fee award, and more money than was paid to any ERISA firm. See Master Chart of Lodestars, Litigation Expenses and Plaintiffs' Service awards, Dkt. No. 104-24. In coordinating the payment to Chargois, Zeiss instructed Labaton's accounting department to remit payment from the firm's IOLA if "it will be a rush" to pay Chargois. 12/7/16 Zeiss Email to Ng, LBS 032881 – 32883 [EX. 50]. Unlike payments from settlement escrow funds -- governed by escrow agreements -- payments made from Labaton's IOLA account did not require two additional signatures for disbursement. See Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 120:9-23. Chargois testified that it did not matter to him when, or from which account, the payment was made. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep. pp. 304:9-10; 305:3-10.

The $4.1 million payment to Chargois was uncovered during the course of the Special Master's investigation.[39] Chargois never filed an appearance in the State Street case, nor did he,

[37] "Of counsel" here refers to Goldman Scarlato & Penny. Goldman Scarlato & Penny performed work on the case, and is reflected in the lodestar report Labaton submitted to the Court. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., pp., 143:17-20; 144:6-7.

[38] Labaton has not yet distributed money to the class members. Zeiss 9/14/17 Dep., p. 133: 2-5, 9-12. As of July 2017, the Class Settlement Account contained $224,978,733.34. Id., p. 132:6-10.

[39] This payment of fees to Chargois first came to light in a batch of emails produced by TLF on August 8, 2017 and gave rise to several additional months of depositions and written discovery. Neither Labaton nor Lieff produced any emails related to Chargois in response to the Special Master's initial requests for production of documents. See, e.g., Special Master's First Set of Interrogatories to LCHB (Revised) Nos. 5, 10, 62, 74; Special Master's First Set of Interrogatories to LBS (Revised) Nos. 4, 9, 60, 72; Special Master's First Set of RFPs to LCHB (Revised) 3, 16, 40. After the Chargois relationship was disclosed by the TLF-produced emails in response to the Special Master's initial document requests, both Labaton and Lieff produced a significant number of emails and documents pertaining to the or his firm, Chargois & Herron, submit any declaration or lodestar report as part of the State Street Fee Petition. See Dkt. Nos. 104, 104-15, 104-16, 104-17, 104-19.

All parties concede Chargois performed no work on the case.

The names Chargois and/or Chargois & Herron appear nowhere in the Fee Petition or any of its exhibits. See id. All parties concede that the Court was never informed about Chargois or the payment of $4.1 million to his firm. See Belfi 9/5/17 Dep., pp. 87:24-88:11; 89:1-17; 90:7-12; 122:23-123:5; Goldsmith 9/20/17 Dep., p. 112:10-14; G. Bradley 9/14/17 Dep., pp. 152:19-153:16.[40] Failure to include payment to Chargois in the fee petition was a material omission.

B. INVOLVEMENT OF LABATON AND CHARGOIS IN THE STATE STREET CASE

i. LABATON'S INTRODUCTION TO ATRS

Labaton represented ATRS throughout the State Street case, serving as Lead Counsel throughout the litigation. ATRS was headed by Executive Director George Hopkins. Hopkins had succeeded Paul Doane, the previous Executive Director, on December 29, 2008. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep. p. 14:10-22. [41]

Labaton's relationship with ATRS began in or about 2007. Around that time, Labaton -- which frequently acts as monitoring counsel[42] for its clients --was looking to expand its securities

Chargois relationship and payment in response to subsequent document requests by the Special Master specifically related to Chargois.

[40] In fact, Sucharow testified that the only impact a fee award has on a class is the "total amount" of attorney's fees awarded. See Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep., p. 35: 14-19.

[41] After Paul Doane resigned, for a brief period of time ("three or four months") ATRS was headed by an interim director, Gail Bolden, Doane's deputy director. Hopkins 9/5/17 Dep., p. 14:14-22. Hopkins succeeded Gail Bolden. Id., p. 14:18-20.

[42] See note 3, supra. As monitoring counsel, Labaton uses sophisticated in-house investigators and analysts to oversee a client's portfolio of securities investments for signs of possible securities law violations. If Labaton believes a client's portfolio may have been involved in a securities violation that could lead to a viable case, Labaton may ask the client whether it would be interested in serving as lead plaintiff in a potential class action litigation based on those violations. See Available at http://www.labaton.com/en/practiceareas/Institutional-Investor-monitoring practice and form new relationships with potential pension fund clients in the Southwest. Keller 10/13/17 Dep., p. 21:1-22; Sucharow 9/1/17 Dep. pp. 15:3-16:19; Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., p. 32:3-22. In an effort to "mak[e] inroads" in the Arkansas community, Labaton sought the assistance of Damon Chargois, a lawyer admitted to practice law in Arkansas and Texas (and who, in 2007, maintained law firms under the name Chargois & Herron in each state.)[43] Labaton had previously retained Chargois to serve as its local counsel in HCC Holdings,[44] a securities fraud class action case filed in federal court in Houston.[45] In September 2007, Chargois introduced Labaton partners Eric Belfi and Christopher Keller to Paul Doane, Executive Director of ATRS, at that time. Chargois 10/2/17 Dep., pp. 33:24-35:22.
